School Committee and Woodard Trustees Take Action After Report

Plans for Opening Full Time Industrial School

The report submitted to the School Committee Tuesday evening by the Advisory Committee on Industrial Education, and accepted by the School Committee, is presented herewith in full. The following explanation will be of interest.

The two trades named are selected to begin with, because of the light initial cost. These two trades would be followed by others in succeeding years.

The boys eligible for entrance to this school and who would enter next September would otherwise be in the High school. It is necessary either to make the additional expenditure necessary for this school or to add a like amount to the High school budget. However, one half of all that the city expends on its Industrial Schools is rebated by the State, while if the boys are educated in the High school the city must bear the full burden.

The school contemplated will be a measure of economy for the city as well as of educational profit. It will further relieve the pressure on the High school for the time being. As the High school is already full, this is an important factor. The new full time school, being held in conjunction with the part time school, would entail no additional cost for principal, janitor or over-head expense generally.

Furthermore it should be emphasized that the full time school would not attempt to teach the trade. It would simply take the beginnings of the trade up to the time when at the age of 16, the boy could go over into the half time school and being then employed could learn it under shop conditions. The plan is so attractive in every particular that the committee adopted it at once.

The report follows:

"The Full Time Industrial school is proposed for several reasons. The majority of the grammar school graduates desiring to do so are too young to enter the industries, especially since the passage of the new Child Labor Law and consequently cannot be received into the Half Time school. Such boys either enter the High school toward which their tastes do not incline them or seek employment in such callings as are still open to boys under sixteen.

The full time school would adapt itself to the needs of many such boys, would tend to keep them in school, to develop a firm foundation in their chosen vocation, and to acquaint them with the processes of their trade preparatory to entering the shops and the half time course; all to be done under

Annual Drama and Dance of Clan McGregor

The thirty-third annual drama and dance of Clan McGregor, No. 5, Order of Scottish Clans, in Music hall ushered in the New Year. The crowd that attended was the largest ever seen at an affair given the local Scotsman.

The guests of the evening were Mayor and Mrs. Eugene R. Stone and delegations from Clan Lindsey of North Cambridge, McKenzie of Boston Clan McLeod of Hyde Park, Clan Campbell of Chelsea, Clan Cameron of East Boston, Clan Chisholm of Revere, Clan Ramsay of Roxbury and Clan McKinley of Uphams Corner. Various other fraternal and social societies of the city were represented.

Rob Roy, a three act drama, rich in Scottish sentiment and history, was presented by a talented cast under the direction of Alexander Russell. Requiring fourteen different settings

After the drama, the hall was cleared for dancing which continued until three o'clock. Music was by Provost's orchestra.

The march was headed by Chief and Mrs. Angus Martin with Alexander Mavers and Miss Mary Summers as the second couple. Just as the midnight hour boomed out on the clocks of the city, the marchers were coming down the floor, sixteen abreast an applause and greetings of the season burst spontaneously from those present.

The dance program beside the old fashioned square dances contained up-to-date numbers. It also had its share of reels and Highland Schottisches.

The floor director was Alexander Maver, and the assistant floor director William Cantlay. The aids were Charles Dunbar, Matthew Nicol James Michael and David Dackers.

On the reception committee were Chief A. D. Martin and Tanist C. G. Nicol.

K. OF C. ANNIVERSARY

Ave Maria Council Welcomed in the New Year

Ave Maria council, Knights of Columbus, celebrated its third anniversary Wednesday evening at its club rooms at West Quincy. At the same time the council fittingly observed the departure of the old year and welcomed the advent of the New Year. The occasion was one of great jollity and a good time was enjoyed by all.

There was quite a lot of local talent present which contributed to the enjoyment including Peter M. Sullivan, deputy grand knight of Quincy council who presided at the piano. Then there were songs by Daniel Looney, of Weymouth council, James Grant, Fred McDonald, William R. Teasdale, Joseph Daley, Andy Dinnegan, a cornet duet by Djerf Bros.

J. Edward Reinhalter, secretary of Ave Maria council, had charge of the evening's program being assisted by the following committee: Charles A. Reardon, George A. McDonald, Joseph A. Barry, Edward T. Monahan and Oma LeClair.

Another feature of the evening was a banquet which was served by Burleigh & Martin, the latter gentleman being a member of Ave Maria council.

As the hour of midnight approached the lights were put out and on the stroke of 12 the cornets sounded taps. As the lights were again turned on the cornets gave the call of welcome to the New Year. A general exchange of New Years greetings followed and thejo llity was continued for some time later. The evening proved to be one of the most enjoyable of the many social events of Ave Maria council.

AT COCHATO CLUB.

The entertainment Wednesday evening in the course at the Cochato club was a pop concert. The music for the evening was under the direction of Miss Mabel Going assisted by Miss Chere Mayne, soloist. In addition to this the club members joined in singing the choruses of the songs.

An attractive menu was provided for those occupying the tables and the scene was a jolly one until midnight. As the hour of midnight approached the lights were dimmed and twelve blows were struck on the triangle. The lights were again turned on and the asemblage arose while the orchestra played "The Star Spangled Banner."

The committee in charge of the evenings program was Frank P. Rhodes, George L. Young, Dr. Johnson and E. L. Emerson.

The young ladies who officiated as waitresses were Miss Louise Abercrombie, Miss Lucile Chandler, Miss Olive Crocker, Miss Florence Robinson, Miss Louise Gould, Miss Doris Hubbard and Miss Gladys Perry.

HOUGHS NECK PARTY.

PANDEMONIUM AT HOUR OF MIDNIGHT

Cabaret Show of Wollaston Yacht Club Ushered in the New Year

Popular Program by Professional Talent at Clubhouse

The year 1914 was royally ushered in at the Wollaston Yacht club, Wednesday evening with one of the biggest of big times of this famous organization. Starting at eight and lasting until the stroke of midnight a acabaret show with features de luxe was in active operation.

The program was continuous, and so good that it needed but the midnight demonstration to cap the climax of one of the most successful social events ever run off by the club.

When the midnight hour arrived, Commodore Frank F. Taylor struck off eight bells on a large gong on the stage in true nautical fashion. Then pandemonium broke loose and a noise such as never before had been heard by Wollastonian's broke upon the assembled gathering.

Over a score of ship bells had been put in place around the hall. In the hands of each waiter was a large dinner gong. The guests were provided with horns and whistles galore, and at the signal of Commodore Taylor there arose a din that nearly sent the yacht club off its foundations.

Large numbers of cornucopias filled with confetti had been hung from the ceiling and at the signal these were loosed. Paper streamers and boxes of confetti had been distributed and when these went into action the scene was a pretty one.

Just before the stroke of twelve, words of good advice from Commodore Taylor were listened to and the singing of Auld Lang Syne brought 1913 to a close.

At the suggestion of the management the floor was cleared and dancing to the music of the club orchestra was enjoyed until after one o'clock.

At the cabaret show every nook and corner of the hall was filled with tables seating four, tickets having been sold out four days after they were issued.

A number of the good fellows of the club in blackface, acted as waiters and their expert service, white coats and beaming countenances added much to the ocacsion. They were: Benjamin F. Chase, Clifton H. Sass, F. Gordon Rourke, Ernest Woodman, Harold Winslow, Andrew Nelson, Harry Linnell, Charles Chapin and Milton Irving.

All osrts of soft drinks, light refreshments and ices were served and each lady was presented with a box of chocolates.

The program opened with a popular program by the Beacon Quartet. a colored organization. Miss Gertrude Persell of Dorchester scored a decided hit, coming out among the tables in true cabaret style and singing several snappy songs that pleased the audience immensely.

Harold L. Bowker of Dorchester, the only amateur on the list also received a big hand in his impersonations of Harry Lander. His first appearance was in Highland costume and the second in the character sketch "The softest of the family."

The professional talent consisted of a long array of songs, sketches, dancing and musical numbers, rapidly following one another, by artists from the United Booking Offices of America under the personal direction of C. W. Fraser.

The affair, which was a thorough success, was given under the direction of Commodore Taylor and the entertainment committee consisting of C. A. Franklin, Thomas Raiche and Gerard Frazar.

A sub-committee composed of Edward A. Bean, Frank Winslow, Herman Metcalf, Clifford Sykes and Mr. Mitchell performed efficient services in the culinary department.

Among those at the tables:

Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Raymond, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Coldwell, Mrs. Charles Maxwell, Mrs. A. J. McPherson, Miss Aurie A. Barstow, A. T. Barstow, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Gould, Ernest L Woodman, William H Edgar, Captain and Mrs. F. G. Schahrer, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Griffin, Mrs. L. B. Wilson, W. H. Nettleton, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. The year that has just closed has been a prosperous one for the city.

In your correspondence today do not forget to write it 1914.

Have you broken that good resolution you made this morning for the New Year?

Newspaper men, is is said, are not wanted at the complimentary banquet to be tendered to the Mayor-elect at the New American house tonight. Perhaps there is a reason.

The City Auditor is busy finding out how many balances of city appropriations there are to transfer to the Excess and Deficiency Fund, sometimes called the "eat and drink fund." It is safe to say that few departments had a balance.

Although the appropriation of the School Committee was cut from the amount which the committee asked, and estimated that it would need to carry on the work of the schools during the year, by economical management they managed to have a small balance on the right side.

Birthday greetings and New Years greetings to Mayor elect John L. Miller. May he realize his ambition in the conduct of city affairs, and place Quincy high among the Massachusetts municipalities.

The new police officers promoted by Mayor Stone to the permanent force can call their promotion a New Years gift. They begin their regular duties tonight and as long as they behave themselves and do their work faithfully, they will have employment. The promotion therefore means a life job.

THE OLD YEAR.

The year 1913 has said good bye. The current of time is bearing us all along, and life's scenery changes as all drift out toward the eternal sea.

New Year's is not necessarily sad. It does not principally mean that so much of life is gone, and that the rest should be hoarded as a miser gloats over his coins. No man gets the best of life at either extreme. He must be neither a spendthrift of his days, nor on the other hand should he watch their passing with any stingy cupidity of life.

To people having any imagination, this ending and beginning conveys some deeper meanings. It is naturally a time for the backward look. One should be able to review the months and find some positive gains. In these assets, money should count least. Friendship, health, experience, courage, knowledge, culture, these are the real goods. It is commonly our fault if the year has not brought some such advances.

Certainly mirth and merry making are not inappropriate for the dying year. The new period never looks so hopeful and alluring as when entered to the seductive strains of dance rhythms. Merry making is defined by some in terms of horn blowing and horse play, for one does not become a grown-up merely by acquiring the physical stature of manhood. With others, New Year's means a futile yielding to treacherous enticements, with a headache, dark brown taste, and empty purse next day.

Certainly the New Year should bring some message of cheer to all. Few people are so shut in or so beaten down that the new page may not be a beginning of better things, if through all the storms of life, they have saved the seed of hope and purpose.

CONGRESS ADJOURNED.

Back about Sept. 1, it was predicted that the Senate would still be discussing the tariff bill by Christmas. A little later it was being said that the currency bill could not be passed before March.

Always these predictions of indefinite debate are heard, but Congress is not the dilatory body it used to be 20 years ago. Pure filibustering, the making of fake motions and talking against time, are practically gone by. The business sense of the American people wants action and settlement, and prefers some mistakes to indefinite turmoil.

Bills slip through the House quickly, but it takes about two or three months to get a measure of first class importance through the Senate. But the Senate never talks longer than that.

Impatient people always clamor for hasty action. But two or three weeks or months make little difference in the history of the American people. Congressmen come to Washington without technical knowledge of big legislative problems. Measures like the tariff or currency have needed all the debate they have had.

A WONDERFUL CAT.

Sergeant Fred Pearson of the Spokane, Washington, police department has a remarkable kangaroo cat, and the cat has a unique record of accomplishments not usually made by felines.

A year ago this cat began its career of notoriety by awakening Sergeant Pearson in time to drive three burglars away from his home. A few weeks later the cat put out a fire behind the kitchen stove by rolling in the flames while Mrs. Pearson was in another room. Still another exploit was ended to the cat's list of adventures when it woke Pearson up at midnight and led him to where a cow was doing damage to the garden. These are just a few of this animal's strange experiences.

Sergeant Pearson says his cat demonstrated its abnormal powers along a different line this week when it qualified as a milk inspector. Arising early the other morning, Sergeant Pearson discovered the cat sitting beside the milk crock left out all night for the milkman. Sergeant Pearson called the cat to give it its breakfast of meat, but the cat would not budge from its position beside the crock.

Soon the milkman arrived and poured out the supply for the Pearson home, the cat all the time watching him closely. The milkman returned the cover to the crock and left. For a number of minutes the cat watched the crock and then gradually crawled up to its side. With a paw the cat struck the cover from the top of the crock and made a dive with its head into the depths of the milk. Pearson ran up to interfere, and to his surprise he saw the cat holding a small minnow in its mouth. On closer inspection the milk was seen to be full of a number of small fish swimming about in the fluid.

"I had often heard that the milkmen took their cans to the brook to give them a drink, but this is the first time I ever knew that the milk was so full of water that the fish thrived on it," said Pearson.

—With the days growing longer we can expect cold weather, but the delightful days of the past month should reconcile everybody to whatever kind of weather is handed out to the people for the next few weeks. By the way, speaking of cold weather, where are the red underflannels which 25 years ago were a prominent feature of every clothing house, especially in the country. Possibly with better methods of house heating, these once common articles of clothing have been relegated to the attic rag bag, and they are now but a memory, as are the copper-toed boots with red leather tops of about the same period.—Old Colony Memorial.

Predict Eggs Will Reach $1

Franklin, Pa., Jan. 1.—Eggs at $1 a dozen within two years, was the prediction made by W. Whittman, state lecturer on poultry, in addressing a gathering of farmers here. He said the increase in egg production, although large, is not keeping up with the increase in demand. He urged the farmers to take better care of their hens.

A CULINARY TREAT

Served In a Little Cake Shop In a Little French Town.

THE COST WAS LITTLE ALSO.

Surprises Came Thick and Fast In the Way of Meals, but the Greatest Surprise of All Came After the Gastronomic Conquest Was Ended.

They were talking about dainty dinners when the man who goes abroad said, "The best meal I ever got was in the back parlor of a small shop in a one horse town, and it cost me 50 cents."

Urged to tell his story, he continued: "It was in a small provincial French town—Blois. A friend of mine called Bodfish enticed me there by looking me up in Paris and throwing a fit about the delights of the town.

"'It has a castle,' he told me, 'and a moat and ramparts and a little cake shop run by a charming old woman'—

"'Enough,' said I, 'me for Blois.'

"We went there and we castled and we moated and we ramparted, and then we blew into the little shop to cake. The proprietress, a very pleasant old woman, indeed, introduced us to her son, who was modestly hiding behind his mustache in a corner.

"We got into conversation with him—that is, Bodfish and I plunged into French and he, diving in heroically after us, was pulled under in our drowning struggles. The upshot of it all was that we agreed to hire a room in his mother's house for the night—we meant to stay just one night in Blois.

"'And—er—dinner?' asked Bodfish.

"'If the messieurs will permit I will do myself the honor of cooking them a dinner,' said the cake lady's son, bowing most courteously.

"Thereupon Bodfish and I went blithely to an attic 518 years old at a conservative estimate, washed the castle and the moat and the ramparts from our hands and faces and descended to the dining room, a small apartment in the rear of madame's cake shop.

"Our landlady's son was there, ready for us. So was a soup.

"That was, by actual count, the grandest soup ever produced by a human being. I have traveled all over the world, tasting the best every country has to offer in the way of soup, but at the first taste of that Blois sample all my memories of other soups huddled together in a dark corner of my mind and froze to death.

"I looked at Bodfish. He was positively half witted with delight. He looked as if he wanted to spend the rest of his life as high priest in a temple devoted to the worship—and manufacture—of that soup.

"'More, messieurs?'

"Between us we razed that soup to the ground.

"'Entree, messieurs?'

"Don't ask me what that entree was. Bodfish ate it with his eyes shut and his head bowed reverently.

"Bodfish and I stayed in Blois for twenty-nine meals. Don't ask me how many days that makes; we knew only two sorts of times—meals and between meals. As for sightseeing, we didn't see much more than our plates, because after each meal in the back parlor of that celestial cake shop we were so chock full that we hibernated like snakes, lay sprawling on couches, unable to budge, blinking sleepily, grunting grunts of Elysian contentment. Time and again we would ask that Frenchman how he had come by his culinary skill, but in vain. He would merely smile and give us another helping. You may get some idea of what sort of meals that cuss gave us when I tell you that Bodfish summed up his ability in these words:

"'At times he seems to lose his culinary grip and descends to mere perfection.'

"After the twenty-ninth meal Bodfish and I remembered that we belonged somewhere, had a number of relatives, were engaged in business, had restive careers to coax along. So we called our cook, announced that we were leaving and wanted to know how much we owed.

"'Six francs for each day, messieurs,' said he. 'One for the room, one for breakfast, one and a half for lunch, two and a half for dinner.'

"Bodfish and I fell heavily against each other. Then we paid and started for the door.

"'Wait,' said our host. 'I, too, travel away today.'

"'Whither are you bound?' we asked.

"'To St. Petersburg,' he replied. 'I came away but to see by old mother in the cake shop. I had not seen her for five years. I must thank you, messieurs, for giving me this chance of keeping up my art. Had you not done so, I fear that, after getting back to St. Petersburg, my art would surely have suffered'—

"'Whuh-whuh-what are you in St. Petersburg?' we inquired huskily.

"'Chef,' he said, bowing, 'to his majesty the czar!'"—New York Times.

Overheard on the Street.

"Hasn't that girl an ethereal look?"

"Very."

"Let us listen to what she is saying to her companion. I'll wager it is something soulful."

"Yes," said the ethereal one, "my sister likes tripe, but I prefer limburger."—Chicago Journal.

EVERYBODY-GO-TO-CHURCH.

The interest taken in other cities and towns in the "Every-body-Go-to Church" day should be duplicated in Quincy on Jan. 11. A Boston paper says:

"As a result of the 10-day campaign waged in Wakefield in the interests of "Everybody at Church Day," Sunday saw the largest aggregate church attendance in the history of the town. The high water mark was reached by the devotions of 1623 persons who distributed their attendance among six churches. This is 500 more than the average total attendance on regular Sundays."

I have given up all hope of any profit whatsoever this season. My six great stores have just passed through the most backward season I have ever encountered. Frankly, the weather man has me on the run. The last four months of 1913 witnessed the most unseasonable temperature ever recorded by the weather bureau. I enter upon the new year frightfully over-stocked. It is absolutely imperative that I force immediate selling.

CAN'T FIND BUYER FOR HUGE DIAMOND

London Dealers Display Interest but Refuse to Purchase

London, Jan. 1.—An English diamond digger named Bowker has arrived in London with a diamond of the first water weighing 178½ carats, but he finds himself in the same position as Mark Twain's man with the $1,000,000 bank note. He has more wealth than hundreds of men to whom he has appealed, but he is unable to raise a penny on the stone.

The diamond is an amber stone, perfectly clear and of undoubted value. It was found at Droogeveld, South Africa, and resembles the Kohinoor. There is no question that Bowker is the legitimate owner, but he cannot find a buyer. He has shown the stone to all the big London dealers, but while they have all displayed keen interest, all have declined to purchase it, on one pretext or another.

TO SEARCH FOR WILL

Rampolla's Home In Hands of Police Owing to Dispute

Rome, Jan. 1.—Owing to the dispute about the alleged missing will of the late Cardinal Rampolla, the apartments in which he resided are guarded by police. The official seals cannot be removed for three days.

When the seals are removed a search will be made in the presence of all interested persons for the missing document. The search will include every one of the 36,000 volumes in the cardinal's library.

The district attorney may oppose the removal of the seals if the Princess Altieri, wife of the Duke of Campobello, nephew of Cardinal Rampolla, persists in her allegation that a crime has been committed by the suppression of the cardinal's last will.

HOSPITAL RADIUM MISSING

Whole Supply of Mineral Has Disappeared From Body of Girl

Chicago, Jan. 1.—A tiny speck of radium, weighing 35 milligrams and worth $4500, the whole supply of St. Luke's hospital, has mysteriously disappeared from the body of a girl patient undergoing the radium treatment for cancer, hospital officials admit.

The bit of mineral was placed in a tube one inch long by an eighth of an inch diameter, and bound to a wound in the body of the girl patient, said to be a member of a wealthy Des Moines family. When a physician examined the wound the radium was gone.

Simpson announced that the cash balance of the state of Maine at the close of the year amounted to $649,303.96 and of this sum the sum of $645,824.15 is deposited in the banks, while the remainder is in the treasury vault. All the warrants which have been drawn by the governor and council have been paid in full.

Movement In New England For Rural Credits

MILK FAMINE IS PREDICTED

Former Secretary of State Board of Agriculture Contends Massachusetts' Method of Marketing and Producing Is All Wrong—Co-operative Marketing and Buying Suggested

Boston, Jan. 1.—The movement for the creation in New England of a system of rural credits, through the establishment of agricultural banks or otherwise, by which financial assistance could be given to farmers for the extension and development of their existing agricultural enterprises and to encourage the pursuit of agriculture by persons not now engaged therein, was given marked impetus at the two-day meeting of the New England section of the American Commission on Agriculture, which closed at the state house.

The co-operative method of buying farm supplies and implements and selling the products of the farms was also indorsed by delegates from all the New England states, appointed by the governors thereof, and others who have taken up the matter in the interest of the development of New England's agricultural resources.

The conference of the past two days at the state house have brought out educational discussion of the problem as set forth in a report of the American commission, based on observations in Europe, where rural credits and co-operative buying and selling by farmers has been in vogue for years.

J. L. Ellsworth of Worcester, former secretary of the state board of agriculture, and one of the members of the American commission which studied conditions abroad, believes that the establishment of co-operative plan of purchasing supplies and implements and the sale of products would go far toward settling the serious dairy problem which confronts the state of Massachusetts.

Mr. Ellsworth contends that the Massachusetts method of producing and marketing milk is all wrong, and that unless something is done to assist the dairyman the state will have to face a milk famine, and a serious one, before long.

Dr. Howard Edwards, president of the Rhode Island state college, said that the New England farmer is not a man of initiative and that it is useless to talk about loans and credits for farmers when the average farmer is not particularly progressive and not interested in these propositions in the beginning. "What we really need," said Dr. Edwards, "is a new kind of a farmer."

His solution of the problem was a reorganization of the school system so that the drain on the ambitions and energies of the farmers might be stopped. He said that the young men and women should be educated to the fact that in agricultural pursuits there are possibilities of a very useful and pleasant life.

WELCOME THE NEW YEAR

Many Gatherings Called Out Unusually Large Crowd

There were crowds upon the streets about City Square New Years eve. There were many social gatherings such as watch meetings, entertainments, house parties, dances, etc., which called out the crowd. It was withal a very orderly crowd. The late trains brought out many people who had gone to Boston to see the sights, especially the last train. The big tree on the Common was lighted early in the evening so that it was possible to see it and get the last train for Quincy.

Then there were many Quincy people who had engaged tables at some of the hotels, who did not depend on the trains to bring them home, for they either remained in town all night or returned home in automobiles.

Several houses displayed lighted candles in the windows until after midnight. The New Year dawned bright and clear and at the stroke of 12 was welcomed in by the ringing of bells and the blowing of whistles. There was also the distant sound of cannon, the din continuing for several minutes. Then things quieted down and those who sat up to watch the Old Year out and the New Year in, wished each other a Happy New Year and retired.

NORWEGIAN PARTY.

Nearly 100 kiddies were made happy on New Years eve at the annual Christmas Tree observance and Watch party of the Norwegian Society of Quincy in Protection hall. Flags of the native and adopted country of the members were tastefully arranged about the hall and in the centre was a large evergreen tree heavily laden with lighted candles, colors of the seasons, tinsel and gifts.

The impersonation of Santa Claus by Thorwald Johnsen was a delight to the parents as well as the children and during the evening a well arranged program was given. Dancing was enjoyed, music being furnished by Johnsens orchestra. Refreshments were also served. The committee included Thorwald Johnsen, Lars Anderson, Nils Loddengaard, Laurence A. Jakobsen, chairman.

FRIHET LODGE PARTY.

The passing of the old and coming of the New Year was represented by attractive tableaux at the watch party of Frihet lodge, Independent Order of Good Templars in Electa hall, Tuesday night. The attendance was large, the entire membership and many friends being present. Dancing was enjoyed until after midnight and music was furnished by Johnsens orchestra. Refreshments were served. The committee in charge included Victor Anderson, Alfred Mattson, John Hagglund, Miss Anna Johnson and Miss Lillian Nelson.

HURDY GURDY PARTY.

An enjoyable time for the young people was given at the Town River Yacht clubhouse, Wednesday afternoon from 4 to 6.30, under the auspices of the educational committee of the Quincy Riverside Woman's club, of which Mrs. Ida J. Crane is chairman. Marie Grosse was there with her hurdy gurdy and several of the children were in costume and it was a pretty scene and great success. Ice cream and cake was served. Mrs. Crane was assisted by the following ladies of her committee: Mrs. Gertrude Stone, Mrs. Mary Spooner, Mrs. Muriel Arnold, Mrs. Sarah Roach, Mrs. Margaret Ward, Mrs. Alice Peterson, Mrs. Leonora Gibb and Mrs. Rosilla Carter.

NEW YEARS MASSES.

New Years day was observed in all the Catholic churchs of the city today and there was a large attendance at all the masses. Benediction followed the late masses at St. Johns and Sacred Heart churches. It will be celebrated at St. Mary's church this evening.

the direct supervision and instruction of expert mechanics.

"The Full Time Industrial School would cover a maximum period of two years, and would take care of boys from fourteen to sixteen years of age. Boys over sixteen years of age, who on account of size are unable to get placed in their chosen trade, would have the privilege of attending this school but only until such time as they could find employment. It is planned to place all pupils in the trade, at the age of sixteen, regardless of the length of time attending this school.

"It would seem advisable to start the full time school, with the carpenters and joiners' trades, and electricity, including the principles of electricity, electric wiring, installation, maintenance, and telephone systems.

"These full time courses would not in any case try to turn out finished tradesmen, but would aim to give its pupils a preparatory trade training of the highest possible type, to be supplemented with actual apprenticeship in the trades and further technical education in the part time school, after the pupil had reached the age of sixteen.

"The product of all shops would be the property of the school, but the tools, tool boxes, drawing stands, drawing boards, Tee squares, etc., manufactured in the school, would be sold to the pupils at the actual cost of material used, and the remaining supply would be placed on the market at the regular wholesale or retail price for articles of equal quality of material and workmanship, and all work in the shops would be arranged so as to give the boys the best experience, regardless of the amount of production.

"The course of instruction would embrace Arithmetic, English, United States History, Civics, Drawing and Science, with at least fifty per cent of time devoted to shop work, under the supervision and instruction of an expert tradesman.

"The cost of opening a school of this type for the wood working trades, would be about $1,000,—for equipment, and the addition of one instructor and an assistant; both men would be journeyman mechanics, the instructor would teach the academic work, in both the part time, and full time schools, and the assistant would be placed in charge of the wood working shop. The first cost of equipment would eventually be paid for by the sale of the surplus product of the school. In all cases the work produced would pay for the stock used.

"Orders for furniture, such as tables, chairs, etc., could be taken in from outside parties, in limited numbers, and subject to delivery at the convenience of the school. This method of procedure would furnish the school with a large variety of commercial work, from which the pupils would secure an excellent all around experience at the least possible expense to the city. We wish to emphasize however, that all work done in the school would be done for instruction, not production, but in order to make the instruction, real and effective, it would have to be carried out on a commercial product.

"The cost of opening the Electric course would be about one hundred dollars ($100) for equipment, and the addition of an assistant instructor to take charge of the practical work. This school will be able to take care of eighteen pupils in each of these trades in September.

"This Full Time Industrial school, would be organized so as to meet the requirements of the State Board of Education, and would receive one half the cost of maintenance from the State.

"The instructors of the part time school, would be made the heads of the departments, and would have direct supervision over their trades in the full time school, which can be most conveniently and economically housed and maintained as a part of the half time organization.

"The instructor in the full time school, would be in charge of the shop work, and such other work in his department, as the department head and director should think best.

"The High school has now nearly reached the limit of its capacity. To overcrowd it with boys who have no desire to attend it but who because of the labor laws are unable to secure employment and consequently must attend until they are sixteen years of age is not good education or economy. Such a school as proposed would take care of boys of this type and lead directly toward a skilled education. For that reason the interests of the city would seem to call for the opening of a school as outlined above in September 1914."

SCHOOL DANCES.

At their meetings on Tuesday, both the Woodward Institute Directors and the School Committee took practically the same attitude toward school dancing, each independent of the other. Supt. A. L. Barbour reported to each body as to the amount and kind of dancing at present permitted at the socials of the two schools, and stated that in his opinion, in each instance the dancing was the cleanest and farthest removed from the current extreme dancing to be found at any social affairs. He also stated, however, that this condition only prevailed as the result of ceaseless vigilance on the part of the masters and teachers, and questioned whether there was enough value attached, to repay the rigid censoring which was involved.

In the case of each body after short discussion, it was voted to suspend temporarily all mixed dancing in the school buildings by the several classes, and this suspension will undoubtedly continue until present tendencies show promise of correcting themselves.

This action does not mean narrowness of standards on the part of either body, as neither takes any position with reference to dancing as formerly carried on. It simply means that while present dances with their perversions are in vogue, neither the School Committee nor the Woodward teachers care to assume the responsibility for social functions which call young girls and boys out till late at night without the chaperonage of parents, to a form of entertainment which shows sign of degeneration and tendency to abuse except under the most rigid supervision.

The action was based on considerations more fundamental than appear on the surface and will be generally approved as a sound measure.

SCHOOL OFFICES.

Although the School Committee has been looking about for some time it has not yet been able to secure adequate offices. Nothing can better illustrate the present unsatisfactory conditions than Tuesday night's meeting. The entire evening up till 11 o'clock was spent by the committee in rooms without a particle of heat and no steam available in the pipes. This is by no means an exceptional case.

TENDERED A DINNER.

George M. Wadsworth, formerly master of the Washington school and the Willard school in this city was tendered a dinner Dec. 23 by the teachers of the Pope school at Somerville where he has been the successful manager for several years. The Somerville Journal says: "All the decorations of the table, which was set in the office of Mr. Wadsworth, were the work of the pupils of the school. The first-grade scholars cut the fringe and poinsettia ornaments for the crepe paper table cover; the napkins were done by second-grade children; the decorated paper plates, tumblers and doilies were ornamented with holly leaves and berries by the third and fourth grade scholars. The fifth grade made the nut cups; the sixth decorated the place cards, while the seventh did various things for the table. The menu cards were a specially handsome feature and the work of eighth and ninth grade pupils.

"To each chair at the table was attached a star, while each teacher wore a headdress made by a pupil. With paper reindeer, geese, stars, etc., the decorations of the entire room as well as the table had a happy significance, and an excellent menu, consisting of turkey and all the fixings, was heartily relished by all."

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

Of interest to those who enjoy outdoor sports in the crisp winter air, will be the list of books on winter sports and games, which will appear today, together with the mid-winter bulletin, in the Main Hall of the Thomas Crane Public Library. Books on cross-country tramping, ice-hockey, golf and other games dear to the hearts of lovers of New England's winter pastimes, will be found on the list.

For the musically inclined, "The Creation," and two additional volumes of the "Musicians' Library"—"Fifty songs by Schumann for high voice" and "Forty songs by Brahms for high voice"—will be ready for circulation today. Besides these, the library now has the scores of a few of the popular musical comedies, namely:—The Firefly, The Purple Road and Sweethearts. The music of two cantatas, "Hiawatha's Departure" and "Hiawatha's Wedding Feast" are also among the additions to the library's musical collection.

Home Made.

"My dear," said Mr. Wombat, "you look as fresh as a budding tree in your new spring dress." "The comparison is good," sneered Mrs. Wombat. "Like a tree, I had to make it myself."

ATMOSPHERIC CHANGES.

What it Means In Air Pressure When the Barometer Falls.

It is not an uncommon thing at certain seasons of the year for the barometer to shift an inch within twenty-four hours. Sometimes the change is even greater. Few persons have any idea what tremendous changes in the atmosphere are indicated by such a rise or fall in the mercury column.

A cubic inch of mercury weighs half a pound. When the mercury falls an inch a weight of one ton is removed from every 4,000 square inches of surface. This is a ton for every area five and a quarter feet square. If your house, for instance, is 25 by 40 feet, with an area of 1,000 square feet, a load of about thirty-six tons is lifted from the roof every time the barometer shows an inch fall—that is, a thirty-six ton load would be lifted if the house were air tight. But as air presses in every direction there is as much of a push upward against the roof from below as there is of a push downward from above. So the roof actually feels no effect from the removal of this heavy load.

In the same way a man of average size would be relieved of a weight of about a ton and a half if there were no air chambers in the human body.

It has been figured that a fall of an inch in the barometer over a territory 400 miles square removes a weight from the surface of the earth of 160,000,000,000 tons. If this were loaded on freight cars, twenty tons to the car, and thirty cars to the train, more than 260,000,000 trains would be required to move it. If each train were 500 feet long they would stretch out in a line more than 25,000,000 miles long.

The only noise that accompanies this great transportation feat is made by the wind, that does considerable roaring in the course of such violent atmospheric changes. — Kansas City Star.

LILIES OF THE BIBLE.

They Are Wind Flowers, as No True Lilies Grow In the Holy Land.

It is a common belief, even among well informed people, that the word "lily" as used in the sacred text means a real lily in the modern sense of the word. This, however, is not the case. No real lily grows or ever grew within the confines of the Holy Land. The white lily (Lilium candidum), which is often mistaken for the plant of Scripture, is not a native of Palestine, nor can it be made to grow there, even in cultivation, without great care.

It is commonly conceded that the plant Christ saw about him during the Sermon on the Mount was the same plant which in early spring is still found in great abundance in the valleys of that country—namely, the oriental wind flower (Anemone coronaria). The tint of its blossoms is from blood red to crimson, and it is called wind flower, not, as commonly supposed, because the slender stemmed blossoms sway in the breeze, but because the hairy seeds of some species are carried and propagated by the wind.

The fact that Christ used the word "lily" when a wind flower or anemone was meant need not surprise us, for the word was used as the people of his day used it. And all the ancient peoples, even the Greeks, employed the word lilium or lirion or krinon when referring to any plant with a cuplike flower. Even today, when scientists speak of common plants, they mention "water lilies," "lilies of the valley," etc., although they know full well that these plants are not real lilies nor even closely related to them.—Baltimore American.

Brookfield Wrote With Either Hand.

Among the many accomplishments possessed by Charles Brookfield was the exceedingly useful art of being able to write with either hand. This he owed to the early training of his mother, who when the future dramatic censor was a baby fell a victim to writers' cramp. She thereupon learned to write with the left hand and soon became proficient. In 1864 Mrs. Brookfield published her first novel, which she claimed to have written throughout with her left hand. As soon as her children could use a pen they were taught to hold it in either hand indifferently, and this early training served Charles Brookfield in good stead when he became a prolific author.—London Graphic.

Dicky's New Year

How He Came to Attend the Grown Folks' Party.

DICKY sprawled ungracefully on the floor, and at times he bestowed a sly and naughty kick upon the unresisting legs of a chair that stood near him. His first impulse was to feel sorry for doing this, his second to look around and see if any one had noticed this little outburst of temper.

It may be that the Christmas festivities of a few days before had been too much for him; but, whatever it was, Dicky was certainly cross and inclined to weep easily.

However, neither his mother nor his Aunt Gertrude noticed how he kicked the chair nor the way he scowled upon the world in general from under his tawny curls. They were absorbed in their preparations for entertaining the guests of that evening, and for once Dicky was forgotten.

"If I was going to have a party and invite all the people in the world I'd invite my own little boy, Dicky, too. I wouldn't leave him out," quoth Dicky out of the silence.

"What's that?" asked his mother carelessly, absorbed in her own thoughts. "No, no, Dicky; this is a party for mother's and father's friends. You wouldn't enjoy it."

"Oh, but I do want to come," persisted Dicky. "I've heard you all talking about it, and I want to see the new year come in the window."

"What is the child talking about?" asked his aunt.

"The new year. It's coming in the window, and I heard mother tell how you were all going to open it to welcome it in," replied Dicky, somewhat impatient at his aunt for not understanding so obvious a meaning.

"Nothing will come in at the window, dear," said his mother gently. "It's just a pretty custom. There will not be anything for you to see, and you will be much happier upstairs in your nice warm bed."

Dicky wept a little at the time, and when the hour came for bed under the stern eye of his father he rebelliously consented to be tucked in by his nurse, although not without further remonstrances. Finding them of no avail, he sobbed his woes into his pillow, while his father and mother went below to receive their guests.

By making a brave resistance to the drowsiness that was stealing upon him Dicky managed to keep awake until the party had assembled in the parlor below. Then he crept out of bed and hung over the banisters, eagerly trying to catch sight of the brilliant people in the gathering. A man passed along the hall. Dicky thought it might be his father and scampered back to bed again as fast as his little bare feet would carry him. And then without more ado he soon fell asleep, "the world forgetting, by the world forgot."

Downstairs the hours passed merrily, and the old year drew to a happy close. First there were only fifteen minutes of it left; then there were only ten. Finally the old year had but five short periods, counting sixty seconds each, to live. The men and women gathered together showed nothing of the solemnity that underlies the merriment of all such gatherings. Four minutes, three minutes, two minutes—ah! They turned from the windows in surprise to see Dicky standing in the doorway.

He was not dressed for the party, and his little nightgown afforded scant protection against the drafts of the lower room. He was not expected at the party, either, and the expression on his father's face suggested that he was not even welcome there. These considerations might have disturbed an adult guest, but they mattered little to Dicky.

He did not look or speak to any one. Ordinarily his father's sternness would have sent him with a headlong rush to the protection of his mother's arms. Turning neither to the right nor to the left, he went to the window, and, although his eyes were closed, his little hands unlocked the catch that fastened it and opened the great casements without a mistake or hesitation.

His mother, choking back a cry, took a furred wrap and went to cover him. His father looked, half in fright, at his brother, who was standing near.

"Be careful not to wake him suddenly," said Dr. Tom. "He's walking in his sleep!"

He raised the child gently in his arms and held him in the full blaze of the great chandelier, but Dicky's closed eyelids never quivered as the light struck against them.

When he opened his eyes he was amazed to find himself at the party after all, surrounded by men and women, who all said cheerfully, "A happy New Year to you, Dicky, dear!"

He was too drowsy to be frightened, but as his father carried him back to bed the child heard the great bells of the city calling out to him:

"A happy New Year, Dicky, dear and many of them!"

NEGLIGES AND COATS.

"Seamless" Garments that can be made in short order—Girlish Evening Frocks and Kimono Waists.

It is remarkable how easily a fashionable up-to-date neglige, dressing sacque, theatre coat, blouse, or even dress can be made by any woman quick witted enough to recognize that underlying all the soft drapings of the loose fussy clothes now modish, are the lines of the kimono, or peasant blouse, and the straight lengths of material variously draped familiar in Greek prints.

POSSIBILITIES IN SHORT LENGTHS.

Never have such possibilities existed for turning short lengths of materials into fascinatingly fashionable attire, and any scarf or piece of bordered material 2 1-4 yds. in length by 36 in. wide will make up into a dainty sacque suitable for formal or informal wear according to its material and trimming. Fold the scarf in half, the fold coming at the centre back, cut out a small semi-circle at the top to fit the back of the neck. Measure 15 inches from either upper end of the scarf and fold this back in a diagonal line to within 3 inches of the bottom, like a revere. Cut this off and join the bias edge to the straight upper edge of the scarf at the neck circle. This seam is the only one in the garment and makes the shoulder seam and sleeve seam in one continuous line. Slope the front to the line of the bust, or turn back the material in a revere to this point. Trim the neck in swansdown, marabout or with a lace ruching, and place a butterfly bow, or silk rose at the right where this trimming terminates. Edge the sleeve with matching trimming and you have a modish little coat for an hour's labor, which any one would be glad to own and wear. Try it with a piece of tissue paper, doll's size to get the idea, then its no trick at all to make it in any size desired. The length of the garment depends on the width of the strip of material. A piece of figured crepe or poplin in 44 or 45 inch width would make a charming wrap that could be lined and interlined for warmth if desired, or a pattern on kimono lines can be readily obtained that needs no more time or trouble in the making.

A LONG FOLDED NEGLIGE.

An equally successful quickly produced long neglige is made by using a strip of 36 inch goods, twice the length from neck to foot, good measure to allow for hem. Fold this in half and 2 1-2 inches below the fold, in the centre of the front side—cut out a triangle 5 inches at the top and 7 inches at each side. This is the opening for the head, for this garment slips on like a night gown. Beginning at the foot join the sides to within 15 inches of the top and sew a good sized hook on one side and an eye on the other just where the seam finishes. Slip the garment over the head, and catch the sides together with the hook and eye on the underside and you have an exceedingly pretty, gracefully shaped neglige. The sleeve openings may be bound or faced with contrasting color, the neck finished with a frill of lace, or band of swansdown. The bottom is hemmed and if desired can be finished in a pointed train, though allowance for this must be made in measuring. Three-and-one-half yards of 36 inch material is the usual amount required for a height of 60 inches from neck to floor.

KIMONO BLOUSES.

Kimono blouses—and nearly all fashionable waists are modelled on this plan—are not at all difficult to turn out. The cutting out is quickly accomplished with a good pattern and the making, once this detail is accomplished is an easy matter. Such waists made of pretty brocades are worn for all but the most formal occasions, and are not among the inexpensive styles if one buys them ready made. All waists as has been repeatedly said in these letters, are very loose fitting, quite slouchy, if it were not that the underpinning indicates dainty trimness of attire.

DUMMER HOUSE BURNED

Oldest Building of Historic Group at Academy Destroyed

North Byfield, Mass., Jan. 1.—Dummer academy, the oldest preparatory school in America, was threatened with destruction when a dormitory was burned.

The building was the oldest of a historic group, once a part of the estate of William Dummer, lieutenant governor, acting governor and commander-in-chief of the colony of Massachusetts in 1723.

A teacher and his wife, who had rooms in the building, lost all their effects. The loss will not exceed $10,000.

At his death Governor Dummer, who was born in Boston in 1661, left his estate for the founding of the school now known as Dummer academy.

FEARS FOR ATLANTIS

Steamer From Tampico, Mex., For Galveston Perhaps Blown Up

Tampico, Mex., Jan. 1.—Fears are entertained here that the Norwegian steamship Atlantis, which left this port for Galveston with fourteen passengers on board, may have been destroyed by an explosion at sea.

Two hours after she had passed the bar the steamship Norman Castle, inbound, reported that the officers had seen two bursts of smoke on the horizon and heard two loud explosions from the direction of the course taken by the Atlantis.

Efforts were made from here to obtain communication with the Atlantis by wireless telegraph, but there was no response. The battleships stationed here also vainly tried to communicate with her.

HIGH RECORD BY LITCHFIELD

Powers, Tenner and Gardner Teams Win in Tennis League

A single of 121, rolled by Jesse Litchfield, was the highest mark attained in the weekly matches of the Wollaston Tennis Club bowling league on the Coliseum alleys Tuesday evening. There were no contenders for his honors, and he was easily the high man in the totals, his net of 303 taking that feature. Forty men rolled in the four matches and there was much variety in the individual showing.

The team of Captain Litchfield beat Baker's five 3 to 1. A slip in the second string stopped a clean sweep. The score:

CAPT. LITCHFIELD.

The Power's team beat Hoxies men 2 to 1. The latter passed the former by 19 in the third, but it had no practical effect on the team total. The score:

The Gardner and Munroe fives had a tough struggle, the honors going to the former. It was possible to overcome the slight lead in the first two strings but instead the Munroe bowlers fell behind in the third and lost the match 3 to 1. The score:

CAPT. GARDNER.

END IS NEAR IN MEXICAN BATTLE

Experts Believe Federal Troops May Be Exterminated

ARE SHORT OF AMMUNITION

Rebels Seem to Have Ample Supply Captured When They Occupied Chihuahua City—Villa Will Execute All Federal Volunteers Taken—American Troops Guard Border

Presidio, Tex., Jan. 1.—It is the opinion of military experts here that the battle of Ojinaga, Mex., would be decided within twenty-four hours. Likewise it was believed that the only chance of the federals to escape extermination, should the rebels pour in on them, was a precipitate flight across the United States border.

The federals were reported short of ammunition, while the rebels, by the frequency of their fire, appeared to have an ample supply, said to have been taken with the occupation of Chihuahua City. The tactics of narrowing their semicircle around the federals were continued by General Toribio Ortega's forces.

Whatever the outcome, it was certain that no surrender would be considered. General Villa, at Chihuahua, had said that he would execute all federal volunteers whether they surrendered or not. He ordered General Ortega to "drive the federals into the United States, and to return with no prisoners."

United States cavalry patrolling the border considered what they would do if the 4000 men, commanded by almost a dozen generals, should start a rush across the river. Major McNamee, commanding the patrol, had less than 1000 men stationed at points along the river, where it was likely refugee soldiers would cross.

The land which slopes down to the shallow and muddy Rio Grande on the American side presented the busy aspect of the rear of an army in action. Cavalrymen of the border patrol galloped along the water's edge, ready to send back any Mexican soldiers who attempted to cross or to stop a possible general rush of the whole federal army across the border.

Only those soldiers who showed signs of being wounded were given assistance. A Mexican standing in mid-stream bathing a wounded arm, or with a bandage-wrapped head, was attended by an army physician.

A few of the civilians, who had dared to remain in Ojinaga until the last, came across unmolested.

That there was no firing across the border was due chiefly to the fact that Ojinaga stands back from the river. There was no fighting close to the bank.

The commanders of each side promised Major McNamee that the range of fire would be directed away from the river if possible.

Federal Train Blown Up

Vera Cruz, Jan. 1.—A federal troop train was blown up with dynamite, 170 miles southeast of Mexico City, on the main line of the Inter-Oceanic railway, connecting the federal capital with the coast.

Ransom For Terrazas Boy

Chihuahua, Mex., Jan. 1.—Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars in gold has been agreed upon by General Villa as the ransom he will accept for the release of Luis Terrazas, son of the rich Mexican land owner, who has been imprisoned here for five weeks on the charge that he had supported Huerta.

The money is to be paid by Luis Terrazas, Sr., who has been negotiating at El Paso for the release of his son. The prisoner will be brought to the border under safe conduct. The women members of the Terrazas family already have gone to the border.

When the federal army evacuated Chihuahua Terrazas, Sr., went with them, but the son remained behind to look after the estate. He was arrested by Villa on the entrance of the rebels.

CONSPIRATORS EXECUTED

Formosans Had Planned to Massacre Japanese Garrison

Tokio, Jan. 1.—Thirteen Formosan conspirators were publicly executed at Taihoku, Formosa, according to dispatches received by the government here. The men had been convicted in connection with a plot discovered early in November to overthrow Japanese rule in Formosa.

It was the plan to raise an army of 100,000 Formosans massacre the Japanese garrison and hand over the island to China.

FIGHTING SLOW POISON

Family Thinks Mrs. Wingate Took Dose by Mistake

Amityville, L. I., Jan. 1.—Heroic treatment is being administered to Mrs. Charles G. Wingate, daughter-in-law of General George W. Wingate, chief counsel for the Long Island railroad, in an effort to save her life from the effects of a slow poison which she took.

General Wingate said he was sure the poison had been taken by mistake, but the case was, nevertheless, referred to the district attorney's office for investigation.

Their family physician declined to go into details other than to say that Mrs. Wingate had told him she had taken the drug because she was despondent. She dictated a letter to her father-in-law, according to the physician, and this, together with the statement she made, was turned over to the district attorney.

The Wingates are socially prominent here and have two daughters. One of them, Grace, ran out and summoned a physician when she heard her mother had taken poison, and because remedies were applied promptly hope was expressed for her recovery.

NEW DRUG LAWS

All Pharmacists In State Must Be Licensed by Board

Boston, Jan. 1.—With the starting of the new year, the state board of pharmacy will enforce some new regulations for the protection of the public at large.

An act passed at the last session of the legislature and inserted in Chapter 705 makes it compulsory for a registered druggist to be present in a store whenever a prescription or a drug of dangerous character is sold.

Besides this, all drug stores must be licensed and have the license posted in the store, all drug stores are to be subject to inspection, and any violation of the new rules of the state board may subject the druggist, if convicted, to a fine not to exceed $1000.

COASTING TRAGEDY AT NORTH ADAMS

Young Man Killed and Girl Badly Hurt When Rope Broke

North Adams, Mass., Jan. 1.—George Montgomery, 17-year-old son of the chief of the fire department, is dead, and Miss Grace Shaw is believed to be dying of injuries received in a coasting accident.

Seven young persons were coasting on Prospect street, one of the steepest hills in the city, when the steering rope of the "double-runner" broke and the sled capsized. Montgomery and Miss Shaw were hurled against a telegraph pole. The young man's head was crushed and Miss Shaw sustained a fracture of the skull.

Steamships expected are the Poleric, Lancastrian, Ranvik, Trym, Linda Fell and Honorius from Europe and the east. They will bring into Boston at least $5,000,000 worth of goods.

PLAN FOR ENDING COPPER STRIKE

Hope to Force Mining Companies to Come to Terms

THREATS OF RECALL ARE MADE

In Event of Employers Refusing to Treat With Miners Special Session of Legislature Is Asked to Pass Tonnage Tax—Insist Ferris Use His Influence

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 1.—In an effort to end the labor troubles in the copper country, representatives of the various state labor unions will draft a plan for settlement which they will ask Governor Ferris to forward to President Shaw of the Calumet and Hecla Mining company at Boston.

At a conference of union men here it was decided to take the matter over the head of James MacNaughton, general manager of the Calumet and Hecla, in the hope, they said, of further arousing public sentiment and forcing the mining companies to come to terms or at least to submit the differences between them and their employes to a board of arbitration.

In the event the mining companies involved in the strike refuse to treat with their former employes or pay any attention to the request of the governor that they at least meet the represenatives of the labor organizations, the union men insisted that Governor Ferris call a special session of the legislature and advocate the passage of a tonnage tax. Veiled threats of using the recall were made in case the governor refuses to call a special session, if attempts to arbitrate again fail.

Although the governor informed Clarence Darrow, counsel for the Western Federation of Miners; John Mitchell, former president of the United Mine Workers, and President W. D. Mahon of the International Street Railwaymen's organization, all of whom spoke in favor of this plan, that he would continue to do everything in his power to bring about a settlement, he did not say he would call a special session of the legislature and attempt to force the passage of a tonnage tax.

After considerable discussion, the governor convinced the labor leaders that the whole trouble hinged upon the recognition of the Western Federation of Miners. Darrow admitted it was impossible to force the operators by any law to recognize the union, and declared no compulsory arbitration law could be passed that would stand the test of the courts.

"We don't want a compulsory arbitration law anyway," declared Darrow.

The propositions which the labor leaders want the governor to submit to President Shaw of the Calumet and Hecla were drawn up and will be submitted to the chief executive today.

LOW DEATH RECORD

Births and Marriages Decreased In New York In 1913

New York, Jan. 1.—Fewer births, marriages and deaths are a coincidental feature of the city's health statistics for 1913, made public by E. J. Lederle, commissioner of health.

The births decreased from 135,855 in 1912 to 135,134; the marriages from 51,703 to 51,257; there were 73,901 deaths, representing a decrease of .35 per thousand of population.

This is the fourth year in succession that a new low record in the death rate has been established. Viewed from the standpoint of age grouping, the greatest conservation of life was among children, especially infants.

WITHIN THE LAW

By MARVIN DANA
FROM THE PLAY OF
BAYARD VEILLER

Copyright, 1913, by the H. K. Fly company.

Mary laughed aloud, while Burke sat dumfounded. She rose swiftly, and went to the nearest window, and with a pull at the cord sent the shade flying upward. There was revealed the busy stenographer, bent over his pad. A groan of distress burst from him, and he fled the place in ignominious rout.

The smiling Mary was returned to her cell.

CHAPTER XVIII.
The Confession.

BURKE pressed the button call and ordered the doorman to send in Cassidy. When the detective appeared he asked:

"Does Garson know we've arrested the Turner girl and young Glider?" And, when he had been answered in the negative: "Or that we've got Chicago Red and Dacey here?"

"No," Cassidy replied. "He hasn't been spoken to since we made the collar. He seems worried," the detective volunteered.

"He'll be more worried before I get through with him!" he growled. He regarded Cassidy speculatively. "Do you remember the third degree Inspector Burns worked on McGloin? Well," he went on, as the detective nodded assent, "that's what I'm going to do to Garson. He's got imagination, that crook! The things he don't know about are the things he's afraid of. After he gets in here, I want you to take his pals one after the other, and lock them up in the cells there in the corridor. The shades on the corridor windows here will be up, and Garson will see them taken in. The fact of their being there will set his imagination to working overtime all right."

Burke reflected for a moment, and then issued the final directions for the execution of his latest plot.

"When you get the buzzer from me, you have young Glider and the Turner woman sent in. Then, after a while, you'll get another buzzer. When you hear that, come right in here, and tell me that the gang has squealed. I'll do the rest. Bring Garson here in just five minutes. Tell Dan to come in."

As the detective went out, the doorman entered, and thereat Burke proceeded with the further instructions necessary to the carrying out of his scheme.

"Take the chairs out of the office, Dan," he directed, "except mine and one other—that one." He indicated a chair standing a little way from one end of his desk. "Now, have all the shades up." He chuckled as he added: "That Turner woman saved you the trouble with one."

He returned to his chair, and when the door opened he was to all appearances busily engaged in writing.

"Here's Garson, chief," Cassidy announced.

"Hello, Joe!" Burke exclaimed, with a seeming air of careless friendliness, as the detective went out, and Garson stood motionless just within the door.

"Sit down a minute, won't you?" the inspector continued affably. He did not look up from his writing as he spoke.

Garson's usually strong face was showing weak with fear. His chin, which was commonly very firm, moved a little from uneasy twitchings of his lips. His clear eyes were slightly clouded to a look of apprehension as they roved the room furtively. He made no answer to the inspector's greeting for a few moments, but remained standing without movement, poised alertly as if sensing some concealed peril. Finally, however, his anxiety found expression in words. His tone was pregnant with alarm, though he strove to make it merely complaining.

"Say, what am I arrested for?" he protested. "I ain't done anything."

Burke did not look up, and his pen continued to hurry over the paper.

"Who told you you were arrested?" he remarked cheerfully in his blandest voice.

Garson uttered an ejaculation of disgust.

"I don't have to be told," he retorted huffily. "I'm no college president, but when a cop grabs me and brings me down here I've got sense enough to know I'm pinched."

"Is that what they did to you, Joe? I'll have to speak to Cassidy about that. Now, just you sit down, Joe, won't you? I want to have a little talk with you. I'll be through here in a second." He went on with the writing.

Garson moved forward slightly to the single chair near the end of the desk and there seated himself mechanically. His face thus was turned toward the windows that gave on the corridor, and his eyes grew yet more clouded as they rested on the grim doors of the cells. He writhed in his chair, and his gaze jumped from the cells to the impassive figure of the man at the desk. Now the forger's nervousness increased momentarily. It swept beyond his control. Of a sudden he sprang up and stepped close to the inspector.

"Say," he said, in a husky voice, "I'd like—I'd like to have a lawyer."

"What's the matter with you, Joe?" the inspector returned, always with that imperturbable air, and without raising his head from the work that so engrossed his attention. "You know, you're not arrested, Joe. Maybe you never will be. Now, for the love of Mike, keep still and let me finish this letter."

Slowly, very hesitatingly, Garson went back to the chair, and sank down on it in a limp attitude of dejection wholly unlike his customary postures of strength. Again, his fear fascinated eyes went to the row of cells that stood sinisterly menacing on the other side of the corridor beyond the windows. His face was tinged with gray. A physical sickness was creeping stealthily on him, as his thoughts held insistently to the catastrophe that threatened. His intelligence was too keen to permit a belief that Burke's manner of almost fulsome kindliness hid nothing ominous—ominous with a hint of death for him in return for the death he had wrought.

Then, terror crystallized. His eyes were caught by a figure, the figure of Cassidy, advancing there in the corridor. And with the detective went a man whose gait was slinking, craven. A cell door swung open, the prisoner stepped within, the door clanged to, the bolts shot into their sockets noisily.

Garson sat huddled, stricken—for he had recognized the victim thrust into the cell before his eyes. It was Dacey, one of his own cronies in crime—Dacey, who, the night before, had seen him kill Eddie Griggs. There was something concretely sinister to Garson in this fact of Dacey's presence there in the cell.

Of a sudden the forger cried out raucously:

"Say, inspector, if you've got anything on me, I—I would"— The cry dropped into unintelligible mumblings.

Burke retained his manner of serene indifference to the other's agitation. Still, his pen hurried over the paper, and he did not trouble to look up as he expostulated, half banteringly.

"Now, now! What's the matter with you, Joe? I told you that I wanted to ask you a few questions. That's all."

But, after a moment, Garson's emotion forced him to another appeal.

"Say, inspector"— he began.

Then, abruptly, he was silent, his mouth still open to utter the words that were now held back by horror. Again, he saw the detective walking forward, out there in the corridor. And with him, as before, was a second figure, which advanced slinkingly.

Again the door swung wide, the prisoner slipped within, the door clanged shut, the bolts clattered noisily into their sockets.

And, in the watcher, terror grew—for he had seen the face of Chicago Red, another of his pals, another who had seen him kill Griggs. At last he licked his dry lips, and his voice broke in a throaty whisper.

"Say, inspector, if you've got anything against me, why"—

"Who said there was anything against you, Joe?" Burke rejoined, in a voice that was genially chiding.

"Say, inspector, if you've got anything on me"—

"What's the matter with you today, Joe? You seem nervous." Still, the official kept on with his writing.

"No, I ain't nervous," Garson cried, with a feverish effort to appear calm. "Why, what makes you think that? But this ain't exactly the place you'd pick out as a pleasant one to spend the morning." He was silent for a little, trying with all his strength to regain his self control, but with small success.

Burke believed that his opportunity was come. His hand slipped into the pocket where was the pistol, and clutched it. He stared at Garson fiercely, and spoke with a rush of the words:

"Why did you kill Eddie Griggs?"

"I didn't kill him!" The reply was quick enough, but it came weakly. Again, Garson was forced to wet his lips with a dry tongue, and to swallow painfully. "I tell you, I didn't kill him!" he repeated at last, with more force.

"You killed him last night—with this!" Burke cried, viciously. On the instant, the pistol leaped into view, pointed straight at Garson. "Why?" the inspector shouted. "Come on, now! Why?"

"I didn't. I tell you!" Garson was growing stronger, since at last the crisis was upon him. He got to his feet with the swiftness of movement and sprang close to the desk. He bent his head forward challengingly, to meet the glare of his accuser's eyes.

There passed many seconds, while the two men battled in silence, will warring against will. In the end it was the murderer who triumphed.

The Old Year And the New

I WATCHED the old year fade,
And with its dying light
The gloom, at first a shade,
Turned into darkest night.
And then I said: "'Tis gone
The old year is no more.
And memories now alone
Linger along the shore."

I watched the old year die,
And with its fading day
There came the thought that by
Its death a brighter way
Opes up, and, all things bright,
We'll have surcease at last
From specters dark as night.
They'll live, but in the past.

THE OLD YEAR'S FLIGHT.

I watched the old year's flight
And then said, with a smile,
"Ah, now the new year bright
Will bide with us awhile!"
But ere my hopeful dreams
Have realized one day
Is dead and passed; it seems
It starts but to decay.

Thus all along the way
Gravestones must mark the miles,
An epitaph each day,
A tomb of tears and smiles.
So we begin the new
('Tis old ere we've begun)
To find it's aging, too,
With the first setting sun.

But 'twill not always be.
There'll come a living day,
And all things new, and we Shall live in endless May.
No gravestones then will mark
The tombs where dead hopes lie,
No nights of sorrow dark
Creep o'er our changeless sky.
—James Daniel Cleaton.

NEW YEAR'S DAY.

THE dawn is gray and chilly with the frost.
The old year's pulse now
flutters, now is still.
And all our twelvemonth's deeds,
for good or ill,
Pass into shadow, silent, one by one.
While from the night wherein we wander, lost,
The new year rises with the rising sun.

A new year? Nay; 'tis but the same old year,
The same remorseless round of sun and rain,
Of seasons in their order, joy and pain—
The old emotions playing upon strings
That wax a little older, drawing near
The final end of all remembered things.

Earth ages, and the very mountains nod
With years, and we who crawl upon their breast
Pass at the sliding sands' benign behest.
Hate fades, greed fails, lust crumbles into clay,
And there are left but love and faith and God,
To whom a thousand years are as a day
—Reginald Wright Kauffman.

A New Year Proposal.

"What resolutions have I vowed to keep the coming year?
Come, sit beside me, maiden fair, and straightway you shall hear.
I've pledged myself to choose one girl from out the throng so gay
And love her with an honest love forever and for aye.

"I'll work for her with brain and brawn,
with all my might and main.
Until I've won her everything that honesty can gain.
I'll fill her life with all that's good till life itself is done.
And while we train our minds and hearts
we'll not neglect the fun.

"Now, tell me, won't you, maiden fair,
what you have vowed to do?
For I've laid bare my inmost soul to no one but to you."
"I've made no pledges," she replied in so demure a tone,
"But if you don't object I'll try to help you keep your own."
—Wallace Dunbar Vincent.

TO CLEAN UP TOWN

Governor of Oregon Sends Private Secretary to Copperfield

Portland, Ore., Jan. 1.—Governor West has ordered his private secretary, Miss Fern Hobbs, to proceed at once to Copperfield, a mining town, and close the saloons and gambling houses running there in violation of the law.

The governor said he had called on the sheriff and district attorney to close the places, but that "all they did was talk." Miss Hobbs will be accompanied by a special agent of the state.

REFUSES REDUCED RATES

Germany Declares United States Cannot Be Favored

Washington, Jan. 1.—Germany's refusal to grant favored nation treatment to American steels, rubber goods, etc., is based upon the broad ground that a nation is not entitled to claim the reduced rates contained in a reciprocity treaty unless equivalent advantages are offered.

Germany now has trade treaties with Sweden and Japan which permit reduced rates on the commodities named, and the United States claimed similar rates on the same kind of American goods but without success. Because advantages given to the Canadaian pulp was denied to German pulp, full general tariff rates on American steels and rubber goods.

The new tariff law, however, appeared to remove the original German cause of complaint and the state department recently asked Germany to grant again to American steel and rubber goods the preferential rates contained in the Swedish and Japanese treaties.

FIRE ENGINE WRECKED

Newburyport Firemen Hurt When Driver Loses Control

Newbury, Mass., Jan. 1.—A steam fire engine of the Newburyport department was wrecked in a marsh, three firemen were injured when thrown to the ground, and two of the four horses drawing the apparatus were inextricably mired following a runaway.

While the engine was approaching a bridge over the Parker river, the four-horse hitch shied at the lights of an approaching automobile. The driver lost control. The lead animals broke away from their traces and plunged into the marshland, where they lodged deeply.

The other pair of horses dashed over a bank on the opposite side of the road, the engine rocking in their wake, and overturning as it struck the soft land below the bank.

NEW GOVERNOR OF HAWAII WELCOMED

Receives Warm Reception as He Lands From Steamer

Honolulu, Jan. 1.—L. E. Pinkham, the newly appointed governor of the territory of Hawaii, received a warm reception on his arrival here. A large crowd assembled at the pier to greet him as he landed from the steamer Honoluluan. Governor Pinkham issued a statement regarding the policies he will pursue.

The assertion made here that the new tariff law would prove disastrous to Hawaiian planters was denied by the governor.

Referring indirectly to the Japanese, who have the largest percentage of enrollment in the public schools of the island, Pinkham predicted that aliens born here and having the right of citizenship would soon dominate the local government. He said the policy must be pursued of Americanizing them as rapidly as possible.

It was learned that a man of that name and description has been missing for some time from Evansville, Ills., having left Mexico, leaving land valued at many millions. His wife has asked the Spanish consul to assist her in finding her husband. Photographs of Riaz have been sent to Evansville.

The grocery wagon owned by Bates & Humphrey proved to be a poor bumper for the electric car which struck it when it came on to Broad street from a side street Monday afternoon. Mr. Nightingale, the driver received a bad shaking up and the wagon lost three of its wheels and part of the top. The groceries in the wagon were practically a total loss as a mixture of beans, sugar, molasses, vinegar, etc., is very hard to separate. The cause of the accident is not known but it is thought that it will be classed as one of the many accidents that just happen without reason.

NOON ALARM AT WOLLASTON

Fire in Attic at Residence of Charles T. Kelley

The cause of the fire this noon in the house of Charles T. Kelley at 14 Standish avenue is somewhat of a mystery. The fire was discovered by the women of the house by the smell of smoke, and a neighbor ran to Box 56, situated on the corner of Beale street and Newport avenue and sounded the alarm at 12.15.

When the firemen arrived they found the fire to be in the rear part of the attic of the house. This attic is divided by a partition, the front part being evidently used as a child's sleeping room. In the rear attic was piled a lot of window and door screens while near the rear window was a mattress in which the fire apparently started.

The attic is reached by a narrow dark rounding stairway and so thick was the smoke that the firemen were unable to reach the fire by this method with its line of hose. A ladder was raised to the front attic window and through this the men crawled with their line of hose. A well directed stream soon had the fire under control, although not before this rear room was badly scorched. In fact it was a roaring furnace when the firemen first entered it. The roof timbers and boarding were burnt to charcoal.

The mattress was thrown out of the window. It was thought at first that the fire had been started by children, but it was said that all the children had gone to school, although it was between school hours. Chief Litchfield was of the impression that it must have been children that caused the fire. The fire was confined to this room although water ran down through the ceilings to the lower rooms and did some damage. The loss will be less than $500.

SUDDEN DEATH.

Inside of an hour from the time he ceased working in the yard of his home at 100 Phipps street Tuesday afternoon, John A. Hartery, son of Bridget and the late John M. Hartery suddenly expired. A pleasing entertainment and dainty collation will follow the meeting of the George L. Gill Rebekah lodge in Odd Fellows rooms in the Adams building this evening. The affair will be under the direction of Miss M. Lizzie Furnald who planned an attractive program for the first of the New years socials of the lodge.

Not Triplets.

My little grandson was told by his mother to run across the street and inquire of a lady who was going by with three little babes in a cart if they were triplets. He soon came back, looking much disappointed, and said: "No, they are not triplets. They were born the same day, but two of them are girls and the other one is a boy."—Exchange.

CAPT. MANUEL C. SILVA.

Manuel C. Silva, one of the best known captains that sailed from Provincetown harbor, and a popular Portugese resident of that place, died at the home of his son-in-law, Daniel Dorley at 1 Thompson street, Quincy Point on Tuesday night. He was in his 59th year. Several years ago Captain Silva contracted a malady which compelled him to live ashore, and since then he has been takinf treatment at various Boston hospitals. But little relief was obtained and he passed away. The body was sent to Provincetown where his funeral will be held Friday morning. A high mass of requiem will be celebrated at St. eters church. The deceasd was a mmbr of svral societies and had many friends in this city.

Oratory and Seasickness.

According to A. C. Benson, it was the habit of the late Professor Sidgwick, when crossing the English channel, "to take his stand in some secluded part of the vessel and to pour out audibly and rhetorically his repertory of English verse, accompanying it with a good deal of emphatic gesticulation. I believe that the first experiment was successful and that he secured immunity from nausea. But he said the second time that he tried it he was interrupted by one of the officers with a message from the captain begging him to desist on the ground that some of the lady passengers were frightened by his behavior, being under the impression that he was mentally deranged. He complied with the request, and, deprived of its intellectual prophylactic, his brain succumbed to physical sensations."

A Dream Superstition.

I heard what was to me at least a new piece of superstition the other day, and when I think of the risks I've run all these years because I did not know of it my blood runs cold. I met a woman from Virginia in market, and the talk falling on dreams I recalled a most blood curdling nightmare I had had the night before.

"I must tell you what I dreamed last night," I said.

"Let me ask first whether it's a pleasant or an unpleasant dream?" said the lady from Virginia.

"Decidedly unpleasant."

"Then for mercy's sake don't tell it!" said she. "Never tell a bad dream on Saturday, for we say in Virginia:

Friday night's dream on Saturday told
Is sure to come true, no matter how old.

THE QUINCY DAILY LEDGER

LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION IN THE CITY

Vol. 29 No. 2 QUINCY MASS. FRIDAY EVENING, JANUARY 2, 1914 PRICE TWO CENTS

PLANS FOR INAUGURATING CITY GOVERNMENT OF 1914

MAYORS ADDRESS MAY BE SHORT

Probably Informal Without Statistics As to City Finances

No Change Expected in Officials of City Council

The twenty-sixth year of the City Government of Quincy, as well as the inauguration of the twelfth citizen to be elected to the highest office in the gift of the citizens of Quincy, will take place next Monday at 12 o'clock noon, in the Council Chamber, at City Hall.

The ceremonies attendant to the inauguration will vary but little from other years. Promptly at noon the inaugural party will enter the Council chamber by the rear stairway being escorted by City Messenger Harry W. Tirrell, the party comprising Mayor Eugene R. Stone and Mayor-elect John L. Miller; the chaplain of the day, who will probably be Rev. Joseph Walther of the Wollaston Baptist church, and City Clerk Emery L. Crane.

City Clerk Crane will preside until the City Council shall have been organized. After prayer by the chaplain, the oath of office will be administered to the Mayor-elect, after which the roll of the City Council will be called and the oath administered to members elect. The Mayor-elect will then be introduced and will deliver his inaugural address.

This address will be somewhat different from other years for aside from being brief, the usual mass of figures relative to the financial condition, according to the present plans, will be omitted. In his inaugural address the Mayor will probably briefly outline the policies he intends to carry out the coming year.

At the conclusion of the inaugural address the City Council will organize by the election of a president, who will be sworn in, after which the City Clerk steps to the Clerks desk, acting in that capacity until the Clerk of the Council shall have been elected and sworn in.

The election of Clerk of Committees, City Auditor and City Messenger will follow. From the present outlook, Joseph L. Whiton will be re-elected as president and there will be no change in the other Council officers.

This over the Council will adopt rules and draw for seats after which it is ready for business.

Some action will probably be taken relative to the election of Alexander Cowe, whose eligibility to serve is in doubt.

Usually at this time a communication is received from the Mayor appointing a number of constables which are confirmed. Whether he will announce his official family at this meeting, is not known at present.

There are a number of stereotyped orders that are usually offered at the first meeting, namely: Authorizing the Mayor to have his inaugural address printed, and to have printed the annual reports of 1913. Authorizing the Mayor to sign deeds and leases of the Adams Temple and School Fund. Authorizing the clerk to have the rules printed and the calendars printed.

At this meeting it has always been the custom to offer an order borrowing money in anticipation of taxes, as on the first of the year the city always finds itself without funds to carry on business.

At the first meeting it will be necessary to make nominations for a member of the Managers of the Woodward Fund and Property not a member of the City Council. Under the ordinances this nomination will have to lay on the table for two weeks. It is also necessary to elect two members of the City Council as Trustees of the City Hospital corporation.

If a temporary loan order is introduced the Council will probably adjourn for a week, and it will be necessary to suspend the rules, otherwise it would be necessary to hold a meeting in the evening.

While it it not known that the new President of the Council will announce the standing committees at this meeting, the chances are that he will.

The new City Council, is well equipped to transact the business of the city for out of the 23 members of which it is composed all but five gentlemen have seen service in other years, the oldest member in point of service being Joseph L. Whiton.

Brief sketches of the members of City Council of 1914 are printed today in the Daily Ledger, also the usual summary showing the ward from which each councilman comes, his age, birthplace, business, length of service and age.

Sketch of the Mayor-Elect

MAYOR JOHN L. MILLER

For the second time in the history of the City Government of Quincy the citizens by a decisive vote have said that a man not selected as the standard bearer by a recognized political party shall serve as the Mayor of the city which fact adds to the growing feeling on the part of many that in Municipal elections, party designations should be eliminated.

This plan has been favored by many for several years, but there has always been considerable opposition by both of the dominant parties. The time is not far off however when an amendment will be made to the City Charter carrying this idea into effect. The result of the recent election which placed Mr. Miller in the highest office in the gift of the citizens, is in itself evident that there is a growing feeling for eliminating party designations in local affairs.

Although Mayor-elect John L. Miller is probably well known to most of our citizens, a word about him will not be out of place at this time.

Mr. Miller came to Quincy in 1870 and started in to learn the granite cutters trade. This he thoroughly mastered and in 1878 he was elected president of the Granite Cutters Union, being president at the time of the famous lockout when for seven months the granite cutters of the city were locked out. These were strenuous times for the granite cutters and instead of paying money direct to the men, the union started a kind of co-operative store where the goods were given to the members of the union at cost. It was about this time, or to be exact, in 1879 that Mr. Miller organized the Merrymount Granite Co., which was a corporation composed of employees. Mr. Miller was the president of this company for seven years, during which time seventy men were employed.

In 1885 he formed a copartnership with W. H. Thomas under the firm name of Thomas & Miller, and started the present manufacturing plant in Quincy, the firm doing a very large retail business all over the country.

In 1900 Mr. Thomas retired from the firm since which time it has been carried on by Mr. Miller. In 1893 he was elected by the Granite Manufacturers association, of which he had then become a member to go to the World's fair at Chicago, and settle a controversy there with the judges. In this he was successful.

He became president of the Granite Manufacturers Association in 1900 and served in that capacity for four years. His first public office was as a member of the school committee being elected in 1902 for a term of three years as member of that board from Ward Three. He has been a member of the School Board since that time, for four years being the chairman of the board.

During the past year Mr. Miller was elected by the New England Granite Manufacturers as president of the bureau to plan for the National Retail Dealers convention which was held in Boston last August. This was one of the most successful conventions the association has ever had, Quincy day being a closing feature, which was a grand finale in spite of the fact that Barre, Vt. tried to steal the delegates away from Quincy.

He was a candidate of the Progressive party in 1912 for Mayor but failed of election being defeated by Mayor Eugene R. Stone.

He is a member of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, The Quincy Y. M. C. A., Wollaston Masonic lodge and the Wollaston Baptist church.

LADIES AID ALLIANCE.

A very pleasant New Years luncheon was served on Wednesday for the Ladies Aid Alliance in the Wollaston Unitarian vestry by Mrs. Jesse I. Litchfield and a corps of helpers.

A short business meeting followed and piano selections by Mrs. Prime of Worcester were enjoyed.

The speaker of the afternoon was Mrs. Anna Sturgis Duryea of the World Peace Foundation, who told of the 100 years of peace between England, Canada and America now nearing completion. Mrs. Duryea stated that the event would be largely observed in all three countries and told of some of the ceremonies that would mark the close of the peace century.

It is probable in the event of Joseph L. Whiton being elected as President of the new City Council next Monday and there is no known opposition, that he will announce the make up of the standing committees of the new Council before adjournment.

Mayor-Elect Miller Lauded at Complimentary Banquet at Boston Hotel

Tells of Few Reforms That He Expects to Make

Upwards of 150 citizens, representing all wards of the city, were present Thursday evening at the New American house, Boston at the complimentary dinner, tendered to Mayor-elect John L. Miller. The reception and dinner were in charge of the committee that handled his recent campaign so successfully. By a vote of the committee, newspaper men were rigidly excluded. It was said this was not because of anything of a private nature, but that no publicity was desired.

An excellent menu was provided, and while the various courses were being partaken of, music was furnished by an orchestra, and there were songs by Deputy Sheriff McDevitt. Mr. Miller, the honored guest of the evening arrived at the banquet hall in good season, having come over the road in an automobile. He was accorded a rousing reception as he entered the hall.

The dinner was served at 7.30 and liquors were tabooed. The toastmaster of the evening was Alexander Falconer, and he with the Mayor-elect and members of the general committee were at the head table. The speakers of the evening, aside from the Mayor-elect, included James Wall of Houghs Neck, Mr. Breen of Wollaston who came on from New York especially that he might attend the banquet; Peter T. Fallon, West Quincy's favorite son; Councilman-elect Carl E. Carlson of Squantum; Chester I. Campbell, Mr. Wallin of Squantum, ex-Councilman Albert N. Murray, the original Miller man Albert C. Marr, T. A. Winsloe, Dr. Reynolds and others.

The Mayor-elect was of course the speaker whose remarks were most closely followed. He did not tell his hearers whom he intended to appoint, although in the party gathered about the festive board, were several whom it is said anticipated the plums, and who had their ears close to the ground in case anything should drop. But nothing dropped. The Mayor-elect told them that he would stop that red dev-

SKETCHES OF COUNCILMEN OF 1914

Only Five of the Members-Elect Will Enter Upon Their First Year

Councilman Whiton Will Begin His Eighth Year

Next Monday, Quincy will have a new City Council, and it will be of interest at this time to look over thepersonnel, that taxpayers and voters may know what to expect of their representatives in the legislative branch of the city government. That all citizens of Quincy have opportunities is shown by the fact that nine of the twenty-two are of foreign birth. Only five were born in Quincy. A bare majority, 12, were born in New England. The city is fortunate that all but five members have had previous experience in the City Councils of other years. The five new men are Elijah P. Brown, Carl E. Carlson, James O'Dowd, Alfred H. Richards and R. J. Williams, Jr.

Members at Large

CHARLES W. BAILEY

having served for three years in the City Council as a member from Ward Five, enters the City Council of 1914, as Councilman at Large, having received both the Republican and Progressive endorsement at the Municipal primaries. Councilman Bailey is one of the most valuable men in the City Council, his experience in financial matters being often sought in the Finance Committee of which he has been chairman during the past year. Ward lines have never counted in his vote which has always been for what he considered the best interest of the city.

Born in Scituate in 1872 he has been a resident of Wollaston for a number of years although spending his summers in Sictuate. He secured a position in the Boylston National bank when but 16 years of age and by constant attention to business has advanced step by step until he today holds one of the most important positions in the bank.

He is also a trustee of a large Boston estate, a member of the National Bank Cashiers' association of Boston, the Boston Baptist Sunday school union, Quincy Y. M. C. A. and a director in the Wollaston Co-operative Bank.

JOHN B. BASS

Enters the City Council of 1914 for his second term as a Councilman at Large. He was born in Quincy, Oct. 18, 1887 and is the son of George S. Bass, for many years connected with the postoffice in Quincy at the time his father John B. Bass was postmaster.

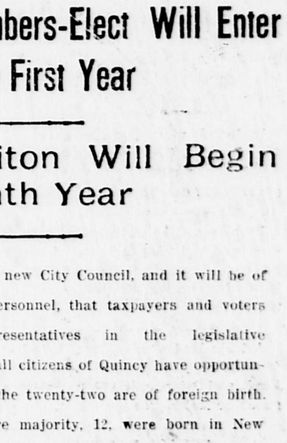
JOHN B. BASS

Councilman Bass although not a ready debater has done valuable work on committees having served in the Council of 1913 on the standing committees of Ordinances and Licenses and Elections and Returns.

He was educated in the public schools completing his education at the Quincy High school from which he was graduated in the class of 1906. He was employed for several years on the Boston Curb Exchange but of late years has been in the employ of H. L. Kincaide & Co. He is a member of the Quincy yacht club and Quincy order of Moose.

CHARLES A. HADLOCK.

Councilman at Large comes to the Council of 1914 with a long experience the coming year being his seventh in service. Previous to this year he has always been elected from



CHARLES A. HADLOCK.

Ward Six but as noted above he will serve in 1914 as Councilman at Large. His other years of service have been 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904, 1909 and 1913.

Councilman Hadlock was born in Charlestown, Mass., Dec. 17, 1862 but came to Neponset with his parents when a babe. There it was that he obtained his education and learned the business of a carpenter and builder with his father, J. E. Hadlock, a former well known builder of Boston which business is now carried on by Councilman Hadlock under the old firm name. He has been a resident of Atlantic since May 8, 1897.

During his service in the City Council he has served on every standing committee of that body and on many of the special committees appointed from time to time.

Again we ask those sending news or other matter by mail to direct it to the company or newspaper rather than to individual members of the company or employees. If addressed to individuals and they were ill or not at the office, it might be several days in reaching its proper destination and if news matter would be too late for use.

No wonder the cost of living is high, when so many of our reckless and extravagant people are seen reading the advertisements of winter vacation trips.

It doesn't seem to make much difference what the telephone and telegraph lines would cost, so long as the government can borrow the money.

President Huerta has declared a series of bank holidays, but he cannot expect to become the idol of Mexico as long as he lets people work in the factories.

A train load of 29 cars of hats has just been sent from New York to St. Paul, and Minnesota did not elect a governor last November either.

SCHOOL DANCES.

The school authorities are to be commended on their action relative to dances. Where there is so much criticism of the "kitchen sink" and other new dances and of women's gowns of today, it is best that mixed dances at our schoolhouses should be suspended for awhile. Those adults who are willing to go near the danger line, should stop and consider the example they set for the young, and the influences such dances have. An opportunity is offered January 11 to set a better example.

PAY YOUR DEBTS.

For many persons the happy spirit of New Year's day is turned to mourning by the flood of Jan. 1 bills. While some people every month clean up all accounts, yet a large number of the Jan. 1 reminders will be thrown into the waste basket, many of them with envelopes unbroken.

A habit of debt paying builds up a community. Settling the grocer's account makes him able to pay the butcher, the latter can then pay the plumber, and so on. The nimble dollar once released from the tardy hand of the debtor, flies around the business section, creating hope and confidence.

With old accounts cleaned up, merchants feel like undertaking new enterprises. This means more work to do, more people to receive wages.

It is surprising to know the number of people having plenty of money who make it a practice to let bills drift along for months or years, while the struggling tradesmen whom they owe skimp and shift to keep their heads above water.

UNJUST ASSESSMENTS.

Quincy and other cities and towns should protest vigorously against all taxes and Metropolitan assessments which are levied on "population." All taxes should be assessed wholly upon "valuation," otherwise the rich cities will benefit at the expense of those which have a smaller per capita valuation. Brookline has a smaller population than Quincy, but should not be allowed to escape with a smaller assessment, because the valuation of the town is three times as large.

One of the provisions of the proposed Metropolitan Fire Prevention Commission bill is that the cost shall be apportioned annually among Quincy and other cities and towns, one half on basis of "valuation" and one-half on basis of "population." Why should population be selected? No good reason can be advanced. "Value of buildings" would be a good substitute, but assessed valuation is equitable to all.

But should the cities which surround Boston be included at all in this Metropolitan scheme? We think not. The new city government should be prepared to fight this new bill.

GREAT WRONG TO AGED WOMAN

Appeal for Release of Mrs Caroline Torrey Couchier

Editor of Daily Ledger.

As time fails me to personally answer the many letters of inquiry and telephone calls asking me to investigate the case of our friend, Mrs. C. L. P. Couchier of Wollaston, will you allow me to state the circumstances in this sad case, which calls for immediate relief?

This aged lady, now 75 years of age, formerly a school teacher of Quincy, has lived here all her life. She is the widow of a veteran and has lived for many years with her aged brother at 267 Farrington street, in a house the use of which, I am told, was given to her brother and herself for their life time.

Two weeks ago her home was destroyed by fire, when her brother, Quincy Torrey, 81 years old, lost his life. He had been ill for several weeks and the poor old lady worn out with constant nursing and doing her own housework, was rescued at the front door of her house and carried across the street to the house of a neighbor. What wonder that the shock of the fire and the excitement temporarily unnerved her?

Her trustee was sent for, and instead of providing a quiet room with a nurse and attending physician, he sent for doctors and the police and the poor woman, protesting, was carried out to the waiting automobile and taken to the Brookline Hospital where she was locked up for "observation." If she had been a criminal she could not have been treated worse. Her gray hairs should have been given more respect.

After being two days at Brookline, she was declared by the attending physician to be "mildly insane" and committed to the Taunton Insane Asylum.

I am informed she was represented as a pauper. Now Mrs. Couchier is not a pauper. I am advised that a large trust fund, some $90,000, was left some years ago by her aunt, Mrs. Thomas Adams, in the hands of trustees. She also had a pension from the U. S. government, and I am advised she has other money to which she is legally entitled. But in spite of all this, it has been a cause of much unfavorable comment for many years, how hard it was for her to get money for even the necessaries of life. No repairs were ever made on her house. The wall paper had not been removed for 30 years. She begged to have a single faucet so she might have running water put in the kitchen, but the trustees refused, because "she might let the water freeze up some cold night." there are nine months of the year when water pipes don't freeze! So this poor old lady, 75 years old, has been compelled to pump every drop of water used in her house.

It is not the purpose of this letter to go further into detail, but much more might be written.

Today, at the request of many members of my society, I have visited Mrs. Couchier at the Taunton Insane Hospital. I found her in a cot, locked in a ward which accommodates 40 insane women. She greeted me joyfully, and hoped that I had come to take her away. She told me a coherent and interesting account of her hospital experiences, which were illuminating. We talked for an hour and I found her no more insane that she has been for the past 15 years in which I have known her.

During my visit we were constantly interrupted by these insane women coming around her cot, some making curious noises most unpleasant.

The fact that a few years ago a distant relative of Mrs. Couchier met a violent death being choked to death in the very ward in which she is now confined, does not conduce to her mental tranquility, but she has faith in God and that her friends will not forsake her in these dark hours.

I consider it a cruel shame to take a woman at her time in life away from her friends and shut her up a ward with many crazy women with no privacy by day or night, ever under the eye of an attendant. A prisoner, looking out through grated windows, and slowly tortured to death, for constant dropping will wear away a stone, and to hear the sounds and see the sights I saw yesterday would drive anyone insane in a short time.

But Mrs. Couchier is not an insane person. She was always eccentric and very talkative, the result probably of being much alone.

She is a member in good standing of the Old South Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, and the Massachusetts State Society U. S. Daughters of 1812, her father having been confined in the famous Dartmoor Prison in that war. She was always a regular attendant at the meetings of the Society and with a good knowledge of parliamentary law could always be depended upon to speak at the right time and correct others. Her letters to me show no evidence of an unbalanced mind.

I consider it my duty to present these facts at the annual meeting of the Massachusetts State Society, U. S. D., 1812, next week, and know their action will be quick and thorough; but as a Quincy woman I appeal first to the patriotic men and women of Quincy to take this matter up at once.

It is a shame and a disgrace to Quincy that an aged woman can be railroaded into an insane asylum—shut off from her friends—and condemed to a living death.

The distance to Taunton is so considerable, entailing an expense of $2.50 for railroad and hack fares, as the asylum is a mile from the R. R. station, makes it improbable that her friends could often visit her.

She should be taken at once to some sanitarium near Boston, where her friends could visit her and try to make her last days happy.

I believe that I shall not appeal to the patriotic men and women of Quincy in vain, and they will rally to demand that this cruel wrong to this aged woman shall be righted before it is too late.

Very truly Yours.
(Mrs.) L. B. Titus.

HALL PLACE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Annual Reports Show Progress Officers Re-elected

The annual meeting of the Sunday school of the Hall Place M. E. church was held in the small vestry Wednesday evening.

The committee appointed to buy the Christmas presents reported their work done. Reports were also received from library committee and the "Roll of Honor" committee.

The annual reports were then received. Superintendent A. D. Stewart thanked the Sunday School Board for the Christmas gift presented him. In reporting the work of the year Mr. Stewart said a session of the Sunday school had been held every Sunday, the special days observed by the school being Easter, Children's Day, Rally Day and Christmas. Rally day we were favored with the presence of Dr. D. L. Martin, a former pastor who gave a helpful and interesting talk; the attendance and collection for that day were the largest for some years. After the session a group picture of the school was taken. The annual picnic was held at Highland Park and was a success socially, but a failure financially. This financial condition however helped the Sunday school to realize what they could do as was seen by the successful lawn party held later to meet this picnic debt. Through the efforts of the pastor, Mr. Richardson of Boston presented 18 Bible testaments to pupils of the Sunday school for committing to memory Bible verses, Miss Hilda Francis' class taking the greatest number. Through the efforts of Miss Maud Nicholls the cradle roll has been increased. Three classes have been organized during the year, Mrs. Martin's, Miss Frances' and Miss Martin's classes. In closing Mr. Stewart thanked the teachers and officers for their faithful and conscientious efforts and especially the concert committee for their work.

The secretary gave an interesting table of attendance for the year, the average for each month, the quarter and the whole year, the lowest attendance for one month and the highest for one month, the lowest for one Sunday and the highest for one Sunday and also the smallest and largest collection.

The treasurer reported all bills paid and a balance on hand in the general fund of $20.24, and in the Missionary fund $9.35, two payments having been previously made on this account.

The nominating committee reported the nominees for office during 1914 and the following were elected.

Superintendent—Mr. Stewart.
Assistant Superintendent— Julius Fuller.
Secretary—Florence Manhire.
Treasurer—Joseph M. Francis.
Librarian—Harold Norris.
Pianist—Edna Miller.

The officers are all re-elected having served faithfully last year.

Meeting adjourned at 9 P. M. and was followed by a "Watch Night" service.

MRS. G. R. APPLEGATE

Tells Mothers What To Do For Delicate Children.

"My little boy has been rather delicate for a long time. He was always very pale and his appetitie was poor. Several people recommended 'Vinol.' I gave it to him and he took it willingly, as the taste is delicious. In a short time I noticed a great improvement in his appetitie. He soon had more color in his cheeks. He is now well like other children and romps about every afternoon after school. I am so happy with what Vinol did for my little boy, that I want every mother to know about it."—Mrs. C. R. Applegate, Dayton, Ohio.

This delicious cod liver and iron preparation without oil is a wonderful body builder and strength creator for both young and old. We promise to give back your money in every such case where Vinol does not benefit. This shows our faith in Vinol—Edward J. Murphy, Druggist, Quincy, Mass.

SILK FLAG FOR REBEKAHS

Presented to George L. Gill Lodge By Miss Furnald

A handsome silk flag, the gift of Miss M. Lizzie Furnald, was presented to the George L. Gill Rebekah lodge, I. O. O. F., in the lodge room on New Years night. A collation and dancing followed the presentation.

The presentation, following a three-quarter of an hour drill by the Harmony Club flag staff of tent 12, Daughters of Veterans, of Somerville, was by Miss Isabelle Knights. The colors were received by Miss Sadie Wood, noble grand of the lodge.

The drill was the finest patriotic exemplification ever seen in the city. In the work, Friendship, Charity and Loyalty were represented and the first letters of Friendship, Love and Truth were formed several times. The staff consisted of twenty and they were assisted by members of Camp No. 3, Sons of Veterans.

The George L. Gill lodge was instituted April 7, 1898, and Miss M. Lizzie Furnald, because of her efforts in bringing the attempts of months to a successful conclusion has been lovingly termed "Mother of the lodge." At the first election of officers she was chosen treasurer and has held that position ever since. She was reelected for the 16th time at the election held a week ago.

The lodge enters upon its 16th term next spring. It is one of the most active organizations of the state, has a large membership and all are zealous for its welfare. KILLED ON RAILROAD

Andrew McIntosh a South Quincy Granite Manufacturer

Andrew McIntosh, of the well known granite firm of McIntosh & Sons was instantly killed by the cars at the Quincy Adams station shortly after 10 o'clock Thursday night. Just how the accident happened no one seems to know, but it is supposed that he must have been struck by a switching engine while crossing the tracks just south of the Quincy Adams station. When found the body was on the outward rail, and was discovered by the engineer of the train due in Quincy Adams shortly before 10 o'clock.

From what can be learned, it is supposed that he had followed the custom, in general use at South Quincy, of using the path across tracks instead of going to the Water street crossing, the path being a short cut. It is supposed that he had been on the west side of the tracks on an errand and was on the way to his home on Franklin street, when struck by the shifting engine.

Mr. McIntosh was born in Scotland 67 years ago, passing his early life in that country where he mastered the trade of the granite cutter. Coming to America and Quincy, about 35 years ago, he followed his trade for a time, later going into business for himself. Later when his sons became of age, he took them into the firm, and they have been active with him in the granite business for many years. His plant was located on the corner of Centre street and Columbia road, South Quincy.

He leaves a widow and several grown up children. He was a member of the Granite Manufacturers Association and of Clan McGregor, O. S. C.

Medical Examiner Dr. F. E. Jones, who investigated the accident found that Mr. McIntosh left his home at 9.30 and that he was probably struck by the express train for the South Shore that passes through Quincy at 9.40. The body was found by the conductor of the double iron freight.

WILLIAM P. THOMPSON

comes back to the City Council for his third year of service having served in the Councils of 1912 and 1913 from Ward One. He is a native of Brooklyn, N. Y., where he was born April 1874. JOSEPH L. WHITON.

Who will probably succeed himself as President of the City Council of 1914 will be the oldest, in point of service, of any member of the City Council of 1914 as it will be his eighth term. The first three years of his service were in 1902, 1903 and 1908 as Councilman from Ward Two, afterward serving in the years 1909, and 1910 and 1913, part of the time as Councilman at Large and as Councilman from Ward One. For the greater part of the year 1913 he served as President of the City Council having been elected March 7, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Charles M. THOMAS GRIFFIN.

Although a candidate on the Democratic ticket from Ward Two in which several candidates were seeking the election to the City Council, Councilman Griffin had little difficulty in winning out and being returned for his second term. It is seldom that a first year man in the City Council gets an appointment on the Finance Committee, but President Whiton was not long in recognizing his ability and cutting a long established custom appointed him to that committee.

Councilman Griffin is like the man from Missouri, he wants to be convinced. He looks into all matters before the council with a careful eye and he is looked upon as a man of excellent judgment.

Harvard and Princeton finish the series Monday evening.

The Quincy boys made a good showing in the State Games championship in Boston Y. M. C. A. this week. Oscar Djerf won the bowling championship with a score of 130-84-89-303. Sturgis Hunt won the ping pong championship, taking the final match easily by 6—1, 6—1 and 6—4. Arthur Skinner got into the semi-finals in checkers where he was stopped by a contestant from Boston.

At the Saturday morning meeting this week, Rev. Carl G. Horst will give the address which was to have been given last Saturday. Mr. Horst was unavoidably detained last week and has very kindly agreed to speak on "The best gift."

Other speakers for the month include Mr. Shaw of Waltham, sea scoutmaster, who will give a stereopticon talk on the cruise of the "Pioneer," the scoutship; H. R. Hitchcock of Harvard who will talk about football; Edwin Mulready, deputy commissioner of probation; and Rev. I. W. Sneath of Wollaston.

The Father and Son banquet is to take place on Wednesday, Jan. 7. The Ladies Auxiliary are to prepare the edibles, and the Wollaston Cadet orchestra will furnish music. Rev. B. A. Willmott, pastor of Bethany church is the main speaker of the evening. At the conclusion of the post-prandial exercises there will be bowling matches, pool games and an opportunity to watch the Y. M. C. A. basket ball team play Lowell Y. M. C. A. in a League game. The committee in charge consists of Frederick M. Atwood, chairman, Allen Connor, Maynard Hatch, Joe Beal, Nathaniel Barton and Albert Stephenson.

The fall schedule of group games contests at the Y. M. C. A. of the Junior Class was won by the Princeton Team, led by Eric Nelson, after the hottest kind of competition. Only 3 points separated the second team from the winner at the end of the contest. Princeton had 60 and Harvard 57 points. Yale was third with 45 1-2 and Carlisle fourth with 30 and 1-10 points.

The teams were chosen early in October and have been competing ever since on Saturday mornings in the following events: Basketball relay races, potato races, Indian club races, obstacle races, high and broad jumps, apparatus exercises on the horse and buck.

The following boys were on the winning team: E. Nelson, M. Hatch, H. Hendry, G. Wester, N. Dodge, W. Deane, M. Berry, E. Taylor, J. Beale, R. Cornell, F. Morrison, C. Williams, J. Ryan and G. Nickerson.

The Employed Boys class games were won by the Yale team of which John Osberg is captain. The competition was not very close in this class as Yale has had a substantial lead throughout. The end of the games found Yale with 122 points. Princeton second with 96; Harvard was third with 95, and Dartmouth last with 76. On the Yale team were J. Osberg, A. Hall, J. Robertson, E. Osgood, G. Kane, N.Barton, S. Sarno and C. Johnson.

A trophy will be hung in the trophy room with the names of the boys on the two winning teams, and ribbons will be given to each boy also.

The Senior pool tournament is nearly completed with but four contestants left. Brooks has made sure of his place as finalist by defeating T. Djerf, 50 to 36. Hallowell plays Rich, and the winner of that match plays England to decide who shall meet Brooks in the final round. The prize offered for this tournament is a first class jointed pool cue and case.

The first and second basketball team will meet Cambridge Y. M. C. A. in league games at Cambridge Saturday evening.

Plans are under way for the organization of an Employed Boys basketball team. A student team composed of High school boys who are not on the regular High school squad, is being organized, and a game has been arranged to take place early this month.

School Team Shows Up Well in Opening Game

Quincy High school opened its basket ball season in the gynasium Thursday afternoon by defeating the Alumni team, 30 to 16. In a class game the Juniors beat the Seniors 13 to 6. The attendance was fair.

The star of the game was Captain James Jenkins of the school team, who shot five baskets, one of which was the most spectacular ever seen in the Gym. Through his enthusiastic playing he inspired the team to work every moment and he was ably supported by White at centre and Earl Bates at right forward.

The first half closed with the school team leading 16 to 9 and the Alumni were well fagged out when the whistle blew. "Bull Moose" Brown at centre was puffing hard, Sam Prout and Tirrell on the forwards had lost their energy, and Mecca Larkin was in no kind of condition for the game. Richard Crane retired so Ralph Prout could play the last half.

The squad gave every indication of fast work, but nothing definite about the possibilities can be said until Tuesday when they meet Wellesley in the first of the interscholastic league games.

VERY NEARLY A MILLION

Collection of Taxes a Record Breaker This Year

The record of collections made by Tax Collector Oscar S. Sandberg this year is one of which he may well feel proud. When he started in the first of the year it was with the determination to make the year a record one as far as collections were concerned, and in this he has made good.

According to the report given out by his office this morning, the total collections for the year 1913 have been $998,336.76 which is a record breaker. Not only is it the largest collection ever made in a year, but it is $105,403.42 in excess of the total levy for 1913.

When compared with the collections of 1912 the amount this year shows an increase of $227,624.10. The tax levy of 1912 was $799,691.73, and the levy of 1913 $892,933.34. Had the office collected $1,663.24 more the total collection would have been a million dollars.

NEW YEARS AT SQUANTUM

Men Serve a Supper and Entertainment

Men of the Squantum Improvement Association are being congratulated for the success of their supper and entertainment at the Vacation House on New Year's eve. The work of providing the edibles and of serving them was done by the men, and although there was not quite the finesse that so often attends the serving of a supper by women, it was agreed that for a starter the men did very well. All of the 125 Squantum residents who attended got all they wanted to eat which was the main thing.

One of the most appetizing features of the menu was potato salad prepared by Herman Berghaus, one of the best known chefs of New England. The salad was served on large platters handsomely decorated. Another feature was the excellent coffee prepared by James H. Sumner.

The committee whose work deserved the highest praise, included Rev. T. W. Davison, chairman; James H. Sumner, Warren Fifield, James H. Foster and Charles Bostwick.

The supper was served shortly after 7 o'clock. It was nearly nine o'clock before all had been served. The party then adjourned to the lower assembly hall where an entertainment was given. President Herbert A. Smith welcomed the guests and wished all a Happy New Year. The entertainment was in charge of the Rev. Mr. Davison. Joseph Uppling played several selections upon a banjo and sang and whistled. He is a favorite at all Squantum entertainments. Mrs. S. H. Adams followed with a recitation. She was called back again and again, and proved herself a high-class entertainer. The Squantum quintet made a rather bad start, but after it got under way, sang two selections that were much enjoyed. The quintet is composed of James H. Foster, John Jepson, Jr., John R. Nelson, Perley Bostwick and Joseph Uppling. Miss Jordine Davison sang two selections in excellent voice to accompaniments played by her sister. After the entertainment there was a social hour.

NEW YEARS WEDDING

Miss Mollie Brown Bride of Willard Perkins Sheppard

Wollaston Unitarian church never looked more attractive than it did New Year's night for the wedding of Miss Mollie Gilbert Brown, daughter of Mrs. Sylvester Brown of Wollaston Park and Willard Perkins Sheppard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Sheppard of East Braintree. Christmas greens, laurel and white carnations were used effectively, the color scheme being green and white.

Mrs. Chandler W. Smith at the organ played during the assembling of the guests and every seat was filled with friends of the young people when the notes of the wedding march pealed forth at half past seven.

The four bridesmaids entered from the front of the church and went down the aisle to meet the bridal party. The bride escorted by her brother George E. Brown was preceded by the four ushers, four bridesmaids and maid of honor to the altar where she met the groom and his best man, and the two officiating clergymen, Dr. William Gallagher, headmaster of Thayer Academy, South Braintree who solemnized the marriage, assisted by Rev. Carl G. Horst, pastor of the church. The bride was given in marriage by her brother.

Miss Elizabeth Singleton of Newton, a college classmate of the bride was maid of honor and wore a gown of pale green crepe meteor with drapery of cream lace. She carried Killarney roses.

The bridesmaids were Misses Marjorie and Dorothy Fay of Wollaston, cousins of the bride, Miss Helen Taff of Dorchester, classmate of the bride and Miss Evelyn Aldrich of Brookline. They were all gowned alike in pink charmeuse, with drapery of chantilly lace and carried Killarney roses.

The charming bride wore an ivory satin charmeuse trimmed with duchess and rose point lace and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley.

Ferdon Shaw of Braintree a classmate acted as best man and the ushers were Carl R. Sheppard of Quincy and Joel F. Sheppard 2d of Dover, N. H. cousins of the groom. Sylvester Brown brother of the bride and Henry M. Sheahan of Quincy classmate of groom.

Following the church ceremony a small reception for the immediate family friends was held at the home of the bride, 40 Willow street, the bride's mother and the groom's parents assisting the min receiving from eight until ten o'clock. The house decorations were laurel, pink roses and carnations.

As Mr. and Mrs. Sheppard left for a wedding trip of two or three weeks they were showered with confetti and good wishes. Their future home will be at 684 Washington street, South Braintree, where they will receive their friends after March first.

Mr. Sheppard was of class '09 at Harvard and many of his classmates were at the wedding. He is a member of the firm of J. F. Sheppard & Sons at Braintree.

FUNERAL OF J. A. HARTERY.

The funeral of John A. Hartery was held from his home at 100 Phipps street this morning and was attended by relatives, friends and delegations from Div. 5, A. O. H., and Quincy Branch, No. 61 of the United Irish Land league. There was a profusion of floral remembrances. A high mass of requiem was celebrated at St. John's church by Rev. Fr. John J. Coan. The Gregorian chant was sung by the regular choir under the direction of Mrs. Sadie McKay Reardon, organist. The soloists were Mrs. Mary Burns King and Miss Eva Rice. The bearers were David M. Warner, John J. Fitzgerald, Michael Coffey, James P. Doherty, John McNeil, William J. Byron, James M. Faircloth and Edward Durand. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

GARDNER CLUB.

The members of the Gardner Club and their friends were treated to a very helpful and interesting talk Thursday evening. C. I. Wilson, purchasing agent of the Boston Woven Hose Co. of Boston, addressed the club at the parish house at Christ church. His subject was "The value to a young man of the way of business approach." He certainly was a very capable entertainer and instructor.

WITHIN THE LAW

By MARVIN DANA

FROM THE PLAY OF

BAYARD VEILLER

Copyright, 1913, by the H. K. Fly company.

Suddenly, Burke dropped the pistol into his pocket, and lolled back in his chair. His gaze fell away from the man confronting him. In the same instant, the rigidity of Garson's form relaxed, and he straightened slowly.

"Oh, well," Burke exclaimed amiably, "I didn't really think you did, but I wasn't sure, so I had to take a chance. You understand, don't you, Joe?"

"Sure, I understand," Garson replied, with an amiability equal to the inspector's own.

Burke pressed the buzzer as the agreed signal to Cassidy. "Where did you say Mary Turner was last night?"

At the question, all Garson's fears for the woman rushed back on him with appalling force.

"I don't know where she was," he exclaimed doubtfully. He realized his blunder even as the words left his lips, and sought to correct it as best he might. "Why, yes, I do, too," he went on, as if assailed by sudden memory. "I dropped into her place kind of late, and they said she'd gone to bed—headache, I guess. Yes, she was home, of course. She didn't go out of the house all night." His insistence on the point was of itself suspicious, but eagerness to protect her dulled his wits.

"Know anything about Gilder?" Burke demanded.

"Not a thing," was the earnest answer.

The inner door opened, and Mary Turner entered the office. Garson with difficulty suppressed the cry of distress that rose to his lips. For a few moments the silence was unbroken. Then presently Burke by a gesture directed the girl to advance toward the center of the room. As she obeyed he himself went a little toward the door, and when it opened again and Dick Gilder appeared he interposed to check the young man's rush forward as his gaze fell on his bride, who stood regarding him with sad eyes.

Then, while still that curious, dynamic silence endured, Cassidy came briskly into the office.

"Say, chief," the detective said rapidly, "they've squealed."

"Squealed, eh? Do they tell the same story?" And then when the detective had answered in the affirmative he went on speaking in tones ponderous with self complacency.

"I was right, then, after all—right all the time. Good enough." Of a sudden his voice boomed somberly. "Mary Turner, I want you for the murder of"—

Garson's rush halted the sentence. He had leaped forward. His face was rigid. He broke on the inspector's words with a gesture of fury. His voice came in a hiss:

"That's a —— lie! I did it!"

CHAPTER XIX.

Anguish and Bliss.

GARSON shouted his confession without a second of reflection. But the result must have been the same had he taken years of thought. Between him and her as the victim of the law, there could be no hesitation for choice. The prime necessity was to save her, Mary, from the toils of the law that were closing around her. For himself, in the days to come, there would be a ghastly dread, but there would never be regret over the cost of saving her. He had saved her from the waters—he would save her until the end, as far as the power in him might lie.

The suddenness of it all held Mary voiceless for long seconds. She was frozen with horror of the event. When, at last, words came, they were a frantic prayer of protest.

"No, Joe! No! Don't talk—don't talk!"

"Joe has talked," Burke said, significantly.

"He did it to protect me," she stated, earnestly.

The inspector disdained such futile argument. As the doorman appeared in answer to the buzzer, he directed that the stenographer be summoned at once.

"We'll have the confession in due form," he remarked, gazing pleasedly on the three before him.

"He's not going to confess," Mary insisted, with spirit.

But Burke disregarded her completely, and spoke mechanically to Garson the formal warning required by the law.

"You are hereby cautioned that anything you say may be used against you." Then, as the stenographer entered, he went on with lively interest. "Now, Joe!"

Yet once again, Mary protested, a little wildly.

"Don't speak, Joe! Don't say a word till we can get a lawyer for you!"

The man met her pleading eyes steadily, and shook his head in refusal.

"It's no use, my girl," Burke broke in harshly. "I told you I'd get I'm going to fix you and Garson, and the whole gang for murder—yes, every one of you. And you, Gilder," he continued, lowering on the young man who had defied him so obstinately, "you'll go to the house of detention as a material witness." He turned his gaze to Garson again, and spoke authoritatively: "Come on now, Joe!"

Garson went a step toward the desk and spoke decisively.

"If I come through, you'll let her go—and him?" he added as an afterthought, with a nod toward Dick Gilder.

"We'll get the best lawyers in the country," Mary persisted desperately. "We'll save you, Joe—we'll save you!"

Garson regarded the distraught girl with wistful eyes. But there was no trace of yielding in his voice as he replied, though he spoke very sorrowfully.

"No, you can't help me," he said simply. "My time has come, Mary. And I can save you a lot of trouble."

"He's right there," Burke ejaculated. "We've got him cold. So, what's the use of dragging you two into it?"

"Then they go clear?" Garson exclaimed, eagerly. "They ain't even to be called as witnesses?"

"You're on!" Burke agreed.

"Then, here goes!" Garson cried, and he looked expectantly toward the stenographer.

"My name is Joe Garson."

"Alias?" Burke suggested.

"Alias nothing!" came the sharp retort. "Garson's my monaker. I shot English Eddie, because he was a skunk and a stool pigeon, and he got just what was coming to him." Vituperation beyond the mere words beat in his voice now.

"Now, now!" Burke objected, severely. "We can't take a confession like that."

Garson shook his head—spoke with fiercer hatred.

"Because he was a skunk and a stool pigeon," he repeated. "Have you got it?" And then, as the stenographer nodded assent, he went on, less violently: "I croaked him just as he was going to call the bulls with a police whistle. I used a gun with smokeless powder. It had a Maxim silencer on it, so that it didn't make any noise."

Garson paused, and the set despair of his features lightened a little. Into his voice came a tone of exultation indescribably ghastly. It was born of the eternal egotism of the criminal, fattening vanity in gloating over his ingenuity for evil. He stared at Burke with a quizzical grin crooking his lips.

"Say," he exclaimed, "I'll bet it's the first time a guy was ever croaked with one of them things! Ain't it?"

The inspector nodded affirmation.

"Some class to that, eh?" Garson demanded, still with that grewsome air of boasting. "I got the gun and the Maxim silencer thing off a fence in Boston," he explained. "Say, that thing cost me $60, and it's worth every cent of the money. Why, they'll remember me as the first to spring one of them things, won't they?"

"They sure will, Joe!" the inspector conceded.

"Nobody knew I had it," Garson continued, dropping his braggart manner abruptly.

At the words, Mary started, and her lips moved as if she were about to speak.

"Nobody knew I had it—nobody in the world," he declared. "And nobody had anything to do with the killing but me."

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE IN BOSTON AND VICINITY

KINCAIDE THEATRE.

Good shows are the rule at Kincaide Theatre and the program now being presented measures right up to the standard. It is the tip-top throughout. The Tropical Trio is one great act. They are excellent acrobats and their animal costumes and tropical scenery makes the act delightfully different from all other acrobatic acts.

Manley and Walsh, "The Boob and the Dude" brought down the house. They are both mighty good singers and their funmaking is fast and furious from start to finish. Arthur Cody danced his way into a perfect storm of applause. Mab & Weir, the Lilliputians, proved very pleasing entertainers, singing and dancing to the delight of all. All the photo plays are excellent and they are so clearly presented it is a real pleasure to watch them reeled off.

Manager Wardwell announces that beginning Monday, Universal Pictures will be shown. They are said to be the "best in the Universe" and that's what he wants for his patrons. He has also engaged several strong vaudeville acts for the first half week.

QUINCY MUSIC HALL.

For Saturday matinee and night will be given the great 2 reel feature "The Bondsman" a thrilling drama of Puritan life in the early American colonies. It is elaborately staged, convincingly acted by a large cast, and the action covers a period of ten years. The story takes us from a quaint town of seventeenth century England, out on the storm ridden Atlantic in an emigrant ship, to the savage shores of the New World,—and the closing scenes are laid in a primitive Puritan settlement on Massachusetts Bay. For sheer scenic effect, nothing could surpass the burning of the emigrant ship at sea—the spendor of the flaming mass in the waste of midnight sky and ocean, while in the peaceful closing tableau, the pure artistic beauty of the figures and cameo clear faces of the young lovers, silhouetted against the sea, must stamp themselves on the memory for many a day. The drama reveals the passions concealed beneath the sober dress and grave demeanor of the Puritans, and in its most thrilling moments reminds us strongly of Hawthorne. A thrilling love story grips the imagination from the morning of the embarkment for America to the end of the plot. Mildred Arkwright the beautiful child of (welve and Mildred Arkwright, the lovely Puritan maiden of ten years later, hold sympathies and the appeal she makes in the intensely tragic scene near the close, touches the height of dramtic power.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE.

With one-third of its season already behind it, the Boston Opera Company announces the repertoire for its seventh week. No new opera is to be presented, but the repetitions of the five brilliant and popular works that are scheduled are sure to find favor with the public. The season has just reached that point in its course when it rests on its accomplishment thus far preparatory to the greater things that are in store. The seventh week opens with Puccini's "LaBoheme," Monday, Jan. 5, the cast including Maggie Teyte as Mimi, Giovanni Martinelli as Rodolfo, and Henry Danges as Marcello. Wednesday night, Saint-Saens' "Samson et Delila" will be given its third hearing with Margarita D'Alvarez and Edeardo Ferrari-Fontana in the title roles. The Friday night offering will be "The Jewels of the Madonna" an opera that proved so popular last year that it had to be given seven time. Certainly, few modern works equal it in brilliance, melodiousness, and swiftness of dramatic action; and it is sure to continue a favorite on account of these qualities which it so perfectly embodies. The cast will include Mr. Ferrari-Fontana as Genarro. Mme. Edvina as Maliella, Mme. D'Alvarez as Carmola and Vanni Marcoux, who will re-apear in the role of Raffaele. Saturday afternoon Mme. Tetrazzini, whose popularity seems even greater this year than before, will re-appear in her familiar but always greatly admired role of Lucia.

The Saturday evening performance will be "Faust" with a new cast. Mme. Margherita Beriza, the new soprano from the Opera Comique in Paris, will sing Marguerite; Leon Laffitte will be he Faust.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The play at the Castle Square theatre next week will be "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," the popular comedy-drama adapted from Alice Hegan Rice's famous stories. The cast will include Mr. Carleton, Mr. Meek, Miss Olsson, with Mabel Colford in the title role.

TREMONT TEMPLE.

"The Last Days of Pompeii," a remarkable photo drama, adapted from the great novel of the same name by Lord Bulwer Lytton, is scoring a big hit at the Tremont Temple, Boston. The production, which cost approximately $250,000 was produced by the famous Pasquali company of Turin, Italy, and is the same that achieved a great metropolitan success at the Wallack Theatre in New York city. The exhibition is profoundly impressive and should appeal to all readers and lovers of spectacular drama, more especially to those who are familiar with the book. The performance runs over two hours. There are daily matinees at 2 punctual while all evening performances start at 8 sharp.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE.

It is not often that a new play scores the instantaneous hit that came to "Under Cover," a melodrama of smart society life, and it will stay for a prosperous run at the Plymouth Theatre. The verdict of the Boston critics was unanimously favorable and the response from the public has made this play already the most popular play in the city. Frankly a melodrama of the most intense thrills from the beginning there are mystery, suspense, laughs and throughout an interest that is never allowed to lag, to a happy ending that is wholly unexpected and decidedly unusual. The company, which has William Courtenay and Lily Cahill in the two leading characters, is excellent and each actor was selected especially for the role enacted. Beginning with a scene in the office of the customs house secret service chief, where a young woman member of America's smart set is made to agree to act as a secret agent of the government in its effort to trace and arrest a member of that set suspected of having smuggled into this country a pearl necklace valued at $200,000 the plot is carried to the beautiful home on Long Island of the Harrington's, leaders in the exclusive social world. In order that the end may not be missed by Suburban patrons the management announces that the first curtain will be raised promptly at 2 o'clock at the matinee and at 8 o'clock at night.

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

William A. Brady's production of the dramatization of Louisa M. Alcott's "Little Women" at the Majestic has captivated all who have seen the play. The second week, with the regular evening performances and matinees on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, will begin next Monday. Sweet, simple, quaint, and refreshing, is this story of a half century ago, and the play proves as charming as the book. A series of home pictures, bringing very close to those who know and love the story of old friends from out the covers of a book (which is today listed from the world's best sellers,) into the larger, more intimate life of the stage. For the first three acts of the play, a replica of the Bronson Alcott sitting room in Concord has been used, every detail complete, even to the dish of apples which Grandma Alcott always insisted upon having on the living room table. It was in this room that the story of "Little Women" was lived. What more fitting than to use it for the stage picture. All the principal incidents of the story are found in the dramatic version. It is a faithful reproduction of the life of the four girls carrying them through girlhood and young womanhood, bringing to each the consummation of her life romance, just as Miss Alcott described it in her book.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

The greatest of all Charles Frohmans productions is playing a limited engagement at the Hollis Street Theatre, Boston, New York and London musical comedy sensation "The Marriage Market" in whic h handsome and clever Donald Brian is being starred by Mr. Frohman. The Boston newspapers praised the entertainment as being the best ever made by Mr. Frohman, and the patronage at the Hollis the past two weeks has been the biggest in years. "The Marriage Market" has more genuine song hits than any other two musical shows produced this season. The music which was composed by Victor Jacobi, is most exquisite since "The Chocolate Soldier" was first heard. The orchestra at the Hollis has been enlarged to thirty men so that the symphonic beauties of the score may be fully appreciated. "The Marriage Market" is in three acts. It is the heaviest production seen in Boston, for many a week, and the ship scene in the second act, is worth going miles to see. There is a terpsichorean novelty in this big variegated musical play called "The Futurist Twirl." It is danced by Donald Brian, Cissie Sewell, and the chorus of international beauties. This number is the talk of Boston, and it is the most graceful as well as novel dance of a decade. Matinees are given on Wednesday and Saturday. Seats are selling for all remaining performances, as the engagement positively ends Jan. 17th.

COLONIAL THEATRE.

The musical comedy fans of Boston will find much to delight them in the production of "Oh! Oh! Delphine" which Klaw and Erlanger send to the Colonial Theatre Monday night for a limited engagement. It is a genuinely funny comedy with a rich and colorful score by Ivan Caryll, embellished with bright, catchy songs, brimful of wit and humor such as can only be conceived by C. M. S. McLellan who seems to have taken on his shoulders the mantle laid aside by W. S. Gilbert. Like its predecessor, "The Pink Lady," it has all the attractive and alluring qualities of the former with an added sting and lyric inspiration in the Venus waltz which will be as popular if not more so, than "The Beautiful Lady." In fact, the wealth of lyric expression with which "Oh! Oh! Delphine" is endowed proves that both these authors have more than succeeded in repeating their masterpiece. The musical numbers are about the best comic songs heard on the stage in many a year and they include "Everything's at Home except Your wife," "Then all Come Along," and "Then Why Couldn't you Tell me That."

Delphine is the divorced wife of Victor and the latter will be disinherited by a rich uncle if the news of his divorce reachers those avuncular ears: and so, when Uncle Noel adds himself to the merry throng, stratagems are necessary. Delphine who has tender recollections of Victor's husbandly attractions pretends to be his present and acting wife, for the Uncle's benefit, and she coaxes Bouchotte into a reluctant acceptance of the situation, for a few hours. This intrigue develops one complication after another, until Victor's present and Bouchotte's ex-wife Simone, invades the scene. The feud between Delphine and Simone brings the second act to a close. The two girls, with the chorus to help them, indulge in a furious lyric quarrel with "Cat" as the motive, which runs into an elaborate finale. There will be the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

These are anxious days for some of the city officials, who are in suspense as to whether they are to be retained in office or if they are to be fired. The general impression is that most of the officials will be fired.

The young people are now having an opportunity to try those new skates which Santa Claus brought Christmas day. While the ice is not very thick it is strong enough on shallow ponds.

But little work has been done in the granite yards since Christmas. The yards closed down the day before Christmas and it was not anticipated that much work would be done until after New Years. As for that matter there is no great rush of orders.

Calendars for the year 1914 are in demand. One of the most handy of these is that issued by the Stone, Underhill Co., the firm with which Mayor Stone is connected. Each month is on a different colored sheet and the figures while not very large are very plain and easily read from a distance.

MITCHEL ASSUMES OFFICE

Becomes Mayor of Greatest City In the United States

New York, Jan. 2.—With no show of ostentation, but accompanied with ceremonies impressive, Mayor John P. Mitchel was sworn into office as chief executive of the greatest city in the United States.

Mrs. Mitchel, Rev. Fr. Joseph Smith, to whom Mitchel went to school when a boy; Mrs. Gaynor, widow of the late mayor, and her son Rufus and a number of close personal friends were the only persons besides city officials and the mayor's new cabinet who attended the inauguration.

WELCOMED.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Hall of 37 Faxon road, Atlantic, opened their house to the Fortnightly club Wednesday evening, to celebrate the coming of the New Year. The guests began to assemble at eight o'clock and dancing was enjoyed until eleven, when the guests were invited to the dining room to partake of a supper. Covers were laid for eighteen and as the guests marched to the dining room they were presented with paper caps, serpentine confetti and noise-making instruments with which they might welcome the New Year. At each place was a card, a menu card and a favor. The supper consisted of cold roast chicken, lamb tongue, potato salad, frankforts, beans, olives, pickles, celery, hot rolls, coffee, ice-cream and cake.

On the stroke of twelve four big alarm clocks, in different parts of the room, announced the hour, and amid cheers, tooting of horns, blowing of whistles and throwing of confetti the New Year was welcomed.

After supper, the guests danced until two o'clock to the music of Mr. Ulrich of Roslindale, a professional rag time pianist, who had been hired for the occasion by the club. When the party broke up, all agreed that of all the good times they had had during the season, this was the best of all.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. John Murray, Mr. and Mrs. David Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Holt, Mr. and Mrs. William Hersey, Mr. and Mrs. Alva Beede, Mr. and Mrs. E. Chandler, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Hall, Miss Cameron of Medford, Mr. and Mrs. Clark and Mr. Ulrich of Roslindale.

TO LEAD CITIZENS

il running about the city, and that he would see that the city got a day's work out of the employees. That there would be no more cases of a street foreman standing about with his hands in his pockets watching two other men load a tip cart. Money appropriated for street work would be expended economically, and he proposed that the city should get a dollar's worth of work for every dollar expended. He also said that the time had come to economize and he proposed to do it, and that he would give the city the best that was in him.

A little later in the evening, Mr. Miller again spoke for a minute or two in reply to a question one of the gathering asked.

Seated at the head table were Mayor-elect John L. Miller the honored guest of the evening; Alexander Falconer, the toast master; James E. Wall of Houghs Neck, Temple A. Winsloe, Councilman-elect Carl E. Carlson, Joseph B. Grossman, Thomas A. Musgrove, Albert C. Marr, John T. Cavanagh, Neal McDonald and Fred E. Brooks.

The occasion in addition to being a celebration of Mr. Miller's election was also the occasion of the anniversary of his 60th birthday.

Alexander Falconer the toastmaster of the evening was introduced by James Wall of Houghs Neck. Mr. Falconer, is assuming the gavel for the evening, told of some of the memorable trips taken during the campaign. Tonight, he said we see the crystalization of a movement started some eight weeks ago. We are also crystalizing the ambition of the Mayor-elect and the crystalizing of the first steps toward good government. He then congratulated the Mayor-elect, and at his suggestion Chester I. Campbell offered a toast to the new Mayor which was drunk standing, and was followed by three cheers.

The Mayor-elect was then introduced, and after the applause had subsided, said it was one of the happiest moments of his life to see such a gathering of representative men as are here tonight to do me honor. I want to thank you from the bottom of my heart for the many acts of kindness to me during my illness and particularly for your loyalty and support during the campaign. It is indeed an honor to look upon such a gathering as this, and I assure you I shall look back upon it as one of the proudest moments of my life.

When I assume office next Monday, I shall put my best efforts towards an economic and efficient administration. I shall carefully investigate all departments, and shall endeavor to place them on an economic and business basis. The men whom I shall appoint to office will be men of ability who will work along the platform which I presented to the voters before my election, and upon which they gave me their suffrage. They will be men of my own selection, and men fitted for the office they are to fill. In closing he again thanked them for their support and loyalty, and hoped that his administration would meet with their expectations.

The orator of the evening was said to have been Temple A. Winsloe, chairman of the Miller campaign committee, and the one man to whom the greatest credit for his election was due. In introducing Mr. Winsloe, the toast master referred to him as a carburetor, headlights and fly wheels of the Miller campaign. Mr. Winsloe spoke of the work of the organization and many incidents leading up to the tremendous victory. Of the many obstacles met and overcome, and that he felt morally certain from the time that Mr. Miller had been induced to enter the campaign as an Independent candidate, that his election was assured. He also said that there had been a great hue and cry of extravagance in the administration of the affairs of the city. That the citizens demanded an economical administration. That the money contributed in taxes should not be wasted. Mr. Miller was a man of strong convictions, and he was looked upon as a kind of Moses to lead the citizens of the city to the promised land. He also handed out some bouquets to the different workers in the several wards.

James Wall said Mr. Miller "stands in the open and fights fair." He told of his personal dealings with the Mayor-elect and said that he had always found him a man of his word, and that a promise once made was always fulfilled, if at all possible. In him the citizens have a man that will give his best efforts for the welfare of the city, and those efforts will be without doubt a benefit to the city. He also spoke of some of the incidents of the campaign.

Councilman-elect Carl E. Carlson spoke of his work in behalf of the candidacy of Mr. Miller. That in him we have a man who will see that the city gets a dollar's worth of work for a dollar invested. He then touched upon the main street leading to Squantum upon which the city had already sunk $18,000 and which was not yet completed. That a well known contractor of Boston had offered to build this thoroughfare for $8,000 and to give his bond for its successful completion.

Chester I. Campbell said that he had looked over the four Mayoralty candidates and he did not stop long to consider who was the best man fitted for the position, or the man who had the best executive ability. A Mayor should have executive ability and Mr. Miller is endowed with the goods requisite for the proper handling of the affairs of the city.

Ex-Councilman Albert N. Murray made a witty speech and said that all of the glory of electing Mr. Miller was due to Ward Five and therefore Ward Five should have all the appointments.

Other speakers were Albert C. Marr of Quincy Point, Dr. John T. Reynolds.

It was 11.15 before the speaking was over and at the close Mr. Miller was given three more cheers and the evening closed with singing "Auld Lang Syne."

The menu card was a very unique affair of four pages on a buff colored card. Across the top of the first page was the word "Menu" about which, in a panel of links were the letters and figures, "W 1, W 2, W 3, W 4, W 5, W 6." In the centre of the page was a wheel of state on the spokes of the wheels being the words, "Ward 1, Ward 2, Ward 3, Ward 4, Ward 5, Ward 6," while between the spokes of the wheel were the letters forming the name "Quincy." Around the rim of the wheel were the words, "New Years banquet tendered to His Honor the Mayor-elect J. L. Miller." Beneath this was "January first, 1914."

On the bottom of the page was a series of mottoes as follows the first letter of each word forming the name Quincy, "Quickness, Unity, Importunity, Naturally Commands Yearly Success." On the last page was a picture of Mr. Miller beneath which were the words, "Mayor-elect John L. Miller."

The menu was as follows:

Hint That New Mayor May Remove City Officials

Everything at City Hall is ready for the Inauguration Day ceremonies Monday noon. This first session usually lasts about an hour, half of which is consumed by the Mayor in delivering his inaugural address. This year, however, with the address cut down, it probably means an early adjournment.

The usual number of floral tributes will occupy the speaker's desk and the balcony in the Council Chamber will be reserved for ladies. Arrangements have also been made to reserve a number of seats for personal friends of the Mayor-elect. It is probable that these will be located on the south side of the President's desk, as usual.

Chief of Police Burrell will be on hand with several officers to preserve order, although their services in this respect have never been called upon.

It is expected that the Mayor-elect will announce his official family in a communication to the Council, but whether he will allow the present officials to hold over until the end of their term, the first Monday in February is not known. It is believed that he will permit the present officials to complete their term, as in the meantime the new officials will have an opportunity to familiarize themselves with their new positions.

In the event of Councilman Whiton being elected as President of the City Council, it is probable he will also announce the makeup of the standing committees. This will put the Council on a business basis at the start.

The most of the standing committees will find business before them to consider as the City Council of 1913 referred a number of matters to the Council of 1914 for consideration.

It will be surprising to many perhaps, to learn the amount of business that was sent over from last year. In addition to the usual number of orders and petitions for new streets, sidewalks, etc., in which no amount is stated, although all involve the expenditure of money, there were specific orders, and petitions in which the amounts were stated, which aggregate $104,600.

The two largest items in the legacy were $35,000 for a contagious hospital and $38,000 for an addition and assembly hall at the Washington school, $7,500 for providing a street at Rock Island and $7,700 for paving Penn street. There are also several other orders calling for amounts ranging from $500 to $4,000.

It is of course impossible to tell the amounts involved by the matters in which no sum is stated, but it is safe to estimate that the total will about equal those in which the amounts are stated.

Following is the complete list of all matters referred to the City Council of 1914, with the amounts involved in each as far as stated

Contagious hospital	$35,000
Penn street	7,700
Improving water courses	1,500

RED MEN RAISE CHIEFS

Mathew Kennebury Now at Head of Hodenosaunee Tribe

Deputy Fred W. Baker and suite raised the chiefs of Hodenosaunee tribe, No. 62, Independent Order of Red Men at the annual gathering of members on Friday evening. Many were present and took part in the discussion of plans for the year. The social committee is making the arrangements for the annual ball of the tribe which takes place in Alpha hall in February. The officers raised were:

Sachem,—Mathew Kennebury.
Senior Sagamore,—Sidney O. Williams.
Junior Sagamore—Harry Hay.
First Sannap,—Jeremiah Maloney.
Second Sannap,—James O 'Connell.
Prophet—J. P. Egan.
Guard of Wigwam—Elmer Pooler.
Guard of the Forest—Thomas Colligan.
Warriors—A. J. Clapp, Louis Fleshman, Garnet Keith, John Wilson.
Braves—Harry Spinney, James Bell, William Forbes, Edward Pierce.

STODDARD—GRISWOLD.

An event of interest to many in this locality was the marriage of Dr. Ralph R. Stoddard of Quincy, formerly of Hartford, Conn., and Miss Lewey Griswold of Rock Hill, Conn. The ceremony was performed at the bride's home December 13th and the young couple immediately departed on their wedding trip which included New York, Philadelphia, Washington and Baltimore. They returned Dec. 27th and have taken an apartment on Franklin street, Quincy. Dr. Stoddard is one of Dr. Clayton R. Marstin's assistants and is very popular with the patients. He is a member of the Cochato club of Braintree.

Upon his return from his trip he was much gratified to see the general renovation which the workmen had made under Dr. Marstin's direction.

Roscoe Saunders has returned to his home on Beale street, after an absence of seven years. He has been engaged in business in the West. He will be remembered as one of the most popular young men in Wollaston, graduating from the Wollaston grammar school, Quincy High and Boston University College of Liberal Arts.

—A California youth has set a new record by dancing 91.2 miles. No doubt he is some chap who has a pain in the back every time his mother asks him to prepare a little kindling for the kitchen range.

HEARING IN FOGG CASE

In Connection With Raid at Cedarcrest Inn

Testimony Not Completed

George E. Fogg appeared in court this morning to answer to a charge of illegal transportation of liquors in Braintree, and also to letting a place knowing that liquor would be sold there illegally. The building was occupied as the Cedarcrest Outing Club which was raided on the night of the Harvard-Yale game.

A new complaint was issued Friday against Mrs. E. Grace Reynolds, the proprietor, charging her with keeping a club nuisance. All the evidence had not beeen submitted at one o'clock and a recess was taken. Mrs. Reynolds pleaded guilty and has been fined $300 for keeping and exposing liquor, and is said to have made arrangements to appeal the case.

Chief Horace W. Hunt, who conducted the raiding party was severely censured by Judge Avery for giving ambiguous testimony and was requested to make responsive answers during the examination by Charles E. Mellen, town counsel of Braintree who is conducting the prosecution.

Chief Hunt testified that he received a complaint from Mrs. George E. Fogg, that two officers, were intoxicated at the club and were making themselves objectionable and he named Henry Duggan, a Braintree officer who has since been suspended from duty as being the one that demanded a "piece of change" from Mrs. Reynolds. This phase of the testimony has been indirectly covered in all newspaper reports following the raid.

The witnesses were very reluctant, and the trial dragged along the greater part of the morning. Among those called was Miss Edna Reynolds, daughter of the proprietor, who said that she knew nothing of the business end of the club but was engaged there as pianist. Regarding the arrival and departure of guests she professed to know nothing and after being rigorously questioned as to what a guest, generally did on his arrival she responded "took his coat off."

The testimony of Inspector Goodhue of Quincy, who assisted at the raid, was not complete at recess and covered mainly the location of the liquors seized and the way the tags were labeled.

Among those called were John J. Vera of 249 Quincy avenue, James R. Qualey, Daniel Barnes of Quincy. Their testimony was not incriminating.

MAYOR STONE'S FAREWELL

Personally Thanks All Officials and Clerks

Mayor Stone said farewell to the city officials and clerks who have served under his administration for the past two years this morning. Shortly before leaving for Boston at 11,24 he first called the city officials into his office and shaking each by the hand personally thanked them for their efficient services in the administration of the affairs of their respective departments. To them he said had been due in a great measure the success that had marked his administration.

He then called in the clerks in the hall and extended his thanks to them. Before the officials and clerks left his office he wished all a Happy New Year.

Mayor Stone will remain at the head of the city government until noon on Monday when Mayor-elect Miller will take office. Practically all of the business of his office is cleaned up.

OLD CLAIM PAID TODAY

Officer Reiley Reimbursed for Accident in 1910

Officer Henry F. Reiley received a substantial New Years present from the city this morning in the form of a check for $127.50 in settlement of a claim against the city that has been standing several years.

It was during the year 1910 that Officer Reiley, on duty at Wollaston, in chasing a burglar through a yard tripped over a clothes line or fence and fell fracturing an arm which laid him up for some weeks.

Upon his recovery he put in a claim for medical attendance, his injuries having been sustained while in the performance of duty. The City Council referred the claim to the Executive department and it has been kicking about ever since. This week City Solicitor McAnarney in settling up the business of his office found the claim which had been granted but never paid, and finding that he had sufficient balance of his appropriation for claims and awards to meet it, he put the bill through and it was paid.

RUMORS RELATIVE TO APPOINTMENTS

Evidently Many Changes Are Contemplated in City Officials of 1914

Will it Be Commissioner Winsloe or Cavanagh?

It is almost an assured fact that Mayor-elect Miller will announce his official family to the City Council on Monday. As to whom the officials will be the Daily Ledger has not asked the new Mayor, and therefore knows only from rumors heard about the streets.

These rumors vary very much, for one man hears one thing and another something else. All agree however that City Clerk Emery L. Crane is to be retained in office. All agree also that ex-President Walter S. Pinkham of the City Council is slated for the position of City Solicitor.

The greatest interest however seems to be in the man who is to fill the position of Commissioner of Public Works. According to the latest rumors, Mr. Winsloe who is probably closer to the Mayor-elect than any other man, is using his influence to have ex-Commissioner John T. Cavanagh appointed to the position, while it is said that Mr. Miller is equally as anxious that Mr. Winsloe himself shall accept the office of Commissioner. Mr. Winsloe has repeatedly stated that his business is such that it demands his attention, and that he does not desire any office under the city.

Another rumor says that the office of Chief Engineer of the Fire Department has been offered to Faxon Billings of the Atlantic station, but that he turned it down. Another rumor says that the man now slated for the position answers to the name of Gallagher, a recent member of the Boston Fire Department.

As stated previously it seems to be the general impression that the office of City Engineer will be abolished, if the City Council can be brought to agree with the wishes of the new Mayor.

Another position about which there are more or less rumors is that of City Treasurer and according to general rumor ex-Representative Walter E. Piper is the man that has been picked for this position.

It is rumored that Dr. John T. Reynolds will be given the position of physician on the Board of Health or City Physician.

The Ledger does not undertake to say who Mr. Miller will appoint but simply gives the rumors that are current about City Square. It is probable that everybody will know all about it Monday afternoon.

Robert Fitzgerald of the Pilgrim Quartette, Boston, is to be the tenor soloist at the concert to be given by Bethany church choirs on the evening of Jan. 13. Miss Edith Rowbound, who played so delightfully at both services on Christmas Sunday will be the violinist. A miscellaneous program ending with the cantata, "The Daughter of Jairus" by Stainer will be sung by soloists and the large chorus.

NOTICE

Again we ask those sending news or other matter by mail to direct it to the company or newspaper rather than to individual members of the company or employees. If addressed to individuals and they were ill or not at the office, it might be several days in reaching its proper destination and if news matter would be too late for use.

The telephone trust has yielded to the demands of the government, but you can't bluff Central that way.

Some one having failed to knock on wood at the proper time, depression again seized on Wall street, and prices went off rapidly.

The new Wisconsin eugenics law requires health certificates from men who want to get married, but persons are permitted to go courting in spite of pronounced symptoms of heart trouble.

The average age of the new City Council seems to be above the average. Only two members are under 30 years of age, while four are above 50 years. The average is above 41 years. The new Council therefore has experience in age and experience in service.

It has been noted that there was on absence of the regular politicians at the complimentary banquet to Mayor-elect Miller, but who will say that the average calibre of the gentlemen present was higher than the Republican Ward and City Committee Fortunately, Mayor-elect Miller is independent, and when he says,— "my appointees will be men of my own selection, and men fitted for the offices they are to fill"—the voters have some assurance that many mentioned for office will get left. It would be a great mistake to make a clean sweep of all the present officials at City Hall.

TEMPORARY LOANS.

The big collection of taxes in 1913 —$105,403.42 in excess of the total levy for the year—should put the city in a better financial condition than it has been for several years. Then again the demand should not be as urgent as usual for the passage of the temporary loan order of 1914. When it becomes necessary to issue new temporary loans that maturing temporary loans may be paid, it looks as if the temporary loans had become a permanent debt and a burden. Many cities do not find it necessary to issue temporary loans for as large a percentage of the tax levy as does Quincy.

SONG AND STORY WRITING.

A New York man has just been jailed for working the "song swindle." It is claimed that some of the people who advertise for words and music of popular songs collect money from the authors and never try to push sales.

Many persons are devoting good time and spending postage stamps in writing songs, moving picture and other plays, stories, and poems, who should be raising corn or washing dishes. Advertisements soliciting such compositions should be regarded with caution. They may represent an honest desire to examine the work of new writers. But one surmises that for one person who makes it profitable, scores waste time and are disappointed.

Every newspaper man knows how many people think they have this gift. They bring in compositions that are neither grammatical nor well spelled. Their efforts lack invention, any gift for observation, all sense of humor. Yet they have a certain volubility, hence think their stuff is salable. Their endless flow of words slips on and on. But a page out of the dictionary would be more interesting.

To thousands of people, writing songs, plays, or stories looks easy money. One reads that one well known magazine receives annually 10,000 manuscripts, and uses only 300. There is so much over production that much excellent work is turned down.

Teachers and parents should be slow to encourage young people to these amateurish efforts. If a fellow has real genius, it will escape all fetters, and claim its own place. Lacking that, let him turn his pen to bookkeeping, and his typewriter to business letters. Any one feeling a pronounced desire for literary work should test it out by becoming a newspaper reporter. If he has descriptive power, some editor will tell him so.

SPECULATIVE DRY ROT.

An editorial a few days ago in the Wall street journal called attention to "dry rot" and dull times in Wall street. It complains of personal extravagance of brokers, and of the old time tendency to depend on tipsters, rather than on scientific investigation of security values.

Formerly when a man wanted to invest money, he tried to get next to some one with a grape vine telegraph to the seats of the financial mighty. There was a whole community of tipsters claiming inside information, who told you one day that steel was going to increase its dividend, or that the next statement of Reading would show a drop in earnings.

The world is full of suckers. A man with a persuasive manner, who could pick out Morgan or Harriman on the street, looked like an insider to a great many innocent persons.

People who have money to invest will not keep on buying goldbricks forever. They do not so readily part with $10,000, merely because some one's cousin was informed by Rockefeller's office boy that Amalgamated Copper is going up.

The investing public asks from brokerage houses merely a careful analysis of voluminous corporation reports a task for which the ordinary man has no training, and the judgment of trained experience on this analysis. As for the alleged tips of insiders, if a man really has such information, he uses it for his own benefit, instead of trying to sell it to other people.

Publicity and frankness in dealing with the public will cure many troubles in the financial district. Some people would get out with a dark lantern and a jimmy if they had the chance to walk in the front door in the daylight. A great many corporations now publish complete statements of earnings and expenses, and the public may well be cautious about buying into properties that decline to do so.

BETTER PAY AT NAVY YARD.

A new scale of wages was posted at the Boston navy yard Friday. The new rates for the ordnance men will be $3.52, $3.28, $3.04 and $2.80 for the men of the first, second, third and fourth classes, respectively. The boatbuilders, first class, are raised from $3.60 to $3.76 a day; millmen, first class, from $3.20 to $3.36 a day; no change from the 1913 rates for the men of the other classes; painters, first class, are raised from $3.60 to $3.68 a day, and of fourth class from 2.88 to $3.04 a day.

However more furloughs and discharges of workmen were made at the yard Friday. A total of several hundred, including nearly all the outside ship men, have been laid off within a week and will probably be discharged upon their return from furlough, there being no great amount of work in sight at the yard for a few months.

REVISED ORDINANCES.

The revised ordinances of the city, which the City Council authorized published some time ago, are out and being delivered today. As issued they included all the amendments thath ave been made during the past year and are complete up to date. One new feature, which the City Clerk has added to the book this year, is a table showing every legislative act accepted by the Council and by the citizens by referendum vote, with the date of such acceptance. This is a most important feature as reference to these acts has to be made frequently.

FARLEY BARS TANGO

Catholic Church Frowns on Latest Styles In Dancing

New York, Jan. 3.—Cardinal Farley started an active fight on the tango here when he announced through his secretary that he deplored the trend of the present vogue as immodest and determined to do all in his power to discourage it.

Invitations already out for a dance to be given by the junior auxiliary of the Catholic institute for the blind at Delmonico's were recalled and the affair abandoned.

A monsignor close to the cardinal further stated that no priest will permit the societies connected with his parish to hold dances while the present vogue of dancing exists, nor will parish charities, schools or other parochial institutions accept funds raised in such a way.

It was explained that while the Catholic church had not officially placed a ban upon dancing, the church's attitude is reflected in Cardinal Farley's action.

DEATHS IN MINES 510

Managers In Pennsylvania Urged to Exercise Greater Care

Harrisburg, Jan. 3.—Letters have been sent to the general superintendents and general managers of every coal company in the state by James E. Roderick, state chief of mines, urging them to take measures to reduce the number of accidents.

In the same mail the chief sent letters to the mine inspectors of the state service, notifying them of the dispatch of the letters and directing them to notify the department at once if they find that suggestions for safety are not being followed out. In case of persistent violation of directions for safety the inspectors are instructed to institute suits.

During the eleven months ending Nov. 30 last 510 lives were lost inside the mines of Pennsylvania against 463 for the corresponding period of 1912.

24,000 EXECUTIONS REPORTED IN CHINA

Actual Figures Probably Would Exceed Estimate

Pekin, Jan. 3.—It is officially estimated that 24,000 executions were carried out in the province of Szechuen alone in 1913. Most of those ordered to be killed were robbers, but in the total were included a large number of political offenders who had been concerned in various movements during the transition period from an empire to a republic.

It is hinted by officials that the actual figures regarding the executions would, if they could be known, exceed the estimate.

The customs collections at the ports in 1913 amounted to approximately $29,892,800. Most of the ports showed an increase over the preceding year, and the figures for Shanghai, Hankow and Canton actually constitute a record. The revenues are said to be sufficient to meet all the charges on them, including the Boxer indemnity.

SCULPTOR RUMSEY HURT

Receives Severe Injuries While Fox Hunting in Virginia

New York, Jan. 3.—Charles C. Rumsey, sculptor, whose wife was Miss Mary Harriman, daughter of the late E. H. Harriman, was brought to his home near Roslyn, L. I., suffering from a broken collar bone and severe lacerations about the face, sustained while fox hunting in Orange county, Va., on Tuesday in company with a party that included Miss Carol Harriman, his sister-in-law.

Mr. Rumsey's horse stumbled while the hunt was on the trail of a big fox and the rider was thrown heavily. He is reported as greatly improved. Mr. Rumsey had a similar accident in July, 1912, while playing polo at Cedarhurst.

MUST TURN IN PROPERTY

Orders Are Given to Twenty-Nine Militia Officers

Boston, Jan. 3.—Adjutant General Gardner W. Pearson ordered twenty-nine militia officers to turn in at once all United States property in their possession to Brigadier General William S. Emery, the quartermaster general. The men affected by this order are a brigade commander, two aides-de-camp, officers of the commander-in-chief's staff and certain department officers.

This action is taken pending a decision by the war department as to the status of these militia officers in relation to the recent orders of the department to place the state militia on the same basis as the regular army. The department at Washington has not determined whether these officers will be recognized if they continue in their present ranks, nor has it been settled whether the militia will be permitted to continue its present formation.

Maine Legislator a Suicide

Blaine, Me., Jan. 3.—John M. Ramsay, a member of the state legislature, who was taken to Augusta on a stretcher last winter to cast one of the deciding votes in the election of United States Senator Edwin C. Burleigh, died from a self-inflicted bullet wound.

THIMBLE PARTY.

Group One of the Ladies' Aid society of First Methodist Episcopal church, Wollaston under the leadership of Miss Aurelia Merrill gave a New Year's thimble party to the ladies of the church in the vestry Thursday afternoon from half past two until half past five. A most enjoyable time was spent during which Mrs. Joseph A. Sedgwick read a poem entitled, "The Minister's Sermon" and the pastor Rev. George Mervyn Bailey asked the ladies' cooperation in some social work to be taken up in the near future. A dainty lunch was served of sandwiches, fancy cakes, chocolate, coffee, olives and marshmallows. Those present were Miss Aurelia Merrill, Mrs. Lupton, Mrs. L. C. Merrill, Mrs. Sprague, Mrs. Joseph A. Sedgwick, Mrs. Eric Evertz, Mrs. Fred Sutermeister, Miss Helena Earle, Mrs. Given, Mrs. Theodore Parlee, Mrs. Olin A. Holbrook, Mrs. Kate B. WATCH SERVICE.

A watch night service was held in the Wollaston Methodist Episcopal church Wednesday evening, when a good sized audience watched the old year out and the new year in. The service was in charge of the pastor Rev. George Mervyn Bailey in which he was ably assisted by Rev. Isaiah W. Sneath of the Wollaston Congregational church and Mrs. Fred Morgan of Brook street. The meeting opened at half past nine, and after a song service Rev. Mr. Sneath delivered a most thrilling sermon. Light refreshments were served and a short social time followed. Mrs. Morgan gave a short address and the rest of the service was taken by Rev. Mr. Bailey.

CHIMNEY FIRE.

The alarm from Box 42 at 4.58 Friday night was for a chimney fire in the old Bisson house on Water street, occupied at present by an Italian family. It was necessary for the firemen to knock the bricks out from the bottom the chimney and pull out the soot. A good way to have your chimney cleaned is to call out the fire department.

WILL BE MISSED AT WOLLASTON

Mrs. Soule Active in Baptist Church and W. C. T. U.

The funeral of Mrs. Lucy Soule, wife of George H. F. Soule of Prospect avenue, Wollaston was held Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Wollaston Baptist church. Rev. Joseph Walther, pastor of the church, officiated and Miss Ruth L. Hardy sang two favorite hymns of the deceased, "Ten thousand times ten thousand" and "For all the saints who from their labors rest." Mrs. George Drew was the organist.

The abundance of the flowers and the large attendance at the services attested to the many friendships made. Mrs. Soule was the president of the Wollaston W. C. T. U., and the members of that organization atended in a body. The interment was at Mount Wollaston cemetery.

Mrs. Soule's death followed a ten day's illness of pneumonia. She is survived by her husband, a son William aged 10 and a daughter Frances, aged 4. She was the sister of Mrs. Justin F. Emery and daughter of Francis L. Hayes, both of Wollaston.

Mrs. Soule has been an earnest worker in the Wollaston Baptist church for a number of years and many will miss her acts of loving kindness. One of her pleasures was the arranging of flowers for the Sunday services. Mrs. Soule had a rich contralto voice and formerly sang in King's Chapel, Boston.

Waldo Fay of Beale street who was so seriously ill last week with diptheria is slowly convalescing and ot will interest his friends to know that he was able to sit up today. His speedy recovery is hoped for.

WILSON AND LIND CONFER AT SEA

Secret Consultation Aboard the Scout Ship Chester

PRESIDENT BREAKS CUSTOM

Meets His Special Envoy on Ocean to Prevent Newspaper Men Learning Particulars—Was Greatly Displeased When News of Visit Was Made Public From Vera Cruz

Pass Christian, Miss., Jan. 3.—After two days of the deepest mystery concerning the visit of John Lind, President Wilson's special emissary to Mexico, the president broke another precedent by going to sea to meet Lind, who is on board the scout cruiser Chester, lying off Ship island.

They are conferring on the Mexican situation, but what is the purport of the information Lind is bringing to the president is not known to any one ashore.

It is said here that the president decided to meet Lind at sea so that he could avoid any possible chance of the corps of newspaper men who are waiting here learning particulars.

President Wilson left here in a twenty-foot launch for the revenue cutter Winona, which was lying half a mile from shore, waiting to take him to sea for his conference with Lind on board the Chester.

It was their first meeting since last July, when the president conferred with Lind at the White House, preparatory to the latter's departure for Mexico City with instructions that created a diplomatic episode in American history.

For two days a mysterious reticence has been apparent at the presidential cottage, concerning the present conference. When it was announced from Vera Cruz that Lind would come to Pass Christian, there was a noticeable manifestation of displeasure among the members of the president's party that his destination should have been made public. President Wilson had hoped to slip quietly away aboard the revenue cutter Winona "for a yachting trip," and meet Lind at sea.

The same effort at secrecy with respect to the Chester's whereabouts was frustrated by wireless news of her locating near Ship Island.

For nearly twenty-four hours Lind was off shore on the Chester before meeting the president and instead of permitting the personal envoy to come ashore, President Wilson took a trip in a launch, mounted a companionway to the revenue cutter Winona and was trans-shipped again in mid-gulf to the Chester.

The revenue cutter Winona came as close to shore as possible and sent a launch for the president. Fifteen minutes later the president's flag was hoisted on the mainmast of the cutter, which turned her prow seaward, followed by a tug chartered by the newspaper correspondents.

The conference lasted until after 8 o'clock last night, when the president returned to Gulfport, where automobiles were ready to take him to Pass Christian. Just as much secrecy as characterized the president's first meeting with Lind was evident on this occasion.

Woman Was Struck by Some Vehicle Which Did Not Stop

Attleboro, Mass., Jan. 3.—An inquest was held in the Fourth district court, before Judge Brady, on the death of Mrs. Cemantha Morse, aged 94, who died recently as the result of injuries sustained by being run down on Peck street by some vehicle. The driver of the wagon or automobile did not stop after striking the aged woman.

Charles Briggs, driver of a local bakery wagon, testified to finding the woman lying by the roadside, unconscious and wounded. He carried her into a nearby house.

Dr. Charles S. Holden said that the woman lived about four days and never regained consciousness. Her skull was fractured and she had other injuries.

None of the witnesses could cast any light on the identity of the driver who left the woman by the roadside after his vehicle had knocked her down as she was crossing the street. The decision was reserved.

The groom was attended by his brother Waldo MacLaughlin and Ira Drinell. The two little ribbon bearers were Miss Thelma MacLaughlin a sister of the groom and Miss Eloise Masey his cousin. The rooms were decorated with Christmas greens, holly and mistletoe. The wedding party entered to the music of the bridal chorus from Lohengrin played by Miss Gladys Carpenter of Framingham a cousin of the groom.

The bride was given in marriage by Dr. J. W. Watson. Refreshments were served by a local caterer and after the ceremony the wedding cake was cut by the bride, Miss Evelyn Bridgham winning the ring and Miss Ruth Robbins the thimble. The cake contained a portion of the wedding cake of Dr. and Mrs. Watson. Mr. and Mrs. MacLaughlin received many handsome gifts. The bride presented the bridesmaids with gold friendship pins set with pearls and the grooms gifts to his attendants were stick pins. After an informal reception, Mr. and Mrs. MacLaughlin left for a short wedding trip.

At the pleasant Sunday evening service at Bethany church the pastor will have a New Year's message for those who attend. The organ recital will be from 7.15 to 7.30, so people can secure seats and also enjoy the music by coming early.

At the District school in the Universalist vestry Tuesday evening D. J. S. McCurdy will be the soloist. Candy and ice cream will be for sale. Admission 15 cents. adv. 3-1t

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS.

The members of Braintree Council No. 1462, Knights of Columbus assembled at their rooms on Holbrook avenue Thursday evening for a watch party and ushered in the New Year in spirited style. There were about 150 present and all enjoyed themselves hugely.

A feature of the evening was a debate on the subject "Should immigration be further restricted or not." Those taking part were Edward P. Cuffe and James Dillon of this town for the affirmative; J. Frank Megley and Leo Starr of Holbrook for the negative. The opposing sides were so well matched that it was declared a tie with 90 points each and the subject will be debated again at another meeting. The judges were Moses H. McGaughey and Lucien E. D. Gaudreau.

Frank Mischler won first honors in the "forty-five" tournament, James G. Cuffe was victorious at pool and Moses H. McGaughey was high man at cribbage. The prizes for all events were handsome solid gold K. of C. lapel buttons set with pearls. Music and "smokes" were enjoyed and a bountiful and varied buffet lunch was served with fried scallops as the piece de resistance.

As the hour of midnight chimed all joined in patriotic songs and the exchange of best wishes for a happy new year.

The affair was a great success and marked by the air of fellowship and socialibility which results when good comrades get together. The committee in charge was as follows: John L. Fay, Edward J. Sullivan, Everett F. Russell, John W. Mulcahy, Kearn W. Devereux, Joseph T. Shay, John McGaughey, Frank Mischler and Lucien E. D. Gaudreau.

BOWLING NOTES.

Manager Forbes has recovered from a severe cold and is at the desk at the Coliseum alleys again.

Bernard Burkes All Stars are beating out all teams that will roll them. incidentally considerable money is being place on them by the fans who are following their matches.

Alley changes are being made in those at Weymouth Landing. The fast team which came over last winter will not reorganize.

St. Mary's have a special five which is accepting defies from clubs in and about Boston. This team was anxious to join a City league but most managers sidestepped the inconvenience of bowling three nights a week.

One riot of fun is the way some matches appear to the fans at the City Square alleys. For all around good sportsmanship it is hard to surpass that quality as shown in the different teams that roll there.

With Mrs. Poehler organizing a women's bowling team, fans naturally expect to see the Quincy Girls reorganize. Miss Lois Stearns, captain of last seasons team, is now Mrs. B. Forbes and Miss Florence Brown, another member, has been married.

Paul Poehler holds his form, reputation and title without much difficulty. Fast men are sidestepping him and others will only meet him in doubles. Poehlers partner in these contests has been cool and steady and although not reaching the results of the calculating champ they manage to be of assistance in the winning of the coin.

Smith of the Fore River league and Dell of the Clan McGregor league are being considered by the gallery in a special match. Both are high average men, a fraction over 93 being their present mark.

BOWLING AT MILTON.

Bowling is the stellar attraction at the Cunningham gymnasium, and A. Poole holds the record for high single, keeling the maples for 133 in a recent match. Thursday evening a gym team defeated a five from St. Mary's hall, 1358 to 1337. Cunningham had a team single of 478 in the first string which gave them the match The teams are known by the names of their captains and the standing is:

NEW ORDERS ARE SENT TO ARMY

Let Refugees Cross River If Necessary to Save Lives

CO-OPERATE WITH RED CROSS

Men Who Have Been Fighting on Mexican Side of Border Will Be Permitted to Stay on American Side After Being Disarmed—To Be Sent Back Might Mean Death

Washington, Jan. 3.—General Bliss, commanding the Texas border forces, has been instructed by Secretary Garrison to permit Mexican refugees to cross into Texas from Ojinaga, if that is necessary to save their lives. The latest order to General Bliss, which reiterates former orders on the same subject, follows:

"With reference to possible situation at Ojinaga, incident to people crossing the river, you will have to meet demands of the situation which cannot be foreseen at present. Extend such aid to wounded as humanity indicates and permit refugees to cross the river if crossing is necessary to save life. In other words, it is not expected to force people back to Mexican side if they are liable to be shot or otherwise injured on their return.

Co-operate fully with Red Cross. You are not expected to turn supplies over to Red Cross, but to co-operate with them in their work to such extent as may be necessary to meet urgent needs of the situation with references to caring for wounded."

Discussing conditions at Ojinaga, Secretary Garrison said:

"When the fighting first took place on the Mexican side and the soldiers of the defeated party began coming across the border, we, without regard to technical questions of law, and in the interest of humanity, took in as refugees all those who came unarmed. We kept them so long as conditions on the other side were such that we felt that it would be inhuman to turn them back. In a general way, we kept them until they could be safely allowed to filter back across the border into their own country.

"These orders have never been changed, and if properly interpreted, the men who have been fighting on the other side of the border and who come over unarmed, are treated as refugees and are allowed to stay on our side of the line rather than be turned back to practically certain death. Armed men who come over are of course disarmed, the arms are held by our people and the men themselves received as other refugees.

"With regard to what will happen if a very large number attempt to come over, I can only say that unless the orders are changed (which, of course, they may be if an exigency calls for a change), these men will be treated as I have stated; that is, they will be treated as refugees. How long they will be permitted to stay, and all other hypothetical questions, I am unable to answer."

So far official reports to the war department concerning border conditions have made only one reference to the disarming and driving back of Mexican soldiers by the American forces. That was in a report from General Bliss, which said:

"Eighty-four federals crossed to United States, six miles below Presidio, after fight Mulata, were disarmed and put across the river."

LEWIS NIXON ACCEPTS

New York, Jan. 3.—Lewis Nixon, naval architect, shipbuilder and the successor of Richard Croker as leader of Tammany Hall, will be commissioner of public works in the borough of Richmond. Charles J. McCormack, borough president, announced that Mr. Nixon had accepted the appointment.

New Haven Engineer's Widow Sued For $50,000

Curtis, widow of the engineer of the federal express which was wrecked near Bridgeport, Conn., July 11, 1911, was set aside by the appellate division of the supreme court. In this wreck Curtis and a number of passengers were killed.

The main point at issue was whether the wreck was due to the negligence of the engineer or of some other employes. The appellate division held that it had not been proved at the trial that Curtis was not negligent.

The secretary stated that this was only the beginning of an extensive program. There will be systematic experiments on a large scale with aeroplanes, he said; private designers will be assisted financially in efforts to produce the best form of air craft; the training of the personnel will be taken up, and the question of dirigibles soon will be passed upon.

DANGER OF COAL TIE-UP

Announcement of General Strike of New York Bargemen

New York, Jan. 3.—A general strike of coal bargemen, it was announced, following a meeting of the Bargemen's union, would begin.

The coal bargemen, who demand an increase in wages from $50 to $60 a month, recently presented their demands to the coal companies, and the majority refused.

It is estimated that a general strike of the coal bargemen would tie up 3500 coal barges and cut off the supply of the electric light and street railway power houses and other companies which handle barge coal.

WITHIN THE LAW

By MARVIN DANA
FROM THE PLAY OF
BAYARD VEILLER

Copyright, 1913, by the H. K. Fly company.

"Was there any bad feeling between you and Eddie Griggs?"

"Never till that very minute. Then I learned the truth about what he'd framed up with you." The speaker's voice reverted to its former fierceness in recollection of the treachery of one whom he had trusted.

"He was a stool pigeon, and I hated him. That's all, and it's enough. And it's all true, so help me God!"

The inspector nodded dismissal to the stenographer, with an air of relief.

"That's all, Williams," he said heavily. "He'll sign it as soon as you've transcribed the notes."

Then as the stenographer left the room Burke turned his gaze on the woman, who stood there in a posture of complete dejection, her white, anguished face downcast. There was triumph in the inspector's voice as he addressed her, for his professional pride was full fed by this victory over his foes.

"Young woman," Burke said briskly, "it's just like I told you. You can't beat the law. Garson thought he could—and now"— He broke off, with a wave of his hand toward the man who had just sentenced himself to death in the electric chair.

"That's right," Garson agreed, with somber intensity. His eyes were grown clouded again now, and his voice dragged leaden. "That's right, Mary," he repeated dully, after a little pause. "You can't beat the law!" He hesitated a little, then went on, with a certain curious embarrassment. "And this same old law says a woman must stick to her man."

The girl's eyes met his with passionate sorrow in their misty deeps. Garson gave a significant glance toward Dick Gilder, then his gaze returned to her. There was a smoldering despair in that look. There were, as well, an entreaty and a command.

"So," he went on, "you must go along with him, Mary. Won't you? It's the best thing to do."

The girl could not answer. There was a clutch on her throat just then, which would not relax at the call of her will.

Of a sudden, an inspiration came to him, a means to snap the tension, to create a diversion wholly efficacious. He would turn to his boasting again, would call upon his vanity, which he knew well as his chief foible, and make it serve as the foil against his love.

"You want to cut out worrying about me," he counseled, bravely. "Why, I ain't worrying any, myself—not a little bit! You see, it's something new I've pulled off. Nobody ever put over anything like it before."

He faced Burke with a grin of gloating again.

"I'll bet there'll be a lot of stuff in the newspapers about this, and my picture, too, in most of 'em! What?"

The man's manner imposed on Burke, though Mary felt the torment that his vainglorying was meant to mask.

"Say," Garson continued to the inspector, "if the reporters want any pictures of me could I have some new ones taken? The one you've got of me in the gallery is over ten years old. I've taken off my beard since then. Can I have a new one?"

"Sure you can, Joe. I'll send you up to the gallery right now."

"Immense!" Garson cried boisterously. He moved toward Dick Gilder, walking with a faint suggestion of swagger to cover the nervous tremor that had seized him.

"So long, young fellow," he exclaimed and held out his hand. "You've been on the square, and I guess you always will be."

Dick had no scruple in clasping that extended hand very warmly in his own.

"We'll do what we can for you," he said simply.

"That's all right," Garson replied, with such carelessness of manner as he could contrive. Then at last he turned to Mary. This parting must be bitter, and he braced himself with all the vigors of his will to combat the weakness that leaped from his soul.

As he came near the girl could hold herself in leash no longer. She threw herself on his breast. Her arms wreathed about his neck. Great sobs racked her.

"Oh, Joe, Joe!" The gasping cry was of utter despair.

Garson's trembling hand patted the girl's shoulder very softly, a caress of infinite tenderness.

"That's all right," he murmured huskily. "That's all right, Mary." There was a short silence, and then he went on speaking more firmly. "You know, he'll look after you."

He looked up over the girl's shoulder and beckoned with his head to Dick, who came forward.

"Take good care of her, won't you?" He disentangled himself gently from the girl's embrace and set her within the arms of her husband, where she rested quietly, as if unable to fight longer against fate's decree.

"That's all right. That's all right, Mary."

"Well, so long!"

He dared not utter another word, but turned blindly, and went, stumbling a little, toward the doorman, who had appeared in answer to the inspector's call.

"To the gallery," Burke ordered curtly.

Garson went on without ever a glance back.

There was a long silence in the room after Garson's passing. It was broken at last by the inspector, who got up from his chair and advanced toward the husband and wife. In his hand he carried a sheet of paper, roughly scrawled. As he stopped before the two and cleared his throat, Mary withdrew herself from Dick's arms and regarded the official with brooding eyes from out her white face.

Burke extended the sheet of paper to the husband.

"There's a document," he said gruffly. "It's a letter from one Helen Morris, in which she sets forth the interesting fact that she pulled off a theft in the Emporium, for which your Mrs. Gilder here did time. You know, your father got your Mrs. Gilder sent up for three years for that same job—which she didn't do. That's why she had such a grudge against your father and against the law too!"

Burke chuckled, as the young man took the paper, wonderingly.

"I don't know that I blame her much for that grudge, when all's said and done. You give that document to your father. It sets her right. He's a just man according to his lights, your father. He'll do all he can to make things right for her, now he knows. Now, you two listen. I've got to go out a minute. When I get back, I don't want to find anybody here—not anybody! Do you get me?"

* * * * * * *

When the official was gone, the two stood staring mutely each at the other through long seconds. What she read in the man's eyes set the woman's heart to beating with a new delight. What he read in her eyes set the husband's pulses to bounding. He opened his arms in an appeal that was a command. Mary went forward slowly, without hesitation, in a bliss that forgot every sorrow for that blessed moment, and cast herself on his breast.

THE END.

VERMONT SEES LAST HANGING

Arthur Bosworth Dies For Murder of Mae Labelle

ELECTRIC CHAIR TO BE USED

Before His Execution Prisoner Could Hear Workmen Erecting Death House In Which Will Be Placed New Method of Capital Punishment—Denied Planning to Kill

Windsor, Vt., Jan. 3.—Arthur Bosworth was hanged at the state prison for the murder of Mae Labelle at Essex Junction in June, 1911. The drop fell at 1:25.

Before his execution, Bosworth from his cell, could hear the workmen, erecting the death house in which will be placed an electric chair. Hereafter all murderers condemned to death in Vermont will be electrocuted.

Bosworth shot and fatally wounded Mae Labelle, the 19-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Labelle, on the platform of the railroad station at Essex Junction on June 7, 1911. She died two days later. Bosworth was immediately arrested and was found guilty of murder in the first degree.

The case was carried to the supreme court, which affirmed the verdict, and Bosworth was sentenced to be hanged Jan. 24, 1913. Under a statute then in force the execution of a murderer was forbidden until after a session of the legislature had intervened.

The session of 1912 had not ended at the date set for Bosworth's execution, and Governor Fletcher granted a reprieve. The legislature declined to commute the sentence to life imprisonment.

Bosworth, who was a model prisoner during his long confinement, was born in England twenty-nine years ago. His mother is still living in that country. While in prison Bosworth admitted that he had been drinking on the day of the murder and that he recalled having quarrelled with Miss Labelle and shooting her once. He declared that he had no recollection of the three other shots which took effect.

He denied that he had threatened or planned to kill the young woman, who was employed as a kitchen maid in a hotel at Essex Junction. Bosworth had worked at the same hotel, and had been discharged shortly before the murder.

QUARRELLED WITH WIFE

Malcolm Williams Preferred Suicide to Attending Suffrage Ball

New York, Jan. 3.—Unwillingness to attend a suffrage ball, it was learned, was the last straw that led Malcolm C. Williams to kill himself in his beautiful home at Argyle, a fashionable Long Island suburb.

Williams, who was a Harvard graduate, the son of Dr. Harold J. Williams of Boston, former dean of Tufts medical college, had frequently threatened suicide, his friends say.

He was very despondent New Year's eve when his wife asked him to escort her to the ball given by the Babylon Equal Franchise society. They quarreled and Williams went to his room. A moment later his wife heard a shot and found Williams dead.

Williams recently took out a license

Y., and Alfred Berg of Cleveland boarded the ship and were immediately confronted by the bandits, who treated them as they had Edwards. The imprisoned men almost froze to death.

Man and Wife Killed by Train

Wakefield, N. H., Jan. 3.—George Philbrick, a blacksmith, was instantly killed and his wife, Mrs. Nellie Philbrick, was fatally injured when their sleigh was struck by a freight train almost in front of their home at North Wakefield. Mrs. Philbrick died at a hospital.

Davis Continues as Speaker

Providence, Jan. 3.—Frank F. Davis, speaker of the house of representatives at the last session of the general assembly, was chosen to continue in the chair during the 1914 session by the Republican members in caucus.

Refuse to Dance Bare-Legged

The forestry men who are to look after the Quincy trees under the auspices of the Civics committee of the Quincy Women's club, are still at work in Plymouth but are expected here most any day. In the meantime Mrs. John D. Mackay is making up a list of names of those who wish to have their trees looked after.

Music lovers of Quincy will be glad of another opportunity to hear Arthur J. Hackett the tenor soloist who delighted everybody at the last Choral Society concert. NATIONAL CIVIC HALL

Quincy Invited to Contribute to Peace Memorial at Washington

The editor of the Daily Ledger and other Quincy people have been invited by the Massachusetts Advisory council of the George Washington Memorial Association in a common and simultaneous effort before Washington's Birthday to raise $200,000, the sum desired from the citizens of Massachusetts toward the cost of erecting in Washington, the "National Civic Hall and Peace Memorial," which is to serve the people of our entire country. Governor Eugene N. Foss is the honorary chairman and Ex-Congressman Samuel L. Powers the active chairman for Massachusetts.

This is a nation-wide citizens' movement. Such a building is imperatively needed. It is a reproach to us as a people that we have not heretofore provided it. Former President Taft says "It must be accomplished and on a magnificent scale." It is to be a centre of great activities: the gathering place and headquarters of patriotic, scientific, educational and other organizations of national scope interested in promoting the welfare of the entire American people; and where international congresses which now gather in the European capitals may find a fitting place to meet.

The cost is to be $2,500,000 including a $500,000 endowment for maintenance. The control and administration are to be vested in the board of regents of the Smithsonian Institution.

It is to be erected in accordance with plans to be prepared under the supervision of the Commission of Fine Arts, on the northern portion of Armory square, the block just east of the new National Museum Building. Congress has provided the site, valued at fully half a million dollars.

Advisory councils are being formed in other states to raise by popular subscription the quota apportioned to each of them. Massachusetts is asked to give $200,000, and the amount desired from Quincy is $2500.

A meeting is called to convene at the State House, room 431, at 2.30 P. M. on Tuesday, January 6, to take concerted action with the State Advisory Council.

HEARING IN FOGG CASE

Edmund Gaines, a waiter employed at the club, testified that he knew nothing about the business end of the establishment, but did as he was directed by Mrs. Reynolds.

George M. Davis and Fred H. Cushing, both employed as drivers of express wagons by Mr. Fogg said they never had delivered liquor to the club.

George E. Spaulding of Braintree testified that he had been there several times as an agent trying to dispose of the property and L. C. Cummings said that in carrying on negotiations relative to the sale of t he building he learned that it was rented to Mrs. Reynolds at $150 monthly, six months having been paid in advance, and the same to be refunded in case she purchased the property.

Considerable testimony given by the police at the trial on the two complaints on which Mrs. Reynolds has been convicted was reviewed this morning, particularly with reference to the location of the liquors and a description of the interior of the club

The censure of Chief Hunt came unexpectedly, and after several witnesses made slow, p ainstaking efforts to make immaterial answers to questions by the attorneys. Objection after objection was raised by William H. Keeley who appears for Mr. Fogg, during the examination by Mr. Mellen.

Inspector Goodhue had six jugs of liquor in court and he exhibited the tags which contained the name of the consignee, Mrs. Reynolds and frequently the name Foggs express. Judge Avery allowed him to further testify relative to the labelling of barrels, jugs and cases without producing same.

He was also asked about the arrival and departure of auto parties while the raid was being conducted and he said that 25 left and came during that time.

Many people were at the court room expecting to hear sensational testimony but when recess was taken only a few were present.

PADEREWSKI UPSET

Cancels Concert Engagement For Fear of Nihilists

Denver, Jan. 3.—After having been guarded all night in his private car by six detectives, Ignace Paderewski left suddenly for Colorado Springs. He declared that he was too ill to give a performance.

Mrs. Paderewski said that the real reason for her husband's departure was that he had heard he was followed to this city by Nihilists who have threatened his life.

The six detectives accompanied the Paderewski party to Colorado Springs. He is under engagement to give a concert there, but his wife declared that she doubted if he would venture upon the stage even in that city.

WAS NOT SELF-SLAIN

Connecticut Coroner Does Not Confirm Story of Victim's Wife

Winstead, Conn., Jan. 3.—That Charles Keffer, who was shot to death with a revolver at his home in Morris on May 9 last, did not commit suicide, as his wife testified at the time, but died at the hands of "some other person to the coroner at this time unknown," is the finding of Coroner Samuel A. Herman in the case. The inquiry was not completed until Dec. 24.

In his finding the coroner says Mrs. Keffer testified that her husband shot himself in the head with a revolver after firing once at her.

From testimony he was able to obtain, the location of the wound in Keffer's head and the position of the revolver in his hand, as well as other evidence, the coroner says he is convinced that the wound was not self inflicted.

A Sailor's Yarn

It Involves a Strange Coincidence

By F. A. MITCHEL

I'm a plain seafaring man, and I have no object in making up this yarn or any part of it. I know that a sailor's yarn is generally well stretched, and I don't deny that many a time on the fo'c'sle I've made up things myself, but that was to help my mates pass the time. We didn't have any story books, and some of us couldn't have read 'em if we had, so we just made up stories of our own.

But this is different. There are things about it too serious for a made up yarn. I'll admit that none of the happenings I ever told of or listened to on the fo'c'sle were harder to believe than this one, but since I haven't made it up I'm not responsible for that.

Jennie Kline and I were brought up at the same place on the coast, and both of us were used to boats from the day we were born. Our parents were able to send us to school, and since we were about the same age we went to school together. No such thing as love occurred to me till I was sixteen years old—Jennie was fifteen—and Tom Hobson came home from a cruise dressed in sailor togs and was a mighty fine looking fellow. He was twenty-one years old, and since Jennie was passing from childhood to womanhood he took a fancy to her. He was the first man who ever paid her any attention, and she was mighty well pleased.

I complained to her about her going so much with Hobson, and yet it seemed senseless for me to do so. I hadn't appropriated her. True, she and I seemed to belong to each other, but there was no reason why it should always be so. Jennie took my complaints seriously. She didn't like the idea of any break between us any more than I did. She said she didn't see why we shouldn't be the same as we always had been, and yet she knew better. She knew that a change had come over the boy and girl condition that had existed, and we were entering upon something different.

Hobson stayed ashore for some time, during which there was a sort of rivalry between him and me. Jennie wouldn't give up his attentions to please me; indeed, I didn't ask her to do so. I only let her see that every time she was with Hobson was like sticking a knife into me. It hurt her, perhaps, almost as much as it did me, but there was nothing to do in the matter, no reason why she should refuse Hobson's attentions, no sense in her confining her associations to one boy not yet seventeen years old.

When my rival went to sea again it was as third mate of a vessel. The night before he sailed he was with Jennie. I didn't know what passed between them, but after he had gone Jennie seemed very much changed. Whether he had made love to her and she was pining for him, whether she didn't know if she wanted to tie up to him or to me I couldn't find out. If she knew what was troubling her she kept it to herself. I've often thought it was a kind of indecision.

After this, instead of being ingenuous with me, as she had been, she was freaky. Sometimes she would be very friendly, or affectionate, rather, and sometimes she would be the reverse. My father about this time told me that it was time for me to be doing something, and since the only thing for me to do was on the water I shipped for a voyage. When I said goodby to Jennie she held on to my hand a long while, and it seemed that she couldn't bear to part with me. I asked her if she would be the same to me when I came back that she had always been, but she didn't give me any answer whatever.

From this time Jennie had an easier job of it, since Hobson and I were not at home at the same time. When I came back from my first voyage I heard that he had been there and that he and Jennie had been a great deal together. Jennie seemed mighty glad to see me back. I kissed her, but instead of taking it as a kiss from a lover it seemed to give her a little shock.

This coming and going continued for several years, during which I became an officer. Hobson kept coming and going as well, and finally, returning from one of my voyages, I heard he had got a ship. He was now Captain Hobson, while I was plain Mr. Gibbs. He was twenty-four years old, while I was but nineteen.

I fancy it was Hobson's higher and more lucrative position that induced Jennie's family to bring their influence to bear upon her to marry him. At any rate when I sailed the next time she threw her arms around me, and it seemed she would never let me go. I took it for granted that I had won and went away very happy. Alas, it was a goodby! She had promised her parents that she would say yes to Hobson when he returned from his next voyage.

Jennie kept her promise, and when Captain Hobson sailed on his next voyage he took her with him as his bride. I learned of my loss at Bombay, where we received letters. It gave me the shock of my life. I didn't blame Jennie. She had been placed when very young between two lovers and during the transition period between child and woman had been in a state of uncertainty. She had decided at last in favor of my rival, and I had no more cause to complain than he would have had he lost her.

During the next two or three years I shipped from other ports than my home. I couldn't bear to go there to find Jennie possessed by another. The bridal voyage was a short one, after which letters from my mother informed me that Jennie had settled down ashore. Mother knew of my disappointment and seldom wrote me a letter without mentioning my lost love. She has said since that she had a feeling that Jennie would yet some day be mine.

I became master of a vessel and was sailing between Japan and San Francisco. On one of my return voyages when out on the Pacific ocean one morning, seeing a dark object on the horizon, I raised my glass and discerned a ship rising and falling with the waves. I could discern no masts; neither could I see a smokestack. Consequently I was unable to make out whether she was a sailer or a steamer. We were heading a few points south of her, and when we had come nearer and I was still puzzled as to what she was I directed that the ship be pointed directly toward her.

"She's a derelict, sir," said the second officer, who was also watching her.

"I believe she is," I replied. "It's lucky we met her by daylight and so near on her course. We must sink her."

As we drew near the vessel we saw that she was a sailer, or, rather, had been, for every mast was gone. With nothing to steady her, she was rolling about, sometimes on her beam ends, yet sometimes riding over a wave—indeed, helpless. We saw no one on deck and had no idea that there was any one on her. We approached her from her stern, and I kept my glass fixed upon her so that as soon as we came near enough I might read her name. Before I made out the letters composing it I read the name of the place from which she hailed, "Portsmouth, New Hampshire."

"Get a boat ready, Mr. Marks," I said to the second officer.

The order was obeyed. I intending to send him to the wreck to sink her. But when we came near enough for the purpose I changed my mind and went myself. The sea was running quite high, but, approaching from the lee side, we managed to get safely aboard the vessel. She had evidently met with prolonged foul weather, for her masts had been cut away. The remnants of a jib were still fluttering in the wind. Some of the boats were gone, others were swinging from their davits, while one, loose at the bow, was pounding on the deck.

The fore part of the ship had been washed by the waves, but was now dry. The stern was high out of water. Descending the companionway, we came upon several corpses of men or, rather, skeletons, for they had evidently starved. One of them I had seen in life, but I did not know that I had, for he was so changed that I did not recognize him. Leaving my men amidships, I went aft, for if there was any living creature aboard I would find it there.

I said at the beginning of this recital—it is too serious to call a yarn—that I would test the credulity of the hearer. But, after all, what I am going to relate was but a coincidence. There is nothing improbable in one meeting a former friend in Patagonia, or in going into a morgue and seeing stretched on a slab a brother one has not met for years. These things are happening frequently, and why should not I—

But I am going too fast. I made my way to the stern companionway and descended into the cabin. The door of a room stood open; it was hooked, and I looked in.

Would that there were some medium capable of giving my quick mental transitions as I stood there gazing on the object before me. There is no such medium; only words, and they are not adequate. A living woman lay in a berth. I looked at her and wondered where I was, what I was doing, whether some mental stroke had not befallen me. Within a few seconds the withered features resolved themselves into those of my lost love. My Jennie was there, starving.

There was not the same look of astonishment on her face there was on mine. Her senses were too blunted. I went to her, knelt by her berth and put my arms around her. Then, realizing that food was of the first importance, I ran out and called to the men. Thinking it possible that some living person might be found on the derelict, a bottle of broth had been brought. This I called for and began to feed it in minute doses.

My yarn has been spun. What remains is little more than explanation. Jennie had gone on a voyage with her husband. A prolonged storm had wrecked the vessel. The supplies, except a few biscuit and a quart of water, had been cut off by the waves. This remnant had been given to the captain's wife. We had found her just in time to save her, the only living thing left on the ship.

I dared not take her from the derelict till she had gained a little strength, and yet I feared that at any moment the weather might change and the sea rise. If a wind should beat up the waves we might not get her off at all. We fed her lightly till just before sunset, then lowered her into the boat and took her to our own ship.

All this happened years ago. Jennie has long been my wife, and we have grown children. But their mother will not consent to any of them going to sea. Her frightful experience gave her a dread from which it is impossible that she should ever recover.

LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION IN THE CITY

Vol. 29 No. 4 QUINCY MASS. MONDAY EVENING JANUARY 5, 1914 PRICE TWO CENTS

HON. JOHN L. MILLER TAKES OATH AS MAYOR

JOSEPH L. WHITON RE-ELECTED PRESIDENT

Promptly Appoints the Standing Committees of New City Council

No Order Introduced to Borrow in Anticip-tion of Taxes

The City Government of 1914 was inaugurated at 12 o'clock today in the presence of an audience that more than filled the Council Chamber at City Hall. Thus it has always been with the inauguration of a new Mayor, for everybody is anxious to see the final act which follows a strenuous campaign which closed with the municipal election of Dec. 2 last. Every available seat on the floor of the Council Chamber was occupied and extra seats had been brought in for the occasion.

JOSEPH L. WHITON.
President City Council.

The balcony was bright with color for in the seats were practically all of the lady clerks at City Hall as well as many of the wives and sweethearts of the new Councilmen. A large space was reserved for the accommodation of the special guests of Mayor Miller.

The flag on City hall was flying this morning in honor of the Inauguration, and the new Mayor arrived at City Hall just before noon in an automobile trimmed with flags.

About the Presidents desk were many large and handsome bouquets of flowers sent by the admiring friends of the new Mayor, Hon. John L. Miller.

The floral tributes included a large floral horse shoe, an emblem of good luck, from Col. H. L. Kincaide; a massive bouquet from Temple A. Winsloe; a bouquet of pinks from the lady clerks at City Hall, and other bouquets.

The only Councilman to receive a bouquet was Councilman Williams, who received a handsome bunch of red roses.

The exercises varied but little from those which have characterized inaugurations of the past. It lacked hardly a minute of the hour of noon when the inaugural party entered the Chamber by the rear stairway, led by City Messenger who has performed that same duty for the past twenty-five years. The Chaplain of the day, Rev. Joseph Walther of the Wollaston Baptist church, City Clerk Emery L. Crane, Mayor Stone and Mayor-elect Miller were in the party. By this time the members of the City Council elect had assumed seats in the semi-circle facing the Presidents desk, and as the inaugural party entered there was a round of applause.

THE CEREMONIES.

As soon as the clock struck 12 and as the last stroke died away Rev. Mr. Walther offered a fervent prayer.

Our new Mayor has a sincerity of purpose. We believe in him. We pray that he may acquit himself well. That his appointees may give good service, and the administration of 1914 may be the best administration of the city. May we serve God at all times.

The City Clerk turning to Mayor-elect Miller administered the oath of office.

The City Clerk then called the roll of the City Council; afterward requesting them to arise while the oath of office was administered.

Turning to the audience the City Clerk then said: "His Honor Mayor Miller." This was the signal for another round of applause, and after it had subsided the Mayor delivered his inaugural address which will be found in another column.

CITY COUNCIL ORGANIZES.

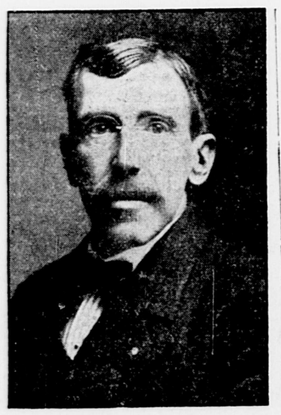
The Council proceeded to organization by the election of Joseph L. Whiton, his election being unanimous. He was sworn in and the City Clerk stepped to the desk of the Clerk of Council.

In accepting the office President Whiton spoke briefly thanking the members for the confidence reposed in him, and promised to preside over the deliberations of the year in a fair and impartial manner.

OFFICIALS RE-ELECTED.

The organization of the Council was then completed by the election of the following officers, the election in each case being unanimous.

Clerk of Council,—George T. Magee.
Clerk of Committees,—George T. Magee.
City Messenger,—Harry W. Tirrell.
City Auditor,—Henry O. Fairbanks.
The clerk was sworn in and assumed his office.



GEORGE T. MAGEE,
Clerk of the City Council

RULES ADOPTED.

The next business was the drawing for seats. By vote of the Council the members of last years City Council were allowed to retain the seats occupied last year. The drawing of seats was then held the results being as follows.

Charles W. Bailey	16
Charles E. Barker	18
Elijah P. Barrows	20
John B. Bass	22
Herbert G. Beeman	2
Carl E. Carlson	6
Daniel F. Corcoran	21
Robert B. Craig	4
Charles A. Ericson	19
Otto Gelotte	14
Charles L. Gilliatt	17
Thomas Griffin	3
Charles A. Hadlock	7
Stephen B. Little	1
John R. Nelson	11
James O'Dowd	12
Alfred H. Richards	8
Charles A. Ross	10
Ernest E. Sodergren	9
William P. Thompson	15
Robert J. Williams, Jr.	5

The rules of the Council of 1913 were adopted as the rules of the Council of 1914.

The organization was now completed and the Council ready to transact any business that came before it.

Several communications were received from the Mayor appointing constables and special constables all of which were confirmed.

Under the head of petitions several were received for minor licenses including a license as an auctioneer for Charles H. Johnson recently the Republican candidate for Mayor, which was later granted.

HON. HENRY O. FAIRBANKS.
City Auditor.

The Telephone Co. presented a petition for attachments, as did also the Street Railway Co., both of which were granted.

A petition of the street railway company for a location of poles was referred to the Street Committee.

Under motions, orders, etc., the following orders were offered:

Authorizing the Mayor to sign deeds and leases of the Adams Temple and School Fund. Adopted.

Authorizing the Mayor to have the annual reports printed. Referred to the Finance Committee.

Authorizing the Clerk to have the Calendars and copies of the rules printed. Adopted.

Councilman Ross offered a resolve and order to the effect, that it appeared by the records of the Registrars of Voters that Alexander Cowe who was elected as a Councilman from Ward Three was not qualified to serve under the charter, which provides that no one shall be eligible for that office who has not been a citizen of the United States for at least one year, and that Mr. Cowe be given an opportunity to appear before the City Council Monday evening Jan. 19, at 8 o'clock, to show cause why his seat should not be declared vacant. Adopted.

STANDING COMMITTEES.

Before adjourning President Whiton announced the standing committees of the Council. This year an unusual situation arose. Under the rules no member can be obliged to serve on more than two committees. Certain of the committees require that they shall be made up of one member at large and one member from each ward. In order to carry out this provision it was necessary that one member from Ward One should serve on three committees. Councilman Ericson consented to do this so that it will be seen by the the following lists that he will serve on the Finance, Streets and Sewer committees.

Finance, Accounts, Claims, Contracts and Salaries,—Bailey, Hadlock, Thompson, Little, Griffin, Ericson, Ross.

Streets, Ways, Sidewalks, Bridges and Lights,—Gilliatt, Beeman, Ericson, O'Dowd, Barrows, Gelotte, Craig.

HIS HONOR JOHN L. MILLER

MAYOR MILLER'S ADDRESS

Some Things He Hopes to Accomplish

Economy to Be Watchword

It took Mayor Miller just thirteen minutes to deliver his informal Inaugural Address at City Hall today. It was unlike any of its predecessors, being free from figures, and with no attempt at oratory.

His Honor severly critised the Police department and the Fire department. The only department to meet with favor being the School department from which the new Mayor has just retired.

The only recommendations were: Addition to Houghs Neck schoolhouse, widening of Hancock street, and a street to Rock Island.

A stenographic report of the address follows:

THE ADDRESS.

Gentlemen of the Council and fellow citizens: It is a pleasure for me to meet you in this capacity, although I have to disappoint you. I have not one of those peculiar state documents called an inaugural address, and therefore you will not have to consign our printing to the waste basket. I have always believed that those addresses were nothing but fine fabric and sawdust, calculated to sink into the eyes of the people, so I have omitted it and will discuss things that occur to me.

We are commencing a new year. We have much to do. We have a stated purpose to put our city in a better position and the citizens have said to us at the polls you must put our city in a better position! This tax rate must be reduced! And therefore it behooves every Councilman to do his utmost to help accomplish these things, and I promise you that it shall be my utmost endeavor as Mayor of this city to see that no money will be wasted, that we shall get a fair return for the money expended.

There are many things no doubt that many would like to do, would like to see our city enjoy, but it has always been my claim that if I cannot afford a thing this year I could wait until the next, and I believe it is the only way we can bring our city to a proper tax rate and this we must endeavor to do.

Our departments have, I believe a vehy extravagant way of doing business, and that must be looked after. The police department from the heart to the surface, and placed on a business-like basis. It

Again we ask those sending news or other matter by mail to direct it to the company or newspaper rather than to individual members of the company or employees. If addressed to individuals and they were ill or not at the office, it might be several days in reaching its proper destination and if news matter would be too late for use.

The President having assisted to put out a fire, it would seem as if the Pass Christian people ought to invite him to lead the grand march at the firemen's ball.

If the second Sunday in the month is as stormy as the first one was, the "Everybody-go-to-church" committee will have to do some hustling to fill up the pews next Sunday.

For a week or two about now the old man does not have to chop up much kindling wood, as the Christmas toys furnish all that is needed.

Much alarm is expressed in New York city about the decadence of the New Year celebrations, as there is a very considerable number of people now do do not get drunk.

It is believed that King Menelik will stay dead this time for at least a month.

The report current in Washington that Vice-President Marshall had lost his tongue seems to be thoroughly discredited by this time.

If the railroads cannot get advertised any other way, they are always able to have an accident and get a lot of free newspaper space.

When a man yells "fire" in a crowded hall, he might as well also lock the doors carefully.

Some people fear that the express companions will be so impoverished by the parcel post that they will never pay more than 10 per cent again.

It would be pretty rough on the farmers if they had to double their production by using methods their grandfathers did not know about.

THE CONTROL OF CROWDS.

At the time of the Iroquois theatre fire in Chicago there was a general clean up of public halls all over the country. So much was accomplished that such tragic happenings have been made comparatively rare. But the frightful loss of life at the Calumet, Mich., Christmas tree shows what an ever present danger human hysteria is.

No provision of exits, fire escapes, or asbestos curtains can prevent same fool from yelling fire in a crowded room. But if this danger is always foreseen in advance, any crowd can be hypnotized into order and deliberation.

There is always time for every one to get out, provided people don't crowd and push. No fire can destroy a building without giving warning. The time from the first faint whiff of smoke to actual burning is ample for escape.

No hall should be allowed to entertain the public unless there are at least two exits, though in some small rooms on the ground floor, the windows may provide an easy way of escape. The sight of exit doors calms an excited crowd.

The hall where the Calumet horror took place had reasonably good provision for exits. There was no fire in the building. The whole affair was purely mental. The difficulty of the situation was aggravated by the fact that those present spoke several languages. Still if some man with a strong voice had mounted the platform and yelled for silence and orderly exit, probably the crowd would have calmed down.

Every school should have regular drills. The management of every public hall should have clearly in mind the need for instant action and command in such emergencies. And when halls are built, it costs but little to provide adequate doors and stairways.

GOOD SHOWING BY THE CITY

Ex-Mayor Stone Has Reason to Be Proud of Accomplishments

Hon. Eugene R. Stone, the retiring Mayor, is entitled to more credit than many have been willing to accord to him, for the greatly improved condition of the city finances. The figures which Mr. Stone presents in an open letter to Mayor Miller are authentic and encouraging. Not for many years previous to 1913 was there a reduction in the debt of the city, but the administration of Mayor Stone accomplished it by curtailing the new loans and at the same time keeping within all appropriations. A reduction of the debt means less for interest.

The letter is given in full:

Hon. John L. Miller,
Quincy, Massachusetts:

Dear Sir—I wish to call your attention to the financial condition of the city at the close of my administration.

The debt on January 1, 1912, was $2,294,896.46. The debt on December 31, 1913 was $2,185,945.00 showing a decrease of $109,851.46 during the year.

The net valuation of the city for three years is $35,297,371.00 which gives the city a borrowing limit of $882,434.

Our municipal debt on December 31, 1913, was $602,445.00 which gives a borrowing capacity of $279,989.00 which I am pleased to inform you is the largest in the history of the city.

The net valuation of 1913 is $36,719,980.00 which yields $440,639.76 that can be used for the budget and which is about $20,000 more than has ever before been available in any year to pay the current expenses of the city.

From the best information available, each of the departments is being turned over to you without a deficit, and in most cases with a substantial balance. A most unusual occurrence in the history of Quincy.

It is with much satisfaction that I turn the city over to you in this splendid condition, and I wish you success in your administration.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) Eugene R. Stone,
Mayor.

Grossman, Leo Catler and Edward Berman. It was announced that a lecture will be held at the rooms next Thursday evening.

Several members were appointed to the entertainment committee which now consists of Joseph B. Grossman, chairman. William Asnes, Henry Yieger, Leo Catler, and Harry Tolpin. JACKSONVILLE ELDER Writes Characteristic Letter regarding Loss of Appetite.

He says:
"Vinol is just the thing
For summer, winter fall or spring.
Follow directions, take it right,
It will save your lagging appetite.
"I know for I have tried it. For weeks I could scarcely eat enough to keep a snake alive. I have taken three bottles of Vinol and now it looks like I will eat my head off. I am at the table three times a day eating as I did in the good old days when I split rails, dug wells, topped trees, plowed corn and hoed cotton. Try Vinol and see how good it feels to be real hungry."

When you ought to be hungry and are not it is because your stomach does not feel strong enough to ask for food—a sure sign of impaired general health. Better than dosing the stomach with pepsin for temporary relief is taking Vinol, our delicious tonic, which has the strengthening and blood-making power of iron, and the building-up value of cod liver oil. It quickly restores appetitie and perfect digestion. If Vinol does not help you it costs you nothing. Edward J. Murphy, Druggist, Quincy, Mass.

BLUE EYED BABY GIRLS IN DEMAND

While Boy Waifs Go Begging For Foster Parents.

DEMAND EXCEEDS SUPPLY.

New York Charities Aid Association Swamped With Applications For Flaxen Haired Human Dolls—"Childless Women Want Them to Fuss Over and Bedeck With Ribbons."

Flaxen haired little girls have dimmed the glory of mere boys in popular favor, according to the New York State Charities Aid association. In all New York state and nearby communities it has been impossible to find homes for 100 orphaned boys now in the guardianship of the association.

On the other hand, little girls, especially those having "blue eyes and golden hair," cannot be gathered fast enough to meet the demand.

Elsewhere in the country the same situation exists.

"This discrimination in favor of the girl might be explained," said Miss Mary Vida Clark, acting superintendent of the New York State Charities association, recently, "by the fact that little girls are, I believe, generally considered easier to rear. Moreover, they give women something to dress up in ribbons and laces, something to fuss over—human dolls, so to speak. Then, again, little girls are more companionable. The women who seek to adopt children are generally those who never have had children of their own. They are lonely and want little girls, who become more and more attached companions of their mothers as they grow older, whereas boys branch out into fields and worlds of their own as they are old enough for companionship worthy the name.

Demand For Blue Eyed Baby Girls.

"We have a good many more than fifty children at present in charge, but the demand this year seems to be almost restricted to blue eyed baby girls. We haven't enough to fill all the orders. On the other hand we have more than 100 boys ranging in age from six to fourteen years, and we are almost unable to find homes for any of them. The boy seems to be unpopular, while the little girl grows constantly in favor."

"How about the men who figure in the adoptions?" Miss Clark was asked.

"Men usually like little girls better," she replied. "Fathers generally are fondest of their daughters. Thus, little flaxen haired, sapphire eyed fairies are in demand at both ends of the family.

"The men usually let the women carry on all the negotiations. They stay in the background and shiver and shake until the worst is over. Then they come in and make more fuss than anybody."

Two-year-old Children Favored.

There are numerous interesting facts to be learned from the association, which annually finds homes for about 250 little waifs. Here are some:

The association now has about 150 children awaiting homes.

It is not necessary to adopt a child. Most of them are sent out to permanent homes without legal adoption.

More than 100 of the children waiting are boys.

Under two years old is the popular age for adopting.

Families seeking to adopt or house children must submit to investigation.

Every social caste—or caste of wealth—is represented among the adopting parents. "From street car conductor to the millionaire or the college professor or the minister," as Miss Clark put it.

BRAIN GONE, LIVED A YEAR.

Doctor Had Treated Man a Year For What He Thought Was Slight Wound.

Before the Academy of Sciences in Paris recently Dr. Robinson reported a case in which life was sustained when a great part of the brain had been destroyed.

The case was that of a man sixty-two years old whom he had treated for a year for an apparently slight wound of the occiput.

During this time the patient showed no signs of brain trouble, but the autopsy revealed the presence of an abscess which had reduced the brain tissue to a mere shell.

Pool and Billiards In Schools.

A resolution providing for the installation in school basements of bowling alleys and pool and billiard rooms will be introduced before the new Cleveland (O.) board of education at its first meeting in January. Mrs. Arnold Green, board member, will be sponsor for the resolution.

EGGS USED AS MONEY.

Eggs are becoming so scarce in the mountainous sections of Arkansas that they are being used as a medium of exchange. Not only are they acceptable for payment at grocery stores and mercantile establishments, but at motion picture theaters. One egg admits a minor and two one adult.

News Films of the Passing Show

A dozen hens carried into an abandoned mine near Pineville, Ky., by outlaws supplied fresh food and balked a posse.

Coroner Peter N. Hoffman of Chicago made a New Year's resolution to "save 1,000 lives in 1914." Through a public safety campaign he expects to lessen the number of Chicago accidents.

The mother-in-law is held up as a maligned person by Chicago's court of domestic relations. Only 6 per cent of the divorce and other marital cases brought before the court in 1913 could be blamed on her.

Two sons of A. J. Porter of International Falls, Minn., attend a school eight miles away and ride that distance each day, leaving home at 6 o'clock and getting back not much before that hour at night.

FAMOUS ARMY AND NAVY OFFICERS WILL RETIRE.

The New Year to Be Marked by Many Important Changes.

Seventeen of the best known officers of the army, the navy and the marine corps will retire from active service, under the age limit, in 1914.

Of the naval retirements the most important are those of Rear Admirals William H. Southerland, Charles E. Vreeland, Vincendon L. Cottman, Reginald F. Nicholson and William N. Little, Pay Director William W. Galt and Medical Director Frank Anderson. Admiral Nicholson is commander in chief of the Asiatic fleet, but is soon to relinquish that command to Rear Admiral Thomas B. Howard.

Admirals Southerland and Vreeland are both members of the naval general board, of which board Admiral Dewey is the president, while Admiral Cottman is commandant of the Puget sound navy yard. Admiral Little is on duty as inspector of the government ship construction work at the Fore River (Mass.) yards. Medical director Anderson is president of the naval examining board in Washington, and Pay Director Galt is at the head of the pay department at the navy yard in Norfolk, Va.

When Major General William P. Biddle, the commandant of the marine corps, leaves the service, the president will have the naming of his successor. In the army the best known of the officers who will retire is Major General William W. Wotherspoon The brigadiers who will retire will be George Andrews, who is the adjutant general, and Ramsay D. Potts, the commanding officer at Vancouver barracks. The colonels who retire under the age limit are John T. Van Orsdale Seventeenth infantry; Colonel Alfred C. Sharpe, instructor of the Ohio national guard; Colonel Frank West Second cavalry; Charles A. P. Hatfield Thirteenth cavalry, and Colonel Henry P. Kingsbury of the inspector general's department in Washington.

DIES TO HELP SCIENCE.

Will of Suicide Asks Surgeons to Seek Cause For Criminal Bent.

Bequeathing his body to surgery that dissection might indicate why his life had been directed toward crime, John Kowinski, better known as Kelter, of 1053 Washington boulevard, Chicago leaped from the eighteenth floor of the Masonic temple and was crushed to death on the "safety screen" nine floors below.

His object appears to have been missed, for the body was so crushed that its use for dissection is undesirable, surgeons state.

The man left what he termed a "life confession," which referred to twenty-six months in prison and an unwillingness to prolong life by robbery, which Kelter termed his profession, and a will authorizing the American College of Surgeons, Rush Medical college and the Jenner Medical college to dissect the body "in order that it may be discovered how such types were produced by heredity or environment or a combination of both, trying to aid in alleviating others from their suffering."

Officer Goodhue Testifies in Cedarcrest Inn Case

The trial of George E. Fogg, charged with the illegal transportation of liquor and also with letting a building knowing it was to be used for the illegal sale of liquor, was resumed Saturday afternoon. Inspector Alfred W. Goodhue finished testifying. He injected considerable activity into the monotony. Both attorneys after examination relative to details were sorry to see him complete his testimoney, and William Kelly, attorney for the defendant expressed the opinion that Inspector Goodhue was the only witness that seemed to know anything about the case.

A new complaint, charging Mrs. E. Grace Reynolds of the Cedarcrest Club with maintaining a club nuisance, was preferred shortly after 4 o'clock. Mrs. Reynolds pleaded not guilty, the case was continued to Friday at which time it is expected that she will have made arrangements to enter an appeal from a fine of $300 that will be imposed on two complaints heard some weeks ago.

Improper labelling was the foundation of the testimony of Inspector Goodhue. He said several complaints about the express business of George E. Fogg were received. It was not unusual to be a constable of the town of Braintree; he was first appointed at the suggestion of Amos Loring, a former chief of police.

Miss Gertrude Reynolds was called to the stand and said she had been made secretary of the club, but was unacquainted with its business methods, since she spent but little time here and then generally in her room. She declined to answer several questions on the ground that she might incriminate herself. Charles Mellen, prosecuting attorney asked for the books of the club, and she said she did not have them. He asked if she had not been ordered to produce them in court and she said no. Mr. Mellen insisted that she had, and on examination of the summons found that it was for her mother and not the witness.

Mrs. E. Grace Reynolds, who according to the testimony of both her daughters, was business manager of the club, took the stand about 3 o'clock. She proved to be a reluctant witness. In reply to questions of Lawyer Mellen, she said that she had the books of the club in court a week ago and when asked why she had not brought them Saturday she became somewhat confused. Judge Avery came to her assistance by asking if she had forgotten them, and she said yes. At his request she promised to have them in court Friday.

Mrs. Reynolds continually declined to answer several queries because of the bearing she thought they might have on the case in which she is the defendant. She was dismissed from the stand for several minutes to confer with an attorney and on resuming her testimony said that some liquor received at the club had been sent by members, that she did most of the purchasing in Boston and that the merchants chose the express by which the goods were delivered. She said Mr. and Mrs. Fogg, as well as others in the neighborhood, had called on her several times.

William Kelly, counsel for the defense offered a motion to quash the complaint because it did not specifically state the nature of the offense. Considerable objection was raised over the offering of the motion, it being stated that ordinarily such motions were presented before the trial commenced. Mr. Kelly stated that he was within his rights in offering one at any time before a judgment of the case.

Judge Avery did not entertain the motion, Mrs. Reynolds was on the stand when he halted the proceedings.

Throughout the trial he allowed the attorney unusual latitude on the grounds that it was necessary to learn the character of the Cedarcrest Club and cross examined several of the witnesses.

BURGLAR ALARM.

The quietness of City Square was disturbed about 5.30 o'clock Sunday morning by the violent ringing of the burglar alarm on the store of Charles F. Pettingill. Charles Brown the paper merchant notified the station and Officers Whelan, Olsen and Avery quickly responded. After an examination of the premises they found no traces of burglars. A broken wire, snapped because of the strong wind, is thought to have been responsible for ringing of the alarm.

ARCHDUCHESS NOW FULL-FLEDGED NURSE

Former Wife of Prince George of Bavaria Ends Probation

Vienna, Austria, Jan. 5.—Archduchess Isabella, Archduke Frederick's fifth daughter, whose marriage to Prince George of Bavaria nearly two years ago turned out wretchedly, has completed her novitiate in the Vienna hospital of the Red Cross society, the Radolfinerhaus, where the poorest patients are treated, and has been invested with the garb of a sister, with the brooch of the Red Cross, the badge of a full fledged nurse.

Her ex-husband, Prince George, is a grandson of Emperor Francis Joseph. He turned out so little to her taste that after two months of married life she left her princely home in Munich and returned to her parents. Subsequently her marriage was annuled by both the civil courts and the Vatican.

Fearing that Princess Isabella might take the veil, her parents readily accepted this plan and she began her six months' term of probation. She is now qualified and must be prepared to respond to the call of duty. She may be sent on active service in case of war.

Bradford Boy Wanted to See What Revolver Would Do If He Fired It

Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 5.—Ira Ellis, 22 years old, who lives with his mother on Layfette street, Bradford, shot and probably fatally wounded himself.

He was visiting Albert Hafeltrim, a well-to-do farmer, and picked up a revolver which was lying on the table, and exclaiming, "I wonder what this would do if I fired it through my stomach?" pulled the trigger.

Hafeltrim ran to get a doctor and called the ambulance, but on their arrival Ellis was standing against the door smoking his pipe and smiling. He was taken to a hospital, where it was found that the bullet had penetrated the abdomen and lodged in the stomach. The officials say there is no hope for him.

Government Agent Has Failed to Bring Settlement

Houghton, Mich., Jan. 5.—Negotiations for the settlement of the copper miners' strike having failed, both sides to the controversy began to lay plans for meeting a prolongation of the struggle.

Governor Ferris decided to make a personal inspection of the conditions prevailing in the copper region, while John B. Densmore, solicitor for the department of labor, started to Washington, regretting his failure to bring about a settlement.

Great interest was aroused in the upper peninsula by the announcement that the governor was coming to take a hand in the situation at close quarters.

Beverly Man May Lose Life After Making Rescue

Beverly, Mass., Jan. 5.—After saving his 18-months-old child, Felix Baker, employed on the Burroughs estate at Hamilton, is at the Beverly hospital, suffering from burns as a result of his rescue.

A can of kerosene set near the parlor stove in the Baker home on the Topsfield road, exploded and started a fire. Mrs. Baker was visiting a neighbor and Baker rushed into the flames, picked up the baby and rushed it to safety outside. His clothes caught fire in the attempt.

He was burned from his waist down and the skin was burned off one of his arms and on one side of the face. His condition is thought to be serious. The baby escaped unscathed and the damage to the house will not exceed $100.

Detroit, Jan. 5.—Policeman John Gordon died as the result of injuries received, when he was shot by bandits. Gordon was the seventh Detroit officer to be shot down while on duty since last March. Of this number six officers either were killed outright or died as the result of their injuries.

Soon after the shooting four foreigners were identified by Gordon as the men he encountered when the shooting occurred. He also pointed out the man who, he said, shot him. The four were immediately placed under arrest. The police say they have other evidence connecting them with a street hold-up a few hours before Gordon was shot.

SUNDAY IN QUINCY CHURCHES

NOTE—Press corespondents of Churches are requested to limit reports of sermons to 100 words, unless abstracts are requested. Where fifty or more sermons are delivered in Quincy every Sunday it is impossible to report them at length. Brief items of church news are requested. Name and address should accompany all reports.

FIRST PARISH.

In his New Year sermon Sunday Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson discussed the significance of the impulse that leads people to make New Year resolutions which he defined as the reawakening of moral purpose in the presence of a fresh opportunity.

After briefly applying this to individual lives, he considered its relation to the life of the community, state and nation. He referred to the widespread movement to stimulate attendance at all the churches as a symptom of the reawakening of moral responsibility among right minded non-church-going people, which may have far reaching results in correcting some of the unfavorable tendencies of the present day.

For more than a quarter of a century the influence of the religious impulse in the community has been declining. And the result is seen in conditions which threaten the welfare of society, and even the permanence of our higher civilization. Now people are just beginning to realize the duty of all well meaning citizens to help maintain the strength and influence of the churches for the common good. And this fresh impulse coming with the New Year should be stimulated and fostered by every one.

Next Sunday Mr. Hudson will preach on "The church and modern Life."

BETHANY CONGREGATIONAL.

Large congregations attended Bethany church on Sunday, although stormy. It was communion day, and the message of the pastor was "The inevitable Christ." The following were received into the church on confession: James F. Reid, Mrs. Minnie S. Reid, Miss Marion M. Brown, Miss Annie I. Holmes, Roger C. Gardner, Miss Frances Sherman, Miss Eleanor Bates, Miss Ethel G. Beal, Miss Dorothy N. England, Miss Helen F. Miller, Miss Ruth H. Leavitt, Miss Evelyn M McKenzie, Otto Van Ryswoud, Mrs Isabella D. Van Ryswoud, John Mc. N. Knowles. Received by letter: Andrew Milne, Miss Mary B. T. Milne, David Buchanan, Mrs. Margaret Rae Cruickshank.

"A Happy New Year to you" was the subject of the New eYar's address Sunday evening. The pastor was pleased to see these Old World customs perpetuated. It was one of the best, to wish others a Happy New Year. By repetition it had a good influence. Good will adds to efficiency. In answer to the question, what will help, the pastor said: Health, money, friends and faith. He enlarged on each and closed by relating his personal experience, telling how he and all the other members of a cricket eleven became christians at one time. All his success in life he said was due to that decision.

A meeting of the church council will be held this evening at 7.30 to consider important matters.

The subject for the meeting for prayer and good fellowship on Thursday evening will be: "Valuable lessons and helps from Old Testament Heroes we have studied in Bible School."—Rom. 15. 1-6.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

The sermon at the Sunday morning service was one most appropriate for the beginning of the New Year, "God's call to service." "Whom shall I send and who will go for us?"—Isa. 6:8.

God wants a messenger, a prophet, a worker; it is his call to individuals, an invitation, not a command. The kind of a man God wants has five characteristics:

(1) He must have had a vision of God himself. All scripture heroes had this vision. Isaiah himself had it, "In the year King Uziah died, I saw also the Lord." This vision must be of a God high and lifted up, a holy God, a God whose glory fills the whole earth.

(2) He must have a vision of himself, deeply penitent and humble before a most holy God.

(3) He must be cleansed, changed, all sin taken away, else he will misrepresent God. As Isaiah's lips were touched with the burning coal, so we pray that we may have power.

(4) He must be wholly surrendered, a volunteer.

(5) He must not expect too easy a task. People will harden their hearts to the message, will refuse to hear and accept.

The right hand of fellowship was extended to Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Neal and Mrs. Geo. K. Drew. At the close of the service the ordinance of communion was observed.

The attendance in the Sunday school was rather small, due probably to the unpleasant weather. In the Rand class, however, there were 57 young men present, and the other organized classes were equally well attended.

Enthusiasm in the Red and Blue contest in the Junior Christian Endeavor still runs high. The Reds at present have a lead of 95. The meeting Sunday afternoon was in charge of Mrs. Walther, subject: "New Years resolutions."

A deeply spiritual Consecration meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E. at 6. A preparatory prayer meeting was held at 5.45, which perhaps accounts for the success of the service following. Miss May R. Critchley was the leader. The subject—"God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish but have everlasting life."

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

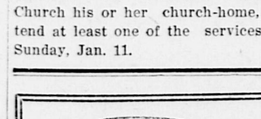
Sunday was communion Sunday. Owing to the storm a small congregation attended the service of commemoration of the founder of Christianity, whose wondrous life and teaching have moulded the character and history of mankind for centuries, and one of whose latest wishes, uttered at the supper with his disciples in the guest-chamber at Jerusalem was "Do this in remembrance of me." The musical portion of the service was rendered by the Girls' choir and Miss Ernestine Litchfield, soloist.

The minister, Rev. Carl G. Horst, read a beautiful poem entitled "Behind and before" by Frederick L. Hosmer, and continued the same thought in his sermon, urging the members and friends of the church to profit by all the experiences during the past year, to welcome the new year with its new opportunities and possibilities, and to press on toward the goal unto the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

The mid-winter meeting of the New England Associate Alliance will be held in Winchester, Thursday, Jan. 15 at 10.30 A. M. The Rev. U. G. B. Pierce, D. D., of Washington, D. C., chaplain of the U. S. Senate, will be the principal speaker in the afternoon.

The letter from Mrs. L. B. Titus in the Daily Ledger for Friday, January 2, telling of her visit to Mrs. C. L. P. Couchier at the State Hospital for the Insane in Taunton and "appealing to the patriotic men and women of Quincy to demand that this cruel wrong to this aged woman shall be righted before it is too late" should be read by every reader of this column. Our minister, the Rev. Carl G. Horst, visited Mrs. Couchier last Wednesday and found conditions just as described in Mrs. Titus' letter in Friday's Ledger, Jan. 2.

Let every man woman and child, that calls the Wollaston Unitarian Church his or her church-home, tatend at least one of the services on Sunday, Jan. 11.



This bread comes to you in dust-proof wrappers, trade-marked "PETER PARLEY."
ASK YOUR GROCER FOR IT

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

At the Sunday morning service Dr. Sneath, the pastor, spoke upon the lessons we may learn from the ancient customs of the Jews on their New Year's day. He referred to their acts of penitence, reading of the ancient covenant, promises of Jehovah and their obligations, thus making it a day of repentance, faith and consecration. Also their interest in the burnt offerings, the offering of incense and the lighting of the golden candlestick at eventide. The lessons of prayer and of fellowship were emphasized. The beautiful custom of each one saying to his neighbor, "May you be written down in the Book of Jehovah for a Happy New Year" was also recalled. Seven persons were welcomed into the church.

At the Y. P. S. C. E. meeting in the evening the service was led by Mrs. Bessie D. Ducey and took the character of an evangelistic service.

This evening the Y. P. S. C. E. will have a business meeting and social at the parsonage. It will be an "Advertisement Social."

This evening there will be a meeting of the different committees of the church in the auditorium at 7.45 o'clock to consider several vital questions with reference to the new church project. All the men of the parish are invited to be present.

The annual thank-offering meeting of the Auxiliary W. B. M., will be held on Wednesday at 3 o'clock in the home of Mrs. A. A. Lincoln, Lincoln avenue. Miss Isabella Blake of Aintab, Turkey, will give the address.

On Thursday evening at the mid-week service the subject, "What are some of the best things our church can do this year?" will be considered.

The members of the Congregational Men's Club will meet in the vestry on Saturday evening at the call of the president, Chester I. Campbell, to arrange for a minstrel show to be held in the near future in the Wollaston school hall.

The members of the Wollaston Congregational Men's Club will attend service next Sunday morning in a body by invitation of Dr. Sneath.

The annual meeting of the church will be held on January 14. It will be preceded by a supper. The church clerk, Charles F. West, will send out this week the primary ballot for officers and committees.

WOLLASTON METHODIST.

The text of the Sunday morning sermon by the pastor Rev. George M. Bailey was Neh. 6:3. The Old Testament story connected with this passage was first related by the preacher and then he proceeded to apply it in a very practical way to the life of today. He declared among other things that we should be doing something really worth while, and then not allow anything to divert us from our task. What we are doing daily, indicates our conception of life and life values. Nehemiah was doing a "great work;" he knew it and would not neglect or leave it. Life-building is a great task. Few seem to realize it. It will tax all your resources; demand all your energies; take you and God to do it well. It's a "great work" to represent Jesus Christ, at home, in business, in society, etc; no child's play. A great work to teach in Sunday school; no trivial, menial, meaningless task. Shall we come down and allow the work to suffer or to cease? Plenty of invitations to do so. Business, pleasure, social interests, ease, etc., all invite and urge us. We must not yield. The "great work" must be finished. Let us stand to our great task.

The following young people were received into the church in full membership, Allan Stearns, Everett Sutermeister and Miss Lydia Keyes.

The Christmas music was repeated at the evening service and the theme of the sermon was: "The value of choosing the difficult task;" and the text—Num. 13:30, "We are able." Some of the leading thoughts contained in the sermon follows: Man is by nature confident, bold, aggressive. This is finely illustrated by the things children attempt and do. Children are made timid and nerveless by teaching and environment. To lose confidence in one's self, is to lose one of life's primal and most essential elements. Nothing great has ever been done by the timid and faint-hearted.

The reason why most of us never accomplish anything outside an easy routine is because we never dare try anything beyond this. Choose the difficult task always in preference to the easy one. The value of such choice will be: Development, discovery, accomplishment.

Difficulties are opportunities, not limiting factors. Our limitations are not known, therefore our powers are not known. Especially true in realm of mightiest life forces, the moral and spiritual. "We are able" to take possession of our spiritual Canaan. In every right endeavor count God in as your helper, yea make this the basis of your supreme confidence.

PARK AND DOWNS.

At the Park and Downs Congregational church the Sunday morning service was devoted to an informal talk. The message of John the Baptistt o 20 th century hearers. The evening service was on "Courage." The old Romans used the word "Courage" interchangeably with the word "virtue." Courage is a quality of conscience, just as cowardice springs from conscience. A man is easily courageous when he knows his course to be right. There is always fear in wrong-doing. The honest man is not afraid. The cure for cowardice is a purged heart. In high and just purposes there is no cowardice.

To be a brave man one must be a good man. Conscience makes cowards, or heroes of us all. The approval of God's voice alone leads a man to face boldly and unflinchingly anything that may happen to him. Guilt makes cowards and the longer one carries it the heavier it weighs. It must be washed away before emancipation is ours. Christ holds out to us the cleansing promise and the cherished freedom."

HALL PLACE M. E.

"The spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath annointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised."—Luke 4-18. This was the text used by Rev. T. C. Martin at the Sunday morning service of the Hall Place M. E. church.

Mr. George Steward led the Epworth League service at 6.15, on "A song of Prayer, the Morning Watch." A good number were present.

On Tuesday evening the Epworth League will present "The Country School" at the Universalist church, Quincy.

Thursday evening the Brotherhood will meet. The guest of the evening will be Rev. C. H. Raupach, a former pastor.

Prayer meeting and practice for the "Old folks concert" will be held Friday night.

Next Sunday will be observed as "Everybody-go-to-church-Sunday. Extensive plans are being made for this day and it is hoped a large number will be present.

Curious Fish Spearing.

In spite of the march of civilization there remains much that is still primitive in Sicily, and a curious sight at Palermo is to see the fishermen spearing fish in the harbor by the aid of glass bottomed buckets, says the Wide World Magazine. There are many corners of the world where fish are speared, but perhaps the use of the glass bottomed bucket in this connection is to be seen only at Palermo. The fishermen lean far over the side of their boats and hold the bucket on the water with one hand, poking their heads into it as if engaged in the Halloween game of ducking for apples. They hold a spear poised in the free hand and thus await the arrival of their victims, who are sighted through the glass bottom of the bucket, which acts as a kind of telescope.

Important News In Advertisements
By HOLLAND.
THE valuable news of the day is not confined to the news columns. It is also seen in the advertisements. Of course it is important to know what President Wilson is doing, what the latest developments are in China or what baseball club leads the league. But it is also important to know where a bargain in boys' waists, garden hose, breakfast food or straw hats may be found.
These bits of commercial news are among the advertisements. Wise persons look for them and take advantage of them when they are doing their buying. The leading merchants are continually telling you news of their stores, news that is important because it often means a real saving and always means something new and worth while.
Read the advertisements if you seek important news. Read them regularly and always with the thought that back of each advertisement are the reputation and business standing of the merchant. He could not afford to deceive you even if he were so inclined.

HAS ASKED FOR HEARING

Officer Golden Claims Injuries in Performance of Duties

Mayor Stone did not promote a reserve officer to the permanent force Saturday, as was expected, to fill the vacancy caused by the removal of Officer Timothy J. Golden. Mayor Stone intended to do this Saturday morning, but before he had an opportunity, Officer Golden who had been notified a week before of his removal sent a letter asking for a hearing, which under the civil service rules he is entitled to. The main reason for the removal of Officer Golden was because he had become incapacitated for fulfilling the duties of the office.

It is understood that Officer Golden will claim at the hearing that he was incapacitated by reason of injuries received while in the performance of active duty. It was during the clean up of the late train drunks during the term of ex-Mayor Bryant that officer Golden was kicked, while in the performance of quelling a disturbance at the railroad station. This it is claimed eventually caused him to sustain a shock which paralyzed one side, so that he has since been incapacitated from doing active duty. It is reported that at the hearing to which he is entitled that he will claim his incapacity is the result of injuries received at this time and will ask to be retired on a pension.

As it would be impossible for Mayor Stone to give Golden a hearing before laying down the reins of office it will be up to Mayor Miller to give the hearing and pass on the question.

—The "people" have evidently had their way. The combination between the American Telephone Co. and the Western Union is to be broken up, although it was for the manifest advantage of the users of both telephone and telegraph that it should continue But it had to be. One of the great troubles with the Sherman law is that it is too inelastic to permit desirable mergers or combinations. The arrangement which has been made with the Government does not, however, by any manner of means warrant the inference that public ownership of the telephone business will not be pressed for. There are too many cranks at large to make it reasonable to look for anything else.—Banker & Tradesman.

FIRE LOSS $355,000

Remarkable Record For Vienna With Population of 2,093,000

Vienna, Jan. 5.—For a city of 2,135,000 people, extending over an area of 106 square miles, Vienna enjoys a remarkable immunity from serious fires. The total losses for the last year amounted only to $355,000, arising from 1062 fires. In the first half of the same year New York city losses are reported as $5,822,000 from 5455 fires.

Of the Vienna fires only 47 were classed as "large" fires, that is, where two or more lines of hose were brought into play. There were 211 "medium" fires, requiring only one hose.

Carelessness with matches and lights caused 214 of the fires. There were only thirteen known cases of arson.

The total alarms were 3158, for in Vienna the services of the fire department are requisitioned in all kinds of accidents in the streets and buildings, some of them of the most trivial character—a pigeon entangled in the telephone wires, for instance.

ESCAPES DEATH IN SURF

Captain Wilcox Hauled to Safety by Life Savers at Narragansett Pier

Narragansett Pier, R. I., Jan. 5.—Captain A. B. Wilcox of Springfield, was hauled to safety through the heavy surf by the Narragansett Pier life savers just before his little sloop Helen of Bridgeport, Conn., was dashed to the rocks.

Captain Wilcox was alone in the sloop, bound from Newport for New London, when he dropped anchor too near the breakers and began to drag.

Tying the rope which was shot out to him by the life savers under his arms, he was pulled through the breakers. Soon after he reached shore the sloop's cable parted and she was hurled on the rocks.

—Trespassers on railroad tracks are being sent to prison by the Canadian judges, one of whom says "better be in the jail than in the morgue." There are those who may even doubt this dictum. Still, the judges doubtless mean well. If they break up the track walking habit they will save many lives, and and save many people from hideous injuries that make life no longer worth while.

STILL ALARM SUNDAY NOON

Firemen Again Called to Adams Building

The Central station auto chemical and Chief Litchfield were called out on a still alarm at 11.35 Sunday morning for a fire in the Adams building. The fire was under the tin roof of the L over the rear of Cox's drug store and was evidently caused by crossed wires, or rats and matches. Occupants of the first floor of entrance A on Temple street, noticed the odor of smoke for some minutes before the fire was discovered and as the smell grew stronger an investigation was made. Then it was noticed that smoke was coming from beneath the tin roof and a telephone call was sent to the fire station.

The firemen had some difficulty in getting at the seat of the fire and it was necessary to tear up a part of the tin roof. As this was done a sheet of flame shot up. Once the seat of the fire was found it was not long before a chemical stream had subdued it. The loss was not heavy.

FUNERAL OF CHARLES FALLON.

The funeral of Charles G. Fallon, son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Fallon, and brother of Reserve Officer George Fallon, was held from his home, 711 Washington street Saturday. Among the many that attended were young friends of the deceased who was one of the most popular residents of Quincy Point.

A high mass of requiem was celebrated in St. John's church at 9 o'clock by Rev. Fr. John J. Coan. Under the direction of Mrs. Mary McKay Reardon, organist the regular choir rendered the Gregorian chant. They were assisted by Miss Eva Rice, Mrs. Mary Burns King and Dennis S. Sweeney as soloists.

A delegation of officers of the Quincy Police department occupied a pew in the church. Floral remembrances included many massive and set pieces from organizations and friends and were among the most beautiful ever seen at the church. There were also offerings from city officials and clerks at City Hall where Mr. Fallon is employed as night janitor.

Interment was in Mt. Wollaston cemetery. The bearers were George Costello, John and Eugene Cullity, Edward Desmond, John Revenni and Dennis Behan.

CAUGHT AT SHOPLIFTING.

A young Englishman, a resident of this city and an employee at the Fore River shipyard, was compelled to pay for articles stolen in the pharmacy of E. J. Murphy Sunday afternoon by the clerks who detected him shoplifting. He at first declined but under pressure willingly tendered 45 cents, the value of the goods. His description has been given other merchants of the city who have frequently lost small quantities of goods. The man is known in most of the stores because he has cultivated the friendship of the clerks.

After taking a box of cigars and buying a soda he started to leave the store. When asked if he hadn't forgotten something he said no. He was stopped at the door and when searched had a bottle of shaving lotion in his possession. When questioned by the clerks, he answered "I don't want to keep out of your store, but when I come in just watch me and I will be all right."

The clerks and merchants of the city who know him believe that he is a kleptomaniac. His methods are very ordinary and he takes the unmasking quietly. Full information will be furnished the police in hopes that through hi mthey will be able to pick up some clue to the burglars that have been operating in the city during the past year.

INVITATION DANCE.

The Chrysanthemum Club, composed of young ladies who assisted the Quincy Catholic Club at their recent pop concert, held an invitation dancing party in New Colonial hall Saturday evening which was attended by 50 couples. Among the features of the evening was the flower waltz, during which handsome paper chrysanthemums and roses were distributed to the dancers. The hall was decorated in Christmas colors and music was by Wilson's orchestra.

The matrons were Mrs. D. J. Griffin and Mrs. Josephine Dinnegan. The committee included the Misses Sadie and Annie Heaney, Margaret Griffin, Annie and Frances Frohock, Helen, Pauline and Carmel Brogan, Stella Brown, Margaret Sullivan.

FEDERALS GAIN THE ADVANTAGE

Report of Expert United States Army Officers

AMERICANS GIVEN WARNING

State Department Advises Them to Keep Out of Mexico and Not to Resume Industrial Operations—Would Be Taking Lives In Own Hands If They Returned

Washington, Jan. 5.—The state department issued a warning to Americans against the resumption of industrial operations in Mexico.

This is accepted in official circles to mean that John Lind was unable to report any hope for the improvement of conditions in Mexico, at the secret conference with President Wilson on the Chester near Pass Christian.

Such a warning, it is pointed out, would not have been announced without advices from the president.

Dispatches to the war department indicate distinct advantages for the Mexican federals at Ojinaga and Nuevo Laredo. This information is based on the expert observation of United States army officers. This does not sustain, according to the army experts, the theory advanced from Pass Christian that Huerta's army is without hope of ultimate success.

The army officials are disposed to connect very closely the pointed statement made by the state department with the success of the federal arms within the past ten days, and which was obvious before Envoy Lind left Vera Cruz. The trend of the military operations show instead of peace being near at hand, the army officers believe the war will be prolonged and American citizens would take their lives and their investments in their own hands if they went into Mexico.

The war department has ordered a secret investigation of the atrocities perpetrated by Villa and the Carranzanistas in the towns which are being taken and retaken by the contending forces. Colonel Charles Blockson, who is observing the federals at Nuevo Laredo, telegraphed that the federals had a distinct advantage at the close of the firing.

Four officers saw more than thirty dead bodies carried away. A telegram from General Bliss said he had directed Colonel Blockson to report on the atrocities in the fighting as detailed in the newspapers. Another telegram from General Bliss said: "The federals so far hold their own."

This is the point at which the constitutionalists expected they would annihilate Huerta's army and be in control of the northern part of Mexico. General Bliss added that "one thousand men and children, camp followers and refugees, are on our side of the river, awaiting the outcome of the fighting. Immigration officials and the Red Cross are taking charge of them and I am co-operating and lending all possible assistance."

Dispatches from Laredo, Tex., say:

"After a two-day's assault on the federal entrenchment of Nuevo Laredo in a futile attempt to capture that city, the rebel army under General Pablo Genzales, after losing about 600 killed and as many wounded, have retired down the river.

"Latest telephone advices are to the effect that they are twenty-five miles away, and still marching southward in the direction of Matamoras, from whence they came.

Constitutionalist officers who were here stated that the rebels would retire to a point a certain distance down the river and there await the arrival of reinforcements of cavalry and artillery and would then return and make a second attack on Nuevo Laredo.

FEAR CAUSED DEATH

Worcester Girl Never Recovered Consciousness After Auto Accident

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 5.—Miss Anna Wheeler, the 16-year-old daughter of Dr. Charles D. Wheeler, died at the Worcester city hospital. The doctors says she had been literally frightened to death. She had been unconscious for 211½ hours as a result of an auto accident on Christmas day.

Fear, when she saw it was inevitable that a trolley car would strike an auto in which she was riding, caused a blood vessel to break in the girl's brain, the doctors explained.

YOUR PLACE IN THE WORLD.

Fill It Well, For, Though It May Be Small, It Is Important.

It is the privilege of a limited number of mortals to stand in the limelight and be applauded, to have a pathway cleared for their progress and an attentive audience for their highest accent of command or exhortation. Most of us fill humble places. We are not heard of at our birth, nor when we die. We make one more in the crowded thoroughfare. The "hungry generations tread us down." Life's swollen current roars and eddies about the little canoe we are trying to paddle through the rapids and stream. "What is the use?" we ask. And of what use are we? What difference would it make if we gave up the fight? Who would notice our vanishing, and what is one life among so many?

In that mood of discouragement it is to be remembered that each of us has his place which he alone can fill. There are others, no doubt, who can do the same kind of work, but they cannot do our work. History is full of tragedies due to the failure not alone of emperors, but of peasants—not merely of commanding generals, but of privates in the ranks—and the collapse of a great cause has been due to the fact that one inconspicuous man in a small place has thought it made no difference if he ran away.—Philadelphia Ledger.

NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE.

They Display It In an Acute Form In Tomsk, Siberia.

In "Through Siberia—An Empire In the Making," by R. L. Wright and Bassett Digby, the authors tell us that the city of Tomsk has two morning dailies. Any important news that comes over the wires during the day is struck off on handbills, which are sold in the streets as "telegramma." At the time of the Russo-Chinese crisis there came early one morning the startling report that the Russian minister at Peking had been assassinated.

"One of the papers at once rushed a handbill through the press, but before it was distributed came the official denials from St. Petersburg and Peking. In keeping with the best journalistic traditions of the occident, the editor had the denials printed on a second handbill.

"Then he called all the newsboys into the inner office, explained the situation with the utmost candor, handed out supplies of each bill to the eager lads and told them to run the streets crying 'Horrible Assassination' until the 'Horrible Assassinations' had sold out. Then, after resting up for ten minutes, they were to open a chorus of 'Startling Sequel' and proceed to sell out all their 'Startling Sequels.' And they did."

Knew What to Do.

Speaking of rare presence of mind recently recalled to ex-President Taft the case of a handsome young woman of his acquaintance. She had gone to the railway station to meet a man friend of the family, and when he debarked from the train the young man lost his head and impulsively kissed her. The girl thought it the part of prudence to tell her mother of the affair, upon which the latter was simply horrified.

"You don't mean to tell me that he had the impudence to kiss you?" she cried. "And to think of the crowd at the station! Why, my dear, what did you do in such an embarrassing situation?"

"Why, mother, I just kissed him back, of course," coolly replied the young woman. "I wanted to give all those people the impression that we were relatives."—New York Tribune.

Best Fowl For the Table.

The best table fowl is one that has the heaviest weight of meat on those parts of the body which are favorite cuts. The breast and thighs must be heavy in a good table fowl in proportion to the remainder of the body. In order to have thick breast meat and big thighs these muscles must be used by the fowl. In other words, the flier and scratcher will prove to be the best table fowl, for their lively habits give the muscles of the legs and breast work that renders them firm and fine instead of leaving them flabby and full of loose tissue in the shape of fat.—Home and Farm.

He Knew How He Got It.

"That large lump running across the back of your head," said the phrenologist, "means that you are inclined to be curious, even to the point of recklessness."

"I know it," said the man who was consulting him. "I got that bump by sticking my head into the dumb waiter shaft to see if the waiter was going up, and it was coming down."

Quite Natural.

"Judge," said the forewoman of the jury of ladies, "we want to speak to you about that sealed verdict we just rendered."

"Well, ladies?"

"Can we unseal it and add a postscript?"—Washington Herald.

Why Read Aloud?

A modern moralist regrets that nobody nowadays reads aloud.

But is that the main regret?

Isn't the lack of listeners much more serious?—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

BODY FOUND AT CONEY ISLAND

Remains of Jessie E. McCann Recovered From Ocean

FEATURES NOT RECOGNIZABLE

Young New York Settlement Worker Had Been Missing a Month From Her Home—Father and Mother Collapse When Shown Clothing of Long Missing Daughter

New York, Jan. 5.—Miss Jessie Evelyn McCann's body was washed ashore on the sands at Coney Island by the hurricane which swept the shore all night.

Her battered features were not recognizable. Identification was possible only by a signet ring bearing her initials, her shoes and several stick pins in her clothing.

Her father and mother collapsed in their home, at 425 East Twenty-Third street, Flatbush, when the clothing of the long missing school teacher and settlement worker was exposed to them. They made a positive identification from these effects.

The body of the young woman, who was 23 years old, was found stretched out on the water's edge almost directly in front of the shelter house near the municipal baths.

The day following her disappearance she was last seen alive in Coney Island park just about 200 feet from this spot. The police contended that the young woman ended her life by leaping into the ocean.

The finding of the body clears the mystery surrounding the disappearance of the young woman on Dec. 4, when she left home in Flatbush, just one month ago, to walk to the rooms of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, in Sterling place, near Vanderbilt avenue, Brooklyn, where she was acting as a teacher.

Despite the offer of a reward of $1000 by her father, Robert G. McCann, not a suggestion of a trace of her was obtained except from a nurse who saw the young woman at Coney Island the day she disappeared and also on the following morning.

George Neusse, a watchman in the employ of the park department, and assigned in the park at Coney Island and along the beach, discovered the body near the water's edge while he was walking along in front of the shelter house, investigating the damage done to the city's property by the storm which swept the coast.

It developed a few days after her disappearance became known that she had a secret fiance, Wendell Squires, a student in Columbia university. Squires aided the police in the search, but he was unable to obtain any trace of her. The young woman did not notify him of her intention of going away.

The father virtually abandoned hope of ever seeing the girl alive when he received information from Mrs. William Prager, who had been stopping at the Shelburne hotel, at Coney Island, that her nurse, Miss Loretta Dore, had seen Miss McCann in the Coney Island park just across the way from the hotel Thursday evening of the day she disappeared.

CANAL NEARLY READY

Vessels May Pass Through Within Seventy Days

Washington, Jan. 5.—The Panama canal probably will be in condition to pass vessels all the way across the isthmus within the next seventy days. This is the judgment of a high canal official, who heretofore has refused to make any definite promise in regard to the completion of the canal and who even now declines to fix the date more definitely.

The only remaining obstacles to prevent the passage of vessels are the Cucaracha slide, which blocks the cut at Culebra, and the few additional slides of relatively minor importance in the same locality. The dredging is progressing very satisfactorily on these slides and as soon as a channel of sufficient width and depth is established it will be possible to pass vessels through from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

TOWN FUNDS SHORTAGE

Rowe Voters Order Warrant For Arrest of Bradley C. Newell

Rowe, Mass., Jan. 5.—A special town meeting was held here and received the report of the selectmen upon the examination of the books of the missing town treasurer, Bradley C. Newell.

The selectmen reported that a shortage of $1100 existed which had been made made good by the bonding company which held the treasurer's bond. The town voted to instruct the selectmen to swear out a warrant for the arrest of the missing treasurer, who was last heard from in Maine in October.

CRYING FOR HELP

Lots of It in Quincy But Daily Growing Less.

The kidneys often cry for help.
Not another organ in the whole body more delicately constructed;
Not one more important to health.
The kidneys are the filters of the blood.
When they fail the blood becomes foul and poisonous.
There can be no health where there is poisoned blood.
Backache is one of the frequent indications of kidney trouble.
It is often the kidney's cry for help. Heed it.

The Amazons

A Story Showing How a Story Came to Be Written

By EMMA BLAKE

"What's this, Cartwright?" asked Mr. Chandler, managing partner of the firm of Chandler Bros., publishers. "This manuscript comes from Haythorn Hayes. I didn't understand when he went away that he had an unpublished novel finished."

"Nor I, sir. Nevertheless this manuscript has been sent us by express, and a letter has come by mail with regard to it."

Mr Cartwright handed his employer a type written letter, which read as follows:

Messrs. Chandler Bros.:

Dear Sirs—On the eve of my departure I find a manuscript, which I send you by express. It was written some time ago and laid aside until I should have made a market for it by other work more likely to be accepted by a wider though perhaps lower grade of readers. I have no time to enter further into particulars. Perhaps you will use it during my absence. Very truly yours. H. H.

Mr. Chandler read the letter and looked puzzled.

"Do you think there is anything wrong about it?" asked Cartwright.

"I don't know that there is. If on either the manuscript or the letter there was a scrap of Hayes' writing I would like it better. However, you may have the story read and if there is a marked difference between its style and that of his other works let me know."

The reader reported that there was a considerable difference between the style of "The Aeronaut" and that of Mr. Hayes' other works. There was a crudity in it that indicated he had written it before he had had much practice.

Chandler Bros. were in a quandary. They had published two novels for Haythorn Hayes under his initials, "H. H.," with very good success. They had advised him to print his full name on the title page, and he had ignored their advice to his sorrow, for with success came a desire to be known as a successful author. But since "H. H." was well known to the public and Haythorn Hayes was not, a novel by the latter would not reap the benefit of the advertising of one by the former. He was therefore obliged to continue to publish under his initials.

"There's no hope of reaching Hayes," said the head of the publishing firm. "He has gone up the Amazon river to find the legendary amazon women, who he believes have or have had a real existence, with a view to writing a story about them. If we don't publish this "Aeronaut" we'll doubtless offend him, and when he returns some rival firm will get his Amazon novel. Put the book in press and advertise largely that it is forthcoming. We must make sure of the story he is after, and the best way to do so is to put him under obligations to us by booming this 'Aeronaut' story."

"The Aeronaut" was offered to the publishers late in the autumn and was rushed through for the spring trade. A paragraph in a literary journal had announced Mr. Hayes' departure with a view to getting material for a unique novel, and his publishers occasionally jogged the memory of the public by an item as to the singular possibilities of such a theme.

However, when "The Aeronaut" appeared it very soon became manifest that it must stand on its own merits. Being unlike Mr. Hayes' other works, it did not appeal especially to his admirers. For some time it looked as though it would be a failure. Those dealers who had bought copies with the privilege of returning those that were unsold began to send them in by the hundreds.

"Never mind," said Mr. Chandler, "we'll make it all up on the Amazon deal."

But one day there came a call for more copies of "The Aeronaut" by a prominent dealer, which was followed by new orders from other booksellers. There was evidently a call for the work on the part of the public. It was not long before the fact was recognized that the sale of the book had taken a start. The start became a demand and the demand became a clamor from the dealers to supply the public. The sale of "The Aeronaut" far surpassed that of any of Mr. Hayes' other works and increased his reputation tenfold.

Chandler Bros. thought it a good opportunity to make advertising capital of the fact that no one knew who "H. H." was. They therefore had an item inserted in a newspaper stating that he was a prominent playwright named Henry Harbeson. Mr. Harbeson denied the change. Another item named another man, and it was not long before half a dozen prominent persons were trying to put off an honor that did not belong to them. Chandler Bros. chuckled and refused positively to give the name of the real author.

Meanwhile Haythorn Hayes was hunting for the amazons in the interior of South America. Nothing came from him for a year, at the end of which time he reappeared at the mouth of the river from the Amazonas province of Brazil and reported that he had found traces of the amazon women. But he would give no particulars. Chandler Bros. made as much of the news as possible and eagerly looked for his return to his home.

One morning he appeared, bronzed by the equatorial sun, in the office of his publishers.

"Well, Hayes," said Mr. Chandler when the greetings were over, "we've been making hay while the sun wasn't shining. Ha, ha! While you have been lost in Brazil we have been reaping a big profit for you out of your 'Aeronaut.'"

"That's a very good joke," replied the author, "but I don't know what you mean by 'The Aeronaut.'"

"Why, the novel you sent us at the time you were leaving. We have a check for some $12,000 for you for royalties."

"I sent you no manuscript as I was leaving, and I have never heard of a novel called 'The Aeronaut.'"

The two Chandler brothers and the junior partner, who were standing about smiling benignly upon the famous author, suddenly lowered the corners of their mouths and looked at each other.

"Nonsense, old fellow," said Chandler senior. "Your modesty has always stood in your way. You've written the biggest thing of the year. I hope you're not going to deny it."

Nevertheless Mr. Hayes maintained his denial and finally got the story of how the manuscript came to the firm, its doubts about the identity of the author and other information. He called for a copy of the book, took it home with him and did not pause after beginning till he had finished it. The next day he returned to the publishing house, was closeted with the head of the firm and said:

"Mr. Chandler, it does not reflect much credit on your house that you did not realize on reading this work that I had not the ability to write it. I haven't either the imagination or the ingenuity. Moreover, you should have known that it was not written by a man and that it was written by a woman. Some one endeavored to get it through by using my initials and succeeded, with a result far above anything I am capable of attaining. But what surprises me is that whoever the impostor may be she has not attempted to reap the pecuniary reward arising through her imposture."

"Wait," replied Mr. Chandler. "That will come in time."

After a prolonged interview Mr. Hayes departed, having obtained a promise that if the impostor were discovered he should be notified before any action in the premises was taken.

A month later the author received a telephone message that if he would call at the office of Chandler Bros. he would hear something of the imposture that had been practiced on him and on the firm. On arrival Mr. Chandler said to him:

"A lady named Helen Herbert some time ago published through us a little book of poems, on which we lost some money. Since then we have heard nothing from her till this morning, when we received this note."

He handed the note to Mr. Hayes, who read:

Messrs. Chandler Bros.:

Dear Sirs—On my departure for Africa about a year ago, where I have been with a view to investigating whether the pygmies there are the same as mentioned by the historian Herodotus, I sent you the manuscript of a novel called "The Aeronaut," hoping that you might use it during my absence. On a railway train I purchased a copy of the book published with your imprint. Why did you put my initials on the title page instead of giving my full name? I hear the story has been very generally read, and if you have anything in the way of royalties to my credit I should be obliged if you would send me a check. Cordially yours,

HELEN HERBERT.

Mr. Hayes looked up at Mr. Chandler and met that gentleman's eyes fixed on him with a singular expression.

"This beats any theme I ever worked up," remarked the author.

"It's the old story of truth being stranger than fiction."

"And we stupids could only interpret the mystery as an imposture."

"No imposture at all, nothing but a commonplace occurrence."

"If you are about to send the lady a check I beg you to make me your messenger."

"Certainly."

Mr. Chandler tapped a bell and called for a check for the balance of Miss Herbert's account. It amounted to more than $14,000. Mr. Hayes took it and later called at the address the authoress had given. When she appeared Mr. Hayes found her to be about twenty-six years old, comely and with an intellectual head.

"I have a check for you for royalties on your 'Aeronaut,'" he said, handing it to her, "from Chandler Bros. They published it at your request, signed 'H. H.,' thinking I had written it. Had your name instead of my initials been attached to it, it would not have been published and might not have got the start required to make it a success."

"That being the case," said the lady, "this money belongs to you. I will make it payable to your order."

"It does not belong to me, for I could not have written the story. It is beyond my capabilities."

"But if the story was accepted on account of my initials being mistaken for yours and got its start from the same cause I have been banking on your capital."

"And I doubtless have received much credit from your novel. It seems to me that we are both fortunate through an error. The immediate benefit, the cash for royalties, is yours; mine will come later."

He handed her the check, and the first part of the partnership was closed.

This was the beginning of an acquaintance that produced that remarkable collaboration "The Amazon," a novel requiring the delicate touch of a woman, while the local color was supplied by one who had visited the wild country in which the scene of the story was laid. It was followed by "The Pygmies," which met with equal success.

TERRIFIC GALE RAGES ON COAST

Has Paralyzed All Foreign and Coastwise Shipping

TREMENDOUS SEAS RUNNING

Big Fleet of Passenger and Freight Ships Riding at Anchor Awaiting Chance to Put to Sea—Steamers In Long Island Sound Forced to Seek Shelter

Boston, Jan. 5.—The northeast gale and snow storm which tore along the coast at times to the tune of over seventy miles an hour, paralyzed all foreign and coastwise shipping at this port, as has not been the case in years.

For the firts time since the memorable Christmas blizzard of 1909, when the five-masted schooner Davis Palmer was sunk in Broad sound with the loss of twelve men, only three vessels of any description entered Boston harbor yesterday. These were the steamers Boston from Yarmouth, N. S., with forty-four passengers on board, and the Ontario and Suffolk from Norfolk. The officers of all of them reported terrific seas running outside.

A big fleet of passenger and freight steamships from coastwise points were anchored at various sheltered spots from Fire Island to Cape Cod, and so terrific was the storm in Massachusetts bay that a foreign steamship, supposed to be the Norwegian freighter Ranvik from Algiers for Boston, was compelled to run for shelter into Provincetown. Another big transatlantic freighter, the Polerie, from Yokohama, was among the vessels held outside all day, until conditions made it safe for her skipper to try to get into port.

The Merchants and Miners liner Lexington, due from Philadelphia, was held up in Delaware bay and the Metropolitan liner H. F. Dimock, from New York, was unable to get out of New York bay. The Governor Dingley, which was to be here from Portland yesterday morning, was held at Portland all Saturady night and Sunday.

Not a vessel got away to sea from Boston. The British steamship Melford Hall, which left her berth for New York to finish discharging her Calcutta cargo, got only as far as Nantasket roads. There the vessel took shelter under the lee of Fort Warren. The H. M. Whitney was to have left for New York Saturday night, but was held over.

Sound Steamers Forced to Shelter

New London, Conn., Jan. 5.—Steamers on the Providence, Fall River and other lines, as well as smaller craft, were forced to seek shelter in the harbor here as the result of a gale that blew more than fifty miles an hour.

The steamer Priscilla of the Fall River line from New York to Providence unloaded 500 passengers here, who made the remainder of the trip by rail. Other steamers that put in were the Tennessee, the Georgia and the New Hampshire. Many schooners and barges are in the harbor A heavy sea is running.

Shipping Hugs Port

Portland, Me., Jan. 5.—Although snowing to the south of here, it rained almost constantly in Portland, but never heavily. The highest velocity reached by the wind was twenty-nine miles an hour.

Shipmasters had been notified of the approaching storm and all shipping, including the New York boat, remained in port. At the Cape Elizabeth lifesaving station it was reported that no shipping had been seen.

KILLED BY FUMES

Blind Man Asphyxiated While Repairing an Automobile

Attleboro, Mass., Jan. 5.—Arthur F. Millette, a blind man, was asphyxiated by fumes of gasolene from an automobile owned by his brother-in-law, Wilfred Wilmarth, near his home on Bliss avenue, Hebronville. He was found unconscious with his head resting on the floor of the machine, and died an hour later in his home.

Wilmarth carried his brother-in-law into the house. Dr. R. T. Kent was summoned, and when he arrived pronounced the man dead. Medical Examiner C. S. Holden examined the body and stated that death was due to asphyxiation. Millette had a weak heart.

Texas Negro Lynched

Jefferson, Tex., Jan. 5.—Fifteen masked men took Dave Lee, a negro, from the Marion county jail here, where he was held charged with wounding Matt Taylor, a constable, and hanged him to a bridge.

Turkish War Minister Quits

Constantinople, Jan. 5.—Izzet Pasha, Turkish minister of war, resigned. It was reported that Enver Bey, leader of the Young Turks, would succeed him.

To Pay Support of Unborn Child

Taunton, Mass., Jan. 5.—Judge Alger of the probate court ordered Christopher Welch of Fall River to pay $6 per week to his wife for the support of a child yet unborn.

TOLD OF FORMER LIFE

Extraordinary Knowledge Possessed by Late Mme. Raynaud

Paris, Jan. 5.—An extraordinary knowledge of a former life is claimed to have been possessed by Mme. Laure Raynaud, whose death has just occurred in Paris.

Mme. Raynaud, who was 45 years old, was a nurse in a private hospital in Passy. A few years ago, she told a doctor that she knew she had died at the age of 19 many years before. She described the town and the house in which she had lived. It was a foreign town, although Mme. Raynaud had never been out of France.

She gave many details, among others that she died in 1840, and that her death was due to consumption.

Without telling her where she was going the doctor took her to Siena, Italy. The first day she arrived she walked straight to the house she had described and from there to the church. There she went to the tombstone of a girl who died of consumption in 1840, at the age of 19, and fell on it in a fainting fit.

ROOSEVELT'S NIECE DEAD

Succumbs to Typhoid Fever Contracted In South America

New York, Jan. 5.—Miss Lucy M. Roosevelt, who is the niece of Colonel Roosevelt and who accompanied him on the first part of his trip to South America, died of typoid at the home of her father, W. E. Roosevelt, 804 Fifth avenue.

Miss Roosevelt, who was an athletic young woman, made a short trip up the River Paraguay with the colonel, and it is thought that she caught the fever at that time.

Miss Roosevelt was taken ill while still at sea, and, though she rallied a little on reaching land, there was from the first small hope of recovery.

"HIKERS" BRAVE SLEET AND COLD

Suffrage Army Showing Gameness in March to Albany

Newburg, N. Y., Jan. 5.—Footsore but still determined and showing great gameness, General Rosalie Jones and her suffrage army made a late start from here for Kingston, thirty miles away.

It seemed to be a physical impossibility for them to make the distance. The weather has been cold and stormy, the roads are in a frightful condition and walking is a hardship. The general and her followers did not reach this city until two hours before midnight.

General Jones and her followers, who have dwindled to seven, reached the West Point military academy, after a hard march and travelled seven miles to Cornwall in the face of a sleet storm. en admired the women for their courage. It required great hardihood and strength to keep up the hike in the weather the experienced and over the mountainous roads they had to traverse.

HAS DELICATE TOUCH

London Expert Sorts Empty Bottles by Sense of Feeling Alone

London, Jan. 5.—One of London's queer trades is that of empty bottle sorting at the London Bottle exchange, off Blackfriars road. These bottles have been salvaged from dust bins, cellars, the holds of ships and wherever bottles go astray.

Every year at least 2,000,000 bottles, after many wanderings, find their way to the bottle exchange. They are sorted and returned to their rightful owners, who pay an annual subscription as well as a few shillings a gross for returned bottles.

Reared on the bottle, as it were, a sorter at the exchange must be a man of keen eye and delicate touch. All that he has to guide him in thousands of cases is the embossed name on the glass, and swiftly, unerringly and with almost uncanny deftness he picks out a bottle which has wandered from Glasgow and puts it in the case bound for the north.

MOTHER FREES SON

Pays $4000 Bill For Boston Boy and He Is Released

New York, Jan. 5.—Harold V. Boyd, the wealthy young Bostonian, who was arrested here two weeks ago on an attachment obtained by Allen C. Woodside of Boston on the ground that he attempted to leave the country without paying an automobile bill of $4000, was discharged after a settlement had been affected with Woodside by Boyd's mother.

Boyd was on a steamer bound for South America when a deputy sheriff arrested him.

King Decorates Volturno Rescuer

Brussels, Jan. 5.—King Albert has decorated Captain Paul Kreibohm of the steamship Krconland with the Order of the Crown for bravery in rescuing passengers of the steamer Volturno, burned in mid-ocean last October.

That proposed New York skyscraper 901 feet high would outsoar the Woolworth building, but would still be topped by the Eiffel tower in Paris. While going skyward why not go for a world record and be done with it, temporarily at least?

Advertisers Ask Only A Fair Trial

By HOLLAND.

ADVERTISERS do not attempt to make you agree to buy their goods for the rest of your life. They only want you to give their wares a trial, to subject them to actual test by actual use, and then be guided by experience.

Could anything prove more clearly that the advertiser has supreme confidence in his product, that he is absolutely certain that it will please you, that it will be all he says it is?

It would indeed be foolish to spend money to induce you to buy an article that would prove unsatisfactory and would result in your telling friends and neighbors of your experience. Advertisers spend millions making their trademarks known, and in order to make their trademarks valuable they must stand for a certain standard of worth. Having made their trademarks known, manufacturers exert every effort to keep the goods up to the expected high grade.

TRAGEDY AT WEYMOUTH

E. C. Loud Kills His Wife and Attempts Suicide

Eugene C. Loud ,aged 34 years, of South Weymouth, employed as a foreman in a shoe factory, is at the Quincy City Hospital, in a serious condition with a slashed throat, and with but little hopes of his recovery.

Loud and his wife Florence have not been living happily together for some time and it was but a few weeks ago that Mrs. Loud had her husband in the Quincy court for non support and charged with assaulting her. It was on Nov. 10, that Loud was in court and was placed on probation in the hopes that the couple might patch up their differences and live together again. They had made up and had been living together about ten days.

Late Sunday afternoon seized with a sudden frenzy, Loud seized his razor and slashed the throat of his wife Florence, aged 32 years, and then attempted to end his own life. Mrs. Loud ran screaming from the house, the blood pouring from the cut in her throat, but had not gone far before she fell exhausted on the lawn. Three children saw their mother, and the eldest child, Weston, aged 11 years, rushed into the house of Frank E. Loud, their nearest neighbor, saying, "Father has cut mother's throat."

Mr. Loud rushed out and was joined by George C. Torrey, another neighbor who had seen the woman fall. She was carried to Mr. Torrey's house and physicians called.

Doctors Mayberry, Granger, Emerson and Tirrell responded, but the woman was too far gone. The physicians worked over her for an hour, without avail when she died. Before she expired she recovered enough to state that her husband had cut her throat.

In the meantime neighbors had found Loud stretched on the floor of his home with his head resting against the sink. A trail of blood showed that he had gone to his chamber after cutting his wife's throat and standing in front of a mirror had cut his own throat and had then staggered down stairs.

The physicians worked over Loud, but his condition was so serious that he was removed to the City Hospital in Quincy.

Chief Butler of the Weymouth police with Officers Conant and Ford soon arrived on the scene and made an investigation.

Besides the oldest son, Weston, the two younger children, Gwendolyn, aged 4 years, and Emerson, aged 8 months, were in the house, but it is not thought they saw any of the trouble. Both Mr. and Mrs. Loud are natives of South Weymouth and were married about 13 years ago.

FREDERICK A. SMITH.

Frederick A. Smith, a well known resident of Wollaston, died Sunday at his home 747 Hancock street, aged about 68 years. Mr. Smith was born in Boston and was a brother of Mrs. E. H. Bradford, wife of the well known Back Bay physician. During his younger years he was connected with the Boston post office but was retired a number of years ago. He was never married but resided with his sister Miss Addie Smith. He was a charter member of Wollaston Masonic lodge. His funeral will be held Tuesday from his late home.

Contrary to general expectations Mayor Miller did not make any appointments to the various city offices.

The meeting of the new City Council was unique in one respect as it was probably the first time in the history of the City Government of Quincy that it has not been necessary to introduce at the first meeting of the year an order authorizing the City Treasurer to borrow money in anticipation of taxes. This year it is found that there is a cash balance on hand in the City Treasurer's office on January 1, of $145,000, which is enough to take care of the first temporary note, of $75,000 which comes due on Feb. 11, which leaves $70,000 for current expenses, in addition to what taxes and water rates may be collected in the mean time. It is probable however that a temporary loan order will soon be necessary.

In the list of constables appointed by Mayor it is noticed that the name of Charles H. Johnson who was one of Mayor Millers opponents at the recent election was not appointed, although Mr. Johnson has received such an appointment for many years and does a large constable business.

TREASURER PAID FORFEIT

Got Married and Had to Serve a Supper

The Marrinot Association of Quincy observed its fourth anniversary at the home of its treasurer, H. G. Kjellander, 60 Bennington street on Saturday. A supper served by the hostess was first on the program and the number that seemed to be enjoyed the most. The host is the first member of the association to marry, the supper serving as a forfeit for his act. After the supper the members were called to order by Vice President Berger Ellison and the business of the association transacted. The report showed that the association has passed through a very successful year and plans were made for the coming year.

President J. Kellander who has been located in North Carolina for the past three years was present and made a speech. All members were present with the exception of two, C O. and E. W. Gelotte who are sojourning in Texas. William Gelotte was the honorary guest and delivered a very interesting address. President J. Kjellander leaves for North Carolina this week and Vice President B. Ellison, becomes acting president during his absence.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—J. Kjellander.
Vice President—B. Ellison.
Second Vice President—C. O. Gellotte.
Secretary—E. Carlmark.
Assistant Secretary—E. W. Gellotte
2nd Assistant Secretary—H. Carlson.
Treasurer—H. G. Kjellander.
Assistant Treasurer—R. Carlmark.
Auditor—B. V. Kjellander.
Assistant Auditor—A. L. Olson.

Migrating Birds.

During many of the nights in September the inhabitants of the island of Helgoland are astir with big lanterns and a kind of enormous butterfly net, the former to attract and dazzle the migrating birds when they come to earth to rest, and the latter to secure them. Mr. Seebohm, the great authority on bird migration, states that he has known as many as 15,000 skylarks to be caught on the island in a single night. The migrating birds are always interesting to the ships that ply across the North sea and the Baltic. In September they settle on yard arm or on deck, rather tired, and the seamen catch flies and collect them into receptacles for the benefit of the birds.

Trial by Jury.

The establishment of the trial by jury runs back even prior to the time of Alfred the Great. He is said to have organized juries of twelve men as now in practice, but even earlier six Welsh and six Anglo-Saxon freemen acted as a jury where there was a dispute between Welsh and Saxons.

MAYOR MILLER'S ADDRESS

should have that thorough discipline you see in a company of soldiers. Today we are devold of all discipline practically in that department.

Our Fire department needs a great many things and some things done in that department are of the most extravagant nature. Take for instance the case of a young man who lives in the extreme end of the city running a $3,500 piece of fire apparatus home to his dinner, at the rate of 40 miles per hour and risking the safety of the citizens.

THIS MUST BE STOPPED.

It will go no further. When I drew a salary equal to that of this young man, I carried my dinner in a tin pail and my employer was not anxious to know whether I had any or not.

Joy riding in city automobiles must stop right straight off. Applause.

The running of city automobiles to South Hanson in order to trade roosters must stop, and I propose to know where the machines are at night and who are using them.

I shall try that all departments are put in the position a business man would like to see them in.

PROUD OF SCHOOLS.

Our School department always comes out inside of the appropriation. Our schools are in excellent condition and we feel proud of them, and are ready to assist them.

One of the most important things that will come before us this year is an addition to the Houghs Neck schoolhouse. When dedicated the people of that district promised that it would be filled inside of two years. They have filled it, and it is now overcrowded. Some of the rooms have 70 pupils where the room was intended for 40, and when the fall term begins next year conditions will be worse.

It is necessary that the council make provision to double the size of the building at the earliest possible moment. It is so designed that it can be done without great expense. All its doors and windows were arranged so that all that is necessary is to extend the walls and the cost will not exceed $25,000 at the utmost.

I recommend the widening of Hancock street. It is in bad condition for a city the size of Quincy. The principal street coming into our city is looked upon as almost a disgrace. Some three years ago land was purchased that the street could be widened, but it has not been done, and if it is possible, and we can see our way clear to do it, it should be widened this year. It will improve our city and enhance the property values on the street.

Within the past three weeks I inspected the bridge from Houghs Neck to Rock Island. From its looks I should say it was built in 1776.

IT IS ANTIQUATED.

and I never saw one quite so narrow. Rock Island has built up quickly and has nice bungalows, but at high tide there is no way to get to Houghs Neck. Children get to school by going about one and one half miles. It has been estimated that about $7000 would cover the cost of erection of a bridge here, but I think one could be built for half that money that would be satisfactory to all.

It is something like a street for which $3500 was appropriated last summer, that was built by contract for $1500. I believe a bridge with suitable approaches could be construction therefore from three to four thousand dollars.

If you have any idea the bridge is not needed, I beg of you to visit that locality and see for yourself if you would care to live on that side stream and have to put up with such inconveniences. Our people are not used to it, and many of the residents came from other places and are not used to it.

I shall make my inaugural in piece meal. When I see a thing is needed I will call it to your attention, and I hope and feel the Council and I will get on just like chickens and an old hen in the nest. Applause.

PASTIME CLUB.

The Pastime Club attended the annual dance of the "Linger Longer Girls" held at Grand Army hall, Rockland, Jan. 2. The trip was made by autos. Luncheon was served after the dance and a very enjoyable evening was spent by all.

The club held its semimonthly meeting at its rooms on Temple street Sunday afternoon. Two new members being voted into the club. An entertainment committee was nominated to take charge of the social functions of the club for six months. The committee consists of the following: Sherman D. Hayden, Reginald K. Randall, Allan Eaton, Harold Smith, Morton H. Currie and Walter Allicon.

CLEVER WORK BY POLICE

Arrest Five Who Probably Know About Hen Raids

The gang which has been making raids on hen houses in the Point district was probably cleaned up by the police between 2 and 3 o'clock this morning, when five men were placed under arrest as suspicious characters and against whom later warrants were issued in connection with the larceny of hens.

Officers Doran and Malone were detailed by Chief Burrell, Sunday night, to special duty in connection with the hen thieves. It was about 1.55 when near Scammells shop on Quincy avenue two men were seen coming from the direction of Faxon park. They were promptly held up by the officers. The men gave evasive answers to the officer's questions, and Officer Malone placing his hand behind one of the men found a revolver in his pocket. They were taken to the police station and searched.

On one of the men, who gave the name of Matti DiCelles, aged 23 years of Medford street, Boston, was found a revolver, while on the second man who gave the name of Nicola DiCelles of the same address, was found a razor. On one of the men was also found a letter directed to 142 Sumner street.

Chief Burrell was called on the telephone, and the patrol was dispatched to the scene, picking up the chief on the way.

At the house, 142 Sumner street, the occupants were found in bed, but on the back steps was found a bag with a dead hen, not yet cold and other hens were found on the premises. The police entered and placed the three occupants under arrest.

They gave their names as Mike Roberts, Angelo Defro and Dominico Belefour. Evidence that they had been in the hen business was also found on the premises. The men were arraigned in court for the larceny of hens from Danforth Arnold and other parties, while the two men arrested by Officers Malone and Doran were also arraigned on complaints for carrying concealed weapons. The cases all went over until Thursday for hearing.

FIRE AT NEPONSET.

There was a spectacular blaze Saturday evening about 7 o'clock at the A. T. Stearns Lumber Company, caused by an explosion in the shaving receptacle.

CITY OFFICIALS AT LOVE FEAST

Dinner of City Council of 1913 a Happy Reunion for Many

Mayor Miller and Ex-Mayor Stone Among Speakers

Corporation, was the general theme of all the speakers at the annual Inauguration Day banquet Monday night at the American house, Boston or as it might fittingly be called the annual reunion of City Councils and City Officials of the present and of past years. It was more like a large family gathering, the differences of the election forgotten and all ready to work for those things that will benefit the city which they call their home.

There were nearly seventy who gathered about the tables in the crystal dining room, the tables being laid in the form of a horseshoe, an emblem of good luck. That Mayor Miller will have the support of all present and that all will co-operate for the betterment of the city seems assured.

TOASTMASTER WHITON.

President of the City Council, Joseph L. Whiton, the toastmaster, occupied the seat of honor at the head table, flanked on the right by Mayor Miller, and on the left by ex-Mayor Stone. Then there was City Solicitor McAnarney, ex-President Ralph W. Hobbs, Senator elect Langelier, Representatives elect Sullivan and Sandberg, Charles W. Bailey, and Charles A. Ross of the banquet committee, ex-City Solicitor and ex-Representative William R. Thomas, ex-Councilman and ex-Representative Peter T. Falon, while scattered along the tables were City Engineer Sargent, Commissioner Tupper, City Auditor Fairbanks, Clerk of Council Magee, Chief Engineer Litchfield, City Clerk Crane, Dock Commissioner Crane, Assessors Mitchell and Stocker, Tax Collector Sandberg, Deputy Collector Curtis, Sealer of Weights and Measurers Cantfill, City Physician Ash, Chairman Teasdale and James Thomas of the Board of Health, Inspector of Buildings Parker, Inspector of Milk Daniel Scouler, John L. Hamilton, president of the Board of Trade, and a member of the Board of Managers of Public Burial Places, and Edward O. Woodward of the same board, ex-Mayor John O. Hall and ex-Assessor John A. Duggan.

COUNCILMEN—EX-COUNCILMEN

Among the ex-Councilmen noticed were William A. Carey, Edward F. Parlee, John R. S. Ross, Arthur W. Load, George Gauthier, James H. Cunningham and George A. Bolster, Fred F. Green and Herbert S. Parker.

Of the present City Council those present aside from those mentioned above were Councilmen Barker, Barrows, Beeman, Carlson, Corcoran, Craig, Ericson, Gelotte, Gilliatt, Griffin, Hadlock, Little, Nelson, O'Dowd, Richards, Thompson and Williams.

Then there was Temple A. Winsloe, Henry Miller, Tupper Miller and Byron Miller, three of the Mayors sons, Channing T. Furnald, William G. Spargo, T. J. Collins and others.

MUSIC A FEATURE.

Provost's orchestra furnished music during the banquet, and their numbers were almost continuous. Along toward the latter part of the banquet they played all the popular airs, including "Sweet Adeline" the song made famous by Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston. The "Little General," as he is called, was not present to lead the chorus in this selection, but Bobbie Craig ably filled the bill.

HON. JOHN L. MILLER.
Quincy's New Mayor.

Then there were other familiar airs, yet through all there was a touch of sadness as it was remembered that on previous occasions of this kind it was ex-Councilman Moir who led the singing and that since the last gathering he had passed to the great beyond. Reference to Mr. Moir was made by several speakers and several paid tribute to ex-Mayor William T. Shea, who had also recently joined the great majority.

GOOD MENU.

The dinner was an excellent one. The menu was calculated to please the most exacting and the service was excellent. Before giving the menu however it might not be out of place to add that the pretty carnations that ornamented the coat lapels, were sent to City Hall during the afternoon, for the occasion by Perry Green. The menu:

Olives Radishes

ALL FOR GOOD TIME.

The dinner over and cigars lighted, President Whiton rapped for order and everybody settled back to enjoy the feast of reason. In opening President Whiton said that he was glad to welcome all and hoped that they were having a good time. That is what we are here for. There may be some things said, but he hoped that no one would take offense or take it as personal, but with the spirit of good fellowship. Two familiar faces are missing ex-Mayor Shea and ex-Councilman Moir, and no one more deeply regretted their absence than he. The first speaker of the evening was then introduced.

was received with a rising burst of applause. He said that it was his pleasure a few days ago to attend a banquet where the grain had been winnowed so that nothing but the pure wheat remained, they were all Miller friends and supporters. But from appearances he took it they were all his hearty friends tonight.

Our faces are turned to a new year. Everyone has visions to do all possible they can for the city, and he only hoped that they would be able to accomplish a great deal. Let us get together in Quincy and boom Quincy, and always have a good word for Quincy.

He believed in drawing together of the people, because now so many say, "Quincy is a good place, but—" Always that "but." A new industry must be a Hercules to convince the cliques in Quincy that they have a good thing. They must have the support of the banks and until we get together we cannot expect to accomplish much. In closing he said that he hoped all would try and pull together for Quincy.

Introducing the next speaker the President said he would ask the ex-Mayor to explain how he reduced the debt.

EX-MAYOR STONE.

The genial ex-Mayor said that he was glad to be present and only regretted that he was somewhat hampered by a bad cold. Looking down the tables he saw Councilmen of the years 1914, 1913, 1906 and 1904. He too looked back with sorrow on the past year for we have lost ex-Mayor Shea and ex-Councilman Moir. As he looked back over his administration he could not see anything he would change. As he looked back at his inaugural address a year ago he found that the City Council of 1913 had carried out the ideas he had expressed.

HON. EUGENE R. STONE.
Retiring Mayor.

His associations in City Hall the past two years had been very pleasant, but yet he was glad to retire. The only thing he was sorry for was the pleasant associations at City Hall which he must sever.

He congratulated the Finance Committee of the City Council of 1913, and said he believed the Council of that year was the best the city had ever had. The city of Quincy has grown faster in the last ten years than any other city in the Metropolitan district.

The City Council of 1913 was the first City Council with one exception that has reduced the city debt. It will be a wonderful thing to look back upon 25 years hence. He was pleased to turn over the city to the new administration with the largest borrowing capacity it has ever had, and the new Mayor will find that he has $20,000 more for current expenses than any other Mayor ever had.

These are facts, and facts are stubborn things. The City Council of 1913 made a great record and he would ask those members coming back to do as well by Mayor Miller as they did by him.

If they do there is no question but what the present year will be as successful as the year just closed. In closing he said he hoped to meet those present often and all he could say was success to the 1914 City Government.

EX-CITY SOLICITOR THOMAS.

As the ex-Mayor resumed his seat the party at the table arose as one man and cheered him to the echo.

EX-PRESIDENT HOBBS

was introduced and asked to tell how much better he presided over the City Councils than did the present presiding officer.

In reply, Mr. Hobbs said, that if he had as soft a job as the present presiding officer his success would have been supreme. It made some difference if Joe was in the chair or on the floor. He is one of the most even tempered men he ever saw, and then at times the most stubborn man he ever met. He had seen him once or twice on the job last year. He was also sorry for the absent ones. Speaking of ex-Councilman Moir, he said that he looked back to many pleasant and intimate associations with him. A larger hearted good fellow than John Moir never lived. It has been said that the Council of 1913 was best the city ever had, and if so it was because of the training he had given it for a few years.

Here he was a lawyer, sitting at the right of the Mayor, and he would venture to say that he was the only lawyer in the City placed in a similar position that would not have asked to be appointed City Solicitor. He felt that the government of 1914 would be a good one, and he hoped all would get together for many years to come at these annual banquets.

CHARLES W. BAILEY

Chairman of the Finance Committee said we had a most unique inaugural today. It had made him think about his old home and the chickens. As his mind went back to his boyhood days, as he recalled it, it was the old hen which did all the scratching, and anything good turned up the chickens got. He wanted to say to the new men of the City Council, that it was up to them to make the City Council of this year even better than that of the past. It was up to them to sit up and take notice, and not be afraid to ask questions. Do not sit dreaming and let the President slide important matters through. Do a little investigating yourself and you will find that it will well repay you.

As Councilman Bailey resumed his seat, President Whiton took occasion to remark that he had saved the city $500 toward the surplus when he had fought against a measure for that amount which the last speaker had tried to slide through.

CITY SOLICITOR McANARNEY

In introducing this genial official the presiding officer referred to him as a loyal steadfast friend, and the best of city solicitors.

As Mr. McAnarney arose to speak he was given a great ovation, which caused "Mack" for once in his life to blush like a maiden.

He said that on other occasions like the present, he felt a somewhat restraining influence, as he knew that he would be called upon during the year by the City Council for opinions, but he did not feel under that influence tonight. "Blessed are they who expect little, for they will get it."

REPRESENTATIVE SANDBERG.

He expected to get his some fine day in January. The only regret of his going was the necessity to clean the desk for the first time in six years, and as he swept the con-

THE MAYOR'S ADDRESS.

Evidently retrenchment in city expenses is the ambition of Mayor Miller, as expressed in his address to the City Council on Inauguration Day, and the taxpayers will rejoice. We believe that he will have the support of the City Council and the endorsement of the taxpayers in the attempt.

Unfortunately a Mayor is confronted with many fixed charges which must be met. It is already known how much debt matures this year, and it cannot be dodged. Any attempt to refund would be unpopular, besides it would require action by the Legislature.

So it is with interest. It is already known how much must be raised to meet this big item. Salaries of city officials are fixed by ordinance and amendments do not become operative until the following year. Salaries of firemen, police and school teachers are also established.

There is a yearly demand for increase in current expenses, and Mayor Miller will do well if he reduces the total of the annual appropriation order.

Section 20 of Chapter 719 of 1913, a new act relative to municipal indebtedness, will help any Mayor who really desires to retrench. It provides that "The City Council may reduce or reject any item, but, without the approval of the Mayor, SHALL NOT increase any item in nor the total of a budget, nor add any item thereto."

Heretofore the City Councils have increased items recommended by Mayors' and have also increased the totals; they have also added items to the annual budgets.

There is a new provision which seems to give the Mayor the initiative in all appropriations. A part of Section 20 reads:

"In case of the failure of the Mayor to transmit in writing to the City Council a recommendation for an appropriation of money for any purpose deemed by the Council to be necessary, and after having been so requested by vote of the City Council, said Council, after the expiration of seven days after such vote, upon its own initiative, may make an appropriation for such purpose by a vote of at least two-thirds of its members, and shall in all cases make such appropriations in detail, clearly specifying the amount to be expended for each particular purpose."

There are other radical changes made by Chapter 719 of 1913 which should improve city finances.

The Daily Ledger wishes Mayor Miller a full measure of success. May his administration be the best in Quincy's history.

WAR AND PEACE.

The year of 1913 has been one of international strain and turmoil. The bright hopes entertained a few years ago of the final passing of international bloodshed have been roughly shocked. The year made a tragic and deadly addition to history in the war among Balkan allies. While it closed with peace accomplished yet all feel that it is merely a stopping for breath.

On our owne continent, anarchy has ruled in Mexico, and the end is not in sight. The world staggers under the burden of costly armament. It is perhaps the greatest single cause of high cost of living today. Yet while the great powers of Europe decline to treat with each other on the business-like basis of peaceful diplomacy, there can be no disarming.

The one bright spot in all this carnage of blood, is that cruel old Turkey was driven out of lands she had terrorized and exhausted for 500 years. And it must be that there are internal forces of business and conservation even in Mexico that will soon demand that the nation cease destroying its own resources.

H. F. MOSSES NEW PRESIDENT

Much Accomplished in First Year of Improvement Asso.

At the annual meeting of the Atlantic Improvement Association there was the usual large gathering and enthusiasm which have helped in the progress of the association since it was formed one year ago.

The annual report of the secretary, W. H. Davis, brought forth hearty applause, as it showed what had been accomplished in the year. Mr. Davis showed how the sixteen men who had formed the association just one ago had worked harmoniously and added unto the membership so that now they numbered almost one hundred.

The committees appointed had been so industrious that they have generally attained results. The men who have worked on committees in the interest of public improvements have been fully aware of the slow and oftimes discouraging process of waiting for results with so much work and apparently so little accomplished.

There are several things which however have been accomplished during the short existence of the association. Electric lights have been placed on Atlantic street, Conant road and Ocean street.

Improved accommodation on the Squantum cars for school children travelling to Quincy, and also through the efforts of the president, George W. Baker, the midnight train was allowed to stop at Atlantic. Mr. Davis expressed confidence that at the end of another year the membership would be doubled.

The following officers were elected for the coming year:

President,—Henry F. Mosses.

Vice President,—Charles A. Hadlock.

Secretary,—W. H. Davis.

Treasurer,—Jesse I. Spear.

Directors,—Harry T. Beale, William L. Buckley, Rev. T. W Davison, C. T. Grocott, and Edward Sweeney.

After the election of officers a luncheon was served by M. J. Ducker, of Atlantic.

OFF FOR CHICAGO.

E. Theodore Marceau of Beach street the Technology athlete and half miler left this week for Chicago where he will enter the laboratory of the American Cotton Oil Company as a chemical engineer.

Marceau was graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1912, and the past year has been a laboratory assistant at that institution. He is the son of Professor J. H. Marceau of the Quincy Mansion school. Owing to his removal to Chicago, Marceau will sever his connection with the Boston Athletic Association and affiliate himself with the Chicago Athletic Association, making a specialty of the half mile events.

FORESTERS INSTALLATION.

St. Francis court, M. C. O. F., held its installation of officers in their hall in West Quincy on Monday evening. The special guests were Rev. Fr. Thomas R. McCoy, pastor of St. Mary's parish and High Vice Chief Ranger William Buckley of Boston. Both gave short addresses. The officers of St. Ambrose court also attended the ceremonies.

The officers were inducted into office by Deputy Rose Brooks of Roxbury, who was accompanied by a suite of officers. Mrs. John M. O'Brien of Furnace Brook parkway is chief ranger.

After the installation a salad supper was served and an entertainment given which included trio vocal selections by Miss Catherine Hussey, Miss Helen Burke and Miss Elizabeth Farrell and vocal solos by Miss Elizabeth Farrell.

GOVERNMENT'S SHARE.

The Herald bureau at Washington says: Senator Weeks has received from officials at the State House requests for his aid in obtaining an appropriation of $15,000 as the government's share of cost for the bridge across Weymouth Back river. This bridge has been completed at a cost to the state of $46,147.23. Congress authorized the payment of a share of the cost after a long fight, but the money was not appropriated.

—The total amount of land purchased in the eastern states for federal forests is nearly 800,000 acres. So far the principal work on these areas has involved their protection against forest fires.

World Ruled by Brute Force—Reason and Conscience Subordinated.

By the Rev. Dr. JOHN A. GORDON of Boston

THE military spirit is rampant all over the world. The military spirit for defensive purposes is a necessity, a noble necessity, and, further, if one nation arms itself to the teeth by land and by sea it compels every other nation to do the same. Nevertheless, let us see what reliance on military power means.

IT DOESN'T MEAN THE REIGN OF REASON; IT DOESN'T MEAN THE REIGN OF CONSCIENCE; IT DOESN'T MEAN THE SOVEREIGNTY OF ENLIGHTENED SELF INTEREST. IT MEANS IN THE LAST ANALYSIS THAT RELIANCE IS PLACED BY THE GREAT NATIONS OF THE WORLD UPON BRUTE POWER. OUT OF THIS CONCEPTION OF LIFE AS DEPENDENT FINALLY NOT UPON REASON, NOT UPON RIGHT, BUT UPON BRUTE POWER, COMES THE AMAZING INTERPRETATION OF HUMAN SOCIETY DOWNWARD INTO THE STRUGGLE OF EXISTENCE UPON THE ANIMAL LEVEL, WITH ITS PRINCIPLE OF THE SURVIVAL OF THE FITTEST.

Here is the world, here are the good things in it, and there are not enough to go round. The STRONG GET MORE, the LESS STRONG GET LESS, and the WEAK GET NONE. In the contest they are DRIVEN REMORSELESSLY TO THE WALL AND DIE WITHOUT PITY. Here is an utter contradiction of the spirit of the Christian gospel, which puts the trumpet to its lips and calls out to all the world that we are strong, ought to bear the infirmities of the weak and not live to please ourselves.

Human Element Required to Eliminate Railroad Accidents

By Dr. ARTHUR T. HADLEY, President of Yale University

© by American Press Association.

TOO GREAT FAITH SHOULD NOT BE PLACED IN MECHANICAL SAFETY SYSTEMS ON RAILROADS. THERE IS A GREAT DEAL OF TALK ABOUT ELIMINATING THE HUMAN ELEMENT. YOU CAN NEVER ELIMINATE IT WITHOUT REDUCING MEN TO MERE AUTOMATONS. THE AIM OF RAILROADS SHOULD BE TO MAKE THEIR EMPLOYEES THE MASTERS, NOT THE SERVANTS, OF THE MECHANICAL FORCES UNDER THEIR CONTROL.

National Responsibility In Forestry Perfectly Clear Cut

By HENRY S. GRAVES, Chief of the Forest Service

THE nation has an important stake in forestry. Some persons would leave the forests entirely to private owners. Others insist that the public phases of forestry are altogether a state function and that federal activities in this field are uncalled for. BUT NATIONAL RESPONSIBILITY IN FORESTRY IS PERFECTLY CLEAR CUT. There need be no confusion with an equally clear cut responsibility of the states. As to private forestry, little of value has so far been done that has not been an outcome of public action through state or federal agencies, or both.

THE AIM OF THE PRESENT ADMINISTRATION IS NOT TO OVERTURN, BUT TO TAKE EVERY POSSIBLE STEP TO INCREASE EFFICIENCY OF THE ORGANIZATION, TO ADJUST DIFFICULTIES AND TO ADVANCE AS FAST AS POSSIBLE THE PURPOSES FOR WHICH THE NATIONAL FORESTS WERE ESTABLISHED.

Official Washington Wondering If New Haven Will Follow Lead of Telephone Trust and Agree to Reorganization Satisfactory to Department of Justice

Washington, Jan. 6.—Chairman Elliott of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company is coming to Washington and that part of official Washington particularly concerned with "trust busting" is wondering whether the New Haven system is about to follow the lead of the "Telephone Trust" and agree to a reorganization that will meet the views of the department of justice and avoid court proceedings. Mr. Elliott is expected to bring the answer.

Although Elliott has not been in Washington for more than a month it has been apparent to observers in the department of justice that the New Haven system is showing a spirit that gives hope of a termination of the difficulties without a law suit.

Within the last few weeks, since the announcement of the agreement between the attorney general and the "Telephone Trust" there have been several statements concerning the New Haven which have excited great interest here.

The first declared that the New Haven was willing to put the Boston and Maine in the hands of trustees with the idea that eventually the stock of that road might be sold to some one other than the New Haven. The attorney general was to pass upon the trustees and other matters including the question of stock disposition. No denial of this report has reached the department.

The other statement was official and declared that the New Haven had cancelled its agreement with the New York Central for the joint sharing of profits or losses of the operation of the Boston and Albany railroad.

Word also has come unofficially to Washington that the New Haven might be willing to give up its so-called outside steamship lines operating between Boston and New York and Boston and other more southern ports.

These steps, if taken, would meet the view of the attorney general, but there is said to be considerable doubt that they alone would be regarded as sufficient ground to forsake a prosecution of that road in the courts. Government investigators have reported that the New Haven is practically in control of every means of interstate or water communication between the west and south and New England.

Breaking its control over the Boston and Maine system would put the old Fitchburg railroad, now owned by the Boston and Maine, into the field again, so far as traffic from Boston and northern Massachusetts, southern New Hampshire and Vermont is concerned. The Fitchburg line runs from Boston to Troy, N. Y.

The annulment of the Boston and Albany agreement is another step to free the same territory from the alleged monopoly, and the release of the outside steamship lines, officials say, would be calculated to restore some degree of competition between New York and Boston, and Boston and Philadelphia and southern ports.

The successful consummation of the negotiations between Attorney General McReynolds and Chairman Elliott for a reorganization will not necessarily preclude the bringing of criminal suits against those directors and other officials who were responsible for the policy of the New Haven under former President Mellen's administration.

It is learned that the attorney general is giving serious consideration to a plan for seeking indictments of officials of the Mellen regime and that he does not feel that he ought to allow himself to be influenced against such a course merely by the prospect that Elliott will seek to have the present directorate of the road yield to the demands of the government in regard to a scheme of reorganization.

McReynolds regards the criminal phases of the alleged offences which have been charged against the former officials of the New Haven as a problem apart from that of procuring the reorganization of the road so as to re-establish a condition of competition among the common carriers of New England.

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL.

The regular Monday morning talk was delivered before the students of the High school by Headmaster Collins. In behalf of the basketball management Mr. Collins asked for the support of the whole school and said, that judging from the crowd at the game between the school and Alumni last Thursday everything pointed to a very successful season. It is more especially desired to have good attendance at the games this year, because Quincy is a member of the Interscholastic League and many of the games are league games. The new Child Labor Law was explained at length by Mr. Collins for the benefit of some of the members of the Freshman and Sophomore classes. The law provides that all boys or girls under the ages of sixteen must either go to school regularly or work regularly.

A PEACEFUL HOME.

An enthusiastic young minister who followed one of the old type in a sleepy country village was thumping the rostrum a good deal and disturbed a spider which had found peaceful refuge in one of the crannies for many a day.

Wandering up the aisle homeless, it was met by another spider, and the ale of woe was imparted.

"I can't stand this new minister humping and jumping about. I have lived in the pulpit for many years, but can't stay there any longer."

Said the second spider, actuated by a fine spirit of charity:

"Come along with me. I haven't been disturbed for fifty years. My home's in the collection box at the door."—Sphere.

SCHOOL BOARD TO ORGANIZE

New Chairman Necessary at Meeting This Evening

Today is Inauguration Day with the School Committee of 1914, but there is only one new member to be sworn in, Alfred O. Diack of Ward Three who succeeds Hon. John L. Miller, just installed as Mayor.

John L. Miller has been a member since Jan. 1, 1905. Dr. N. S. Hunting is longest in service having been a member since Jan. 1, 1899, fourteen years. Arthur W. Newcomb has served since Jan. 1, 1906, Dr. Edward H. Bushnell and Dr. William G. Curtis since Jan. 1907; John D. Mackay since 1910; Arthur B. Foster since 1911; Joseph H. McPherson and Dr. Daniel A. Bruce since Jan. 1, 1912.

Since Quincy became a city Jan. 1, 1889, the School Committee has consisted of nine members instead of six as under the town government. Three are elected at large, and one from each of the six wards, all for the terms of three years each.

The chairmen since 1889 have been: Sylvester Brown, 1889, 1890.

Rupert F. Claflin, 1891.

Emery L. Crane, 1893 to 1895 inclusive.

Charles H. Porter, 1896 to 1904 inclusive.

Dr. Henry C. Hallowell, 1905 1906.

Dr. Nathaniel S. Hunting, 1907, 1908, 1909.

John L. Miller, 1910, 1911, 1912.

Others, not mentioned above, to serve on the School Committee since Quincy became a city, were: Dr. John A. Gordon, Dr. Joseph M. Sheahan, Harrison A. Keith, Dr. George B. Rice, Frank A. Page, Frank C. Field, Charles F. Merrick, James H. Churchill, Rev. H. E. Cotton, James F. Harlow, Rev. Walter Russell Breed, Fred H. Smith, Miss Mabel E. Adams, Dexter E. Wadsworth, John J. O'Hara, John F. Cole, Rev. A. F. Roche, William D. Burns, Dr. John H. Ash, Dr. Thomas J. Dion, William L. Foley, James F. Burke, Charles H. Owen, Wendell G. Corthell, Dr. Wellington Record, Thomas Gurney, Elijah G. Hall, Dr. Fred J. Peirce, John A. Duggan and Herbert S. Barker.

Alfred O. Diack, the new member of the School Committee, has been a granite manufacturer of the city since 1894, and has been president of the Granite Manufacturers Association for three years. It is well that the granite industry will be thus represented on the board when industrial education is coming to the front in our public schools.

Mr. Diack was born in Scotland, Oct. 31, 1867. He was educated in the public schools there and learned the granite cutting trade with his father. At the age of 21 he came to this country, and worked at Milford, Mass., and also in Texas, Colorado and California before coming to Quincy.

In 1894 he formed a partnership with William L. Birnie, which has been very successful, and both gentlemen stand high in the granite industry. Mr. Diack has not only been president of Granite Manufacturers Association of Quincy, but a vice president of the National Association for several years.

For two years Mr. Diack was a member of the City Council, and is also serving on the Dock committee. He is a member of the Board of Trade, a past chief of Clan McGregor, O. S. C., a member of the Scots Charitable Society of Massachusetts and of the Masonic and Odd Fellows bodies. He attends Bethany Congregational church.

AT LOVE FEST

tents into the waste basket he saw Griffin's and Duffy's junk orders and regulations disappear out of sight. But that has all gone into history.

He doubted if those not familiar with it realized what it meant. We come to City Hall as strangers but soon become one large family, and the associations we thus form remain with us all of our days. He would not give up for any salary the City Council could name those four years of association and the closest intimacy with ex-Mayor Shea, or the past two years with ex-Mayor Stone. He knew something about the philanthropy of ex-Mayor Stone, for he has seen poor old women come into his office asking that their taxes be abated, which the Mayor could not do, and he has seen "Gene" dig down deep in his pocket and pay that poo rowman's bill and then forget it.

There are other pleasant memories for those that live at City Hall, and he should always look back with pride that every city government he had been connected with, when it came to go before the people for endorsement, had been re-elected with an increasing majority.

We live under a majority rule. Quincy has spoken and Mr. Miller is Mayor for the year. He is a man of sterling character and honesty which no one questions. I have told him that he will have no more loyal supporter during the coming year than I. We must stand together, all for one purpose. Quincy is my home by adoption, yet when I look up to that green spot in the west where those dear to me lie she speaks to me And then when I see those walking the streets whom I love, I say "Quincy's Mayor is my Mayor and as long as John L. Miller is Mayor he is John W. McAnarney's Mayor."

THOSE HANSON HENS.

The President at this point read a telegram from South Hanson asking about those hens which he referred to Councilman Ross, who said that he had turned the matter over to the Board of Health for investigation.

SENATOR LANGELIER

congratulated the citizens on the election of Mr. Miller, and Mr. Miller upon his election. Once an election takes place he is the Mayor of all the people. He believed that he would receive the co-operation of the people and he had no apprehension for the future. He spoke briefly of the absent ones.

While in the heat of a campaign, he sometimes felt that human nature was not all that it should be, after it was all over we get together and are good fellows. It speaks well of human nature that it is so.

He wanted to say that while on Beacon Hill he would do all he could for the interests of Quincy.

EX-REPRESENTATIVE THOMAS

said that it was hardly fair to call upon him without giving him warning, as he had no opportunity to prepare himself. He wanted to say, as had Mr. McAnarney, that everytime the administration under which he served as City Solicitor had come before the people it had been returned by an increased majority. He did not regard Mr. Miller as the Mayor of the citizens who elected him, but of all the citizens. He believed that all regarded him as such, and he wished to extend to him his best wishes for a successful year.

REPRESENTATIVE SULLIVAN

spoke briefly of his work on Beacon Hill and said that he should work for the city's interest. It only requires one signature to a petition and he would be glad to present any petition of any citizen. He however advised that it would be better that the petitions come from the City Council, as they would have more weight. He also spoke of the increasing expenses of the various commissions, which were the cause of the increasing State tax.

REPRESENTATIVE SANDBERG

regretted that he was not returning to that honorable body, the City Council. He had some tilts with the President, but had found him a good fellow, and he expected that the same thing would happen this year. He was going to eBacon Hill and he said that his colleague, Mr. Sullivan Louie and himself would work for the interest of Quincy.

At this point, Councilman Craig read a telegram to the effect that a nickel plated dinner pail had been provided, so that there would be no danger of overspeeding to dinner.

COUNCILMAN ROSS.

Spoke of his two years' work in the city, and stated that last year had been an exceptionally hard year. Mayor Stone was one of the best Mayors ever sent to City Hall. He always had the glad hand for all callers. Now we have elected a new Mayor whom he had known for years, and he felt he would make a good Mayor.

CITY AUDITOR FAIRBANKS

Spoke of the work of his office, and the many interesting tabulations to be had there. He was always ready at all times to furnish information. He also spoke of the new State system of auditing and hoped that it would be extended to all departments of the city.

DOCK COMMISSIONER CRANE.

"In conversation with His Honor the Mayor this morning, he called me an enthusiast, and he has said tonight that we all dream dreams. I have had the dream of an improved waterfront for the City of Quincy for 20 years. Quincy has the finest waterfront of any city in the Metropolitan district, but if ye fail to use it, it is worth nothing to us. There will be great improvements in the Metropolitan district on the south side of Boston within a short time, and the city government should see to it that all those improvements are not made on the north side of the Neponset river.

"In reply to the question from our toastmaster, as to the Whiton and Thomas location for a municipal dock, I will say, this, the president of the council wins where he wanders and dazzles where he dwells' and if anyone can learn from him the price of the Whiton part of that proposition they can do better than I.

"I will only take a few minutes of your time and tell you what the South land is doing in improving its waterfront. The City of Jacksonville is about to build a municipal dock. The legislature of the State of Florida meets only once in two years. The Board of Trade of the City of Jacksonville raised by subscription $6,000 for a special session of the State Legislature, and an act was passed allowing the City of Jacksonville to issue one and one half million dollars worth of thirty year 4 per cent bonds. These bonds are being sold today.

"The South land is preparing for its coast wise trade fifteen of the largest motor boats in America at a cost of thirty thousand dollars each, to run about five hundred miles along the coast. They sent a man to Holland who brought back the model of a barge; they added to that an American engine and the result is that these barges are run at a cost of only one dollar and eighty cents per day for fuel, with a total overhead cost of about one dollar per hour. These barges are two hundred and forty feet long, thirty-two feet wide with a depth of eight feet and are carrying freight today for 3-8 of a mill per ton per mile.

"Our city should consider a similar proposition with our gold mine represented by our granite hills. The gold mines of California and the West are run at a profit when they produce from three to four dollars per ton of excavation while our granite quarries produce averages from six to twenty dollars per ton with a by-product called grout worth from two dollars and eighty-eight cents to four dollars a ton for rip-rap or break waters.

"I am ambitious for my city and one of my ambitions and dreams is to see the finished granite and the grout of the Quincy quarries going south and coal, cotton and the agricultural products of the south coming north in a city of Quincy vessel to a city of Quincy dock. I thank you, gentlemen, for your kind attention to the remarks of a dreamer."

said there was a great future for Quincy. That it was growing rapidly, and it will soon be a problem to find building land enough. The office of City Engineer is doing most excellent work. It was a very important work for the Assessors and other departments, and he looked for the time when it would be necessary to employ an engineer expressly for the Assessors, the Water and the Sewer departments. He also spoke on the increase in mileage of the water and sewer mains, and that where some of the extensions were today on a losing basis they would soon become paying propositions.

JOHN L. HAMILTON.

The last speaker President Hamilton told of the work of the Board of Trade, and said that the only persons the Board of Trade bowed to were the City of Quincy and President of the Council. The Board would always work for what was the best for Quincy. He hoped that the Mayor would reinstate himself as a member of the board.

In closing the exercises President Whiton wished all a Happy New Year, and Mayor Miller a successful administration.

The employees of the American house were having their annual ball in the mahogany room, and the party were invited to visit the ball room, which many of them did, some indulging in a dance,

MRS. DEARBORN DEAD

Passes Away After Seeing Her Daughter Married

Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 6.—Mrs. Bertha Dearborn, who caused a suspension of the five-day marriage law that her daughter, Viola, might be wedded to Bertram Griffin immediately, died at her home at 22 Currier street.

Her daughter and son-in-law were at her bedside from the moment of their marriage till the end came.

Mrs. Dearborn had been ill with diabetes, and when the physicians told her she had only a few hours to live she sent for her daughter and made as a dying wish the request that she and Griffin be married as quickly as possible. She wanted to be a witness to the ceremony and impart her blessings, she said.

SCHENK GIRL DEAD

Taken to Her Home Only Few Hours Before Passing Away

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 6.—Florence Schenck, the girl runaway, died "at home," to which she was brought only a few hours before by the wish of her parents.

She had expressed a desire to live that her life might be a lesson to others. She was 17 years old when she ran away from home, seven years ago, with Charles Wilson, Alfred G. Vanderbilt's whip.

BARRE MAN MURDERED

Police Theory That He Was Dragged Into Woods and Clubbed

Barre, Mass., Jan. 6.—While the funeral of Edmand Wilson was being held here, state police officers began an investigation of the mystery surrounding his death in the South Barre woods. It is believed that he was dragged into the woods, clubbed and robbed of his savings.

Wilson's body was discovered in the woods, several hundred yards from the road. He had been dead at least two days, and had been missing from home since early in the week.

Dr. William E. Chamberlain, medical examiner, stated after performing an autopsy on the body, that he found marks which led him to suspect that death was due to foul play, and not to exhaustion, as was first believed.

Wilson was 60 years old, and for several years had been employed in the Barre wool combing mills at South Barre.

PRESIDENT SPEEDS WORK ON MESSAGE

Wilson's Health Greatly Improved by Vacation

Pass Christian, Miss., Jan. 6.—President Wilson began the final week of his vacation with an increased volume of work. He will put in a good many hours on the draft of his anti-trust message, and in considering the qualifications of candidates for the federal reserve board under the new currency law.

The president's health has been greatly improved by his stay here. The days so far spent at Pass Christian, he says, have been the quietest and most restful he has known in ten years.

NOTE FROM TITANIC

Fred Browne of Naugatuck, Conn., Sends Farewell Message

Boston, Jan. 6.—The farewell message of Fred Browne of Naugatuck, Conn., written as he was sinking in mid-Atlantic with the ill-fated Titanic nearly two years ago, has just been found on the shores of Portmagee harbor, Ire.

It floated to land in a bottle, in which it is believed to have been tossing about on the seas, drawn this way and then that by contrary currents and winds, since the great ocean liner went to her doom on April 15, 1912.

The message contained the following words: "A few lines to let you know that I am going down with the Titanic. It is an awful sight to see us sinking. Our ship split in two; not time to say any more. Good-by."

SKATERS FIND "CORPSE"

After Hard Work at Rescue It Is Discovered to Be a Dummy

West Orange, N. J., Jan. 6.—A large number of young people were skating on Cable lake on the top of the First mountain here.

While several of the party were playing snap the whip one of the girls caught sight of a hat and a man's hand floating in an air hole and fell to the ice in a faint.

Some of the boys finally started with a long pole and a rope to recover the body. They did not dare go near enough to the hole for fear they would break through the ice. Edward Timson improvised a lariat. With a few tugs Timson and three friends pulled the body to the shore only to find it was a clothing store dummy.

Express Companies Win Fight

Washington, Jan. 6.—New York city cannot compel express companies doing an interstate business to take out special local licenses, nor can it impose special license taxes on automobile delivery trucks and chauffeurs of those companies, according to a decision of the supreme court of the United States. City ordinances making these license provisions were declared by the high court to be constitutional.

DIAMETER OF THE EARTH.

Points at Which It Is the Greatest and the Least.

What is the greatest diameter of the earth? The form of the earth is that of a flattened spheroid, greater in diameter at the equator than at the poles, but this is modified by the accidents of its surface, so that the diameter varies according to the point at which it is measured.

It might be expected that the diameter would be greatest if measured from the top of the highest mountain, which is Mount Everest in the Himalayas, but unfortunately the point at which the diameter would emerge on the other side of the world is in the Pacific ocean, where this is more than 7,000 feet deep.

Professor L. Henkel of Schulpferda says the greatest diameter of the earth is that taken from the summit of Mount Chimborazo, in Ecuador, 20,136 feet above the sea level. This, he says, emerges at the antipodes on a high point on the north coast of Sumatra. This diameter is 7,929.3 miles.

As Chimborazo is almost on the equator, its summit is that point on the earth's surface which is most distant from the center. There weight is feeblest and centrifugal force greatest.

The earth's smallest radius is that from the center to the north pole, but it is not certain that the line through the poles is the smallest diameter, because the south pole is on a high plateau. It might be found that a line a little distant from the poles, which would emerge at sea level at each end, would be even shorter than the polar diameter. Such a line would be found from a point in the Arctic ocean between Spitzbergen and Greenland to a point just off the coast of the Antarctic continent in the big bay overlooked by Mount Erebus, in about 175 to 180 degrees east and 75 to 80 degrees south.—New York World

Important News In Advertisements

By HOLLAND.

THE valuable news of the day is not confined to the news columns. It is also seen in the advertisements. Of course it is important to know what President Wilson is doing, what the latest developments are in China or what baseball club leads the league. But it is also important to know where a bargain in boys' waists, garden hose, breakfast food or straw hats may be found.

These bits of commercial news are among the advertisements. Wise persons look for them and take advantage of them when they are doing their buying. The leading merchants are continually telling you news of their stores, news that is important because it often means a real saving and always means something new and worth while.

Read the advertisements if you seek important news. Read them regularly and always with the thought that back of each advertisement are the reputation and business standing of the merchant. He could not afford to deceive you even if he were so inclined.

CARING FOR USEFUL BIRDS.

It is a peculiar disgrace to any people to permit boys and men to kill off the feathered defenders of our farms and timber trees, especially when birds as in many cases, are the delight of the artist, poet and bird lover. In Germany the people vie with one another to feed the winter birds, and heavy penalties are pronounced and enforced by law for the killing of a song bird. After every heavy snow, many of the newspapers of that country print in conspicuous positions in several places throughout the paper the words, "Remember the birds," "Feed the birds," and similar reminders. If the people in the northern and other countries will watch for the visit of the birds and make them welcome they will save the birds, the crops, and the finer feelings of their boys at the same time.

Widespread and heavy snowfall will cost the lives of great numbers of native birds if the cold spell that follows is of long duration. The birds will perish, because they cannot find enough food to keep up the bodily heat necessary to resist the inclement weather. Many of the native birds can be saved, however, by placing food within their reach. If we spread on the frozen snow or in the bare places crumbs and scraps of bread, grain and bits of fat meat, especially suet, the latter to be nailed or tied in the shrubs or bushes near the ravines and in the open fields, the birds will quickly find this food, and it will tide them over this period of stress.

Boy scouts could serve the State in a notable and profitable way just now by feeding the birds. There are the woodpeckers—several kinds of them; the chickadee, the meadow lark, the snow birds, the horner larks, the Bohemian waxwing and the evening grosbeak, the quails, the creepers and nuthatches—these and others are now undergoing a severe trial to find sufficient food. The bird food should be put far enough away from the farmyards and houses to be mostly beyond the reach of the house sparrows.

—With nine millions of dollars sent abroad for Christmas money from the port of New York alone, it is evident that the old folks at home find life a lot more easy and joyous since the "boys and girls" decided to come over and make their fortunes on this side of the water.—Brockton Enterprise.

EIGHT RESCUED FROM STEAMER

Thirty Perish In Wreck of Tank Steamer Oklahoma

S. O. S. CALL SHIPS TO RESCUE

Bavaria Only One of Several That Answered Call Able to Give Assistance and She Is Headed For Boston With Survivors—Ship Valued at $700,000

New York, Jan. 6.—The tank steamer in trouble off Sandy Hook was the Oklahoma, and thirty of her crew apparently perished. Eight were saved. This was the substance of wireless messages received here.

Although several vessels were standing by the distressed tank steamer, the Hamburg-American line freighter Bavaria, bound from Philadelphia to Boston, was the only one able to render assistance. She reported by wireless that she had been able to take off Captain Alfred Gunter, Chief Mate Bert Iverson, Second Mate Knut Dahle, Third Mate Carl Eklunde, Operator William Davis, Boatman Christian Rassmussen, Quartermaster Hamilton Powell and Herman Ericksen, the ship's carpenter.

No mention was made of the remainder of the crew, thirty in number. The Oklahoma was owned by the Gulf Refining company, was 2795 tons net and 419 feet long. She left here Saturday for Port Arthur, Tex.

The disaster occurred less than one hundred miles off Sandy Hook, yet wireless reports throughout the night were meagre and conflicting. The name of the distressed vessel was variously reported as the Wasca, unheard-of and unregistered in shipping circles; the Pennoil, chartered by the Standard Oil company, and the Delaware.

The Spanish liner Manuel Calvo, the Royal Mail liner Caribbean and other vessels stood by the distressed craft throughout the night, but apparently were unable to identify her.

The Caribbean reported that the crew had been rescued, but did not even give the name of the vessel. In announcing the saving of part of the Oklahoma's crew, the Bavaria added that the vessel had not sunk entirely, but was partly submerged and drifting helplessly.

The Bavaria will continue on to Boston with the rescued. She is due to arrive there about noon today.

Among those who sailed on the Oklahoma and who are believed to be lost is Captain Loring A. Cates of Boston, formerly commander of the steamship Ligonier. Captain Cates was aboard as a passenger on his way to take command of another vessel.

The Oklahoma was valued at $700,000. John Kennedy, superintendent of the marine department of the Gulf Refining company, said he could not conceive how the ship could have gone down even in bad weather. The steamer was perfectly equipped and in good condition, he said, when she left for Port Arthur, Tex., in ballast.

"I have no idea what happened to the ship," said the superintendent. "She was an excellent sea-going craft, built six years ago within the full requirements for oil tank vessels. She made several trips across the Atlantic. Captain Gunter is one of the oldest captains in our service, a capable and reliable man. He often spoke of the magnificent way the Oklahoma behaved in a heavy sea."

DEATH STILL A MYSTERY

Jewell's Wife Says Body Found Is Not That of Birdman

New York, Jan. 6.—The passing of Albert J. Jewell, the young aviator who launched his aeroplane from Hempstead Plains, L. I., three months ago and vanished, remained still a mystery after his wife had viewed the torso cast on the beach at Edgemere, L. I.

The body was headless, armless and legless; but Mrs. Jewell said the clothing made her certain that it was not her husband's. A sixty-mile wind was blowing when Jewell started from Hempstead Plains for Staten Island, and aviators believe he was swept out to sea.

Residents of this place are so bitter against him that he would probably be subjected to bodily harm if he were brought here now. It is believed that he will live, in which event he will be put on trial for the murder of his wife.

Mrs. Loud's funeral will be held in the chapel of the old village cemetery. Her body will not be taken to her mother's home. Rev. L. W. Atwood will officiate at the service.

BURGLARS IN CONCORD

Wealthy Resident Loses Antique Service and Other Silverware

Concord, Mass., Jan. 6.—Through an investigation conducted by the police it became known that a daring burglary was committed early Saturday morning at the home of George M. Baker, a wealthy resident of Baker avenue. Several hundred dollars worth of silverware was taken from the dining room while the family were asleep on the second floor.

The burglary was discovered Saturday morning when Baker came down stairs. He found that the rooms on the first floor had been ransacked, and that the silverware, including an antique service set, had been stolen. Entrance to the house was gained by forcing open a dining room window.

LIQUORS ARE TAKEN UNDER GIRL'SORDERS

Secretary of Governor of Oregon In Command at Copperfield

Portland, Ore., Jan. 6.—Every saloon in Copperfield has been closed by the militia, acting under orders from Miss Fern Hobbs, secretary to Governor West, who is in full charge of affairs in the mining town, with instructions from the governor to adopt any measures that seem to her advisable.

All the stock of the saloon men has been prepared for shipment to Baker, and she is to act as special counsel for the state at a hearing there, at which will be heard the case against the sheriff of Baker county, whose removal is asked by many citizens.

Complaints which reached the governor from Copperfield residents to the effect that, because of the non-enforcement of the liquor laws, rowdyism had become so prevalent that the lives of citizens were endangered, led him to send Miss Hobbs to the town to take command in behalf of the state. She at once called out the militia, closed the saloons and placed Copperfield under martial law.

RECEIVES SPIRIT MESSAGE

Wealthy Connecticut Farmer Tells of His Murder Through Medium

South Windsor, Conn., Jan. 6.—"I received a blow over the head and $590 was taken from my vest pocket."

Such is the message alleged by Spiritualists here to have been given through a medium by Leo F. Burnham, a wealthy farmer, who the morning of Nov. 1 was found unconscious near his home, and who two days later died without having regained consciousness. Doctors, however, say Burnham died from a stroke of apoplexy.

Burnham was known to have drawn $500 from the bank to buy a motorboat the day before he was found unconscious, and this money has not been accounted for. About a month after the death a farmhand employed by Burnham gave up his job and left town.

Satisfying a Customer Carried to an Extreme

By HOLLAND.

A WOMAN who bought a dress which she found was not just what she wanted went with it to one of the biggest stores in the world and said it did not suit her. She wanted her money back, but explained that she had lost the sales slip. The sum she claimed was given to her.

Two days later she found the sales slip and discovered that she had not bought the dress at the store to which she had taken it, but had bought it at a rival establishment. She went to the store and explained.

"We knew you had not bought the dress here," explained the manager, "but you were palpably dissatisfied with it, and our aim is to satisfy all our customers. If we have impressed on your mind the fact that we are more than fair we are satisfied. We covet nothing more than such a reputation as we are sure you will give us."

Many will think that this was carrying fairness too far. Perhaps it was, but it was done by the greatest retail merchant of this age, one whose name is known wherever the English language is spoken and whose expenditures for advertising run up to a million dollars a year.

Successful advertisers know that satisfied customers are an invaluable asset. You have an advantage in dealing with the liberal advertisers.

Orilla's Burglar

She Was Equal to the Occasion

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Orilla Payne felt very lonely indeed as the carriage rolled away from the door and she realized that she was all alone in the big house save for the three servants in the basement. A sprained ankle had prevented her from accompanying her cousins to the opera that evening, and she would not listen to the girls when they offered to remain with her.

"Of course I shall miss the pleasure of going, but as for feeling lonely with all these wonderful books about me!" Orilla smiled incredulously, for, poor little country mouse that she was, the Maynards' beautiful home and well stocked library represented a wealth of enjoyment.

"Nothing to be afraid of," murmured Orilla, settling herself on the wide leather couch before the library fire and looking dreamily into the glowing mass of coals in the grate. "Of course I've heard of burglars in the city, but one would not dare enter with policemen at every corner and three servants in the house. Pooh!"

Orilla's beautiful dark eyes grew dreamy and then drowsy and finally closed altogether, and her charming head, crowned with golden brown locks, was pressed against the yellow satin pillow while she slept.

Of course she did not know that the library door opened ever so little and that the sharp face of the housemaid, Jane, was thrust inside an instant before the door closed again. Nor did she dream that Jane reported to her fellow servants that Miss Payne was fast asleep and that there was no harm in their slipping out and around the corner for a little amusement at the moving picture show.

So presently the big house was all alone save for Orilla sleeping on the couch in the library.

Somewhere in the house a clock was chiming ten when Orilla opened her eyes and looked up into the face of a man bending over her. She put her hand over her red lips for fear she should scream, for the man wore a white handkerchief tied over his face, so that all she saw was two blue eyes sparkling beneath the visor of a cap and the square outline of a chin below the mask. He was a tall, slenderly built man, and his hands were thin and white.

For a few never to be forgotten moments the man and the girl stared at each other, and then Orilla's hand dropped and she asked with a little tremor in her sweet voice:

"I—I suppose you're a burglar?"

The blue eyes darkened.

"I am, now!" breathed the man sharply. "You mustn't interfere with me," he went on hurriedly. "I came here to steal—understand, steal! And I'm not going to have any one stand in my way!"

Orilla shuddered.

"I suppose you've just got to do it," she said pityingly. "I suppose you're starving."

"Yes, and, what's more, some one I love better than life or honor or anything else is starving—a weak, helpless little motherless boy. That's why I'm stealing, for Don!" He threw a hand sharply against his eyes as if to shut out the sight of a strange house into which he had entered. "I had to come," he added wearily.

"Why did you come to Uncle Peter's house?" asked Orilla, thrilling strangely at this unexpected encounter with a burglar.

"Why? Because Mr. Maynard cheated my father out of what little money he had. I saw my father die a poor and disappointed old man because he had foolishly invested in Peter Maynard's gilded wildcat mining ventures. I'm here to take something that should be mine. I don't call it stealing."

"It is, just the same," remarked Orilla calmly. "Two wrongs never did make one right, and if your mother was here she would say so, and that dear wife of yours, who is dead," she added as the man winced at her words.

His eyes stared at her dully now, and his hands gripped the edge of his coat.

"But little Don," he muttered brokenly. "I've been sick for weeks and lost my position in the office, and I can't get another one, and my little lad is starving. What would you do?" he demanded fiercely.

Orilla's face flushed beautifully and her eyes shone like twin stars as she made eager response to his inquiry.

"What would I do?" she repeated. "Why, I'd go to somebody, some woman who understood and loved little children, and I'd tell her all about poor little Don and ask her to help me. Then if that woman had a nice farm in the country, where Don could have plenty of fresh milk and eggs and play about in the lovely sunshine and tumble in the snow, why, she would ask Don to come there and stay until his father got another job. And the father could come down and see Don every week. If he was very independent, why, he could pay a wee mite for Don's board after he got on his feet again."

The intruder drew a deep breath and clasped his hands sharply together. "This would be very nice," he said dryly, "but such things only happen in books. A woman of the sort you describe would be one in ten thousand and I don't know where to look for her. My little boy is hungry, starving! Do you understand me?" he ended fiercely. "Don't interfere with me, please; I'm going to take something. Almost anything will keep the wolf from the door, and it will be mine by rights."

"Wait a moment," said Orilla, sitting up among the cushions and growing very animated. "Oh, please pick up the rug and put it over my sprained ankle. It has slipped off. Thank you. Now about the little boy. Have you ever stolen before?"

"Of course not," came indignantly from under the white handkerchief.

Orilla smiled wisely. "I'm very glad of that, and I'm very sorry you are so skeptical, because there really is such a woman as you describe, only she's a girl yet. She's right here. I'm Orilla Payne, and I live in Roselea, on the loveliest farm, and I am visiting my cousins, the Maynards. I'm going home tomorrow, and I'll take Don with me if you will trust me, and it can all come out as I have planned. I have the dearest mother in the world, and she will just love little Don, and there's Lydia, our old nurse, who doesn't have half enough to do and who grumbles all the time because there are no children in the family to cuddle, and there's everything to make a little boy happy.

"Now, will you give me a trial and give little Don a chance to start life fair? You don't want him to be ashamed of his own father," pleaded Orilla.

The man lifted his head and tore the handkerchief from his face and the hat from his head. He stuffed them in his coat pocket and stood looking down at her from shining eyes.

"Ah, you are kind," he breathed brokenly. "If there were more like you to lend a helping hand— If I can only bridge over this difficulty"—

Orilla smiled understandingly.

"I know life is made up of crossing bridges," she said quaintly, then she listened.

"Uncle Peter is coming," she said quietly. "I hear his latchkey. He will come in here. You are my friend. You are paying me a visit, although you are staying rather late. What is your name—quick?"

"Donald Findlay," he gasped, sinking into a big chair.

The door opened, and the kindly face of Peter Maynard appeared. "In here, Orilla?" he asked pleasantly.

"Yes, Uncle Peter. Come in and meet my friend Mr. Findlay," said Orilla quickly.

"Findlay?" repeated Mr. Maynard as he came forward with outstretched hand. "The name is familiar, sir, and your face—your face is familiar too."

"Perhaps you knew his father, Uncle Peter?" dared Orilla.

Peter Maynard's eyes narrowed as he scanned the young man's pale countenance.

"I knew a Dr. Findlay," he said reminiscently.

"My father was Dr. Findlay. He is dead," said Donald abruptly.

"Pardon the question, Mr. Findlay, but did your father suffer hardship?"

"He died poor," was the crisp reply.

"If there was anything I could do," muttered Maynard helplessly.

Donald's handsome face was proudly aloof. Orilla caught her breath, and she once more plunged her little finger in the pie of another's business.

"I think if you could give my friend some work to do," suggested Orilla practically, "it would be worth more than anything else. He really is very expert—expert in office work—and he's been ill a long time, and he has a little motherless boy to take care of. Somebody has to give him a start, you know."

"Just the thing!" cried Maynard, turning about with gleaming eyes. "How about it, Mr. Findlay? I need a private secretary, and I'm sure you'll do. Does it appeal to you?"

"Thank you, Mr. Maynard," he said gravely. "If you will permit me, I will call at your office tomorrow and I will present my credentials. After that, if you care to employ me, I shall be very grateful."

Peter Maynard sighed with relief. Whatever prickings of conscience he may have had concerning his sharp dealings with Dr. Findlay now, thought he, could be appeased by this kindness to Findlay's son. So the elastic conscience of the financier relaxed a little and he glowed with all the warmth of a good deed done, of a wrong righted.

After a little general conversation Maynard left the room for a few moments, and Donald Findlay arose to take leave of the girl who had changed the whole course of his life.

"What can I say to you?" he whispered brokenly. "What can I do for you in return for your great goodness to me this night?"

Orilla opened a dainty satin work bag and took out a little fat beaded purse and slipped it into his reluctant hand.

"That is for little Don," she said soberly. "Please take it for his sake. And you will let him come to the farm for a few weeks?" she pleaded.

He looked down at her with that rare smile in his eyes.

"As if I could refuse you anything after this evening's adventure," he said softly. "Good night, best and kindest of girls. May God guard you. That will be the prayer of Don and his father!" He bent swiftly and kissed her hand. He left the room by the front door, openly and honestly as was his right. He blushed as he remembered that the girl there on the sofa was the one who had saved his manhood.

"She's something to work for—and win!" he murmured as he trudged home to little Don and the beginning of a new life.

STATE ASYLUMS PROBE STARTED

Mysterious Circumstances Surround Death of Patients

BRUTAL BEATINGS CHARGED

Patient Died at Worcester Hospital With Thirteen Broken Ribs Which It Was Claimed Were Caused by Fall Against Bed—Authorities Are Scored

Boston, Jan. 6.—Two different investigations have been started into the circumstances surrounding the deaths of patients in Massachusetts state hospitals for the insane, in response to charges that the deaths were caused by brutal beatings.

How a man could break thirteen ribs by falling against a bed, which was the explanation given by Dr. George V. Scribner, superintendent of the Worcester state hospital, of the injuries of Charles E. Seaver, 66 years old, who died there last month, will be the subject of the investigation started by District Attorney James A. Stiles of Worcester.

Because of unsatisfactory explanations of the cause of the death of Isaac H. Andrews, 80 years old, former selectmen of Andover, who died at the Danvers state hospital, Governor Foss ordered the state board of insanity to make a rigid probe of that case.

The governor has requested that a complete record of all deaths of doubtful cause be furnished him.

The record of Andrew's death as first sent to the governor's office included no copy of the certificate of death. On further request, an irregular statement signed by an assistant physician of the hospital was produced.

Andrews was committed to the hospital on April 15 last. Five days later he died from causes that have never been explained.

On the day of his death his daughter, Mrs. Augustine H. Rich of Swampscott, went to the hospital with her husband to see the aged patient. They waited in the reception room for two hours and twenty minutes, in response to repeated inquiry they were told that Andrews was being transferred to another ward. Finally an attendant told Mrs. Rich that her father had died suddenly five minutes before.

The death of Seaver was brought to the attention of Governor Foss by Patrick H. Kelley, attorney for the Massachusetts Hospital Reform society, who asked that the governor assign the state police to the case.

Mr. Kelly severely criticized the local Worcester authorities for having made no real progress in the investigation. He said:

"The lack of a reasonable or satisfactory explanation showing the injuries to be of accidental origin is strongly indicative of foul play."

Deputy Chief Neal of the state police was consulted and is expected order State Detective Robert E. Molt of Worcester to begin work to determine whether the death of Seaver was due to natural causes.

It was learned that a woman nurse was stationed on Thayer Two, the infirmary ward where Seaver died, in addition to two day attendants and two night attendants.

The council voted that the oath be administered to Geraghty. After this was done, Geraghty retired and immediately sent in his formal resignation.

The total damage is about $10,000. No one was injured.

Colonel Millis to Be Relieved

On the Track of the New Year

NEW YEAR'S was a long time in settling upon Jan. 1 as the proper time for its celebration. Even now, in Greece and Russia, where the Julian calendar is in force, New Year's does not arrive until twelve days after the year is well on its way in the rest of the civilized world.

The ancient Egyptians and Persians began the new year at the autumnal equinox, Sept. 22, and the Greeks of Solon's time at the winter solstice, Dec. 21, but in the time of Pericles the date was changed to the summer solstice, June 21. The Romans began the year from the winter solstice until Caesar changed it to Jan. 1. With the Jews the new year began in September in civil affairs, but in their ecclesiastical reckoning the beginning of the year dates from the vernal equinox, March 22. And, as this is astronomically the beginning of spring, the date is a logical one, and that of the 25th of March (25 being a more fully rounded number) was accepted generally by Christian nations in medieval times as New Year's.

In England Dec. 25 was New Year's until the time of William the Conqueror. His coronation happened to fall on Jan. 1, and accordingly the year was ordered to commence on that day. But the English gradually fell into union with the rest of Christendom and began the year on March 25. When in 1582 the Gregorian calendar was promulgated and definitely located New Year's on Jan. 1 most Catholic countries adopted it at once, but England did not acquiesce until 1752.

In ancient Rome New Year's day was given up to feasting and frolicking. Sacrificial fires burned continually on the altars of the twelve gods. All litigation and strife were suspended.

ALL NATIONS DRINK A NEW YEAR'S HEALTH.

reconciliations took place. New Year's calls were made and New Year's gifts bestowed. There also originated the New Year's resolution, for every Roman resolved on New Year's day to so regulate his conduct that every word and act should be a happy augury for all the days of the ensuing year.

On account of the orgies which marked the New Year's arrival not only among the Romans, but among the Teutonic races, the early Christians looked with scant favor upon the whole season. By the fifth century, however, Dec. 25 became the fixed festival of the Nativity, whereupon Jan. 1 assumed a special sacred character as the octave of Christmas day.

The giving of gifts on New Year's day has been superseded largely in Anglo-Saxon countries by the giving of Christmas gifts, but the custom still is retained in France. This custom was one of the most ancient and universally observed of New Year's day.

The druids distributed branches of the sacred mistletoe. The Roman emperors exacted gifts, and so did the English rulers down to the time of Cromwell.

The world over on New Year's it is a custom to drink to the health of one's friends.

The custom of making New Year resolutions and "turning over a new leaf" is universal and, like political platforms, is as much honored in the breach as in the observance. But the temptation which surrounds frail human beings in this wicked world are many and insidious.

What a menace to our comfort,
What reproof to him that boasts,
Those habits that, discarded,
Haunt our presence still like ghosts!
—Kansas City Star.

Some predict that the time will come when people will read each other's thoughts like a book. Many flyleaves will be discovered where least expected.

A medical journal has an article on "How to Lie When Asleep." Of more value would be an article on how to induce people to tell the truth when awake.

Russian explorers have discovered an island about half the size of Europe. Nature is very careless with her islands. One finds them lying around everywhere.

Give Your Neighbor an Equal Chance

By HOLLAND.

IF you have been buying goods of a mail order house you doubtless think it has been to your advantage to do so. You have believed that you were saving money or were getting better goods. Let us see if this is true.

Have you tried to do business with your local merchant—your neighbor—on the terms that the mail order house exacts? No? Then suppose you try it.

Just go into the store, plank down your cash and tell what you want. You might even tell the merchant that you will wait a few days for the goods. See if your local merchant can't serve you better and as cheaply as the mail order house.

The local merchant usually extends credit for two, four or six months. The mail order house demands cash in advance. It uses your money as working capital. It loses nothing in interest, nothing in bad debts or on slow paying customers. Try this cash in advance plan on the local merchant—the man you know—and see if he can't make it to your advantage to

MAYOR ELECTED WITHOUT PROMISES

Says He is Going to Make His Own Selections for Appointments

Will Be Business Men Well Qualified For Positions

Mayor Millers first day at City Hall was not without interest. His Honor arrived shortly after 9 o'clock, and spent the morning in his office. He received many callers, and doubtless some of these callers came in the interest of some friend whom they desired should receive one of the many appointments in the gift of the Mayor.

Shortly after 11 o'clock he received the reporters who cover City Hall in his office, and the newspaper men spent a half hour in pleasant conversation with the Chief Executive. When asked if he had any news to give out, the Mayor said no, and with a twinkle in his eye remarked he did not see why the Mayors office should have any news to give out. He was however informed that the newspaper men would descend upon him every day.

Like Mayors who have preceeded him, he had much fault to find with the room set aside as the Mayor's office. Not only is it too small but it is very poorly ventilated, and it a case of suffocation or sitting in a draft that augurs well for colds. He stated flatly that he would not stand that kind of an office long.

When asked regarding appointments, he was emphatic in his statement that Miller was going to make them. He said that he was elected without promises, and that the men he should select would be those whom he considered best for the position. As to the men he had selected they were almost without exception business men, well qualified for the positions to which they had been selected, and in most cases accepted the positions at a great sacrifice to their own personal business that they might make his administration a success.

He did not intimate in any way who he intends to appoint, but said that he should send the list to the next City Council. He had intended at first to announce them on Inauguration day, but thought it best to hold them over. When he so decided he thought that the Council would adjourn for a week, but as there was no special business to call the Council together next Monday ,and it had adjourned to the regular night, he would announce them at that time.

He further said that it was not only his intention to visit the police station and fire stations, but every other department in the city, not forgetting to go about the city and take a look at the men at work in the street, water and sewer departments.

The reporters in taking their reparture wished him good luck and promised to call upon him every morning.

WORKING FOR RELEASE

Daughters of Revolution Sympathize With Mrs. Couchier

The confinement of Mrs. Caroline Torrey Couchier in the Taunton Insane Asylum is receiving attention of individuals and organizations. The Sons of Veterans held a special meeting last week and appointed a committee to co-operate with other patriotic soiceties to secure her release.

At the regular meeting on Monday of Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, the following action was taken:

"Voted—That the Adams chapter, D. R., wish to express their indignation at the commitment of Mrs. Couchier to the Taunton Insane Hospital and the chapter will gladly co-operate with any society in their efforts to secure her release."

KINCAIDE THEATRE.

Last night's attendance speaks well for "Uncle Toms Cabin," the feature picture, which was realistic in every detail and was followed closely by all in attendance.

The Pathe Weekly pictures were very interesting, representing many timely events of all over the world.

Pauline Saxon kept the audience in great good humor by her droll sayings and character part and funny parodies.

The antics and everlasting grind of talk by Mr. Tyler and his partner, Miss Crolius, was a cause for convulsive outbursts of applause and laughter.

The playlet presented by Justin Adams & Co. made a decided and pleasing hit.

Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Darrow gave a remarkable demonstration of picture painting by as skillful manipulation of different colored powders.

It is announced that the charming and gifted singer, Miss Franklin Wood, who won her way into the hearts of the patrons of this theatre during the engagement of the "Kincaide Players;" is to appear here shortly.

DAILY LEDGER IN DEMAND

Everyone Anxious to Get News of City Inauguration

About 3000 copies of the Daily Ledger were printed and circulated yesterday, such was the demand for news of the inauguration of the new city government. Although two editions were printed, the supply at the Ledger office was exhausted before 6 o'clock, and several of the news agents sold out early. A very complete report of the Inauguration ceremonies was given, together with a stenographic report of Mayor Miller's address, and the organization of the new City Council. The average circulation of the Daily Ledger now exceeds 2,000 copies daily which means about ten thousand readers every day.

DEVELOPMENTS IN HEN CASE

West Quincy Man Charged With Receiving Stolen Property

George W. Drake of 352 Copeland street was arrested shortly before midnight Monday by Captain McKay, of the palice department on a warrant charging him with receiving stolen property. In court he was arraigned on two complaints and the case was continued until Wednesday.

The arrest, according to the police, was made on information obtained from the five Italians arrested in connection with the wholesale chicken raids that have been carried on in this city the past two weeks.

Drake, who comes from a prominent family, was not obliged to remain in the station over night, sureties being furnished shortly after he was booked.

The case promises to be most sensational, inasmuch as many families living in the vicinity of Quincy Point have been the losers of valuable game and up to the time of the arrest of the five men by Officers Malone and Doran, who were detailed by Chief Burrill to apprehend the thieves, no clue of a definite nature had been obtained.

TO DISCIPLINE THE POLICE

Members of the Force Told to Report on Time

While Mayor Miller has not called upon the Police department or interviewed Chief Burrell relative to better discipline his words Monday had their effect, for one of the things Chief Burrell did Monday night at roll call was to notify every patrolman that he was expected to report for duty at the time set for so doing, and that did not mean five minutes later but on the dot. It is reported that some of the day men have been taking their own time in getting to their beats and reporting, but hereafter they will report on time or something will drop and drop heavy.

In his talk with the newspaper men this morning, the Mayor said that he had not had any conversation with the Chief in regard to discipline in the department, but there was one thing that the policemen must understand, and that was they could not serve two masters. By that he meant that if they remained police officers of the City of Quincy they could not at the same time be police officers or special officers of any other town.

He further said that he was very much surprised to learn at the time of the raid at the Cedarcrest Inn in Braintree that some of the Quincy officers were also officers of the town of Braintree. He wanted it understood that they must resign one or the other of the jobs. That is they could not be officers of Braintree and Quincy at the same time.

Mrs. W. E. Warmington of Albany, N. Y., is in Quincy for a visit of several weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Furnald of Newcomb street.

LEGISLATURE TO ORGANIZE

Will Meet Tomorrow and Inaugurate Governor Thursday

Governor David I. Walsh is down to to proof reading stage of his inaugural address, and the local men who will figure in the passage of legislation this year have completed preparations to take their seats tomorrow.

In honor of the day when he takes oath to be a good councilor, Charles W. Guy, who defeated Guy Ham in this district and is the first Quincy man to have won that berth, has trimmed his beard, at the suggestion of Charles Hamlin, secretary of the Council, and has formally proclaimed that he prefers a Prince Albert to a dress suit for all occasions. Mr. Guy whose victory was one of the surprises occasioned by the turn of events in Massachusetts politics last fall, is an honest, rugged citizen, and his wide and varied career which commenced on the farm and ended in retirement by his own choice, and with the certainty that he could still partake of the comforts of life on a grand scale if he chose, will be one of the most experienced members of that august body.

Senator Louis F. R. Langelier who secured the Republican nomination over William H. Thomas, and the election over David W. Murray of Hyde Park, returns to receive the welcomes of many friends who served in the House with him. Business pressure and sincere efforts to complete arrangements so the required time can be devoted to the positions have caused Senator Langelier much activity.

Representative Michael T. Sullivan, who takes the oath of office for the second term from the Fifth Norfolk district, is prepared to carry on the good work he so ably commenced during the last term, and make glorious the record of the Sullivans, six of whom sat on the floor of the house in 1913. A few weeks ago one, B. F. Sullivan, died. His demise made a serious inroad on the group which has been frequently called "The fourth political party of the house,— the Sullivans."

Edward J. Sandberg, whose defeat of Cornelius M. Duggan of Atlantic, the Democratic aspirant from the Sixth Norfolk district, again proclaimed the district Republican, is a former representative. His welcome will be a real one for he is well and familiarly known to many of the legislators at Beacon Hill. Incidentally his progressive tendencies make him invaluable to the committee of citizens of West Quincy who have joined with the Ward Four Improvement Association and cities and towns below the Braintree line that seek the construction of a state road from East Milton to Avon which is being widely discussed throughout the section.

Mrs. Guy, Mrs. Langelier, Mrs. Sullivan, Mrs. Sandberg and friends anticipate attending the inauguration of Gov. Walsh on Thursday.

NEW CHAIRMAN SCHOOL COMMITTEE

Lawyer John D. Mackay Has Been Member of School Board Since 1910

Committee Adopts Calendar for the School Year

The School Committee of 1914 organized Tuesday evening with John D. Mackay as chairman and Albert L. Barbour as secretary and superintendent.

Charles H. Johnson was re-elected as attendance officer and census taker.

The only other business was the adoption of the school calendar for the year which was as follows:

First term,—Monday, December 29, to Friday, February 20.

Second term;—Monday, March 2, to Friday, April 24.

Third term;—Monday, May 4, to Friday, June 26.

Grammar school graduation; —Thursday, June 18.

High school graduation;—Wednesday, June 24.

Fourth term;—Tuesday, September 8, to Wednesday, December 23.

The New Year begins Monday, January 4, 1915.

Holidays;—February 22, April 10, April 19, May 30, June 17, October 12, and the remainder of the week from Wednesday noon next preceeding Thanksgiving.

The new chairman will announce his sub-committees at the regular meeting of the committee the latter part of the month.

John D. Mackay, the new chairman, is a gentleman almost too well known, especially in Ward One, to need any extended introduction at this time. He is a lawyer by profession and enjoys a large practice. He has always taken a deep interest in educational matters, even before he became a member of the School board. Mrs. Mackay is also interested in educational matters, being prominently identified with the work of the Educational committee of the Quincy Women's club, and other organizations.

The Daily Ledger took occasion at the time Mr. Mackay was elected a member of the school board to say that the choice was a good one and that he would make a valuable member of the board, and his services on the board have proved that the statement was well advised.

Mr. Mackay was elected a member of the board from Ward One in 1910 at a joint convention of the School Committee and City Council to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Dexter E. Wadsworth to serve until the end of the year 1910. At the election that year he was elected without opposition to fill the unexpired term, and at the election in 1912 he was elected for a three year term.

JOHN D. MacKAY
The new Chairman

The present members of the School Committee are: Dr. Nathaniel S. Hunting, Dr. Edward H. Bushnell and Arthur W. Newcomb elected at large; John D. Mackay of Ward One, Arthur B. Foster of Ward Two, Alfred O. Diack of Ward Three, Joseph H. McPherson of Ward Four, Dr. William G. Curtis of Ward Five and Dr. Daniel A. Bruce of Ward Six.

QUINCY MEN IN NEW LEGISLATURE

REPRESENTATIVE SULLIVAN

SENATOR LANGELIER.

REPRESENTATIVE SANDBERG.

(Special to Daily Ledger.)

State House, Jan. 7—The Legislature of 1914 met this morning at 11 o'clock. The Senate which is made up of 21 Republicans, 17 Democrats and 2 Progressives organized speedily with Calvin Coolidge of Northampton as president.

In the House the Republicans were without a majority for the first time in a generation. With all present there are 116 Republicans, 104 Democrats, 18 Progressives and 1 Socialist.

The candidates for speaker were Grafton D. Cushing of Boston, Republican; Peter F. Tague of Boston, Democrat and George P. Webster of Boxford, Progressive.

The Democrats have apparently thrown their support to the Progressive candidate, Webster. The fourth ballot returned 117 votes for Cushing and 116 for Webster.

All the Quincy men were on deck, Louis F. R. Langelier, Republican, in the Senate; Michael T. Sullivan, Democrat; and Edward J. Sandberg, Republican, in the House.

APPEAL FOR CHARLES GANZEL

Popular Ball Player Formerly With the Bostons

Boston papers are making an appeal for Charley Ganzel of this city. The Globe says: it has been known for some time that Charley Ganzel, the famous catcher of the Boston National League Club in the early 80's was a very sick man, and Tuesday afternoon Sec. Herman Nickerson of the Boston Braves got the baseball writers together at the club's office and gave out the following statement:

"Charley Ganzel, the old-time ball player and catcher of the Boston Red Stockings of years ago, who came to the Boston club in '89 with Hardie Richardson, Charley Bennett and Dan Brouthers, is dangerously ill at his home in Wollaston, his physician saying that he has a very short time to live. Ganzel is suffering from cancer, having undergone four operations upon the left side of his jaw.

"These operations have cost him practically all the money he had, and his home is heavily mortgaged. Ganzel's family consists of a wife and eight children, some of them very young, and he is in dire need of financial assistance.

"Dr. Ralph C. Achorn of Norfolk Downs is attending him and is not charging Ganzel anything for his services. It is through the friends of Ganzel and Dr. Achorn that the condition of Ganzel was brought to the attention of the Boston club.

"Ganzel is a member of the Masonic fraternity; his lodge is in Kalamazoo, Mich."

A committee was at once appointed for the purpose of stirring up the baseball public to help out a grand good ball player and a modest gentleman, and the public is asked to send their contributions to Herman Nickerson, Paddock Building, Tremont street Boston. Mr. Nickerson will make public, through the daily press, the contributions, and will send the same to Mr. Ganzel as soon as received.

The committee is composed of baseball writers.

COURT DISCIPLINE.

The Boston Record says: discipline is strictly enforced about the Quincy Court house, and the wheels of justice move along smoothly at all times, owing to the alertness of the court officers. One of the laws which is strictly enforced is the one relative to smoking. There is a comfortable room in the basement which has been furnished as a lounging and smoking room, and the officers insist that this room and no other be used when one wants to smoke.

INSTALLATION AS PASTOR

Rev. D. B. McLeod at United Presbyterian Church

Members of the Boston Presbytery installed Rev. D. B. McLeod as pastor of the First United Presbyterian church, Fort Square, on Monday.

Rev. R. M. Sturgeon of Brockton presided at the ceremonies. The address to the minister was by Rev. E. C. Simpson, D. D., of Cambridge. Rev. K. M. Munro of Boston gave the charge to the people, and prayer was offered by Rev. A. M. Thompson of St. Andrews church of Boston, a former pastor.

Nearly every member of the congregation attended the services and among them were former parishioners of the Union Square church of Somerville. Financially, the condition of the parish is good and there is a gradual increase in membership. All have assured Rev. Mr. McLeod of their co-operation.

Rev. Mr. McLeod was one of the first pastors of the First Presbyterian church on Water street and on his return to Quincy has received a warm greeting from many friends whom he was associated with while here over 20 years ago.

LAMP PRESENTED.

Appreciation of the fine work of Mrs. James A. Matheson, president of the Ladies Missionary Society of the First Presbyterian church for five years, was expressed Tuesday evening by members, when Mrs. George Shirley, in behalf of the society, presented Mrs. Matheson a reading lamp. The gift was a surprise and it was several seconds before she recovered and made an acceptance. Practically the entire membership was present. Refreshments were served and a short program carried out.

The gift is a heavy and handsome cut glass electric reading lamp with silver trimmings. Mrs. Matheson, as president of the society, is a most active leader and her efforts have resulted in making the society one of the best of its kind in the city.

TEAMDRIVERS UNION.

The Quincy General Teamdrivers union, local 305, elected and installed on Tuesday evening Alex Craig as president, Joseph Lemieux as vice president; J. J. Lyon, as Recording secretary; A. Trotman as secretary-treasurer. S. Webster as trustee for three years, Thos.. Cahill for two years and Charles Johnson for one year. A social and entertainment followed the brief business meeting, the program being given by members of the organization.

J. R. MELLEN COMMODORE

Town River Yacht Club Free From Debt and Flourishing

The annual meeting of the Town River Yacht club was held Tuesday evening at the clubhouse at the foot of Edison street with a good attendance of members.

The annual reports of the officers showed the club to be in prime condition both in regard to finances as well as in membership, and that it was now on a substantial footing, with a clubhouse free from debt.

Commodore Thompson B. Crane presided and the election of officers was nearly unanimous. The officers elect are:

Commodore,—J. Ripley Mellen.

Vice Commodore,—Joseph Carruthers.

Secretary.—W. C. Luther.

Treasurer.—George H. Jaques.

Executive Committee for three years.—R. M. Harmon.

SHIPYARD MAN RECOVERING

John Rochack Returned Today from Hospital at Brookline

John Rochack, who became deaf and dumb from the effects of being struck over the heart by the handle of a reamer at the Fore River shipyard on Oct. 30, was discharged from the Physcopathic Hospital at Brookline today. The power of speech has been partially restored but he will probably be stone deaf the rest of his life.

Rochack was admitted to the hospital a few days after the accident on the recommendation of Dr. W. F. Blanchard. Specialists who were called in on the case were unable to diagnose his condition. For many hours he lay in a state of coma. Nourishment was forcibly administered, and it was several days before he exhibited signs of responding to treatment.

So that he might be kept there as a patient, and the best of attention assured, papers committing him to the hospital for 30 days were issued by Judge Avery, and at their expiration were renewed. Rochack is at his home on Sumner street where he will remain until he resumes work at the shipyard.

MAYOR MILLER'S AXE FALLS AT CITY HALL

Michael Shea, Known As Superintendent of Streets, Asked to Resign

Also Frank E. Burrell, the Chief of Police

The Mayor's axe fell twice this morning, the second day of his term of office as Mayor, and two officials have been requested to hand in their resignations to take effect on Feb. 1. The two men whose heads are requested are Chief of Police Frank E. Burrell and Michael E. Shea, general Foreman of the Street and Water departments.

Announceemnt that the axe had fallen was made known to these two officials in their mail this morning and was also announced later to the newspaper men by Mayor Miller in person.

The letters were brief and requested that they hand in their resignations for the good of the service by Feb. 1.

Should they not comply with these requests it is more than probable that they will be removed. It is understood that the letter stated that if the officials desired a hearing they could have it but that he, the Mayor, had evidence enough to substantiate his charges.

Chief Burrell has been a police officer of Quincy for many years joining the department as a patrolman during the first year that the department was established. He did patrol duty until January, 1905, at which time he was appointed Chief of Police by ex-Mayor Thompson, succeeding Joseph W. Hayden.

CHIEF OF POLICE BURRELL.

Chief Burrell was re-appointed every year by ex-Mayor Thompson during his three years and was appointed each year during the four years administration of ex-Mayor Shea.

At the State election in November 1911, the city by referendum vote accepted the act extending the provisions of the civil service law to Chiefs of Police and it was generally supposed that the accepting of this act placed department heads where he could not be easily removed with every change of administration.

Chief Burrill said this noon that the demand for his resignation was received in the mail of this morning. He further said that "he felt that he should consult legal advice on the matter as he had understood that the office of Chief of Police had been removed from politics."

The act which was accepted at that time was chapter 468 of 1911, which in brief extended the civil service, as applied to polics, firemen and other employees to the Chief of the Police department.

Mr. Shea was appointed as general foreman of the street and Water departments by Commissioner Bainbridge during the first year of his term of office which was in 1908 under Mayor Shea. He was employed provisionally at first and was later appointed under the civil service rules. He has continued to serve as general foreman ever since.

Whether Mr. Shea will hand in his resignation as requested, or whether he will force the Mayor to remove him he does not state.

Mayor Miller spent his second day in office attending to the business of the city, that is when he was not talking with callers. He stated that he

Again we ask those sending news or other matter by mail to direct it to the company or newspaper rather than to individual members of the company or employees. THE LOVE FEAST.

Gatherings like the City Council banquet are a good thing for our city. It was a good natured crowd, where everyone forgot differences and tried to be agreeable. Even Mayor Miller was surprised to find everyone so friendly; so much so that he could hardly distinguish it from a gathering a few nights previous of his "supporters." Perhaps, as the year goes on, the so-called supporters may desert him, but the people at large will be his friends if he gives the city a good administration. The campaign committee is entitled to some credit, but after all it was the voters who elected Mr. Miller, and he is the people's Mayor.

The situation in Quincy cannot be very serious, for Mr. Stone, the retiring Mayor, said: "As I look back over my administration I cannot see anything that I would change."

The City Solicitor put it well hen he said: "We must all stand together, all for one purpose. Quincy's Mayor is my Mayor, and as long as John L. Miller is Mayor he is John W. McAnarney's Mayor." That is the right spirit.

Quincy is growing so rapidly that many find it difficult to keep up with the procession. The city is certainly passing through a period of development. New houses are being built everywhere, requiring new schoolhouses and more for education; new streets, sidewalks and street light; extension of water and sewer mains; better health regulations, etc. etc. The city is growing in valuation, as well as population. Quincy is booming all right. But as the Mayor says, we should get together and always have a good word for Quincy.

KEEPING RESOLUTIONS.

A great deal used to be said at this time of year about keeping your good resolutions. It was assumed that of course you had shut yourself up on New Year's day, and made a list of them.

This "turning over of the new leaf" seemed to come from the opposite extremes of society. There were the people of refined and fervent conscience, who took a moral and spiritual inventory at regular intervals. They gritted their teeth Jan. 1, and resolved to give Satan a better run for his money than he ever had before. Then at the other extreme there were people of feeble wills, whom the thought of the freshly turned page of life seemed to impel to a new start.

They felt the dead weight of past mistakes, which seemed to hold them down from any effort to climb. The presence of a new division of time seemed to make these past errors fall back into a remote past. The New Year gave them a chance for amendment, unhampered by this sense of failure. It was no doubt a real and helpful experience with some men, although more or less artificial.

The trouble encountered was that the calendar has but little relation to the human spirit. Many unhappy people think that if they were somewhere else, they could escape depression. So they travel to Europe or voyage around the world. They find that the same old black humors dog them still. And similarly the world, the flesh, and the devil are just as active in January as at any other time.

Resolutions for better living are valuable and praiseworthy whether made Jan. 1. or Aug. 31. Every day ought to be a New Year. As the shams of life are penetrated by riper experience, every one ought to be a little wiser today than he was yesterday. Obstacles that look impassible today, should seem less immovable tomorrow.

READY FOR EMERGENCY

How Chief Litchfield Always Gets to Fires Promptly

It is the general opinion in Fire Department circles that the reference in Mayor Miller's inaugural address to Richard Williams, chauffeur for Chief Litchfield, was hardly warranted, when the facts are known.

According to Chief Litchfield the hours of Chauffeur Williams make him a man who is on duty continuously, that is from 7 A. M. one day to 7 A. M. the following day. Members of of the fire department are allowed an hour for meals, and if he takes a street car home to his breakfast, dinner or supper, he is off duty the entire three hours. Under the present arrangement he takes the Chiefs car home to meals, and in case of an alarm sounds while at meals, he immediately stops his meal and starts for the Chief, so that his meal hour is likely to be cut to a few minutes and the department gets the benefit of his services.

Members of the department believe that if Mayor Miller had understood the situation the remarks would have been omitted. It is not so much a question of dinner, as it is to get the Chief to the fire as quickly as possible. If Chauffeur Williams had to walk, after an alarm, from his house to the fire station, both he and the Chief would be late to the fire. This would cause more criticism than the present arrangement.

COMPANIONS OF AMERICA INSTALL

The newly elected officers of the Abigail Adams circle, No. 11, Independent Companions of America, were installed Tuesday evening in Clan McGregor hall by Josephine Mahoney, worthy supreme deputy, of South Boston. Miss Mahoney was ably assisted by the degree team of the circle, captained by Mrs. Ford.

The following officers were installed:

Past President,—Mary Pritchard.
President—Russell Medlyn.
Vice president,—Josie Daw.
Financial secretary, — Margaret Stronach.
Recording secretary, — Katherine Cotter.
Treasurer,—Eliza McKenzie.
Right guide,—Hannah Emly.
Left guide,—Nellie Collins.
Inner sentinel,—Annie Caine.
Outer sentinel,—Annie Sullivan.
Trustees,—Ella Morrison, Charles McKenzie and William Walsh.
Pianist,—Mamie Barnicoat.
Physician,Dr. J. T. Reynolds.

Mrs. Stronach enters into her eleventh consecutive term as financial secretary of the circle. Master John Pritchard was presented with a five dollar gold piece by the members of the circle in appreciation of the services rendered by him. Refreshments were served and dancing was enjoyed until a late hour.

NAVAL STATION IS UNDER QUARANTINE

More of Battleship Ohio's Sailors Stricken With Smallpox

Washington, Jan. 7.—Thirty-four cases of smallpox have developed at the Guantanamo naval station among sailors exposed on the battleship Ohio. The station has been quarantined and Secretary Daniels ordered the Atlantic fleet, which starts south next Sunday, to remain at Culebra, Porto Rico, until the last of this month.

Smallpox appeared on the Ohio while she was returning from her Mediterranean cruise. It was at first supposed that the disease was checked, so that no change would have to be made in the plans for the winter maneuvers of the Atlantic fleet which was to base at Guantanamo.

Nine of the new cases are reported as virulent. The Ohio is now at Delaware Breakwater undergoing fumigation. According to present plans the Atlantic fleet will engage with the marine brigade in advance base maneuvers at Culebra until about Jan 28. If there is then still danger at Guantanamo the fleet will either continue longer at Culebra or base at Cuacanayabo bay, on the south coas of Cuba.

Contributory Plan Best to Pension Government Employees

By LINDLEY M. GARRISON, Secretary of War

I FEEL quite sure that it is practicable to save the government money and to benefit the government service by establishing a retirement system. I do not believe, however, that there is any possibility of such a system being provided for in the near future by any measure that will CALL FOR LARGER APPROPRIATIONS from the federal treasury than would be required to pay the annuities for those now in the service —that is, the entire annuity of all those who are now seventy years of age or over and part of the annuity of all others now in the service who shall remain therein until THEY REACH SEVENTY YEARS OF AGE, and I think it wise that the maximum annuity of which the government pays any part should be fixed at ONE-HALF THE ANNUAL SALARY for employees with average salary of twelve hundred dollars or less and at six hundred dollars for those whose annual salary exceeds twelve hundred dollars.

ALL PERSONS WHO ACCEPT EMPLOYMENT UNDER THE FEDERAL CIVIL SERVICE AFTER THE PASSAGE OF A RETIREMENT ACT SHOULD DO SO UNDER PROVISIONS OF LAW WHICH WOULD COMPEL THE ACCUMULATION OF A FUND DERIVED FROM MONTHLY DEDUCTIONS FROM THEIR SALARIES THAT WOULD MAKE IT HUMANELY POSSIBLE FOR THE GOVERNMENT TO RETIRE THEM AT SEVENTY YEARS OF AGE OR BEFORE THAT AGE SHOULD SUPERANNUATION OR OTHER DISABILITY REQUIRE IT.

Under the contributory plan an employee after a considerable length of service would receive periodically from the fund accumulated by his contributions a sum sufficient to KEEP HIM FROM ACTUAL WANT, whereas under the straight pension plan he cannot derive any benefit from the pension until he reaches the prescribed age. In other words, under the straight pension plan there would be almost the same situation that confronts us now—namely, the retention in the service, through considerations of humanity, of persons who have become incapacitated for efficient service.

All Health Bodies Should Combine to Be Effective

By JAMES L. WALLIS, President Association Food and Dairy Commissioners

THE pure food and drug movement is a brother to the SWAT THE FLY MOVEMENT, to the fight against woman and child labor which THREATEN OUR FUTURE GENERATIONS OF CITIZENS, to the proposals for the sanitary disposition of sewage and for the prevention of pollution of water supplies, to the quarantine and extinction of all contagious diseases from measles to bubonic plague. It is a branch of health work.

But at the present time there is no correlation, and that is essential. I don't care what you call it; whether you call it a national department of health, with an officer of it sitting in the cabinet, or not. Now we have separate clerks, separate laboratories, separate housing, with WASTE OF TIME, MONEY AND ENERGY and with the great loss of a broad, far seeing plan. There ought to be ONE ORGANIZATION FOR ALL THE HEALTH ACTIVITIES of the federal government, with similar organizations for the states.

AND IT SHOULD NOT END THERE. THE STATES SHOULD ENDOW THE FEDERAL INSPECTORS WITH STATE POWERS, AND THE STATE INSPECTORS SHOULD HAVE FEDERAL POWERS SO THAT EACH MIGHT HAVE THE AUTHORITY OF THE OTHER, AND THERE SHOULD BE NO SANCTUARY FOR THE SAFETY OF THE ADULTERATOR. WHEN A CITY OR A STATE HAS LABORATORY WORK TO DO IN A CITY WHERE THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT HAS A LABORATORY, THAT WORK SHOULD BE DONE IN THE FEDERAL LABORATORY.

TRUSTEES OF THE WOODWARD

Organize for the Year and Discuss Some of the Courses

The annual meeting of the Trustees of the Woodward Institute was held Tuesday afternoon. In accordance with the will of the late Ebenezer Woodward, the pastor of the First church, Rev. A. L. Hudson is the chairman ex-officio of the board. The officers elected Tuesday are: vice chairman, Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott; secretary, Rev. George M. Bailey. All pastors of Quincy churches are eligible to membership on the board of trustees.

Some extensions in musical course were authorized and it was voted to approve the plan to make the work in the domestic science course more practical and efficient, by giving credit for work done at home under certain conditions.

The school calendar will be arranged so as to harmonize with that of the public schools.

CAIN—QUINN.

A wedding of interest to young folks in this city, took place on Tuesday evening when Miss Elizabeth Cain, a popular Atlantic girl, became the bride of Cornelius Quinn of Quincy Point. Rev. J. P. Cuffe performed the ceremony at the Sacred Heart church. The couple were attended by Miss Annie Reddington and John Boyd. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wier of Stewart street tendered a wedding supper to the couple, relatives and friends.

INSANE ASYLUMS.

Gov. Foss says:

Superintendents of Massachusetts Insane asylums have in too many instances employed ignorant or more or less brutal attendants. Existing conditions lead to the employment of many nurses unsuited for the work, in default of better service. Massachusetts has now some 13,000 insane or mentally defective persons. Trained nurses, preferably female: must be substituted for the present male attendants. Visiting by the public must be encouraged.

FLYING RIVET.

The Herald reports that a rivet from the new Boston custom house tower flew across State street the other day and smashed a plate glass window in the store occupied by A. P. Homer of Wollaston. Customers accused Mr. Homer of discharging an automatic pistol which he chanced to hold in his hand. The weapon, a Christmas present, was unloaded, consequently the mystery deepened till the "sheared" rivet was produced as evidence of what had happened.

OFFICERS INSTALLED.

The installation ceremonies of the Daughters of Viking, companions to Foresters of America, were held in Protection hall Tuesday evening. Mrs. Ida Ericson, chief companion, and the other officers were inducted into office by Miss Ellen Berman of Boston, district deputy, assisted by Mrs. Ida Ayer of Boston who officiated as marshal. SEVERE BRONICHIAL COUGH

Doctors Feared Lung Trouble, Restored to Health by Vinol.

The medical profession does not believe that lung troubles are inherited, but a person may inherit a weakness or tendency to them.

Mrs. Kate Heckman, Springfield, Ohio, says: "A few years ago I was in a very bad run-down condition, and the physician told me I had consumption. I tried another physician, and he told me I had ulcers on my right lung. I quit the physicians and started on 'Vinol.' Today I am perfectly healthy, and that is why I recommend 'Vinol'."

Vinol soothes and heals the inflamed surfaces and allays the cough. Vinol creates an appetite, strengthens the digestive organs and gives the patient strength to throw off incipient pulmonary diseases.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you. Edward J. Murphy, Druggist, Quincy, Mass.

HAVERHILL GIRL STRANGELY ILL

Unconscious After Love Duel Fought With Rival

POLICE ARE INVESTIGATING

According to Story Girls Had Been Chums For Years but Disagreed Over Attentions to Young Man—Doctor Unable to Discover Extent of Miss Smith's Injuries

Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 7.—Brought to her home unconscious after a desperate struggle in front of the Bradford town hall with another young woman, a rival for the affections of her sweetheart, Miss Louise Smith, 19 years old, lies in a critical condition as the result of some injury which has baffled the physician attending her.

The police have begun an investigation into the affair, and whether Miss Smith lives or dies, it is promised that a thorough probe will be made. It is charged that Miss Elizabeth Morrill, also 19 years old, was the young woman who figured with Miss Smith in the love duel.

According to the story the police have obtained, the two girls had been chums for years, until of late they had disagreed over a young man. Each girl felt that the other was too attentive to him, and as the result of their rivalry, it is said, they quarreled on a train recently and had not been on speaking terms since.

Miss Smith's home is in Charles street, Bradford, while Miss Morrill lives in Arch street, Haverhill. Both attended a dance in the Bradford town hall.

When Miss Smith left the hall, the police understand, the other girl followed her closely and seized her by the hair as soon as she reached the street. Miss Smith then turned, the witnesses say, and they began pummelling each other.

At one time, the police understand, Miss Smith was thrown to the ground, and it is believed she may have sustained an injury to her head.

Apparently the girls were permitted to struggle, the police say, until Miss Smith was rendered unconscious. She was then brought to her home by friends.

For short intervals she was conscious, and it is understood she made a statement of the circumstances leading to the affair. Dr. John L. O'Toole, who is attending her, said he did not know the extent of her injuries and could not say whether she will recover.

City Marshal John J. Mack has already begun an investigation and many persons who witnessed the fight were questioned.

Governor of Rhode Island Call Legislature's Attention to Treasury

Providence, Jan. 7.—Legislation to increase the state's revenue was recommended by Governor Pothier in his message to the general assembly which convened to renew its duties for the first time under the biennial election system.

The governor called attention to a deficit of $150,000 in the state treasury, and said that a deficiency appropriation probably would be necessary. He advocated the adoption of a budget system for appropriations, the enactment of a collateral inheritance tax law, which, he said, should increase state revenues by at least $100,000 in the first year of operation, and the assessment of a state tax on savings deposits in national banks.

Additional powers for the tax commission, and the giving to the commissioner of industrial statistics authority to enforce the workingmen's compensation laws were suggested.

GIRL COASTER HURT

Third Sliding Accident In Worcester May Prove Fatal

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 7.—As a result of the third serious coasting accident in three days, Mildred Prince, 9, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Prince of 45 Mason street, is on the dangerous list at the Worcester city hospital, suffering from concussion of the brain and multiple cuts and bruises.

The little girl was coasting alone on a small sled on Bancroft hill. As she sped down Bluff street she collided with a market wagon driven by James T. Roberts, which turned into Bluff street from Bancroft street just as she reached the corner.

The sled crashed with terrific force into the wagon, throwing the child head foremost against the hub of the wheel and rendering her unconscious. She was rushed to the hospital by Roberts. Her chances for recovery are considered slight.

NURSE GIVES BLOOD

Hospital Attendant Makes Sacrifice For Total Stranger

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 7.—Miss Harriet Knowland, a 22-year-old nurse at the Lynn hospital, volunteered to sacrifice nearly a quart of blood to save Mrs. Annie Davis, a Salem woman whom she had never seen.

The transfusion of blood was accomplished successfully by Dr. Arthur Kimpton of Boston, a specialist in tranfusion operations and inventor of a new method that has been used only a few times previously.

It is believed that Mrs. Davis will recover, and Miss Knowland, though she arose somewhat weak from the effects of the operation, ate a hearty breakfast and was able to attend to her usual duties during the day.

WOLLASTON CLUB.

Woods Hutchinson, M. D., of New York, the noted authority and lecturer on problems of health and social welfare was the speaker, Tuesday evening at the meeting of the Wollaston Woman's club, his subject being "Which is Man's life: his work or his play."

The husbands and friends, who together with the members filled the large hall, heard many strange views set forth regarding methods of education and modes of living.

"Do we play so that we may go on with our work," asked Dr. Hutchinson, "or do we work so that we may play? In which is a man himself?"

"Undoubtedly the real man comes out in play. It is an oversight on our part to leave all arrangements for play so much to chance or at the mercy of mercenary organizations.

"What is our work and what is our play? The overworked American business man that works all the time is really not to be so much pitied as one thinks. That is his way of amusing himself. I have known how hard it is in my capacity as a practising physician to isolate the man of affairs from his business, even for a short time.

"The reason the American business man has made such a success of business is that he has gone at it and made it his pleasure, his enjoyment, his life work.

"What is the spirit of work and what the spirit of play? Success lies in doing our work in the spirit of play. When we do this we will get, not only health and happiness, but also the highest degree of efficiency.

"There is no reason why the spirit of the two should not be made identical. There is no reason why we should not find in work the happy remunerative conditions of play.

"The difference between work and play lies in the matter of enjoyment of the work done. The amount of drive in play is no less than we get out of him in work. The element of difference is that he enjoys one and not the other.

"The impression used to be that the world was a serious matter. That nothing we enjoyed was good for us.

"This point of view has been almost totally reversed and instead of distrusting our natural instincts we have come to believe that in the main the things we like to do are good for us, eight times out of ten.

"What is the chemical basis for that tired feeling?" Dr. Hutchinson asked. "It is this. The body gives out energy in the form of fuel. This fuel is starch or sugar.

"The muscles convert these into alcohol which the cells burn and turn into carbolic acid and water.

"The average human being of 150 pounds burns two quarts of alcohol every 24 hours, so you can see how dangerous it is to add any to the system.

"Burning always results in smoke and ashes. The constant exertion of our glands, brain and nervous system results in a poison in the blood which, gradually piling up, produces fatigue.

"Fatigue is saturation poisoning as a result of our activities. Our breathing and perspiration is used to get rid of this poison but if exercise is continued these methods do not keep up with it and fatigue results.

This is significant. If we stop just short of fatigue we increase the endurance of the human machine, the human engine.

"The play, work or exercise we do up to this point goes on with pleasure. Regulation of our activities to short periods of work, with regular intervals of rest will mean not only a greater amount of work done and longer lives lived, but that you would get more work out of the individual.

Dr. Hutchinson mentioned a Western factory where the introduction of four o'clock tea among the girls amounted in an increased production at the end of the week of ten per cent.

"Rest, stimulant and change of action," he said, "result in increased efficiency. In other words 'What we lose we gain.'

"We are coming to recognize this in the play of the child. The child does not waste his time in play. His circulation, his respiration, his sight, hearing and reasoning powers are all reaping the benefit. The highest kind of mental process results in the prompt decision and quick action called for in our ordinary games. We should endeavor to make a child's work in school as nearly like play as possible.

"Feed a child well. Give him all he wants, when he wants it. Give him plenty of play and plenty of sleep and the schooling he receives after that will not do him any great harm. At 15 years of age he would be where he is at present.

Dr. Hutchinson described a school in Gary, Indiana, where he declared to be unqualified success.

Here the child receives 30 minutes in the school room, 30 minutes play and 30 minutes in the shop.

One fast rule is that no books be carried home. The children prepare their lessons in the school room sitting on the floor the window sill or wherever they please.

The children liked it so well that they first came and asked to continue school through the summer vacation, which was granted. Then they asked to go Saturdays which was also permitted. Finally they wanted to come Sundays, but for obvious reasons it was refused.

"Every part of the institution" said the speaker, "is open to any of the children at anytime. Anytime the child can leave the class room he is in and go to any other part of the institution if he thinks something more interesting is going on there.

"The child doesn't know where his work ends and where his play begins. The pupils there have gone through the ordinary 8 grades in 5 years and when the system gets limbered up they will do it in .

"There is nothing that is of more absolute waste to the teacher and the child than our present school system.

"I have been all over this country and Europe hunting for 'harmless' schools and I have only found three. The one at Gary, one at Zurich, Switzerland and Tuskeegee in the South. If I could find a school like the latter for white people I would send my boy to it," (applause).

"We admit the play impulse in children and that the reason they grow is because they play."

"We should get out of the habit of putting away childish things. We say we are 'settled for life' and we soon are 'settled for life'. We should not feel we are old until we are 80. The secret lies in avoiding overstrain."

Dr. Hutchinson advanced this method of treating work as the way to solve many social problems that at present confront us.

He advised the eating of as much and what one wanted, especially children, saying that all scientific investigation had boiled down to this fact.

The evening was a most profitable one and the ready wit of Dr. Hutchinson was enjoyed, especially in the many questions he answered at the close of his remarks.

The evening was under the direction of Mrs. John O. Short, chairman of the Home Economics Committee. The ushers were Miss Ruby Bates, Mrs. Burke, Mrs. Walter Nichols, Mrs. Tripp.

The president Mrs. Arthur D. Ropes opened the meeting with brief well chosen remarks in which she wished all a happy New Year and lay down a guide for the year to come.

Solos by Charles Everett, accompanied by Miss Ruth Hardy were enjoyed. They were "A Song of Thanksgiving" by Francis Alitsen and "At Twilight by Ethelbert Nevin.

On the platform were the executive board consisting of:

Mrs. W. E. Rowe, Mrs. N. G. Nickerson, Miss Fanny L. Johnson, Mrs. W. D. Sanford, Mrs. W. E. Keyes Mrs. Safford, Mrs. Edward J. Badger, Miss Florence G. Olney, Mrs. C. S. Adams, Mrs. W. C. TITTA RUFFO.

Titto Ruffo, the Italian baritone, and the most sensational singer of our time, not even excepting Caruso, will make his first appearance in Boston in Symphony hall Sunday afternoon, at 3.30. He will have the assistance of Miss Florence Hinkle, the admired soprano, and William Morse Rummel, violinist, a son of the late distinguished pianist Franz Rummel.

The appearance of Ruffo in Boston is watched with much curiosity by all who are interested in opera particularly and in singing in general. He gains fame, if only from the fact that his fee is greater than that of any other singer in the world, with the exception of Caruso and Melba. Considering the fact that he is a baritone, this is all the more extraodinary. Not only is his fee huge in America, but it is as large in Europe and South America where he has long been a favorite. Ruffo is said to have a high baritone voice of brilliancy. He is said to be a skilled singer and a musicianly artist. At present he is a member of the Chicago Opera Company, having been brought to America last year by Andreas Dippel, the then manager of the company, who was able to do so because Mr. Stotesbury of Philadelphia guaranteed the fee of two thousand dollars a performance the singer was to receive. His success in Philadelphia, Washington, and New York has been quite equal to his reputation.

TITTA RUFFO.
At Symphony Hall.

At his appearance here he will sing, for the most part, well known and familiar arias, his first number being the prologue to "Pagliacci"; his second the most famous of patter songs, "Largo al Factotum" from "Barber of Seville"; and his last the drinking song from Thomas's "Hamlet." He will also sing a group of Italian and Spanish songs.

Miss Hinkle, who is justly admired by the musical public of this city, will sing the aria, "Vissi d'arte ad'amor" from "Tosca" and "Depuis le jour" from "Louise."

Mr. Rummel, for his first group plays two little pieces made familiar by Kreisler-Pugnani, "Praeludium and Allegro" and "Chanson Louis XIII at Pavane." He will also play "Berceus" by Faure and an Introduction from "Tarantelle" by Sarasate.

AUCTION BRIDGE AND DANCING.

The first of a series of home parties given by the ladies of the First church was held Tuesday evening at the Miller Stile Inn, with Mrs. John Gow and Mrs. Mary A. Tisdale as hostesses The affair was very informal and the evening proved one of exceptional enjoyment. Auction bridge and straight whist was enjoyed by those who like this form of diversion, while in one of the other rooms of the Inn dancing was enjoyed. Light refreshments were served by the hostesses during the evening. Souvenirs for the best scores at whist were awarded to Mrs. A. H. Remick, Mrs. H. E. Hardwick and Mrs. H. E. Ricker.

RECENT DEATHS.

Two aged residents of this city passed away Tuesday, Mrs. Mary G. Harte of 18 Clark avenue, Atlantic in her 74th year and Mrs. Sarah Nesbit of 16 Prospect avenue, Wollaston in her 80th year.

Mrs. Harte was the wife of Albion A. Harte and leaves one daughter, Mrs. James Smith. Funeral services will be held at her home on Tuesday afternoon and Rev. Henry Cunningham, former pastor of Quincy will officiate.

Mrs. Nesbit was the widow of George T. Nesbit and has resided in Wollaston for many years. She leaves one son and one daughter.

KNIGHTS OF MALTA SOCIAL.

The first of a series of socials to be given this year by John Adams Commandery, Knights of Malta, was held in Colonial hall Tuesday evening with a large attendance. The affair was one of the most successful ever held under the auspices of the local organiaztion. Whist was played during the evening by nearly all present and souvenirs were awarded to Mrs. John Tate and Robert Falconer. An entertainment was given which included songs by Robert Grear, John Tate, Robert Falconer and William Gray. Refreshments were served.

Grape a Prolific Grower.

There are about 40 species of grapes in the world, more than half of which are found in North America. Few other plants on this continent grow wild under such varied conditions and over such extended areas.

BASKET BALL TONIGHT.

Early yesterday afternoon a message was received from the Lowell Y. M. C. A. stating that their basket ball team had disbanded, and accordingly would not make the trip to Quincy tonight. Physical Director Eaton of Cunningham gym. of Milton very kindly agreed to send over his team and a great game should result tonight. Cunningham has not lost a game this season, and although the Y. M. C. A. team has not been running any too smoothly the players feel that they will spoil the visitors record. The High school class and the Employed Boys will play between the halves.

NEW BOWLING RECORDS

Single of 133 and Total of 321 Team-Total 1447

Dunn, while rolling in the weekly matches of the Heptasophs league on the Coliseum alleys Tuesday evening, reached 133 in his second string, and not only set a new record for the league but also established a new single string record for the city. Charnock of the Foundry team of the Fore River has led that league with a single of 123 while Raleigh of the Clan McGregor league has held the city record with 120. The exceptional showing in competition caused all existing records to be set aside.

Dunn also tied with Smith of the Fore River league who has held the high three string total record of 321 all season. Incidentally the team of Captain Gibney, of which Dunn is the anchor man rolled 1447 and set the record total of the city and with 518 set a new mark in the scramble for the high team single honors.

The team of Captain Gibney beat that of Captain Wilson 4 to 0.

BOY SCOUTS INVITED.

"A cruise on the Pioneer" will be the subject of a stereopticon lecture by Mr. Shaw of Waltham at the Y. M. C. A. Saturday morning. Mr. Shaw had charge of the Pioneer, the Boy Scout ship on its cruise last summer, and the 75 slides taken from photographs will be of great interest to all boys and especially to the Scouts. Three Quincy boys were on this cruise. The meeting is to begin at 9 o'clock instead of at the usual time 9.30, because it will take nearly an hour to run off the slides. All boys of Quincy are invited to attend the meeting and the Scout troops of Wollaston and Quincy are given a special invitation.

BLOODY BATTLE BEFORE OJINAGA

Villa Will Lead Rebel Troops at the Front

EXPECT IMMEDIATE ATTACK

Federal Situation Desperate as Smallpox and Typhoid Are Raging—No Medical Supplies Available and Reports Say Stricken Soldiers Are Taken Out and Shot and Burned

Presidio, Tex., Jan. 7.—"Villa is coming!" This news, flashed to the federal garrison at Ojinaga, sent General Orozco's troops scurrying to their posts in anticipation of an immediate attack by the constitutionalist army.

It halted a celebration over the retreat of the rebels, who had withdrawn to a point twelve miles from the town after defeat in attempting to capture it by storm.

Cavalry sent westward in pursuit of the rebels were recalled and the defenders set at the task of strengthening the fortifications on which General Orozco relies to beat the attack of General Villa. The American soldiers guarding the border on this side of the Rio Grande declare the bloodiest battle of the revolution will follow the arrival of Villa, and the Red Cross nurses and physicians are making preparations for the care of wounded, though already their hands are full because of the fighting of the past week.

A rebel courier who slipped across the river during the night reported that Villa had arrived at La Mula pass, had ordered the arrest of Generals Ortega and Natera, and had taken personal command of the attacking army. The courier declared Villa would attack at once, but United States army officers believe fighting will not be renewed until late this week.

The situation of the federals in Ojinaga is desperate, despite their victory over the rebels. Smallpox and typhoid are raging there. No medical supplies are available. Reports reached here that as fast as soldiers are stricken they were taken out, shot to death and their bodies burned. This story was told by refugees who crossed the river. It is doubted by American officers.

The federal commanders claim the defeat administered to the rebels was the most disastrous the constitutionalists had suffered during the revolution. They asserted they had captured one field piece and two machine guns from Ortega's soldiers.

With the dead and dying, the field over which the rebel and federal forces contended presented a gruesome aspect. There were more than 200 dead and nearly as many seriously wounded lying about. The dead rebels were saturated with coal oil and burned on the field.

The bodies of all dead federals were brought to Ojinaga and buried with military honors in the Catholic cemetery in the south portion of the city. Along with the burial parties sent out by the federals were the wives, mothers and sweethearts of the federal dead and wounded looking for husbands, sons and lovers, crying out with joy when they found them alive, but giving them loving care and silence when they found them lifeless.

Candles are burning in many little adobe houses in Ojinaga in memory of the dead.

Federals declare General Benjamin Argumedo, with 4000 troops, is coming to their relief from Torreon and assert 12,000 other federals are marching only one day behind. Argumedo plans to attack Ortega's rebels from the rear.

CHARGED WITH ROBBERY

Ordinary Seaman Sica of Naval Training Station In Custody

Newport, R. I., Jan. 7.—Robbery of the jewelry store of William Leys & Co., a few days before Christmas was charged to Ordinary Seaman Charles M. Sica of Jersey City, connected with the band school at the naval training station.

Sica was arrested by the naval officials, who telegraphed to Washington for permission to turn him over to local authorities. More than $3500 worth of jewelry, including several watches, was stolen from the Leys store.

Sica's arrest came after the pawning of a watch, which he is said to have admitted selling to the man who pawned it. Much of the loot was recovered on information given by Sica. Naval authorities said he implicated two other seamen in his story of the robbery.

Paterson Opera House Burned

Paterson, N. J., Jan. 7.—Fire destroyed the Paterson opera house and threatened many nearby frame tenement buildings. The loss was $100,000. Five firemen were overcome by smoke while carrying hose in the opera house.

That proposed New York skyscraper 901 feet high would outsoar the Woolworth building, but would still be topped by the Eiffel tower in Paris. While going skyward why not go for a world record and be done with it, temporarily at least?

FERRIS BEGINS INQUIRY

Governor Confers With Officials In Michigan Strike Zone

Houghton, Mich., Jan. 7.—Governor W. N. Ferris began a public investigation of the strike of the copper miners in northern Michigan. The investigation will continue for three days.

Should he fail to bring the labor strife to an end the governor will make public his view of the situation. The governor's program called for conferences with the sheriffs, prosecuting attorneys and chairman of the boards of supervisors of Houghton and Keweenaw counties. Thursday he will hear the statements of leaders of the Western Federation of Miners, mine owners and operators. All of the hearings will be open to the public.

James E. Cunningham, Michigan state labor commissioner, will assist in making the investigation. Charles H. Moyer, president of the western federation, expects to attend the meeting of the Michigan Federation of Labor at Lansing next Monday, and strike leaders hope he will first come here to see Governor Ferris.

LABORERS DIE IN RIVER

Seventy-Five Grand Trunk Pacific Employes Die in the Fraser

Winnipeg, Man., Jan. 7.—Dashed to death on the rocks in the Fraser river or swept to their doom by the swift current, seventy-five laborers employed by the Grand Trunk Pacific railroad, perished, according to Angelo Pugiliese, one of the twenty-five who managed to escape when the flat boat in which they were being transported across the river was wrecked on a rock.

He says that all the twenty-five who escaped were injured. The tragedy occurred in British Columbia. Pugiliese says a change in the location of the work necessitated the crossing of the Fraser. The 100 laborers put away from shore in a frail craft which became unmanageable. It was dashed to pieces on a rock in the middle of the torrent.

POISONED NEEDLE STORY IS HIS ALIBI

But New Yorker Is Held on Grand Larceny Charge

New York, Jan. 7.—His claim that he had been the victim of a "poison needle" attack and robbed of $210 intended to meet the pay roll of his employer, a contractor, resulted in Charles T. Mongarella's detention on a charge of grand larceny.

Mongarella had drawn the money at a bank and was on the way to his place of work when he informed a companion that he was feeling dizzy and had been pricked in the arm with a "poison needle."

He also discovered that the roll of bills had been taken from his coat pocket. A physician failed to find the needle prick of which Mongarella complained.

GRAPE JUICE ANALYZED

Said to Contain About Three Percent More Alcohol Than Beer

Washington, Jan. 7.—Congressman Bartholdt of St. Louis has risen to strike a blow at grape juice. Dr. Bartholdt recently attended a fashionable luncheon and was proffered grape juice. He remarked that he preferred beer.

"We do not keep intoxicating beverages in the house," said the hostess.

"My dear madam," said the doctor, "I prefer a glass of beer because it is the milder drink. Grape juice is too strong for me, especially in the middle of the day, when I have several hours' work before me."

Dr. Bartholdt still avers that grape juice demands alcohol to preserve it, and that it contains 6 to 7 percent of alcohol, as against 3 to 4 percent in beer."

$75,000 FIRE LOSS

Ten Thousand Tons of Coal Destroyed In Portland, Me.

Portland, Me., Jan. 7.—An estimated loss of $75,000 resulted from a fire, which destroyed 10,000 tons of coal and almost wiped out the property of the Cash Fuel company on the East Side.

L. E. Mitchell, engineer of the plant and his six children, who lived over the company's offices, escaped from the burning building in their night clothes. All of the children were suffering with the whooping cough. With the mercury close to the zero mark, the children were obliged to trudge nearly a quarter of a mile, barefooted, to the nearest house.

The police are of the opinion the fire was set. Several other small blazes have been started in the neighborhood by a supposed firebug.

The fire was discovered by Harold Bond, who lives near the plant. He was awakened by the glow of the flames reflected on the walls of his chamber.

School Destroyed by Fire

Tilton, N. H., Jan. 7.—Fire of a probably incendiary origin destroyed the frame school building and contents owned by the Northfield school district, located near Oak Hill, six miles from here.

The Kimberley Gem

It Was Taken From the Owner, and He Was Obliged to Steal It

By ARTHUR STANTON

There was but one way out of the situation—I must become a thief, a thief of my own property. Possession is nine points of the law, and possession was with my opponent. He held the gem, and I could fight for it in the courts. I must get possession of it and let him fight for it by law. No; I could not do that either, for if I stole it the law would convict me of being a thief and restore the diamond to its supposed owner. If Benton hadn't peached I could have got away with my property without any trouble.

This is how it happened. Thrown on my beam ends, yet young and vigorous, I resolved to strike out for some new country where there were chances for a fellow to get a clutch on the rounds of the ladder. Fate decided where I should go. Loitering on the dock in New York, where a steamer was loading for South Africa, I went aboard, saw the purser and told him I would like to work my way across the big pond. I knew how to figure, and he needed a clerk, so he gave me a job, my pay being my grub and my passage.

Well, in time I found myself in South Africa and, being strapped, was obliged to go to work in the diamond mines to keep myself from starving. We were all searched on leaving work each day to make sure that we had no stones in our possession. It was hard work and poor pay, especially for me, who had been brought up in refinement. But I had to stand it.

One Sunday I took a long walk into the country. It was a hot day, and to get out of the sun I went to some low hills where there was shade and sat down on the bank of a stream. Stones and dirt were being constantly washed down, and, my eyes becoming fixed on a brown pebble, I picked it up and looked at it. It was about the size and shape of a large almond. It looked to me like a diamond in the rough, and if it hadn't been so large I might have suspected that it was a diamond. I hadn't been working in the mines long enough to become expert in such matters, so I put it in my pocket and took it home, intending to get Jim Benton, a fellow workman with whom I had fallen in and who seemed disposed to be chummy with me, to pass upon it.

I'll never forget the look on Jim's face when he turned it from the stone to me.

"How in the world did you ever get out with it?" he asked.

"Get out with it! What do you mean?"

"Out of the mines?"

"I didn't bring it out of the mines. I found it miles from the mines. What is it?"

"It's a diamond."

It was now my turn to look peculiar. I had a fortune in my possession, but I saw at once that I would be suspected of stealing it while at work and not only lose it, but serve a term in prison.

"For heaven's sake, Jim," I said, "don't say anything about it! I took a long walk today and found it by a stream. It must have been washed out by the water. It looked something like the stones we are digging out of the ground, but it was so large that I didn't think it could be a diamond."

Jim had a cast iron conscience and, believing that I stole the stone, considered it his duty to inform his employers, though he might have been moved by the hope of reward or the splendid position the act would give him with the management. Anyway, he went that very evening to the superintendent's house and told him the story. Not having got any promise from him to keep his mouth shut, I took pains to bury my treasure where no one would find it.

Early the next morning I was called to Hartwell's office. He told me he had understood that I had a valuable stone in my possession and demanded it.

I acknowledged I had a stone, but had found it outside the mines. He gave me my choice of giving it up or standing trial. I knew what standing trial meant. I had a valuable diamond in my possession which there was every reason to suppose came from the company's mines and I would be convicted. I agreed to give up the gem on a promise of not being prosecuted. I was only discharged.

Having told where the stone was to be found, I went to Jim, and from the way I talked to him he was convinced that I had really found the diamond and knew he had deprived me of it.

He was very much cut up and volunteered to do what he could to mend matters by telling Hartwell that he had done me an injustice.

"Don't make a fool of yourself a second time," I retorted; "if you really wish to undo what you have done do it in another way."

"How?"

"Well, the diamond is mine and I'm going to have it. You've got Hartwell's confidence. Learn from him where he keeps it and advise me."

"You're crazy. Do you suppose you can ever get possession of a diamond in the hands of the diamond company?"

"You do what I say."

Jim was so upset at having acted with such haste that he finally consented to do as I asked. That's the trouble with these frightfully conscientious people. They swing as far in one direction as the other. After all, it isn't the conscience that's bad. It's the judgment, or, more likely, the impulse. Jim, who was in high favor with the company on account of having peached on me, was given $500 for telling on me. He offered me all the money paid him for my forgiveness. I needed money to carry out my plan to get my diamond, so I accepted it as a loan, promising to return it if I succeeded in getting my property. By this time Jim, who was thoroughly repentant, agreed to help me all he could.

One day he came to me and said that diamonds were sent periodically to England. They were taken to the coast, where they were shipped by steamer. I at once made inquiries about the route with a view to finding some weak point on which I might operate and learned, among other things, that the gems were shipped just in time to catch the mail steamer for Europe. If through any delay they did not reach the coast before the vessel sailed they were locked up in the postoffice till the departure of the next ship.

I asked Jim to find out for me when my stone would be shipped, and he tried to do so, but only learned that it was still at Kimberley. I at once started over the route looking for some point where I might lie in wait and catch the convoy napping. I came to a stream where the carriers must be ferried over. It occurred to me that something might be done here, but after racking my brain I could hit upon no plan that seemed feasible. I went on, but as I proceeded I formed a scheme a part of which pertained to this ferry. Reaching the coast, I at once went to the postoffice to look over the ground there.

I had nearly all of Jim Benton's $500 in my pocket and was well dressed. I represented myself as a postoffice official, whose duties were to travel about and make reports on different postoffices. But I made no pretense at supervising the postmaster at this point. Instead, I invited him to dinner and treated him sumptuously. This gave me access to his office. I learned where diamonds were locked when delayed in transportation.

One evening after the clerks had gone home I sat with the postmaster in his office. Suddenly I fell over in a pretended faint and on reviving begged him to go for a doctor. He did so, and while he was gone with some wax I had provided for the purpose I took an impression of the lock on the safe where diamonds waiting transportation were kept. When he returned with the doctor I was so far recovered that I did not need the latter's services.

The next day I returned to Kimberley and charged Benton to keep a sharp lookout for the shipment of my diamond. It may be wondered that, since I was intending to steal my own property, I was punctilious as to taking this particular stone. It was, firstly, because I should have had to take a good many other stones to make up its value, and, secondly, Jim Benton's conscience was so stiff that if he had believed that I intended to take any but the stone I had found he might have swung the other way and peached on me again.

Jim did good work for me in looking out for the shipment of my stone. He was so thoroughly trusted by all those in authority that he could ask questions about it without exciting suspicion.

One day he came to me and said that a shipment of diamonds was to be made the next morning, and my stone was among the number. It was considered so valuable that a double convoy would be sent out. Within an hour I started for the coast.

Coming to the stream the party would be obliged to cross. I unchained the boat, pulled myself over and on reaching the opposite shore sent the boat adrift. As I saw it disappear on the current I felt sure the diamond convoy would be delayed. Then I went on to the coast.

I had the happiness to see the delayed diamond carriers coming in when the mail steamer was well out at sea. They took the gems to the postmaster, who, I felt sure, would lock them in his safe, and I had a key in my pocket that had been made from the impression I had taken. The party went back to Kimberley, and soon after their departure I reappeared at the postoffice, where I was heartily greeted by the postmaster, whom I told that I had inspected the postoffice at Kimberley and would await the next steamer for home.

The rest of my work was dead easy. I complained of not feeling well and was invited to lodge with the postmaster, whose rooms were in the same building with his office. In the middle of the night I went down in my stocking feet to the safe, opened it, felt among the stones till I recognized my diamond, relocked the safe and went back to bed.

There was no hurry for my departure, for the diamonds would not be taken out of the safe till put on the steamer. I sailed on the same ship with them and, on reaching Europe, went to Amsterdam, where I had my stone cut and sold it for a fortune.

I concluded to forgive Benton, in consideration of his valuable assistance, for peaching on me and offered to give him a part of the proceeds. But he would take nothing and, for aught I know, is still handling a pick in the Kimberley mines.

BADLY BATTERED VESSEL IN PORT

Steamer Poleric Arrives in Boston Looking Like Wreck

CARRIES $1,000,000 CARGO

Runs Into Blizzard on Grand Banks on New Year's Day and Loses Boats and Deck Fittings—Crew Suffered Untold Hardships—Captain's Wife Was Nearly Drowned

Boston, Jan. 7.—Storm scarred, with her boats and davits gone, her crew and officers more dead than alive from hunger and exposure, and the captain's wife fatigued and nerve shattered almost to the point of speechlessness, the British steamship Poleric, laden with 11,000 tons of merchandise from China, worth $1,000,000, steamed into the New Haven docks at South Boston. And with her were brought to port such tales of the sea, and such adventures in storm as have probably never been narrated except in the pages of fiction. Every man on board suffered hardships such as their lives on the ocean had never brought them before, but it remained for the captain's wife, Mrs. J. S. Dye, to live through the most harrowing ordeal of them all.

The Poleric encountered ordinarily good weather till arriving in the vicinity of the Grand Banks. It was New Year's day a blizzard came up and a strong wind so ploughed up the sea that the ship pitched helplessly about. No New Year dinner was eaten by the Poleric's crew for it was impossible to prepare it. The galley was flooded early in the day and huge waves came over the vessel's side, drenching the men.

The storm then somewhat subsided till after 10 o'clock at night, when it broke out again in even greater force. A pitch of the vessel tossed First Officer R. P. Ovens into the lee scuppers with such violence that he had to be taken to his room and there it was necessary to lash him to his bed to keep him from being washed overboard.

At 4 o'clock in the morning a wave swept the starboard side of the ship with such force as to crush most of the superstructure and break open the door of Mrs. Dye's room and then, eddying, carrying her out and under a four-foot pile of wrecked furniture and shattered glass. When, after a half hour of unconsciousness she recovered her senses, she believed she had been washed into the sea.

The wave carried away seven lifeboats from the upper deck and many of the steel davits were badly twisted and broken. Fifty ventilators, some of them weighing more than a ton, were wrenched from their deck plates and caused much damage as they carromed along the deck.

After Mrs. Dye recovered consciousness she managed to extricate herself from the mass of wreckage and, attired in nothing more than a night-dress made her way to the shattered remnant of the stern bridge where her husband was trying to guide the stricken ship. Throughout the day the blizzard increased in intensity and the temperature was below freezing point. Dripping with water and shivering with cold, the woman insisted upon remaining at the captain's side, repeatedly refusing to heed his order that she find a more comfortable place on the vessel.

For the next three days waves swept over the ship, gutting every room and smashing furniture. The officers' rooms were rendered uninhabitable. Water poured down into the boiler rooms, generating steam that nearly boiled the stokers alive. The wireless room was wrecked and the aerial went adrift rendering the apparatus useless.

Neither Captain Dye nor Second Officer Morgan were able to locate the ship's position accurately. They guided the vessel slowly toward Boston by constantly using the sounding lead. On their arrival here every man and the one woman of the ship's company were badly frost-bitten and showed plainly the sufferings they had undergone. So complete was the wreck that Mrs. Dye had to leave the vessel clad in an improvised skirt made of a blanket and an oilskin jacket.

CANNOT BE SAVED

Gloucester Girl Who Took Bichloride of Mercury Slowly Dying

Gloucester, Mass., Jan. 7.—Miss Agnes Wheeler, 32 years old, of Curtis street, Pigeon Cove district, who took two seven and one-half grain tablets of bichloride of mercury at her home last Saturday afternoon, is hovering between life and death at the L. M. Haskins hospital, Rockport. The chances are against her.

All means known to science to save her are being taken but she seems to be slowly slipping under the influence of the death-dealing poison. She remains in her hospital cot apparently as well as ever. She talks to the hospital authorities and reads magazines.

Miss Wheeler had been despondent for some time and while her mother was away took the poison. She told her mother of her predicament when the latter arrived home.

French Aviator After Long Flight Will Fight Duel With Competitor

VEDRINES MUST FIGHT

Ordered by French Aerial League to Give Rival Satisfaction

Paris, Jan. 7.—Jules Vedrines, one of the French aviators who recently flew from Paris to Cairo, Egypt, was ordered in a telegram from Rene Quinton, president of the French National Aerial league, to give satisfaction immediately to Henry Roux, his rival, who also had accomplished the flight and who had challenged him to a duel after Vedrines had struck him in the face during an altercation.

The quarrel between the two aviators is said to have arisen because Roux is alleged to have requested the Turkish officials not to assist Vedrines on his flight in the Orient.

All the celebrations which had been arranged in honor of Vedrines among the French colony in Cairo have been cancelled.

CHANTS MASS AS HIS ALTAR BURNS

Priest's Calmness Prevents Panic In Church

Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 7.—Continuing to chant mass as flames spread over his head and threatened to fire his garments, Rev. William F. Sheehan calmed 500 persons in St. John the Baptist church and prevented a panic.

There was a moment of excitement in the congregation when the blaze was seen on the altar. The flames leaped toward the ceiling, but Fr. Sheehan continued singing as though nothing had happened, and when the sparks flew on his garments extinguished them with his hands.

Rev. Mr. Mullany, pastor, and other priests hurried to the assistance of Fr. Sheehan, and while they fought the fire the congregation quietly filed out.

Owner Tows Her Into Gloucester After Hearing Whistle For Help

Gloucester, Mass., Jan. 7.—John Dahlner, owner of several fishing smacks in this city, recognizing the faint whistle of his vessel, the George T. Fisher, which was wallowing in a heavy sea with the engines and steering gear smashed, almost three miles from shore, put out in another vessel and towed the disabled boat to land.

For over an hour the George T. Fisher was floundering in an open sea with huge billows pouring over the bulwarks. The red light distress signals could not be seen from the shore and the siren was resorted to. The wind carried the sound into the office of Mr. Dahlner who immediately recognized the whistle as his.

FIRST TEAM LOST SECOND TEAM WON

Quincy High Meets Wellesley High in First of Interscholastic Basketball Games

Braintree High Outclassed by Quincy's Second Team

Quincy High school lost their first interscholastic league game to Wellesley High in the local gymnasium Tuesday afternoon, 21 to 14, and the Quincy second team defeated Braintree High school 23 to 2.

A more enthusiastic gallery of fans composed of students, never witnessed a contest. The league game was unusually exciting because the greater part of the game the visitors had but four points to the good.

In the second period the score was 15 to 13, and but for the fine passing and accurate shooting of Wellesley the game would have been Quincy's.

The visitors demonstrated a fine passing knowledge while Quincy at times passed blindly. Both teams had equal opportunities to score, but the most sensational goals were thrown by the Wellesley forwards in the first period when they made shots from difficult angles.

Bill Cody, the former national star, who was one of the strongest players in the game when the St. Mary's team of West Quincy was a contender for State honors, refereed, and his impartial rulings, given with a directness that is characteristic of him, restricted the players to clean basket ball. He will referee all league games, also the Franklin game on Feb. 3.

Captain James Jenkins did most of the scoring for his team. In addition to shooting two baskets from the floor he copped four on free tries. Earl Bates shot a pretty basket while surrounded by Wellesley men, right under the cage but made only two points on six free tries. Leon White also secured a basket at a critical moment.

The visitors would have scored oftener if it had not been for the work of Hamlin and Paige, the Quincy backs. The work of the former was particularly good because of his faculty of breaking up the passing formation of Wellesley.

Keefe, the Wellesley right forward secured four goals from the floor, and Putnam, the centre, shot two baskets, and five from free tries.

Double fouls were called three times and in two instances both teams secured the points. Cody called the fouls for shouldering and holding.

The cheering of the students added to the interest of the game, and it is probable that by the time the whistle blows for the league game with Reading High on Friday that they will be strongly organized and ready to lend all encouragement to a team which can be made one of the fastest in the state and also champion of the interscholastic league. The summary:

WELLESLEY		QUINCY
Keefe, rf		lf Bates
		lf W. Brown
		lf Martin
Finnerty, lf		rg Hanlin
Putnam, c		c White
Kuhlewein, rg		lb Paige
Hatch, lg		rf Jenkins

Score—Wellesley, 21; Quincy 14. Goals from floor—Keefe 4, Finnerty, Putnam 2, Kuhlewein, Jenkins 2, Bates, White. Goals from five tries—Putnam 5, Bates 2, Jenkins 4. Referee—Cody. Scorer—Mansur. Timer—French.

In the Braintree—Quincy game, the two points scored by Pratt of Braintree were goals from free tries. The Braintree quintette demonstrated only a slight knowledge of the game, while Quincy showed that a busy season confronts them if they want to equal the style of the second team of last year. The summary:

QUINCY, 2d		BRAINTREE
Matheson lf		rg Long
Hunt lf		lg Fisher
Welsford rf
Roache c		c Smith
Crocker rg		lf Hubbard
Mullen lg		rf Pratt
Safford lg

Score—Quincy 23; Braintree 2. Goals from floor—Hunt, Matheson 3, Welsford, Roache 2, Mullen 2. Goals from free tries—Matheson 4, Pratt 2.

COMPOSITION ON "A BOY"

The "District School" given in the vestry of the Universalist church, Tuesday evening, by the young people of the West Quincy, M. E. church, under the auspices of the Dorcas society was enjoyed by all. It was a typical rural school, such as one often hears grandmother or grandfather tell about, with all its escapades and the examination by the school committee man.

The composition on "A boy" was bright and full of wit. The knowledge of the spelling and history classes was astonishing.

D. J. S. McCurdy rendered several pleasing solos at the close of the entertainment. Ice cream and homemade candy found ready sale during the evening.

EDWARD F. FITZGERALD.

The funeral of Edward F. Fitzgerald was held this morning from St. Mary's church and was very largely attended. Mass was celebrated by Rev. Fr. McCoy, the Gregorian chant being sung by the regular choir with Miss Cronin as organist. The burial was at St. Mary's cemetery, the bearers being James Connoly, John Duggan Lawrence Kelley, Patrick Timen, William Little and John Fitzgerald. There was a profusion of beautiful flowers which included set pieces from the Harmony club, a pillow from his chums, a tribute from the Tubular Rivet and Stud Co. The operators at the Quincy Telephone exchange, the pupils of the eighth grade of the Gridley Bryant school and others.

had had an interview with Chief Litchfield of the Fire Department Monday afternoon, and that the Chief had explained the incident relative to his chauffeur going home to dinner in the Chief's car. The explanation however did not convince him that it was necessary, and that the practice had already been stopped. The Mayor further said that he believed that the Chief should be able to run his own automobile and not have to depend on a driver.

A BOY'S MOMENT OF FAME.

When Young Walter Scott Was Praised by Robert Burns.

From the time he was six Walter Scott read ravenously, and it was through his wide reading that when only fifteen he became for a few moments the center of a group of learned men. It was when the poet Burns visited Edinburgh and had shown great interest in a picture of a soldier lying dead in the snow with a dog keeping patient watch beside him.

Beneath the picture were some beautiful lines, but neither Burns nor any of those learned men knew their author until young Walter Scott, who happened to be present, whispered that they were by Langhorne.

Then Burns turned to him, with glowing eyes, and said, "It is no common course of reading that has taught you this," adding to his friends, "This lad will be heard of yet."

How proud the lad felt! How wistfully joyful in the warmth of the great poet's praise and then how suddenly forgotten when only a few days later Robert Burns passed him in the street without a glance! Scott's moment of fame had vanished.—Ariadne Gilbert in St. Nicholas.

Disillusionment.

A woman had three caskets to give to a man. One day she read in his eyes that he could take but the nearest and lowest, and that instant arose from her heart the wailing cry, "The king is dead."—Will Levington Comfort.

Renunciations

I have eschewed the fat cigars
At fifty cents per each.
The brier pipe more comfy is
And always in my reach.

I have renounced the fondling of
The twenty dollar bills.
The hundred dollar William is
The sort that cures my chills.

No more I pay attention to
The charming widows fair.
They's popping up too thick about
Your uncle everywhere.

All curiosity about
The banking laws I've curbed
Because my currency, you see,
Has always been disturbed.

STARVING BULGARS LOOK TO AMERICA FOR SUCCOR.

American Woman Teacher Here to Raise Funds For Needy Thousands.

Thousands of women and children in Bulgaria are facing starvation this winter, according to Miss Inez L. Abbott, missionary of the woman's board of the interior of the Congregational church and principal of the American girls' boarding school in Samokov, Bulgaria. Miss Abbott, who is a native of Lansing, Mich., has come to the United States to raise funds for the relief of 7,000 destitute families in the Samokov district.

With additional funds the relief committee of Samokov hopes to develop a general truck garden for the poor.

The suffering and want in Bulgaria, Miss Abbott says, were much greater in 1913 than in 1912. She explained that the crops were gathered last year before the mobilization of the armies. With all the oxen, carts and men at the front with the armies, practically no crops were planted, and such as were cultivated could not be properly harvested because of lack of labor and facilities.

"For months many Bulgarians have not known what it is to satisfy their hunger," said Miss Abbott. "In the cities and valleys around Samokov families are in direst need.

"The queen of Bulgaria is devoting all of her time and thought to relief work among her suffering people. Recently she said to me, 'If relief funds not only for suffering, but for the orphans, should come from the United States I would feel very grateful.' The Bulgarians do not fear any political entanglement such as they think may result when any European country advances assistance for them."

Miss Abbott, through an appeal last winter, raised funds in this country, with which she greatly assisted in the relief of the poverty stricken people of Samokov. Much of the money was used to buy raw materials, with which the women made garments. Some of it was also used to prepare small farms around Samokov for cultivation and to buy the seeds for planting.

SALES TO HOMESTEADERS.

Almost Two Million Acres of Indian and Public Lands Disposed Of.

Secretary Lane of the interior department has received through Commissioner Tallman of the general land office a report of the work of James W. Witten, chief law clerk of that office, concerning sales of undeveloped lands under his personal direction. Mr. Witten was absent four months in the west superintending the registration and drawings for three bodies of land aggregating 1,800,000 acres located in Montana and Nebraska. At these registrations 116,985 persons presented applications for farm homes.

In addition, he sold at public auction lots in the government town site of Camas, in Montana, and the remnant lands in the former Rosebud and Lower Brule Indian reservations, in South Dakota, and in the Kiowa, Comanche, Apache and Wichita reservations, in Oklahoma, at prices ranging from $1.25 to $111 per acre, or at an average of $8 per acre per bid. The larger part of these remnant lands remained untaken by homeseekers after having been subject to homestead entry at $1.25 per acre for twelve years.

NAVY CUTS COST OF LIVING.

Reduction From $1.50 to 44 Cents a Day on Travel by Rail.

The navy department has found another way to beat the "high cost of living" and the "trusts," on both of which Secretary Daniels is waging war, so far as his department is affected.

By adopting the system of feeding bluejackets in transit by rail out of the navy commissary instead of by contract with the Pullman company as heretofore the department has discovered that it can reduce the cost per day per man from $1.50 to 44 cents.

When 150 recruits were transferred from the north Chicago training station to Seattle recently the new plan was tried. Food from the commissary at the Chicago station was put aboard and served in kitchen tourist cars furnished by the Pullman company. Navy mess boys acted as waiters. The plan worked splendidly and effected a saving of several hundred dollars on the trip.

Worked Ten Months For a Dollar.

J. H. Karnes, humane official of Kenosha, Wis., has worked ten months for the state society in Kenosha county, and his total pay has been $1. This dollar is framed and hanging up in his home. The work is supposed to be supported by private subscriptions, and just one subscription was received.

AMONG THE CLUBS

the home. The home makers are the women upon whom society depends and they are the women who build the nation. The task with all its requirements of education, environment, training and culture is one that absorbs the interest of the wise women and the great responsibilities can only be assumed by gaining adequate experience from study and observation. The important work is counted one of the guides to the maker of homes and the leader in household and economic affairs.

WORLD'S GREATEST EXPOSITION.

Club women are interested in the announcements that have been made recently regarding the different departments some of which are nearly completed. Among the exhibits of the Fine Arts department will be a model of thePioneer Mother which will be executed by Charles Grady of Philadelphia, one of the most distinguished American sculptors. At the close of the exposition the statue will be given by the Pioneer Mother Monument association of California to the city of San Francisco and will be installed permanently in the Civic centre.

The memorial is designed as a tribute to the women who in the early days endured privation and hardship in reaching California.

An exchange in noting the progress of the work at the exposition makes mention of the many colored prisms which will be used for night illumination and these are of fine cut glass made in Austria by a process not followed elsewhere. The prisms, it is said, are known as jewels and are patiently tooled by hand at the homes of the artisans. They will be used for making picturesque colorings in an effective scheme for illuminating different buildings and the extensive grounds.

Apropos the exposition, comment has been made that 27 of the world's nations have accepted the invitations conveyed to them and 35 states have selected sites for the state pavilions. The concession privileges from 7000 individuals and corporations indicates the unprecedented interest in the exposition.

SUDDEN DEATH.

George S. Blaisdell, aged 70, living at 80 Minot street, Neponset, one of the best known residents of that section of Dorchester, died suddenly Tuesday evening at his home while engaged in a game of cards. Dr. Gilbert M. Mason of 354 Adams street was called. The medical examiner, who was informed, said Blaisdell died from natural causes.

NORFOLK COUNTY BILLS.

FATHER AND SON BANQUET AT Y. M. C. A.

Rev. B. A. Willmott Speaks on "The Boy That Counts" and Delights All

Says Boy Who Does Not Scrap Has Lost Essential Element

"It is necessary for the wholesome development of a boy to fight, and any boy that does not scrap has lost an essential element in his boyhood," according to Rev. B. A. Willmott of Bethany Congregational church, who discussed "The Man that counts" at the second annual Father and Son banquet at the Quincy Y. M. C. A. on Wednesday evening. Continuing, he said "the trouble is we seek the easy course. We are farming our boys out and we are letting the boys and the Y. M. C. A. do the stunt that belongs to us."

The eloquent address filled 132 diners with pleasure and they loudly applauded Rev. Mr. Willmott when he finished. The toastmaster was Joe Beal, one of the Junior members and the speakers were J. A. Sedgwick, Louis F. LaRose, President George A. Sidelinger and Rev. Mr. Willmott.

The banquet was the annual get-together night of father and son at the festive board, and the menu included roast Vermont turkey, mashed potatoes, cranberry sauce, celery, mashed squash, rolls, butter, ice cream, cake and cocoa.

The food was prepared by the members of the Women's Auxiliary and was served by Mrs. W. F. Cummings, chairman of the banquet and boys' work committee; Mrs. A. F. Bromley, Mrs. Louis F. LaRose, Mrs. A. H. Gilson, Mrs. Alfred Bean, Mrs. John F. Roache, Mrs. Jonathan S. Swingle, Mrs. A. M. Thompson, Miss Marion Tirrell, Miss Helen Bromley, Miss Elizabeth Scouler and Miss Mila Bates.

The committee of boys included Frederick M. Atwood, Allen Connor, Joe Beal, Maynard Hatch, Nathaniel Barton and Albert A. Stephenson.

Seated at the head table were George A. Sidelinger, president of the Y. M. C. A., Roy Sidelinger, Joseph Beal, Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott, former treasurer W. F. Cummings and son Allen, Louis F LaRose, physical director; Sam C. Melville of the boys work committee, Alden Blanchard, boys' director and J. A. Sedgwick who called the diners to order and introduced Joe Beal as the toastmaster.

During the banquet music was furnished by the Wollaston Caet orchestra.

In calling the diners to order Mr. Sedgwick said he had a great deal of respect for a real live boy that knew when to make a noise at the proper time and for one that is so busy trying to be manly that he does not know what it is to be manly.

L. F. LaRose, who was the first presented made a plea for the fathers to take a more active interest in the work of the boys and extended an invitation to attend the gym classes and watch them at work.

President Sidelinger gave the history of the association and said it existed only because through the interest of the citizens of the city 50 percent of the money needed to maintain it was contributed.

After the banquet, all watched the basketball games in the gym where the Y. M. C. A. defeated Cunningham gym 43 to 10, and the employed boys beat a High school representation 28 to 20.

MR. WILLMOTT'S ADDRESS.

Rev. Mr. Willmott said it is a great privilege to speak to a company of boys, and a treat to speak to fathers, but it was a more joyful experience to speak to those in whose hands the fill of all things that are good are going to be and will be placed.

A man is only a boy with the lid on and sitting on the lid is his dignity. When he is on a fishing trip and the lid is off there creeps out the boy. Each trip with him reveals the fact that if only he could keep the boy young and keep him lodging within his life and lose the artificialities that beset him in old age we would all be much better.

The boy that counts is yours and my boy. He is just about like yourselves. You are not all good and you are not all bad. There is some badness in you and a great deal of goodness. That is the average boy. He is not all degeneracy and he is not all a saint, but he is very much of

DEATH OF YOUNG MAN

Illness of J. Harold Richards Puzzled the Physicians

J. Harold Richards, son of ex-Councilman John R. Richards, passed away this morning at 7.15 at the home of his parents, 216 Centre street, after an illness which has puzzled the physicians for many weeks.

It was in November that he was first taken ill, with what seemed to develop into rheumatic fever, although it is doubtful if it is known just what the disease was. At times he would rally and again his life would be at a low ebb, and it was on one of the latter occasions that the attending physicians decided that the only hope of saving his life was by transfusion of blood.

His father promptly volunteered to give the necessary blood, but before happened to call to inquire as to of Harold's chums, Robert Farquhar was needed promptly offered himself his condition and on learning what was needed promptly offered himself for the operation. Being a young man of Harold's age, he was accepted by the physicians and the transfusion of blood was made by a method seldom used. The blood was drawn into a glass tube an then injected into the veins of the patient.

For a time the patient rallied, and there were hopes of his recovery, but it was only temporary, and many times since then his life has hung in the balance. Several consultation of the best physicians in the state have been held, but the disease seemed to puzzle these experts.

Harold previous to his illness was a healthy looking and rugged young man. He received his education in the public schools of Quincy and on completing his education entered the office of his father, one of South Quincy's well known granite manufacturers. It was while here that he was taken ill. He was free hearted, jovial and unusually popular with the young people of his own age, and his death will be sadly felt by a large circle of close friends.

FRACTURE OF ARM.

Although Wesley G. Ganzel received a bad fracture of the right arm while at work on the Rivadavia at the Fore River shipyard on Tuesday, the prospects for a complete recovery are bright. It is the hopes of Dr. William H. Blanchard, surgeon at Red Cross Hospital that his future as a ball player will not be affected. "Wes" sustained the injury when the cover of a hatchway fell and struck him on the arm, between the elbow and shoulder. He is the best known ball player in the city and had planned to join the New England league Portland team next season. He is the son of Charles C. Ganzel of Hamilton street.

READY FOR A FIGHT

Mayor Miller Not Bothered by Reports

Chief Burrell May Appeal

Nothing of a startling nature happened at the Mayor's office this morning. His Honor was found at his desk shortly after 11 o'clock and when importuned for anything in the way of news said that there was onthing doing today.

He said, however, that he had been surprised that he had not been bothered more by office seekers. As a rule he said that he had to urge the men he desired to accept the positions. Of course there were one or two offices for which there had been pressure brought to appoint certain men, but as a rule he had been allowed to have his own way. He further said that his supporters in the recent campaign had not been at him to appoint certain men and that they were not asking anything for themselves.

When asked if the axe was to fall again today, or if he had requested any more resignations, Mayor Miller said no. He added that he had been informed that one of the two requested to resign on Wednesday were going to fight, but that did not bother him any, and that he was ready for a fight.

While he did not state that Chief Burrell was the man, it is quite well understood that Chief Burrell is not going to resign, and that he will fight against removal.

The case of Chief Burrell is somewhat different from other cases for in case the Mayor should prefer charges which he no doubt will do if the resignation asked for is not forthcoming, a hearing will be demanded which is given by the Mayor and if he finds against the Chief, as he naturally will, the Chief may appeal to the judge of the District court.

Such an appeal is provided for under an act of the Legislature passed in 1911. The act referred to is Chapter 624, a part of which reads as follows:

Within ten days after such hearing bring a petition in the police, district or municipal court, within the judicial district where such person resides, addressed to the justice of the court and praying that the action of the officer or board in removing, suspending, lowering or transferring him may be reviewed by the court and after such notice to such officer or board as the court may think necessary, it shall review the action of said officer or board, and hear the witnesses, and shall affirm said order unless it shall appear that said order was made by said officer or board without proper cause or in bad faith which case said order shall be reversed and the petitioner be reinstated in his office. The decision of the justice of said police, district or municipal courts shall be final and conclusive upon the parties."

It would seem, therefore, that un-

TELEPHONE GIRL REWARDED

Bank and Owner of Adams Building Send her Cash

Miss Margaret Scanlon, night operator at the Quincy Telephone exchange, whose suspicions that something was wrong at the Mt. Wollaston National bank on the night of the fire, has been rewarded for her service. Henry M. Faxon, president of the bank, presented her with a ten dollar bill and Herbert T. Whitman, agent for the Adams family, with a five dollar bill.

It is perhaps not generally known that when a telephone subscriber takes off his receiver that the signal given at the telephone exchange is not by the ringing of a bell or by the dropping of a numbered shutter, as formerly, but that the minute the receiver is removed a tiny electric light is illuminated, which remains so as long as the hook is off.

When the light at the end of the telephone wire of the bank came on the night of the fire, Miss Scanlon was unable to get any reply, and after several trials, becoming suspicious that all was not right, she called up the police station and notified Sergt. Larkin of the circumstances. Sergt. Larkin not only sent the patrol wagon to the bank, but notified Officer Olson through the police signal box, and in this manner the fact that there was a fire in progress was discovered, although even then it was some minutes before the police could learn just what the trouble was.

It is evident, therefore, that but for Miss Scanlon, it would have been some time later before the fire would have been discovered, and the fire would have obtained such a start that the loss would have been many times what it was.

As it turned out, the loss was minimized and business at the bank was interrupted but a few hours. It has been suggested that Miss Scanlon be made an honorary member of the Fire department.

WOLLASTON GLEE CLUB CONCERT

Large Attendance at First Production of Season of This Popular Organization

Madame Calvert Gives Two Very Pleasing Numbers

The usual large audience that has marked the concerts of the Wollaston Glee club since they have been held in the Wollaston School hall, attended the first concert of the season Wednesday evening. Assisting the large chorus of male voices under direction of John A. Crowley, were Madame Wilhelmina Wright Calvert, soprano; Arthur J. Hackett, tenor and William Ellis Weston, accompanist.

A varied program of ten numbers opened with the "Soldiers Chorus" from Gounod's "Faust". The clubs voices took hold and carried this lively martial air in a manner which brought loud applause.

Mr. Hackett on his first appearance sang the aria, "O Paradis" by Meyerbeer, his full toned tenor well fitting the selection. He responded to an encore with "Du bist wie eine Blume" by Liszt.

"Spin, spin, spin" by H. Junst was the next offering of the Glee club. This selection was sweet and soft, with an exquisite melody running through it.

Madame Calvert gave as her first number the scene and aria "Ritorna Vincitor" from Verdi's opera "Aida," the varied shading of the piece affording full opportunity for her wide range of note and tone.

It was through this fairly difficult accompaniment that Mr. Weston's technique was to be most clearly observed. Through all the varied tempos and tones he was in sympathetic accord with the soloist..

Madame Calvert responded to continued applause with a bright little piece "A birthday" by Woodman.

For the closing selection of Part One the cantata "The Nun of Nidaros" by Dudley Buck was offered by the club with a tenor solo by Mr. Hackett.

This semi recitative piece was well executed and with its contrasts and strong climax proved one of the most enjoyable on the program.

During the intermission, members of the club invaded the ranks of their friends in the audience and the usual social period, which forms a feature of the concerts, ensued.

Part second opened with a "Medley from the South" in which the well known negro melodies were pleasingly interwoven.

Mr. Hackett's selections were "The sweetest flower" by Robert Batten and "Dawn" by Leoni. He responded to encore with "I hear you calling me."

"Brier Rose" by F. Debois was a low sweet tune rendered by the chorus. It was followed by S. Archer Gibson's "The Elfman" which with its laughing chorus made a decided hit.

Madame Calvert offered two selections "In Herbst" by Franz in which her vibrant tones fell with pleasing effect and "Polly Willis" by Dr. Arne whose lightly tripping strain called forth the encore "The Cuckoo" by Lehmann.

The closing chorus number was by A. M. Stuck entitled "Would that life were endless sailing."

The tenors of the club are: Richard Bishop, E. C. Bullock, Edward E. Bullock, A. W. Bullock, Arthur F. Capen, H. M. Deane, Jr., Artemus M. Dingwell Herbert J. Gurney, William Mitchell, Percy A. Hull, Dr. E. R. Johnson, Charles Luard, W. L. Merrill., A. A. Orcutt, H. R. Rogers, W. Edwin Wallace, Charles A. Tanner, Dr. A. P. Thompson.

The basses are: S. B. Bates, Frederick H. Bishop, Mr. Van Buskirk, B. F. Chase, Frank W. Crane, C. H. Everett A. S. Erb, F. H. Estey, J. A. Horton, F. K. Linscott, A. W. Robinson, John Roman, W. A. Seiders, Peter W. Sharp George A. Smith, Louis B. Weston, Arthur P. Strout, Harry Wilson, Sd.

Its officers are: Herbert J. Gurney, president, F. K. Linscott, secretary and E. R. Johnson, treasurer, while the club is backed by a large associate membership of over one hundred.

NOTICE

Again we ask those sending news or other matter by mail to direct it to the company or newspaper rather than to individual members of the company or employees. If addressed to individuals and they were ill or not at the office, it might be several days in reaching its proper destination and if news matter would be too late for use.

Although our picture has been left around where the motion picture companies could swipe it, they persistently refuse to run it and pay the standard price of $12,500 set by the Jack Binns case.

They are slapping Uncle Sam's face down in the Mexican theaters but the old gentleman still refuses to fight with refractory infants.

They are doing the tango on the streets of Washington now; but fortunately for the dignity of the country, President Wilson is at Pass Christian.

Cold weather through the Northern states makes the prospect for an ice crop better than last year, but the icemen will have other good reasons for the same old high prices.

New York is to have an exhibition of pictures worth 30 millions. Probably an exhibit of the checks would be still more interesting in that city.

The principal reason why the farmers don't sell more produce direct to the consumer, with a profit on both ends, seems to be that it would call on them to work their brains rather than their hands. Advertise!

Some people think they can become generals down in Mexico, without having held up and robbed any passenger trains.

Cardinal's ban on tanga stops ball" "Episcopal Church fights tango with dancing lessons," "Town is dance mad" these are some of headlines in the newspapers showing action relative to the so-called "new" dances.

NO MORE 50 CENT PIECES?

According to the Treasury department, the half dollar of our daddies, a fixture of our currency from time immemorial, is in disfavor. None have been coined the past year, as those on hand amply supplied the small demand. One reason given is that the 50 cent piece is confused with the 25 cent coin.

Considering the decided difference in size, this does not seem to account for the change. Possibly the preference for small coins is an unconscious mental outgrowth of the struggle against high cost of living.

Small units of money may have some tendency toward economy. A traveller recently returning from France, where currency is based on the frac of about 20 cents, said that the size of the unit so effected her that she felt much less inclined to spend five francs than one dollar. "With a nice clean franc in my pocket I feel almost as rich as if it was a dollar at home," she said. An article of clothing offered for 50 francs would seem prohibitive, but 10 dollars would have seemed very reasonable.

An abundance of small coins and bills save much waiting for change. The people who deal with tradesmen at the door often find them unable to make change, and the housewife never gets too many dollar bills and small coins.

Many small services must be paid for out of the pocket. Every traveller knows the advantage of a pocket full of small coins in meeting with the clamor for tips.

The mark in Germany, the shilling in England, the lira in Italy, the franc in France, coins varying not more than five cents from our quarter, are the very backbone of daily commerce in Europe. Our 25 cent pieces seem to fall into line with these as the normal unit of small change, and the half dollar seems as needless as the old two cent piece.

GAUDREAU KEATING

Popular Quincy Girl Bride of Braintree Man

A wedding of interest to Braintree and Quincy people was solemnized last Wednesday afternoon at 4.30, the contracting parties being Miss Teresa Helen Keating, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth A. Keating of 70 Upland road, Quincy, and Lucien E. D. Gaudreau, son of Mrs. Josephine P. Gaudreau of 46 Fountain street, South Braintree.

The ceremony was performed at St. John's rectory by Rev. John J.Coan, pastor of St. John's church, Quincy. The groom was attended by his brother, Victor E. Gaudreau of South Braintree and the maid of honor was the bride's sister, Miss Elizabeth G. Keating of Quincy.

Afterward a reception was held at the home of the bride with the immediate members of the two families present, followed by a wedding supper.

Later in the evening, Mr. and Mrs. Gaudreau left for a wedding trip to Sherbrook, Montreal and Quebec, and on their return will reside at 55 Central avenue, South Braintree, where they will be at home to their friends after March first.

Mrs. Gaudreau is a popular young lady of Quincy and is a graduate of Woodward Institute and of the Bridgewater Normal school, class of 1909. She is a well known contralto singer and is a member of the Catholic Women's club of Quincy. Before her marriage, she was a teacher in the Braintree schools and a great favorite with her pupils.

Mr. Gaudreau, who is a very well known and popular young man of Braintree is a civil engineer in the employ of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad company. He is grand knight of Braintree Council No. 1462, Knights of Columbus and also a member of the Cardinal O'Connell assembly, fourth degree, K. of C.

The young people received a number of beautiful wedding gifts and the best wishes of their many friends speed them on their matrimonial voyage.

May Be Elected by Finnish Church Saturday Evening

The members of the Finnish Congregational church will met Saturday evening to consider a successor to Rev. J. E. Lillback, who retires from the pastorate on Jan. 25. As a result of the meeting, a call will be extended to one of many candidates.

Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Lillback leave Friday evening for Fitchburg where they will be given a reception by their relatives and friends. Mrs. Lillback has practically recovered from the effects of an operation performed several weeks ago at the Quincy City Hospital.

The new Finnish Congregational church at Gardner will be dedicated on Sunday, and Rev. Mr. Lillback, a long time friend of the pastor, Rev. Arthur F. Virta, will take a prominent part in the ceremonies.

A letter to the Finnish Congregational church at Brooklyn, N. Y., where Rev. Mr. Lillback is to be pastor will be granted by the Finnish Congregational Ministers' Association.

At the church this week, prayer meetings are being held every evening and the attendance has been large. They will be dispensed with on Saturday evening.

Easy to Buy a Slave In Filipino Town

By DEAN C. WORCESTER, Former Secretary of Interior In Philippines

THERE IS ONLY ONE WAY IN WHICH SLAVERY CAN BE PREVENTED IN THE PHILIPPINES AND THAT IS BY PASSING A LAW MAKING IT A CRIME TO BUY AND SELL HUMAN FLESH.

The attempt to deny that slavery exists in the Philippines is absolutely absurd, and yet that attempt has been made repeatedly. American ignorance of conditions has been imposed upon. Until recently there has been little or NO INCLINATION TO CONCEAL THE FACT OF SLAVERY. Every one in the islands knows about it. I found the children in school writing compositions about it. The preceptress of a girls' school told me that her young ladies often discussed the prices they had paid for their maids.

The slaves are not put up on a block and sold to the highest bidder as they were in the south. If you wish TO PURCHASE A SLAVE IN A FILIPINO TOWN YOU GO TO THE MARKET PLACE AND LET YOUR ERRAND BE KNOWN. The dealers, who always are loafing around, are immediately pointed out to you. You accost one of them, tell him what you require, and if he has not the sort of a slave you wish in stock he will assure you that the supply in the mountains is inexhaustible and that he will soon capture just what you are looking for.

IF HE HAPPEN TO HAVE WHAT YOU WANT HE WILL LEAD YOU TO HIS HOUSE AND THERE EXHIBIT THE SLAVES HE HAS ON HAND. YOU SELECT THE BOY OR GIRL, MAN OR WOMAN, YOU FANCY, PAY THE PRICE AND FOREVERMORE THAT SLAVE IS YOUR ABSOLUTE PROPERTY SO LONG AS YOU CAN KEEP HIM FROM RUNNING AWAY.

Big Saving if Government Owned Railroads

By Senator WILLIAM S. KENYON of Iowa

PUBLIC ownership of railroads would get us away from the express company parasite, the refrigerator car and every other kind of additional tax on transportation. It would also SETTLE THE RATE PROPOSITION and make impossible such SCANDALOUS FINANCIAL PROCEEDINGS AS HAVE CHARACTERIZED THE NEW HAVEN MANAGEMENT AND THE FRISCO MANAGEMENT.

Other nations have grasped this problem and solved it. I do not see why we should be afraid of it.

IT IS A SUBJECT WHICH THINKING MEN WHO ARE INTERESTED IN THE FUTURE OF THEIR COUNTRY MUST CONSIDER. I EXPECT TO PLACE IN THE RECORD DURING THE DISCUSSION OF THE ALASKAN RAILROAD BILL SOME FIGURES SHOWING THE TREMENDOUS SAVING THERE WOULD BE TO THE PEOPLE IF RAILROADS WERE OWNED AND OPERATED BY THE GOVERNMENT.

United States Most Lawless of Nations

By Dr. W. C. RICHARDSON, Rector St. James' Episcopal Church, Philadelphia

IT IS TO OUR SHAME THAT WE ARE THE MOST LAWLESS CIVILIZED NATION ON THE FACE OF THE EARTH TODAY. MEN ON ALL SIDES ARE LOSING THEIR PRINCIPLES, NOT ONLY IN RELIGION, BUT IN BUSINESS, IN ART, IN EVERYTHING. CUBISM ITSELF ILLUSTRATES A LACK OF FAITH IN WHAT IS BEAUTIFUL.

Commission government is but an excuse. Man makes laws and then expects them to work automatically. In this form of government he will have excuses for knocking more people than before. ALL THE LAWS IN THE WORLD WILL NOT BRING US BACK TO OUR RIGHT SENSES. IT IS UP TO MAN HIMSELF. Personality is the thing that is needed, and until we get that this chaos will continue.

An impromptu entertainment was given, which included vocal solos by Cornelius Duggan and selections by the degree team and by the Auxiliary duet, trio and quartette. The pianist of the evening was Mary LeCount.

DEAR LITTLE DRESS.

A Boston paper is responsible for this item: An extravagant woman of means who is apt to scorn economy of any sort called on a poorer friend in Quincy a few days since. When the friend's little daughter entered the room the visitor remarked: "My, Ruth what a perfectly dear little dress you have on!" Then turning to her friend she said: "Maud would look nice in something like that; where did you get it?" Before the mother could frame a diplomatic answer, honest little Ruth exclaimed: "It's awfully pretty—the prettiest one I've got, and it's made out of daddy's shirt, too!"

ECONOMIC FREEDOM IS NEAR

Wilson Has Faith In Promises of Representatives of "Big Business" to Do Their Share Toward Accomplishing Desired Result—Message to Congress Will Be One of Peace

Washington, Jan. 8.—President Wilson's message to congress relative to trust legislation is expected to contain a paragraph expressing the pleasure of the administration over the action of J. P. Morgan & Co. in starting to break up the system of interlocking directorates.

The president hails this as representing a new attitude of big business and is prepared to accept in good faith the expressed willingness of numerous representatives of big business to assist in the re-establishment of economic freedom in the United States. Announcement to this effect was made in an authoritative way.

A few men in public life have been inclined to doubt the sincerity of big business in letting it be known that it is willing to co-operate with the administration in the business of untangling the community of interests, about which there has been so much complaint during the recent years.

Whether the house of Morgan & Co. intends eventually to withdraw from all the big corporations with which it has been connected, and whether other great banking institutions will disentangle their interlocking directorates are questions that have been much discussed privately during the last few days.

Very naturally there are men in public life, some of them connected with the administration, who "want to be shown" before they will believe that any considerable numoer of the great trusts are at this time willing to reorganize their business so as to make it conform to the Sherman anti-trust law.

The president is not among the doubters. The administration view is that big business is acting in good faith; that it sees the futility of continuing to resist the tide of public sentiment, and is really anxious to be a party to a "constitution of peace."

So it seems to be settled that the chief executive in his so-called anti-trust address to the legislative body will give big business credit for having seen a new light. Big business is to have a full and free opportunity to continue to show that it is acting in good faith. In other words, the president's address to the congress will be a a message of peace and not of war. One representative of the administration pointed out that if it should turn out later on that big business was not acting in good faith in its dealings with the administration, it would be so much the worse for big business.

Constructive, and not destructive, are the words used by spokesmen for the administration in describing the anti-trust program the president will lay before the legislative body in his address.

London, Jan. 8.—"There is no truth in the story that the negotiations between Premier Asquith and the opposition leader, Andrew B. Law, in regard to the situation of the Irish province of Ulster under home rule, have broken down," says the Westminster Gazette. The newspaper, which is in closest touch with the government, adds:

"There is, indeed, every reason for believing that the negotiations or conversations are being continued without any untoward incidents and that no adverse factor has arisen to interrupt them."

LASSIE GETS A MILLION

New York Banker's Daughter Was a Salvation Army Girl

Boston, Jan. 8.—A former Salvation Army lassie in this city has just been left $1,000,000. This heiress is "Cora," who sold "War Crys" up and down the streets and in saloons, and who solicited money with one of the Christmas boxes.

The will of Warner Van Norden, the New York banker, shows that the Boston lassie known as "Cora" was no other than Cora L. Van Norden, daughter of the banker, society girl and a practical worker in things charitable.

Van Norden's sons, Theodore and Warner, Jr., received nothing, their father explained in the will, as he had already given to each of them more than he had to leave in his own estate.

The will leaves $3000 to Mrs. Virginia Titus, his secretary.

CHAMBERLAIN TO RETIRE

End of Long Public Career of British Statesman is Near

London, Jan. 8.—Joseph Chamberlain, the venerable British statesman, has decided to retire from parliament at the next general election, after serving as a member of the house of commons since 1876, during all of which time he has represented Birmingham.

There has been no change for the worse in Chamberlain's health recently. It is, however, nearly eight years since he spoke in the house of commons and nearly three years since he appeared there, and then only for a few minutes at the opening of the session of 1911, when he was assisted into the house in order that he might take the oath.

The New York billboard commission has decided that the billboard is unsightly, dangerous, insanitary and a shield for rubbish. Aside from this it seems to be unobjectionable.

A Long Island youth cleaned his trousers with gasoline and then stuck a match on them. We just mention this to let you know that he now strikes matches on the sole of his shoe.

THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

THOMAS CRANE PUBLIC LIBRARY
HIGH SCHOOL PUBLIC SCHOOLS
WOODWARD INSTITUTE PAROCHIAL SCHOOL

The School Committee at their meeting on Tuesday night voted to extend the term of the Adams Evening school 20 nights, making a total term of 60 nights. This action is due to the unusual interest evidenced in this school the present year by those attending it. On Monday evening of this week, which would have been the last week of school there were well over 100 men in attendance.

The lengthening of the evening school term, and the accompanying interest on the part of the non English speaking people is a most encouraging condition. Cities are giving more attention to their immigrant problem, deeming it of the utmost importance that opportunity shall be provided for the new comers to become Americanized as soon as possible.

For many years Quincy has offered only 40 nights of instruction. Each year and until recently the matter has been conducted in a perfunctory way. The question is being asked by many cities why it is not best that schools for immigrants should be conducted through the year irrespective of seasons. The time will undoubtedly come when such provision will be made, and no doubt attendance will be compulsory until the English language is at least partially acquired.

NEW HALF YEAR.

The second half year of school will begin on Monday, Jan. 26. At this time the semi-annual promotions take place in those grades where the system has already gone into effect, and new children who are six years of age are admitted to the first grade. In several schools, notably the Atherton Hough, Washington and Massachusetts Fields the new half year will bring problems of seating which it is difficult to solve.

SCHOOL FUEL.

The school fuel for the balance of the year has all been put in the school house bins by the firm of J. F. Sheppard & Sons. The tests made by the chemists of the School department show the coal to be of exceptional quality and the contractor receives a substantial bonus by the terms of his contract.

WOLLASTON SCHOOL.

Prof. Marshall Perrin of Boston University, will be the speaker at the Parent-Teachers' meeting, Monday evening, January 12. His subject "The Modern Child" should prove interesting and instructive to mothers and fathers. A large audience is expected.

Miss Edith Randall, under the auspices of the Educational committee of the Quincy Women's club, gave an interesting talk on the "German Christmas" to the upper grades of the Wollaston and Massachusetts Field's schools, Wednesday afternoon; nearly five hundred children were in attendance. Christmas songs were sung by the pupils.

The committee of the Quincy Women's Club, under whose auspices the talks of Miss Randall are given, are Mrs. Arthur Townsend, Mrs. Walter S. Pinkham and Mrs. Arthur Foster, and they are much pleased at their success. Another will soon be given at Atlantic for the Quincy and Montclair schools, and later for the Willard and Gridley Bryant pupils.

The Wollaston school assembly hall is very much in demand these days. Five hundred people heard Dr. Woods Hutchinson on Tuesday night. A similar number listened to Miss Randall Wednesday afternoon, and a crowded house greeted the Wollaston Glee Club in the evening. A large audience is expected to hear Prof. Perrin on Monday night.

MASSACHUSETTS FIELDS.

The regular meeting of the Parents-Teachers' Association will be held in the school corridor this evening, at 8 o'clock. Miss Effie Beal, a teacher in the Boston schools will speak on "How parents may help teachers." Violin solos by Miss Frances Hibbert's class, M. F. S., 1912.

The set of Winston's Cumulative Encyclopedias presented to the school by the Parent-Teachers' Association were delivered on Monday and are very much appreciated.

GRIDLEY BRYANT SCHOOL.

The Gridley Bryant school, assisted by the parents of the district, will hold a concert and sale in St. Mary's hall on Friday evening, January 16. The concert will be followed by a dancing party under the auspices of the newly organized Gridley Bryant Alumni Association. Several former teachers in the school will be present, and the affair will apprtake of the nature of a reunion of teachers, parents and the graduates of the seventeen classes of the school. The proceeds will be used for the benefit of the school.

WASHINGTON SCHOOL.

The proposed addition to the Washington school was discussed at the Parents-Teachers' meeting in the school corridors Wednesday evening. There was a large attendance. Councilman Elijah P. Barrows presided, and there were remarks by Councilman Thomas Griffin, Councilman Bert Williams, Arthur W. Newcomb and Arthur Foster of the School Committee, John F. Bruton and Daniel Scouller.

Albert L. Barbour, superintendent of schools, talked on the "Relation of the parent to the school" and during the evening there was singing by the pupils of the eighth grade. The feature of the evening was the violin solo contributed by Daniel Scheckner, a pupil.

All speakers were interested in remedying the crowded conditions of the school which will be felt greatly next month, when because of lack of room many pupils will be limited to one session daily.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

Children's Room.

The Children's Room of the library has acquired during the year numerous additions by which it has been greatly improved. A new coat of paint and varnish has brightened the aspect of the room greatly. The new bulletin boards, which the room has been in need of for a long time, are now placed around the hexagonal pillars and have already been used for the Christmas posters, the brown cork forming a neutral background for all sorts of pictures.

Many new books have been added to this room during the year and series of books have been completed as far as possible. It is proposed to keep on a separate shelf all of the expensively illustrated books. The mounted picture collection, also, has been increased by ten sets of colored postals of the south and the larger cities.

The new year begins with Miss Brackett in place of Miss Ford, in charge of this room.

MOOSE WILL ATTEND FUNERAL

Benjamin B. Comeau, one of the best known residents of Houghs eNck died at his home 905 Sea street, Wednesday afternoon, in his 48th year. He was a carpenter and builder and a call fireman, connected with the Houghs Neck house. He is survived by his wife and five children. His funeral will take place from his home Friday morning and will be attended by a delegation from the Quincy lodge of Moose of which he was a member. A high mass of requiem will be celebrated at St. John's church at nine o'clock. Interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

WALKING TO ASIA.

This Is Not Difficult When Bering Strait Is Frozen.

On Aug. 15 we sailed through Bering strait and were at last in the arctic. The straits are thirty-six miles wide, with East cape, a rounded, dome shaped mass of black basalt, on the Asiatic side and on the American side Cape Prince of Wales, a headline of sharper outline, but neither so lofty nor so sheer. In between the two capes and in line with them lie the two islands of Big and Little Diomede. Through the three narrow channels between the capes and the islands the tide runs with the swiftness of a river's current.

The Eskimos constantly cross from continent to continent in small boats. In still weather the passage can be made in a light kyack with perfect safety. The widest of the three channels is that between Big Diomede and East cape, and is, I should say, not more than fifteen miles across. While we were passing through the straits we saw a party of Eskimos in a skin boat paddling leisurely across from America to Asia. They no doubt had been on a visit to relatives or friends on the neighboring continent. We were told that in winter, when the strait is frozen solidly, the Eskimos frequently walk from one continent to the other.—From "A Year With a Whaler," by Walter Noble Burns.

TRUE TO THE END.

And After Many Years Came Her Tragic and Pathetic Reward.

A number of years ago some miners in Wales, in exploring an old disused pit, found the body of a young man dressed in a fashion long out of date. The peculiar action of the air of the mine was such as preserved the body so perfectly that it appeared asleep rather than dead.

The miners were puzzled at the circumstances. No one in the district had been missed within their remembrance, and at last it was resolved to bring in the oldest inhabitant, an old lady over eighty years old, who had lived single in the village all her life.

When she was taken into the room where the dead man lay a strange thing occurred. The old lady fell on the corpse and kissed it and addressed it by every term of endearment spoken in a bygone generation. He was her only love, and she had waited for him her long life. She knew he had not forsaken her.

The old lady and young man had been betrothed sixty years before. Her lover had disappeared mysteriously, and she had kept her faith during the long interval.

The miners removed the old lady to her house, and that night her faithful spirit rejoined that of her long lost lover.—London Telegraph.

Wise Eskimos.

Everything in the Eskimo dress has a reason for its existence, writes Captain Roald Amundsen in "The Northwest Passage." The members of Captain Amundsen's expeditions had become accustomed to the Eskimo dress and had adopted it, but many of them thought it ridiculous for grownup men to go about wearing fringe to their clothes, so they cut it off. I had my scruples about this, says the author, as I had already learned that most things in the Eskimo's clothing and other arrangements had their distinct meaning and purpose, so I kept my fringe and put up with the ridicule. He laughs best who laughs last. One fine day the anovaks, a sort of tunic reaching below the knee, made of deerskin, from which the fringes had been cut off, commenced to curl up, and if the fringe had not been put on again quickly they would soon have looked like neckties.

Astronomy.

If there were any money to be made in astronomy everybody would be studying it. About all we can see is figures, and these are so big that they stagger the understanding. Every child in the United States knows how to find the north star from the pointers of the dipper, but no child can appreciate the statement that this star is distant from the earth 210,000,000,000,000 miles—two hundred and ten trillions! A railroad train traveling at one mile a minute would have to run without stopping for 479,000,000 years in order to traverse this distance. If light really travels 187,500 miles a second a ray from the north star would be thirty-six years in reaching the earth.

Right In His Face.

A group of grieving depositors stood on the sidewalk before the closed doors of a recently defunct bank. It wasn't a merry scene. One man who had lost his all was trying to brace up a colored grandpa whose white wool bobbed up and down into the folds of a bandanna.

"Don't cry, uncle," he said. "Banks burst every day, you know."

"Yes, sir; I know it, but—huh huh, huh—dis bank—huh, huh—done bus' right in mah face."—Harper's Weekly.

The Wrong Heart.

"Mr. Bubkins," said the proud father, shaking the young man warmly by the hand, "let me tell you that you are a man after my own heart."

"Oh, no, sir," protested the blushing suitor; "I'm after your daughter's!"—London Answers.

CAUGHT BY A POSTAL TRAP.

The "Twopenny Detective" Is Often Employed In England.

Detectives, lawyers' clerks and others often experience great difficulty in obtaining an undoubted specimen of a certain person's signature. In one case recourse had to be had to a marriage register. In another the only signature procurable was on the fly leaf of a book which the suspect had presented to a relative, and only two or three years ago a testimonial to a sea captain was brought into court, because among the signatures to it was one for which the police had long hunted in vain.

One of the most common expedients resorted to for overcoming this difficulty is employing the "twopenny detective"—that is, sending a registered letter to the person whose signature is wanted. And this is frequently successful. Thinking the postal packet contains money or valuables, the addressee unsuspectingly signs the receipt only to discover that inside the envelope there is nothing but a "faked" letter.

This trap once caught an anonymous letter writer—a woman—who, on being interrogated shortly before, had declared that she could not write, and whose friends believed her to be illiterate. It was, in fact, mainly instrumental in getting her six months' imprisonment.

The receipt for a registered letter, it should be carefully noted, is not given up to anybody, but can be obtained only in certain cases to further the ends of justice.—London Tit-Bits.

THE AUTOMOBILE BACK.

Medical Advice Showing How It May Be Avoided.

The automobile is coming into such general use that any advice to its users is of general interest.

A great many people in cranking their cars strain their back or "drop a stitch," and if this is once started it usually happens more easily another time. Many people, after riding for any length of time, are tired in the back when they get out. If this is kept up the pain or weakness increases until many times the person is laid up with what is called lumbago or rheumatism. Both of these conditions are commonly due to the wrong way of using the muscles of the back.

In cranking keep the back straight, like "the oarsman's back." Bend from the hips, snapping the crank over by straightening at knee and hip, but do not bend at the middle or the waist line.

In sitting in the car keep the back straight also. Get the hips well back against the back of the seat, and, if the upholstery make the shoulders droop put a robe, a cushion, a book or anything at the hollow of the back to prevent this. Do not slouch in the seat and do not sit on the lower part of the spine. This reverses the normal curves of the spine and must mean strain, with at times much crippling.—Journal of American Medical Association.

His Hunt For Home.

On one occasion De Pachmann, the famous pianist, with his nervous and irritable temperament, was summoned to appear before Queen Alexandra at Buckingham palace. He obstinately refused to go. His friends labored with him for hours and at last persuaded him not to commit an impertinence which would never be forgiven by the English people.

Finally he was dispatched in a cab. The night wore on to morning, and the frantic wife of the pianist and his friends could learn nothing of what had become of him. At last a forlorn looking cab drove up to the house, and De Pachmann dismounted. On leaving the palace he had forgotten where he lived and could only tell the cabman that it was in a square with a church in it. So all night long he had been engaged in making a round of the innumerable squares of London.

A Businesslike Suitor.

"No-o, he isn't the sort of husband I should have chosen for my daughter, but I think perhaps he'll get along in the world all right."

"What way does he differ from the man you would have chosen?"

"When he proposed to my daughter and she had told him to see me he sent me a note telling me where his office is and what his office hours are and asking me to drop around and see him when convenient."—Houston Post.

Soda and Water.

For sheer simplicity of phrase and conception few have surpassed that delightful old lady who, with a shrewd twinkle in her eye, inquired whether "soda water" should be written as two separate words or if there should be a siphon between them.

Danger Not Imminent.

"Better go home, Jimmy; your mother is looking for you."

"Has she got the hairbrush with her?"

"No."

"Then I guess I'll play awhile longer."—Pittsburgh Post.

Wanted Some Benefit.

Higher Praise.

"Mabel, you are simply perfect."

"That isn't much of a compliment, Harry. George tells me I'm pluperfect."—Kansas City Journal.

—Four boys near Boston were fined for indulging in the playful exercise of smashing electric lights. The mother of one of them furnishes mighty good evidence against the whole crowd in her disgusted question, "When four boys are out for a good time what can you expect?" Well, of boys with that kind of a mother, you can expect most anything.—Brockton Enterprise.

FACULTY TEAM WIN AT HIGH

Defeat the Seniors in Basket Ball Game

A team representing the faculty of the High school defeated the senior basketball team in the school gymnasium Wednesday afternoon by a score of 26 to 22. The Faculty, all of whom are former stars, made the Seniors keep moving at a lively stride, and showed that in spite of their years they still have plenty of ginger. The teachers had a big lead until the last of the game, when the Seniors scored about eight points in ten minutes of play. Starring for the victors were Mansur and Thompson. Mathewson and Cummings played good for the 1914 men. Headmaster Collins refereed the game in a way which showed that he has not forgotten all he ever knew about basketball.

The line up was as follows:

FACULTY	SENIORS
Mansur rf	rb Atwood
	rb Anderson
French lf and c	lb Young
	lb Sutermeister
Thompson c and lf	c Stedman
Fenner rb	rf Mathewson
Fuller lb	lf Cummings

Score—Faculty 26, Seniors 22. Referee, Collins. Umpire Jenkins. Timer Jenkins. Attendance 150.

Almost the entire teaching staff of the High school were out to see the game and cheered lustily for their team. The Seniors were also well represented in the gallery of fans present.

MAY CONSIDER CASE OF MORSE

Aid of Congress Sought by Ex-Banker and "Ice King"

VINDICATION BY THE PUBLIC

Desired by Man Who Was Released From Prison After Persistent Fight by His Wife, Backed by Many Prominent Persons—May Sue New York Financiers

Washington, Jan. 8.—Charles W. Morse, the former "ice king," one of the most spectacular figures in modern American finance, and the principal actor in a drama that lasted for half a dozen years and carried him from the banking regions of New York to the Atlanta penitentiary, is about to write another chapter to his story.

After months of patient investigation and labor, Morse is trying to launch an investigation by a congressional committee of all the circumstances which led up to his conviction six years ago of violation of the national banking laws. Although his plans have not been announced, it became known here that he also contemplates suit for damages against prominent New York bankers and other persons connected with his trial and conviction.

Morse was in Washington and talked with Senator Borah. He suggested to him the need for an investigation of his case by a senate committee. Although the Idaho senator refused to press the matter, the ex-banker is understood to have left Washington still determined to force an investigation.

Morse was sent to the Atlanta penitentiary to serve a fifteen-year sentence. After a quiet, but persistent, fight, led by Mrs. Morse and backed by many prominent persons both in and out of congress, his sentence was commuted to expire immediately by former President Taft.

Mr. Taft acted on the statements of prominent army surgeons, who declared that Morse, in or out of prison, could not live longer than six months. The prisoner was released from Atlanta within five days of two years ago. Shortly afterward he sailed for Europe, took a "cure," and then returned to the United States. He is now apparently in good health.

Since his return from Europe Morse has been busily engaged in making preparations to reopen in the court of public opinion, at least, the case against him. He is said to hold that the principal charge on which he was convicted, the making of false entries in the books of the National Bank of North America, was a flimsy charge, and that he did nothing more than was done by scores of bankers in New York. At the time Morse was vice president of the bank.

In his long fight to regain liberty Morse succeeded in getting the interest and friendship of prominent men here, and it is not doubted that his effort to bring the matter into the limelight again will have powerful support.

BARRED AS SENATOR

Old Law Dug Up In Case of a Minister In Maryland

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 8.—The right of a clergyman to hold a state senatorship was questioned in the upper branch of the general assembly.

Frank E. Williams, elected from Cecil county as a Republican, was not allowed to qualify, pending the result of an inquiry into his right to the office because of the constitutional provision that "no minister or preacher of the gospel shall be eligible as senator."

Williams said he was no longer a minister, having resigned, and his resignation having been accepted.

LOSS OF THE OKLAHOMA

Inquiry Into Circumstances Attending It Begun at Boston

Boston, Jan. 8.—An investigation into the loss of the ill-fated tanker Oklahoma was begun by United States Steamboat Inspectors Blain and Savage here.

The hearing was attended by Captain Gunter and the surviving members of the crew who were rescued by officers and men of the steamship Bavaria, which landed them in Boston yesterday.

At the conclusion of the inquiry, it was understood there had been no evidence tending to show that there had been any kind of an explosion aboard the Oklahoma.

Gunter and his men left last night for New York, and further investigation into the disaster will be made later.

OFFICIALS DECLARE THAW IS NO MENACE

Testimony In His Favor Before Commission at Concord

Concord, N. H., Jan. 8.—The public hearing to determine whether Harry K. Thaw shall be admitted to bail was adjourned by the special commission here without decision. The state of New York introduced no witnesses.

That the release on bail would in no way menace the public safety was the opinion expressed by Holman A. Drew, sheriff of Coos county, and Clark D. Stevens, member of the Concord police force, two of the three men in whose charge Thaw has been since his arrest at Colebrooke, N. H.

United States Marshal Nute, the third of Thaw's custodians, was unable to the present, but will be heard by the commission later, as will Oliver J. Pelren, manager of the hotel where Thaw has lived for several months. From present indications these are all the witnesses to be heard by the commission.

Wisconsin People Do Not Take Kindly to the New Law

Milwaukee, Jan. 8.—The immediate effect of the new eugenics marriage law in the first week of its enforcement, which ended last night, has been to cut the number of licenses to wed issued to almost nothing.

Instead of the average number of licenses issued daily, most county clerks reported that no requests for licenses had been made. Others had refused several requests when the applicants had not presented the requisite physician's certificate that the man was free from disease.

Many a Quincy Reader Will be Interested.

When people read about the cures made by a medicine endorsed from far away, is it surprising that they order if the statements are true? But when they read of cases right here at home, positive proof is within their reach, for close investigation is an easy matter. Read Quincy endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills.

G. E. Mitchell, prop. restaurant, 26-27 Temple street, Quincy, Mass., says: "A severe cold settled in my kidneys and disordered them. I didn't seem able to overcome the trouble until I used one box of Doan's Kidney Pills. I improved at once and since then haven't needed a kidney medicine. I know that Doan's Kidney Pills are a reliable remedy for the back and kidneys."

If your back aches—if your kidneys bother you, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mr. Mitchell had—the remedy backed by home testimony. 50c all stores. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

A Spell Broken

It Enthralled a Man to His Discomfort

By MARJORIE CLOUGH

When I was a boy of seven my mother took me away from our home with her to live elsewhere. I did not know what it meant at the time, but as I grew older I learned that my parents had had a misunderstanding and had separated. When I was sixteen my mother drew me down beside her and, with her arms about me and her cheek against mine, said to me:

"Frank, dear, I am going to make a great sacrifice for you. Your father, who is very rich, has made me a proposition that if I will give you up to him he will make you his heir. But our family misfortune—our separation—has made him very bitter against women. I shall not enter into the cause of our living apart, since I don't wish to prejudice you against him. I would rather have you think that the fault was all mine.

"However this may be, your father's repugnance for my sex has taken a singular form. I sometimes think that in this respect his brain has been affected. If you go to him and he makes a will in your favor your inheritance will depend upon your living a single life."

"My dear mother," I replied, clinging to her, "I prefer to remain with you and let father leave his money to some one else. As for marrying, I only ask to be with you as long as you live. After that I care not whether I marry or remain single."

But my mother, who knew better than I the value of money, persuaded me to go, though I consented only on condition that I be permitted to visit her whenever I chose.

My father said to me never a word about our family trouble or the conditions under which I came to him, but he sent me to a lawyer, who showed me a copy of the will he had just made. In this I was made his sole heir on condition of my not being married at the time of his death, but in the event of my being afterward married I was required to turn over the property to a charitable institution which he had already endowed and which bore his name.

My father did not mention my mother except when it became necessary to refer to her in the ordinary course of conversation and then not in the least disrespectfully. Indeed, he said to me one day, "Your mother is one of the best of her sex."

So long as I lived with my mother I associated with girls as other boys did, but while with my father I was not thrown in with them, and, knowing his prejudice against them, I naturally chose my associates from my own sex. But while during my stay with my mother I cared very little about girls I had not been long deprived of their society before I began to look upon the forbidden fruit as sweet.

We lived in a city, and my room, which was in the rear of the house, looked out upon the rear of the dwellings facing on another street. Fate, who is always interfering in our affairs, must needs place at a window of the house directly back of ours a very pretty girl, just budding. When I first went to live with my father she sat there with her doll. But that was only for a brief period, and it was not long before one day when she caught sight of me looking at her she appeared thoroughly conscious of my admiration.

It did not occur to me that my looking at a girl through a back window was fraught with danger. The fact that I expected never to marry was no reason why I should not look at a girl, and this girl was especially fair to see. Besides, I sometimes saw her with others on a rear porch or in the little yard below, and all her motions were singularly graceful. As she chased her friends about or was chased by them, playing tag or some other game, she seemed to me a veritable fairy, and I spent much time looking at her through the slats of the shutters of my window.

But one day there came a break in the situation. While my charmer was playing with another little girl in the back yard, I was concealed behind the blinds, looking at them. The friend made a motion or gave a look or something toward my window that called forth a reproof from her playmate. Alas, the fatal knowledge that my little lady had something to confide and that something pertained to me had been imparted to me! That which my father doubtless considered an infection had entered my system.

Then followed a boyish way of scraping an acquaintance, really of making love, though I had no idea that I was doing anything of the kind. I procured a bow and one day, when I saw my charmer in the back yard, sent an arrow thrust through a scrap of paper, on which I had expressed a desire to make her acquaintance. She saw the arrow fall, glanced up at my window and, seeing whence the missive had come, without touching it, went into the house. This was in the evening, just before dark. Early in the morning I looked for my missive, and there was no sign of it. I felt assured that she had taken it when it was too dark for me to see her.

What use to tell what every boy and every girl has been through? I waylaid her on the street when she was going to school, but I was then too old to address her, too young to properly arrange for an introduction. The coyness of woman was in her, and she gave me no opportunity. I have forgotten now how the barrier between us was broken down—whether she dropped her schoolbooks (purposely), whether I was with a boy friend who knew her and joined in the conversation when he spoke to her or whether she gave me a smile in passing and I made bold to offer her a posy. At any rate, the first thing I knew I was floating down a very pleasant stream and in time got into the rapids.

How for three years I made love to Agatha without my father's suspecting it I don't know. Perhaps he did suspect it. It may be he knew it. If he did, he didn't trouble himself about it. He had named the conditions under which I might inherit his wealth, but he made no effort to impress me with the importance of my fulfilling them. Doubtless he argued: "I have settled the matter so far as I am concerned. If the boy chooses to throw away a fortune and at the same time take a serpent to his bosom, he is welcome to do so."

Agatha was well born and well bred, but she was at the wrong end of a period of prosperity in her family. When she became old enough to choose a career for herself she decided upon being a trained nurse. She knew the conditions of my father's will and would not for the world stand between me and a fortune. Her action in the matter alone saved me from giving it up, for I begged her to marry me. Yet, looking backward, I don't see how I would have supported her, for, being brought up as I was to inherit great wealth, I was not practical.

A strange coincidence happened. I frequently visited my mother and stayed as long as I pleased. When I went my father never asked me how long I intended to remain away, and when I returned never complained that I had been gone too long, though I am quite sure he missed me. While I was away he never communicated with me. The house might have fallen on his head and I would never have known it unless by report.

On one of my visits to my mother I stayed two weeks. I wrote to my father every few days, though I did not expect him to write to me. When I returned I was informed that he had been taken ill a few days after my departure and had been under the care of several doctors ever since. I ran upstairs and was met on the landing by a woman in a nurse's uniform.

"Agatha!" I exclaimed. "What are you doing here?"

"Nursing your father. A nurse was called suddenly; I responded and did not know where I was coming till I arrived."

"What a dispensation!"

I went in to see my father and found him still quite ill, though his doctors had pronounced him improving. He seemed much relieved at my return, but said that he had had every care, having been fortunate in his nurse. He had asked for a man, but his doctors had dissuaded him. "My nurse is a treasure," he said. "That's one thing women can do well; they can take care of sick persons."

"And persons sick at heart, too," I added. But he did not seem to heed the remark, for he closed his eyes, and, knowing how weak he was, I left him.

He was ill for several months, months as full of bliss mingled with bitterness for me as of suffering to him. Agatha remained at her post all this while, and when he became convalescent and she wished to be relieved, that she might get a rest, he begged her to rest where she was, turning over his care temporarily to me. It is needless to say she consented.

One morning she came out of the sickroom with a joyous look on her face.

"What is it?" I asked eagerly.

"What do you suppose I have succeeded in doing?"

"What?"

"I am the bearer to you of your father's request that you go to your mother and ask her to return to her home."

I was thunderstruck.

"But"— I gasped.

"But the conditions? There are no conditions except that the past, or rather, its cause, is not to be mentioned."

"And you have accomplished this?"

"Not I alone. Invalids are noncombatants. Your father has been impressed with what I have done for him, though I have been paid for doing it. This morning he asked me what he could do for me besides paying me, and I replied that if he would take steps for a reconciliation with his wife I would feel amply repaid. I have done my part. It is now for you to do yours. Persuade your mother to come back."

I clasped Agatha in my arms, then ran downstairs three steps at a time, hastened into the street, called a passing cab and bid him drive as fast as his horse could go to my mother's home. It was some time before I persuaded her to return with me, but when I pictured how near father had been to death she decided to go to him and, having once decided, could not go quickly enough to satisfy her impatience.

The spell which hung over my father had been broken by the kindly feminine attentions of a good woman, and it never returned to him.

"Frank," he said to me on the day of our reunion, "if you don't marry Agatha I'll disinherit you."

"That's pleasant," I replied. "For years I've been living under the expectation that you would disinherit me if I did."

MARRIED TAXED ON JOINT INCOME

Husbands Made Responsible For Their Wives.

SINGLE PERSONS FAVORED.

These With $3,000 a Year Save $20 More Than if Wedded—Mooted Point Settled and the Whole Question of Liability Made Clear by the Most Recent Set of Regulations.

Single persons who have an income of $3,000 a year will save $20 a year more than they would if married, according to a new set of income tax regulations issued by William H. Osborn, United States commissioner of internal revenue. A clause in the regulations makes the husband, in the case of a married woman, personally responsible for filing returns for himself and her.

Men and women who have incomes exceeding $3,000 annually will lose $20 a year by getting married. If unmarried, exemption will total $6,000; if married and living together they will get but $4,000 exemption. They must pay 1 per cent tax on $2,000 additional.

This decision came after nearly two months' consideration and interpretation of the income tax law. At first it was thought that where a husband and wife both had incomes liable to the tax the exemption should be $7,000, the double exemption for single persons and the additional $1,000 for married persons.

An Explicit Declaration.

"Every single person," say the regulations drafted by the commissioner of internal revenue, "and every married person not living with husband or wife in the sense below defined who has a net income exceeding $3,000 per annum is liable to pay the normal income tax under this law, but in making return for such tax may claim an exemption of $3,000 from the total net income.

"Husband and wife living together are entitled to an exemption of $4,000 only from the aggregate net income of both, which may be deducted in making the return of such aggregate income for taxation. However, when the husband and wife are separated and living permanently apart from each other each shall be entitled to the exemption of $3,000.

"If the husband and wife, not living apart, have separate estates the income from both may be made on one return, but the amount of income of each and the full name and address of both must be shown in such return.

"The husband, as the head and legal representative of the household and general custodian of its income, should make and render the return of the aggregate income of himself and wife, and for the purpose of levying the income tax it is assumed that he can ascertain the total amount of said income.

Wife May Make Return.

"If a wife has a separate estate, managed by herself as her own separate property, and receives an income of more than $3,000 she may make return of her own income, and if the husband has other net income, making the aggregate of both incomes more than $4,000, the wife's return should be attached to the return of her husband, or his income should be included in her return, in order that a deduction of $4,000 may be made from the aggregate of both incomes. The tax in such case, however, will be imposed only upon so much of the aggregate income of both as shall exceed $4,000.

"If either husband or wife separately has an income equal to or in excess of $3,000 a return of annual net income is required under the law, and such return must include the income of both, and in such case the return must be made, even though the combined income of both be less than $4,000.

"If the aggregate net income of both exceeds $4,000 an annual return of their combined incomes must be made in the manner stated, although neither one separately has an income of $3,000 per annum. They are jointly and separately liable for such return and for the payment of the tax.

"The single or married status of the person claiming the specific exemption shall be determined as of the time of claiming such exemption. If such claim be made within the year for which return is made, otherwise the status at the close of the year."

MUNICIPAL GRAFT IN CHINA.

Thrives There as In the United States. Sociologists Are Told.

Graft and rascality in municipal government thrive in China as well as in the United States, and it should not be hard for Americans to understand Chinese politics, according to Charles R. Henderson of the University of Chicago, who addressed the closing session of the American Sociological society.

Mr. Henderson returned recently from an extensive study of social conditions in China. He is optimistic of the Chinese as a people and says they will be greatly improved by their intercourse with those of America. This intercourse is bound to grow through trade, education, travel, missions and diplomacy. Many Chinese are looking longingly toward California, and thousands would come if they were assured of a two acre farm.

DROOD WAS MURDERED

Verdict of Jury Composed of Students of Dickens' Works

London, Jan. 8.—Students of Dickens gathered last night, and gatavered up the threads of Dickens' unfinished tale, "The Mystery of Edwin Drood."

The entertainment took the form of court proceedings, in which John Jasper was placed on trial for the murder of Edwin Drood, G. K. Chesterton, the novelist, acting as judge. About midnight the jury rendered the following verdict:

"In the British spirit of compromise we adjudge the prisoner guilty of manslaughter."

A rider to the verdict left the prisoner to the judge's mercy and threatened those daring to question the verdict with committal for contempt of court.

The trial was under the auspices of the Dickens Fellowship, and many of the leading literary men of London took part. Guineas were vainly offered even for a seat on the stairs.

IMPEDED CIRCULATION

Removal of Clot of Blood From Woman's Aorta Saves Her Life

Philadelphia, Jan. 8.—An operation, declared by surgeons to be unique in the annals of surgery in this country, was performed here when the aorta of a woman was opened and a clot of blood which had been impeding circulation was removed.

A three-quarter inch incision was made in the great artery close to the heart, and the blood clot which lay below the opening was expelled by pressure. Before the operation there was no perceptible pulse below the section in which the clot was lodged.

After the clot had been removed a pulse was observed in both legs, and physicians declared the woman's life will be saved, although the right leg may have to be amputated.

NON-COMMITTAL ON SUFFRAGE QUESTION

Glynn Receives Plucky Hikers at New York Capitol

Albany, Jan. 8.—The hike of the New York suffragettes ended here. They obtained their audiences with Governor Glynn and their respective assemblymen in the interest of their "cause," and all are happy though foot-sore.

Three of the hikers, "General" Rosalie Jones, "Colonel" Ida Craft and "Corporal" Martha Klatschken, walked the entire 166 miles from New York city by road in the six days and a half. The little "army" finished in fairly good condition.

The governor did not commit himself on the suffrage question. The women said they wanted a bill passed giving women the right to watch at the polls on election day. Glynn told the women he "felt honored by their visit."

PROMISED TO WED FIFTY

Girl Figures In "Matrimonial Bureau" Run by Her Parents

Indianapolis, Jan. 8.—Emma and Martin Ferris, each near 70 years old, of Princeton, Ind., indicted on the charge of conducting a fake matrimonial bureau, confessed their guilt.

Louise Ferris, their daughter and the principal figure in the matrimonial bureau, pleaded guilty about a month ago. The girl played the part of a young heiress in the scheme and, the authorities asserted, her photographs and letters led to her engagement to more than fifty men. Five suitors appeared at one time in Princeton to claim her as a wife.

All sentences were suspended.

GROWTH OF MOTOR CAR

Over 1,907,000 Autos Now In Use In the United States

New York, Jan. 8.—The tremendous growth of the motor car in the United States is shown by figures just compiled by Secretary of State May.

Total registrations of automobiles last year was 1,127,940, an increase of 605,001 over 1911. It is estimated that there are at present in use in the United States nearly 1,097,940 automobiles.

New York leads with 133,000 registrations. Massachusetts is seventh, with 57,000.

This remarkable photograph is the only one made of the sinking vessel. It shows one section of the ship as it is sinking. Alongside is the Bavaria, which rescued eight men. The picture was taken from the deck of the Tenadores. Copyright, 1914, by American Press Association.

Money In Circulation

Washington, Jan. 8.—There is at large in the United States this day the sum of $35.11 for every man, woman and child. The treasury department says so. Figures show money in circulation to be $3,775,464,096.

—The many difficulties that have arisen from the attempt of the government to collect the income tax at the source have caused protests to pour into the department from all over the country. Of course the object was to be sure that no one concealed any part of his income. But the suggestion has been made that the information be obtained from the source of income as is now done, but that the tax be collected from the individual.—Taunton Herald.

Ladies as Well as Men Interested in Inauguration

Representative Sullivan of this city was a member of the committee of the House of Representatives on Wednesday appointed to notify Gov. Foss that members were ready to be qualified.

In the organization of the House, Representative Sandberg voted on every ballot for Grafton D. Cushing who was elected speaker, while Representative Sullivan voted first for Peter F. Tague the Democrat and then for George P. Webster the Progressive. Four ballots were required.

GOVERNOR WALSH.

Several Quincy gentlemen and ladies attended today the inauguration of David I. Walsh as Governor, including Mrs. Charles W. Guy, Mrs. Louis F. R. Langelier, Mrs. Michael T. Sullivan and Mrs. Edward J. Sandberg Miss Vera Colin, City Solicitor John W. McAnarney, John J. McAnarney, Mr. and Mrs. Timothy J. O'Connell, Councilman Thomas Griffin, Timothy Ford and others. One of the messengers actively about his duties was Henry P. Furnald of this city.

Councillor Charles W. Guy, who took the oath of office today writes to thank the Daily Ledger for its complimentary mention on Tuesday. He says he owes his election to advertising by David Roach in the Ledger six months ago.

It was not until 1.40 that Gov. Walsh was inaugurated because of a contest in the Legislature over committees.

LONG SERVICE AS CONSTABLE

James E. Maxim Enters Upon His 47th Year

James E. Maxim, one of Quincy's veteran firemen and long time police officers, held up his right hand in the City Clerk's office Wednesday for the 47th time and took the oath as a constable of Quincy.

It was in 1867 when Jim first became a guardian of the peace in Quincy, at that time the constables being elected annually at the town meetings. Year after year he was re-elected until Quincy became a city, when the office of constable was filled by appointment by the Mayor. Jim has not for years taken any active part in any of the political games and there has never been any question of his re-appointment when the new year came around.

When he received the oath of office on Wednesday City Clerk Crane congratulated him on his long service, and said that he hoped to see him take office for his fiftieth term.

In addition to being a constable, Jim is a veteran fireman, being for years a member of the Washington M. French Hose Co., and is now a member of the association named after that company.

Indirectly he is connected with the department at the present time, for residing directly opposite the Central fire station to him is assigned the duty of going across the street on any alarm that calls out all the apparatus at this station, and closing the doors and remaining in charge of the station until the apparatus returns.

CUSHING WINS ON THE FOURTH

DEMOCRATS SPRING SURPRISE

Shift Their Votes to Progressive Candidate, Who Comes Very Near Being Elected—Sharp Passages Between Leaders Mark Spirited Election on Beacon Hill

Boston, Jan. 8.—Speaker Grafton D. Cushing was re-elected speaker of the Massachusetts house of representatives on the fourth ballot, with 123 votes to 109 for George P. Webster, the Progressive candidate; number necessary for a choice, 120.

A Democratic coup, sprung unexpectedly just after the roll had been called on the first ballot, came near electing Webster. The roll call vote on the ballot had been as follows:

Cushing, Rep. 117
Tague, Dem. 103
Webster, Prog. 17
Morrill, Soc. 1

Before the clerk announced the result of the vote the Democrats sprang just such a coup as they did in the Dawes-Long-Collins United States senatorial fight years ago when they changed from Collins to Dawes and elected the latter.

Mr. Tague arose before the vote had been announced and expressed a desire to change his vote to Webster. Tague had voted for himself on the roll call. Other Democrats followed quickly until all but four had shifted from Tague to Webster.

The first break in the Progressive ranks came on the third ballot, when Mr. Lyle, who had voted for Webster on the first two ballots, shifted his vote to Cushing. Mr. Carbary, Democrat, did not vote. This made one less necessary for a choice and Cushing came within one vote of being elected.

Mr. Washburn moved that another ballot be taken. Tague, not liking the way that things were going, moved that the election be postponed till 3 p. m. today and the suggestion brought hisses from various parts of the floor. The tense situation was momentarily relieved by the entrance of a committee from the senate to notify the house of the organization of that body.

When the senators retired Washburn made a speech in which he assailed the idea of adjourning without electing a speaker, and vehemently condemned the combination of Democrats and Progressives.

Mr. Lomasney replied, referring to the last state campaign and to the race and religious issues which were injected into it.

As the Democratic leader seated himself Mr. Cushing replied to Lomasney, at the same time opposing the motion to postpone the election. He referred to malign influences at work, and said he did not wonder that the combination of Democratic and Progressives had sought to postpone the balloting, for he said thus far their scheme had failed to work. In closing he declared he had always been progressive in his advocacy of legislation.

Mr. Carr, a Progressive, retorted that if there had been any unfairness it was on the part of the Republicans themselves, and he was loudly applauded. Lomasney had been applauded, too, when he spoke, and the remarks of Cushing, on the other hand, had been greeted by a few hisses.

The demonstrations aroused Mr. Prime, the presiding officer, to warn the galleries that if decorum was not maintained he would order the sergeant at arms to require the spectators to leave.

Mr. Tague's proposal that the contest for speakership be continued until 3 o'clock this afternoon was defeated by a vote of 131 to 104. The Republicans were solid in voting against the motion, and had the assistance of a number of members of other parties. The taking of a fourth ballot was then begun.

In the senate, organization was started by the election of Calvin Coolidge as president. He received 31 votes to 5 for Francis J. Horgan of Boston, Democrat, and 2 for Charles M. Cox of Melrose, Progressive.

WALSH TAKES HIS SEAT

Large Crowd Witnesses Inaugural Ceremonies at Boston

Boston, Jan. 8.—David I. Walsh of Fitchburg was inaugurated as governor of Massachusetts today.

The inauguration exercises were conducted in the house chamber at 11 o'clock. At that hour the members of both senate and house came together in joint convention, with President Coolidge of the senate in the chair.

The oath of office was administered by the president of the senate in the presence of the largest crowd which has attended inaugural ceremonies in the state for years.

More than 2300 invitations were sent out by Walsh and the capacity of the house chamber and galleries was taxed to the utmost. Following the reading of his inaugural address the governor retired to the executive chamber for a reception.

Important News In Advertisements

By HOLLAND.

THE valuable news of the day is not confined to the news columns. It is also seen in the advertisements. Of course it is important to know what President Wilson is doing, what the latest developments are in China or what baseball club leads the league. But it is also important to know where a bargain in boys' waists, garden hose, breakfast food or straw hats may be found.

These bits of commercial news are among the advertisements. Wise persons look for them and take advantage of them when they are doing their buying. The leading merchants are continually telling you news of their stores, news that is important because it often means a real saving and always means something new and worth while.

Read the advertisements if you seek important news. Read them regularly and always with the thought that back of each advertisement are the reputation and business standing of the merchant. He could not afford to deceive you even if he were so inclined.

FATHER AND SON

a man in the making and it is important for us fathers and all men that love America to know what kind of a man we will make of the boy that is some good and some bad.

The boy that counts is the boy that has good friends, friends that understand him and the boy's best friend is father. The little fellow does not always think so because he is not wise When you took him across your knee and gave him a happy dispensation of grace he did not think he was one of your friends. The dirty little scamp feels mad if you insist on his keeping his face and hands clean. He wants to run loose. He is a little barbarian. He is passing through one of the stages of civilization.

What we need at this juncture is a man who understands him and will be his friend in spite of his peculiarities. You think you understand him and he thinks you don't. The average boy needs someone that can interpret for him. The reason 90 percent of the men have amounted to anything in this world is because someone has loved them through the trying period.

It is necessary for the wholesome development of a boy that he should fight. Any boy that doesn't fight has lost an essential element of his boyhood.

We who have children are in a peculiar position. There is a good deal of sentimental gush about them. The boy makes a big spread of his learning and no hatter in Quincy can fit him. He is bigger now than he will ever be in his life and when he wants to go to a place at a venture you excuse it by saying it is "the new way."

If we are going to have any progress, our boys should know more than we, but when it comes to the conduct of life the little fellow does not commence to know what you know. Your experiences have taught you something that that little fellow has a right to be taught by you. You know what is good and bad for him, and instead of being afraid of the poor little fellow take and tell him that you insist that he measure up to what you expect of him. In the average case he will try and meet the standard of his father.

The trouble is we seek the easy course. We are farming our boys out and letting them and the Y. M. C. A. do the stunt that belongs to us.

It is up to us men to make of our boy the kind of a man we want him to be, and the greatest gift we will ever receive is to have him turn around and say "Dad, you were pretty stern sometimes with me, but I can see where all lickings were a very good thing and why you would not let me do some things, and I want to thank you."

The average boy has one of two ideas. One is that he wants freedom from restraint. The American man is one that will obey. One thing drilled into me was "if a man is to command, he must learn to obey."

I feel about our American life that we must raise more Americank boys that will tackle their duty because it is their duty, not because someone is standing beside with a ten cent bribe, and it is up to us as fathers to train more boys who will consider first and foremost their duty.

Every boy is a hero worshipper. In nearly every case it is the man of brawn, and then it is the man of brains. In adolescence, a boy could not speak of the prowess of his father in his hearing, but there never was a time when he felt it more.

I am going to plead for him. Be patient. Nature has mercifully provided while building his physique that he will feel lazy because he needs the bulk of all his strength to build up physically. He ought to have a little leeway. His imagination is at work and he will exaggerate once in a while He does not mean to lie. It is not a streak of weakness. Above all don't be sarcastic. He is a bigger mystery to himself than to you.

And boys, be patient with your fathers. They have forgotten how they felt at your age. I associate with boys to keep myself young. You must be patient because they don't quite remember how it was with them. He was as you are, but above all, boys, he has learned some things he does not want you to pay for. He has paid for them by experiences and he is trying to tell you things that he has bought with his strength and he is provoked with you because you won't learn from him.

I wish you the greatest of all boons, a father that understands his boy, and a boy who will listen to his father because he believes he loves him.

WHITON NOT TURNED DOWN

Has Had No Interview With Mayor Miller Since Monday

Rumors have been rife about City Square for the past few days about an alleged visit to Mayor Miller by President Whiton of the City Council and what happened during that visit. According to the story President Whiton called on the Mayor on Wednesday and after a few minutes the conversation drifted to City Council matters, at which President Whiton is alleged to have said—"Now the Council has organized and elected me as President, if there is anything I can do to help you Mr. Mayor I shall be glad to do so."

The story has it that Mayor Millers reply to this statement was— "I do not want your help, I can get along without it." At which genial Joe, picked up his hat and walked out.

From investigation it appears that the story was made up by some one out of whole cloth. President Whiton, when seen this morning, denied emphatically that he had visited the office of the Mayor and had any such conversation as reported. President Whiton further said that he had not laid eyes on Mayor Miller since the night of the banquet, which was Monday evening at the American house, Boston. So many rumors are flying about that a sifting is necessary.

ADAMS SCHOOL ENTERTAIN

War Lecture, Pleasing Operetta and a Comic Sketch

An entertainment under the auspices of the Adams school was held Thursday afternoon and evening in the school hall. The program consisted of "From Reveille to Taps" a lecture by Paul Kamerer of New York; "Loyal little men and women of the Revolution," an operetta by girls and boys of the primary grades; and "The Pumpkin Pie" a comic sketch by the seventh grade boys. A chorus of fifty voices sang patriotic songs.

Mr. Kamerer, who was a bugler in the Civil war, illustrated his lecture by songs, recitations, stories, bugle calls and war reminiscences.He gave each of bugle calls used in the army during the War and explained them. The veteran used the same bugle which he had used at the front. He told of the war as he saw it. He was with General Grant from Pittsburg Landing until after the capture of Vicksburg; then with General Sherman to Jackson, Meridian, Kenesaw, Mt. Atlanta, in the "March to the Sea," through North and South Carolina, Virginia and in the "Grand Review" at Washington at the close of the war.

"The Pumpkin Pie" was cleverly acted by the boys under the direction of Miss Jennie Griffin. The humorous antics drew forth many a burst of laughter from the audience.

The operetta, "Loyal little men and women of the Revolution was also staged under the direction of Miss Griffin. It is the same one which was given last year at another entertainment held in Music Hall by the Adams Parents and Teachers Association. The proceeds of the entertainment will go to the Adams School Fund.

ATLANTIC BEACH.

The committee chosen by the Atlantic Improvement Association, to see about having the Atlantic beach cleaned, and the filling used by Mr. Jones who has bought the land back of Faxon Road, has been hard at work this week.

Mr. Jones has offered to pay two thirds of expense for the filling and have the Park Commission pay the other third. Mr. Costello, manager of the Metropolitan Park has expressed his hearty approval, and the people of Atlantic want the beach cleaned, so they can go in swimming anywhere instead of being confined to a twenty foot beach. The Park Commission feel that they would like to see the Atlantic Beach improved so it is possible something will be done to take advantage of the present opportunity.

SECOND DAY FOGG CASE

Mrs. Reynolds Tells of Demands Made by Officers

The case against Charles E. Fogg charged with the illegal transportation of liquor in Braintree closed about 12.30. William Kelly, his attorney finished his summing up of the evidence before adjournment at one o'clock.

He said the case will always be a disgrace to the town of Braintree, not because of the prosecution but because of the persecution by witnesses. He said he appreciated that Judge Avery admitted irrelevant and hearsay evidence because of the publicity attached to the case so he could learn the real facts.

Mrs. E. Grace Reynolds of the Cedarcrest Club, which was raided and of which the charge against Mr. Fogg is the direct outcome, resumed the stand this morning. She presented the record, ledger and cash book of the club, and said she was the treasurer. Attorney Kelly objected to the admission of the books, and Counsel Mullen said he wanted to show the character of the club. Mr. Kelley retorted that the books should not be admitted as the question of character did not enter into a case which was supposed to show the illegal transportation of liquor.

Judge Avery admitted the books. She was examined by Mr. Mellen relative to meetings, and his effort to find whether Fogg was present at any was unsuccessful. The questions then turned on whether Fogg was a member and Mrs. Reynolds said he resigned from the board of directors and that she dropped his name from the club role.

In the meantime Mr. Mellen had given the record book to Carl Lothrop, a Braintree lawyer who was seated within the enclosure. As he passed the book he whispered in his ear. The movement was not unnoticed by Mr. Kelly, who immediately crossed to Mr. Lothrop and placed his hands on the book, intending to take it. Mr. Lothrop held on and Mr. Kelly appealed to the Judge to find whether or not an outsider had any right to keep such a book. Judge Avery ordered it returned to the desk of the clerk.

Several witnesses were then introduced and Mrs. Reynolds was again recalled to the stand for the further examination of books. She could not identify the handwriting in the record books, but said she supposed it was by one of her two daughters, Edna or Gertrude. Both girls were in court with their mother, but did not testify.

For more than 20 minutes Mrs. Reynolds replied "I don't remember"

APPOINTMENTS ARE LEAKING OUT

Faxon Billings Will Be Next Chief Engineer of Fire Department

Another Guess Coming on Other City Offices

It can be stated on no less authority, than appointee himself, that Faxon Billings, driver of the auto chemical at the Atlantic station, has accepted the appointment as Chief Engineer of the Fire Department under Mayor Miller, and that he will assume the office the first Monday in February.

There have been several rumors to the effect that the office of Chief Engineer would go to Mr. Billings or an ex-Boston fireman. If Mr. Billings did not accept, then the Boston man, who resides in Quincy, would receive the appointment.

It was Mr. Billing's day off, Thursday, and he paid a visit to City Square and City Hall, and, in conversation with friends stated that he had accepted the position.

It was also learned that he visited a tailors shop in City Square before he went home and purchased a Chief's uniform. This would seem to settle the question as to the next Chief Engineer of the Fire Department.

It is to be regretted that Mayor Miller could not have seen his way clear to retain Chief Litchfield in office. He has more than made good during the past two years service, and the department was never on a more harmonious and efficient footing than it is today.

When politics does not enter into the appointments, as is the case with the present administration, it is hard to convince people that it is necessary to remove an official who is doing good work and who has made good, for no apparent good reason.

It is said that there will be a new Commissioner of Public Works, new Tax Collector, new City Treasurer and new Assessor, and that the names of some of these appointees have not yet appeared in print.

Charles H. Johnson, who was refused reappointment as a constable by Mayor Miller, and whose license as an auctioneer, adopted by the City Council at its first meeting, had been hung up, has been made happy. Mr. Johnson called on Mayor Miller at City Hall, Thursday, and when he came from the office was all smiles. The Mayor had signed his auctioneers license and had promised to send his name to the City Council as a constable at its next meeting.

There was nothing doing of a public nature from the Mayor's office today. He had about the usual number of callers, but what their business was they kept solely for the Mayor's ear. Appearances indicated however that thy were either looking for jobs for themselves or had called to put in a good word for some friend.

To the reporters the Mayor talked on general subjects, but gave no intimation as to whom he should appoint. He did say, however, that there had been rumors that he intended to turn everybody out the first day that he took office. In regard to this he said that people must think him foolish if he did such a thing. He however did not say the eventually there would not be a general cleaning out of City Hall.

During his campaign, the Mayor said that the latch string at his office would always be out, but the number of daily callers this week has been such that the Mayor has had but little time to get settled down to doing much in the way of city business.

ONLY ONE G. A. R.

There has been published in the daily papers of late the details of a scheme which aims to recruit the thinning ranks of the G. A. R., by electing to its membership the eldest sons of union veterans. This seems at first glance very sensible but on second thought it shows itself to be an absurdity. There can be only one G. A. R., and there is no place in this country for any other body of men masquerading under its honored name When the veterans have one and all answered to the last roll call, their places will naturally and logically be filled by their sons and grandsons who are organized as that great and growing organization, the "Sons of Veterans." This order in the natural course of events will take up the work of the Grand Army in caring for the soldiers' graves, inculcating patriotism and upholding in every way the honor of the old flag for which their fathers fought so gallantly All true and loyal "Sons" will join this brotherhood and seek to augment its noble work. Grand Army men are in sympathy with it and endorse its principles and objects and very properly expect their sons to join it as being the proper sphere for their patriotic efforts. Post 87, G. A. R., of this town and the local camp of Sons of Veterans work together in perfect harmony whenever occasion requires and the best of fellowship exists between the two orders. The same conditions prevail in nearly all localities and any attempt to change them by intermingling the membership of the two societies would result only in disaster. We feel that neither fathers nor sons will consent to have the present arrangements changed.

THE DEER-SLAYERS.

The crowd that pours in November out of city and country into the deer forests seems to grow larger every year. In many states deer are rigidly protected with short open seasons so that they are not in much danger of extermination. Investigations by Outing magazine in 1910 showed 35,000 deer killed in 12 states from Oregon to Maine, but that was only a small proportion of the total number believed to exist.

The great increase in the number of sportsmen tends to make deer wilder. They seem to be growing in sagacity in other ways. Whereas a few years ago locomotive engineers said they often run them down, of recent years killing of deer on railroad tracks is said to be less common.

The successful deer hunter has the same cool self controlled patience that distinguishes the good fisherman. He must be animated by a keen sympathy with the life of nature, to keep him quiet and content through long waits in deserted runways. A good sportsman will remain a whole day in one location, if assured that this makes him practically certain to gain a shot. He must feel that it is not all of hunting to hunt. He must be sensitive to the charm of woodland silences, must feel that quality of solace in nature that smooths out the wrinkles of worry and strain.

To the true deer-stalker, the moment when the deer appears is a surpassing crisis of life. For one who feels the hunting instinct a successful shot gives a greater satisfaction than the triumphs of business or politics.

The lure of the sport is not the desire of killing, of extinguishing life. It is rather the sense of having baffled the elusiveness of nature. It is the feeling that human skill and wit has outplayed the wonderful alertness of eye and fleetness of foot of the deer, one of the most efficient of the woodland creatures.

EVERYBODY-GO-TO CHURCH

Tenement Is Great Breeding Place of White Plague

By Rev. FREDERICK L. FLAGLEY, Pastor of Plymouth Congregational Church, Cincinnati

WE who live on the hilltops may think that it is none of our business that thirty-two thousand families live in tenements in the city and that twenty thousand families live in the tenements in the bottoms, but it is. Leaving for the present our moral and religious responsibility, let us consider the influence of the tenement in our city.

IT IS OUR HEALTH THAT IS IMPERILED AS WE RIDE ON THE CROWDED CARS, GO INTO OUR STORES OR WALK ALONG OUR STREETS, BECAUSE THE TENEMENT IS THE GREAT BREEDING PLACE OF THE WHITE PLAGUE AND OTHER DISEASES. IT IS OUR LIFE AND OUR HOME THAT ARE ENDANGERED BY THE CRIMINAL OF THE SLUMS.

It is our city administration that is embarrassed by the RICH LANDLORDS who desire NO TENEMENT REGULATION or inspection, but who only demand FAVORABLE REPORTS OF THEIR RENT COLLECTOR or speedy action of the official ejector.

OUR CITY NEEDS INTELLIGENT VOTERS; OUR FACTORIES NEED CAPABLE WORKMEN, STRONG OF ARM AND CLEAR OF BRAIN; THE CHILDREN OF THE CITY NEED EFFICIENT MOTHERS OF CHARACTER, AND IT IS AS IMPOSSIBLE TO GROW STRONG MEN AND PURE WOMEN IN OUR WORST TENEMENTS AS IT IS TO GROW CORN OR WHEAT IN A CELLAR.

Some Day Airship Will Cross the Atlantic

I WOULDN'T VENTURE TO PREDICT THAT THE ATLANTIC WILL BE CROSSED IN A FLYING MACHINE WITHIN THE NEXT FEW YEARS.

We shall have to ACCOMPLISH MORE ON LAND with flying machines before thinking of crossing the sea. But I believe that some day the Atlantic will be crossed.

WHAT IS NEEDED JUST NOW IS MORE EXPERIENCED AVIATORS. FULLY NINETY-FIVE PER CENT OF ACCIDENTS OCCUR BECAUSE THE AVIATOR HAS NOT BEEN SUFFICIENTLY TRAINED.

Japan Doesn't Want War; Now Laboring Under Big Debt

By HAMILTON W. MABIE, Editor, Author and Traveler

JAPAN, THE LAND OF CHERRY BLOSSOMS, KIMONOS AND POLITENESS, THE NATION THAT HAS BEEN CALLED THE AMERICA OF THE FAR EAST, IS THE EQUAL OF THE UNITED STATES IN POWER, CIVILIZATION AND INTEGRITY.

Three things must be recognized when we deal with Japan—first, the DEVOTED PATRIOTISM of the people; second, THEIR DARE-DEVIL COURAGE, and, third, THEIR CONTROL OF ANY SKILL there is in the world. Why, they have smokeless powder over there that is ten times as powerful as any we have here. Every Japanese is willing—aye, eager—TO DIE FOR THE EMPEROR.

JAPAN DOESN'T WANT WAR. SHE HAS NO THOUGHT OF IT. SHE HAS NOT HAD ONE YEAR SINCE WE INSERTED THE KEY IN 1850 IN WHICH SHE COULD DO WHAT SHE WANTED. WHAT SHE HAS DONE HAS ALL BEEN BY REASON OF COMPULSION. SHE WANTS TO HAVE AT LEAST TEN YEARS OF PEACE TO RELIEVE HERSELF OF THE HEAVY DEBT HANGING OVER HER.

SCARCITY OF GUNS AND AMMUNITION

Wood Declares Situation Is a Peril to Our Army

Washington, Jan. 9.—"If you sent our troops into war as they are now, without guns or ammunition, it would be absolute slaughter," General Wood told the house military committee.

"If called into the field suddenly, we should have to go with a very small allowance of ammunition, even for the guns in the hands of the troops, and we should have neither guns nor ammunition enough for our field artillery forces."

He advised congress that it should appropriate $2,000,000 for field guns and ammunition for the regular army and $3,000,000 for the militia.

JUDGE IS DISBARRED

Penalty For Engaging Self as Counsel and Charging Estate

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 9.—Charles H. Peck, for years judge of probate in Stratford, was indefinitely debarred from the practice of law before the courts of the state, in a decision handed down by Judge Bennett of the superior court here.

The decision was on a presentment by State Attorney Judson, which brought up for review his acts as judge of probate on the estate of Mrs. Susan M. B. Perry of Stratford. It was charged that while acting as judge of probate Peck engaged himself as counsel to advise himself as judge of probate, and charged a $750 fee for his services. The heirs objected, and later Peck paid back the money.

UNDER MARTIAL LAW

Gang of Armed Men Threaten to Burn the Town of Regina

Regina, Sask., Jan. 9.—In view of the acute labor situation here and repeated threats of violence from the leaders of an army of unemployed men, Regina will be under martial law tonight.

A letter from one of the leaders of the unemployed men stated that a gang of eighty-three armed men will wreak vengeance on the citizens tonight if work is not furnished for all before that time. Threats to burn the town are contained in the note, which also warns women and children to remain off the streets.

New York, Jan. 9.—Dr. Fritz Perl, German minister to Haiti, who arrived from Bremen on the steamer Grosser Kurfuerst, brought along with him as a companion a large white Angora cat called Weissberg, which shares his bed with him.

The minister said that his idea in having the cat sleep with him was that it would gradually draw rheumatism out of his body into its own.

FIREMENS BALL NETTED LARGE SUM

The annual meeting of the Quincy Firemens' Relief association was held Thursday evening, at which time officers for the ensuing year were elected, and a report rendered on the annual ball held a few weeks ago.

While the attendance at the ball did not appear to have been as large as in some other years, from a financial standpoint it was the most successful affair that the association has ever held, the report of the committee showing that the ball had netted the sum of $600.50.

When the election of officers came, Chief Litchfield was urged to accept again the position of president of the association but declined to accept any position this year. "It is the duty of the parent to send the child to school with a clean body and clean clothes," said the speaker, who also mentioned the yearly state examination of eyes and ears and the attention parents should pay to it. The need of proper food and rest was also emphasized. The outside interests, and doing things of no permanent value, take away from the child's efficiency in school. Punctuality is a better habit than good spelling," said the speaker, "and the child should understand disobedience is sure to bring punishment. The child should be taught to be respectful to his teachers, his elders and people in authority."

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

Bowling Contests Athletic Leagues
Illustrated Lectures Banquets
Basket Ball Conferences

The Junior teams chosen for competition during the second half year in the gymnasium are named for the big hockey teams. The Wanderers are captained by Roger Ahlstrom, the Puritans by Stanley Jenkins, the B. A. A. by Gusta Wester, and the Pilgrims by Herbert Hendry.

The Employed Boys teams are named for colleges as in the first half year: Yale, captain Joe Robertson; Carlisle, captain John Gronberg; Tufts, captain Ernest Moodie; Harvard, captain Lawrence Beaton. Both these teams and the Junior teams will compete in the Gym work until the latter part of March when the annual exhibition will take place.

The Sunday School athletic league will begin operations in the near future. This year in addition to basket ball teams there will probably be bowling teams representing the different Sunday Schools. During the month of January and part of February, the gym will be given over to the Sunday Schools on certain afternoons for practice and after that a series of games will be played.

The Junior Bible class for younger boys conducted by Sturgis Hunt will hold a supper in connection with its meeting this week.

The final match in the Employed Boys bowling league will be rolled off Saturday night. Yale and Princeton finished the regular scheduled games tied and this roll-off is necessary to determine the winners of the medals.

Next week teams will be chosen among the Juniors for bowling. Matches will be rolled off every Saturday morning until the middle of March. These teams will be picked from the regular teams and will bear the names, Wanderers, B. A. A., Puritans and Pilgrims.

The Everett Juniors pay the Quincy Juniors a visit on Saturday arriving in time to attend the stereopticon talk, attending the gym class and in the afternoon going to inspect the Fore River shipyard.

"A Cruise on the Pioneer," will be the subject of the stereopticon talk to be given Saturday morning at 9 o'clock by Sea Scoutmaster Shaw of Waltham. Mr. Shaw conducted this cruise taking with him a number of Scouts, three of whom were Quincy boys. The 75 slides were made from photographs taken on the trip and are sure to be of great interest. A special invitation is extended to the Boy Scouts of Quincy and Wollaston and all boys will be welcome. The meeting is to begin promptly at 9 o'clock in order that the slides may all be shown and the boys given a chance to ask questions.

Through the kindness of Mr. Kincaide and Mr. Wardwell, the boys are to have an opportunity to see the show this week. A pass good for 75 boys has been issued by the management and the boys are to go Saturday afternoon of this week. The older members of the Association are to have a chance to enjoy the hospitality of the management also and will probably go next Tuesday night. The Saturday pass will be for Junior and student members.

In the Senior bowling tournament Hunt and R. McFarlane have made the best showing to date. The Hobbs trophy has been offered for the man who bowls the best 20 strings during the year.

The second annual business men's banquet will be held on Tuesday, January 27, at 6.30. Charles H. Cole, fire commissioner of Boston, will be the principal speaker. H. Everett Crane is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

The older boys are beginning to reckon the days between now and Washington's Birthday when the State Conference is to be held in Lawrence. Mr. Blanchard is to go with the ten delegates to be selected from the members of the Student class.

Quincy is to meet Beverly first team on the home floor Saturday night and the second team will play the Braintree A. A. Next Wednesday the first combat with the old rival, Newton, will take place and a red hot game is expected.

BRIEFS

John Dexter of Atlantic street has been on the sick list for a week.

The annual dancing party of Quincy lodge, Junior Order of Moose, will take place this evening in Alpha hall.

William Nelson who was taken seriously ill Monday with ulcers in the stomach, has slightly improved.

Arthur Priest of Old Colony street fell from a ladder while decorating at the Copley Plaza hotel, Boston, Wednesday and broke a wrist and one rib.

Mrs. George T. Nesbitt of Prospect avenue, Wollaston, passed away on Wednesday. Funeral services will be held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Overseer of the Poor James H. Elcock, who has been confined to his home this week by illness, is reported as improving.

Quincy circle of Lady Moose met in Electa hall Thursday evening and considered routine business. Plans are complete for their annual dance which will take place in Alpha hall.

Charles P. Gould commenced unloading a consignment of 16 Ford automobiles at the Quincy freight yard today. Weather conditions slightly interferred.

J. William Lynch son of John E. Lynch of the firm of Beckford & Lynch electrical contractors, has been appointed special electrical mechanic in the office of the inspector of machinery U. S. N. with the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation and enters upon his duties Monday.

Thomas Phillips of Walnut street has been brought home from the Peter Brigham Hospital and it is expected he will fully recover from his sickness.

Phoebe Buffington Cobb, widow of Jabez Cobb, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. C. Brady, 131 Grand View avenue on Thursday. Prayers will be said at the house Saturday morning after which the body will be sent to Fall River for burial.

The funeral of Fred A. Smith, a retired employee of the Boston post office, was held from his home, 747 Hancock street, Thursday afternoon. Services were conducted by Rev. Carl G. Horst of the Wollaston Unitarian church. Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery, Dorchester.

Quincy people will be sorry to learn of the death in Brockton on Thursday of Rev. Howard Perkins. Mr. Perkins has been recently president of the Old Colony association of Universalists and is well known to many in this city. Those in attendance at the conference in Brockton on Wednesday can hardly realize the sad news as Mr. Perkins was seemingly in good health that day. Funeral services will probably be held Sunday afternoon.

Master Frank Irwin had a birthday Thursday, his fifth, which he celebrated at his home on Gilmore street by entertaining a number of his young friends. One of the features of the afternoon was a massive frosted birthday cake, on the top of which were the words "five years." The cake took Frank's eye, and it is hardly necessary to say it took the eyes of his guests as well. In addition to this he received a number of gifts from his young friends. Games were played and refreshments served.

RUN-DOWN FOR YEARS

Strength Restored by Vinol.

Strength and even life itself depends upon nourishment and proper assimilation of food, and unless digestion is good the whole body suffers.

Mrs. C. W. Busby of Moundsville, W. Va., says: "For years I was in a weakened, run-down condition, and I could not find anything that would help me. Vinol was recommended and I tried it. Before I finished the first bottle I was better. I continued its use and am as well as ever. I have gotten several neighbors to take Vinol with the same result."

We know the great power of Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil, in building up all weakened, run-down persons, and for chronic coughs, colds and pulmonary trouble and that is why we guarantee to return your money if it does not help you. GO-TO-CHURCH SUNDAY

Editorial in Congregationalist Tells of Success of Movement

(From the Congregationalist.)

Every Sunday should be a Go-to-church Sunday, of course, but unfortunately there are many church members who have fallen into the habit of making Stay-at-home Sundays, Automobiling Sundays and Outing or Visiting Sundays more frequent in their calendar than the Sundays that they occupy their pews in the house of worship.

The leaders in our churches have long been striving to reform this condition, which is almost as large a problem as the problem of how to get the man who does not belong to the church to attend its services.

Some one—we are told it was in Joliet, Ill.—conceived the idea of the Go-to-church Sunday, last summer, and the movement started to stir up an entire city to attend church upon a certain day.

From the Middle West this plan has gone into many parts of the country and even staid, conservative New England has taken it up, and there has been a round of Go-to-church Sundays in several cities and towns. Among the cities that have fallen in line with themovement are Worcester, Fitchburg and Northampton, Mass.

In each of the towns where the plan is tried the ministers of the various Protestant denominations have joined in an advertising campaign directed by a committee, and upon the street cars, upon the billboards and in the newspapers appear the calls for everybody in the city and surrounding towns to go to the church of their choice upon the Sunday designated.

In the newspapers also are published reasons why people should go to church. More or less personal work is done and in some towns the school children have been drafted to carry home and distribute cards urging observance of the day.

In every instance that has come to our attention the plan has succeeded to the extent of swelling the numbers in the congregations often to twice their average. A study of those who go to church on these special days shows that a large majority of them are counted as regular members of the church or congregation, but their attendance is irregular or infrequent.

No extraordinary efforts, as a rule, have been made to provide a program of unusual attractiveness, the purpose being to bring to the attention of all the people what they may expect to find on any Sunday. The result, however, is the impression that the service is above the average, because of the inspiration and enthusiasm of numbers.

The carping critic doubts whether any large benefit results from such a scheme, but if there could be some follow-up that would conserve the interest and enthusiasm of the Go-to-church Sunday, it certainly would prove the turning point to a large success for many a church.

Even if there is no follow-up plan we would like to se a Go-to-church Sunday in every city and village in the land, because we know that the interest awakened, the arguments for church-going pressed home, and the messages given and received in the services of the day would leave a lasting impression on some, perhaps many lives.

It is a pleasant surprise even to the faithful few to learn how many good reasons there are why one should go to church, and he who has not given the matter much thought and has no interest in the church must surely be brought nearer to the Kingdom by the insistent and attractive appeal of Go-to-church Sunday.

Sunday will be Everybody-go-to church day in Quincy.

CONTROLS OWN RAILROAD

Maine Central Gets Back Stock From Boston and Maine

Boston, Jan. 9.—Separation of the Boston and Maine and the Maine Central railroads has been accomplished by the action of the Boston and Maine's directors in retiring the 100,000 shares of Maine Central stock which that corporation has purchased from the Boston and Maine in exchange for a $10,000,000 bond issue.

By this transaction control of the Maine Central passes from the Boston and Maine to the individual stockholders, a majority of whom are Maine people.

It is understood among railroad men that the Boston and Maine directors of the Maine Central will resign within a short time, and that the roads will be managed as separate corporations.

AMUSEMENTS

QUINCY MUSIC HALL.

The attraction at Quincy Music hall on Saturday afternoon and evening will be "The Rube's Dream." Miss Donna George, the captivating and bewitching dancer will appear. Miss George, although very young, has already been featured in many big productions, including some of George M. Cohan's greatest plays in which she made a sensational hit by her charming personality and wonderful dancing. Miss George on her last American tour won much distinction as a great artist, being termed by the leading Western critics "A Fairy of Rythm."

TREMONT TEMPLE.

One has only to witness "The Last Days of Pompeii," a remarkable photo drama, now on the eve of its third week at the Tremont Temple, Boston, to fully realize what a monumental task it really is. The story is based upon Lord Bulwer Lytton's famous book and all the scenes described in the novel are shown in the elaborateness that was in vogue at the time of the destruction of Pompeii. The principal characters are ably portrayed by a cast of prominent Italian stage celebrities including the beautiful Princess Ruspoli, who appears in the important role of Ione. One of the most realistic of the two hundred and more scenes shown upon the screen is the eruption of Mt. Vesuvius.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE.

"Under Cover," the best play of its type that has ever visited Boston, has settled down to a prosperous run at the Plymouth Theatre, where it is now in its third week. The mystery, suspense and surprise that fill the action of the play have caught the public fancy to the extent of making "Under Cover" the most popular attraction current in Boston. How a young woman of tender breeding is forced to act as a spy upon the man she loves in order that she may protect a younger sister, how she trails and traps him against her will until the plot reaches a denouement entirely unexpected but immensely pleasing, is the story of the play. "Under Cover" is an unusual play and its final climax is worked out in an entirely new fashion. Selwyn and Company, the owners of the play, also are owners of "Within the Law," the most sensational melodramatic success of the century.

SHUBERT THEATRE.

The theatre-goers of this vicinity who make weekly trips to enjoy the plays offered in Boston, will have an opportunity to witness an unusual form of entertainment when Lew Fields (himself) offers his newest vehicle, "All Aboard" at the Shubert Theatre for a limited engagement beginning Monday, Jan. 12th. "Musical Comedy Panorama" is the classified title of Mr. Fields "All Aboard." "Ponorama" because of the fact that an ambitious but dizzy old sailor is taken on a merry cruise which reaches all four corners of the globe, during which he enjoys close association with a number of noted celebrities, the singing and dancing of charming maidens. He is taken to his old home in Holland, while the Tulip harvest is being reaped, is treated to a visit to the Art Cubists, and is given a peek into the year 2013 "When Women Rule." The story of the play permits of a lavish display of beautiful costuming throughout. Matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons.

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

"Little Women" enters upon its third week at the Majestic Theatre next Monday evening, Jan. 12th, and all indications are it will continue to play to capacity business as in the past. Seldom has any play enjoyed so general a popularity as has "Little Women" in Boston it must be admitted the play deserves all the attention it is getting. Louisa M. Alcott wrote an immortal story when she penned the book on "Little Women," and it has lost none of its charm in the dramatizing. If you enjoyed the book, you will enjoy the play. It is difficult to figure how Wm. A. Brady could have improved the cast, for every part is portrayed with consummate art. Marie Pavey as Jo, Beverly West as Amy, Madeline Moore as Beth and Margaret Prussing as Meg divide honors in their portrayals of the four little women around whom the story revolves. Gertrude Berkley as the mother gives a notable characterization and attracts unusual attention because of the striking similarity in her personal appearance to that of Louisa M. Alcott. There are four matinees weekly; Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

When will Mary Young return to the Castle Square? That has been the question continually asked ever since the beginning of the season. And it is now answered to the satisfaction of thousands upon thousands of theatre-goers in Boston and suburbs. Mary Young will appear for the first time this season at the Castle Square theatre next week. The play will be Sir Arthur Pinero's comedy, "The Mind the Paint Girl," and Miss Young will be seen in the leading role of Lily Parradell. The heroine of "The Mind the Paint Girl" is a London girl who has become famous through her singing of a music hall song called "Mind the Paint." Success has not turned her head. She has many admirers, she is pretty, warm-hearted, capricious and she goes her way through the play like a gleam of light. Comedy and drama comingle in the play just as they comingle in her life. As a piece of dramatic craftsmanship, "The Mind the Paint Girl" is of the best, and it will offer a brilliant week, especially with Miss Young in the title role, at the Castle Square. In addition to Miss Young, Walter Walker will rejoin the company, and others in the principal roles will be William P. Carlton, Frederick Ormonde, Al Roberts, Donald Meek, Alfred Lunt, George Ernst, Florence Shirley and Mabel Colcord.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

This is the last week of the Charles Frohman production of "The Marriage Market" with Donald Brian ond the original cast including May DeSousa, Carroll McComas, Arthur Reynolds, Moya Mannering, Cissie Sewell, Arthur T. Meech, Guy Nichols, Edwin Burch and Percival Knight. "The Marriage Market" is the best musical entertainment Boston has seen in years. It is a positive sensation and has the most exquisite music since "The Chocolate Soldier" and is played by thirty of Boston's best musicians, under the personal direction of Harold Vicars, Mr. Frohman's general musical director. "The Marriage Market" is clean. There is nothing in it that could offend. It appeals to all classes, and has a delightful love romance which gives Donald Brian a real opportunity to show what a clever legitimate actor he is. The engagement positively ends Saturday night, Jan. 17th. Get your order in now, as the advance sale indicates the largest week of the year.

BIJOU THEATRE.

B. F. Keith's Bijou Theatre is always an active place, and Mrs. Josephine Clement, its Manager, is always a busy woman, but during the past two weeks the Bijou has been a hive, and Mrs. Clement more than humanly busy. This activity is the result of the preparation for production on January 12th, at the Bijou, of Every Boy, a one-act, fairy-like morality play written by Mrs. Larz Anderson. That the little play is charming all who know Mrs. Anderson's delightful fairy stories need no telling; that the production will be interesting all who have followed the work of Mrs. Clement are assured, for the productions made by Mrs. Clement at the Bijou during the last few years have attracted the attention of many of Boston's most discriminating theatre-goers.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE.

Next week will begin auspiciously at the Boston Opera House with an appearance of Mme. Luisa Tetrazzini in concert, Sunday evening. The famous diva has finished her operatic engagement in Boston, and this will be her last appearance there this year.

Monday, Offenbach's "Tales of Hoffmann" will be repeated with one change from the previous cast,—Vanni Marcoux in the four-fold role of Lindorf, Coppelius, Dappertutte, and Miracle. Charpentier's "Louise," one of the most justly popular operas in the reportoire will be given its season's premiere Wednesday evening. The title role will be sung by Louise Edvina; the young poet, Julien by Charles Dalmores, of the Chicago Company; the mother by Margarita D'Alvarez, and the father by Vanni Marcoux. Friday evening, Puccini's "La Boheme" will be given its third hearing of the season. Lucrezia Bori, whose Madama Butterfly was so noteworthy a feature of the early part of the season, will be heard as Mimi. Saturday afternoon, Saint-Saens' "Samson et Delila" will be given for the fourth time, thus completing its round of the subscription performances.

The offering at the usual scale of popular prices Saturday night, will be Verdi's "Rigoletto," with Evelyn Scotney as Gilda; Vincenzo Tanlongo, the Duke; Raymon Blanchart, Rigoletto; and Mr. Mardones, Sparafucile.

APPOINTMENTS LEAKING OUT

Up to the present time he has not called upon any of the departments at City Hall, and none of the present city officials with the exception of the City Clerk, have called upon him, or as far as known been called into his office for consultation.

Those who expect that the exciting news of the first two days is to be kept up every day, are evidently doomed to disappointment. The chances are that after Monday evening, January 19, when it is expected the appointments will be forwarded to the City Council, the string of daily callers at the Mayor's office will fall off considerably.

Up to the present time the reporters who cover City Hall have had no cause to complain of the treatment received at the hands of the Mayor. He has received them every morning in a pleasant manner with a broad smile, and has readily given out what news there was to give, with the exception of his appointments, which it is not expected that he will disclose at the present time.

The following were among the prize winners Thursday afternoon at the whist party of the George L. Gill club, Mary Fallon, Mrs. A. T. Morrison, Mrs. James Young, Mrs. William Westland, Mrs. Nettie Yewis, Mrs. Mary O'Neil, and Mrs. B. Porterfield.

"Prison is hell," says Julian Hawthorne after serving his term. The prison has, however, a decided advantage in one respect—it is easier to get out of.

An "Old Oaken Bucket" sort of poet concludes a poem, "An' so I love the old piano still." We all like it still. People with old pianos should make a note of this.

There will be small opposition to Secretary McAdoo's abolition of "V's" as used for "U's" in inscriptions on public buildings so long as they are retained on the currency.

After fighting 172 duels a Parisian was defeated by a doctor who had never handled a sword before. Practice with the lancet comes in mighty handy on these occasions.

FALLON AND AVERY WINNERS

Easily Take the Measure of Sullivan and Coyle Teams

The bowlers in the Quincy Council, Knights of Columbus league had their rolloff on the City Square alleys Thursday evening. Cain of the Fallon team secured the high single, getting 100 on his first string. Henry McGee took the team total with 261.

If the Averyists had rolled two more in their third or the Coylers one less, the points in the match would have all been credited to the former. As it was, the Coylers scraped up an acquaintance with some lonesome pine. The summary:

As far as the showing of Captain Russell Sullivan's team goes, the men are not desirous of starting a controversy, but they repeated several times after being beaten by Captain Tom Fallon's team 4 to 0 that they felt confident they could take their measure and would do so in the next match. Socially the Thursday Evening club has not been very active but commencing next month a series of lectures, parties and entertainments will be given under their direction. A fire which started it is believed, from spontaneous combustion came very near costing Patrick Coyle his barn on Commercial street, and would probably have burned his house had it not been for the prompt work of Harry Dinsmore who got the fire truck on the scene just as the last stroke of the alarm was blowing. By quick work the fire was confined to the barn which was damaged quite badly.

The Singer Sewing Machine Co., have a horse that is classed by all jockeys as a puller. This horse is used by one of their salesmen who as a rule has good control of the so-called puller, but Monday afternoon, the animal had its way, and carried the driver through Washington square on the run, crashing into a light buggy that was in front of Floyd's barber shop. This did not hinder the wild rush which continued up Quincy avenue. That nobody was injured is a wonder.

WON'T ATTEND THAW HEARING

Jerome Declares Case Has Now Become a Farce

CONTEST PERHAPS GIVEN UP

Commission Expected to Report Thaw Will Not Be Menace If Released on Bail—Testimony of His Guards Likely to Result In Prisoner's Release Under Bonds

Concord, N. H., Jan. 9.—Another formal declination from William T. Jerome to appear before the federal commissioner appointed to examine the mental condition of Harry K. Thaw was received by the commissioner last night.

As a result of this action by the special deputy attorney general of New York state, and the fact that all the testimony given before the commission at its hearing Wednesday was in favor of Thaw, there is every likelihood that the commission will report to Judge Aldrich of the United States court that Thaw will not be a menace to the public if released on bail, pending the termination of the extradition proceedings in the federal court.

Sheriff Drew and Constable Stevens, who have guarded Thaw since his arrest in October, testified most favorably regarding his conduct and a belief in his sanity.

Frank S. Streeter, one of the commissioners, has said that the failure of Jerome to appear must be taken to indicate that New York state authorities will not present any more evidence in the case.

Harry K. Thaw, it now seems, will soon be at liberty under bonds.

Jerome Refuses to Appear

New York, Jan. 9.—William T. Jerome said last night that under no circumstances would he appear before the commission appointed to examine into Thaw's present mental condition.

"I declined the invitation of the commission to participate in its hearings," he said, "because they are of such a scope that to do so would expose anyone having anything to do with them to ridicule. As the representative of the state of New York I decline to do this. The Thaw case has always been a scandal, and now it is a farce.

"I shall appear only before Judge Aldrich of the United States court. I have filed my brief with him, and that is all I have to do at present. I have no idea when I shall go to Concord again to appear before Judge Aldrich. Neither have I any idea what this commission intends to do or what it will recommend."

AMOUS CRIME RECALLED

Principal In Monte Carlo Trunk Mystery Dies In Prison

Montpellier, France, Jan. 9.—Mrs. Violet Goold, who, with her husband, Vere St. Leger Goold, was serving a term of life imprisonment for the murder of Emma Levin in the summer of 1907, the crime being known as the "Monte Carlo trunk mystery," died in prison last evening.

The murdered woman had been lured by the Goolds to their villa and robbed of valuable jewelry. Her dismembered body was packed in a trunk, which was shipped to Marseilles, the trunk later being found among the baggage of the Goolds.

Mrs. Goold was originally sentenced to be guillotined and her husband was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Mrs. Cullop Is President of Women's Democratic League

Washington, Jan. 9.—The Women's National Democratic league closed its annual convention with the election by acclamation of Mrs. William A. Cullop, wife of Representative Cullop of Indiana, to the presidency. No resolution was adopted urging legislation upon the party.

Throughout the session stress had been laid upon the avowed object of the league, to aid in the congressional campaign of the coming November, and the league leaders held that under their constitution only issues outlined in their party's platform could be considered.

A NIGHTMARE INDEED

Five Nations Are Now Striving For the Possession of Albania

London, Jan. 9.—The Prince of Weid hesitates to accept the throne of Albania—the nightmare of Europe. Five outside nations, Austria, Italy, Servia, Greece and Turkey, are striving for preponderance and Albania is torn by internal factions seeking power.

Snatched from the hands of the conquerers of Turks at the selfish behest of Austria, backed by Germany and Italy, who used England as a catspaw, Albania was thrown back into the arena as a future bone for the wolves of Europe to gnaw. This act robbed Servia and Greece of legitimate spoils of war and forced them to take territory that Bulgaria considered belonged to her.

As Bulgaria made no effective protest to the Albanian project of Austria, although engaged to do so, Servia and Greece felt justified in holding onto the land which their arms had conquered.

This resulted in another war and the stripping of Bulgaria of any part of Macedonia and eventually of much of Thrace, which was retaken by the Turks. Now the latter are preparing to make war on Greece and are adding to the confusion of Albania.

DEFECTIVE FOR AGES

Women No Worse Off Now Than For Many Generations

Battle Creek, Mich., Jan. 9.—"The imperfect or defective type of woman is that represented by the very slight, thin-chested and nervous woman, at present so favored by fashion," declared Dr. Richard R. Smith in an address at the national conference on race betterment, which opened its sessions here. Smith added, however, that "we have no reason for believing that woman is worse off now than she has been for many generations."

In his address on the deterioration of civilized woman, Smith asserted "the same physical defects in the woman of today have been present among women for many generations, even among women of uncivilized times."

DERELICT IS SUNK BY REVENUE CUTTER

Six-Pounder Sends Many Shells Into the Oklahoma

New York, Jan. 9.—That part of the Oklahoma which remained afloat after the disaster and menaced navigation, was sunk by the revenue cutter Seneca. It took fifteen explosive shells, fired from six-pound guns, to send the derelict to the bottom.

The hulk of the Oklahoma was the first steel derelict ever attacked by the Seneca, built as a derelict destroyer. The wreck was located floating bottom upward fifteen miles south southeast of Fenwick island light, and was sent to the bottom in seventeen fathoms of water.

When the cutter's officers recognized the impracticability of using mine explosives, they brought their six-pounders into action, sending a shell into the tanker every time a swell raised her to a convenient position.

New York, Jan. 9.—Andrew Carnegie has reduced his fortune by $10,000,000 in making a gift of that amount to the Carnegie United Kingdom trust in Dunfermline, Scotland.

At a meeting of the trustees of this trust the fact was disclosed that Carnegie's gift of $10,000,000 in bonds of the United States Steel corporation, designed for the fund, had been registered in the name of the Carnegie Dumfermline trust, which is distributing Carnegie's benefactions in his old home town. Steps were taken to have the bonds transferred to the United Kingdom trust.

The Lyndhurst Affair

The Story of a Son's Sacrifice

By CLARISSA MACKIE

It was on a crisp February morning that the dreadful news ran from lip to lip until the whole village of Lyndhurst was aroused from its drowsy existence.

On the outskirts of the village was the Blatcher place. It had been the show place of the town. The house stood well back from the street, with handsome maples and elms surrounding it. It had now long been vacant and was falling to decay. No one ever entered the grounds except boys, who are proverbially fond of deserted places.

A murder had been committed. Boys seeking to detach an enormous icicle that hung from the roof of the dilapidated house had been horrified to see the body of an old man sitting in an upper room.

"And there ain't nobody lived in the house for twenty years!" cried Simon Dale, the postmaster, as he led a curious crowd up the street toward the house. "There ain't been a soul there since old Philo Blatcher died and his son, young Philo, went to Asia or Africa or some other outlandish place. I expect young Philo's dead long ago, but there ain't nobody to take interest enough to find out, not being another relative. If he is dead I expect the property 'll revert to the state."

"But what about the old man that Billy Breen saw through the winder?" insisted Asa Fitch. "How'd he come in'side?"

"Mebbe some tramp that's been housing there. 'Twon't be no mystery when the constable gets around. Here he comes now."

The constable was the postmaster's brother, and so these two by right of high office in the village took temporary charge of the case.

Constable Ben Dale smashed a windowpane and gained entrance to the big house that had stood in the midst of large grounds, untenanted, unvisited, for twenty years. The trees and shrubs had been untrimmed and grew rankly, almost hiding the house from the street.

When the constable unfastened the front door it was to admit a chosen few. How Miss Alvina Petty managed to slip inside no one ever knew. But there she was, the only woman among half a dozen men, who tramped up the carpeted stairs, stirring the dust of years into a choking cloud.

"'Tain't no sight for a woman," protested Constable Ben as he paused, with a hand on the knob of the front chamber door.

"Awful tender with wimmen all of a sudden," sneered Alvina. "Everybody knows it sickens you to kill a chicken, and you let your wife do it, but she never eats chicken because she has to kill 'em. I guess I can stand anything you can, Ben Dale."

Somebody tittered, and Ben Dale opened the door and entered the room. Billy Breen had reported truly.

In one corner of the dusty room was a handsome four post bedstead whose silken covers had been tossed back as if the bed had been recently slept in.

Beside the empty fireplace was a large chintz covered chair, and in this chair was the dead body of a white haired man. His head drooped to one side as if he slept, but there was a rigidity about his attitude that hinted at something else.

One hand hung over the arm of the chair, and the outside of the hand was streaked with blood. On the floor was a little wet spot.

Constable Dale touched his finger to the spot.

"Blood," he whispered hoarsely; "wet blood! It was done last night!"

A shudder ran through the crowd. Then the postmaster nudged somebody, and they all turned and looked at Alvina Petty, who was trembling like a leaf and staring at the face of the dead man.

"I said it wa'n't no place for wimmen!" ejaculated Ben Dale as he straightened himself.

"Who is it?" whispered Alvina weirdly. "Who do you say it is, Ben Dale?"

For the first time the constable looked closely at the man in the chair. Then the color forsook his fresh face, and he almost reeled.

"Good heavens, boys—it's—it's old Philo Blatcher himself!"

"So 'tis!" breathed the postmaster.

"But we buried him twenty years ago!" protested somebody.

Then Alvina's voice, curiously repressed to a whisper, caused them all to turn and stare at the little spinster who once had been known as the prettiest girl in Lyndhurst, but now, with her white hair and her pale, wrinkled face, looked older than her forty-five years.

"This isn't old Philo Blatcher," whispered Alvina, still staring at the man. "It is young Philo, his son."

"Young Philo? You're crazy!" cried Ben Dale, pushing forward. "Why, young Philo had black hair and"—

"It is young Philo grown old," broke in Alvina. "I ought to know!"

Silence followed her outburst. One man whispered to another that Alvina had once been engaged to young Philo Blatcher and ever since his disappearance twenty years before she had acted queerly. Young Philo could not be more than fifty now, and this man looked much older.

Alvina was speaking again.

"He had come back home again after years of wandering, and on the very first night—see, the bed had not been slept in for many years, but he was going to use it—on the very first night he was killed—killed by an enemy. Some Chinese tracked him home and killed him!"

"You're crazy as a loon, Alvina!" cried Ben loudly, as he grasped her shoulder.

"I'm not. I've got eyes and common sense and a heart!" cried Alvina passionately. "See the blood on his hand. There is a wound in his shoulder here. In the side of the chair is a knife. See the carved ivory handle? It's a foreign knife! Where has he been lately—China? Maybe it's a Chinese knife! Look out in the snow for the tracks of Chinese shoes. Find out if anybody has seen a Chinese around. Hurry, Ben Dale, or he will get away!"

So great was Alvina's energy that all within the room were imbued with her enthusiasm. In a moment they had scattered and left Alvina alone with the man in the chair.

When she was alone Alvina went and knelt there and said little hushed words that no one could hear, that no one ought to hear save the man for whom they were intended, and she thought his ears were closed to her voice forever.

But suddenly he sighed deeply.

Alvina screamed, but no one heard her.

Again he sighed, and this time Alvina did not scream. She bent close to him and saw his eyelids flutter. Then she flew for restoratives. It is doubtful if any one save Alvina knew where old Philo Blatcher had kept his Scotch whisky and Holland gin and Jamaica rum in the little corner cupboard in the west parlor.

Alvina knew, and she brought a bottle and a crystal glass and gave the man in the chair to drink of the fiery liquid, holding his gray head against her breast as she coaxed him.

Presently he opened his eyes and smiled at her.

"I almost knew you'd be waiting for me, Alvina," he said weakly, for it was indeed young Philo come home after his long exile.

They talked for a long time, and Philo sat up in his chair and Alvina dressed the deep wound in his left arm.

When Ben Dale and the others came trooping back, they paused outside the closed door. Within the room they could hear Alvina's voice talking. They heard her address some one as "Philo," and Ben Dale shook his round head.

"Crazy as a loon," he told them, "although she was bright enough about guessing it was a Chinaman who done the job. Wonder what she'll say when I tell her we found him asleep in the old mill and how, when we tried to get him, he jumped into the river and was drowned. She'll go plumb crazy!"

But they were the ones who acted demented when they opened the door, for there sat Alvina Petty, pink with excitement, talking animatedly to the erstwhile corpse, who was sipping a glass of hot toddy as calm as you please.

Alvina had kindled a fire from the contents of the wood box beside the hearth, and she had heated a pannikin of water. There they were as sociable as anything and looking rather annoyed at the intrusion of Ben Dale and his companions.

"I thought you was dead," said Ben Dale when, after a hurried retreat, he ventured to put his head into the room.

"Not quite," said young Philo grimly, "although that Chinaman almost made a job of it—robbed me of $500 in Shanghai and then when I prosecuted him followed me here to get his revenge. Has any one seen him?"

"We saw him, and then he went under the ice in the river. With the channel flowing swift, he must be down to Rivermouth by this time," said Ben Dale grimly. "Guess he won't commit no more murders."

If the report of the murder aroused the good people of Lyndhurst it is certain that the discovery that it was not a murder at all, but that Philo Blatcher had returned home to marry Alvina Petty and open the old house that had been closed so many years, caused greater excitement.

Philo soon recovered from his wound, but he was very grateful to Billy Breen, whose adventurous spirit had been the cause of Philo's discovery. He might have died from loss of blood and his body have lain undiscovered for months had not Billy's hunt for icicles resulted in the finding of the man in the front room. So Philo Blatcher rewarded Billy Breen in a most substantial manner.

No one ever knew why Philo Blatcher had remained abroad for twenty years after his father's death; no one knew save Alvina, and she never told the story of the son who had made a great sacrifice to save the father's honor and that it had taken Philo twenty years to make restitution for his father's shortcomings in Lyndhurst. Now Philo had come home to receive his own meed of happiness.

So now Alvina reigns in the old Blatcher homestead. Instead of being the village seamstress she is the first lady in the village, and to the romance of the affair is added the mystery of the revengeful Chinaman who had crossed the ocean and a continent to take a life and who in the end lost his own.

But to Philo Blatcher the best part of the story is that of Alvina's unwavering faith in him and the certainty that some day he would return to claim her.

COURT DEFINES MEMORY LOSS

Not Incident to Occupation of Driving Wagon

TWO VERDICTS ARE REVERSED

Supreme Tribunal Upsets Award of $1950 to Widow of Man Who Was Stricken While on His Wagon and Wandered Into Swamp In City Near Boston and Died

Boston, Jan. 9.—Ruling that a loss of memory is not incident to the occupation of driving a wagon, the full bench of the supreme court reversed the decision of the superior court confirming an award of $1950 given Mrs. Caroline Milliken by the industrial accident board for the death of her husband, Frank T. Milliken, who died from exposure following a loss of memory while driving a wagon of A. Towle & Co.

Milliken, who was a teamster, was sent from the offices of the Towle company to their stables in this city late in the afternoon of Oct. 8, 1912. While driving through Postoffice square his memory failed him and he drove to Woburn. He was found in a swamp in that city the next morning and died Oct. 14, 1912.

The industrial accident board found his death resulted from injuries arising in the course of his employment and ordered the Travelers' Insurance company, which insures his employer, to pay his widow $6.50 a week for 350 weeks, or $1950. This award was affirmed by the superior court.

The opinion of the supreme court says:

"The industrial accident board found that the loss of memory with which Milliken was stricken was not in itself a fatal disorder, and that he would not have met his death as he did but for the horse and wagon and his effort to get them to the stable.

"This goes no further than to show that it was a personal injury suffered by Milliken in the course of his employment. The difficulty in this case arises from the provision that the injury must be one 'arising out of' as well as 'in the course of' his employment.

"There is nothing in the employment of driving a wagon that makes it likely that the man will alight from his wagon, wander to and fall into a swamp and lie there all night.

"If the horse driven by Milliken had run away and Milliken had been thrown out and killed, the personal injury in that case would have been one which, from the nature of his employment, would be likely to occur, and so would be one arising out of his employment.

"It seems plain that if Milliken's death was caused by a personal injury, it was the one which happened some four or five years ago, before the occurrence complained of here and before the workmen's compensation act was passed."

"POISON PEN" NOTES

Head of Regulation League Is Indicted as the Author

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Jan. 9.—Miss Kate Davis, president of the National Regulation league, was indicted as the author if "poison pen" letters recently circulated among prominent families in this city.

The chief evidence against Miss Davis was given before the grand jury by Mrs. C. J. Wallace, member of the county board of visitation, and Miss Mary Prescott.

In the letters Mrs. Wallace, who has long been a leader in social work here, was attacked as a "knave" and a "tool of politicians."

ON SEVENTEENTH TRIP

Clark Sails to Europe In Interests of Christian Endeavorers

Boston, Jan. 9.—Rev. Francis E. Clark, D. D., president of the World's Christian Endeavor union, sailed on his seventeenth foreign journey in the interests of the Christian Endeavor movement.

These journeys have involved more than 250,000 miles of travel. Five of them have been journeys around the world and have taken him to Australia, South America, South Africa and all parts of the of the Orient, since Christian Endeavor societies flourish in all these countries.

FEW OBEY STRIKE ORDER

Traffic on South African State Railways Is Not Impeded

Johannesburg, S. A., Jan. 9.—The proposed general state railway strike so far has proved a fiasco. Less than 1000 shopmen obeyed the strike order. Railway traffic has not been impeded.

While the radicals among the labor organizations are preaching general strike and predict that all of Cape Colony will be tied up in a short time a majority of the representatives of the various organized trades are opposed to this drastic move.

Professor Upton Dead

Providence, Jan. 9.—Professor Winslow Upton, for nearly thirty years head of the department of astronomy at Brown university, and director of the Ladd observatory since its erection in 1891, died last night of pneumonia. He was 60 years old.

STICKERS FOR FITZGERALD

Cause a Lively Stir In Camps of Boston Politicians

Boston, Jan. 9.—"John F. Fitzgerald for mayor" stickers, in legal form ready to affix to the municipal ballot, made their appearnce last night in various parts of the city and caused a profound sensation in the political camps.

For three hours Curley men and Kenny men searched the town for Mayor Fitzgerald and implored him to deny that he as a candidate again. The mayor heard their pleas, but not until very late did he send out his denial.

Meanwhile, the cause of all the trouble, James A. Sanborn, publisher of the newspaper called "Union Label," informed interviewers that he had printed, at his own expense, without the knowledge of Mayor Fitzgerald, 150,000 of these stickers and started in distributing them to all the clubs, ward committees, city and state officials that he was able to reach.

POWER OF THE PRESS

Doctor Says It Should Be Invoked In War on Disease

Boston, Jan. 9.—President Stephen H. Blodgett, M. D., told the Homeopathic Medical society last night that physicians must break through their "professional dignity" and offer their aid to the public press in their crusade against sickness and suffering.

"Twenty years after Bright's discovery had been published in the medical journals," he said, "the average physician was still in ignorance of it. But only three months after a so-called cure had been published in a newspaper a large percentage of the medical profession knew about it, having had it forcibly called to their attention by their patients.

"There is no quicker way of spreading news than through the press. And of all public servants, what more power for good or evil, what can more quickly exert an influence than the public press?"

WILSON A PUZZLE TO SOUTHERNERS

Has Declined All Invitations to Be Entertained

Pass Christian, Miss., Jan. 9.—Two weeks of seclusion were completed by President Wilson in this little village. It is the longest period of time he has spent away from Washington since he took office.

To the people of the string of towns and hamlets along the southern coast the president has been more or less of a puzzle. He said he appreciated their desire to entertain him, but has declined their invitations to inspect their schools, view places of historical interest, attend balls, theatres and those diverse social entertainments of which southern hospitality boasts at this season.

BENNETT LEFT NO WILL

Widow Asks to Be Administratrix of Money Lender's Estate

Boston, Jan. 9.—Barnard Bennett, the Harvard college money lender and old clothes man, died intestate, leaving an estate valued at about $250,000.

This was disclosed when his widow, Mrs. Ida Bennett, filed a petition in the Suffolk probate court for appointment as administratrix of his estate.

Rumor also had it that his two sons and four daughters would make a contest over the division of the estate, but this is considered to be false as all of his heirs-at-law have signed the petition asking that their mother be named administratrix.

MUST PAY $25,000

Spreckels Defaulted on Subscription to Panama Exposition

San Francisco, Jan. 9.—Rudolph Spreckels must pay to the Panama-Pacific international exposition his full subscription of $25,000, on which he defaulted. This was the decision in superior court in an opinion regarded as of great importance by the exposition, because, presumably, it will control any other such cases which might arise.

Spreckels paid the exposition $2500 in March, 1911, and demanded that he be given possession of all of the stock for which he had subscribed. The directors refused until he should have paid in full.

ABANDON BURNING SHIP

Twenty Persons From the Battle Abbey Rescued by German Craft

Astoria, Ore., Jan. 9.—Captain Marsters, his wife and two young daughters, and sixteen officers and men of the British bark Battle Abbey, which was burned at sea, arrived here aboard the German bark Ellbeck.

They abandoned the Battle Abbey after her coal cargo had been burning for more than a week. After three days in a lifeboat the castaways were picked up by the Ellbeck. Bad weather caused considerable suffering, but all were well on arrival here.

Death Penalty For Drinkers

Jackson, Miss., Jan. 9.—A bill, proposing to execute any person who takes a drink in Mississippi and give his body to medical students, has been introduced in the assembly.

plazza which will be used as a promenade overlooking the proposed tennis courts.

The side entrance discloses the ticket office and two main stairways to the assembly hall with another leading down to the ladies' bowling alleys in the basement.

LADIES' APARTMENTS.

A feature of the design is the provision for complete isolation of the ladies' rooms from the rest of the clubhouse by folding doors whenever occasion requires.

The assembly hall on the second floor has a seating capacity of 500 with a gallery seating 80 more. It is well lighted from both sides and has a stage 15 by 25 with dressing rooms on either side. Behind the stage is a passageway leading to a large kitchen and pantry with a rear staircase for deliveries.

From the hall, French windows lead out onto the balcony extending the length of the building.

Conveniently located at the entrance to the assembly hall are the ladies and gentlemen's dressing rooms, equipped with toilets.

Back of the second floor mezzanine are three spacious committee rooms and at the rear of the stage on the same level are the janitors' apartments and a storage room.

BOWLING ALLEYS

The basement contains six bowling alleys with ample seating accommodations for spectators. Two of the alleys can be isolated for the use of the ladies when desired, access being gained from the ladies' quarters.

There are large locker rooms and toilets for both men and women in their respective quarters. The entire building will be heated with indirect and direct radiation.

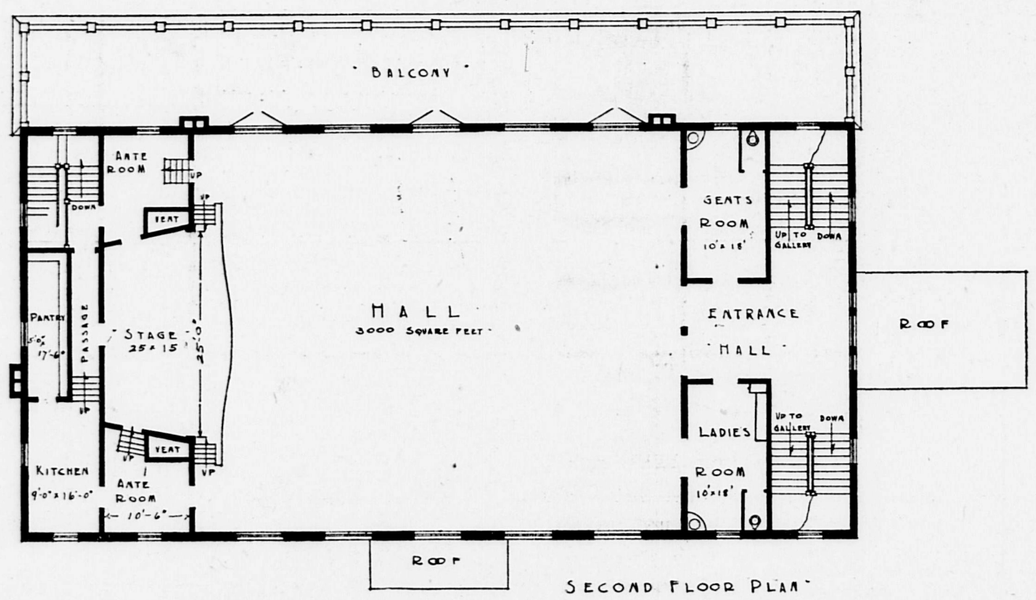
The interior will be finished in hard wood throughout, the present intention being to keep the men's quarters in natural wood and the ladies portion painted in light colors.

PUBLIC HALL.

The assembly hall is so separated from the rest of the club quarters that, it can be used for public entertainments, lectures, dances and banquets without in any way disturbing the members.

Plans calling for a $30,000 building with furnishings costing $5,000, are by Architect William Chapman of Wollaston, designer of the Quincy Court House and other well known structures, and prominently mentioned in connection with his work on the new State House additions.

To the untiring efforts of its present chief executive Eugene F. DeNormandie is due much of the credit for the present condition of the Sachem Club and with the incoming administration rests the work of pushing matters through to completion.



BUNGALOW CLUBHOUSE

Favored by Wollaston Park Improvement Association

Plans for a $5,000 clubhouse, discussion of local building conditions, and the annual election of officers marked the liveliest meeting the Wollaston Park Improvement Association has held in months.

The meeting was held in Progressive hall, Wollaston, Thursday evening and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Dr. Philip Kelley.

Vice President—Harry M. Watts.

Secretary—A. J. Bartlett.

Treasurer—Wallace G. Rood.

Directors—William M. Burrell, Otho T. O'Leary, William P. Tripp, L. H. Rhodes, C. L. Young, Charles A. Chase and Benjamin F. Chase.

Plans for the bungalow clubhouse for the association which were laid aside a year ago in favor of the defunct Community House proposition were again taken up.

It is planned to build a bungalow about 40 by 60 to cost $5,000. It will be located in the middle of Wollaston Park within easy access of all members.

Option will be secured at once and a committee consisting of William M. Burrell, Edward O. Woodward and Otho F. O'Leary were appointed to bring a definite plan to the February meeting.

In remarks following his election Dr Kelley severely criticised the present methods of building speculation and banking policy in the city.

"As a result of the recent change in our city government," said President Kelley, "we have every reason to expect a genral policy of retrenchment in all lines of municipal endeavor, and the thought 'How can the tax rate be reduced' naturally is uppermost in the minds of every citizen.'

"With the policy of the city apparently well established, to make no tax concessions, to large manufacturing interests to locate here and the income from personal property not likely to show any material increase, it is evident that the major portion of the city's income must be derived from the tax on real estate.'

"This naturally brings us to the question 'Is our city developing in such a manner as to insure a steadily increasing income from this source with a corresponding decrease in the per capita tax, or are we tolerating a development which not only pulls down the values already established but will inevitably decrease them as the years go on?

"Buildings are going up and have been erected in various parts of the city on any old terms and at prices that are nothing short of criminal.

"The citizens of this city stand idly by, allow this condition of things to continue and then welcome their new neighbor who has purchased one of these 'veneered frauds,' deprecating the fact he has been 'stung' $500 or more, and apparently unmindful that his own property has suffered, and the chief income bearing asset of the city has been pulled down."

Dr. Kelley deplored the fact as he claimed that the largest savings institution of the city practically refuses to loan money on real estate in Quincy.

His remarks brought forth wide discussion and he was appointed a committee of one to look further into conditions with the idea of co-operating with other organizations through the city.

President Woodward in retiring reviewed the club's accomplishments during his two years administration. Besides improving several of the statutes, and securing the abatement of certain nuisances, the association has secured several permanent improvements for the locality.

A Dutch supper was served by Thompson of Quincy.

COUNCILLOR COMMITTEES

Charles W. Guy Received Important Appointments

Councillor Charles W. Guy of Quincy will serve on three important standing committees of the Executive Councilt his year. On Thursday after the inauguration ceremonies and reception, Gov. Walsh appointed Mr. Guy on the committee on finance accounts and warrants; on military and naval affairs; and on harbors and public lands.

There are only three other committees: Pardons, State House and nominations. It is possible that the meetings of the Executive Council may be public this year, Lieut. Gov. Barry having offered such a motion.

MEN'S CLUB AT ATLANTIC

Plan Good Program and May Include Ladies

The first supper of the Men's club of Atlantic this week filled the vestry of Memorial church. The menu was roast beef, tomatoes, mashed potatoes, pickles, rolls, coffee and ice cream and cake. The committee in charge were Josiah Fuller, Norton Stetson and Lyndon T. Gurney.

After supper the president, Harry W. Read, asked the men what they wanted—a first class dinner eight times a year with an interesting program and always a good speaker and one night for ladies at a cost of four dollars a year, or a club at one dollar a year with a one dollar a year program? Mr. Read outlined his plan of monthly dinners and the expense of same, and asked the men to write their choice on the card which was at every plate. The club voted almost unanimously for the four dollar membership.

Mr. Read asked Senator Louis F. L. Langelier to tell the club how the Wollaston Unitarian club was run, which he did at some length.

After the business of the evening Thomas A. Watson of Braintree, who was associated with Graham Bell in the discovery and development of the telephone was introduced, Mr. Watson's personality and his enthusiasm made his address one of the best treats ever given to an audience in Atlantic.

Mr. Read announced his program for the next three months, which seemed above the expectations of the most sanguine.

It is understood that some of the ladies suggest that the Atlantic club go a little ahead of the other Quincy clubs and have the speakers give their addresses in the auditorium of the church and in that way benefit men and women who are not in the club.

NEW PASTORATE.

Rev. Robert H. Cochrane recently of the Union Congregational church at Braintree and Weymouth who received a call to become the pastor of the Congregational church at Marion, has accepted the call. Rev. Mr. Cochrane occupied the pulpit of the Marion church last Sunday and read a letter accepting the call.

FOGG CASE

and other answers of this character to questions of Mr. Mellen.

Judge Avery, apparently indignant, gave a short review of the manner of witnesses testifying, and among other things said many of them failed to remember.

In reply to several questions, Mrs. Reynolds then related the story of Henry Duggan, then a Braintree officer who visited the premises.

"Duggan came and rapped at the door and asked me to come across with a piece of change. I asked for what, and then he asked me if I knew what I was doing. I told him I was within my rights, and did not see why I should pay as I was not doing an illegitmate business. He asked me if I didn't know it, and I told him I didn't andI I then remarked and I don't know it now.

"He asked for something to eat and I gave it to him. It was about midnight and he was in uniform. The second time he came Officer Welsh of Weymouth was with him. It was after one o'clock at night."

Here Attorney Kelley raised an objection but Judge Avery ruled that since the matter was opened it should be finished.

Mrs. Reynolds said she accompanied Duggan to the veranda on his second visit and that the conversation was substantially the same as on his first visit.

Mrs. Reynolds was on the stand for some time but did not sit in the chair brought to her by Attorney Kelly.

Continual objections of Mr. Kelly were overruled by Judge Avery during the morning and personalities were injected into the case by both men.

Other witnesses were Officer Galvin of Braintree who said he saw no bar but a cupboard. James Butler of Stoneham connected with a Boston liquor house, had books showing shipments delivered supposedly through Foggs express who signed for the goods. L. Faustina, an Italian employee, testified that he had delivered milk and one box of groceries at Cedarcrest and James M. Levangie said a friend had purchased him several drinks at the club.

The case is unfinished.

AEROPLANE IS WRECKED

Aviator Narrowly Escapes Death as Machine Goes Through Roof

Paris, Jan. 9.—Eugene Gilbert, the French aviator, narrowly escaped death when his aeroplane broke through a roof on which he had descended.

Gilbert was making a trial trip in a new army monoplane, carrying a heavy load. He had shut off his motor in preparation for a glide to the earth and the aeroplane descended so rapidly that the aviator found he would be unable to avoid the buildings.

As he could not restart his motor, he picked out the most promising landing place, the roof of a tile factory.

The aviator escaped injury, but his machine was wrecked.

Vol. 29 No. 9 QUINCY MASS. SATURDAY EVENING JANUARY 10, 1914 PRICE TWO CENTS

GENTLEMEN'S NIGHT QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB

Male Glee Club and Club Glee Club Render Several Delightful Numbers

Readings by Belle Temple Priest Were Great Treat

The brilliantly lighted and spacious rooms of the clubhouse of the Quincy Women's club on Goffe street, were thronged Friday evening on the occasion of the annual gentlemen's night of the club. The well known hospitality of the club reigned supreme the gathering lacking that stiffness which often mars such occasions and it was a most enjoyable evening to the hundreds present.

Mrs. Chandler W. Smith, the club's president, and the Hospitality committee headed by Mrs. Walter E. Burke were in charge of the evening and saw to it that everyone enjoyed themselves. The president and her husband received informally greeting and extending the hospitality of the club to the guests as they were presented by Mrs. Burke.

The evening's program was in charge of Mrs. Burke. In extending the welcome Mrs. Smith addressed the gathering as "Gentlemen and ladies, members of out of town clubs, members of the Quincy Women's club, guests, city officials and husbands." She said the club was nearing its ninth anniversary and briefly outlined some of the things it had accomplished. She told how the old home was used by the club a part being occupied by the caretaker also rooms by two district nurses and an office by the secretary of the Associated Charities. She spoke of other changes that had been made in the house for the convenience of members not forgetting the clothing racks and hooks recently added to the equipment. The club had gone on record in favor of votes for women. Mrs. Smith closed by reading a humorous selection, showing how the vote had resulted in a city where women had been given the right to vote, for the tellers in counting the ballots had found two recipes for tomato catsup, millinery bills, etc.

The evening's program was most enjoyable including monologues by Mrs. Belle Temple Priest, choruses, solos and duets by Will Weston's glee club of sixteen male voices and the Quincy Women's club glee club of eight voices.

The glee club was down for several numbers each of which received hearty and appreciative encores, opening with "Prayer of Thanksgiving" by Kremser. Other numbers rendered by the club were "Absent" by Metcalf "Autumn Tea" by Gericke, "Alola" a Hawaiian Folk song, "Ho! Jolly Jenkins" by Sullivan "Men of Harlech" by Brewer, "The Rosary" by Nevin and "Love's old sweet song" by Malloy.

Mr. Gearns gave a solo, "The Pine Tree" by Salter, and for an encore "Down in the forest" by Rouald and Mr. Kearns and Mr. Nelson gave a duet "On the still Lagoon" by Sage.

The young ladies glee club gave one number, and responded to an encore.

Mrs. Priest was down for three numbers and her monologues were so true to life that she captivated her hearers. Her first selection was

THE WRONG TO MRS. COUCHIER

Death May Come Before She Is Released From Asylum

Editor Daily Ledger:

The many friends of Mrs. Carrie Torrey Couchier now confined in Taunton Insane Asylum will regret to learn that she is failing fast and her death may be expected at any moment, as she is in a serious condition. Since she found herself in all the horrors of the insane asylum, which she has always dreaded she has not been able to sleep. At my request she has been placed in a private room, but it is feared it is too late and her friends are powerless to save her.

At the meeting of the Massachusetts State Society of United States Daughters of 1812 at the Copley Plaza Hotel Wednesday great indignation was expressed at the alleged heartless treatment of Mrs. Crouchier by her trustee, John Q. A. Field, and it was voted that the president of the society be instructed to take immediate steps to secure her release if possible. aMny letters of smypathy were read, all offering assistance. One was from the Major George L. Stearns Womens Relief Corps 9 of Charlestown of which Mrs. Crouchier has been a member for 27 years and an honorary member of Post 149. Letters have also been received from the Massachusetts Hospital Reform Society from the Sons of Veterans camp 95 by Frank M. Chubbuck, patriotic instructor; from the old South chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution of which she is a charter member and many letters from private individuals all offering assistance.

Charles E. Price of Quincy addressed the meeting at length on the injustice done this aged woman and offered his time and money for her release. He dwelt upon the fact that it was possible in this Commonwealth to find two physicians, who for a fee of $4.66 allowed for such service can commit any one to an insane asylum. And the law then forbids anyone other than a relative to get them out. This should give every one, especially the aged owning property food for thought.

Much comment is made that no two reputable Quincy physicians could be found to commit this poor lady who has lived honorably in Quincy all her life but physicians were found out of town!

It is a terrible case—a grievious wrong—what can be done? Public spirited men and women should demand that this poor lady should if possible be taken at once to other surroundings, but her friends must be prepared to hear of her death at any time.

An eye witness of the tragedy at Wollaston says "I shall never forget seeing that poor old lady carried out of the house to which she was carried after the fire which destroyed her home, a man taking her by each arm and lifting her bodily into the automobile. Her screams could be heard all over the neighborhood as she appealed in vain to those on the passing electric car to save her. I shall never forget it as long as I live."

But all this is past. The mischief has been done. If not too late, let us try to get this poor lady removed at once to a different place.

(Mrs.) L. B. Titus.

PARENTS' NIGHT AND SOCIAL

Miss Cynthia Curtis' Class at Christ Church Entertain

A parents' night and social evening was held in Christ Church parish house last evening by the seventh grade of the Sunday School, Cynthia Elizabeth Curtis, teacher. This was the first of its kind in the history of the Sunday School and proved a great success. There was an audience of about thirty, which was probably lessened by the inclemency of the weather. Rev. and Mrs. R. E. Armstrong and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Newton were the guests of the evening.

A program of ten numbers was arranged by the teacher, in which the scholars participated. Considering that only three rehearsals were held every number was carried out to perfection and great credit is due the scholars for their faithful work.

It included recitations by Vinal McDonald, Alice Tucker, Ruth Grages and Grace Brown; piano solos by Esther Phillips and Alice Tucker; duet by Helen Anderson and Lillian Jocabson; a quartette by Lillian Jacobson, Livia Vergobbi, Vinal McDonald and Helen Anderson. Also two little sketches which were very popular. The cast in "The new baby" included Lillian Jacobson, Myrtle Osborne and Abbie Curtis. In "Tired of church" the parts were taken by Helen Leonard and Edith Cameron.

Ice cream, cake and crackers were served by Miss Curtis, assisted by Miss Margaret Clark, Miss Mildred Martin and Orestes Cleveland.

CURFEW LAW TO BE ENFORCED

Quincy Officer Forbidden to Serve Other Towns

The curfew law in Quincy, which has been a dead letter for some time, is hereafter to be strictly enforced, or the Mayor will know why. Friday night he sent a letter to Chief Burrell in which it was stated that it was his demand that the curfew law should be strictly enforced from now on and directed that the Chief should so instruct his officers.

In the letter was another command, which in effect was that it was the demand of the Mayor that all police officers enrolled in Quincy, who were also enrolled as officers in other places, should resign those positions at once or resign their commission as an officer of Quincy. In other words the Mayor conveyed to the police force through Chief Burrell that an officer could not serve two masters, and that he must make his choice between serving Quincy or other towns.

There are but few officers as far as known who are special officers in other towns, and these were those that were sworn in as special officers of the town of Braintree to assist in the raid at Cedarcrest Inn at Braintree some weeks ago.

Inspector Goodhue, who was one of these men stated this morning that he had already resigned his office as a special officer of the town of Braintree.

The Mayor had a good laugh this morning over the story in the Daily Ledger of Friday, relative to the appointment of Faxon Billings to the position as Chief of the Fire department, and said "you newspaper men are queer fellows," and that the way they got that story was that the Ledger reporter saw Mr. Billings enter the Mayor's office and that when he went out the Ledger man followed him to see where he went.

However the Mayor did not say whether , what the Ledger said about Mr. Billings' appointment was true or not. In fact in none of the interviews that the Ledger man has had with His Honor has he dropped a hint as to whom he would appoint.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Aid society of the East Milton Congregational church was held Wednesday at the home of Mrs. I. M. Hill, Brackett street. Mrs. Hill has been president the past nine years and desired to retire, so Mrs. M. L. Abbott was chosen president, and Mrs. Hill vice-president. The other officers are secretary, Mrs. L. V. Gosselin: treasurer, Mrs. F. M. Hamlin: directors, Mrs. J. H. Emerson, Mrs. L. C. Elden, Mrs. H. P. Knox, Mrs. E. E. Carlton and Mrs. L. Bolton.

MRS. REYNOLDS FINED ON TWO COUNTS

Furnished Sureties This Morning to Prosecute Appeal to Superior Court

George E. Fogg The Expressman Held For Grand Jury

Mrs. E. Grace Reynolds, manager of the Cedarcrest Outing Club, was fined $350 and George E. Fogg, a Braintree expressman, was held for the grand jury by Judge Albert Avery in the district court Friday. The finding was made at 4 o'clock.

Mrs. Reynolds was fined $300 for keeping and exposing intoxicating liquor for sale and $50 on the count charging her with maintaining a club nuisance. The liquors seized on the night of the Harvard-Yale game when the club was raided are at the Quincy police station, and a hearing on the seizure to show cause why they should not be forfeited will be held April 25.

George E. Fogg, tried on a charge of the illegal transportation of liquor was held for the grand jury, Judge Avery declining jurisdiction. The count charging him with letting a building knowing it was to be used for the illegal sale of intoxicating liquor was dismissed for want of prosecution. Sureties of $300 were furnished by Henry M. Waldron of Roslindale and George R. Dobson of Braintree.

In making the finding, Judge Avery was interrupted several times by William Kelly, counsel for Fogg, who said he did not agree on a point of law in which Judge Avery mentioned that the witnesess acted as though they had been coerced.

Judge Avery told Attorney Kelly that it did not make any difference what he thought, and to kindly remain seated and quiet until the finding was completed.

Before making the finding the attorneys had a long conference with Judge Avery at which time Charles Mellen, counsel for Braintree, said he would not prosecute the charge of letting a building where liquor was sold.

The record, ledger and cash books of the Cedarcrest Outing Club and a book showing shipments of a Boston liquor house, all used in the testimony of the day, were impounded.

During the arguments of Town Counsel Mellen he lauded the work of the Quincy police in assisting at the raid and said that Inspector Goodhue of the local force, because of his wide experience in enforcing liquor laws was asked to assist.

Judge Avery was unusually severe in his criticism of the way witnesses had testified during the trial. He said their manner was somewhat surprising, and that apparently there had been an attempt to coerce them. All went to show that witnesses had been spoken to outside of the court he said, and although it is proper to see witnesses so a case can be properly prepared it is not right to coerce them.

The trial of George E. Fogg began in District Court last Saturday and after an all day session was continued until Friday when the cross-examination and the arguments of counsel consumed the entire day.

While the charges against Fogg were illegal transportation of liquor and permitting a building while under his control to be used for illegal sale of liquor, the testimony included the general happenings at the club, the character of the place and descriptive details of the raid and conversations Mrs. Reynolds had with police officers and others. More than 20 witnesses testified.

More than a week ago Mrs. Reynolds pleaded guilty to the keeping and exposing liquor for sale illegally, but the Judge reserved his decision until the completion of the Fogg case.

This morning rMs. Reynolds furnished sureties of $400 on her appeal. Judge Avery without giving a reason refused to accept Mr. Fogg as one of the sureties.

Mrs. Henry H. Kitson and the Quincy Women's Club are indeed to be thanked for establishing the Twelfth Night Revels, our most unique and entertaining social event.

NOTICE

Again we ask those sending news or other matter by mail to direct it to the company or newspaper rather than to individual members of the company or employees. If addressed to individuals and they were ill or not at the office, it might be several days in reaching its proper destination and if news matter would be too late for use.

It ought not to cost much for dress-making for these peg-top gowns the women are wearing, as they are not stylish unless they don't fit.

The crops for 1913 brought more money than ever before, and it is not believed the middlemen and distributors got more than 95 per cent of it.

How do the Browning Clubs expect they are going to interest people, when they don't give any time to teaching the tango?

Horrible sufferings were endured in the battle of Ojinaga, but they are viewed with equanimity by Mexicans who have been accustomed to work hoeing corn.

The 50 cent piece is becoming unpopular, so that none have been coined lately. It is foreseen that the colored waiter will not be satisfied much longer with one of them as his tip.

A great many growing and hopeful towns now feel that if they can't get a marble post office, they are willing to compromise on a regional reserve bank.

To what extent the new tariff is affecting our granite industry may not be known, but it is a fact that considerable granite is now being imported. On one steamer arriving at Boston a few days ago were the following consignments from Glascow.

T. D. Downing & Co., 16 cases of granite.

L. A. Peck & Co., 15 cases of granite.

H. & A. Allan, 89 cases of granite.

Here are in all 120 cases on a single steamer. Evidently a subject for investigation by the Granite Manufacturers' Association of Quincy.

CURRENCY REFORM.

No matter how much security against panics the new currency law may provide, the success of any such law depends on good banking methods.

The new law is supposed to provide a remedy for the selfish hoarding of currency. This was a big factor in the 1907 downfall. But there are certain evils of speculative banking that no currency law, no matter how well devised, can stop. A leading banker said recently that in most bad bank failures it will be found that too much money was lent to directors and other officers for personal enterprises.

There are probably too many banks in the country, and competition between them is often very sharp. The idea of taking in a dollar and loaning it over and over again indefinitely to different people, all paying a good rate of interest, is very attractive to many of our financial geniuses.

In some places it seems as if the banks had a runner at the railroad station to meet newcomers on their arrival into town, and get the first bid for their business. Certain it is that when banks get to competing sharply, vague and indefinite hopes are often accepted as security. By and by these hopes are brought to a show down, and a bank's assets are found to be impaired. If these methods prevail over a considerable section, the banks will go down in succession, and there will be a panic, currency law or not.

Only a certain type of men are fit to be bankers. They must be persons who hold very responsible, definite, and conscientious ideas about holding other people's money. The new law gives the bankers new powers in dealing with frightened capital. But the need for sound judgment and sense of moral responsibility is thereby greater than ever.

EASTERN STAR INSTALLATION

Work Finely Exemplified by Worthy Grand Matron and Suite

The spacious Masonic apartments were thronged last evening with members of the Eastern Star and friends for the annual installation of the officers of Quincy chapter, No. 88. The attendance was limited only by the capacity of the hall, tickets being at a premium. The sisters in evening dress predominated and flowers from Patterson's greenhouses at the different stations added their charm.

The chapter was fortunate in having as the installing officer, Past Grand Matron, Lucy G. B. Colby of Newburyport, who was assisted by Past Grand Patron Guy A. Ham of Boston, Past Grand Matron Katherine A. Hall as chaplain, Past Grand Patron Isaac N. Marshall, and Past Matron Margaret B. Knight as marshal. The proficiency of the installing officers added greatly to the beautiful ceremony.

The officers installed are:

Worthy Matron—Margaret E. Gammons.

Worthy Patron—Horace G. Crocker.

Associate Matron—Edith S. Crocker.

Secretary—Selina C. Thompson.

Treasurer—Laura E. Holt.

Conductress—Katherine T. MacDonald.

Associate Conductress—Ruth Kemp

Chaplain—Alice Paterson.

Marshal—Florence A. Swingle.

Organist—Clara Call.

Adah—Jennie Laing.

Ruth—Eva Cobb

Esther—Florence Milline.

Martha—Bessie Roberts.

Electa—Joseph Bushnell.

Warder—Mary A. Webb.

Sentinel—Thomas Cassey.

Jewels were presented to the retiring officers, Henrietta S. Files, past worthy matron; and Edward Damon, past worthy patron; and the installing officers were remembered with flowers.

The addresses of the installing officers were greatly enjoyed. A tribute was also paid to Mr. and Mrs. James Maynard, the brother and sister who passed away during the year.

Ices and cake were served at the close of the installation ceremonies. On the reception committee were George H. Field, Susie A. Furnald, Cora A. Remick and Myra E. Lester. Acting as ushers were George A. Smith and Brothers Spear, Cassey, Tarbox, Gibb, Drake, Swingle, Sears, Gilliatt and Dexheimer.

GENTLEMEN'S NIGHT

"Choosing a parlor paper" in which while the voice of George was silent, her hearers could readily imagine what it was. It was an experience true to life, as most of the men present could probably bear testimony. Among her other selections was "The new suit" and "Richard at the piano" both of which were encored. Her selections were not exaggerated experiences but true to life, at least that is what the men present agreed.

At the conclusion of the program Coffee, lemonade and cake were served, Mrs. Everett C. Bumpus and Mrs. Herbert S. Barker presiding at the coffee urns and Mrs. Clarence Burgin at the lemonade bowl while the young ladies of the club served.

Chairs in the main room were removed and those who desired enjoyed dancing, while others passed the time in greeting old friends.

Ex-Mayor Eugene R. Stone and several of the present city officials were noticed in the gathering as well as several whom rumor has it will become city officials after the first Monday in February.

The evening was a most successful one in every way, the threatening weather apparently not interfering with the attendance and will be remembered by those present as one of the shining evenings in the history of the club.

DIVORCE FROM THE NEW HAVEN

Boston and Maine Is Going Into New Hands

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE VIEWS

Boston Business Men In Accord With Suggestions Offered by Governor Walsh—New Management Should Be In Hands of New England Men—What Must Be Done

Boston, Jan. 10.—A statement on the Boston and Maine situation which has been formulated under auspices of a Boston Chamber of Commerce committee and directors and was made public claims to suggest "a remedy which will secure most of the benefits which might come from a receivership and avoid the inconvenience and loss which would result from it."

The statement says, in part: "It seems to Governor Walsh and to us that the plan is worth trying. We agree with Governor Walsh that such leases of other roads as, looked in the light of present conditions, are inequitable, should be readjusted. This may prove an important factor, and the management of the road should use every effort to bring this about, and the lessees should be ready to meet the situation in a broad spirit.

"It is claimed, and generally conceded, that the amount paid by the government to the Boston and Maine for carrying mails is less than what it costs the road to carry them. The deficit last year, before the introduction of the parcel post, is stated by the road to have been about $600,000.

"It is settled that the Boston and Maine is to be separated from the New Haven. No one knows in whose hands the future control and management of the Boston and Maine will be. They should be New England men, representing New England capital, and of such character and reputation that the people who put their money into the road and the people who pay the road for services rendered may both feel assured that hereafter the road will be managed wisely, efficiently and prudently.

"All concerned must make their contribution to the common cause.

"The present management, by seeing that, so far as they can bring it about, the road is relieved of unjust burdens.

"The federal government (which does not permit the railroads to carry passengers or freight without charge, or to carry them at less than cost) by itself following the rule which it lays down for others, and ceasing to require the railroad to carry mail matter at a loss, and parcel post matter without any payment whatever.

"The stockholders of the New Haven road (as owners of the controlling interest in the Boston and Maine) by accepting an inevitable sacrifice.

"The financial leaders of New England, by showing that they have the courage to tackle the difficult financial problem involved, and the ability to handle it successfully.

"The shipping and traveling public, by showing its willingness to contribute its share of increased income.

"The leased lines, by agreeing to new arrangements under fair conditions.

"The investors, by showing that their willingness to invest is governed by their confidence in the road's new era, and not by past history.

"The new management of the road, by exhibiting an earnest desire to meet fully the transportation needs of the community.

"The employes, by showing their loyalty to the road and to the community, and a willingness to do their share in meeting the present difficulties.

"The commonwealth of Massachusetts, by displaying patience and wisdom in dealing with a difficult situation; and

"The community as a whole, by showing confidence in itself and in the future of New England."

SQUANTUM WOMEN'S CLUB.

Wednesday afternoon members of the Squantum Women's club met at the home of Mrs. Mathew McGrain, Bayside road. A goodly amount of business was transacted. It was voted to hold a whist party this month and Mrs. George Hersey, Trevor street, offered the use of her home. The date decided on is Jan. 23. Mrs. Hersey will be assisted by Mrs. Charles Bostwick and Miss Mildred Hersey. Hundreds of pennies jingled merrily as Mrs. Charles Ramsdell treasurer pro tem counted them. Club members and their friends have taken up the work of gathering in the pennies in real earnest and a big showing was made at the meeting. Sadness was cast over the meeting when it was learned that the condition of Mrs. Edward Eagar, the club's treasurer for two years, who has been ill for sometime is very serious. During the social hour that followed the adjournment of the meeting Mrs. McGrain served a dainty luncheon assisted by Mrs. Louise Holt.

BRAINTREE SCHOOLS.

Mr. Cogswell the director of the Teachers' Retirement Fund will give a lecture to teachers and friends Wednesday afternoon at 3.45 at the Hollis school. The public is cordially invited to be present. Professor O. A. Morton of the Massachusetts Agricultural college is trying to develop an interest in pupils, between the ages of 10 and 18 in poultry raising. Many clubs have been formed in the different towns of our State with much profit and pleasure on the part of the members. All Braintree pupils who are interested in poultry should communicate at once with the principals of schools, or the superintendent of schools.

A stereopticon lecture will be given in the town house at 7.45 P. M. upon the "Problem of the State in Protecting the People in the Purchase of Commodities by Weights and Measures." This lecture will be given under the auspices of the State Department of Weights and Measures. This should be a valuable and instructive lecture to house-keepers, in fact to all members of the family. Admission free. Be sure and come, bring the children, see and hear what the State is doing for your protection in this important department of service.

It is reported that in Fairmont, West Va., high school the custom prevails of naming each class at the beginning of the second year in the school for some prominent citizen. The man for whom the class is named is called the "sponsor" and he assumes some of the responsibility which the term implies. After the class makes choice of its "sponsor," it is known by his name. The citizen for whom the class is named feels personal interest in the class collectively, and as far as possible individually. He entertains them usually in his own home once or twice during their junior and senior years, and he assists them in various ways in their class enterprises. The advantages claimed are better knowledge of the spirit and purposes of the school, keeping classes together after graduation, presenting gifts to the schools and upholding proper conduct.

COURT UPSETS BIG BOND ISSUE

$67,552,000 Bonds of New Haven Road Are Void

DECISION OF PUBLIC SERVICE

It Is Unanimously Overruled on the Ground of Illegality—Convertible Feature Proves Vulnerable Point—Victory For Bulkeley, on Whose Appeal Case Came Before Court

Boston, Jan. 10.—By the unanimous decision of the supreme court of Massachusetts the order of the public service commission approving and authorizing the issue by the New Haven road of $67,552,000 convertible debentures is annulled and declared illegal under the statues.

The opinion was written by Chief Justice Rugg, and, in substance, is that the public service commission is not authorized under the statutes to approve an issue of bonds by a railroad company containing an option of exchange for stock at par during a period of time beginning five years from date.

The ground for this is that the approval of the commission of an issue of stock must relate to the present and not to a remote future, and that it is impossible in the nature of things that the commission can have or form an intelligent opinion whether the price at which stock is to be issued during a period of ten years, beginning five years in the future, is so low as to be inconsistent with public interest.

"There is an inherent element of uncertainty and speculation," says the court, "in an obligation of this character which is incompatible with a present opinion based upon known conditions as to the value of its component elements.

"The amount of stock which the commission intelligently can approve to be issued is inseparable from the price at which it is to be issued. The price at which the public interest may require that it be issued during a period of ten years beginning five years hence is impossible of ascertainment now. * * * An order entered now that stock may be issued at par during that period of time can afford no security that the corporation will get an adequate return for its stock or that rates and charges fixed upon such a capitalization will be fair or that the rights of the other stockholders will be guarded properly."

The supreme court's decision is a victory for Morgan G. Bulkeley, former governor of Connecticut, on whose appeal the question came before the court, and an indorsement of the position taken by George W. Anderson of the public service commission in his minority report.

Will Not Discuss Decision

New York, Jan. 10.—Chairman Elliott of the New York, New Haven and Hartford would not discuss the bond issue decision handed down in Boston.

"I can say nothing about the decision of the Massachusetts supreme court until I have read the decision and taken it up with counsel," he said.

EXCEPTIONS OVERRULED

Dorr Must Pay Death Penalty For the Murder of Marsh

Boston, Jan. 10.—William A. Dorr of Stockton, Cal., convicted by an Essex county jury of the murder of George E. Marsh, a wealthy Lynn soap manufacturer, must die in the electric chair.

The full bench of the supreme court overruled the exceptions taken by the murderer's counsel at his trial and now only the clemency of Governor Walsh and his executive council can save the slayer from expiating the crime with his life.

Dorr was tried at Salem. He admitted shooting Marsh, but declared he had done it in self defense and that the murder was committed in Suffolk county.

CHARLIE GANZEL.

The Herald says editorially relative to Charlie Ganzel:

"He was a man of character as well as a player of skill." This line from the pen of Walter S. Barnes, Jr., than whom none is better qualified to speak, is sufficient justification for the plea for contributions to aid the baseball player who has fallen upon evil days. The older generation of fans well remember the days when Charlie Ganzel and Charlie Bennett used to alternate behind the bat for the then championship Boston National league team. Misfortune came earlier to the latter, both his legs having been cut off in a railroad accident.

Ganzel is one of the grand old men of baseball. He is one of the men who made the professional game a clean sport. He was always an earnest, manly, straightforward player. The younger generation should join the older in lifting the financial burden that long and serious illness has brought upon the old player and those dependent upon him.

Some especially striking stunts are planned for the "Vivid Vaudeville" of the Revels.

A number who have attended both the Revels of the Copley Society, Boston, and our Revels, prefer the Quincy variety, for though the decorations and costumes are of course much less elaborate, the carnival spirit is much more in evidence. It is the jolliest of times—fun, fast, furious and festive prevails.

QUINCY WINS AT READING

Score Was 33 to 28 in Favor of the Visitors

The Quincy High School basketball team won its first out-of-town game Friday afternoon by defeating Reading High at Reading 33 to 28. Incidentally the local team put itself in second place in the Interscholastic League standing. The game was fast, and in spite of the small floor space of the Reading gymnasium, both teams showed good team work. Reading suffered considerably by having twelve fouls called against them, to six against Quincy.

In the first period Quincy did its best work, making 17 points and holding Reading to 6. In the second period Reading came back strong and in ten minutes, through the excellent work of P. Howard brought the score up to 24 to 23, Quincy leading. In the remaining ten minutes, the Quincy backs guarded so closely that the ball was almost continually under Quincy's basket.

The individual star of the game was P. Howard of Reading, who scored twelve points in the second half. This scoring, however, was due to the fact that early in the period Page attempted to work the floor too much. For Quincy, Jenkins did the most scoring, but no one man stood out particularly. Nearly every one of Quincy's points came from fast passing and clean handling of the ball in carrying it up the floor. In this respect a very decided improvement over the form displayed in earlier games was shown. The score follows:

QUINCY		READING

BEVERLY VS. QUINCY.

Quincy will entertain the crack Beverly Y. M. C. A. quintet tonight and a good basket ball game ought to result. Both teams are now traveling at a fast clip. The Quincy team has one victory to its credit having defeated Beverly on their own floor earlier in the season. The second team will line up against the Norfolk Social club of Braintree.

OLD COINS UNEARTHED

Blasters Come Across Relics of Days Before the Revolution

New Bedford, Mass., Jan. 10.—Some granite workers preparing for a blast at a point near the road between this city and Fall River dug up a bag of coins, some of them dated before the revolution and none of them dated later than 1798. All were of copper.

Of the eleven coins there were two of the famous old liberty pennies, dated 1797 and 1798, respectively and there is one King George penny, dated 1774.

As interesting and peculiar as any of them, however, are the old "Fugio pennies," as they are known to collectors. These pennies have on one side a design of the sun and below it a sun dial. Under this design is the date, 1787, and the legend "Mind your own business," while the Latin inscription "Fugio" is printed on the edge, giving the coin its name.

On the reverse side are thirteen links joined together in a circular chain, emblematic of the thirteen states which originally formed the union.

HALF A MILLION STARVING

Men, Women and Children In Balkans Need Speedy Aid

Salonica, Jan. 10.—Five hundred thousand men, women and children are starving in the Balkans. The two Balkan wars, which ravaged the southeastern peninsula of Europe, left the country in waste and the people penniless.

Rev. Edward Kaskell, of the American mission, declares that it is imperative that help come at once. He has written fresh appeals to the Balkan relief committee in London, to the Macedonian relief committee, and to American church and relief organizations.

"The world must open its heart or an unparalleled blight of death will fall upon the Balkans," declares Kaskell.

TRYING NEW CURE FOR TUBERCULOSIS

Doctors Put an "Air Splint" In Lung of Patient

Washington, Jan. 10.—A new method of treating tuberculosis is being investigated by the public health service through experiments at Fort Stanton, N. M., and officials of the service say they hope for important results.

The method is known as artificial or induced pneumo-thorax. Air is pumped into the patient's pleural cavity every day or two to maintain pressure, and the results watched by means of X-rays to ascertain the extent to which the diseased lung is compressed. The lung, figuratively, is put into an "air splint" and nature given a chance to cure.

The reports so far tell only of the progress of the experiments, and the officials, while optimistic, say it is too early to prophesy. They are inclined to believe, however, that it may prove effective in any stage of disease.

REGIONAL BANK FOR HUB

No New England City Is Opposed to the Proposition

Boston, Jan. 10.—All New England, except the cities of Hartford and New Haven, is unanimously in favor of a regional bank under the new currency bill in Boston, according to the testimony of nearly three-score witnesses at the hearing given by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and Secretary of Agriculture Houston.

Hartford and New Haven do not oppose such a bank in Boston, but they desire that the western section of Connecticut shall be included in the district allotted to the bank in New York city, because most of their trade and banking relations are with that city rather than with Boston.

FOUR SEAMEN DROWN

Cutter From Battleship Wyoming Capsizes In Hampton Roads

Norfolk, Jan. 10.—The capsizing in Hampton Roads of a motor cutter from the battleship Wyoming, flagship of the Atlantic fleet, resulted in the loss of the lives of four seamen of the Wyoming's crew.

The accident occurred near the spot where a launch from the battleship Minnesota went down in 1907 with eleven men returning from a social function.

Bishop Declines $500,000 Gift

London, Jan. 10.—Dr. Amigo, Catholic bishop of Southwark, declined to receive a $500,000 gift raised for him by the Duke of Norfolk and others, asking that the money be applied to church debts.

Explosion Kills Three Men

Bridgeport, Ills., Jan. 10.—Three men were instantly killed and four injured, two probably fatally, in a boiler explosion in the gasolene plant of the Ohio Oil company.

That proposed New York skyscraper 901 feet high would outsoar the Woolworth building, but would still be topped by the Eiffel tower in Paris. While going skyward why not go for a world record and be done with it, temporarily at least?

MILTONS WIN AT HOCKEY

Basket Ball and Other Sporting Notes at Milton

The hockey season opened Thursday at Milton when Milton High school defeated Dorchester, 3 to 2 on the Cunningham rink. Robertson and Simpson did the most conspicuous work for the winter. The opening was not under the most auspicious circumstances since there was a small flurry of snow and in spots the ice was soft. It has been several seasons since Milton had a champion hockey team but the indications are that if the present one develops properly they will have one of the fastest septettes in interscholastic circles. The pupils thronged the sides of the rink to see the contest and showed a fine school spirit.

FORE RIVER LEAGUE.

The Machine Gallery continues in first place in the Fore River league and they have a good lead over the Yard team which is in second position. BOSTON THEATRE.

The last performances are announced for "The Whip" the world's biggest melodrama now playing to crowded houses at the Boston Theatre. The engagement will positively end with the performance on Saturday night, Jan. 31st, and the play will bring to a fitting end the glories of melodrama which so long have been associated with this famous playhouse. Sumptuous to a high degree, with massive scenic effects, the action in "The Whip" is laid in the clean-cut, jovial atmosphere of English sporting life. The struggle between villainy and virtue, in which virtue triumphs, despite manifold wileful plots holds the spectator engrossed from curtain to curtain. "The Whip" is the name of the best racing mare ever bred by the Marquis of Beverly, one of the prominent personages in the melodrama, and by the winning of the two thousand guinea stakes at Newmarket brings new honors to her owner's stables, joy, fortune and a wife to a persecuted man and punishment to the wicked. Over 250 people are employed on the stage and to transport the scenery and equipment are required in the production the capacity of two ocean liners were taxed to the utmost.

THOMAS GANNON, Superintendent

A BRAVE FOOL

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

George Carroll was sauntering across a field as free from care as the day he was born. He was looking up at the sky, over which white clouds were sailing as lazily as he walked. He was a city chap, who had been ordered by his physician to go to the country, even though the January winds were blowing cold, and recuperate. He was thinking as he walked what a humdrum thing life was, to be sure, how free from any kind of risk or excitement his own individual life was and how when he was "bowled over," as he expressed it, it would probably be by an animalcule, so small that he could not see it, entering his system, increasing and multiplying vigorously, the colony at last eating him up.

Strange it is how often fate is doing with us what we least suspect. At the moment this last idea entered George Carroll's brain a death dealing force was driving at him from behind. A shadow, accompanied by the sound of horse's hoofs, shot transversely before him. Turning, he saw a girl on horseback in a red coat, moving between him and a bull that was making for him, the girl glancing backward as she rode to observe the bull. She was about to turn and ride back again when the bull caught sight of her, abandoned the straight line he was following in the direction of the man and turned his attention to the girl.

Now, George in regard to all matters pertaining to the country was very stupid. He did not realize that he was or had been in any danger. He did not gather from what he saw that this girl, seeing the bull going for him, had leaped a fence and ridden between him and his enemy for the purpose of turning the animal from him to herself. Instead of thus taking in the situation and getting out of the field as soon as possible, he stood looking at the bull chasing the girl.

The inclosure was about ten acres and George stood near the middle of it. The girl led the bull as far as possible from him, then turned and, eluding the animal as dexterously as a toreador, galloped away in the opposite direction. By that time it began to dawn upon the city man that the horse and the girl were being pursued by the bull for the purpose of goring. But not even yet did he realize that she had taken this danger upon herself for the purpose of saving his life; that had it not been for her a pair of horns would have taken him in the back, broken it and the earthly spark of his existence would have gone out forever.

What occupied George Carroll's mind to the exclusion of all else was the danger that threatened the girl and what he could do to relieve her from her perilous position. The only thing he could do was to run for the fence as fast as his legs could carry him and climb over it. If he had done this the girl would have made her exit as she had made her entrance—by urging her horse over that same fence. She was waiting for him to get out of the field before securing her own safety.

It is singular how a brave man may be a fool, or, rather, is not a good deal of what we call bravery folly? George by his stupidity was leaving both himself and the girl in danger. She could see him standing there gaping at her, but was so close pressed that she was unable to make a sign to him to fly for his life. Nearing the opposite end of the field, she turned her head to see George running toward her! She could have jumped the fence, but when she saw the man she was trying to save hurrying again into danger, instead of saving herself she turned about and started again across the field. If she went near the man the bull might leave her and turn upon him. So she galloped diagonally across the field, making an effort at a sign for him to leave it. But he did not understand and, turning, continued his pursuit of her.

Then followed events in such quick succession—so quick that George could scarcely separate them. He saw the horse stumble and fall; he saw the bull's horns go into the horse's belly; he heard a report, and the bull, too, fell to the ground. A man dropped a gun, dashed to the fence and, jumping it, ran to where the girl was trying to get up from the ground. George and the man reached her at the same time. The man lifted her up, and she stood on her feet.

"Are you killed?" asked the man.

"No; not even hurt."

Then the man turned to George.

"For heaven's sake," he cried, "how in the world have you escaped the fool killer all these years?"

"He's not a fool at all," said the girl; "he's a brave man. He didn't realize his own danger, he was so intent upon mine."

When George Carroll realized what the girl had done for him and how he had stupidly come very near being the cause of her death he was paralyzed. As it was, he had been the cause of the loss of her horse and a bull worth $100 had been shot. Fortunately George had a fortune and could repair the monetary damage. The rest of it could not be paid for in that way. But fate, when George was walking across the field regretting the uneventful tenor of his life, had another purpose. All this chain of events was but one of fate's tricks to make a match. The girl reaped her reward by helping George spend this income.

M'CANN MYSTERY IS NOT CLEARED

Coroner Finds Girl Died While "Temporarily Deranged"

WOMAN HAD A DEATH VISION

Letter From Philadelphia Spiritualist to Family of Drowned Brooklyn School Teacher and Settlement Worker Made Public—Fell Into Water While Asleep at Coney Island

New York, Jan. 10.—An inquest into the death of Jessie E. McCann, the Brooklyn school teacher and settlement worker, who disappeared Dec. 4 and was found drowned, failed to clear the mystery as to whether she died accidentally or committed suicide.

The verdict returned stated that she came to her death "while temporarily deranged."

Robert G. McCann, Jr., brother of Jessie, made public the contents of a letter which reached his father several weeks ago. In the letter a spiritualistic medium told of her having had a vision of the death of Miss McCann by drowning.

The missive was dated Dec. 14, 1913, and it bore the postmark, "Station O, Philadelphia." At first McCann said the members of the family paid no attention to the letter, but subsequent developments tended to verify some of the statements contained in it. The letter reads:

"Sir: After reading of the disappearance of your beloved daughter in a Philadelphia newspaper I became much interested in the case, so much so that I concluded to try and locate her whereabouts. So this afternoon I shut myself up in a dark room, and in a short time an old gentleman appeared to me from the other world and said he was your daughter's grandfather and that she was with him in heaven.

"He further said that she sat down near a body of water near Coney Island, not the main body of water that faces Coney Island, and fell asleep, and that while in that condition fell into the water and was drowned. Now, if your son will come here and see me I may be able to give him the full particulars concerning her whereabouts, and it will not cost him one penny for the service I may be able to render him."

BOUND AND GAGGED

Girl Tells Story of Kidnapping of Sister and Robbery

Baltimore, Jan. 10.—While gagged and bound to a bedpost in her home in East Baltimore, 12-year-old Rosie Ranko says she saw three men drug and kidnap her 17-year-old sister, Tinka Ranko, and steal $1150, her father's savings of a lifetime.

With the girl and the money in their possession, the three men, who, the father says, were Peter, Eli and Spiro DeMetro of Philadelphia, then decamped, leaving the younger girl helpless to give an alarm. Several hours later she was found by her father in an exhausted condition.

Police Magistrate Smith issued warrants for the arrest of the men named.

HOOKWORM IN KENTUCKY

Thousands of Victims Could Be Saved by a Vigorous Campaign

Battle Creek, Mich., Jan. 10.—The hookworm is the greatest menace to race improvement in the southern states, according to Miss Lillian South, state bacteriologist of Kentucky.

"Eighty-nine percent of the people in one Kentucky county were found to be affected with the hookworm," Miss South told the national conference on race betterment.

"Two cents' worth of medicine will cure hookworm. Its victims are broken down mentally, morally and physically, and it is the duty of the state to inaugurate a rigorous campaign against it."

EUROPE LEADING US IN WAR AERONAUTICS

Blue Says We Will Go Ahead Much Faster In Future

Washington, Jan. 10.—"It is time to jump right in and catch up with the European nations in aeronautics," says Rear Admiral Blue, chief of the navigation bureau of the navy, in a recommendation submitted to the house committee on naval affairs, for liberal aviation appropriations.

"We expect to go ahead much faster in the near future," the admiral explained. "The English, French and German nations have a great number of machines, dirigibles and heavier than air. Situated near each other as the European nations are, ere would naturally expect them to have more air craft than we, and consequently more experience in the development of them."

PATIENT SWALLOWS TOOTH

Blood Poisoning Ensues and His Life Is Now In Great Peril

Claremont, N. H., Jan. 10.—Albert Kelley is in a critical condition suffering from blood poisoning due to his having swallowed one of his teeth while in a dentist's chair.

In some manner a sympathetic tooth was removed from its holdings. By the automatic motion of the muscles of the mouth it moved down the windpipe and lodged in one of the lungs. Several days ago symptoms of blood poisoning were remarked.

All efforts to effect the expulsion of the offending tooth from the lung were unavailing. Yesterday afternoon, however, while in a prolonged coughing spell, the patient emitted the tooth.

PRAIRIE DOG CANNERY

Would Dispose of Pests and Reduce High Cost of Living

Washington, Jan. 10.—A cannery for prairie dogs has been suggested to the house committee on agriculture by Dr. Fisher of the United States bureau of biological survey as a means of ridding the west of these troublesome rodents.

"If some enterprising person could start such a cannery it would be all right," he said, "but we would not be allowed to change the name, and I fear very few American citizens would care to eat dogs."

GANZEL FUND GROWING.

The Charley Ganzel fund passed the $400 mark on Friday and contributions are coming from all parts of the country. The biggest contributor is the New England League, which forwarded $100. The movement to come to the financial aid of one of the most popular and best known ball players, although in its infancy, shows great promise.

Shortly after Mr. Ganzel made his home here he was appointed manager of the Makaria team. He was the prime mover in the formation of the Quincy City league. He was a friend of all players ambitious enough to lean toward big base ball, but because of his affliction could not be very active last season.

The Daily Ledger, for the convenience of Quincy residents, will accept contributions and see that they are promptly placed in the hands of Treasurer Nickerson.

DEBATE ON SCHOOL HOURS.

At the regular meeting of Bethany castle, Knights of King Arthur, last evening, there was an interesting debate of vital interest to the members: "Resolved that one session of five hours should be substituted in our grammar schools in place of the present double session." The leader for the affirmative was Carl Pierce, and the leader for the negative was Fred Rasmussen, Warren Crane, the Chancellor presided. The debate was decided in favor of the affirmative.

EAST NORFOLK C. E. UNION.

At the bi-monthly meeting of the East Norfolk Christian Endeavor Union to be held Monday evening at the First Presbyterian church the speaker of the evening will be Dr. James A. Francis of the Clarendon Street Baptist church, Boston. FITZGERALD RAISES PAY

Boston Police and Firemen Benefit to Extent of $200,000

Boston, Jan. 10.—The salary of every policeman and fireman of the city was increased $100 a year last night by Mayor Fitzgerald. This makes their salary maximum $1400 a year. Salaries of officers of both departments get a larger boost.

The action of the mayor came as a complete surprise. Last year the mayor increased the salaries of both these branches of the city service $100 a year and, although it was understood that another $100 was coming some time in the future, it was not thought the present mayor would put it through.

As there are about 1000 firemen and 1200 patrolmen the cost to the city will be about $200,000 more a year. The mayor said the action was the result of an effort to meet the high cost of living.

THE FATE OF THAW

It May Be Determined Today by Special Sanity Commission

Boston, Jan. 10.—The fate of Harry K. Thaw will, in all probability, be decided today in this city. The special commission to investigate his sanity, consisting of Frank S. Streeter and Drs. Bancroft, Blumer and Prince, held a long session here last evening.

The session was resumed this morning, and then a formal report will be made to Judge Aldrich of the federal court at Concord, N. H. Upon this report will depend whether Thaw will be liberated under bonds, pending the extradition proceedings brought on petition of the New York state authorities.

None of the special commissioners would talk regarding the case, or as to what their report will probably be.

SAYS TANGO DANCE REQUIRES PENANCE

Paris Cardinal Condemns It as Indecent and Offensive

Paris, Jan. 10.—Cardinal Amette, archbishop of Paris, in an admonition which was published in the churches here today, forbids the dancing of the tango as a sin which must be confessed and require penance. The archbishop says:

"We condemn the dance imported from abroad known under the name of the tango, which, by its nature, is indecent and offensive to morals, and Christians may not in conscience take part therein.

"It will, therefore, be the duty of confessors to take notice of this in the administration of the sacrament of penance."

Abbe Gouget of the archbishop's household said Amette had for some time been distressed by the persistence of the vogue of the tango and had hoped that it would be transitory, but he left it his duty now to intervene formally.

PATRIOTIC INSTALLATION

Mrs. Emma L. Ela New President of Rebecca Wiswell Tent

Members of the allied patriotic societies of the city and delegations of Daughters of Veterans from various parts of the state attended the installation of the officers of Rebecca Wiswell tent, 53, in Grand Army hall Friday evening. The tent was instituted one year ago and has taken an active part in patriotic affairs of the city. The exercises consumed several hours and closed with the singing of America and the salute to the flag.

The officers were installed by Mrs. Mabelle Gooding, deputy, and Mrs. Anne Williams as guide. Her suite comprised officers of Tent 32 of Weymouth and included its president, Mrs. Clara Maynard, past presidents Mrs. Mildred Morgan and Mrs. Ida Farrington and Mrs. Mary Brassil, Mrs. Josie Colley, Mrs. Margaret Higgins, Mrs. Helen Beach, Miss Sarah McHugh.

President Emma L. Ela presented Mrs. Gooding with a hand painted berry dish, and Mrs. Anna Williams with a bouquet of sweet peas. Both made short speeches and there were remarks by Senior Vice Commander Mark Hanson of Paul Revere Post, 88, G. A. R.; President Cylinda Richardson of Paul J. Revere Woman's Relief Corps; Commander Harry Ford of Col. Abner Packard camp, Sons of Veterans; President Abbie Our of the Sons of Veterans Auxiliary; and Commander Ernest Leavitt of Oliver Peabody camp, Sons of Veterans of Milton.

Duing the evening Comrade George Phillips and Sister Ella Packard took part in the entertainment and refreshments were served. The officers installed are:

AUTO LAMPS STOLEN.

The theft of 15 auto lamps in Wollaston in two weeks will probably be cleared up at the next juvenile session of court, when Officer Avery who recovered eight of them will testify against three boys. He was assigned to the case by Chief Burrell and Friday night walked into the station with the lamps and the names of the boys.

SCOTCH DANCE.

The Highland laddies of Quincy Point held a Scotch dancing party in Electa hall Friday evening which was well attended by the Scottish residents of that district. Dancing was enjoyed until midnight, music being furnished by Thompson's orchestra. Refreshments were served. Thomas Conrad of Charlestown, a former member, was the special guest of the evening. Songs were sung by James Muir and Duncan McKimmock. The committee included Joseph Walsh, David Fields, James Muir and Fred Kuehl.

POVERTY PARTY.

Members of the Christian Endeavor society of the Wollaston Baptist church turned out in large numbers to attend the poverty party, held Friday evening in the chapel, by that organization.

The onlooker would certainly have thought that "the beggars were coming to town" for every stage of depletion was represented in the costumes worn.

Harold Thomas in a dilapitated swallow tail, overalls and tall hat of ancient origin carried off first honors.

The evening opened with a grand march in which all participated and a large variety of games followed.

The party was in charge of the entertainment committee, of which William Bullock is chairman. Refreshments completed a very novel evening.

Miss Corine Pickard of Irving Place underwent a successful surgical operation on her ear Friday and is resting comfortably.

The funeral of Mrs. Jabez Cobb was held this morning from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. James C. Brady of 138 Grand View avenue, and the body was taken to Fall River, her former home, for interment.

The funeral of J. Harold Richards will be held Sunday afternoon from the residence of his parents on Centre street. At the last regular meeting of Rural lodge Mr. Richards was elected to receive Masonic degrees, but ill health did not permit him to attend the lodge.

Word has been received from Helena, Montana, of the death Jan. 5 of Georgiana Twombly, wife of Nathan Godfrey both formerly of Milton, Mrs. Godfrey being the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Twombly of School street. She is an aunt of Mrs. Carleton C. Lane of Presidents hill.

One of the attractions about City Square this morning was a small wagon drawn by a pair of goats, driven by a small boy. Half a dozen interested and probably jealous boys were running on behind. In the wagon drawn by the goats was a bale of hay, evidently to be used as food for the goats.

The Pastime club turned out in a body Thursday evening for a trolley party to Brockton to attend the third annual dance of the Greysing Boat Club, held in Canton hall. Many members of the Waseca club accompanied them. The Quincy clubs received a hearty welcome from the Greysings and a very enjoyable evening was spent.

CHRISTMAS TREE BURNED

Loss Small at Wollaston Fire Other Alarm False

Two bell alarms summoned the fire department early Friday evening. The first alarm was from the Box 524 and sounded at 5.40. This was for a fire on a belated Christmas tree in the Carr House on Cushing street, occupied by Lars Brah. According to the information the Chief received the tree was lighted up with candles to please the children and in some way took fire. The tree was burned and a chair which supported the tree was scorched. The loss was slight. The second alarm was from Box 227 and sounded at 7.15 being almost immediately followed by the recall. This was a false alarm.

No doubt President Huerta feels so lonely without Jack Lind that he runs out every day to see if the postman has brought a letter.

EVERYBODY-GO-TO-CHURCH-SUNDAY GREAT SUCCESS

PEOPLE TURNED AWAY AT SOME CHURCHES

Crowded Congregations the Rule at Most of the Quincy Services

Bethany Reports Attendance of Over 2,000 for Day

Everybody-Go- To- Church Sunday was very successful in bringing out large congregations, especially at the morning services. In several of the churches the capacity was reached and some were turned away. It was a red-letter day which will be productive of good.

BETHANY CONGREGATIONAL.

Fully two thousand people attended the four services at Bethany on Everybody-Go-To-Church Sunday, and many were unable to obtain admission at the regular morning and evening services. By count there were 712 in the morning and 681 in the evening. At the session of the Bible school there were 521, and nearly 100 at the Christian Endeavor meeting.

The pastor prefaced his sermon with a talk to boys and girls. He said your city, your church, your school and your home, are what you make them. If looking for good you will find good; if looking for bad you will find the defects. Unconsciously all of us are throwing out influences all the time.

The morning message was on the subject "Where shall we go?" He said life gives compensations, and Jesus' life gives exquisite love to others. How must Jesus feel when people turn from the divine? What should Jesus do then? Churches and pastors should not cater to people just to hold them. Christ brought into play the sacrificial element. There is no alternative; the only one to whom we can really go is Jesus Christ.

"Getting together" was the evening theme. The pastor gave reasons why the Protestant churches should co-operate. There should be no competition, no divisions because of creeds, but a unity of the spirit of Jesus Christ. The moral laxity and new freedom may wreck us unless combatted. It is the Christian church which will save America. The pastor asked the help of men, not financially but through personality.

Tuesday evening the chorus of the church will present the cantata—"The daughter of Jarius."

An all-day session of Bethany Woman's Union will be held Wednesday, with addresses by the pastor and Dr. Walter L. Sargent.

Bethany Brotherhood will meet Wednesday evening when Rev. Nathaniel Mathews of Lowell will speak on the "Black diamonds."

FIRST PARISH.

The attendance at the Unitarian church was a record-breaker, about 500 attending the Sunday morning service.

"The Kingdom of God is within you," or, according to a later translation, "in the midst of you" was the text of the sermon by Rev. Adelbert Lathrop Hudson. He quoted also many other sayings of Jesus, showing the simplicity of his teaching and his insistence upon the fact that the Kingdom of God is not something referred to a future state or dependent on forms and creeds and ceremonies; but that it is something immediately present within the human heart, in the very midst of the thronging activities of everyday life. In short, the great purpose of the religion of Jesus is to make better men and women in this world and thus make possible that ideal social order

WHY GO TO CHURCH?

The Congregationalist gives these ten reasons for going to church:

1. It is wholesome to put on clean clothes and make one's self physically presentable.

2. The quiet of the sanctuary offsets the rush and drive of week-day life.

3. Diverting thoughts into higher channels betters the body as well as the mind.

4. Churchgoing brings one into personal association with good and true men and women.

5. One hears good and often the best English spoken in the pulpit, and this helps to compensate for the slang, poor grammar and profanity thrown at our ears during the week-days.

6. As a rule, one's musical and aesthetic sensibilities are feasted by what the sanctuary affords.

7. Something in the sermon will help one. A distinguished Massachusetts lawyer once said, It's a mighty poor sermon that does not hit me somewhere.

8. One's presence helps to maintain an institution without which property would be less safe and dangers to one's person would increase.

9. One's presence in church gratifies one's best and truest friends.

10. For his own soul's sake a man should imitate his real Master and go to church.

ESTABLISHES OFFICE HOURS

Mayor Miller Besieged With Callers at City Hall

Mayor Miller today entered upon his second week as chief executive of the city. The number of callers were greater by far than on previous mornings and according to the Mayor they greatly interfered with his attending to municipal affairs. In order to make it possible for him to devote some time to necessary business he has decided to receive callers for an hour in the morning and an hour in the afternoon.

In the morning citizens will be welcome between 10 and 11 oclock and in the afternoon between 3 and 4 oclock. Mayor Miller feels that this will have a tendency to eliminate the inconvenience of trying to administer his duties and also offer people having business with his office the proper opportunity of calling.

Mayor Miller said that he had not changed his mind about making the announcements of his official family, but will as originally intended make known his appointments on next Monday evening. Several important matters have been brought to the attention of the Mayor and he is giving them his earnest consideration.

Mayor Miller said this morning that he felt a decided improvement in health and his appearance indicates that he is rapidly recovering from an illness which caused a serious indisposition during his campaign and prevented him from appearing at most of the rallies that were held in his behalf.

JAMES D. MULLIN.

The funeral of James D. Mullin, beloved husband of Laura Mullin, nee McDonald, who died at Rutland on Thursday in his 27th year was held from his home at 419 Granite street this morning.

A high mass of requiem was celebrated at St. Mary's church by Rev. Fr. William J. Duffy, curate. The Gregorian chant was sung by the regular choir. Burial was in St. Francis Xavier cemetery in Weymouth. The services were well attended and there were many handsome floral tributes.

FALSE ALARM.

The alarm from Box 124 on Saturday evening, near the home of Brooks Adams on Adams street was false. It was the second time within a week that the fire department have been sent on a wild goose chase.

IN WHICH CLASS?

As has been well said, Anybody can kick; we need those who can pull. The men in our churches who do the complaining and faultfinding are not the men who give their time, their money and their energy to the church.

If you do not believe this it is because you have not thought the matter through.

Put on your thinking cap and take up the study of your church roll; you will find how worthless growlers generally are.

And this is so in the larger denominational affairs and movements as well as in the local churches. Anybody can kick; we need those who can pull.

In which class are you? —The Watchman-Examiner.

WILL ANSWER MURDER CHARGE

Murderer Loud to be Arraigned in Court Wednesday

Eugene C. Loud, who murdered his wife Florence in South Weymouth on Jan. 4 and then attempted suicide by slashing his throat will probably be taken from the Quincy City Hospital to the Quincy District Court on Wednesday morning to answer to a charge of murder.

Loud has rapidly recovered from his self-inflicted wounds but is in a desperate frame of mind. At times he is delirious and his references to his dead wife are frequent.

Twice during the past week Loud sprung from his bed in an attempt to escape but in each case has been captured by the officers before he could reach the windows. He will be represented by counsel when arraigned.

GIRL STRUCK BY AUTOMOBILE

Thrown Some Distance but Escapes Serious Injuries

The 12 year old daughter of William H. Vila of 192 Farrington street had a narrow escape from serious injury this noon when she was struck by an automobile near her home and thrown some distance. The little girl was walking with her brother when an automobile, reported to belong to a Dr. Diehl came along going toward Quincy at a rapid rate, on an emergency call. The child was thrown some distance and when taken up was unconscious. She was taken into the house of L. P. Randall, nearby and physicians summoned. Dr. Johnson was the first to respond. By the time he had arrived the little girl had regained consciousness and an examination showed that fortunately no bones had been fractured, and that the only injuries consisted of numerous bruises and a general shaking up.

SUNDAY RAID.

The premises occupied by Afi Carlo at 65 Trafford street, South Quincy, were raided Sunday afternoon by Inspector Goodhue and Officers Duffy and Cahill. Eight gallons of wine were seized. When the officers entered five men, including the defendant, were at the table and his wife was serving them with liquor. Carlo was placed under arrest and short after secured bail. In court he pleaded guilty to a charge of keeping and exposing liquor for sale and was fined $50.

AGAIN QUINCY COMES TO THE FRONT

Largest Telescope in the World Now Being Constructed by Fore River Company

Much Larger Than One at Pasadena or New Canadian

In the Daily Ledger telegraphic news of Dec. 30 was an article to the effect that the Canadian government had awarded to a Cleveland company the contract for what will be the largest telescope in the world to be set up in Ottawa. Although the telescope described in the article is to be immense, it is not as large by a number of inches as the telescope now being constructed by the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation in Quincy which the company has been at work upon for the past six months.

The telescope being built for the Canadian government, according to the description given will have a speculum disk of glass 73 inches in diameter and ten inches in thickness, and the tube will be large enough to drive an automobile through.

While this instrument is a massive one, it does not compare with that being constructed at Quincy as will be readily seen when it is known that the disk of the telescope being made here will measure 100 inches in diameter or 27 inches larger than that for the Canadian government.

The instrument being built by the Fore River Corporation is for the Carnegie Institute and will be located at the Mt. Wilson solar observatory at Pasadena, California.

Years were consumed in the grinding of the lens, and when completed it was tried and found not to be efficient. It was laid aside for a time, and sometime later again tried, when it was found to be perfect, and the contract for the construction of the metal work was immediately placed with the Fore River Corporation the contract price being something like $200,000. Aside from the massive tube, there is also a lot of other metal attachments such as basis.

The great Lick telescope built in 1887, which was at that time the wonder of the world, had a disk of but 36 inches in diameter. Then followed the Yerkes telescope in 1893 with a 40 inch disk, these two instruments being the largest in the world.

As science advanced, however, came the demand for more powerful instruments particularly in astrophysical and photographic lines, and then came the 60 inch reflector, now located at Mt. Wilson in Pasadena.

Next in order comes the instrument recently ordered by the Canadian government which must so quickly yield to the instrument being constructed at Quincy, which will be the largest in the world. It will rest on massive piers of concrete and will weigh many tons.

—The annual meeting of the American Forestry Association will be held in Washington on January 14. A president, twenty-one vice presidents, a treasurer, an auditor and five directors are to be elected and plans made for an active campaign for forest conservation during 1914. The association has 8,000 members.

The country is now doing the hesitation waltz, until the trust question is settled.

The life insurance companies want to have people take medical examinations yearly, as nothing contributes so much to long life as knowing that you have an incurable disease.

The baseball people never worry much about talk of business depression, as the bleachers will be full if the factories aren't.

When you see a Wall street tip that the bears are going to hammer some particular stock down next, it is quite likely that some one wants to buy that stock, and is hunting around for methods to buy it cheap.

Many people are now applying the ancient maxim, "Never do today what you can put off until tomorrow," to the matter of Jan. bills.

As the result of the "Father and Son" movement, it is hoped that many fathers will follow the example of their sons and avoid harmful vices.

SAVING THE RADIUM.

Probably most people will feel that coal lands should originally have been saved by the government as common property. Coal could thus have been delivered to the consumer for the cost of mining and transportation. A heavy tax on industry and household comfort would have been saved.

Today the scientific world is exploring with increasing wonder the marvellous properties of the new element, radium. Confident predictions are made as to its efficacy for cancer and other diseases. An amount of this element valued at $100,000 is now planted in the flesh of a congressman who is suffering from a malignant growth.

This element exists in infinitesimal amounts, with only two grams known now to exist in the United States. Yet it is contained in our ores quite as much as in Europe. In Austria the government has bought out the mines containing the new force, and will conduct them in a way to assure public participation in its benefits.

The atoms composing radium seem to undergo a certain form of regular explosions, which liberate energy. It is said that an ounce of radium could keep up this activity 1760 years, and only half its weight would be dissipated.

Scientists say that the springs at the English city of Bath, supposed to be good for bilious, nervous, and scrofulous complaints, contain radium. These waters have been visited by the suffering for 2000 years, and perhaps the presence of radium is a large element in their power. After drinking a glass of Bath water, a man shows the mysterious effect of radium by measurement of an electroscope. Plant buds exposed to radium emanations for a day or two can be made to sprout in the fall.

Who can foresee the marvellous range of this power? How carefully every trace of it should be saved from manipulation from speculators!

Judges of United States Should Retire at Seventy

By Attorney General JAMES C. M REYNOLDS

JUDGES of the United States courts at the age of seventy, after having served ten years, may retire upon full pay. In the past many judges have availed themselves of this privilege. Some, however, have REMAINED UPON THE BENCH LONG BEYOND THE TIME WHEN THEY WERE CAPABLE OF ADEQUATELY DISCHARGING THEIR DUTIES, and in consequence the administration of justice has suffered.

© by American Press Association.

THE POWER OF CONGRESS TO CORRECT THIS CONDITION IS LIMITED BY THE PROVISION OF THE CONSTITUTION THAT JUDGES SHALL HOLD THEIR OFFICES DURING GOOD BEHAVIOR. I SUGGEST AN ACT PROVIDING, WHEN ANY JUDGE OF A FEDERAL COURT BELOW THE SUPREME COURT FAILS TO AVAIL HIMSELF OF THE PRIVILEGE OF RETIRING, NOW GRANTED BY LAW, THAT THE PRESIDENT BE REQUIRED, WITH THE ADVICE AND CONSENT OF THE SENATE, TO APPOINT ANOTHER JUDGE, WHO SHALL PRESIDE OVER THE AFFAIRS OF THE COURT AND HAVE PRECEDENCE OVER THE OLDER ONES.

Automobile Diminishes Production of Foodstuffs

By Ex-Governor FRANK BROWN of Maryland, Known as "Farmer Governor"

THE AUTOMOBILE HAS TAKEN THE FARMER AWAY FROM HIS FIELDS AND THEREFORE DIMINISHED HIS PRODUCTION OF FOODS. OF COURSE, IT WAS ONLY NATURAL THAT WHEN AUTOMOBILES GOT CHEAP AND THE AGRICULTURIST SAW THE BANKER AND THE MERCHANT RIDING ABOUT IN THEIR CARS HE SHOULD FEEL THAT HE COULD GET A LOT OF PLEASURE OUT OF DOING LIKEWISE. THEREFORE HE PROCEEDED TO INVEST IN A MACHINE HIMSELF, IN MANY CASES PUTTING A MORTGAGE ON HIS PLACE TO DO SO.

Instead of quitting work at sundown, as had been his custom, he took to leaving off at 3 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon in order to GIVE HIS FAMILY A JOY RIDE. Then, instead of getting up in the morning at 5 o'clock to milk the cows, he began to lie abed. He decided that he must have a "hired man" to do all such work, now regarded by him as menial, and naturally the market for farm labor being limited and the price continually going up the EXPENSE OF RUNNING HIS FARM INCREASED. He began to raise less grain as a natural consequence, and then he found cattle raising too much trouble to look after, and he gave that up. Therefore he, with the rest of us, has had to BUY BEEF AT AN EXTRAVAGANT PRICE.

Competition Between Telegraph Companies Has Been Keen

By CLARENCE H. MACKAY, Telegraph Magnate

THE POSTMASTER GENERAL IS MISTAKEN IN HIS IDEA THAT TELEPHONE COMPANIES ARE SUBJECT TO THE POST ROAD ACT OF CONGRESS OF 1866. THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES IN THE RICHMOND CASE HELD THAT THEY WERE NOT.

In denominating the telegraph business as being "monopolistic in its nature" he is also mistaken. If there ever has been MORE CONTINUOUS, KEEN AND EVEN BITTER COMPETITION than that between the Postal and the Western Union I would be pleased to know when and where.

New Haven Road Yields to Department of Justice

ANNOUNCEMENT BY ELLIOTT

Boston and Maine, Trolley Systems and Steamship Interests to Be Divorced, but Question of Retention of Sound Lines In Hands of Interstate Commerce Commission

Washington, Jan. 12.—An agreement has been reacned between the department of justice and the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad. This was announced by Chairman Elliott of the New Haven.

This will prevent a suit for the dissolution of the New Haven under the Sherman law. Under the declared agreement the New Haven makes practically a complete and unconditional surrender to Attorney General McReynolds. The agreement specifically provides:

The absolute divorcing of the Boston and Maine from the New Haven railroad.

The giving up by the New Haven of its various trolley systems in Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island.

The surrender of these steamship interests: The Merchants and Miners' Transportation company, the Eastern Steamship corporation and the Maine Steamship company.

The cancellation of the Boston and Albany agreement.

As to the other steamship interests, notably the sound lines—the chief bone of contention in the long controversy between the attorney general and the New Haven authorities—the fate of these, so far as control by the New Haven goes, lies with the interstate commerce commission. This commission will determine under the Panama canal act whether or not the New Haven must also give up these lines.

The agreement, which is verbal so far, marks the closing chapter of the government's strenuous fight to dissolve the New England transportation monopoly. The plan of settlement is outlined in the following statement given out by Chairman Elliott and Dr. Hadley, president of Yale and a director of the New Haven system:

"The New Haven, in addition to the cancellation of the Boston and Albany agreement which becomes effective Feb. 1, will dispose of its holdings in the Boston and Maine railroad, the various trolley systems, the Merchants and Miners' Transportation company, the Eastern Steamship corporation and the Maine Steamship company under a plan, the details of which will be worked out as promptly as possible with representatives of the department of justice by Chairman Elliott, Moorfield Storey of Boston and Walker D. Hines of New York, special counsel for the board of directors.

"Concerning other steamship lines, application has been made under the Panama canal act to the interstate commerce commission, and their disposition will be determined by that body. Until the plans are worked out and put into effect the management and operation of the properties will be continued as at present."

Elliott returned to New York yesterday afternoon but will come back to Washington this week to put into writing the detailed agreement.

SEVEN RIBS BROKEN

Doctor Says They Did Not Cause the Death of Insane Hospital Patient

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 12.—Following closely upon the death of Charles E. Seaver at the Worcester state hospital, in which fractures of thirteen ribs were given as a "contributory cause," Medical Examiner Baker announced, after an autopsy on the body of Narcisse M. Giroux, another patient at the institution, that, although seven ribs were broken, "they were not responsible for his death."

Tuberculosis is given as the cause in Baker's report. Giroux was 49 years old and was committed to the state hospital from Somerville on Sept. 12 of last year.

CITY STORE FOR POOR

Chicago Council Sets Aside $25,000 to Establish New Scheme

Chicago, Jan. 12.—A municipal "general store" at which persons with limited funds may purchase the necessities of life probably will be established in Chicago in the near future. The council finance committee set aside $25,000 in the city's 1914 budget for the "unemployed commission," which will have charge of the store.

Only persons vouched for by the county agent will be permitted to purchase goods. Merchandise and food will be sold at cost, plus operating expenses.

To Test Saloon Law

Washington, Jan. 12.—That a law which would limit the number of saloons in Milwaukee to 2224 is so arbitrary and unreasonable as to be unconstitutional, is maintained in papers filed with the supreme court in docketing a case to test the constitutionality of the Wisconsin saloon law of 1911.

QUITS PUBLIC LFE

Newfoundland Leader Charges Coakerites With Bad Faith

St. John's, Jan. 12.—Sir Robert Bond, the former premier, announced his withdrawal from public life.

In his letter making the announcement he gives as his reason alleged bad faith on the part of the Coakerites, otherwise known as the Fishermen's union, which, with the Liberals, formed the opposition led by Bond against Sir Edward Morris, the present premier, in the general elections last October.

For many years Bond was premier until the Liberal party was overthrown by the Conservatives headed by Morris, who was once attorney general in Bond's cabinet.

COUNTY ATTORNEY'S DRAMATIC SUICIDE

Quits Callers In His Office and Uses Rifle Upon Himself

Houlton, Me., Jan. 12.—County Attorney Lewis C. Brown of Aroostook county, aged 35, shot and killed himself in a dramatic manner in his office at the courthouse.

Brown had been chatting with William R. Pattangall, his father-in-law, and Judge Smith of Presque Isle. Brown smiled as he said: "Excuse me a moment, won't you?" Then he passed into the next room and shot himself in the head with a rifle.

A note found in his pocket indicated that Brown feared insanity as a result of overwork and a nervous breakdown.

THAW'S RELEASE NEAR

Opinion That He Will Be Admitted to Bail by Judge Aldrich

Concord, N. H., Jan. 12.—That Harry K. Thaw will be admitted to bail today is the report in circulation here. Thaw himself is positive that Judge Aldrich of the United States district court will admit him to his liberty under bonds.

The commission which has been taking testimony relative to the insanity of Thaw is said to have recommended that Thaw be released on bail. The report will have the effect of swaying Aldrich. He will be guided by its recommendations.

"None of the evidence we heard," said a member of the commission, "went to show that at the present time Thaw is a dangerous lunatic."

NEW RULES IN FORCE

Strict Quarantine In Connecticut Against Animal Disease

Hartford, Jan. 12.—Executive approval was given to new rules issued by State Commissioner Phelps, regulating the bringing into the state of horses and cattle.

All such animals brought here from New York, Massachusetts and Rhode Island must be accompanied by a permit, and must be quarantined until released by the commissioner's orders. The rules do not apply to animals which daily cross the state border.

The rules are to aid in the suppression of glanders and farcy, now prevalent.

The many friends of Mrs. Carrie L. P. Couchier who Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 23, was taken to the Taunton Hospital for the Insane, will be interested to learn that Rev. Carl G. Horst, received a letter from the superintendent, Dr. Arthur V. Goss, Saturday, saying that "Mrs. Couchier is in a very active condition. Has not slept much since coming here and today (Friday Jan. 9) looks exhausted and is becoming weaker. I do not anticipate immediate danger, but thought best to notify you of her condition."

—Go-to-church Sunday was a great success in Lowell, and the Lowell Courier-Citizen calls for an encore. But why limit it to one recall, asks the Brockton Enterprise.

LACK OF FRESH AIR

Causes Rundown Condition. How to Keep Strong.

Statistics prove that the death rate is very much greater in the winter months than in summer, and that the lack of fresh air is largely responsible for this condition.

If the system becomes rundown, blood thin and watery, circulation poor, no appetite, don't dose with drugs, but take our delicious cod liver and iron tonic Vinol, not a patent medicine, as everything in its is named on every package and if it does not give you a hearty appetite, enrich the blood and create strength, we will return your money; that shows our faith in Vinol.

A case has just come to our attention from Knoxville, Tenn. Miss Carrie King says: "For three years I was all run-down, weak, had no appetite and after all that time I am glad to say Vinol has brought back my health and strength."

SIX READ OUT OF PROGRESSIVE PARTY

Denounced as Traitors by Massachusetts State Committee

Boston, Jan. 12.—The six Progressive representatives who deserted their party candidate for speaker of the house and made possible the re-election of Grafton D. Cushing, Republican, were formally read out of the Progressive party at the annual meeting of the Progressive state committee.

Resolutions denouncing the six as "traitors" were adopted after many speeches of condemnation.

Matthew Hale was re-elected chairman of the state committee, as were the other officers.

GOOD AND BAD IN BOYS

Most Susceptible to Influence at Age of Sixteen Years

Boston, Jan. 12.—"Citizen or Criminal, Which?" was the topic of the afternoon at the Young Men's Sunday Forum of the Y. M. C. A.. Frank E. Lakey of the English high school staff explained that the average boy is more susceptible to influence at certain times of the day and of the year than at others; that a boy is at his best from 10 to 11 each day and at his worst from 3 to 4 o'clock.

More truancy is noted in March and October than at other periods of the year. A boy is at his best in January and February. A boy is most susceptible to influence either good or bad at the age of 16.

The causes for criminality, he said, are home conditions, which lack sympathy of youth; insufficient playgrounds, newspaper accounts of crime and the lack of understanding of boy nature on the part of the church.

Rockland, Mass., Jan. 12.—The state board of health has condemned the Rockland lockup. It finds the lockup is poorly ventilated and poorly heated, that the cells are like dungeons, and that it is no place for prisoners.

WIDOW IS SUMMONED

Body of Ex-Sheriff Who Died Last September to Be Exhumed

Torrington, Conn., Jan. 12.—The body of former borough sheriff William P. Palmer, who died suddenly last September, will be exhumed to determine the cause of death, according to an announcement by Coroner Herman, who, with State Attorney Warner, has been conducting an investigation. An autopsy will be held.

Palmer's widow, who moved to Philadelphia shortly after his death, has been summoned to appear at the inquest.

Palmer was taken suddenly ill at the factory where was employed, while eating his lunch, which he had brought from home. He died within half an hour. The attending physician and medical examiner ascribed the cause of death to angina pectoris.

NATION WIDE CAMPAIGN

Suffragists Plan "Demonstrations" Which Will Awaken Country

Washington, Jan. 12.—Plans for a vigorous nation-wide campaign to secure a constitutional amendment giving suffrage to women were outlined by the Congressional Union for Women's Suffrage.

The program includes a schedule of "demonstrations" that will, according to the suffrage leaders, "awaken the country as never before to a realization of the issue and if necessary transfer the majority in congress to a party that will stand for suffrage."

The first of the "demonstrations" will be held in Washington the last day of this month when working women from various states will wait upon President Wilson and urge him to support a suffrage amendment.

which we call the "Kingdom of God." The simple, direct, rational Christianity taught by Jesus, freed from all the irrationalities and inconsistencies imposed upon it by later adherents, is what the modern world needs as its great source of moral impulse.

In closing Mr. Hudson urged all who have at heart the welfare of the community to help make the church more strong and vital.

In view of the approach of its 275th anniversary, Mr. Hudson announced that on next Sunday morning he would preach upon "The First Parish in Quincy."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

It was the semi-annual communion day at the First Church of Christ Scientist and Alpha hall was filled with an attendance of 400. There was no session of the Sunday school.

CHRIST CHURCH.

Nearly 800 people attended the Sunday services at Christ Episcopal church, the attendance at the morning and evening services being about equally divided. In the morning Rev. Richard E. Armstrong, rector, preached on "Religion and community needs."

He said the great asset to the community is good citizenship, and that it cannot be obtained without strong religious forces. There are various methods used to make good citizenship such as material problems, social betterment, abolishment of poverty, education, laws, good government, but all fail in their purpose unless the underlying element of religion is present. They are the machinery which produce good citizenship but the power revolving that machinery is religion.

The evening service was for all the guilds and clubs connected with the church, and Rev. Dr. H. E. W. Fosbroke of the Episcopal Theological school at Cambridge was the preacher. His text was "All in one spirit are striving together for the faith of the gospel." He said what was needed is work in a community way.

The music at both services was by the regular choir with J. Frank Wrigley organist. The purpose of the day was to inspire all that attended to continue and no change in the regular service was made, the intention being to show infrequent church goers what the regular services on Sunday were.

QUINCY POINT CHURCH.

Rev. Stephen C. Lang of the Washington Street Congregational church preached to the largest congregation on Sunday since he assumed the pastorate several months ago. At the morning service there were 165 present, a somewhat larger number than usually attend and in the evening about the same number were present. The Sunday school attendance was very large, 206 being present.

Rev. Mr. Lang preached in the morning on "One Master" and in the evening on "The plumb line." In both sermons he emphasized the need of church attendance, and how it best regulates affairs in the community.

At the morning service special music was given, the violin soloist being Miss Marion Lee Johnson of Malden. Selections were rendered by the boys and girls choir and the anthem was sung by the adult choir with J. W. Hendry as the soloist.

UNIVERSALIST CHURCH.

At the Universalist church on Sunday a good sized audience listened to the interesting services. The pastor Rev. Merrill C. Ward gave an eloquent sermon and the solos by Miss Edith Hyland and J. Edward Greene were most pleasing.

At the Sunday School session the election of officers for the ensuing year took place, the folowing being elected: superintendent, E. Bartlett Spooner; assistant superintendent, Freeman Hyland; treasurer, Miss Marion Wright; and secretary Mrs. Harriet Lombard. The treasurer reported all bills paid and a balance in the treasury.

No bread could be more delicious, wholesome and satisfying. Take home a loaf and you will be convinced.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

The Rev. James A. Matheson of the First Presbyterian church preached to two large and appreciative congregations that filled the large audience room to its greatest capacity. The day will be long remembered as a "red letter" day. Both sermons were intensely interesting; the music splendid and interest marked. Everybody-came-to-church and everybody-wants-to-keep-coming.

The thought of the morning was "Fundamental reasons why everybody should go to church." It is God's appointed place to meet man for worship. The first church was under the dome of heaven in Eden when God walked with our first parents in the cool of the day.

Turn a few pages of history and we see Abram building an altar under the oaks of Mamre. Abraham meets God while under the same oaks, sitting in his tent door. Men built shrines and temples, thus we have Jacob's pillar, the great tabernacle and Solomon's temple.

Christ recognized the synagogue with his presence and emphasized it by his teaching. The magnificent buildings of today are the development of this church idea. In all it is the place where God and man meet for worship.

Man is religious by nature. He had his individual, family, tribal and national Gods. The Athenians would not make a mistake so they erected an altar to the unknown god. Rachael's religious nature caused her to steal her father's gods when leaving her country with Jacob. Because of this nature man must worship something, therefore his gods of wood and stone. A living object is necessary so, a sacred cow. Set times are placed and we have the great Jewish feasts and the Chinese temple of the sun. He must trust something besides self so "These be thy gods that brought thee out of Egypt." He looks us and elevates his idol. "He lifts up his eyes unto the hills:" Jesus says, "I, if I be lifted up." This nature leads him into the beyond. The Indian has his happy hunting grounds; some believe in the transmigration of souls. John gives the christian in Revelation his picture of the future.

The church needs men. Man is the foundation of everything. The army has its recruiting officer. Industries need men for every position. The world's good and evil forces must have men in order to exist. The great forces of the world are consuming men. The church is no exception; it must have men. Their presence is a necessity. Their different personalities, their greatest and best powers. Their thinking, feeling, acting men. The church needs every man and can give him something to do. The pastor invited everyone who wanted church work to come to him and he would supply them with it.

Men need the church. There is a mutual relationship existing between the church and men. One needs the other. We need a home, friends, the best to be found; these are found in the church.

We need its good men, never mind the bad ones. We need its unselfish, its strong, its noble men; let us make all men as these. In all spheres we take the best for examples why make the church an exception and take the worst. We forget the thorn that pierces our hand because of the beauty of the rose. We need its gospel of "God so loved the world"; its cheer in "the Master is come and calleth for thee"; its help of the "give ye them to eat." We need the Christ who is more than merely good" better than and "example of morality." We must have its Bible, the book for all classes and conditions. There are modern Jehoiakins, skilful with penknife, who try to destroy the Book piecemeal and discredit the Christ till the Christian today cries with despair, "they have taken away my Lord and I know not where they have laid him." But God will reunite with emphasis the facts of Christianity. The church is the greatest institution in the world today; in territory, for it covers the world; in numbers, for all claim it, directly or indirectly; in influences, for it reaches all classes. It is the greatest "trust of time" for "there is no other name" whereby we can be saved. Men cannot afford to neglect the church.

The Sabbath school and various classes connected with it were well attended and also the Junior and Senior Christian Endeavor societies held interesting meetings which were largely attended.

SWEDISH LUTHERAN.

The attendance at the Swedish Lutheran church on Granite street on Sunday was rivaled only by the numbers which thronged the edifice on Christmas morning. In the morning there were 300 or more present and in the evening about 150.

Rev. Leander K. Hokenson, pastor, preached in the morning on "Our Relations to the Kingdom of God" and in the evening on "Our heavenly calling."

Miss Emma Witting gave an organ solo in the morning and Fritz Swanson a vocal solo, and in the evening the soloist was Miss Sigried Lundquist.

A very substantial offering for the benefit of the Heathen Missions was taken at the morning service.

SWEDISH BAPTIST.

The attendance at the services of the Swedish Baptist church Sunday were very large, especially in the morning when the pastor Rev. Paul Hallin gave an eloquent sermon on "A cause for great joy," which with the usual good music, combined to make a service inspiring and uplifting to all. The spirit of the "Go-to-church" movement was very apparent and it is hoped will be continued on the Sundays to come.

The Christian Endeavorers met at 6.45 o'clock and had a pleasant meeting with "Prayer" as the evening's topic. The sermon on "Soul Rest" given at the evening service by the pastor was excellent and brought to a fitting close "Everybody-go-to-church" Sunday.

HALL PLACE M. E.

"Everybody-go-to-church Sunday was observed at the morning service at Hall Place M. E. church, with splendid results, the Auditorium being practically filled.

The pastor took for his text Eph. 2-8—"For by grace are ye saved through faith: and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God." Mr. Martin spoke on the thought of "God's" love for the sinner and what that love led Him to do, and our relation to that which God did." Mr. Martin preached a plain, interesting and helpful sermon, giving a good deal of food for thought. Miss Helen Martin sang "The Lord is my Shepherd," and the choir rendered "Come, Holy Spirit." Mrs. Martha Loud, the oldest member of the church was present as were also a number of the other older members and several Civil War Veterans.

Sunday school met at 12.15. "The roll of honor"" a contest between the classes was started, and was led by Miss Maud Nichol's class, Miss Burke's class and Miss Francis' class. The contest is based on lesson study, attendance and conduct, new scholars and collection, not on the amount contributed but the number of scholars in the class contributing.

Mrs. J. M. Francis led the Epworth League devotional service at 6.15, on the Spworth Herald, this being "Epworth Herald day."

The pastor preached from the text found in St. John 10:10—"I am come that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly."

Monday evening the Sunday School board will meet in the vestry.

The Junior League will meet Friday afternoon at 3.45. Mrs. D. H. McNeil has charge.

Prayer meeting Friday at 7.30 P. M. followed by choir rehearsal and practice for the "Old Folks' Concert."

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

Crowded beyond its seating capacity the Wollaston Congregational Church entered heartily into the services of Everybody-Go-To-Church Sunday. Automobiles were utilized in getting the elderly people to the services. The quartet was aided by additional voices in rendering the anthems "Prepare ye the way of the Lord" and "Sing O Heavens." Mrs. Long and Mr. Everett sang very effectively the duet, "The Lord is my Light."

The church had been very effectively decorated by Mrs. Wiley and Mrs. Murray. The pastor, Rev. Dr. Sneath spoke upon "The rational appeal of the church." He selected as his text the words of Christ, "My church" and emphasized by facts from the year 1913 the thought that the church is not waning, but is doing a magnificent work, and that it is worth while for everyone to have a part. He made an appeal for continued and renewed interest in the church and its work.

The great need of today is religion, because of the severe ordeal through which we must pass in sustaining character. He gave statistics showing that the Protestant church of the United States gave last year sixteen and one-half millions to foreign missions in addition to that which the Roman Catholic and other sects gave and that a round hundred millions of dollars were donated to the work of the churches in the United States.

Further that 350 million dollars were given to education and 100 million to philanthropy in the last year, ninety percent of which came from the churches of the United States.

He spoke of the work which the church is doing for the youth today and put stress upon the need of moral and religious training in this generation to the end that the next may be moral and religious. It is worth while to have a part in the great work which the church of today is seeking to do.

The annual church supper for the members of the church and the annual business meeting of the church will be held on Wednesday evening. At this meeting the official action will be taken up on the new church project. A letter of information has been sent to the members of the church and congregation.

At the midweek meeting on Thursday evening the topic for consideration will be "Lessons from the life of Peter."

At the session of the Sunday school Herbert W. Marshall read his thirty-seventh annual report as secretary and treasurer of the school. It showed a healthy condition of the school.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

"Everybody-go-to-Church" Sunday found the Wollaston Baptist church crowded to its fullest capacity. The sermon was appropriate for the day, the subject being, "Loving the church." The pastor, Rev. Joseph Walther, spoke of the good done by the church, merely as an institution, and gave many reasons why we, as ardent Christians, should support and love the church. The musical service was excellent, consisting of "Prelude" Moir, "Melody," Grieg, "Marche Romaine" Gounoud, played by the organist Mrs. eGorge K. Drew, and Buck's "O Zion, that tellest glad tidings," by the chorus choir.

The Sunday school and the junior Endeavor meetings were largely attended. Miss Grace Schermerhorn led the Y. P. S. C. E. service. Another big congregation attended the song service at 7 o'clock when the pastors subject was "Come and see."

The annual business meeting of the Sunday school will be held Tuesday evening at 745

The Nearer and Farther Lights society wil meet with Miss Gertrude Barbour on Tuesday evening

The pastors class will meet Wednesday afternoon at 4.

At the Thursday evening meeting Harold Thomas will give an account of the Student Volunteer convention.

Young people of this church will have charge Friday evening of the service at the Merrimac Street Mission, Boston, leaving Wollaston on the 7.18 train.

WOLLASTON METHODIST.

Everybody-go-to church Sunday found large and attentive audience at all services. The theme of the sermon by the pastor Rev. Geo. M. Bailey in the morning was, "Man, His Place and Importance."

"Decision Day" was observed during the Sunday School hour, and a large number signified a desire to become Christians and become identified with the church.

In the evening there was special music by the choir and a solo by Miss Marguerite L. Holbrook.

President Murlin of Boston University preached from the following text: Acts, 1:26—"And the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch."

What were they called before the name Christians was applied to them? First they were called "followers of the way." Then the term "learners or disciples" was used with Jesus the great teacher. Out of this grew the term "doers of the word," which is the natural sequence of following and learning. We always endeavor to do the thing we think. Psychologists say that every thought has its motor accompaniment, or every thought is expressed in action. Lastly they were witnesses—the outcome of following, learning and doing—which are inseparable. People are called Christians because they are following Christ, showing by transformed lives and conversation to those about that they are worthy of the name.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

The congregations at both the morning and the twilight hour services were large. The scripture readings, the responsive readings from the psalms, the hymas were all in keeping with "Everybody-Go-To-Church Sunday."

In the morning Rev. Carl G. Horst preached from the text "The fear of the Lord is the chief part of knowledge."—Proverbs 1-7. He said: "Man cannot find peace, until he rests in God. Hungry hearts vastly outnumber hungry mouths. To see men and women suffering from want of food is sad; but sadder still are broken spirits, crushed hearts, unfulfilled hopes, stunted natures and the cry more heartrending even than the cry for bread 'O God for a man to rise in me that the man I am may cease to be.'"

At the vesper service a fine musical program was rendered by the Beethoven male quartet of Boston and the pastor gave an address on "What every good citizen in Wollaston ought to do." He mentioned three things: 1. Attend Church regularly.. 2. Identify himself with some church. 3. Help support the Church of his choice.

At the meeting of the Ladies' Aid Alliance in the vestry, Wednesday, at 2.30 P. M., the Rev. Charles E. Park of the First church in Boston will speak on "The regeneration of our churches." Mr. Park is a very able man and the public is invited to hear this gifted preacher.

The New England Associate Alliance will hold its mid-winter meeting at Winchester, Thursday, at 10 A. M. The speakers in the afternon are Miss Jane of the Canadian Northwest and Rev. Lee S. McCollester, D. D., dean of the Crane Theological school, Tufts College.

The beautiful flowers that graced the chancel were the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Baker in memory of Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Merrill, the mother of Mrs. Baker.

The monthly meeting of the Wollaston Unitarian Club will be held Tuesday, Jan. 13. Dinner at 6.30. Hon. Michael J. Murray will speak on Our courts and criminal procedure." Judge Murray is chairman of the State committee on investigation of drunkenness in the commonwealth, and is a member of the busiest criminal court in the United States. Judge Albert E. Avery of the Quincy court is the specially invited guest of the club.

There will be a meeting of the Choir guild at the home of Miss Katherine Reed, 93 South Central avenue, Friday at 7.30 P. M.

The Rev. Richard W. Boynton of Buffalo will conduct the daily noon services at King's Chapel, Boston, this week.

A special missionary meeting with addresses on the "Liberal faith in distant lands" by Dr. Charles W. Eliot, Prof. Francis G. Peabody and the Rev. Louis C. Cornish will be held in King's Chapel, Boston, Sunday evening at 7.30 o'clock.

The annual business meeting of the church on Monday, Jan. 26, will be preceded by a dinner to which all legal members of the Church are invited.

PARK AND DOWNS.

The beautiful Sabbath morning, its crisp winter air, its bright sunshine, brought out a house full of worshipers this "Go-to-Church-day" at the Park and Downs congregational church, to pay their reverence and homage to God and thereby show their belief in God and his commands.

The pastor took for his text Psalm 122-1 "I was glad when they said unto me let us go into the house of the Lord." People show what they chiefly value by those things which they share with the objects of their adoration. Religious men share with their God their chief riches. In a pastoral age one lamb in ten was offered in sacrifice. A dove, a bullock; of what a man had he gave. We have standardized this gift. It is part of the great democracy of religion that each man is invited to give what all possess.

The most valuable thing in the world is time—and yet the most common. A little space of time clipped from eternity is the gift to each life. It is the time that is given to us that makes valuable or worthless those things which we possess or those things which we do. The best thought of the world unites in the belief that this time is given to us by an omnipotent personal power which we call God.

And men have been gracious enough to give back to this God one seventh of this gift as a token of confidence and obedience. So after you have spent yourself for six days, have become wearied of the din of traffic and the noise of factories, and the ceaseless rush of hurrying feet, comes a pause over this vast mechanism, a solemn hush settles over the noisiest city, and men and women move quietly into their temples. Noblest institution that man has devised; do not all hearts rejoice in it?

If all men and women do not accede to it is it because the principle is wrong? Is it not because this noble institution has been split up by selfish and narrow souls into the instrument of warring bodies and self-seeking organizations?

Is it not because it has been buried miles deep in legend and dogma in which the common mind is not interested and which it does not understand? It is not because it has made complex the simple life and the simple teaching of the Master? True, men's use of the Sabbath has been faulty as all of man's works are faulty. Yet the Sabbath is necessary to our humanity, worship is necessary.

If the methods of worship are imperfect then it becomes the duty of those who see these imperfections to come in among us and by their presence and power change the hard surface of our organization into soft mellow and productive soil. It is the duty of all to worship. At the evening service was given a continuance of the lectures that have becomes so popular.

Y. M. C. A. TEAMS WIN

Defeat Beverly and the Norfolk Social Club

The Quincy Y. M. C. A. basket ball teams had two very easy games Saturday night, winning by large scores. The second team hung up a record score, making 80 points to their opponents 1; this one point being made on a foul called on Quincy in the first half of the game.

The Beverly team started out to make things interesting scoring the first goal, but after the initial spurt there was nothing to it but Quincy. Trask and Price seem to have recovered their shooting eyes the former getting 8 and the latter 6 goals from the floor. Rich had lots of hard luck but at that he scored 4 goals. The work of Flanders stands out in good shape as he held his man to one goal while scoring 3 himself. The final score was 43 to 10.

The second team game was a farce from the start. The Norfolk Social Club of Braintre was supposed to have a basket-ball team but evidently it was only a "paper" team as the players did not know even the rudiments of the game. Every man on the local team scored at least one goal, while Bishop had 16 to his credit. Al Thomas made 9 in the first half while Kemp, Croucher and Shirley each scored 5 goals.

—Conviction grows that the present administration in Washington had a good press agent. The chortle is duly noted by the people, without doubt.—Barre Vt. Times.

ANOTHER IDEA TO AID FARMERS

Finding an Outlet For Products Aim of New Organization.

EXPERTS FORMULATE PLANS

Agriculturists, Shippers, Commission Merchants and Consumers Interested In Movement Which Is Sequel to Recent Conference In Philadelphia. Will Investigate the Middleman.

Farm experts, transportation authorities and big shippers in all sections of the United States are being consulted by Charles E. Calwell and the members of his committee regarding the proposed Philadelphia farm bureau which is about to be started. The bureau idea is a direct outgrowth of the agricultural conference and corn exhibition which was held in Philadelphia recently. It was part of a country wide agitation to decrease the cost of living, render the farm more efficient, provide a sure outlet for the product of the agriculturist and bring about generally a closer relation between him and the city dweller.

All parties, farmers, shippers, commission merchants and consumers, were represented at the conference, and, although there was a considerable clamor for the total elimination of the middleman, the general opinion seemed to point to the conclusion that this individual was a very necessary cog in the machine. The better plan, it was decided, was to have the bureau investigate him thoroughly and vouch for him to the farmer, so that the latter would have more confidence in him and would be reasonably sure that it is safe to forward perishable products to him.

What an Expert Says.

Among the experts who have been consulted concerning the formation of the bureau is Professor A. B. Ross of Bedford county, Pa. He has been suggested by Mr. Calwell as director of the bureau. In a recent letter to Mr. Calwell, Professor Ross discussed the functions of the farm bureau. His letter is in part as follows:

The Philadelphia farm bureau should co-ordinate closely with outside shipping groups. It ought not to be asked to pay expenses properly chargeable against the product shipped. Its purposes are an adequate supply, measures to secure wholesomeness and palatability of food and such standardization, both in quality and grades, as will make for stable markets.

We face a condition, not a theory. The initiative must be with Philadelphia. She must offer the inducement to eliminate waste and stimulate production. Part of the expense can be charged against the produce from the start. There should be a marketing charge to help sustain the bureau. The cost of inspection, where called for, should be borne by the offending party, whether producer or consignee.

There are honest commission men and many dishonest commission men, and, what is equally bad, there are many careless and inefficient commission men. This condition results in uncertainty that today is largely responsible for waste and limited production. I speak from knowledge of the facts.

Give Confidence to Farmers.

Give the attraction of increased confidence to the farmers and the production will increase with surprising promptness.

The bureau should have one man to devote his whole time to the propaganda and collateral work of the truck and fruit industries, a man capable of handling problems of the proper carriers, systems of packing, caring for and handling produce, cold storage, etc. Another man should devote himself entirely to marketing problems—that is, the finding of the markets for the stuff we grow and keeping in touch with the country districts so as to prevent shortage and overplus of supply. A glut in the market is just as much waste as if the stuff were allowed to rot on the farm.

There should be an inspector in charge of complaints. The mayor ought to appoint him and the city pay him on the ground of conservation of health, but toward his support a charge ought to be made for inspection collected from the complainant who has improperly complained or the shipper who has overgraded his stuff or shipped it carelessly.

By far the greater part of the nation's food supply comes from small farms. Much of it is handled by hucksters. Much of it is shipped in such shape that waste is sure to occur. Practically all of this could be saved, says Professor Ross. Many farmers are prepared to produce heavily of the coarser food supplies—potatoes, cabbage, turnips—and many farmers' wives and children would be glad of the opportunity to realize the potential profit from small areas of truck, fruit and fruit products, butter and eggs if a certain outlet for such production at a reasonable price could be found.

OUR LATEST BATTLESHIP.

Champagne to Christen the Oklahoma, Though State Is "Dry."

The battleship Oklahoma, which will be christened in March, will cost approximately $15,000,000 when ready for service. It has a displacement of 27,500 tons and an armament of ten fourteen-inch guns, twenty-one five-inch guns, four three-pounders, two one-pounders, two three-inch field-pieces, two machine guns and four twenty-inch torpedo tubes. Its length will be 575 feet, with a beam of ninety-five feet, the portion below the water level being twenty-eight feet and six inches. The battleship will have sixty-three officers and 1,029 men.

The battleship will be christened by the governor's daughter, Miss Lorena Cruce, and, regardless of the fact that Oklahoma is a prohibition state, a bottle of real wine will be used.

WIRELESS WAVES.

Puzzling Problems With Which Scientists Have to Contend.

What we don't know about wireless telegraphy is still by far the larger part of that science. Practical efforts to use this means of communication are constantly hampered by difficulties that cannot be overcome or only partially overcome by clumsy makeshifts because they are not understood.

For example, the characterization of the waves used in wireless telegraphy as artificial is justified because the ether is in a state of constant pulsation with waves of enormous length about whose origin we know nothing or next to nothing. Some of them are due undoubtedly to lightning, but they are continuously rolling in on antennae properly tuned when there is no thunderstorm within thousands of miles. It has been suggested that they are of extra terrestrial origin, perhaps the result of electrical disturbances in the sun. Some ingenious speculators have even attributed them to the Martians or some other of our planetary neighbors.

But the fact is that we don't know where they come from or how they are generated. They manifest themselves in the shape of troublesome noises in the telephone receivers at wireless telegraph stations. Another puzzling question, perhaps of more practical importance to the wireless worker, is the action of the weather on his trains of waves. When these signals have long distances to travel the weather often plays havoc with them in ways as yet not well understood. The different carrying capacity of the ether in the daytime and at night is another practical problem still awaiting definite solution.—New York Post.

FLYING BULLETS.

Going Very Fast, They Leave Air Waves and Eddies Behind Them.

If a photograph of a speeding bullet could be taken the print would probably show a space like a body of water marked by what looked like speeding water bugs, each leaving a ripple in its wake. Photographs of projectiles have been snapped in time of peace, but it is doubtful if the camera ever caught one as it sped on its mission of death. A bullet speeding at the rate of 3,000 feet a second, which is more than 2,000 miles an hour, makes a great disturbance in the atmosphere and creates air waves, which, of course, are invisible to the naked eye.

If you draw a stick through the water it causes little eddies and waves to trail behind it. The faster you draw the stick the more waves and the wider the angle will it leave. The slower the stick is drawn the fewer waves. Just so the bullet. If it is traveling slowly no waves can be photographed, as apparently there are none. It is only objects traveling at a terrific speed that create any appreciable air waves.

Photographs of a bullet going at a rate of speed less than 1,200 feet a second show no air waves at all. This is an interesting scientific discovery. But anything cutting through the air at a greater rate than this disturbs the atmosphere to such great extent that air waves are formed and can be photographed.—New York Sun.

A Wonderful Bird.

One day a wonderful bird tapped at the window of Mrs. Nansen's (wife of the famous arctic explorer) home at Christiania. Instantly the window was opened, and in another moment she covered the little messenger with kisses and caresses. The carrier pigeon had been away from the cottage thirty long months, but it had not forgotten the way home. It brought a note from Nansen, stating that all was going well with him and his expedition in the polar region. Nansen had fastened a message to the bird and turned it loose. The frail courier darted out into the blizzardly air. It flew like an arrow over a thousand miles of frozen waste and then sped forward over another thousand miles of ocean and plains and forests and one morning entered the window of the waiting mistress and delivered the message which she had been awaiting so anxiously.

Caught It.

A man with a very red face met a friend on the street and the following conversation took place:

"You look warm."

"Yes; been chasing a hat."

"Did your hat blow off?"

"It wasn't my hat! It belonged to someone else—there was a pretty girl under it."

"Did you catch it?"

"I should say I did. My wife saw me chasing it!"—New York American.

REBEL TROOPS HOLD OJINAGA

Now In Control of Large Section of Northern Mexico

FEDERALS CROSS RIO GRANDE

Six Generals and Twenty-Eight Hundred Soldiers Surrender to United States Border Patrol—Women and Children Refugees Are In State of Great Distress

Presidio, Tex., Jan. 12.—Twenty-eight hundred Mexican federal soldiers, six Mexican generals, 200,000 rounds of ammunition, two cannon, four large field pieces and 1500 civilian refugees are in the custody of the United States army border patrol as the result of the federal army's evacuation of Ojinaga, Mex., its flight to American territory and the occupation of the Mexican village by General Villa's rebel forces.

The distress of the refugees is intense. They have scant food and no shelter. Men, women, children, chickens and cattle are packed together in a space covering several acres. About them are scattered all their goods and baggage.

Urgent requests for the immediate removal of the soldiers and refugees to some other place were sent by Major McNamee to the war department through Brigadier General Bliss.

Other results of the rebel successes which place Villa's army in undisputed control of a vast section of northern Mexico are:

Federal Generals Mercado, Castro, Orpinai, Romero, Aduno and Landa are in custody of the United States troops awaiting their disposition by the war department.

Lack of ammunition, said Mercado, forced the evacuation. He said that when the retreat was ordered his soldiers had an average of only seventy-eight cartridges.

Camped in Ojinaga, for the possession of which he had been fighting less than twenty-four hours previously, Villa started the work of establishing rebel government.

After the confusion incident to the evacuation of Ojinaga by one army and its occupation by another the battlefield opposite Presidio at daylight revealed a scene of desolation.

Scores of women camp followers had lost their children in the scramble and were crying piteously in the corral provided for them on the American side.

Others were without clothing sufficient to protect them from the cold and all were drenched from wading through the river.

Suddenly made guardians of an entire foreign garrison, generals and all, which fled to American soil for asylum, the border patrol considered what was to be done with the Mexican soldiers.

CLEAN OUT WHOLE STORE

Thieves Get Away With About $25,000 Worth of Optical Goods

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 12.—Practically the entire stock of the Andrew J. Lloyd branch store, only about 100 yards from the Harvard square police station, was taken away Sunday by thieves, who gained entrance through a rear window. It is said the stock could not have been worth less than $20,000 or $25,000.

The store was well equipped with extensive lines of high-grade optical goods and also carried a considerable line of small jewelry. It is believed the thieves drove a team into the narrow alleyway behind the store and went through it thoroughly.

A WOMAN'S CONFESSION

Says Her Brother Murdered Man Missing Twenty-Two Years

Columbus, Ind., Jan. 12.—Relatives of William Scharstak, who disappeared from his home near Waymansville, twenty-two years ago, have just learned that he was murdered.

A woman of the neighborhood confessed on her deathbed that her brother confessed on his deathbed, six years ago, that he killed the missing man while in a quarrel and buried the body in his barn to conceal the crime.

A search in the barn will be made in an effort to find the skeleton of the missing man.

"THERAPIST" ARRESTED

Suspicion That One of His Patients Was Victim of Poison

Corning, N. Y., Jan. 12.—Following the sudden death of Miss Artie Torpy, 27 years old, in his office, Joseph Sparks, who styles himself a "mechano-therapist," was arrested here at the order of District Attorney Stowell, charged with practising medicine without a license. This charge may be changed as the result of the investigation in progress.

An autopsy, ordered by Coroner Smith, led to the belief that death resulted from an overdose of poison.

Fleet Goes to Sea

Norfolk, Jan. 12.—Bound for Culebra, Porto Rico, the battleships Wyoming, Florida, Delaware and South Carolina passed out from Cape Henry. They were followed by the torpedo boats Jouett, Jenkins, Jarvis, Fanning and Beale.

BARGE CAP AIN ACCUSED

Thought to Have Murdered Woman and Dismembered Her Body

New Bedford, Mass., Jan. 12.—Charles Matroni, captain of the barge Snipe, was held without bail for a hearing Jan. 21 on the charge of the murder of Annie Welsh, a mill worker.

Louis Therrien, who called the attention of the police to the crime, was held as a witness and was committed to jail in default of $100 sureties. His daughter Flora was held on a technical charge.

According to the police, Matroni and the Welsh woman met in the back room of a saloon, the woman later accompanying the captain to the Snipe.

When the police boarded the barge they found the woman's body dismembered. The police theory is that the woman tried to rob Matroni and he struck her a fatal blow, then became frightened and intended to dispose of her body in the waters of the harbor.

GUILTY OF MUTINY

Seven Sailors Convicted by Federal Jury In Delaware Court

Wilmington, Del., Jan. 12.—Seven members of the crew of the bark Magna Reva, on trial in the United State court here on a charge of mutiny, were found guilty by a jury. A recommendation of mercy was included in the verdict. Sentence will be passed later.

At the trial the captain and mate testified that they were seized by members of the crew and held in their cabins for some time and were released only on the promise that they would navigate the vessel back to the Delaware capes.

The accused members of the crew charged that the captain and mate had been cruel, that much of the food given them was unfit to eat, and that there was a scarcity of fresh water.

TRUST REGULATION WILL BE TAKEN UP

Holds Chief Position In Both Branches of Congress

Washington, Jan. 12.—Congress started today upon the second stage of the long regular session, with the calendars of both houses crowded with legislation of varied and far-reaching character.

Refreshed by nearly three weeks of vacation, senators and representatives returned to Washington keenly interested in the prospective developments of the next few months.

Regulation of the trusts, through further corrective and prohibitory legislation, will hold much of the attention of both houses from the start. The president will reach Washington tomorrow.

Amherst College Gets $100,000 Gift From an Anonymous Donor

Amherst, Mass., Jan. 12.—A gift of $100,000 from an anonymous donor was announced by President Meiklejohn of Amherst college last night.

It is to be used for founding the George Daniel Oles professorship of economics, in honor of the dean of the college, who is now abroad on leave of absence.

It is the wish of the donor that the holder of the new chair be provided with proper equipment for study and teaching, and if additional funds are required for this purpose he will contribute them.

RAILWAY STRIKE QUIET

South African Government Has Situation Well In Hand

Johannesburg, Jan. 12.—The situation with respect to the railway strike is more favorable. Martial law has not been proclaimed and conditions are quiet both here and at Pretoria.

The government appears to retain full control, and the mass meeting at Cape Town was unable to agree to a resolution, either for or against the strike. This points to the continued loyalty of the Cape men, which is the pivot of the situation. Restricted railway service continues at all points.

WATCH DRIVEN INTO SIDE

Man Dies From Wounds Received During a Rabbit Hunt

Rutland, Vt., Jan. 12.—Wounds received during a rabbit hunt caused the death of Frederick Platt.

Platt, who was a graduate from Dartmouth in 1912, was hunting on Mendon mountain a week ago with a party of friends. One of them, Wilfred Beane, slipped while aiming at a rabbit and the full charge of shot struck a watch worn by Platt, driving it into his side.

Egg Dealers Fined $500

New York, Jan. 12.—A fine of $500 was imposed on the James Van Dyke company, egg dealers, on their plea of guilty to selling cold storage eggs as fresh. It is the first conviction of its kind in this state.

A Story Showing How a Fortune Hung in the Balance

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

"John," said Mary MacKnight to her husband when he came home from business, "what do you suppose?"

"What do I suppose? Why, I suppose I'm to have a good dinner. I'm certainly hungry."

"Aunt Cynthia is coming to live with us. You know she was at our house till father died. Then she went to live with Ellen Stone."

"What's the matter with Ellen Stone?"

"Aunt Cynthia thinks she doesn't care for her except for what she can get out of her. Miss Stone is very extravagant—runs up bills and has them sent to Aunt Cynthia. You know Aunt Cynthia is very well off."

"I didn't till you told me. How do you know which is at fault, your aunt or her niece?"

"I don't. I have never seen Ellen Stone."

"What are you going to do about taking your aunt in?"

"That depends upon you."

"No, it doesn't; decide it for yourself."

Mrs. MacKnight was one of those women with whom any one could get on. She was kind hearted and would like very much to give her aunt a home. Mrs. Cynthia Withers, a widow, would pay a good round sum for her board, and that would be a benefit to Mrs. MacKnight, who, on her husband's salary, found it difficult to make ends meet. John MacKnight would rather have had Old Nick come to reside in his house, but he knew that pecuniarily it would relieve the strain on his wife, and he consented for her sake.

Mrs. Withers came and seemed much relieved to get out of Miss Stone's clutches. The old lady was a good deal broken down, and Mary MacKnight devoted herself to building her up. In this she succeeded, so far as any one could succeed, having a soothing effect upon her and taking great pains to minister to her comfort. The aunt had been much attached to Mary while the latter was a child, and it seemed now that she could not get on with any one else.

Mrs. Withers had a son who was of a roving disposition. He was not fitted to take care of his mother nor would she have been able to live with him, owing to her nervous condition. A year after she came to the MacKnights, she received news that her son had died abroad. After his death she said to Mary:

"I'm going to make a new will. While I was living with Ellen Stone I think she must have hypnotized me, for one day when I was ill she asked me to sign a paper, and I did as she bid me. She had provided two witnesses, and this makes me think that the paper I signed was a will. If so I have no doubt that it cut off my own son, to whom I had left all my property except a legacy to you. When I got better I asked Ellen to let me see the paper I had signed, and she said that, since my recovery, it was of no consequence; fearing that I was going to die, she had simply had me sign instructions with regard to my funeral and giving her authority to draw the necessary funds. When I insisted on seeing what I had signed she said she had burned it."

The new will executed by Mrs. Withers left Mary MacKnight all her property. The aunt showed the document to her heir and told her that in case of her death she would find it in an antique writing desk in her room in which she kept all her papers.

Not long after the execution of this will Mrs. Withers was advised by her physician to go to a sanitarium, where she would escape the noises of a city and have such trained attendance as she required. She did not wish to go, nor did her niece wish her to go. Though she was a great care, Mary had become accustomed to minister to her wants, and since she was Mary's only living near blood relative Mary had grown every year more attached to her. Mary went with her to the sanitarium and regretfully left her there.

It was hoped that the invalid would after a rest be so restored as to warrant her return, but she gradually became more dependent on doctors and nurses and remained in the sanitarium as long as she lived.

One day in February John MacKnight put his wife on a steamer and sent her to the Bermuda islands. The winter had been long, and Mary had not stood up under it very well. While she was away John slept at home, taking his meals outside.

It happened that the day Mary returned, her husband was unable to meet her at the dock, being detained at his place of business by a matter of importance. Mary arrived at home about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and, having a duplicate key with her, let herself into the house. Going at once upstairs she was about to enter her room when she heard something that sounded like the rustle of skirts in another chamber formerly occupied by her aunt and which had been kept just as the old lady had left it in expectation that she would return to it.

Mary entered the room and there, endeavoring to conceal herself behind the window curtains, was a woman. Seeing that she was discovered the intruder came forth and stood the picture of misery.

"What are you doing in my house?" asked Mrs. MacKnight, with severity.

"Let me go; please let me go! I have stolen nothing!"

The woman was about thirty years old, comely and handsomely dressed.

"What are you doing here, I say?" repeated Mary. "You are not a thief; you are a lady."

There were quick flashings in the eyes of the stranger indicating that she was looking for some method of extricating herself. Finally rising from her cowering attitude she said defiantly:

"I will not attempt to deceive you. I am no thief. I did not come here to steal. I came to meet the man I love, who is mine by right, yours by law."

"My husband! You come here to—Oh, heavens!"

"I know not who you are, but I do know that I am the only woman he loves."

Striding past Mrs. MacKnight defiantly, she left the room and hurried down the staircase. Mary, on the verge of collapse, fell on the bed. She heard the front door open, then the voice of her husband.

"I beg your pardon, madam; but I should like to know what you have been doing in my house."

"Let me go," came the voice of the woman who had just gone downstairs.

"Not until I have received a satisfactory explanation as to the cause of your presence here."

Mary sprang from the bed. The woman must be a thief after all and had made her believe that she had come to meet John in order to get away with the valuables she had taken and escape arrest. The thought was mingled by a delightful feeling of relief that her husband was innocent. Rushing to the landing, she cried:

"Don't let her go, John; she's a thief."

John closed the front door, shutting the intruder in. Mary ran down and confronted the woman with her husband. Both were too intent on the matter of preventing the thief from getting away with whatever she had stolen to think of saluting each other after their long separation.

"Turn over the plunder," said John. "You may as well give it up to me as to the police."

"I have no plunder," said the woman drawing quick breaths in her excitement.

"Very well, you have been caught in my house, and that is trespass. Mary, go to the 'phone and call for the police."

"Hold!" said the woman.

"Well?"

She darted her eyes about her. One thing alone might have saved her—a fire, but there was no fire in the house except in the furnace in the basement. In her desperation the woman took from under her outer coat a paper and tried to tear it, but it was folded, and she was not successful. John snatched it from her and, looking at an indorsement on the outside, read, "Last Will and Testament of Cynthia Withers."

"Who are you and what do you want with this?" asked John.

The woman made no reply for a few minutes; then she said:

"Since I have not succeeded there is no harm done and you can well afford to let me go away quietly. I am Ellen Stone."

"Ellen Stone!" gasped Mary.

"Go on," said John.

"Mrs. Withers died this morning in the sanitarium. If I could have got out with that paper I would have inherited all her property, for I have a will dated long before that one, drawn in my favor."

"But how did you know where this will was kept?" asked Mary.

"When Mrs. Withers lived with me she kept all her papers in her antique desk. I knew she must have made a second will, and there was a chance that it was in the desk. Learning that there was no one in the house during the day, I came here and, bringing a tool to raise a sash, got in. I found the desk and the will, as I hoped, and had you, Mrs. MacKnight, been a minute later I would have made good my escape. I made pretense of having come here to meet your husband, hoping that it would prevent your detaining me for a thief. Had you, Mr. MacKnight, been a minute later I would have succeeded in passing the second danger."

She paused a few moments, then continued:

"You have nothing to gain by prosecuting me for this attempt to get possession of Mrs. Withers' will, and I see no reason why you should not suffer me to depart."

"I can forgive you," said Mary, "for endeavoring to deprive me of a fortune even by a criminal ruse, but it is not so easy to forgive you for pretending that you had won him from me. Suppose, as you have said, he had not arrived till you had gone. You would not only have stolen the fortune my aunt intended for me, but it is quite possible that you might have made an irreparable breach between him and me. No; I cannot permit you to go free."

The woman cowered at this. She had committed an offense that if pressed would send her to prison for many years. John MacKnight interposed:

"Mary," he said, "you must remember that where one is cornered and must decide quickly the consequences of an act are not carefully considered. I recommend mercy."

The wife, who had so nearly been separated from her husband as well as losing a fortune, considered a moment, then said:

"Do as you like, John."

MacKnight opened the door and said to the woman one word—

"Go!"

FLEEING FROM POLICE CLUBS

Many New York Gunmen Missing From Old Haunts

CLEAN-UP SQUADS GET BUSY

Twenty-Eight Out of Thirty Men Arrested Are Immediately Sent to Workhouse—Bluecoats Do Not Intend to Hereafter Wait For Warrants or Complaints to Be Issued

New York, Jan. 12.—Twenty-eight alleged gun fighters and members of the notorious gangs which have been shooting up their rivals have begun five-day sentences on Blackwell's island as the result of the biggest crusade the police have ever started to rid the city of these undesirables.

In every part of the city the police were active, with the result that early Sunday forty men, said by the police all to be gun fighters, had been rounded up. The police are now convinced they are hot on the trail of the men who did the shooting in front of Arlington hall Friday night in which Frederick Strauss, clerk of the city court, was killed by a stray bullet.

The police are well satisfied with the result of their efforts. Their attitude in descending upon dance halls without any warrants and rounding up gang men shows that they hereafter do not intend to wait for warrants or complaints.

The action of Magistrate Levy in quickly sending twenty-eight out of the thirty men arraigned before him to the workhouse also is pleasing to the police, and the magistrate made it known that he will back up the police to the extent of his power as magistrate.

Commissioner McKay was at police headquarters in consultation with Deputy Commissioner Dougherty, and although it was Sunday, the new head of the police department made it plain there must be no cessation of the police activity in running down the gang men and driving them out of the city.

The raids on the upper West Side and on the upper East Side came so suddenly that the gang men are in a state of terror, and are missing from their haunts. They fear the police since Mayor Mitchel has given orders to use nightsticks. The police say that there is nothing a gunman is so afraid of as a stick of locust wood.

ELECTION WILL BE CLOSE

Curley Stock Appears to Have Risen In the Boston Campaign

Boston, Jan. 12.—On the eve of the city election interest is at fever heat, with the result so much in doubt that impartial observers cannot hazard a prediction. The betting odds, which at first favored Kenney strongly, have shifted to even, although in some cases Curley odds have been given.

Candidate Kenny refrained from campaigning yesterday, but Congressman Curley held many enthusiastic rallies all over the city. The Kenny leaders were in conference during the day, strengthening weak points in their lines. Both candidates have scheduled whirlwind tours of the city for tonight.

MURDER IS CHARGED

Argument as to "Better Man" Leads to Tragedy In Lumber Camp

Berlin, N. H., Jan. 12.—Fred Sullivan was arrested on the charge of murder in consequence of the death of George Bowen, aged 30, a cook in a lumber camp ten miles from Crystal.

According to the county officials, the two men had an argument over which was the "better man," and it resulted in Bowen striking Sullivan on the nose with a hammer. The latter is alleged to have then obtained his rifle and pursued Bowen around the camp and fired a bullet through his body.

UP TO GRAND JURY

Alleged Shortage of $60,000 In Revere Taxes to Be Investigated

Boston, Jan. 12.—Several witnesses will appear before the Suffolk grand jury, it is expected, to testify in regard to the alleged shortages, aggregating $60,000, found in the Revere assessors' books by an investigating committee.

It is understood the books of the Revere tax department have been taken to the district attorney's office.

Anna Gould Loses Appeal

Rome, Jan. 12.—The cardinals composing the high court of the Roman curia rejected the appeal of the Duchess de Talleyrand (formerly Anna Gould of New York), from the verdict of the rota tribunal, annulling her marriage to Count Boni de Castellane. The case will come up again for trial before the rota tribunal.

That proposed New York skyscraper 901 feet high would outsoar the Woolworth building, but would still be topped by the Eiffel tower in Paris. While going skyward why not go for a world record and be done with it, temporarily at least?

MURDER TRIALS.

Holland Has a System of Its Own For Dispensing Justice.

A learned and capable jurist has asserted that the French method of legal procedure, which, contrary to our own, presumes an indicted person guilty until he is proved innocent, comes nearer dispensing actual justice than our own system.

But in Holland the courts have, in some respects, a better system than that of the French. The accused in every case has the benefit of the doubt, and circumstantial evidence as the only foundation for a plea of conviction is in disfavor.

The Dutch do not have juries, and there is no battle of wits among counsel. All questions, whether by the prosecution or the attorney for the accused, are put to the witness through the judge after he has weighed the justice of the interrogation.

This feature of their system has some pronounced advantages over our own. It eliminates the practice of confusing the witness or the accused by misleading questions. It renders impossible the abominable practice in our courts known as the "browbeating" of witnesses, which unfortunately is permitted to an extent that causes the intelligent observer's blood to boil at times because of its unfairness and cruelty. It makes the solemn business of dispensing justice a common trade instead of a heavenly vocation.—Sioux City Tribune.

VENUS HOT AND COLD.

One Half the Planet Burns, While the Other Half Always Freezes.

Venus, the "evening star" of the poets, the most brilliant object in our western sky, that planet which revolves around the sun in a path inside ours, must if inhabited have beings of a very different type from ourselves, for Venus has always had one hemisphere turned toward the sun and one turned away from it. Consequently it is always daytime and summer on one-half of Venus, always night and winter on the other half.

As Venus is more than 23,000,000 miles nearer the sun than we are, it must be twice as hot on her day side as it ever is at our equator. And on her night side, where a ray of sunlight has never shone, it must be so cold that the air is liquefied, if not solidified. There must be a constant uprush of hot air from the scorched surface and a corresponding inrush of icy air from the frigid side. Along the boundary between the two hemispheres this must cause a violent and perhaps almost perpetual rainfall.

Seen through a small telescope or field glass Venus often appears like a crescent. Then are visible the projections that can be nothing but mountains of great height.—New York World.

Scared Out of the Duel.

One day M. Edmond About called upon Grisier, the most celebrated fencing master of his day. "I am in a quandary," said About. "I allowed myself yesterday the pleasure of a joke in bad taste, and a duel is to be the result. I know nothing whatever about fencing, and, as you can see, I am fat. Will you give me a lesson, so that I may not make myself too ridiculous?" The lesson was given, but About proved a very poor pupil. On his way out he saw a photograph of Grisier. "I suppose," he said, "I must not ask you for one of these?" "With the greatest pleasure," said the fencing master. And, with a chuckle, Grisier wrote across the photograph, "To M. Edmond About, the best pupil I have ever had." A few hours afterward the seconds of About's adversary called on the writer, saw the photograph on the mantelpiece and, fearing for their friend at the hands of so redoubtable a swordsman, arranged the affair without any duel.

Birds as Large Eaters.

It may not be thought that of all animals birds are among the largest eaters. This means, of course, in proportion to their weight. Some birds are known to consume two and one-half times their weight of food in twenty-four hours. The heron, which has a light weight of four pounds in spite of its size, is a striking example. One was lately caught which had just swallowed two trout of one and one-half and two pounds. Wild pigeons are among the foremost eaters, and they make a most copious repast whenever an abundance of food is found. Thus a single pigeon picked up a thousand grains of wheat in one day.—Scientific American.

Effects of Time.

Mr. Evans entered a New York restaurant and saw a friend seated at one of the tables.

"Hello, Lovell," he said, "how are you?"

"Oh, pretty well," replied Lovell.

"What are you doing now?" inquired Evans.

"Well, when I came in here," said Lovell, "about two hours ago I was not in business, but I've changed since then. I'm a waiter now."—Pulitzer's Magazine.

Always Counting.

"Your husband says that when he is angry he always counts ten before he speaks," said one woman.

"Yes," answered the other, "I wish he'd stop it. Since he got dyspepsia home seems nothing but a class in arithmetic."

Labor is the instituted means for the methodical development of all our powers under the direction and control of the will.—J. G. Holland.

CURFEW LAW ENFORCEMENT

Violators to Be Summoned Before Juvenile Court

Acting under orders of Mayor Miller, Chief Burrell took the necessary steps Saturday night to enforce the curfew law. Earlier in the day Chief Burrell held a consultation with Judge Avery in the matter and was informed by the Judge that these cases were really delinquents and that it was the duty of the police to take the names of the parents of children out unaccompanied after 8.55 which should be reported to the Probation Officer and that the children should be summoned into the juvenile court and their parents notified.

At roll call Saturday night Chief Burrell gave orders to the night men to warn all children under sixteen years off of the streets and to take their names that their parents might be notified.

Although the news that the Mayor intended to have the curfew law enforced had not had time to be circulated much the news soon got about and as the curfew sounded there was a general hustle to get off of the street. Some few names however were taken and it is probably that the parents will be summoned to appear before the court for juvenils with their children.

Mayor Miller is being generally commended on the stand that he has taken in regard to the curfew law. People whose business has called them out late at night, especially about City Square, have been well aware that the curfew law has been a dead letter for some time and that it is high time that the law was enforced or repealed.

FENBY—DOWELL.

One of the prettiest weddings of the New Year took place at Christ church on Saturday evening when Miss Elsie Fenby, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs Thomas Fenby of Quincy avenue became the bride of Mr. William Dowell of this city who has just returned home from Panama. Rev. Richard E. Armstrong performed the ceremony in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. The bride who was given in marriage by her father was gowned in white satin and lace and wore a large white hat. The bridesmaid was Miss Beatrice Fenby sister of the bride. She was becomingly gowned in white messaline and black velvet hat. Both carried large bouquets of lillies of the valley. Mr. Bernard Burke acted as best man. A reception was held after the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents the happy couple being assisted in the receiving of their guests of Mr. and Fenby and Mr. and Mrs. eLonard Dowell. The wedding cake was made by Mrs. Harry Newson who deserves much credit for her work. Mr. and Mrs. Dowell will make their home on South Walnut street and will be at home after Jan. 20.

PRESENTED TRAVELING BAG.

Frank L. Rawson of Grand View avenue entered upon new duties the first of the year as commercial superintendent of the Eastern division of the New England Telephone company with head-quarters at Portland, Me. Previous to his departure a farewell banquet was tendered by over two score of the officials of the company at the American House and at the conclusion of the festivities he was presented with a handsome travelling bag fully equipped as a token of their esteem.

Mr. Rawson has been connected with the company for 12 years and his popularity with brother officials of the telephone company was fully attested by the dozen or more speakers who hurled verbal bouquets at him and wished him well in his new position.

In 1901 Mr. Rawson entered the employ of the telephone company in Worcester, and after five years of local exchange experience he was appointed assistant auditor of the Southern Massachusetts Telephone Company with headquarters in New Bedford. Two years later he was appointed to the position of superintendent of collections and adjustments with headquarters in Boston.

Four years ago Mr. Rawson established his home on Grand View avenue and his charm of manner instantly won him a host of friends who rejoice at his promotion but regret his leaving Wollaston. He is a member of the Wollaston lodge A. F. & A. M., First Baptist church, Quincy Board of Trade, and the Wollaston Tennis Club.

George A. Brackett of this city was one of the ninety personal friends of the late Horace G. Wadleigh of Boston, who will receive $100 each as a bequest. The legacy is given "as a souvenir or slight token of remembrance and esteem."

—With canals on the land, and tunnels under the mountains, there is now to be added a tunnel under the English channel, connecting France and England. This project has had the attention of both these governments for many years, but for engineering reasons, and from a foolish fear that in time of war the existence of such a tunnel would be a menace to one country or another, the plan has never until now got beyond the discussion. With the finish of the Panama canal this may be the next engineering project to attract the attention of the world.—Old Colony Memorial.

—"Milwaukee," announces an exchange, "is to have a night school for inexperienced wives." Anyhow, there ought to be little chance there for the women to swap experiences.

This Is Your Town And It Is What You Make It

By HOLLAND.

WHAT makes a town? People and business. You are one of the people. What you buy helps make the business. The more you buy the better the business; the more business the better the town.

You want the town to grow and improve, don't you? Then you should help it to grow by increasing its business as much as you can. Every time you send elsewhere for goods you give your town a blow. Enough of these blows will ultimately kill the town.

The mail order houses do nothing for your town except try to kill it. Are you helping them? You are if you send your money to them for goods that you could buy at home. If you are more interested in the growth of Chicago or New York than you are in the prosperity of your own town, your own neighbors, then continue to send to mail order houses for goods. If you want your own town to thrive

A New Amsterdam New Year

By F. A. MITCHEL

New Year's day has changed in a generation from what it was for 300 or more years. Till some thirty years ago it was devoted to making calls. The Dutchmen who settled New York, then called New Amsterdam, early in the seventeenth century, brought the custom with them from Holland. On the first New Year's day in the little town nestling about the fort on the point of Manhattan Island probably not a hundred, possibly not fifty, men made calls.

From where the New York custom house now stands east, west and north, for a distance perhaps of 500 yards, which embraced the town, on Jan. 1, the good housewives having spent the previous week in scrubbing, sweeping, dusting and polishing their homes, put on all the petticoats they possessed and in cap and collar sat themselves down in their parlors to receive callers.

Now, the day before one of the earliest of these New Year's days a bargain was struck between Katrina Van Gaasbeck and her mother. Frau Van Gaasbeck wished her daughter to marry Diedrich Van Dusen, a rich shipowner, while Katrina preferred Anthony Van Horn, a young fur trader. I have called the former of these men a rich shipowner, and he certainly was, for he was the possessor of a sloop fully thirty feet long, on which he carried supplies to the settlers along the East river as far as Hell Gate and along the North river as far as Spuyten Duyvil.

The bickerings between mother and daughter had for months past been embittering the life of the husband and father, Peter Van Gaasbeck. No sooner did he come home from his work in the evening, pour out a cup of schnapps and light his pipe than the clatter commenced, and he was driven distracted. On this day before New Year's that has been mentioned when the turmoil commenced he cried out:

"Settle this matter between you, or, by St. Nicholas, I will go back to Holland on the next ship that sails, leaving you two here to fight it out!"

"How settle it?" asked mother and daughter at once.

"Tomorrow will be New Year's day Some time between morning and evening Diedrich Van Dusen and Anthony Van Horn will each make a call here Let it be agreed between you that the one who calls nearest to the stroke of the town clock at noon shall be the favored suitor."

Frau Van Gaasbeck was loath to accept this arrangement, for she did not trust her daughter, and Katrina was loath to accept it because she did not trust her mother, but each consented thinking herself sufficiently sharp to outwit the other.

Then Peter settled himself to his bottle of schnapps and his pipe with great contentment.

Before 9 o'clock that night, when all New Amsterdamers were in bed, the suitors had each been informed by the one who favored him of the arrangement and instructed to make his call at the moment the clock struck 12 Diedrich Van Dusen arose at cockcrow and spent the time between then and noon watching the hands of the town clock. At 8 he put on a second pair of breeches, and every half hour after that he put on another pair, so that by 11 o'clock he was so incased that he resembled a hogshead of gin set upon end on a couple of bricks.

At five minutes of 12 he cast a last glance at the clock and proceeded to the house of Frau Van Dusen. He was received with smiles by both mother and daughter, which made him feel very comfortable, for his rival was not there, it being a minute or two of 12 o'clock, and he had certainly won. He did not hear the clock strike, for Katrina talked so loudly that he could not have heard a gun fired on the Battery, but a hundred yards distant. When he had been in the house half an hour he withdrew, giving place to other callers.

Diedrich Van Dusen went home and was taking off some of his breeches, laughing gleefully at having got ahead of his rival, when he heard the town clock strike 1.

"It is 1 of the clock," he said.

He had scarcely spoken when there came another stroke. He stopped, with a pair of breeches half off, and listened. There was another and another stroke. When he had counted eleven he paled, and when the twelfth came he was beside himself with anxiety. Pulling on the breeches that he had half removed, he went outside and looked at the clock. The hands stood at 12. Running to Frau Van Dusen's, he looked in through a window and saw his rival with a sausage in one hand and a cup of schnapps in the other. As he looked Anthony swallowed the schnapps.

Diedrich declared that something had gone wrong with the clock, but everybody said:

"How many calls had you made, Diedrich, and how much schnapps had you drunk?"

So the poor man got no satisfaction. After the wedding between Anthony and Katrina the bride confessed that her lover, stationed in the belfry, had seen Diedrich call and had then set the clock back. When Diedrich went away Anthony put the clock at five minutes of 12, then went down, to arrive at the Van Dusens' exactly at the stroke of 12.

PRESIDENT RE-ELECTED

Peter McConarty was re-elected president of the Quincy Branch of the United Irish Land league at the annual meeting on Sunday evening, and Mr. O'Hara, a Dublin resident gave an extended talk on the Home Rule question and how it appeals to the people of Ireland.

The branch is the oldest one in the country and since its organization has been governed by a board of officers of a cosmopolitan nature. Samuel T. Drew its vice president is a Cape Cod Yankee who joined because his sympathies were with the people in their fight for freedom and Enos Costa, its treasurer was actuated by the same principles when he applied for membership. The officers chosen were:

President—Peter McConarty.
Vice President—Samuel T. Drew.
Financial Secretary--Daniel Ahearn
Treasurer—Enos Costa.
Sentinel—Frank Clinton.

—True to expectation, John L. Miller had no sooner taken the mayor's chair in Quincy than he began stirring up the people with attacks on nearly every department of city administration excepting the school department. Mayor Miller declared that the police department of his city is "bad from heart to skin" and he proposes to give it a thorough overhauling, while other departments are run extravagantly. If things are as bad in Quincy as Mayor Miller paints them, he has undertaken a fine work to remedy conditions. It is certain that the prosecution of the work will be conducted with the usual amount of Miller energy.—Barre Vt. Times.

Mayor Says Expressmen Shou'd Pay $500 to $1000

There was but little doing this morning in the way of news at the Mayor's office. There were one or two callers early this morning but as the Mayor was a little late in arriving at his office they got tired of waiting and left, for this reason the Mayor for the first time since he took office was practically free from the numerous callers that have camped in his office every day. The most of these callers were men either seeking positions for themselves or for friends.

The Mayor said this morning that certain parties were very persistent in their efforts to have a certain man appointed, but who that man was or to what office he sought appointment the Mayor did not say.

In spite of the extreme cold weather Monday night, the Mayor said that he had five callers at his home in the interest of the man they desired to see appointed.

The Mayor said that he had his list of appointments made up and that he would send them to the City Council next Monday evening, and that he supposed after they were settled that people would give him a little time to attend to city business.

In looking over some of the city matters the Mayor said that he was surprised to see what a small fee was charged for some of the licenses issued by the City Council, notably pool and billiard tables. Then there was another fee which was fixed by State law which he believed much too small and that was the registration fee of one dollar for permits issued to transport intoxicating liquor. He believed that if the anti-saloon and temperance people wanted to make a ten strike, the law should be changed so that this registration fee be greatly increased say to $500 or even $1,000. If this were done there would not be so many looking for permits to transport liquor.

When asked if the axe had dropped again, the Mayor smiled and said that there was nothing new in this line, in fact there was nothing of especial public interest today.

LARGEST CLAN IN COUNTRY

McGregor Now Leading Clan Gordon With 750 Members

The officers of Clan McGregor, No. 5, Order of Scottish Clans, were installed Monday evening in Clan McGregor hall, by Royal Secretary Peter Kerr, assisted by Past Chief Thomas Johnston, as follows:

Chief—Angus Martin.
Tanist—Charles Nicoll.
Chaplain, John Bissett, Sr.
Financial secretary—Walter Mitchell.
Secretary—Angus Kerr.
Treasurer—Alexander W. Russell.
Seneschal—William Cantley.
Senior wenchman—Thomas Melrose
Junior henchman—Norman Ross.
Warden—William Summers.
Sentinel—William McIntosh.
Trustee—Alexander Emslie.

Refreshments were served. The entertainment included vocal solos by Thomas Melrose, John Clark, John Grant, Alexander Cumming, and James Hughes; and recitations by Adam Ord.

Remarks on the good of the order were made by Royal Secretary Peter Kerr, Past Chief Alfred O. Diack, Chief Angus Martin and Treasurer Alexander W. Russell.

The remarks of the treasurer were of a very interesting nature as they show that the clan is in a very flourishing condition, both in regard to membership as well as to finances, having a balance of $12,000 in the treasury to begin the new year.

The membership is now 750, the greatest of any clan in the order and 13 more than Clan Gordon of Barre, Vt., which was the largest clan for some time.

In addition to the installation of officers one member was initiated and seven applications were received. The clan is striving to reach to 800 mark the present year and it looks as though it might do it.

The committee announced that tickets for the annual Burns' night which is held jointly by the Loyal Ladies and by the Clan were ready. The Burns' night celebration will be held Friday evening, Jan. 23.

REPORTS ENCOURAGING

St. Chrysostum's Church in a Flourishing Condition

The annual parish meeting of St. Chrysostom's church in the vestry on Monday evening was one of the largest and most enthusiastic held for years, and the splendid spirit exhibited by the parishioners and augurs well for the future success of the parish.

Fourteen became enrolled members o fthe church and the reports of the organization work given show active and progressive work.

The treasurer's reports disclosed a deficit of $32 which amount was immediately subscribed.

The voting resulted in the re-election of the present wardens, treasurer and clerk. Henry B. Barham was chosen as a vestryman for two years to fill the unexpired term of William J. Leslie.

SACHEM CLUB DIRECTORS

Will Probably Begin Erection of Clubhouse Soon

The first annual meeting of the Sachem club of Wollaston was held, Monday evening, in Progressive hall, Wollaston. President Eugene F. DeNormandie was in the chair and Charles Alden was elected secretary pro tem.

The secretary's report was read. The expenses of the last year have been met by the incorporators and the treasurers report showed a small balance on hand.

Balloting had been going on from 12 until 9 and at that hour Harry A. Stevens announced for the balloting committee the following elected:

Directors for three years,—Russell T. Anthony, Charles M. Bryant, John Buchanan, Nathan G. Nickerson, Jr. Arthur P. Russell, and George W. Stone.

Directors for two years,—Edward Tyler Brigham, Morrison B. Capron, Matthew Ott.

Directors for one year,—Eric H. Ewertz, William F. Kimball, Chandler W. Smith.

Nominating Committee for 1914,—Charles W. Bailey, William Chapman, Henry B. Dimmick, Elmon R. Johnson, Albert H. Murray and Eugene H. Sprague.

The new board of directors will organize within a week and elect officers from their number upon the new board will devolve the responsibility of building the clubhouse that is contemplated

Eugene F. DeNormandie the retiring president received a hearty vote of thanks for the faithful and efficient work he has done in the interests of the club since its inception.

The main business of the meeting lay in listening to the report of the board of directors which gave a review of the clubs affairs from the time it was organized a year ago.

The report told how the club had been the logical sequence of the Community House idea and how 250 signatures showing willingness to become members of a social club in this connection had been secured.

After the Community House fell through it was finally voted to organize the Sachem club and incorporate and on March 19, 1913 a charter was issued.

Believing the demand for a social club was insistent the directors went about and without great effort about $6000 par value of bonds was subscribed for.

On September 24, 1913, it was deemed wise to increase the membership of the club and under suspended rules those filing applications were admitted. Thus the membership was increased from 24 to 68 with one associate member from Hyde Park.

On November 10, 1913, a committee was appointed to procure preliminary plans which were drawn by Architect William Chapman and presented to the directors December 1.

Adequate arrangement was made for the accommodation of the Wollaston Woman's club, and their co-operation was requested.

The board of directors believes the erection of two clubhouses unwise and consider the outcome doubtful if undertaken.

They believe it is possible to erect a clubhouse adequate in all respects for both organizations and that such will soon be begun if both clubs work together harmoniously for it.

ZERO TEMPERATURE AND NORTHWEST GALE

Real Winter Weather May Now be Expected for Several Days

Eight Below Recorded in Quincy This Morning

This morning was the coldest of the winter. The high west wind which prevailed all day Monday seemed to increase in velocity Monday night and with sundown the temperature began to drop. The wind blew a howling gale all night and the air was biting cold. As night drew on the wind seemed to increase as likewise did the cold. Those whose business called them out moved lively and there was no stopping on the corners to gossip. The police had little difficulty in enforcing the curfew law for few children were about at any time during the evening.

During the heavy wind Monday afternoon one of the trolley wires on the Quincy avenue line was blown down, causing travel to be more or less interrupted on this line of street cars. The special cars to the shipyard which usually go via Quincy avenue were sent by the Quincy Point line, making it necessary for the workmen to walk from the yards to Washington street. What made it worse was that they had to face the wind all of the way.

A trolley wire came down on School street a little later in the evening, with the result that cars on the West Quincy and Brockton lines were more or less delayed for a time.

This morning at sunrise the glass varied from four to eight degrees below zero. At the carbarn, on the side next to Merrymount Park the glass was eight below zero and the men who reported to work where the street railway company is filling in with ashes were sent home it being too cold to work. Across the street, the glass showed from 4 to 6 below zero.

But for the high wind the weather would not have been so severe, but with an eight below temperature and a howling northwest wind, it was stinging cold.

All work is suspended in the granite yards and in fact about all out-of-door work is given up. If the weather continues a few days the ice gatherers will be busy.

Very fortunately there were no fire alarms last night. It would have been a wicked night for a fire. The Central Station Ladder Co., responded on a still alarm in the late afternoon, Monday to extinguish a fire in one of the big chimneys in the Music Hall block. Big sparks were seen coming from the chimney and a telephone call was sent to the fire station. The firemen cleaned the chimney of the soot and extinguished the flames with salt. Fortunately the sparks did not alight on any of the adjoining buildings and start a fire.

The busy men today are the plumbers. All of them report having many calls to thaw out frozen water pipes.

Owing to the freezing up of the pneumatic switches in the South Station yard all outward and inward trains have been more or less delayed all day. In extreme cold

NOTICE

Again we ask those sending news or other matter by mail to direct it to the company or newspaper rather than to individual members of the company or employees. If addressed to individuals and they were ill or not at the office, it might be several days in reaching its proper destination and if news matter would be too late for use.

It is no longer fashionable to keep a diary, as in society people want to forget instead of remember.

If they wanted the boys to observe "Everybody at Church Sunday," they shouldn't have it just after Christmas.

People who can write it 1914 every time beginning Jan. 1 are too uncomfortably accurate to have around.

EVERYBODY AT CHURCH.

Over 6,500 attended the Sunday morning services at the Protestant churches of the city, a grand record for a city the size of Quincy. This is a larger number than attend the public schools of the city, and a larger number than ever voted in a Quincy election. At the afternoon or evening services there were over 4,500 more. Some may have attended both morning and evening services but a great many attended only one service. The city has four Catholic churches which are not included above, but their members always go to church. Therefore it would seem as if most of the adult population of Quincy must have attended church on "Everybody-Go-to-Church Sunday." Thousands of children also attended the Sunday schools and meetings of young people's societies, making it a truly great church day for Quincy.

The ministers should feel encouraged at the success of Quincy's first "Everybody-Go-to-Church" Sunday." Some who have not been very regular at church were surprised to find that the city has so many able pastors, and the services so interesting. Perhaps it will not be necessary to have another such special Sunday, as many have now resolved "to go to church every Sunday." Certainly the movement was not without its benefits to the churches and the city.

PROBLEMS OF PHOTOGRAPHY.

Jack Binns, the wireless hero of the Republic steamship disaster, is to get $12,500 as the result of a suit against a moving picture company. The litigation grew out of the use of an alleged picture of Binns, in a film issued two days after the accident.

If a man can then recover for use of his picture in photo plays, should he also have a case against newspapers that use his photograph without permission? Our courts have usually said not.

The horde of photographers from the metropolitan press that gather at wedding parties and funerals and dog the steps of notables, often run to yellow journalistic excesses. The newspapers are blamed for this intrusive spirit. Yet if the newspaper men had their way, most of them would cut all this sort of thing out. The picture end of his work doubles the labors of the city editor.

Over in Germany you can't take a picture of a man's house without securing his permission. In this country a cat may look at a king. If you can look at a president or a general, you can let the lens of your camera perceive him; if you can draw a picture of a notable, it should be legitimate to let the sun draw him on your negative.

The victims of this unconscious posing often feel aggrieved at being put in a ridiculous position. But American sense of humor saves them from taking it very seriously.

There would seem to be a difference between using a picture in motion photography, and in newspapers. In the former the public would perhaps get the impression that a person consented to such use, and voluntarily exhibited himself for pay. In the newspaper, snapshots are commonly obtained without permission, so that at least the parties taken do not appear to have had a share in the exhibition.

Saving of Individual More Important Than Reform

By Rev. WILLIAM RADER of San Francisco

DURING my life I have spent considerable time in the effort to reform evil conditions, but if I were to live it over I would not give so much time to reform as to the redemption of men.

IF YOU CHANGE THE SKIN OF A RATTLESNAKE YOU DO NOT CHANGE HIS NATURE, BUT ONLY MAKE HIM THE MORE DANGEROUS. MANY CHANGES HAVE BEEN EFFECTED IN THE ADMINISTRATIONS OF AMERICAN CITIES, BUT AFTER THE BATTLES AT THE ELECTIONS HAVE BEEN ENDED WE ARE CONFRONTED AGAIN WITH THE SAME EVILS AS BEFORE. EVENTUALLY WE SHALL FIND THAT ANY GOVERNMENT IS A GOOD GOVERNMENT TO LIVE UNDER IF IT BE COMPOSED OF GOOD MEN.

The making of character is a serious matter. It means bitterness and struggle. A man is NOT MADE AT TWENTY. More men FAIL IN THEIR FORTIES. There are more wrecks made during the middle years than at any other period. There is no quick growth in the making of a man. There is encouragement, too, for the man caught in the NET OF HEREDITY AND ENVIRONMENT. Religion is stronger than either, and in religion he will find his salvation.

No man need be discouraged. In the making of a man there need be no special emphasis placed on thought of theological adjustment to life. I have found MORE ORTHODOXY IN THE PENITENTIARY THAN IN THE CHURCHES. It is quite possible for a man to be sound in his doctrines and all wrong in his life.

Work on State Roads Would Benefit Convicts' Health

By WARDEN ROBERT J. M'KENTY of Eastern Penitentiary, Pennsylvania

I THINK the idea of convict labor on state roads a good one, but before it is tried out the people must realize that A SMALL PERCENTAGE OF CONVICTS WILL NOT STICK TO THE JOB. I believe ninety-seven per cent will stick and prove efficient. But a few will run away, and the public must expect it.

The scheme would prove excellent for THIRTY AND SIXTY DAY COUNTY PRISONERS, and only a slightly different situation presents itself in TWENTY, THIRTY, FORTY YEAR AND LIFE PRISONERS. As far as the actual work goes, the prisoners would prove more efficient than paid laborers.

THERE ARE MANY YOUNG MEN WHO COME INTO THE HOUSE OF CORRECTION NARROW CHESTED AND ROUND SHOULDERED AND WITH THE BELIEF THAT THEY CANNOT WORK. THREE MONTHS OF LABOR ON THE CONSTRUCTION OF A STATE HIGHROAD WOULD BE A BENEFIT TO THEM IN MORE WAYS THAN ONE.

Hostile Critics Lament Decay of Scholarly Ideals

By Dr. HENRY LOUIS SMITH, President of Washington and Lee University

THE German-American university has now become the home of scholarship and research, the professional schools are steadily encroaching upon the four years' college period from above, and the American public high school, with marvelous growth and limitless resources, is absorbing the freshman and sophomore years from below.

MEANWHILE A CEASELESS STREAM OF HOSTILE CRITICS LAMENT THE DECAY OF SCHOLARSHIP IDEALS, THE IDLENESS AND DEGRADING VICES OF THE CAMPUS, THE DOMINANCE OF ATHLETIC AND SOCIAL ACTIVITIES AND THE HOPELESS ANTAGONISM BETWEEN THE IDEALS AND HERO WORSHIP OF THE STUDENT BODY AND THE OFFICIAL BESTOWMENT OF COLLEGE HONORS BY THE FACULTY.

AWAITING MOVE IN THAW CASE

Court Will Not Liberate the Fugitive For a While

REPORT OF THE COMMISSION

It Finds Thaw Would Not Be Menace to Community If Released—Both Sides Given Time to Study It—Next Step Will Be Petition to Fix Amount of Bail

Concord, N. H., Jan. 13.—Harry K. Thaw will not be liberated on bail immediately, though the report filed by the commission appointed by Federal Judge Aldrich says he is not suffering from any form of mental disease now and would not be a menace to the community if released.

The reason for the delay is that Judge Aldrich is ill with a severe cold at Brookline, Mass., under care of a physician, and Aldrich desires, he says, to give both sides time to study the report of the commission before bail is given.

"I do not expect to go to Concord until I hear from counsel on both sides of the Thaw case," said Aldrich. "The commission's report has been filed there and I have instructed the clerk of the court to furnish copies of the report to counsel. The clerk called me on the telephone to tell me of the report of the commission."

As matters stand now, it will probably be the middle of the week if not longer before Thaw gets his liberty on bail, if at all. Merrill Shurtleff, chief attorney for Thaw in New Hampshire, said the filing of a petition with the clerk of the United States district court that bail be fixed will be the next step in the case.

Thaw posed for photographers and it was apparent he is jubilant over the finding of the commission, but he was reticent about commenting on court action in his case. He will not leave New Hampshire if admitted to bail, he stated.

Thaw's attorneys will file at once an application for an extension of time for the filing of briefs in the main habeas corpus case pending before Aldrich. The twenty days allowed has already expired. Aldrich is expected to grant an extra ten days. New York attorneys will have a similar extension of time.

The Feeling In New York

Albany, Jan. 13.—Attorney General Carmody was considerably "worked up" over the prospective release of Harry K. Thaw in New Hampshire. It is known, too, that Governor Glynn is displeased by the turn of events.

No formal protest against New Hampshire's attitude toward Thaw has been drawn up.

An attempt will be made by New York officials to arrest Thaw when he crosses the border of New Hampshire into any other state, Carmody indicated. "Nothing will be left undone to arrest and bring Thaw back to this state," he added.

CAR FLOAT SERVICE

Proposed for Shipment of Freight Through Boston

Quincy would benefit in many ways from a car float service in Boston Harbor, as proposed by the Boston Port Directors. Not only could granite be shipped more directly to the north and west of Boston, but apples and potatoes from Maine could be shipped to Quincy quicker. Then the new car floats could be built at the Quincy shipyard.

From Quincy to Lynn is 138 miles, or thereabouts, by Boston's quickest and most efficient existing belt route for freight service, says Benjamin Baker in discussing the new freight plans of the Port Directors. If the Fore River Works at Quincy wants to ship a load of scrap metal to the General Electric plant at Lynn, the railroads, if left to their own judgment, haul the car north to Boston, 8 miles; then, on another train, south to Mansfield, nearly 40 miles; from there, on another train, it goes northwest to South Framingham, about 35 miles; then north to Concord Junction, where it is taken on by a Boston & Maine train, which hauls it 40 miles farther, to Lynn.

This is on the whole the quickest and most reliable all-rail freight service between Quincy and Lynn, which are barely 20 miles apart if the distance is measured over the shortest rail lines, passing through the waterfront of Boston. The same route would be laid out by the Boston & Maine for freight matter demanding quick service from the towns just to the north of Boston to towns to the south-east.

This represents one side of one thing that is the matter with the freight situation of Greater Boston. The freight terminals of the different roads in and near the city are so congested and so little efficient, and the connections between the sorting yards are so crowded and difficult, that the roads do all they can to keep local circum-city, and even some through traffic, out of the terminals. The results are various, but whatever else they are in any particular case, they are almost certainly an undue burden on shippers in the cost of transportation, or a source of vexatious and sometimes costly delay.

The worst of the present situation, which is admittedly serious, is that a belt railroad properly related to the great freight clearing yards of the different roads is impossible. The ideal scheme would be to have a belt road, with spurs reaching manufacturing and other shipping points in and near the city extending round the city inside of the big freight yards where freight and cars are sorted and made up into trains for dispatch to distant points; and where incoming trains are broken up, and their cars dispersed for distribution to their individual destinations over the inside belt railroad.

The Union Freight can run cars through the city of Boston only between the hours of midnight and six in the morning. So, if a car reaches either the north or the south terminal too late in the day, say on Monday, for Monday night's transfer, it has to wait over until Tuesday night. A car from Quincy, for Lynn, leaving Quincy on Monday, often does not reach the Somerville yards of the Boston & Maine until Wednesday, and it may not be switched out of that yard until it is too late on Wednesday for the Lynn receiver to unload it on that day. It often happens, in actual practice, that a car from the south of the city to a point on the northern border takes practically four days to get through.

A car float service connecting the New Haven's South Boston storage yards with the Boston & Maine at the Mystic terminal seems to be the only solution that is physically and financially practicable. The distance between the two points is about two and a half miles in the inner harbor. Cars could be transferred at all hours of the day and night. The north and south sides of the city would be put in quicker connection that is possible by any other means; quicker, probably, than would be possible over the Union Freight with a right to use Atlantic avenue by day, even with the needed connection over the Northern avenue bridge. Such a float transfer would put the Comomnwealth piers on a par with the Albany piers, and with those of the Boston & Maine in Charlestown, and it would make some interesting changes in certain Boston & Maine freight rates which are now a burden on that sorely distressed road.

WHAT CHURCH STANDS FOR

The Service That Will Redeem That Which Was Lost

Everybody-go-to-Church Sunday in Atlantic brought out the largest congregation in Memorial church since the day of dedication three years ago this month. The pastor, Rev. T. W. Davison took for his text Ezekiel 34:16—"I will seek that which was lost."

Mr. Davison said in part: The church as a whole has often been blamed when its leaders were neglecting their opportunities, yet there have always been in it loyal hearts that were in sympathy with the life and purpose of God. Its leaders have often made the most unreasonable demands, taken the most absurd positions, showed the most unbalanced lives. They have claimed for it divine origin, with a divine book, and a divine Savior and these have been discounted because so often we have not showed a divine life or done a divine work.

The church must stand for the things for which Christ stood while on the earth. Christ stood for redemption. Here was Zacchaeus, a publican, a despised tax gatherer. He many have imposed, may have been unjust, an extortioner, a mean selfish fellow. Here was Peter, a profane ignorant fisherman. Christ met these men in such a way and enlisted them in His service and called out those hidden divine qualities of the soul that Zacchaeus was ready to make restitution at once and receive Christ, and Peter left all and followed Him. They were redeemed men. Christ aroused that feeling for God that had been lost or unrecognized the larger part of their lives.

We today often look at men as hopeless, unchangeable in their selfish, aimless, thoughtless lives. But if our church is to be true to the Son of God; it must stir men's memory of past impulses, received from a Christian home; find the heart; reveal the ideals; and show that redemption from despair, degradation and sin is possible for every soul. "To seek that which was lost" means that our church door is as open as the heart of Christ.

Some have suggested to me that the church stands for respectability, or a refined life and fine sentiments; but respectability may only be in surface appearances; the refined life can be black at heart with selfishness; and the good sentiments can evaporate and never be carried to action.

You have known a mother who has seen her boy changing. She thought of him as true and pure and good. In seeing him mislead her love arose to the occasion, and if all the world turned against him, she would be all the world to him. That love reclaimed or redeemed him. The church stands for that love; that service that will redeem that which was lost.

My Old Kentucky Home

Jan. 13 marks the fiftieth anniversary of the death of Stephen Collins Foster, the American song writer. "My Old Kentucky Home," one of his most famous compositions, is herewith given:

The sun shines bright in the old Kentucky home;
'Tis summer, the darkeys are gay,
The corn top's ripe, and the meadow's in the bloom,
While the birds make music all the day.
The young folks roll on the little cabin floor,
All merry, all happy and bright.
By an' by hard times come a-knocking at the door;
Then, my old Kentucky home, good night!

Weep no more, my lady;
Oh, weep no more today!
We will sing one song for the old Kentucky home,
For the old Kentucky home far away.

They hunt no more the possum and the coon
On the meadow, the hill and the shore;
They sing no more by the glimmer of the moon
On the bench by the old cabin door.
The day goes by like a shadow o'er the heart,
With sorrow, where all was delight.
The time has come when the darkeys have to part.
Then, my old Kentucky home, good night!

Weep no more, my lady, etc.

The head must bow, and the back will have to bend,
Wherever the darkey may go.
A few more days and the trouble all will end
In the fields where the sugar canes grow.
A few more days for to tote the weary load—
No matter; 'twill never be light.
A few more days till we totter on the road.
Then, my old Kentucky home, good night!

Weep no more, my lady, etc.

FOUND ODD WAYS OF EARNING AN EDUCATION.

Columbia Student Group Made $57,705. One Worked as a Bootblack.

The quest for funds with which to pay his way through college brought a student of Columbia university, New York, to his knees last summer as a bootblack. In two weeks he saved $20. Then he turned mason and saved $15 in another two weeks. Next, he took up farm labor and saved another $20. The total gave him a good start on the winter's tuition bill.

Other needy Columbia men spent the hot summer months in much the same way and, while their wealthier classmates were idling, earned $57,705.76, an increase of almost $20,000 over 1912, according to the report given out by the appointments committee, which for the first time in years was responsible for practically half of the money earned by the students, or $28,312.53, which is $13,000 more than for the preceding year.

One hustling youth of the third year class conducted a party through Europe, which netted him all his expenses and a little pocket money besides. Another earned $25 writing signs and trimming windows and then turned his hand at faking at country fairs, which netted him $100 and expenses.

An engineering student sold real estate and at night clerked at a soda fountain for a gross gain of $150. Another worked at night as an automobile salesman and earned $320 in the four months. One engineering student earned $150 as a pharmacist and another put in the summer as a mate on a sailing yacht and netted $50 in addition to expenses.

CHAMBERLAIN, VETERAN M. P.

Summary of the Activities of the Famous Statesman About to Retire.

Joseph Chamberlain, who at seventy-seven has announced that he will retire from the English parliament at the next general election, has represented Birmingham in the house of commons since 1876. He is in poor health and has been ailing since his resignation from the Unionist cabinet in 1903. His last appearance in the house of commons was at the opening of the session in 1911. He was assisted into the chamber, took his oath and went away again. He has not made a speech in the house for eight years.

After one defeat for parliament in 1873 Mr. Chamberlain was elected in 1876. He was returned in 1880, and when Mr. Gladstone formed a new cabinet immediately afterward Mr. Chamberlain became president of the board of trade, a post which carries a portfolio with it.

Mr. Gladstone chose him for president of the local government board in the cabinet of 1885, but soon after that he differed with the premier on the home rule question and resigned. He was returned to parliament as a member of the Unionist party, which he formed out of the Conservative elements. It was to this party that Mr. Gladstone later owed his defeat.

From 1895 to 1903 Mr. Chamberlain was secretary of state for the colonies and shouldered great responsibility in the conduct of the Boer war.

RUSSIAN ARMY TERROR STRICKEN

Spy System and Abuse Work Havoc In the Ranks.

SOLDIERS' SPIRIT BROKEN.

Startling Indictment In a London Publication Devoted to Russian Affairs. Insanity, Suicide and Assault of More Frequent Occurrence Than In Any Other Country.

The conditions of service in the Russian army are unbearable, according to the correspondent of a London periodical that treats exclusively of Russian affairs. This correspondent declares that the spy system and utter lack of consideration for enlisted men by the officers, and their brutality in dealing with civilians have crippled Russia's fighting force and reduced to a low ebb the spirit of the army. The article says:

"All military writers agree that at least half the strength of any army depends upon the spirit prevailing in its ranks. If they are to fight well and successfully the men must be united by comradeship, have faith in their officers and feel that they are risking their lives for something worth fighting for.

"Looking at the Russian army from this point of view, we cannot but be startled by the facts of every day life among the czar's soldiers. Comradeship is practically made impossible by espionage.

Officers Suffer as Well.

"It must not be imagined that spies confine their attention to privates. The officers are not immune from the same treatment. Until recently political charges made by the secret police against officers of the army had to be inquired into and verified by the ministry of war. But the gendarmerie naturally disliked this procedure, as it often exposed the worthlessness of espionage. The chief of the secret police therefore applied to General Sukhomlinoff, the minister of war, asking that any information about any army officer coming from his agents should be accepted by the military authorities without question. M. Sukhomlinoff fully agreed to this suggestion, gave orders accordingly, and added that the police reports should be kept secret from the officers concerned. Thus every officer is now at the mercy of every turncoat and spy without being given a chance to refute the allegations against him.

"Dueling is encouraged and sometimes forced. An arrogant attitude toward peaceful citizens, especially if they are independent in their political opinions, is interpreted as a laudable manifestation of 'military honor' and loyalty, while heartless, cruel treatment of the rank and file is regarded as 'good discipline.'

Murder In Code of Ethics.

"A writer named Kulchitsky has published a volume entitled 'Advice to Young Officers.' In this book, which deals, among other things, with possible quarrels between officers and civilians, the author says: 'Kill on the spot and with a single blow. A living man may harm you, while a dead one is harmless (i. e., as a witness) in case of a trial.' This book is recommended by commanders to their young officers on leaving a certain military school.

"This encouragement of lawlessness certainly does not strengthen the necessary discipline in the Russian army. While exacting from the private absolute obedience to a superior's order, however idiotic or lawless, and absolute conformity to formal rules which have nothing to do with the military efficiency of the soldier, the bullying officer no longer acknowledges any binding discipline so far as he himself is concerned. Cases of gross and unprovoked assault committed by officers on privates may be cited ad infinitum. From them it may be gathered how cheaply human life and the personality of a soldier are accounted in the Russian army.

"We cannot wonder, therefore, that despair and hatred of their profession and their superiors are rife among the Russian soldiery. There is no other army in the whole world where insanity, suicide and assaults on commanders by privates are so frequent. A committee of doctors at Kiev found that in the local military hospital alone there were simultaneously 200 insane privates who had to be discharged from military service. And there is no particular reason why insanity should be more rife at this place than in other districts. According to the report of the war ministry in 1911 the number of privates who took their own lives during that year was 347, and this figure is surely not exhaustive, since many suicides must have been reported under the heading of 'accidental deaths.'"

Fifteen Years to Make State Survey.

An idea of the tremendous task involved in making a state survey is obtained in the announcement that during 1913 approximately 2,000,000 acres of public land were surveyed in Montana. At the present rate of progress, provided the appropriations and field forces are not reduced, it will be fifteen years before the work is completed. Twenty million acres have yet to be mapped.

DEATH OF EUGENE GRACE

Succumbs to Wound Which Wife Was Accused of Inflicting

Newnan, Ga., Jan. 13.—Eugene Grace died here from the bullet wound he mysteriously received in Atlanta nearly two years ago. He had suffered from partial paralysis since shortly after the shooting and had been in a serious condition for several days.

Grace was wounded in his Atlanta home in March, 1912. He accused his wife, Mrs. Daisy O. Grace, of the shooting. Mrs. Grace was found at the home of Grace's mother here and arrested on his accusation. Later in the same year she was tried on a charge of attempted murder and found not guilty.

Soon after the trial Grace left his Atlanta home to live with his mother in Newnan. His death, physicians said, was due directly to uraemic poisoning which set in about the wound in his back.

WIRELESS MEN BUSY

Suffering on Sea and Land as Result of Sudden Cold Blast

Boston, Jan. 13.—A bitter winter gale, accompanied by zero weather, lashed the New England coast. Scores of ships were imperilled.

Every wireless station on the coast last night was probing the dark in an effort to locate and bring aid to missing vessels.

On shore one person was probably fatally hurt by the storm, several others were frozen and untold discomfort was caused by the sudden drop in temperature.

Boston harbor was the scene of the thrilling salvage of a dozen vessels that had broken loose in the wind, while Chatham and other ports along shore were crowded with shipping that had scurried to shelter.

EMPLOYES DELAY DECISIVE ACTION

Vote Favors Strike on Delaware and Hudson Road

Albany, Jan. 13.—Authority to call a general strike of all employes of the Delaware and Hudson railroad is granted the unions, according to indications after one-fourth the 5000 referendum vote had been counted.

This was the announcement of Vice President Carey of the Railroad Conductors' union, and one of the leaders in the fight against the company.

Carey declared the vote would not be completely canvassed until this evening. As soon as the result is known he said the union officials would seek a conference with the railroad officials and a final attempt at adjustment of differences would be made before a strike is called.

MAINE'S GAME SEASON

Reports of 7755 deer, 162 moose and fifty-eight bears killed were received. Camp proprietors entertained 4187 resident and 4805 non-resident guests, 1071 of whom were hunters. Reports from 1620 guides showed they guided 7761 non-residents and 4208 residents, 2412 of whom were hunters. A total of $59,148 was received from licenses and fines.

TAKES OWN LIFE WITH GAS

Wife of Doctor Also Causes Death of Nine-Year-Old Daughter

Fitchburg, Mass., Jan. 13.—Mrs. Archie E. Perkins, wife of a physician, was found dead in her home, a suicide by gas. Near her lay the dead body of her 9-year-old daughter, Dorothy.

In the next room to where the bodies were found the husband and father lay sleeping. A maid who smelled gas found the bodies.

That the mother had not planned her daughter's death was indicated by a note the woman left which says: "I have been very ill. Dear Annie, take good care of dear Dorothy."

FROM AUGUSTA TO QUEBEC

Plans For Building New Highway Between the Two Cities

Portland, Me., Jan. 13.—A new highway is to be built between Augusta, Me., and the city of Quebec, according to an announcement by the state highway commission.

The Quebec government has appropriated $300,000 for the construction of the road from Quebec to the Maine line, a distance of ninety-eight miles. Maine will build to the Quebec line, the distance from Augusta to the boundary being about 131 miles.

NEW YORK SOCIAL GALETIES.

The Vogue of Taffeta—Tiny Hats With Perky Brims—The Fitch Craze—Amber Necklaces.

With the coming of the New Year the social whirl here is at its fastest pace, so between this and Lent, the greatest demands are made upon one's festive attire. Taffeta is very much used for pretty frocks and smart blouses, and as this indicates the trend of style for the coming season, clever planners are investing in these for present use knowing that they will last over well. In black and in medium dark colorings, tobacco brown, blue green and amethyst and in changeable weaves these make serviceable and pretty afternoon frocks, while white taffeta is the tip of the mode for more dressy wear. This is especially fetching made up with that touch of dark fur which continues to be the favorite trimming device.

LAMP TUNIC STYLES.

Taffeta lends itself especially well to the various "lamp" tunic styles that caught on in such varied forms, and needs none of the wiring or other artificial aids that have been employed for lace overskirts. Puffed effects in from one to three layers, with the edges gathered and turned under are smartly endorsed, and rival in popularity the mitres or scallops or pointed finishes that have been worn by the fashionable set since late in the summer. As usual when taffeta frocks are in vogue considerable use is made of self trimmings. Bias strips of the silk are used for binding the variously cut edges of the tunics, and cordings and shirrings and draperies make all the needed garniture, except for the neck finishings, which is usually of fine lace and net with one or two detachable gamps, after the practical and pretty style that has met with universal approbation.

NECK FIXINGS.

These gamps are an important feature at every up-to-date neckwear counter, and very in style and price to fit everyone's taste and need. They offer also great opporunity for pretty home work to women who have leisure and taste in turning out small belongings. It is wonderful how the smart fichus and gamps with their upstanding ruffles, and Medici collars transform a simple blouse or frock into ornate becomingness. The front of the throat is rarely covered, though many women use little gamps of plain net with smoothed fitted collars to afford a little protection or concealment of times ravages. Necklaces especially those of graduated amber beads are very popular to lend the touch of yellow which is reckoned smart.

The above design is by The McCall Company, New York, Designers and Makers of McCall Patterns.

THE FITCH CRAZE.

This accounts also for the craze for the yellow Fitch fur, which is seen on nearly every other toilet, especially among the younger contingent, though not by any means confined to them.

Little sets consisting of just a short collar and cuffs are shown by C. C. Shayne & Co., and other high grade furriers here. So great has the demand been for this soft yellow pelt that the price has been considerably advanced on the lighter Russian skins. Early in the season the darker German Fitch was quite a bit more expensive, now the demand for the amber shade has made them even in price. Aside from this fur everything has, as usual, come tumbling down in price. Beautiful model coats of ermine, seal, mole, and broadtail embodying the latest lines and most elaborate cuts and garnitures can be had for a third less than before Christmas, though, as usual, our coldest weather is just now beginning. Medium grade and more practical coats and small furs are proportionately reduced. Soft gray moleskin and dyed muskrat sets which only the expert can distinguish from seal are especialy attractive.

TINY HATS.

Tiny hats with crowns of metal lace, and little brims that turn up in saucy points above either ear, have a touch of Fitch or other fur in their trimming, and little round Cossack turmans, their high, upstanding brims constructed of velvet or tulles are exceedingly smart just now. Where these are all of velvet, the brim is laid in shallow box pleats with small sprays of paradise tacked in between. The tulle ruched turbans have a band of fancy jet at the base which is most effective above a prettily arranged coiffure.

PERILOUS HUGGING.

The Embrace of a Kangaroo Does Not Leave Pleasant Memories.

Notwithstanding the kangaroo's popular reputation for speed, he is easily overtaken in the bush by a good horse (they say) within half a mile. A capable kangaroo dog—a lean, swift beast, a cross between a greyhound and a mastiff, bred to course and kill—soon runs him to bay. Without dogs it is the custom to kill with a cudgel. This is often accomplished by the sportsman from the back of his horse. Dismounted, however, with the kangaroo waiting alertly for attack, it is sometimes a perilous venture to come to close quarters. A slip, and the sportsman finds himself at once in a desperate situation.

One of the lumberjacks with whom we rested in the shade of the blackbutt showed us the scars of an encounter. He had ridden the kangaroo down, said he, and, being in haste to make an end of the sport, he had caught up the first likely stick his eye could discover and he had stepped quickly and confidently in, and he had struck hard and accurately. And the next instant, caught off the ground, he was struggling breast to breast in the hug of the creature, frightfully aware that he must escape before the deadly hind foot had devastated him.

"My club broke," he exclaimed, "and the boomer got me!"

There were long scars on his back and shoulders, the which we were not very sorry to see, for we could not make out why any man should wish to kill a kangaroo for sport.—Norman Duncan in Harper's.

A Spoiled Scene.

E. H. Sothern once found his wit fail him in time of need. It was in the fourth act of "The Lady of Lyons." Sothern played Claude Melnotte, and Virginia Harned was cast as Pauline. Beausant, the villain, was pursuing Pauline, and she cried loudly for help. Claude is supposed to dash to her rescue and catch the fainting Pauline in his arms. Sothern dashed on to the stage, but slipped and slid, sitting down near the footlights. Losing his presence of mind, he declaimed the line: "Look up, Pauline. There is no danger." As Virginia Harned was standing this was, of course, an impossibility. By this time the audience was in an uproar, and when Arthur Lawrence, who played Beausant, scornfully said, "You are beneath me," the amusement of the audience knew no bounds.

Give Your Neighbor an Equal Chance

By HOLLAND.

IF you have been buying goods of a mail order house you doubtless think it has been to your advantage to do so. You have believed that you were saving money or were getting better goods. Let us see if this is true.

Have you tried to do business with your local merchant—your neighbor—on the terms that the mail order house exacts? No? Then suppose you try it.

Just go into the store, plank down your cash and tell what you want. You might even tell the merchant that you will wait a few days for the goods. See if your local merchant can't serve you better and as cheaply as the mail order house.

The local merchant usually extends credit for two, four or six months. The mail order house demands cash in advance. It uses your money as working capital. It loses nothing in interest, nothing in bad debts or on slow paying customers. Try this cash in advance plan on the local merchant—the man you know—and see if he can't make it to your advantage to

MATCHES—LEAGUE STANDING AND NOTES

THREE STRING TOTAL OF 351

Several Records Broken by Shipyard Bowlers

The old adage, always expressed in the world of sport, "Records are made to be broken," was ably demonstrated on the Coliseum alleys Monday evening when Bernard Burke, rolling with the Machine Gallery team in the Fore River league secured a three string total of 351, outdistancing Jenner and Gardner of the Wollaston Tennis league who jointly established a new record of 341 last week.

Burke is one of the strongest bowlers in the league, and in order to beat out the totals of the Wollaston men had to roll exceptionally well. His second string of 139 set another record for a score in competition and resulted in the high team single of 529 and the high team total of 1513. In other words Burke upset all the traditions of the alleys for some weeks to come undoubtedly. His strings were 111, 139 and 101.

The Machine Gallery beat the team substituting for the Ship Fitters who have withdrawn from the league, 4 to 0. Williams of the winners got 114, Moran 111 and Tirrell, 106 and 102. All these pretty singles added to Bernard Burkes performance resulted in the first team total of the season over 1500. The score:

THE HANGMAN'S ROBE.

Dennis Didn't Like It, So He Sold It to "Old Cain."

James Berry was not so well paid for his services as his French confrere, M. Antoine Deibler, who draws £560 a year, while his four assistants have a similar amount to divide between them. Samson, the first executioner to wield the guillotine, was originally paid £1,520 a year, but when executioners were appointed in each department this was reduced to £800.

Before the revolution the legal tariff in France was 25 shillings for a beheading, 16s. 8d. for a burning at the stake, and the same amount for a hanging, with allowances for the erection of a scaffold or the provision of fuel.

One of James Berry's predecessors, for a brief period, donned a uniform when at work. In 1785, according to a contemporary chronicler, the sheriffs of London were "so pleased with the excellent mode in which Edward Dennis, their hangman, performed his duties that they presented him with a very elegant official robe—a khilaut, in fact, as eastern potentates term a similar garb of honor. Dennis found this inconvenient when at work on the scaffold and sold it to a well known character of those days, 'Old Cain,' who, having set up as a fortune teller, wanted a robe to complete the costume in which he received dupes."—London Chronicle.

VILLA'S POWER IS INCREASING

Now Strongest Personality on Constitutionalist Side

CAPITAL IS HIS OBJECTIVE

Unlikely to Meet Opposition Until Close to Mexico City, as North Is Swept Clear of Armies of Huerta, Whose Fighting Power Is Destroyed —Refugees Must Prepare Camps

Presidio, Tex., Jan. 13.—With the annihilation of the main army at Ojinaga as a fighting force the power of Huerta, the Mexican dictator, in the north of Mexico is virtually destroyed.

Already the victorious constitutional army is headed southward, only about 1000 men being left to preserve order in the deserted stronghold of Ojinaga, as Villa, who gradually is becoming more and more powerful as success succeeds success on the field of battle, says his objective always has been Mexico City. There is no question that this ex-bandit is the strongest personality on the constitutional side. Carranza, the "provisional president," is completely dwarfed.

With freedom to devote his attention to the south, the situation becomes decidedly more interesting from a military point of view. In a march on the capital the combined constitutional armies will traverse a country which, if not entirely friendly, at least has no power to stop its advance until in the vicinity of Mexico City. Even here it will find much help from friendly sources.

Huerta's forces still control Laredo on the northeastern border but this place is soon likely to suffer the fate of Ojinaga. Monterey, Tampico, Tuxpam, Torreon and perhaps Vera Cruz will be the next to fall in the hands of the anti-Huerta armies.

Huerta still pretends to believe that he will put down "the revolution." Yesterday, however, the enemy cut the Mexico City-Vera Cruz railroad, interrupting the return to the capital of the American charge d'affaires, who had been in Vera Cruz in conference with Special Envoy Lind. Zapata is operating less than twenty miles south of Mexico City.

Major McNamee, commanding the United States troops, having received orders from Brigadier General Bliss at San Antonio to remove to the nearest railroad station all the federal soldiers and civilians now being held in Presidio, the crowd of more than 4000 refugees and soldiers will probably march soon for Marfa, Tex., sixty-seven miles over a mountain road. All the refugees are to be put to work preparing their own camps.

ACCUSED OF CONSPIRACY

Dynamite Cases of Los Angeles Labor Leaders Are Postponed

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 13.—Perfunctory proceedings which resulted in postponement for the present term of the district court marked the calling of the cases of Olaf Tveitmoe and other labor leaders, accused of conspiracy to transport dynamite.

In accordance with a stipulation entered into shortly after Tveitmoe was indicted with Anton Johannsen, J. E. Munsey and E. A. Clancy, the Los Angeles cases will not be pressed until the cases resulting from similar indictments returned in Indianapolis are disposed of.

MOTOR PLANT STORMED

Thousands Want to Participate In Profit-Sharing Distribution

Detroit, Jan. 13.—A crowd of men estimated at 10,000 seeking employment at the plant of the Ford Motor company started serious rioting when they were told, after they had stood in the freezing cold for several hours, that work could not be given them.

After a fire hose had been turned on the crowd the rioters dispersed. Five arrests were made.

Announcement by the company of a $10,000 profit sharing distriibution has brought thousands of employment seekers.

PARDON IS REFUSED

Money Lender Tolman Must Complete Term In New York Prison

Albany, Jan. 13.—Governor Glynn has refused finally to pardon D. H. Tolman, the convicted New York money lender.

District Attorney Whitman refused to say he favored an absolute pardon for Tolman, and this was the chief cause for the failure to obtain the prisoner's release. The governor requires the indorsement of the trial judge and the prosecutor in every case where he exercises clemency.

Short Circuit Causes Panic

Paris, Jan. 13.—In clouds of dense smoke, men and women leaped from the windows of a subway train here when a short circuit caused an excited passenger to yell "fire." In the panic several persons were severely hurt.

He Was Sensitive.

SEIGEL BANKING METHODS

Proprietors Borrowed Money Without Security, Says Receiver

New York, Jan. 13.—Henry Melville, receiver for the Henry Siegel & Co. bank, told the committee on banks of the state senate that "whenever any of the proprietors felt the need of any loose change to the amount of a few thousand dollars he went to the bank and took what he wanted without giving any note of security of any kind."

Siegel himself, the receiver said, had borrowed $754,191 without security except a written agreement pledging 340,000 shares of the common stock of the Siegel Stores corporation against these loans.

MOVING PICTURES IN STATE INSTITUTION

Reforms in Maryland Are Appreciated by Prisoners

Baltimore, Jan. 13.—Close on the abolition at the Maryland house of correction of the striped suit, flogging, "cuffing up" and solitary confinement comes the announcement that within a short time a moving picture outfit will be installed in the institution.

Recently a phonograph was given to the prison and "good" prisoners are allowed during recreation hours and on Sundays to listen to the instrument. The improvement in conduct among the 400 or more men and women has been so marked that Superintendent Lankford and the board of managers decided to give them the "movies." The next step in reform will be the establishment of a school.

PATRIOT KOSSUTH WEDS

Widow of Close Friend He Nursed Becomes His Bride at Sickbed

Budapest, Jan. 13.—Francis Kossuth, the Hungarian patriot, was married on his sickbed to Countess Benyorsky, widow of Alexander Benyorsky, who was a close friend of Kossuth.

Benyorsky, during a long and painful illness, was nursed by Kossuth and the countess, and shortly after his death Kossuth became dangerously ill. He was attended by Countess Benyorsky, and an engagement followed.

The marriage was to have taken place next March, but, owing to Kossuth suffering a relapse, they were married today.

MUST WAIT A MONTH

Hearings on Mackellar Bill Are Put Into Cold Storage

Washington, Jan. 13.—Cold storage plant magnates, with press agents and lawyers, are in Washington, clamoring for an opportunity to prove to the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce that refrigerated storage of vegetables has nothing to do with the high cost of living.

They came to Washington confident they wouldd be heard today, but the committee has put the bill introduced by Representative Mackellar, on which hearings were to be held, into storage for at least a month.

Peeples Is Acquitted

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 13.—Thomas H. Peeples, attorney general of South Carolina, was acquitted of the alleged murder of Robert Marshall, negro chef at the Elks' home. Witnesses testified that the killing was accidental. The trial took two hours.

A Believer in Vivisection

Philadelphia, Jan. 13.—That he would not hesitate to sacrifice all the cats, dogs and guinea pigs in the world to save his son's life was the statement of Rev. Carl E. Grammar here. The anti-vivisectionists were angered.

Italian Village Destroyed

The Invalid

He Was Very Hard to Nurse

By F. A. MITCHEL

Barton Hough was educated abroad, and, after having attended schools till he was eighteen, universities till he was twenty-six and taken post graduate courses till he was twenty-nine, his mother thought it time that he returned to America.

It is not to be inferred that Mr. Hough came out with great knowledge from all this training. He had become accustomed to European life and remained in the universities for the purpose of prolonging it. The only thing in which he had become proficient was the use of the small sword, which he learned at a German university.

However, when he had finished his last postgraduate course he concluded to take a rest in Paris, where he remained a year. Then his father died, and he felt it incumbent upon him to go home. He found his mother very lonely, and she begged him to stay with her. He promised to do so, but before long it became apparent that he was sighing for those places where people work a few hours a day or not at all and enjoy themselves the rest of the time.

In order to get her son chained down she desired that he should marry. Unfortunately for this plan Barton's feminine associates abroad had not been such as to inspire confidence in women. He had been much pleased at one time with a Russian countess. But she turned out to be an adventuress and the sweet intercourse between them had turned to bitterness. An English girl, Lady Angela Courtney, had been his next flame, but she had married a nobleman of her own country, leaving the American in the lurch.

Mr. Hough, forgetting that "one swallow does not make a summer"—or two in his case—came to consider all women bereft of any sense of honor, and he would have nothing to do with them, or, rather, he would trust none of them. As to marrying, that was out of the question.

One day Barton fell ill. His mother was not strong enough to nurse him, but he would have no one else. Finally when wornout she suggested a trained nurse. The young man was so enraged at the suggestion that his mother desisted. Finally in order to relieve her he consented that she might bring in a man to help her.

Mrs. Hough knew a young woman who had become a trained nurse. This girl, Adele Trevor, the good lady sent for, and on her arrival said to her:

"Philippa, my son is ill and I must have some one to take care of him. What salary do you usually get?"

"Twenty-five dollars a week."

"I will pay you double that sum, but I have a requirement to make of you. You must personate a man."

The girl hesitated, but she needed money, and $50 a week was a temptation to her. Besides it was understood that her duties would be rather to entertain the patient than to nurse him. She accepted the position and Mrs. Hough sent her to a tailor to be outfitted. It became necessary to cut off a wealth of hair, but her employer gave her a substantial check to cover the loss. When all was ready the nurse was introduced to the patient by Mrs. Hough.

"Why, mother," he said, "I thought you were to get a man, not a boy!"

"You don't need a person of strength. The butler will do everything for you. Philip is simply to be with you when you are lonely, to give you your medicine, and read to you."

"Very well, let him begin at once."

"What kind of reading do you like, sir?" asked the nurse, very meekly.

Barton smiled. "You must be pretty young. Your voice hasn't changed yet," he said; then added in contrasting tones, "I want a blood and thunder story."

Philippa went out of the room with Mrs. Hough for a book and returned with a history of the buccaneers of the Spanish main. Drawing a chair beside the invalid's couch she seated herself and began to read. She had not read long before Barton stopped her.

"That's no voice with which to read about pirates. No pirate would ever tell anybody to walk the plank like that. Put it this way"—and in as stentorian a voice as he could command in his weak condition he repeated:

"'Out there—every one of you!'"

"My voice isn't very strong yet. I suppose it will be stronger when I am older," said the nurse.

"You need developing. Look in the closet and you'll find a couple of foils. Never mind the pirates; I'm tired of them."

Philippa closed the book, laid it aside and, going to the closet, found the foils standing in a corner. She brought them to the invalid, who took one, leaving the other with her.

"Now stand off there," he said, "and I'll give you a lesson in fencing."

"But, sir, are you strong enough to"—

"I'm going to do my part in bed. Put the pillows behind me."

She propped him up as he desired, and he bent his foil above his head after the fashion of fencers beginning to fight and told Philippa to do the same. Then he told her to see if she could touch him with the button of her foil.

"Don't you think, sir," she protested, "that it would be better for me to read to you?"

"No; it's your business to amuse me, and you must amuse me; not bore me."

"But the doctor; he wouldn't allow it."

"The doctor be hanged; he's not here to stop it."

Philippa made several inoffensive thrusts, rather endeavoring not to touch the patient than to do so.

"See here, young man," cried Barton; "do you call that fencing? I want you to do your best to put the button there," and he tapped his left breast with his finger.

Philippa, seeing that nothing would satisfy him except her doing her best, set to work to touch the spot indicated, but found it impossible. Although reduced by illness, he was too quick for her.

"Now, I'll try you," he said, "but my hand is not as steady as it should be, and I'm afraid I'll hurt you. You'll find a mask in the closet. Bring it out."

Philippa brought the mask, and he told her to put it on. She did so and, again taking up her foil, placed herself on the defensive. Barton had no difficulty in getting behind her guard and placing the button of his foil wherever he liked. They were in the midst of lunges and parries when the door opened and Mrs. Hough ushered in the doctor. Philippa turned quickly, lowered the point of her foil to the floor, bent her head and stood like a culprit ready to receive a reprimand.

"So this is the nurse you have provided for your son?" said the doctor to Mrs. Hough.

"He's a dandy!" said the patient. "I don't believe he ever took a lesson in his life, and yet he came very near pinking me several times."

But the doctor refused to be placated.

"Madam," he said to the mother, "is this young man a professional nurse?"

"He is."

"Discharge him at once."

"Not on your life!" cried the patient.

"Any educated nurse," continued the doctor, "knows better than to risk a patient's life by permitting him to take such violent exercise."

"Permitting!" sneered Barton. "Do you think that stripling could lord it over me? Not much."

"Either discharge the nurse," said the doctor resolutely, "or I shall withdraw from the case."

"The nurse won't be discharged," replied Barton. Whereupon the doctor left the room, followed by the fond mother, who was quite beside herself at the trouble she had made in giving her son a man nurse. She made no attempt at an explanation to the doctor, being too agitated and not knowing what to do. She went back to the sickroom, to find the nurse had vacated it, while her son was evidently no worse for his exercise.

"Mother," he said, "let old sawbones go. I like this little chap you've given me, and before he goes away I'll make a man of him."

"Oh, dear!" cried the mother, which under the circumstances was as appropriate as anything she could say.

"Send Philip back to me," Barton went on. "He's a bit cut up at being blamed."

Mrs. Hough was ready to do anything in her power and, going out, came back dragging Philippa with her.

"Come here," said Barton to his nurse.

Philippa went to him and, taking her hand, the patient said kindly:

"Don't mind what the old curmudgeon said. You're a nice little fellow, only a bit too delicate for a boy, but I'll take that out of you. Mother, I want him to stay with me till I get well. I feel better already."

So Philippa continued her attendance, and the patient continued to improve. As much cannot be said for Philippa. As the patient grew stronger he increased his efforts to take the effeminacy out of her, and she was forced to suffer some pretty hard knocks. A crisis came when Barton was able to get out of bed and stand on his feet. Then one day Mrs. Barton heard sounds above, followed by a thud. Running upstairs, she found her son lifting Philippa, unconscious, from the floor. Both had boxing gloves on their hands.

"For heaven's sake, Barton," cried the mother, "have you killed her?"

"Killed her? You mean him."

"Oh, my dear boy, she is a girl!"

Barton laid Philippa on a lounge and begged his mother to go for restoratives. While the old lady was gone Philippa opened her eyes, meeting another pair of frightened eyes that showed a relief, but still anxiety.

"Thank heaven I haven't killed you!" he said.

"No, no! It is nothing. The violence of the exercise overcame me. I am all right now."

"Forgive me, sweetheart—I mean little girl. I didn't know"—

"I should not have entered upon such a deception," the girl moaned. "I didn't want to do so, but was overpersuaded. Your mother's offer was tempting, and I yielded despite my better judgment. But I didn't know I would be expected to play a man's part except as a man nurse."

When Mrs. Hough returned to the room armed with smelling salts her son was bending over his nurse so intently that he was not aware of his mother's presence. But Philippa's color had suddenly returned in a measure. Indeed, there was something like a blush on her cheeks as she listened to the pleadings of the young man for forgiveness. The good lady withdrew, and it was not many weeks before she was rewarded by her son announcing that he would remain in America and become a benedict.

HUB CAMPAIGN COMES TO END

Each Candidate Claims Victory, but Prophets Perplexed

CURLEY FAVORED IN BETTING

Usual Odds That He Will Be Elected Mayor Are 10 to 7—Kenny Men Expected to Capture Republican and "Silent Vote"—Fitzgerald Remains Silent as to His Choice

Boston, Jan. 13.—Boston's mayoralty campaign, the fiercest in many years, came to an end several hours after midnight this morning, and today the voters will register their choice for chief executive of the city for the next four years. Congressman James M. Curley goes to the polls a favorite over Councillor Thomas J. Kenny. Curley's supporters are claiming a tremendous majority for him. The usual odds were 10 to 7, but in some places 2 to 1 was offered.

The Kenny camp, on the other hand, professes to be entirely confident that the present president of the city council will succeed John F. Fitzgerald as mayor. They claim that the "silent vote," especially the Republican vote, will swing the victory to Kenny.

Martin M. Lomasney's indorsement of Curley yesterday had the effect, it was persistently stated last night, of causing the Democratic city machine to get in line for the congressman. It was hinted that Mayor Fitzgerald had passed the word along to vote for Curley, but the mayor persisted that his attitude was unchanged; that he has consistently maintained a position of strict neutrality.

Hurling their arguments into the teeth of a biting gale that howled through Boston's streets Kenny and Curley whirled through every ward in the city last night, making their final appeals to be elected mayor of Boston.

The blaze from red lights, the shouting and the cheering of thousands of men and boys and the mournful howling of the gale combined to make the wildest night before election in Boston's history. From East Boston to Hyde Park, tracing a fiery path back and forth through the streets, the two candidates wound up each in his home district amidst a tremendous blaze of fireworks, redfire and cheering.

Their supporters stopped the automobiles of their candidates and, hitching ropes to them, dragged them through the streets. Crowded halls and streets greeted them all along the route of their wild night dash.

All day and night yesterday the city seethed and boiled in politics. Several Democratic leaders who had promised to deliver to Kenny turned to Curley. On the other hand, a number of men allied with Curley at the last minute went over to Kenny.

The mayoral candidates did not hold all the attention. Six candidates for the city council and four candidates for the school committee made the rounds of the wards at the same time. They, too, traveled in automobiles, making an army of machines traveling at breakneck speed through the gale back and forth across the city.

The weather is with Kenny in today's election. It is fair and cold and this means, according to the political prophets, that Kenny's vote will be much larger than it would on a stormy day.

The Curley adherents, it is said, would come out in any weather, but there are many voters among the element that is supporting Kenny who are likely to stay at home if the weather is at all inclement. At least that is the tradition.

STRIKERS OVERAWED

Hundred Thousand Armed Men Prepared to Preserve Peace

Capetown, Jan. 13.—Overawed by the vigorous measures of the government and the presence of 100,000 armed men ready for action, the strikers on the South African railways have given ground and the labor situation from the Rand to the Cape is apparently much brighter.

At Natal and Pietermaritzburg the railroad employes voted against a general strike despite the exhortations of their radical leaders.

At Ladysmith, however, the ballot favored the strike and at that place the number of strikers was slightly increased.

FOUND IN SECRET VAULT

Relics of 1776 Unearthed on Site of an Old Philadelphia Residence

Philadelphia, Jan. 13.—A large number of relics of the Revolutionary war were discovered here in a secret vault on the site of the residence occupied by the provost marshal during the occupation of this city by the British under Lord Howe.

Workmen laying water pipe for an apartment house came upon a vault in which were a large quantity of swords, muskets and other military paraphernalia, including several British and Hessian uniforms.

Heads Quite a Family

New York, Jan. 13.—Mrs. Mary Horwitz, 84, at her granddaughter's wedding, led the march and was followed by forty-four grandchildren and forty-one great-grandchildren.

SOME PECULIAR RULINGS

Handed Down by State of Washington Industrial Commission

Olympia, Wash., Jan. 13.—Rattlesnakes infesting a country where road work is being done constitute an "industrial hazard" and a workman bitten by a snake is entitled to compensation from the state industrial insurance fund, according to a ruling contained in the report of the state industrial insurance commission. The commission granted a claim for injury benefit.

Other peculiar rulings are recorded in the report. A boy shot a workman in the eye with an airgun. The commission accepted the gun as an industrial hazard and the claim for injury was paid.

A brutal boss does not constitute a hazard within the meaning of the law as interprted by the commission, however, and a man who was whipped by his employer was denied a compensation.

MOVEMENT IS NATION WIDE

Many States Give Approval of "Go-to-Church" Sunday Plan

Boston, Jan. 13.—Reports received at the headquarters of the Christian Endeavor society in this city indicate that the suggestion that Go-to-Church Sunday be made a national movement has met with encouraging response, according to a statement from General Secretary Shaw of the society.

Among messages indorsing the plan, given out by Shaw, were some from Vice President Marshall and Governors Goldsborough of Maryland, Hays of Arkansas, Ammons of Colorado, Mann of Virginia and Glynn of New York.

According to Shaw, an elaborate campaign has been planned in Chicago for Feb. 1. In Massachusetts the State Federation of Churches has named Feb. 8 as a state-wide go-to-church Sunday.

THERRIEN WOMAN WILL BE A WITNESS

Held on Technical Charge In Walsh Murder Case

New Bedford, Mass., Jan. 13.—Resolutions by the combined religious societies of this city, demanding as a result of the death of Annie Walsh by decapitation on a coal barge here, the immediate closing of all saloons with side doors and back rooms, were sent to the license commissioners.

Twenty-four-year-old Flora Therrien, daughter of Louis Therrien, was in court, charged with being idle and disorderly to insure her detention as a witness at the murder trial later. Her father was associated with the murdered girl, and claims to have found her headless body.

Captain Matroni of the coal barge, held on the charge of the murder of Annie Walsh, was arrested largely on evidence Therrien furnished the police.

VERDICT CUT IN TWO

Boston Man Was Awarded $154,216 Against Wool Company

Boston, Jan. 13.—Frank Edwards of this city, who recently recovered a verdict of $154,216.89 against Francis Willey & Co., wool merchants of Bradford, Eng., must accept a reduction to $70,929.11, or have the whole verdict set aside.

Judge Fessenden in the Suffolk superior court gave Edwards ten days in which to accept this reduction.

Edwards claimed in his suit that he was entitled to a share of the profits in the wool business while acting as the American representative of Willey & Co.

MUST WALK, NOT TALK

New Order to Gloucester Policemen Is Put Into Effect

Gloucester, Mass., Jan. 13.—Walk, walk, walk; on your beat you must walk and do not talk.

This is the latest order which has been issued by City Marshal Marchant to all the policemen of this city. The order went into effect today. No more will policemen whose beats meet stop on the boundary line of their respective patrols and talk politics, shipping and baseball.

They can talk police business, but briefly, and must pass citizens with only a bow—not even a good morning.

CARES FOR UNEMPLOYED

Governor of Oregon Supplies Men With Food and Employment

Salem, Ore., Jan. 13.—By order of Governor West forty men of a body of 100 who had walked from Portland to Salem were given employment at state institutions at $1.50 a day.

The unemployed slept in the basement of a church when they arrived and they were provided with breakfast at the governor's expense.

Canal Boatmen Abjure Profanity

Lyons, N. Y., Jan. 13.—In an attempt to wipe out the oft-repeated phrase, "he swore like a canal man," Erie canal boatmen have organized an anti-profanity brotherhood.

Tango Forbidden In Public

Munich, Jan. 13.—Going farther than the crowned heads and prelates who are fighting the tango, the Munich police forbade the dance to be done in public.

ORDAINED TO PRIESTHOOD

West Quincy Young Man in Advance of His Class

Thomas W. Buckley of West Quincy was ordained a Catholic priest by Cardinal O'Connell on Saturday in the chapel at St. John's Theological Seminary, Brighton and Sunday morning, he celebrated his first mass in the Philosophy House, connected with the seminary. Father Buckley was one of six members of the class of 1914 to be ordained before their time.

Preceding the elevation to the priesthood a mass was celebrated by Cardinal O'Connell. He was assisted by Rev. Dr. John Peterson, president of the seminary, and Rev. Dr. Andrew J. O'Brien, Professor of Dogmatic Theology at the seminary and a boyhood friend and companion of Father Buckley.

Bennett O'Brien, a nephew of Dr. O'Brien, who served at the first mass of Father Buckley, is also a boyhood friend.

The ordination was witnessed only by the immediate family and in honor of the event Father Buckley was presented with a gold chalice by his uncle, Daniel Buckley of Dorchester.

Rev. Fr. Thomas W. Buckley is the son of Edward and the late Hannah Buckley of Bates avenue. He was born in West Quincy and received his early education in the Willard and Gridley Bryant schools. He was graduated from Adams Academy in 1905 and in the fall of 1906 entered Boston College.

His gentle disposition and marked ability easily made him one of the most popular members of his class, and during the first year he was chosen treasurer, and served in that position during his course. He was a member of the Fulton Debating Society and participated in many of the debates between that society and teams from other colleges.

He graduated from Boston College in 1909, and shortly after commenced his studies for the priesthood at St. John's seminary. Here his exceptional ability gained him a warm p lace in the hearts of his fellow seminarians who are joyous over his early ordination.

For many years he served as an altar boy at St. Mary's church and was considered a fine example of the Catholic young man. The news of his ordination will be a surprise to many of his friend since none but t he immediate members of his family were aware of it.

It is probable that Father Buckley will remain at St. John's seminary until after the graduation exercises. next June.

GUILTY ON THREE COUNTS

Officer Walsh Suspanded by Weymouth Selectmen

The Weymouth Selectmen, after a long session Monday, found that Officer John D. Walsh was guilty on three of the five charges on which a hearing was held by Selectmen on Saturday. On its finding the board suspended Walsh without pay until Feb. 1.

The charges on which he was found guilty were with being away from his route on the nights of Nov. 13-14 and on the night of 14-15 without justifiable reason. Of being at the Cedarcrest Inn on the night of Nov. 13-14, and with taking part in a mutual assault with a Braintree policeman on the night of Nov. 14-15.

On the charges against Walsh for being under the influence of liquor on the night of Nov. 13-14 and demanding money from the proprietor of the Inn he was found not guilty. It is said that only on the last charge were the Selectmen unanimous in their finding.

Walsh when informed of the verdict of the Selectmen said that he was perfectly satisfied with it and was willing to let the matter drop.

Grand Knight William A. Carey and the officers of Quincy Council, Knights of Columbus, exemplified the first and second degrees on a class of candidates of Cohasset council at Cohasset on Sunday. Accompanying the officers were fifteen members of the local council.

This Is Your Town And It Is What You Make It

By HOLLAND.

WHAT makes a town? People and business. You are one of the people. What you buy helps make the business. The more you buy the better the business; the more business the better the town.

You want the town to grow and improve, don't you? Then you should help it to grow by increasing its business as much as you can. Every time you send elsewhere for goods you give your town a blow. Enough of these blows will ultimately kill the town.

The mail order houses do nothing for your town except try to kill it. Are you helping them? You are if you send your money to them for goods that you could buy at home. If you are more interested in the growth of Chicago or New York than you are in the prosperity of your own town, your own neighbors, then continue to send to mail order houses for goods. If you want your own town to thrive

TALK ON THE MODERN CHILD

Prof. Perrin Addresses Wollaston School Association

Owing to the blustering night a smaller audience than usual gathered in the Wollaston school hall, Monday evening to hear Professor Marshall L. Perrin of Boston University deliver his address on "The modern child" before the Wollaston Parents and Teachers Association.

Professor Perrin differed radically in his views rom those expressed on the same subject by Dr. Woods Hutchinson a few nights ago in the same hall.

"We don't understand the modern child," said Professor Perrin. "He has been brought up under entirely different conditions and has brought with him a problem.

"Parents are afraid of their children. Don't scold mothers for attending clubs. Children have become so bright and clever the mother must go out in order to converse with them.

"Children are pot taking advice from those behind the times. They love you but you don't understand.

"Mothers must be the equals of their children. It is a terrible thing for a daughter to outgrow her mother.

"Children of today feel that the family exists for them. Not they for the family. They are not to blame. The parents are afraid to tackle the problem. They are not at home very much and they hate a scene.

"What the boys need are the discipline of the old blessed chores. But where are we to get them?

"There are two blessings for the child that are being brought about. One is that the high prices are throwing them back on the cereals and simple foods. The other that trouble with the help is bringing daughters back in the kitchen where they belong.

"Conditions are making the modern child a peculiar individual. He is less with his heart and his hands and more with his head than ever before.

"I stand in awe of the ability of the modern child to grasp things.

"But we should teach the child self control and the way to meet obstacles.

"This way of having for the child, everything that is easy and sweet may seem fine but when the hard question brings him to scratch, he fails.

"Temptations and struggle are good for children, but we should stand by to encourage them and help if it proves too hard.

"Children of today want to know the reason for doing everything. Tell them the reason then insit on their doing it.

"Keep your children with you and you need never worry about them. Teach them duty and self control, as well as the sweetness of life and in after years they will rise up and thank you."

Avard L. Walker accompanied by Mrs. Joseph Walther sang three solos, "Invictus," "Man o'Warsman" and "Bandana Melody."

FREEZE UP WAS SERIOUS

Resulted in Stove Exploding and a Broken Thigh

Fritz Ohman, aged 62 years, of 159 Marlboro street, was taken to the City Hospital this morning in the police ambulance suffering from a fractured left thigh. It seems that the water pipes connecting the kitchen stove with the hot water boiler froze up Monday night, and that while trying to thaw them out this morning the front of the stove blew out, part of the stove striking him in such a manner as to fracture his left thigh. The police ambulance was summoned.

weather, especially with a high searching wind like Monday night and this morning it is impossible to keep the switches from freezing.

It was reported this noon that it was necessary to close the Wollaston school building this morning on account of the inability to properly heat the building

The temperature at noon today was 4 above zero making today the coldest day by several degrees of the winter. In fact it is the coldest day at noon since Jan. 7, 1912 and even on that day the temperature at noon was 5 above zero. The coldest day of 1913 was on Feb. 10, when the temperature at noon was 17 above zero. A year ago today the noon temperature was 23.

CURFEW LAW ENFORCED

Children Took Warning From The Newspaper Articles

Chief of Police Burrell says that he is having but little trouble enforcing the curfew law up to date. When word was received from the Mayor to see that the ordinance was strictly enforced the patrolmen were given instructions to do so. The young people however had received warning through the Daily Ledger of what was to happen and they lost no time in getting off the streets before the curfew bells sounded.

The first performance of the moving picture houses, which the young people attend largely, closes at 8.30, and it is a sight to see the kids coming from these theatres skip for home.

No difficulty has been experienced as yet in the enforcing of the ordinance, and the Chief has not as yet been obliged to summon any of the children before the juvenile court.

ICE GATHERERS REPORT THICK ICE

All the Quincy Companies Will Begin to House Their Supply This Week

Cold Wave Continues But the Temperature Is Rising

Ten below zero was the temperature mark in most parts of Quincy at sunrise this morning. The high cold cutting wind which prevailed Monday night and Tuesday subsided somewhat by sundown, and with the dropping wind also came the dropping of the temperature, although the still cold was not as disagreeable as when the wind was blowing.

At 4.30 P. M. Tuesday, the glass dropped to 6 below zero in City Square and two hours later it registered 10 below zero. The temperature remained at this point all night.

The cold weather interfered but little with the running time of the street cars but it raised havoc with the steam roads. All attempts to run trains on schedule time were evidently abandoned. But few if any trains were on schedule time during the day. In the first place it was hard for the locomotives to make steam, but the greatest trouble was with the pneumatic switches in the South Station yard which would freeze up faster than they could be thawed out.

During the early evening the South Station was packed with suburbanites anxious to reach home and so thick were they that it was almost impossible for one, once inside the station to move either toward a train or out of the station. Trains were anywhere from two to three hours late and many after waiting in vain for a train to take them home, managed to squeeze their way through the crowd to the street where the street cars were taken.

Hundreds of Quincy people took this method of reaching home, and were several hours earlier than if they had waited for a train.

The Boston Elevated put on extra cars on the Neponset line and hundreds were being constantly landed at the Neponset end of the Quincy line.

Extra cars were also run between Neponset and Quincy and but little delay was experienced by travelers once they reached Neponset bridge.

Travel on the steam cars was little better this morning and reports from the South Station yard are to the effect that the use of compressed air for the switches has been given up, and that the switches are being moved by hand, which of course means more or less delay.

The present cold snap is pleasing to some people at least, the ice men. Up to the present time this winter none of the ice men have been able to house any ice, for cold snaps have not been of long enough duration to make ice of any thickness.

Ice has made fast for the past twenty-four hours however. It began to make some days ago, but it was not until Monday that it gained to any great extent. It made considerable Monday night and then again all day Tuesday and Tuesday night so that this morning the Meadow Brook Ice Co. report they they have about seven inches of good ice on their pond. During the past twenty-four hours Mr. Patch of the Meadow Brook Co. says that the ice on his pond made one and three fourth inches, and it looks as though another three-quarters inch might be added today.

It is seldom that ice has made to the present thickness in so short a time. Usually it takes a week or more of steady cold weather to make ice thick enough to cut, but it has made so fast in the past few days that cutting will probably be commenced this week. There is one good thing about ice that makes quick and that it is better and more solid ice.

Good ice is also reported on the ponds of the Eaton Company and the Sheppard Company and cutting will commence on all of these ponds this week.

CHOIR CONCERT AT BETHANY

Stainers "Daughter of Jairus" Is Presented

Only the heroic venture out in zero weather for an entertainment, but the people of Bethany Congregational church appreciate the endeavors of the two choirs which contribute so much to the Sunday services each week and about 200 were at the church Tuesday evening for the annual concert by the choirs. The advance sale of tickets was also large so that a good sum will be netted.

Both the morning and evening choirs participated, being assisted by Emma Shufeldt Moore, soprano; Ruth Hardy soprano; Robert Fitzgerald, tenor; Albert L. Hayden, bass; Edith Roubound, violinist; Daisy Bemis Sampson, pianist and Agnes B. Ruggles, organist.

Part one opened with an organ solo "Cantilene Pastorale" which was well received and was followed by a chorus number, "There is a river," which included a beautiful solo by Miss Hardy. A baritone solo by Mr. Hayden "Gloria" was finely rendered. No. 4 was an instrumental selection for violin, organ and piano, "La Deluge." One of the best numbers of the evening was the group of songs by Mr. Fitzgerald. The vested girls' choir closed part one with "Sancta Maria" by Faure, very sweetly rendered.

Part two of the program was a presentation of "The Daughter of Jairus" by the same talent. The introduction was by organ and violin. The choral recitative was by the chorus and was followed by soprano recitative, "My hope is in the everlasting" was by Mr. Fitzgerald. Mrs. Moore sang "Then Jesus cometh" and "The wailing" was by violin and the vested girls' choir. Another soprano recitative and then the chorus of unbelievers by male voices. The chorus appeared at its best in "Awake thou that sleepest. The duet "Love divine, all love excelling" was charmingly rendered by Mrs. Moore and Mr. Fitzgerald. The trio in the closing number were Mrs. Moore and Messrs Hayden and Fitzgerald and were well assisted by the chorus.

It is to be regretted that all ticket holders could not be present to hear such a grand concert.

COLDEST FOR YEARS

Tuesday a Record Day for Low Temperature at Noon

With possibly one exception, Tuesday was the coldest day experienced in Quincy since 1898. On Dec. 9, 1902, the mercury registered 6 to 16 below at sunrise, 2 above at noon and 2 above at 6 P. M.

This week Tuesday it was 8 to 10 below at sunrise, 4 above at noon and 8 below at sunset.

Here is the Daily Ledger record of minimum noon temperature by 15 years. In 1899, five above; in 1900, twelve above; in 1901, eleven above; in 1902, two above; in 1903, ten above; in 1904, four above; in 1905, fourteen above; in 1906, sixteen above; in 1907, ten above; in 1908, thirteen above; in 1909, twlve above; in 1910, twelve above; in 1911, sixteen above; in 1912, five above; in 1913, twenty-three above and 1914 to date 4 above.

TODAY'S COURT.

There was nothing doing in the criminal line at the district court this morning, not even a drunk being arraigned. Judge Avery arrived at the court about 9.30 coming from his home in Braintree by electric cars. As there was no business, however, the court did not come in.

CITY SQUARE BURGLARY

Payson-Mitchell Company Report Loss of $200

The clothing store of the Payson Mitchell Co., in the Welch block in City Square was entered by burglars sometime during Tuesday night. Entrance was effected in the same manner in which this store was entered some time ago. That is the parties climbed to the low roof and smashing a skylight dropped twenty feet to the floor. The frost which covered the windows of the store acted as a shield of the burglars as it prevented them being seen from the street.

The parties tied up four overcoats, some suits of clothing, several pair of shoes some sweaters and jewelry estimated at $200, and evidently made their escape by the rear door, thence across the field to the railroad tracks. The break was discovered by Mr. Payson when he opened the store in the morning.

LOUD MURDER CASE DELAYED

Husband Has Not Recovered from His Injuries

Eugene C. Loud, who has been at the Quincy City Hospital since he attempted suicide at South Weymouth on the afternoon of Jan. 4, was not arraigned in court this morning. The Weymouth police intended to bring him in to answer to a charge of murder of his wife but the hospital physicians would not permit it owing to his condition.

An inquest on the death of his wife will be held on Friday by Judge Avery, and 19 summons have been served by the court officers on people livng in the vicinity of the Loud home.

A Boston firm of lawyers have been retained by Loud and they are at present engaged in collecting evidence. Nearly all of the witnesses have been interviewed.

Loud since his admission to the hospital has been formally placed under arrest and is under police surveillance. His recovery from the severe slash he gave his throat with the razor used in killing his wife has been rapid. It is probable that he will not be arraigned until after the finding of Judge Avery on the inquest.

President Wilson may be 57, but seems to keep out of the bald headed row at the theaters.

Champ Clark says any one can live in Washington on $12,000 a year. And hire a "competent girl?"

HOUGH'S NECK SCHOOL.

An analysis of the monthly attendance report of Supt. Barbour, for the month of December, does not show the great need of increased school accommodations at Hough's Neck as represented by Mayor Miller in his Inaugural Address. The average daily attendance for December, 1912, was 163, and in December, 1913, it was 171, an increase of only eight in a year. The "whole number" at date at the Atherton Hough school is only 189. As this is a four-room building the average per room is 47. If the average daily attendance increases but eight per year, it will be three years before it reaches 200. The Coddington school under the same master had less pupils in December, 1913, than in December, 1912.

HOUSEKEEPING.

Society girls at Washington, the newspapers say, have taken up the fad of keeping house, emulating the example therein of Miss Genevieve Clark, daughter of Speaker Clark. This astonishing young person has taken entire charge of her father's establishment.

Young women usually feel that their mothers know much better how to operate a household, also they do the work much more easily. Furthermore they seem to enjoy cooking a steak or bossing a servant. Hence it would be filial ingratitude to rob them of these diverting activities.

The usual attitude of the mother is that every girl has a right to a good time. Why should she be mussing her clothes in the kitchen, when she might be drinking sweetened froth at the soda fountain with the boys?

However, if the American home is to acquire any reserve capital for old age or misfortune, the average girl ought to know a sirloin steak from a shin bone. At least that it what the boys suspect down in their boots.

Do Not Check Child When He Smashes His Christmas Toys

By Dr. MARIA MONTESSORI, Expert on Child Education

BE gentle with the child who smashes his Christmas toys. The fault is not his, but yours, who provided him with toys too complicated for his immature little mind to understand. LITTLE CHILDREN ARE NOT NATURALLY DESTRUCTIVE, as most parents have reason to suppose, but the instinct to pull the object to pieces is the only natural thing for a child to do with something it does not understand. Most toys given to children are too complicated.

INSTEAD OF EXPECTING CHILDREN TO AMUSE THEMSELVES WITH TOYS THEY DO NOT UNDERSTAND MOTHERS SHOULD ASSUME MORE RESPONSIBILITY FOR THEIR CHILDREN'S ENTERTAINMENT. THE MOTHER WHO DRIVES HER CHILD AWAY FROM HER SIDE WHEN SHE IS WORKING MAKES A PITIFUL MISTAKE. IT IS IMPOSSIBLE TO ESTIMATE THE EFFECT UPON THE CHILD'S MIND IF HE WERE NEVER TURNED AWAY—IF HE COULD ALWAYS BE SURE OF SYMPATHY AND UNDERSTANDING FROM THE PERSON HE LOVES MOST OF ALL.

Confidences would come more easily in the years when they are longed for if they were invited in the years when living was exciting and every act a great adventure. The child should be ALLOWED TO WORK WITH THE MOTHER. Imitation is the first instinct of the awakening mind.

The child wants to do something sensible. Useless play without a meaning does not appeal to him; neither do so many of the tasks set for children in the ordinary schools. That is why children are rebellious and naughty.

China Hopes to Attract American Investors

By General LI YUAN HUNG, Vice President of China

IT may be stated emphatically that China as a government or through individuals does not possess the proper means for the development of the country.

Our principal hope, therefore, is in the foreigner. I wish that I might be justified in saying that it was in the American. The president and myself have discussed this important subject several times, and we have agreed that an appeal or invitation to the moneyed men of the United States should have serious consideration. President Yuan Shih Kai at one time expressed himself as FAVORING A LETTER DIRECT TO PRESIDEN WILSON, setting forth the earnest desire of the Chinese government that Americans become heavy investors in our country. I believe he actually made a start on such a letter.

THE JAPANESE ARE WILLING INVESTORS—TOO WILLING. WERE THEY GIVEN THE LEAST ENCOURAGEMENT OFFICIALLY MILLIONS OF YEN WOULD BE SENT TO CHINA. THIS MONEY WOULD OSTENSIBLY COME FROM PRIVATE INTERESTS, BUT WE KNOW THAT THE GREATER SHARE OF IT WOULD BE FUNDS OF THE IMPERIAL GOVERNMENT ITSELF. ALREADY JAPAN HAS MADE SEVERAL LARGE LOANS TO TWO OF THE PROVINCES, THE AMOUNTS AGGREGATING $12,300,000, BUT THERE WILL BE NO MORE OF THESE, FOR THE REPUBLIC IS AGAINST FURTHER LOANS FOR ANY PURPOSE FROM JAPAN.

We have more trust by far when dealing with Europeans, the English, French, Germans or Belgians, and many large enterprises conducted by Europeans have lately been inaugurated. BUT WE ARE ALL HOPING THAT CHINA AS A SUPERIOR FIELD FOR INVESTMENT WILL ATTRACT THE ATTENTION OF THE CAPITALISTS OF THE UNITED STATES.

ON ROCKS IN BAY OF FUNDY

Fear That All Aboard Liner Cobequid Are Lost

FRANTIC APPEALS FOR AID

They Come In Fragmentary Messages by Wireless, One of Which States Forward Hold Is Filling—Cease as Engine Room Is Flooded and Batteries Are Exhausted

Halifax, Jan. 14.—A wireless cry for help from the Royal Mail steamer Cobequid, fast on the dreaded ledges of Grand Manan, followed five hours later by a final flicker of her radio saying that the ship was filling, has caused grave concern for the 120 persons on board.

The Cobequid was bound for St. John, from the British West Indies, in command of Captain Hawson. She had a crew of 102 men, a number of second class passengers and five in the first class cabin. She was completing her first round trip on this route, and had called at Bermuda, but most of her passengers were from points south of there.

Whether the Cobequid has survived an all-day battering by hurricane seas, and will hold together until one of a fleet of nearly a dozen rescue boats can reach her, is a matter of increasing hourly anxiety.

No trace of the distressed vessel has been found on the east shore of the Bay of Fundy, where she was first reported aground. Nor can a glimpse be seen through the vapor which shrouds the west side of Grand Manan, on one of those numerous ledges it is believed she rests.

The Cobequid was formerly the steamer Goth, and had been pressed into the winter service from Maritime Provinces to the tropics. She sailed from Halifax Dec. 5 for West Indian ports, and started north again Dec. 30 from Grenada. She called at Bermuda on the 9th, and then cleared for St. John.

Approaching the Bay of Fundy, famous for its swift, swirling tides and mountainous seas, a blinding blizzard descended upon the steamer. Captain Hawson was heading for Gannet Rock light, the guide to the western side of the bay, and a warning of the ledges which stretch ten miles to the southward of Grand Manan.

It was about sunrise when the operator at the wireless station at Cape Sable, across the bay, picked up the Cobequid's cry for help. The message said that the vessel had struck a ledge off Briar island, which is on the east side of the bay, and needed immediate assistance.

For the next few hours fragmentary messages were received from the stranded steamer, one of which said that the forward hold was filling. At 9:40 a. m. came the last flicker of the fading wireless to the effect that the engine room was flooded, the batteries were exhausted and the operator was unable to get any sparks.

CAPITAL ROW SETTLED

Russell's decision makes immediately available an appropriation of $750,000 for the construction of a state capital building.

BLEASE'S ANNUAL MESSAGE

Governor Improves the Opportunity to Attack His Foes

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 14.—Governor Blease sent an annual message to the general assembly bristling with references to his political enemies and recommending a variety of legislation ranging from a prohibition of smoking in public dining rooms to a condemnation of a movement to repeal the primary system.

He declared there was no objection to the primary system until he was nominated.

M'DERMOTT'S CASE UP

The committee is expected to pass only upon the legal authority of the house and the merits of the case.

QUINCY CHORAL SOCIETY.

After the Christmas and New Year recess, the Quincy Choral society is about to start activity again in preparation for its second and last concert of this season. It is by general request that the executive board has chosen the oratorio of Mendelssohn, "The Elijah," for this concert, which will be sung in Quincy Music hall, Tuesday evening, April 21st.

The chorus will be assisted by four prominent soloists and will have for accompaniment the Brockton Philharmonic orchestra, which made such an emphatic success at the society's first concert earlier in the season. Mr. Dunham, the new conductor will again direct.

It will be remembered that "Elijah" was the first work performed by the Quincy Choral society after its organization six years ago. Many of the original singers, some of whom have been unable to continue constantly in the chorus, have expressed a desire to rejoin the ranks for this anniversary performance, and to them, as well as to other interested singers, the society extends a cordial invitation. It is requested, however, that those friends send their names and addresses on a postcard to the secretary, Mrs. Edith Mary Page, 39 Upland road, Quincy, before Jan. 20, the date of the first rehearsal, which will be held in Hancock hall, City Square.

FOR DELICATE CHILDREN

A Mother's Letter to Mothers.

Mrs. E. W. Cooper of Bloomfield, N. J., says: "My child, seven years old, had a bad cold and was weak and quite run down in health. She had been in this condition for about six weeks when I began giving her Vinol. It was a wonderful help to the child, breaking up her cold quickly and building up her strength beside. I have also found Vinol a most excellent tonic for keeping up the children's strength during a siege of whooping cough."

Vinol is a wonderful combination of two world-famed tonics—the medicinal body building elements of cod liver oil and iron for the blood, therefore it is a perfectly safe medicine for children, because it is not a patent medicine, everything in it is printed on every package, so mothers may know what they are giving their little ones.

Therefore we ask every mother of a weak, sickly or ailing child in this vicinity to try Vinol on our guarantee. Edward J. Murphy, Druggist, Quincy, Mass.

Give Your Neighbor an Equal Chance

By HOLLAND.

IF you have been buying goods of a mail order house you doubtless think it has been to your advantage to do so. You have believed that you were saving money or were getting better goods. Let us see if this is true.

Have you tried to do business with your local merchant—your neighbor—on the terms that the mail order house exacts? No? Then suppose you try it.

Just go into the store, plank down your cash and tell what you want. You might even tell the merchant that you will wait a few days for the goods. See if your local merchant can't serve you better and as cheaply as the mail order house.

The local merchant usually extends credit for two, four or six months. The mail order house demands cash in advance. It uses your money as working capital. It loses nothing in interest, nothing in bad debts or on slow paying customers. Try this cash in advance plan on the local merchant—the man you know—and see if he can't make it to your advantage to

SPEND YOUR MONEY WHERE YOU MAKE IT.

Advertisers Ask Only A Fair Trial

By HOLLAND.

ADVERTISERS do not attempt to make you agree to buy their goods for the rest of your life. They only want you to give their wares a trial, to subject them to actual test by actual use, and then be guided by experience.

Could anything prove more clearly that the advertiser has supreme confidence in his product, that he is absolutely certain that it will please you, that it will be all he says it is?

It would indeed be foolish to spend money to induce you to buy an article that would prove unsatisfactory and would result in your telling friends and neighbors of your experience. Advertisers spend millions making their trademarks known, and in order to make their trademarks valuable they must stand for a certain standard of worth. Having made their trademarks known, manufacturers exert every effort to keep the goods up to the expected high grade.

In other words I want one hundred thousand missionaries who will make converts to the Federation cause, and who will transform passive members into zealous workers. If each one who reads this letter will do what I ask, the year just begun will mark an epoch in the history of the Federation. When we reflect upon the past and the present, we have a right to feel that God has called our organization to fill a need in our nation's life."

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

The Quincy Women's Club with its meeting Tuesday afternoon at the clubhouse entered upon the second half of the season's program. Owing to the intensely cold weather the attendance was not quite as large as usual. Mrs. Chandler W. Smith, president, called the meeting together for the usual business session, reports being given by the clerk and chairmen of committees.

Preceding the lecture, violin solos were given by Miss Edith Roubound, accompanied at the piano by Miss Agnes B. Ruggles, organist at Bethany church. Miss Roubound played with pleasing artistry and her selections were received with pleasure and applause.

The lecture was under the auspices of the Home Economics committee, Mrs. Maurice P. Spillane, chairman. David J. Hickey took as his subject "What we do not get for our money," and at some length showed much not received for amount expended.

Mrs. Walter E. Burke and Mrs. Herbert S. Barker were hostesses for the afternoon. Pourers at the tea table were Mrs. Wilson Marsh and Mrs. Walter E. Pinkham.

Among the announcements was that of the Twelfth Night Revels to be held by the Civic committee at Quincy Music hall, Friday evening. It would afford amusement for every one, for those participating in the frolic and those looking on. WOLLASTON W. C. T. U.

The regular monthly meeting of the Wollaston Woman's Christian Temperance Union was held at the home of Mrs. Isaiah W. Sneath, 20 Marion street, the vice president, Mrs. George Crothers, presiding. Mrs. Crothers paid high tribute to the late president, Mrs. George H. S. Soule, speaking of her earnestness and helpfulness and her rare charm of winning and helping others. While the Union had met with a great loss in the sudden passing away of such a faithful and untiring worker for the cause of temperance, Mrs. Crothers urged members to rally and faithfully carry on the work Mrs. Soule had so loved and planned for.

Mrs. Crothers was elected president of the Union, after which she spoke on "The Bible in the public schools" giving an able and interesting talk on the subject. She called attention to the deplorable fact that in eight states the Bible is excluded entirely in the schools. No teaching can be a substitute for religious training. The Bible is the best text book on morals. Education is the moral policeman. Education decides what child is, religion what a child will be in the future. Mrs. Crothers quoted Bishop Lawrence, ex-president Roosevelt, Judge Ben Lindsay and others on the subject and in conclusion said the solution is this, that churches should co-operate with the public schools.

HOME DECORATION LECTURES.

A most profitable afternoon was vouchsafed those who attended the talk given Jan. 8, under the auspices of the Art Committee of the Quincy Women's Club. The fine old Colonial home of Miss Margaret L. Thomas was opened for the lecture, the cheerful fire on the hearth made all oblivious to storm without and the gracious presence of Mrs. Theodore Thomas who with Miss Thomas gave such warm welcome all betokened charming hospitality.

L. M. Jennings of Irving and Casson Co., Boylston street, Boston, read a scholarly paper upon the lighting of the home, after which an informal discussion brought out many helpful suggestions.

Later all repaired to the dining room, where Mrs. Thomas presided gracefully at the tea urn and the dispensing of afternoon tea brought to a close a very enjoyable afternoon.

AGAINST BILLBOARDS.

During the business session of the Milton Woman's club, Jan. 5, the following resolution was offered:

"Resolved, that the Woman's Club desires to express its disapproval of the practice of renting vacant lots in this town to advertisers, since billboards detract from the charm and neat appearance of any neighborhood in which they appear. As yet, few billboards are seen in Milton, but a few which have recently appeared are the immediate cause of this protest. Members of the club are hereby pledged to report promptly to the Civics committee the erection of any new billboards that they see in order that the committee may take such action as may be practicable towards discouraging that form of advertising."

This resolution was unanimously adopted with the amendments that a copy be sent to the Selectmen and that the members refrain from purchasing articles so advertised.

WOMEN PLEASE NOTICE.

Dr. Hugh Cabot in "Some observations upon sex instinct" at the meeting last week of the Ladies Physiological Institute in Boston emphasized in a way which impressed all his listeners, the impossibility and absurdity of men thinking they can understand all the instincts of women, and vice versa. He spoke of the expressions of natural law; the causes which have brought about the extraordinary dual standard of morals; the specialization brought about by civilization and the misconceptions of some who have espoused the feminist movement. There should be, Dr. Cabot said, an equality of the sexes; there can never be a similarity. They should not think of life's duties as competition but co-operation. He was especially earnest in what he said regarding the present misguided, misdirected attitude toward unmarried mothers. He blamed women for admitting into their friendships men whose lives are known to be unworthy the respect of honorable people and was emphatic in his denunciation of the present mode of dancing which "has neither beauty nor rhythm, but is purely sex stimulation." When women really make up their minds to put a stop to such things, he said, it can be done.

EUGENE YSAYE.

This is almost as much a year of violinists as last season. Kreisler, Thibaud and Elman have all been heard here and next Sunday afternoon the startling Ysaye who is returning to America for a brief tour will give his first recital of the season in Symphony hall. Last year Ysaye played in Boston a number of times and fully reestablished himself in favor with the public. He showed that his skill and musicianship are as perfect as ever.

This year, as last, he will have the invaluable assistance of Camille Decreus, the very accomplished Belgian pianist. Together they will play Faure's Sonata in A Major. Mr. Ysaye will play two Concertos, Mendelssohns and Wieniawskis in D Minor. As

Mr. Noack of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Mr. Kreisler have just played the Mendelssohn Concerto, it will be interesting to see what the great Belgian does with it as compared with them. He will also play an air by Handel and Saint-Saen's "Havanaise,"

J. Q. A. FIELD DECLINES

E. R. Billings Appointed Guardian of Mrs. Couchier

In view of the many letters that have been written for the public press and the general comment in the case of Mrs. Catherine Torrey Couchier, who is now confined in the asylum at Taunton, the proceedings in the case before Judge Flint in the probate court at Quincy this morning will be of interest.

The case came before the probate court on petition of John Q. A. Field, as friend and nearest relative, for the appointment of a guardian to look after Mrs. Couchier's property. Mr. Field was represented in the case by Frank A. Tirrell, who stated to the court that Mr. Field's preference was that some other person than he should be appointed as guardian for Mrs. Couchier.

After hearing the evidence presented, the court appointed Edward R. Billings of Roxbury as guardian of Mrs. Couchier.

It was announced that as soon as Mr. Billings received his appointment steps would be taken to have Mrs. Couchier removed from the asylum at Taunton, if in the opinion of the physicians her condition was such as to warrant, and that she would be then placed in some home where she could be taken care of.

Mr. Billings will probably receive his official appointment some time this week.

In view of the many conflicting stories that have been circulated, it is only fair to state that Mrs. Couchier was not removed to the asylum at the instigation of Mr. Field.

Mr. Field, as trustee, had her taken to a hospital in Brookline for observation and it was while there that the physicians at the Brookline institution examined her and pronounced her insane, and ordered her removal to Taunton.

The proceedings in court this morning were taken by Mr. Field in order to protect Mrs. Couchier's property.

☞The thrilling three act photo drama, "The streets of New York," which has been called Dion Boucicault's masterpiece, will be given tonight at Music hall. The play takes place in New York in 1907, during the great panic and is full of thrilling incidents.

Eternal Feminine.

Margaret, aged seven years, was playing housekeeper. As she pretended to wipe the perspiration from her face she turned from the toy washboard upon which was rinsing out a handkerchief, and, addressing her brother, a year younger, said: "There you are sitting at your ease and me breaking my bones doing your washing."

HOW ABOUT YOUR TREES?

Look out for brown tailed and gypsy moths now. Burn up the nest and get your neighbor to do the same. Each nest contains from 300 to 350 eggs. Destroy them now and save the trees for shade and fruit. The brown tailed moth nest looks like a brown curled-up leaf. It is often found high up on the trees or out on the branches. The gypsy moth nest is yellow. You will find little oblong clusters looking like bits of chamois leather in crevices of the trees. If you press them you will find them soft. Sometimes there are 600 worms in these nests, scarcely ever less than 350.

The leopard moths nest is of a dark color and it is rather sticky. It is often found on the wild cherry tree. It grows in small circles about the limbs. These can be burned off.

The brown tailed moths can be burned off by making a torch of a kerosene rag tied to a long pole. The gypsy moth nests should be scraped off and burned and the part of the tree where the nest was, treated with creosote.

CURLEY NEXT BOSTON MAYOR

Has 5720 More Votes Than Kenny In City Election

POLITICAL UPSET IS COMPLETE

Men Who Have Controlled Votes of Certain Wards For Years Step Down and Out—Citizens' Municipal League and Good Government Forces Are Routed

Boston, Jan. 14.—Congressman James M. Curley was elected mayor of Boston at the city election.

He won with a majority of 5720 votes, receiving a total of 43,262 votes, as against 37,542 for his opponent, Thomas J. Kenny, the candidate indorsed by the Citizens' Municipal league and the Good Government association.

The total vote cast was 80,559, as against 95,393 in the Storrow-Fitzgerald contest four years ago.

Two of the three candidates indorsed by the Good Government association for the council, George W. Coleman and Daniel J. McDonald, were elected.

William H. Woods defeated Henry E. Hagan for third place in the council contest by 266 votes. The other two defeated candidates for the city council were Fred J. Kneeland and Patrick A. Kearns.

David D. Scannell and Michael H. Corcoran, indorsed by the Public Schools association, defeated James M. Keyes and Frederick L. Bogan for the school committee by very large majorities.

The city was carried for license by 21,433 votes.

Curley won a notable victory, carrying sixteen out of the twenty-six wards of the city. His victory was made all the more remarkable because he had the opposition of many of the Democratic leaders of the city. Although Mayor Fitzgerald was not in the open for Kenny it was well known that his sympathies leaned that way in the contest.

With the defeat of Kenny the control of the Democratic machine in Boston passed from Mayor Fitzgerald to Curley. Together with the mayor, Messrs. Timilty of ward 18, Leary of ward 2 and Donovan of ward 9, picturesque figures in politics, who for years have controlled the votes of their wards, stepped down and out.

The upset was complete and tremendous. A new political machine was created in a day. Instead of Lomasney-Fitzgerald, the title of the controlling forces in the city now reads Lomasney-Curley. Within a year it will probably read James M. Curley.

The rout of the Good Government and Citizens' Municipal league forces, backing Kenny, was complete.

With a plendid plurality handed to him by Martin Lomasney in wards 6 and 8, Curley swept out into the suburban wards and upset all calculations by either holding his own or capturing these former strongholds of the "reform" forces. The heavy vote cast by the Progressives and the unwillingness of the Republicans to move themselves to the polls on account of the cold are the reasons given for this.

The vote cast was very light. Two wards, which formerly rolled up tremendous majorities for the candidate of the G. A. A., fell far behind, while the out-of-town Republican wards turned to Curley in a surprising manner.

Councilman Kenny, no whit cast down by his defeat, visited his headquarters and sent congratulations to Curley.

Mayor-elect Curley was born in 1874 in this city, the son of Michael and Sarah Clancy Curley.

Curley went to the old Dearborn grammar school. His father was in the employ of the city. At the age of 10 the son was forced to seek work to help take care of the family. His first job was as night helper in a drug store. Later he attended the evening high school and then became a salesman and collector for a grocery store. Later on he became a traveling salesman, and then accepted a clerkship with an insurance company.

The mayor-elect entered politics at the age of 20. In time his friends came to look upon him as possessed of a keen political insight. Thirteen years ago he founded the Tammany club of ward 17, which he has now renamed the "Pro Bono Publico club."

This made Curley the leader in ward 17 politics. He dominated the club from the start and made it a strong political organization. It has been his boast that since the club was organized "no man, woman or child of ward 17 has been cared for by the Salvation Army and during the club's existence there has not been a single person buried from ward 17 as a pauper."

In 1900 he was elected to the city council and was re-elected the following year. He was elected to the house of representatives in 1902 and 1903, and in 1904 was elected alderman of Boston, serving until 1909. He was returned to the city council in 1910-1911. He was elected to congress in 1910 and again in 1912.

The mayor-elect was married in 1906 to Miss Mary E. Herlihy. They have four children, James M., Jr., Mary, Dorothy and Paul.

NEW ENGLAND HIT BY EXTREME COLD

Two Schooners Missing and Vessels In Distress

Boston, Jan. 14.—North Pole weather rushed down on New England on a mile-a-minute gale, causing distress on land and disasters at sea.

There is grave concern over the fate of two schooners, the John Paul and the British schooner Greta.

The John Paul sank in Nantucket sound while being towed to Vineyard Haven by the revenue cutter Acushnet, which had picked her up abandoned. Not a word has been heard from her crew of six.

The British schooner Greta has mysteriously vanished. She was sighted at dark Monday anchored close to Half Moon shoal, with topmast gone, flying signals of distress. No trace of her can now be found.

Five other vessels are reported in distress off the New England coast.

Boston shivered in the grip of the coldest day ever recorded at the local weather bureau. Two weather records were broken. There were four deaths and prostrations were many.

"WILL GET THAW YET"

Jerome Will Fight Proposed Bail For Fugitive to a Finish

Concord, N. H., Jan. 14.—William T. Jerome telephoned from New York city to Bernard Jacobs, local attorney for the state of New York, to fight the proposed bail of Harry K. Thaw every inch of the way.

"I shall come to Concord myself at the time of the bail hearing," said Jerome over the wire to Jacobs, "and I shall fight this case to the utmost."

This declaration is in line with Jerome's statement of the day before that the report of the Thaw sanity commission avails nothing and that he will "get Thaw yet."

Abel's Rebellion

How "He Made Good"

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Abel Durham had lived for years at Miss Pollock's boarding house and had patiently eaten the dishes that were set before him till one Sunday morning he revolted at the usual corned beef hash or bacon and eggs. He declined to eat her breakfast and sought Miss Pollock and gave notice that he would leave. He gave, among other reasons for his doing so, that he was about to be married.

Anastasia Pollock's head went up proudly. Fire came to her blue eyes. "Biddy," she said smoothly, "ask Mrs. Jasper if she will have some more corned beef hash!"

* * * * * * *

Abel Durham pattered down the brownstone steps of his boarding place and wandered aimlessly to the corner, where he waited for a car. His eye glanced slyly back at Miss Pollock's comfortable abode, and he stifled a sigh as he thought of its many good qualities, its homelike atmosphere and its home cooked food, and to one who had been a dweller in boarding houses during twenty years of city life, Miss Pollock's house was a pleasant refuge. But the monotony of the daily meals jarred upon him.

Each day in the week brought its allotted bill of fare, and there was no wavering from this rule. As her mother had ordered so Miss Anastasia carried on the house when the mantle fell upon her delicate shoulders.

This rebellion of Abel Durham was the outcome of several years of hopeful waiting for a change. Now he had not only given up his pleasant front room with the open fireplace, but he had told Miss Pollock he was to be married. How to make good this last reckless statement was puzzling the usually tranquil mind of the bachelor. Abel Durham had not courted a girl for twenty years, not since he had left Telfleet village to enter business life in the great city.

"I will do it. I've got to make good," said Abel, with a sickly smile, as he boarded his car and rode to the railroad station. He bought a ticket for Telfleet and took his place in the stuffy, cindery coach that the railroad company considered good enough for the little single track Telfleet branch.

"Whoooo-eeee-e-e-e-e!" shrieked the engine as it wound away among the hills toward Telfleet.

Abel Durham looked out of the window and noted the familiar landmarks as the train rumbled through villages, over bridges or skirted the river bank in its progress. Suddenly a large mountain overshadowed them.

"Telfleet mountain," murmured Abel without joy in his tones.

Since he had left the home of his boyhood all his family had moved to the far west, so that Abel was not going home to any near relatives. Perhaps there were distant cousins, but it might be they were dead or had forgotten him.

Abel Durham was bound on a singular errand.

He was going back to Telfleet to try to resurrect one of his old romances. He had told Miss Pollock he was to be married, and married he must be. His busy life had left no room for sentiment, and so he perforce must fall back upon the half finished romances of his young manhood. There was pretty Amy Cox. She had given him a pink rose when he left Telfleet and told him she would wait for him—a hundred years if necessary!

Somehow Abel had forgotten all about Amy in the rush of business. They had corresponded for awhile, and now he couldn't remember who had been the first to stop writing.

"Telfleet!" called the brakeman.

The station stage backed down, and the driver yelled to him: "Stage! All—yup!"

Abel climbed into the long, swaying vehicle and rattled around in its emptiness as the big white horses bore them through the village streets at a helter skelter pace.

"Where you want to go?" called the driver from a corner of his mouth.

"Philander Cox's place," replied Abel, turning red.

"Up mountain way," muttered the man as if for his own information.

The stage whirled perilously around the corner by the postoffice and rattled along the road that ran by the river bank. At last they began to climb the mountain toward a white house perched among the oaks.

"Whoa—yup!" called the driver, and Abel paid his fare and dismounted. The stage rattled down the mountain, and Abel went into the yard of the familiar place.

The same boxwood bordered the paths, and the same roses bloomed, and the same bees tumbled in and out of the blossoms. He felt a boy once more as he settled his necktie and started toward the house.

A pretty girl sitting on the steps of the house arose as he approached.

Abel Durham stood with his hat in his hand, his eyes staring at this reincarnation of Amy Cox's youth. How had Amy contrived to remain so youthful? He was suddenly conscious of the bald spot on his head and of the crowsfeet about his fine eyes. At Miss Pollock's table and among his business associates he never thought of his age; in the face of Amy's perpetual youth he felt like Rip Van Winkle.

"Amy, I don't believe you remember me." He smiled tentatively at her.

The girl smiled vaguely and edged toward the front door. "Ma!" she called.

"Well?" cried an impatient voice from within.

"Here's—here's an old gentleman to see somebody," she ended crudely and then fled in the direction of the gate, where a young man in a red necktie was suddenly waiting to take her to drive in a shining new buggy.

"Old gentleman!" Abel Durham turned crimson at the opprobrious term.

The front door opened and a faded little woman came out drying her hands on her gingham apron. She had obviously just concluded washing the Sunday dinner dishes, and she sank into the nearest rocking chair with a weary sigh, removing her apron and tossing it aside all in one swift gesture.

"Howdy do?" she queried without interest as she surveyed Abel's immaculate figure. "Won't you sit down a spell? Pa's over to Westwood today. I guess you're the new preacher from North Telfleet, ain't you?"

Abel Durham stared at her. This faded little gray haired woman was the mother of the girl he had taken for Amy. So this must be Amy. Amy must be married! A chill feeling took possession of his well ordered being, and he suddenly thought of his room at Miss Pollock's, and a great fear assailed him that Miss Anastasia might rent the room to some one else before he returned.

"I'm not the new preacher," he said, with a sickly smile. "I'm Abel Durham. Don't you remember me?"

The woman sat up and peered down at him from Amy Cox's beautiful blue eyes. "Abel Durham!" she gasped at last. "To think of your catching me like this! I'd never have known you—you've grown so fat!"

"Fat?" echoed Abel helplessly.

She laughed with amusement. "Don't you know it? My, don't you remember how thin you used to be? The boys used to call you 'Skinny' Durham. I remember once Jake Fenlow called you that and you struck out at him and you had an awful fight. You licked him, too, although you was such a skinny little fellow! You couldn't lick him now; you're too fat!" laughed Amy.

"I couldn't, eh? What has become of Jake Fenlow?" demanded Abel fiercely.

"I married him," said Amy calmly.

There was a long silence.

"I've got to be going," said Abel suddenly. "I was just looking around the mountain, and I thought I'd drop in and see you."

"Glad to see you. Come in whenever you're passing by," invited Mrs. Fenlow ambiguously. "Jamie, what are you up to in there?" She darted inside the house, and Abel Durham took advantage of her absence to depart.

He hurried down the mountain road, panting and puffing with the unaccustomed exertion. He overtook the shining new buggy and noted with a sickening recollection of his own lost youth that the young man in the red necktie had his arm around pretty Amy's slender waist. He heard the girl giggle as he rushed past them in a cloud of dust raised by his own hurried feet.

Along by the river bank he overtook the stage making its lazy way toward the station, and he buried himself in its musty depths with a sigh of relief. All the way back to the city his mind was busy with plans for the future, so that when in the quiet of the Sunday evening he presented himself at Miss Anastasia Pollock's parlor door he was not only immaculately garbed, but his mind was set in order as well.

Anastasia was reading by the light of a pink shaded lamp, and a pink shawl was thrown about her shoulders, lending a fictitious glow to her pale cheeks. Her fair hair was slightly loosened and softened the sharp outlines drawn by relentless time.

For a moment Abel Durham watched her, a queer little feeling of wanting to protect Anastasia from the storms of life disturbing his heart. Remove Miss Pollock from this boarding house atmosphere, place her in a charming home, let her rest and rest again—why! Anastasia would be handsome! He longed to do it, and the desire had been born in him way back there on the mountain, when he had realized that it was too late to take up the broken threads of youth. The threads of his middle age were interwoven with the threads of Anastasia Pollock's life. Together they would make a fabric of gray and silver, with the rosy thread of romance running through!

"Oh, Mr. Durham!" fluttered Anastasia as he closed the door and came forward.

"I can't go away, Miss Pollock," said Abel firmly.

"You said you were going to be married," murmured Anastasia. "I suppose you'll want to bring the lady here?"

Abel shook his head.

"I shall never marry any one unless you will have me, Miss Pollock, Anastasia. I should say," he said. "I hope you don't mind if I call you Anastasia?"

It took the bewildered Anastasia a half hour to understand that Abel Durham really meant what he said, and then she drooped her tired head and said that Abel might call her anything he liked.

"I'll call you wife, then," said Abel boldly as he kissed her cheek.

And it is a significant fact that the Durhams never will permit a dish of corned beef hash at their cosy breakfast table.

MEXICO RUNS OUT OF MONEY

Interest on All Government Indebtedness Suspended

A PROCLAMATION BY HUERTA

Declares In Effect That Country Is Bankrupt—All Foreigners In Capital Equipped With Weapons—Rebel Assault Upon City May Be Delayed During Winter Season

Mexico City, Jan. 14.—President Huerta issued a decree suspending for one year the payment of interest on all government indebtedness, both foreign and domestic, including all bonds.

All foreign governments will be notified of this action immediately. This proclamation is the most important issued by Huerta since he assumed office, as far as the financial affairs of the country are concerned.

It is in effect a proclamation of national bankruptcy, and is believed to be due to the fact that all negotiations for foreign loans have collapsed. Another government decree provides that any person refusing to accept the state bank notes recently declared legal tender shall be arrested.

Arrangements for the defense of foreigners in case the capital is captured by the Zapata rebels are completed. These plans were inaugurated by a defense committee, comprising British, German, French and Spanish citizens, and all foreigners have been equipped with weapons.

General Villa, rebel leader in northern Mexico, has decided to take his time in capturing Mexico City. A campaign taking up the balance of the winter may be made around the capital before the final assault is launched.

Terrible hardships are besetting the caravan of 4500 federal soldiers, camp followers and civil engineers, which is being conveyed by the United State troops to Marfa, Tex., from Presidio. The weather is bitterly cold, the Mexicans are poorly clad and food is scarce. More than 1000 of the fugitives are women.

Speculation at Washington

Washington, Jan. 14.—Announcement by the Huerta government of its intention to default in the payment of the semi-annual interest on the bonds of the Mexican national debt created much interest in diplomatic circles here and brought out much speculation, especially among diplomatic representatives accredited to the countries in which the greater part of the loans are held.

While the state department officials were understood to accept this step as a natural development in the government's policy of waiting for the collapse of the Huerta regime, no comment was forthcoming.

B.G DROP IN PR CES

Wholesalers In New York Slash Prices of Woolen Goods

New York, Jan. 14.—Material reductions in the wholesale price of staple serges, unfinished worsteds, clays, cheviots and other woolen goods for the fall of 1914 were announced in the trade. The cut is understood to be a direct result of the new tariff schedules and anticipated competition from abroad.

Prices on serges, clays, unfinished worsted and French backs are 29 to 37½ cents below last fall. The heaviest reduction, nearly 33 percent, is on Washington serge.

Whether the ultimate consumer will reap any benefit from the reduction is a matter of conjecture.

NOT RECEIVED WITH FAVOR

Opposition to Census to Show Facts Regarding Race Suicide

Battle Creek, Mich., Jan. 14.—The National Race Betterment conference balked at a suggestion by Professor Wilcox of Cornell that it start a national census to determine reasons for "race suicide."

Wilcox said foreign-born women bear 75 percent more children in America than native-born women.

SKIRT WEIGHTS APPROVED

Custom Upheld by Jury to Whom Question Was Submitted

New York, Jan. 14.—The custom of weighting women's dresses with metal discs to help them to keep their shape was approved by a jury.

Mrs. Margaret Fine sued Benwit, Feller & Co. for $20,000 because, while she was brushing a dress sold by the defendants, one of these weights flew out and hurt her eye.

Record Postoffice Bill

Washington, Jan. 14.—The postoffice appropriation bill, carrying $306,953,115, the largest amount by $23,000,000 every asked in a similar measure, has been reported to the house.

Gloucester, Mass., Jan. 14.—Mrs. Mary McPhail, 72 years old, was burned to death in her rooms here while kindling a fire.

UNUSUAL PROSPERITY

Underwood Predicts It Will Prevail During the Next Year

Washington, Jan. 14.—An industrial awakening "that will put the panic preachers to shame" was promised by Democratic Leader Underwood, after Republicans in the house had painted dark pictures of ruin and desolation as the result of the Democratic legislation.

"The Democratic party," declared Underwood, "has achieved for the American people more than has been accomplished heretofore in the history of our government. We have secured the results which the Republican party struggled for in the course of twenty years; the results which they gave their pledges to secure and which for term after term of congress were left undone. I look forward to unusual prosperity throughout the country in the next year."

DEATHS NUMBER 435,500

Awful Human Waste by War In the Bulgarian Territory

Sofia, Jan. 14.—A striking illustration of the terrible human waste in war is furnished by the census just taken of the new Bulgarian territories acquired by conquest.

The male population of that portion of Macedonia allotted to Bulgaria was reduced during the hostilities from 175,000 to 42,500. In Bulgarian Thrace only 225,000 remain out of a total before the war of 499,000, while in the district of Mustapha Pasha, where fighting waged so long and fiercely, only 4000 males are left out of 33,000, the total before fighting began.

In other words only 217,500 are left of 707,000 males, the difference being 435,500.

COURT CIRCLES MAY BE GIVEN A SHOCK

Popular Magyar Actress Perhaps Slain by a Nobleman

Budapest, Jan. 14.—The Hungarian authorities are confronted by a murder mystery in which the victim was one of the most beautiful and popular of Magyar actresses, and her suspected slayer is a member of the nobility.

The police say they are on close trail of a man whose arrest would cause a shock among the aristocracy and even in court circles of central Europe.

The victim was Elsie Tercsanyi, a music hall artist. She was strangled to death in an automobile, her body was taken to her home and was stuffed in a trunk.

The actress' housekeeper said her mistress went out automobiling on Friday with three men.

WARSHIPS ON STRIKE DUTY

All Trades at Pretoria and Miners Have Also Quit Work

Durban, Natal, Jan. 14.—Warships will aid the troops of South Africa in quelling turbulence at the railroad station. The flagship Simonstown was ordered held in readiness to go up the coast at a moment's notice.

All trades at Pretoria have struck in sympathy with the railroad employes. The miners went out last night. The authorities have forbidden native laborers to go the streets after dark.

The governor waived his exemption from arrest in order to have a final test of the law.

NO SESSION PROBATE COURT.

The severe cold weather was responsible for a delay in the session of the probate court scheduled to be held in Quincy today. J. Raphael McCoole, the new Registrar of Probate, was scheduled to make his first appearance at the probate session in Quincy. Judge Flint who came over from Weymouth arrived at the Court House at 9 o'clock, but on account of the delay in train service Mr. McCoole was late in arriving. There were quite a few in court waiting to transact business but nothing could be done until the register arrived. After waiting until 10.30 most of those present got tired of waiting and had their business postponed until the session at Dedham or Brookline.

HOW TO TREAT DRUNKENNESS

Address of Judge Murray Before Wollaston Unitarian Club

Delayed train service and the cold weather served to cut down the attendance to one half at the monthly meeting of the Wollaston Unitarian club, Tuesday evening, where Hon. Michael J. Murray of Boston was scheduled to speak on "Our courts and criminal procedure."

Although the above subject was announced, Judge Murray confined himself to the subject of "drunkenness in Massachusetts." He was recently appointed chairman of the State committee to investigate drunkenness.

Speaking not only from his experience on this committee, but also as justice for the last seven years of the busiest criminal court in the United States and from 17 years as practising attorney, Judge Murray's address was pregnant as well as interesting.

"The problem of drunkenness," said Judge Murray, "is one that is knocking loud at the doors of the Massachusetts Legislature this year. It should receive serious and hopeful consideration. We can't dodge it.

"We can't afford to approach it in a spirit of parsimoniousness Our commerce and industry will not survive if the virility of our manhood is not protected.

"The man who gets drunk should not be regarded as a criminal if we hope o secure his reformation. The matter should be approached from a different viewpoint.

"The man in the dock for drunkenness is a sick man. He is not treated as such, but as a prisoner. In all the Commonwealth there is not an institution where such a man may be sent for intelligent, humane and scientific treatment.

"The public hospitals don't want these men. Their outcries disturb the other patients. At the relief stations each year from 300 to 400 men suffering with delirium tremens are treated each year. They are strapped to beds, the one method the medical world says is utterly wrong.

"We should build hospitals for the unfortunates where they may be taken and treated in a manner that the medical profession will speak of with approval and not condemnation.

"After they have been restored to health, send them forth to the world recovered from their sickness and made to appreciate the danger of going back to that condition.

"The prison is not the place for these men unless we expect them to lead future lives of weakness, shame, disaster and crime.

"Why not cut at the root of drunkenness and have recourse to prohibition? Because the majority of the male population are users of liquors in some form or other and to at tempt to put on the statute books a law a variance with a majority of the male populaion would be to promulgate a law that could never be enforced."

A portion of Judge Murray's address was devoted to facts and figures in which he told of the large number of arrests for drunkenness and the degenerating effects of a prison sentence.

Upon motion of Charles E. Barker it was voted that Dr. Charles E. Monroe be chairman of a committee to organize a club bowling team to challenge the Congregational club and attempt to "come back" from the defeat of last year.

The usual roast beef supper was served to a third of the regular number.

CITY SQUARE FIRE ALARM

Slight Fire in Barber Shop on Saville Street

The alarm from Box 26 at 10.27 this morning called the fire apparatus to slight fire in the barber shop of Paul Gunella at 14 Saville street. The fire was caused by the overheating of a small cast iron stove, setting fire to the wood work about the chimney. The upper part of the building and the Chinese laundry at the other end of the building were filled with smoke, but the fire damage was very slight. The alarm brought apparatus from Quincy Point and the Atlantic auto chemical, in addition to the Central Station apparatus.

GET NOTHING FOR PAINS

Robbers Crack Big Safe In Boston Office For the Third Time

Boston, Jan. 14.—Safe blowers visited the office of Colpitt's ticket and tourist agency on the second floor of the building at 333 Washington street and blew the two-ton steel safe, but failed to get through the inside door, escaping without getting anything for their pains.

This is the third time within a year that the Colpitts office has been broken into and the safe blown. The work is believed to have been that of professionals, as the blowing off of the big outside door was a clean job that could not have been done by others than professionals.

The safe contained tickets and money amounting to $5000, and it is believed the robbers knew this but were frightened away before they could get into the inside of the safe.

WILSON ON BIG BUSINESS

Members of Cabinet Get Outline of His Forthcoming Message

Washington, Jan. 14.—President Wilson gave the members of the cabinet his ideas on the government's relation to big business, the field that anti-trust legislation should cover in the present session of congress and the spirit with which he believed the task should not be approached.

Peace and not war, a feeling of friendly conciliation rather than of hostile antagonism, and yet a constructive program that will eliminate uncertainty about the law and stimulate the growth of legitimate business are the fundamentals of the president's plan of action to be embodied in the message which he will read at a joint session of congress next week.

SAYS PATRIOTISM SHOULD COME FIRST

Garrison Expresses Opinions Concerning National Guard

Washington, Jan. 14.—"Without efficiency the national guard is a mere money consuming agent with no value whatver," Secretary Garrison told the adjutant generals of the organized militia who are having a meeting in Washington.

"I would not give a dollar for sentiment," he said, "but I would give every dollar possible to make the national guard more efficient."

The secretary asked the officers for their opinion of a militia pay bill to give the war department greater jurisdiction over the guard and make it the seat of authority in military affairs. He said he was in favor of paying militiamen only for what they sacrificed in their civilian callings when in military work. Patriotism should be their motive, he said.

Several Streets With Over $100,000 Worth of Property

The Daily Ledger begins today the publication of the assessed valuation of the city, street by street, the figures having been compiled by Warren W. Adams, chairman of the Board of Assessors. All streets of Ward One, with the exception of those at Houghs Neck are presented in the first installment.

In the first column of figures is given the valuation of the land upon the street within the ward lines; that is a part of Hancock street, for example, appears in the Ward One list, a part in Ward Five, and a part in Ward Six.

In the second column of figures is given the valuation of all buildings on both sides of the street.

In some cases it will be observed that the land values exceeds the value of the buildings, but on most of the streets in Ward One the value of the buildings exceed the value of the land. Some of the exceptions are Adams street, Canal street, Coddington, Depot, Granite, Hancock, Irving place, Maple, Saville, School and Temple streets.

By the addition of the two columns it will be seen that the valuation of the property on Hancock street, between School street and Butler's Brook is over a million dollars, $1,411,450. The streets with a valuation over $100,000 are: Adams, Granite, Goffe, Washington, Chestnut, Cranch, Field, Glendale road, Greenleaf, Merrymount road, Quarry, Revere road, Spear, Upland road and Whitwell streets.

The Ward Two list will appear in a few days, to be followed by the other wards, and then Houghs Neck and Squantum.

The Ward One street values are:

MAY PURCHASE HOMESTEAD

January Meeting of Abigail Phillips Quincy Chapter

The blustering cold weather did not keep away the members of the Abigail Phillips Quincy chapter, D. A. R. of Wollaston from the January meeting held at the residence of Mrs. Rufus Tobey. The regent, Mrs. E. E. Jameson presided.

There was considerable discussion over the report of the committee, Mrs. W. F. Jones chairman, appointed to consider the possibility of the purchase of the Quincy homestead, the residence of Abigail Phillips Quincy. It is the oldest house in Wollaston, and a fine specimen of early architecture in good condition. As the chapter is small, the undertaking is a serious one. The committee was finally ordered to continue its investigations as to ways and means and report later.

The chapter reports the addition of one new member, Mrs. Bessie Shaw Reynolds of Wollaston.

As many of the chapter members have been long acquainted with Mrs. Caroline Torrey Couchier, whose sad case is arousing so much interest, it was voted that the corresponding secretary, Mrs. Charles A. Pinkham, be instructed to express to Mrs. Nelson V. Titus the approval and sympathy of this chapter in her efforts for Mrs. Couchier's welfare.

The paper of the afternoon by Mrs. T. C. Martin was upon "Old Weymouth." It showed how much the success of the early settlements in Massachusetts depended on the calibre of the first arrivals, and also how interwoven town and church history were in the records of the first one hundred years in the Massachusetts colonies.

At the close, refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by her daughter Miss Avis Tobey.

INSTALLATION OF DIVISION 5

The officers of Division 5, Ancient Order of Hibernians were installed Wednesday evening in Hibernian hall by State Treasurer Dennis Slattery of East Weymouth, assisted by County Secretaries Thomas Welch of Quincy and James Knox of East Weymouth.

President—John Donahue.

Vice president—Timothy Sullivan.

Recording secretary—James M. Cantfill.

Financial secretary—Martin O'Shaughnessey.

Treasurer—Edward Powers.

Sentinel—Thomas Cotter.

Sergeant-at-Arms—Daniel Donahue.

Chairman of the standing committee—Daniel Mannix.

Remarks were made by State Treasurer Slattery, County secretaries Welch and Knox and others. Vocal solos were rendered by Jeremiah Hanlon, Louis Caravaglio and Thomas Murphy. The report of the auditing committee, stating that $1,700 in sick and death benefits have been paid during the past year, which brings the total of the past five years up to $5,745, shows the broad scope of the good work done by Division 5.

John Donahue, the new president is but 22 years of age. He is the youngest Hibernian in the state ever elected to the presidency of a division and is thought to be the youngest president in the country. He has been a member of the division for several years.

Clergyman Tells of Experiences as Coal Miner

It was comforting on Wednesday evening with the temperature near the zero mark to be assured that there need be no anxiety relative to the country's supply of coal. Rev. Nathaniel Matthews of Lowell, formerly a breaker boy in Pennsylvania was the speaker at the January meeting of Bethany Brotherhood and his subject was "Black Diamonds." He is well informed on all phases of the coal mining industry, which he said ranks second to agriculture in the United States. It is to be found in more states than generally supposed, and in every continent. We need not worry over the supply he said, but might have some concern over the jump in price from the coal mines to our coal bins.

"The miners," he said, "were poorly paid, not averaging over $2 per day, and it was a dangerous occupation. For every 23,000 tons of coal mined there is a loss of life, and the number of one-armed men, one-legged men, and injured is appalling. There were also many widows and orphans.

Mr. Matthews, explained the four methods of minning—stripping, slooping, drifting and shafting, saying the latter was the most common. He took his hearers on an imaginary trip in colliery No. 11. Entering the cage or elevator, they descended 650 feet, thence travelled through a tunnel 1300 feet, then down, down, down, and through other tunnels, a distance of three miles from the place entered. He told how the coal was mined and brought to the surface. How air was forced down and through the whole mine for ventilation; how water was handled; how the breakers were operated how land over the mines is often depressed, and of the hardships.

A rising vote of thanks was extended the speaker. The committee of the evening, William Walker, Joseph Prout and James Moorehead, Jr., served ice cream and crackers.

Mrs. Catherine Reed, mother of Frank A. Reed, treasurer of the Quincy co-operative bank, died Tuesday at her home in Dorchester.

Dr. W. L. Sargent Addresses Bethany Union

The January meeting of Bethany Women's' Union was held in the chapel Wednesday from 11 to 5. Lunch was served at noon under the direction of Mrs. Charles Barron.

The afternoon session opened at 2.30 with the president, Mrs. H. Everett Crane presiding. Rev. Banjamin A. Willmott addressed the union on "The Higher Altruism—as related to missions." He spoke especially of the enormous growth of the altruistic spirit in America and of the effect of this growth on the manners and customs of the people in India and China. It was shown how our missionaries were given power such as had never been granted before and that all missionary work was based on this higher altruism.

Mrs. L. E. Wetherell had charge of the devotional exercises and made an appeal to young mothers especially, for the old-fashioned filial courtesy. Instances of the lack of courtesy in our strenuous modern life were contrasted with the gentle old--fashioned courtesy of a generation ago—showing that the phrase—Honor thy father and mother— was not held in proper respect today.

After a short business meeting which consisted of reading of records and reports of different committees the meeting was taken in charge by Mrs. Ernest Collins, chairman of the Home Culture committee. Mrs. Collins introduced Dr. Walter L. Sargent who read a most instructive paper on "Children's Diseases." The diseases of early childhood were spoken of including especially, imperfect digestion and dentition. More time was given to infectious diseases including diphtheria, whooping cough, measles, mumps, scarlet fever and chicken pox. The symptoms were given together with results, and several charts were shown, the one contracting the rash of scarlet fever and measles being especially helpful. At the conclusion of the paper, Dr. Sargent answered questions pertaining to the ills of childhood.

Members of the Junior Choir sang two selections and the program was concluded with the serving of tea under the direction of Mrs. John Knowles and her assistants.

BOARD OF TRADE RE-ELECT PRESIDENT

Secretary Reviews Accomplishments of Year and Work Now Pending

Efforts to Raise Capital for New Industry

The annual meeting of the Board of Trade was held Wednesday evening in the Adams building.

Two business men were elected to membership, Lewis N. Curtis and Robert B. Craig.

The annual report of the secretary showed the membership to date to be 327, that during the year 133 had been added, 40 resigned and five died.

The report also gave a resume of what the Board had tried to accomplish and had accomplished during the year. Owing to the activities of the Board an appropriation of $100,000 had been secured for the boulevard and an appropriation of $9,000 for dredging the channel and basin at Houghs Neck. With the corporation of the West Quincy Improvement association a five-cent fare had been secured for workmen to Milton Lower Mills from West Quincy. A train at 10 P. M. and the midnight train from Boston had been secured. Several new industries for Quincy had been investigated, and as they were found to have no financial standing nothing had been done. Through the efforts of the Board improved street railway service had been obtained for Houghs Neck and Quincy Point. The Board had become affiliated with the New England Board of Trade association and much benefit had been derived.

Through the Boards efforts a bill for a new bridge over the Neponset river at Granite avenue had been secured, and the bridge was now in process of construction. Progress had been made on the municipal dock question, but no satisfactory conclusion had as yet been reached. After several years a plan for abolishing the grade crossings had been presented, which the Board had objected to. A new station at Adams street had been postponed for financial reasons. The matter of oiling the tracks at railroad stations had been taken up, but nothing could be done until the four tracks were laid.

The Board also entered the July Fourth parade and was awarded a prize. The second annual outing was held and was a great success.

The Board assisted in entertaining the granite men in August.

The abatement of the nuisance at the Moon Island sewer outlet was in charge of an efficient committee and it was expected that this nuisance would be abolished. The matter of a comfort station in City Square and a street railway waiting room had been taken up and was now under consideration.

The Board had opposed the separation of Squantum or Houghs Neck. The Board had pledged its influence to secure a better sidewalk on Hancock street between Saville and School streets. The acceptance of Willard street as a State highway was still under consideration. Renewed interest was being shown in the Board and it should strive to increase its membership to 500 during the present year. The report was accepted.

ALL BILLS PAID.

The annual report of the treasurer showed the total receipts of the year, including a balance on hand of $4.70 on Jan. 1, 1913, to be $1,683.85, and the expenditures $1,675.90, leaving a balance on hand Jan. 1, 1914, of $7.95 and all bills paid.

The nomination committee reported a list of officers and a motion was made that the two names in each ward having the highest number of votes should be declared elected as directors.

This motion was declared legal by the chair and not to conflict with the by-laws or constitution although the legality of it was discussed for half an hour before the motion was put and unanimously carried. Later in the evening an amendment to the constitution providing that the board of

Some one must have blundered, as the Mexicans seem to have had real bullets in their fireworks displays the past week.

Strange that there should be all this howl about interlocking directorates, when the only business of a director nowadays is to go around to the annual meeting and throw a lot of proxies into the basket.

It is felt that though the trust magnates must spend about all their time fighting suits with the government, they should go down to the office Saturday afternoon and see if anything has happened to the business during the week.

There are probably some trusting persons who are anxiously awaiting a chance to buy a $25,000 package of radium for which any hospital will give $100,000.

Although it may be difficult for a corporation to get along without having one of the big Wall street bankers as director, it is still possible to succeed without it.

SOLVING MARKETING PROBLEMS.

The crop report of the department of agriculture gives ten billions of products as the yield of American farms in 1913. But owing to short crops there is little indication of lower prices to the consumer. The report pertinently suggests that the high prices paid by consumers, ranging from 5 to 500 per cent above the figures the farmer receives, leaves ample opportunity for lowering the retail price, and at the same time increasing the cash income of the farm.

There will be no lower cost of foods until this closer relation between farm and home is created. When the farmer receives but $1.50 a barrel for apples for which the city dweller often pays as high as $9.00, it looks as if the distributing machinery had utterly broken down.

A great many farmers have turned mortgages into surpluses, by the simple expedient of co-operative societies for marketing products. These study the capacity of all localities, they prevent gluts in one place and scarcities in another. The speculator no longer gets the chance to buy a surplus in one city for a song, and ship it elsewhere for a fortune. But it is hard to believe that this new prosperity for the farmers does not sometimes raise the price to the man who pays the bill.

It is up to the consuming end of the public to organize also for the protection of their interest.

Private customers for the individual farm mean the elimination of much waste. It would seem as if half the farmers in the country could sell their fruit and garden produce direct to consumers, by advertising in more or less distant cities and towns, and by co-operation in employing salesmen.

Also why could not the retail dealers and commercial organizations of a city or a county combine to make regular purchases of produce from certain localities in distant states? The more goods passed in this individual way, the less the cost of handling, the fewer the profits to be paid.

Use Schoolhouses as Polling Places

By ROBERT ADAMSON, Manager Fusion Campaign In New York City

POLITICS in the United States is still in its childhood. We still feel compelled to surround the voter with pictures, banners and general bedlam in order to induce him to vote a certain ticket. It may be to distract him so that he doesn't think how he votes. The button man will not even consider an order for LESS THAN A MILLION BUTTONS for a campaign. Yet no one but boys wear these buttons, and they influence no one.

One of the greatest needs for improvement in campaign practices is in the halls where public meetings and elections are held. The halls where meetings are held are not in keeping with the dignity and significance of the meetings, for surely NO BUSINESS IS MORE SACRED AND IMPORTANT than the election of city officials. These halls are apt to be smoky, dirty, crowded, filled with banners and the music of a band. It is hardly a place to consider a big question seriously.

I BELIEVE THERE COULDN'T BE A BETTER USE FOR SCHOOL BUILDINGS THAN THIS. A SCHOOL WOULD BE A MORE SUITABLE BUILDING FOR A POLLING PLACE THAN A BASEMENT, SOME DARK ROOM OR CORNER STORE. SUCH PLACES ARE VERY CONDUCIVE TO FRAUD, THOUGH I BELIEVE FRAUD WAS REDUCED TO ITS LOWEST TERMS IN THIS LAST NEW YORK ELECTION.

Such a move as the use of schools for meetings would be would tend in the direction of progress. There has been MORE PROGRESS IN THE LAST TEN YEARS IN POLITICS THAN IN THE FIFTY YEARS BEFORE. In the era coming there will be less of politicians and more of the men who do the work because they are fitted for it.

Washington Fears To Admit That Business Is Honest

By DARWIN P. KINGSLEY, President New York Life Insurance Company

THERE will be some liquidation in 1914. Not even the turn in business, which I believe we have reached, will be able to stop that. The outlook generally is IMPROVING EVERY MINUTE. If only the federal administration comes to realize that business generally is honest, because it always has been honest and the men who control it are honest, the surprise now apparently felt by official Washington as it gradually realizes the honesty of business would diminish and the approach of brighter days would be more certain.

NOW, UNFORTUNATELY, WHEN OFFICIAL WASHINGTON ADMITS BUSINESS IS HONEST IT APPEARS TO FEAR THAT SUCH ADMISSION MAY COMPROMISE IT. THIS ATTITUDE IS ONE OF THE FACTORS OF UNCERTAINTY IN THE FORCES WHICH WILL CONTROL BUSINESS IN 1914.

The currency bill is generally accepted as a step forward. Business, however, will for some time continue to wonder how President Wilson did it. There is a RESIDUUM OF UNEASINESS over the curious political situation out of which this law was brought into being. The forces which have technically produced the law historically and actually do not believe in its doctrines. The forces nominally in opposition to the law believe both historically and actually in its doctrines and would have gone further.

FOR THE GREATER PART OF 1914 I BELIEVE THAT TRADE OUTSIDE OF WALL STREET WILL PROBABLY BE QUIET. IF A SOLUTION OF THE SUITS AGAINST THE STEEL CORPORATION AND THE HARVESTER COMPANY SHOULD BE ANNOUNCED AND THAT SOLUTION CARRIED THE CONVICTION TO THE GENERAL PUBLIC THAT WASHINGTON, WHILE READY TO PROSECUTE CRIMINALS, IS IN SYMPATHY WITH BUSINESS, EVEN THOUGH BIG AND EFFICIENT, A GREAT MOVEMENT FORWARD AND UPWARD WOULD FOLLOW IMMEDIATELY.

JAPAN IN GREAT NEED OF HELP

Appalled by Disasters Which Overwhelm Nation

MILLIONS REPORTED STARVING

Volcanic Disturbances, Tidal Wave and Fires Add to Misery Which Confronts Government—At Least $25,000,000 Will Be Needed to Succor Victims—Thousands Are Killed

Tokio, Jan. 15.—With the devastation of the southern part of the island of Kiushiu by volcanic eruption, tidal wave, earthquake and fire, following the crop failure in northern Japan, where 10,000,000 people are starving, the imperial government is facing the most appalling national problem of modern ages.

While the foreign office estimates the loss of life in the eruption of the volcano Sakura-Jima at 300, private telegrams from the south indicate that the final death list will run into the thousands. Hundreds were also hurt in flight, many of them fatally.

The government is holding more warships in readiness for relief work at Kagoshima, while the war office has detailed 1000 soldiers to similar duty if their services are needed.

The Japanese government may be forced to appeal to the outside world for financial aid, as it is estimated that $25,000,000 at least will be needed to succor all the victims of disaster in the north and south.

Sakura-Jima volcano continues in violent eruption, according to wireless dispatches from the naval detachment sent to the scene of the catastrophe. Kagoshima city is practically wiped out. Ashes lay over the city from six inches to a foot in thickness.

The little island in the bay was nothing but a mass of angry flame, out of which poured lava, white hot rocks and ashes. The ashes fell over the entire country side as far east as Osaka.

Hugh fissures have appeared in the earth, radiating in every direction and extending miles into the mainland.

Forest fires are still raging north of the city, having been set by molten rocks, and it is feared that hundreds of the fleeing refugees were trapped.

So mighty was the force of the eruption that clouds of ashes and smoke were carried 300 miles, dropping upon ships in the harbor of Osaka.

Government dispatches from the south report that all the Americans in the danger zone escaped. There were a number of other foreigners in the district, but all of them have not yet been accounted for.

COL. ANDERSON AT BRAINTREE

Inspires Members of the All Souls Men's Club

A most interesting and inspiring meeting of the All Soul's Men's Club at Braintree was held in the parish hall Wednesday evening with a large attendance of members and guests.

Supper was served at 6.30 with an excellent menu, ham being substituted for roast beef, and accompanied by cabbage salad, hot baked potatoes, string beans, mince pie, apple pie, cheese, rolls and coffee. The potatoes were donated by James H. Stedman of the club and came from his farm in Maine, and the beautiful apples on each table were given by another member, Willard E. Dow.

The speaker of the evening was Col. Edward Anderson of Quincy, commander of the 12th Indiana cavalry during the Civil war. His subject was "Personal reminiscences of the war" and he gave a graphic and intensely interesting account of his experiences in the great struggle. He told of his associations with John Brown at the time of the struggle to keep Kansas in the Union and related various incidents and anecdotes including the Indian atrocities in the Southwest. His stories of bravery of men under fire and the various horrible scenes of carnage held his audience spellbound the darker side of the recital being ever and anon illuminated with flashes of sparkling wit which elicited roars of laughter from his hearers.

Colonel Anderson concluded his remarks with a stirring appeal to all men to respect the flag, and to honor it not for itself as a beautiful piece of bunting, but for the high ideals and noble sacrifices for which it stands. He was applauded to the echo for his masterly address.

In behalf of the committee, Alva Morrison, ex-president of the club presented to All Soul's church as the gift of the members of the club, the portrait of the late George O. Wales which has very recently been hung on the walls of the parish hall.

Herbert F. Kneeland representing the church responded in a graceful speech, accepting the memorial and outlining briefly the many good qualities and sterling virtues of Mr. Wales, one of Braintree's most public spirited citizens and one of the founders of the club.

By courtesy of the First Parish Congregational club, tickets were placed at the disposal of any of the members who might care to attend the two remaining lectures in the illustrated lecture course.

Remarks were made by James H. Stedman, Herbert F. Kneeland, Col. Albion C. Drinkwater and others. By a unanimous vote, it was the sense of the meeting that a stand of colors be purchased to be displayed in the hall at each meeting, and also be placed at the disposal of the Sunday School.

Col. Anderson was accorded a rising vote of thanks and requested to come again. After the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner," the meeting adjourned.

—Massachusetts and Kansas are the only states in which New Year's day is not a legal holiday, and this is used as a reason why this state should adopt the plan. If we must imitate other states, then we must abolish "Patriots' Day," which is, we believe, a legal holiday nowhere else. Occasionally it is well to be different.—New Bedford Standard.

THE BLACK HOUSE.

I was one of the detectives on duty at the Ramercliff-Halsey wedding reception, where thousands of dollars—worth of beautiful gifts were displayed in the library and adjoining study, and my duties had confined me to these rooms, where a pageant of brilliantly gowned women and sombrely clad men passed in and out.

It was marriage of youth, beauty and great wealth with talent and more wealth, for Dr. Ramercliff had a national reputation as a specialist in diseases of the brain, and it had been a matter for universal surprise when the grave and studious physician had stepped from the seclusion of professional life to court the brilliant young debutante and win her.

Now the bride had retired to don her traveling gown. They were to leave on the western express, and their destination was a secret.

Presently they came, and I shall never forget Dr. Ramercliff's look as he passed out of the door with his beautiful bride. His handsome face expressed maniacal triumph.

A feeling of uneasiness possessed me for days afterward, and I was not surprised when Benjamin Halsey, the father of the bride, paid me a visit in my private office.

He was looking haggard and worried, quite unlike the happy, genial gentleman who had presided at the wedding of his motherless daughter.

"Blair, I need your help," he said when we were alone.

"What is it, sir?" I inquired.

"You were at my daughter's wedding reception three weeks ago. You saw my daughter leave the house with her husband?"

"Yes."

"They have disappeared—completely disappeared."

"Well?" I was still wondering at his anxiety.

"Read that," he said, thrusting a tattered bit of paper into my hands.

It was a piece of brown wrapping paper, and on it were a few scrawled words: "Oh, father, come! This terrible black house! I am going mad! He is coming now! I must hide this! Bessie!"

"You believe that your daughter wrote that?"

"I do. It is her handwriting. It was received in my mail this morning. The envelope bearing a blurred postmark and in addition to my name and address were the penciled words: 'Whoever finds this please mail at once.'"

He produced the envelope, and I studied the postmark through my strongest glasses.

"Looks like Woodrift. That's a little village down on Long Island," I said finally. "I'll go down there at once. You believe that both of them have met with foul play?"

He shook his head doubtfully. "Read that note over again, Blair. It's some of Ramercliff's work, I fear. I should never have allowed Bess to marry him. He is almost mad himself over his profession, but he fascinated her. You will go at once, Blair?"

"Within the hour," I decided, replacing the time table in my pocket.

It was 4 o'clock when I reached Woodrift, a little north shore village, surrounded on three sides by oak forests and on the fourth by a shallow harbor.

I made casual inquiry among the loungers about the postoffice and hotel where I put up, but none of them had seen any strangers thereabouts. The postmaster did give me a clue.

"The old Vale place was taken by strangers several months ago, but I don't believe any one is there yet."

"Who is the caretaker?"

"Search me!" said the postmaster, returning to his neglected duties. "Some queer foreigner who lives in the barn and buys his supplies over to Oakville."

I chose to take my first view of the Vale place by moonlight. I had traversed perhaps half a mile along the gloomy wood road, where moonlight fell in silver patches on the carpet of thick leaves, when a man passed me going swiftly toward the village.

He paused and peered at me for an instant.

"Where you go?" he asked, thickly, and I smelled whiskey on his breath.

"Oakville," I said sharply.

"Oh," he said, with his foreign accent. "You on wrong road. Go back quarter mile, turn to left."

"Thanks," I murmured ironically, for I recognized the caretaker of the Vale place and his evident desire to lure me away from the house, which he was leaving unguarded.

To allay his suspicions I walked back with him and allowed him to place me on the right path. When he was out of sight I retraced my steps, and, after walking for perhaps a mile, always following the more untraveled road, I finally came upon a high brick wall that wound round among the trees encircling the dark bulk of a large house.

It was a lonely spot enough, the woods closing around the house within the wall. The moonlight fell in patches on the ground, overgrown with coarse grass and briars. The shutters of the house appeared closed, but against the night sky I saw a thin trail of smoke from one of the chimneys.

As I studied the house I noticed a strange radiance that seemed to be diffused from the roof, a soft, steady, golden glow such as might be produced by a skylight in the ceiling of a brilliantly lighted room under the roof.

I swung myself into the branches of a huge oak tree that overhung the flat roof and was soon creeping on hands and knees over the tin covering the edges. Beyond that was an expanse of sash such as is used in greenhouses occupying almost the entire roof.

"Another freakish New Yorker," I muttered to myself as I hung over the edge of the glass roof and peered down into the lighted space.

Beneath me was a large room furnished as a bedroom and a study. There were a large table heaped with books and papers, a desk and comfortable chairs. The walls were lined with bookcases filled with volumes bound in uniform dark covering.

It was a workroom, the workroom of a student.

The student was Dr. Ramercliff. He was sitting at the desk absorbed in writing. He had already filled sheet after sheet of paper, all of which were scattered over desk and floor.

Suddenly he leaned back in his chair and an agonized expression convulsed his face. He reached his hand toward a small vial, shook some pellets in his mouth and dropped back in his chair, one hand gripping his heart. His eyes closed and he breathed heavily. Was his seizure a heaven sent opportunity for me?

I slipped back to my tree, gained the piazza and found entrance through a front window. I pried open the wooden shutters, smashed the glass with the butt of my revolver, turned the catch and raised the sash. As I entered I seemed to be smothered in folds of heavy drapery. Kicking myself clear, I found myself in total darkness.

I drew out my electric torch and pressed the button. "Heavens!" I shuddered as I realized my surroundings.

I appeared to be in a mortuary chapel, for walls and ceiling were paneled in black, the carpet was of thick black pile, the furniture of dead black lusterless teakwood, cushions, draperies—everything in that horrible room was the same grewsome black.

I opened the black enameled door and entered a black hall. I passed through a black library and a black dining-room, and my nerves were atingle with horror.

The kitchen was a cheerful apartment compared to the others, for it was slate gray.

Up the black painted stairs I crept, feeling a strange depression stealing over me, the unwholesome influence of the dreadful house; through a black supper hall to the nearest black paneled door. There I paused.

What would I find within this grewsome place where Dr. Ramercliff, plainly a lunatic, had taken his beautiful bride, petted daughter of the millionaire?

I turned the handle and entered a black boudoir.

Stretched on the couch, face downward, her face buried in black soft pillows, was a slender form garbed in black.

Her hair was white as snow.

I turned the light upon her, and I placed my hand on her arm, and she screamed with terror.

"Go away!" she cried. "Oh, go away!"

"Mrs. Ramercliff," I said—"Miss Halsey—Bessie!"

At the last word she turned and lifted her beautiful white face to me, a face wild with fear. Her black eyes widened and she gave one great glad cry.

"Oh, take me to father!" And then she sank back unconscious.

I did not stand upon my going from that place. I gathered the poor little bride in my arms and carried her down the stairs and out of that awful house.

I was able to get a team that would take us to Oakdale, where I hired a motorcar, and about midnight we drew up at the Malsey residence, the white haired bride with my handkerchief tied over her lovely locks, garbed in black, and I the young detective with my first great case.

Mr. Halsey was in his library, and I shall never forget his glad face when I restored his daughter to him.

I remained long enough to hear her story, and then I left father and daughter together, for I must journey once more down to Woodrift and ascertain if that insane bridegroom had succumbed to the seizure I had witnessed from the roof.

He was dead when I reached the black house, a victim of heart disease. And so perished a brilliant mind that was destroyed by its own intensity.

Bessie's story was pitiable enough.

Her husband had taken her to the black house, and as coolly and impersonally as he might have watched the struggles of a butterfly impaled on a pin he studied the effect of color on the brain. In the dense black atmosphere of the black house he calmly watched the slow killing of the beautiful girl. He had told her of his intention, and she had struggled desperately to get a message to her father. Once she had escaped and reached the road, but when she found them in pursuit she tossed her letter into the bushes and allowed herself to be recaptured, but her message had gone forth.

That was all. Mrs. Ramercliff recoverd her health and beauty, and the secret of her disappearance was never divulged.

Benjamin Halsey kept his word. He rewarded me. He made me the richest man in the world, for I married Bessie afterward.—Alice Gray.

DO BUSINESS HERE AT HOME.

If you are a resident of Quincy, we suggest that you patronize the merchants of your home city. Why go to Boston for goods that can be bought handily and economically here? We stand for the interests of Quincy, and like the Quincy merchants we give our customers good value. For instance a safety deposit box in our vault for $5 a year that would cost you $10 in Boston.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

A most interesting set of pictures of bridges is now on exhibition in the library. The set includes bridges of every kind and those in many countries, as England, China, Italy, etc.

The first picture is that of a natural bridge in Utah. A sketch is given comparing its height with the Capitol at Washington and also with the Great Pyramid. It is very narrow, being 83 feet in the widest part and only 35 feet in the narrowest. Another interesting picture is the Rialto in Venice, made famous by Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice. Of course such well-known bridges as London Bridge, Tower Bridge, Brooklyn Bridge and others of equal interest are also included. A very good description is given of each bridge with the entire history of its construction, cost, etc.

Many of the bridges seem impossible to be crossed. One of these is a chain bridge in Ceylon, another a woven willow bridge in Peru. and especially a rope bridge in Ireland, which is 80 feet above a chasm. This one is most interesting. It is made of short planks fastened across two parallel ropes, another rope serving as a rail.

The last of the pictures, notably those of the famous Forth Bridge, over the Firth of Forth in Scotland, are very interesting and would be instructive to those studying engineering. The illustrations are large and show all stages of construction, from the time when the caissons are sunk to the completion of the finest detail.

COLD AND COAL.

The weather of the present week tested the heating apparatus in the school buildings more than any weather of recent years. With a few scattering exceptions the buildings met the test admirably. The Wollaston school was closed for one day but this was due to a pipe freezing during the night. With the repaired there was no difficulty in heating the entire building.

The new Adams school had difficulty in heating the north rooms, but this was due largely to the inexperience of the janitor in handling steam. The agent who installed the heating apparatus was sent for and very promptly sent the temperature in the rooms to 80 degrees, by reversing air bound steam coils and supplying sufficient air to the heating stacks. No doubt this building would be heated at far less expense, however, by installing double windows on the north side.

Few people realize how much more fuel is burned in a week like the present than during the average winter week. For the past two years the department has been fortunate in not having a great deal of extreme cold weather on school days.

CHILD LABOR.

The operation of the new Child Labor Law is relieving to the Superintendents office. The employment certificate of every minor changing his place of employment is a revelation in indicating the instability of labor of this type. Quantities of cards are returned showing that a boy or girl has held a position only a month or so before again seeking employment. No more striking fact appears from an examination of these cards than the indication that those pupils who leave school without a settled habit of application and perseverance, are the ones who apparently are able to retain a job for only brief periods of time. The constant demand for new certificates to replace the old ones as the law now requires frequently keeps the Truant officer busy for an entire evening without intermission in satisfying his many callers.

EVENING SCHOOLS.

The Adams evening school continued this week on its second term with an encouraging attendance. The cosmopolitan character of its enrolment was broadened this week by the addition of one Chinese student. There have been enrolled so far this year probably 20 different nationalities in one building.

The Willard evening school closed last week after a term of 40 nights. Compared with last year's attendance, the figures have been as follows: Registration in 1912, 111; in 1913, 183. Average attendance in 1912, 60; in 1913, 81. Aggregate evening's attendance in 1912, 2403; in 1913, 3226. The increase in every feature of the year's attendance has been about 33 per cent over last year.

The School department is greatly encouraged by this continued and increasing response to its efforts to interest and educate the non-English speaking element of the city. The work of the present year was aimed directly toward naturalization and citizenship, and instructions toward this end were given in several different languages. There is evidence that a good many of those in attendance this year have naturalization definitely in mind and are aiming toward it.

OVER-CROWDING.

Sixteen old sets of furniture taken from the Old Adams building are being set up in the upper corridor of the Atherton Hough school to provide for the incoming class on January 26. Next September conditions promise to be much worse and unless the addition recommended by the School Committee is ready for occupancy, it will be necessary to send one grade to the Coddington school as in former years.

The situation at the Washington school will be equally bad. The first grades will be conducted together in one room; the second grade will be on a single session basis and in crowded quarters. The location of the school population in this district is such that a change in the district lines and the opening of the new Adams school does not offer any material relief.

WALLACE—BOSTWICK.

Cards have been received in Squantum announcing the marriage of Miss Phyllis Bostwick of New York to Mr. Mahlon E. Wallace of New York and Philadelphia, the marriage taking place in Philadelphia Jan. 1.

The bride is the daughter of Perley Bostwick and the late Alice Osborne Bostwick of Brunswick street and passes her summers in Squantum. Miss Bostwick has attained a prominent place in the theatrical world being a very popular actress. She began her stage career at a tender age and steadily advanced to the leading parts in such well known plays as "Quincy Adams Sawyer," "As ye sow," "At Yale," "The Girl in the Taxi," "Seven Days," "The Futurity Winner," and "Coming Home to Roost." She is a graduate of the Roxbury High school and has many friends in and about Boston.

Mr. Wallace is a native of Philadelphia but met his bride in New York where he holds a lucrative position with the Pennsylvania railroad. Mr. and Mrs. Wallace will make their home in New York city.

BRIEFS

The theatre trains from Boston were one and two hours late last night.

The supper at the Revels is always unique consisting of doughnuts, cookies, cheese, apples and cider, which seems to please the palate for the committee provides a big supply, catering this year for 500.

The annual dance of the Citizens Gas Light Service Club will be held in Alpha hall Friday evening. Music will be by Wilsons orchestra and a short entertainment will be given by out of town artists. The officials of the Boston Gas Light, Citizens Gas Light and the Old Colony Gas Co. will be the guests of the evening.

Marksmen and Rifles.

No marksman ever holds a rifle "as solidly as a rock." He may think he does, but Arms and the Man insists that the best shot gives merely the "necessary impulse to the trigger, while the rifle is moving in the right direction"—that is, when he takes deliberate aim. The snap shooter works apparently by a sort of instinct. Firing successfully at a running deer through the woods and over broken ground implies a knack like that of thrusting one's finger toward an indicated object.—New York Times.

Natural Inference.

A schoolteacher was reading a story to a class of very small folks and paused at the words "lay brother," to explain their meaning. "Does any one know what 'lay brother' means?" she asked.

For a moment a row of perplexed little faces looked up at her. Then one face brightened suddenly, and a small voice piped, "Yes, ma'am, it's a rooster!"—Youth's Companion.

ICE HARVEST HAS BEGUN

Ice Now Eight Inches Thick on the Local Ponds

The people who were happy at the cold snap which was broken Wednesday when the temperature began to moderate, were the ice men for it ensures them at least part of a crop. Up to this noon the only company which was cutting was the Eaton Ice Co. who are reported to have eight inches of good ice.

At the Meadow Brook Ice Co this noon it was said that they had ice over eight inches thick on their pond and while they had not as yet commenced to cut they had begun to mark off their pond, and the chances are that cutting would not be long delayed.

At Sheppard Ice Co., at Braintree it was said that they had 8 inches of ice and that men were now at work marking off on the pond and that probably cutting would be commenced Friday or Saturday.

WESTON WILL WALK OLD MEN IN SIX DAY MATCH.

To Pit Team Against Younger Opponents to Settle Question of Prowess.

Edward Payson Weston, seventy-five-year-old world famous pedestrian, is arranging a walking contest which will have a scientific interest for those who insist that age brings with it a general inability to perform, even after a fashion, those feats of an athletic nature which a few years back were easy of accomplishment.

The general proposition is a test between youth and old age in a "go-as-you-please" contest on a measured track. It is stated that the veteran walker's experience has led him to believe that a man at forty years is to a man of sixty-five years as fifteen years is to nine years in walking capacity.

Weston is about to institute a contest where, on the same track, a team of men at or beyond the sixty-five-year age limit will be pitted against a similar number of men none of whom is over forty-five years of age, with a handicapping system based on the allowance of walking time on the track.

The test is to cover a period of six days, and the younger men will be given nine hours each day in which to gain their total mileage, while the older group will have an allowance of fifteen hours during each twenty-four in which to endeavor to equal or beat the efforts of their youthful opponents.

Five thousand dollars will be distributed among the several contestants according to the records made. While no date or place has been fixed for the proposed contest, it has tentatively been agreed upon that May of this year would be a fitting time.

HER CROOKED SPINE MENDED.

Bone From Shin Wedged Into Vertebrae Makes Deformed Girl Erect.

A marvelous double operation performed in Cleveland, O., has made Pauline Bell, thirteen years old, whose back was deformed from birth, an erect, healthy girl who will be able to run and play like other children.

Pauline was placed on an operating table at Mount Sinai hospital and "ironed out all straight and smooth," as she says. First of all, a slender splinter of bone three inches long was taken from the shinbone of her right leg. Then a groove was cut into the vertebrae on the inner side of the spine, just where it was bent.

Into this groove the straight splinter of bone then was firmly wedged. Immediately afterward the little patient was put into a plaster cast. In this cast, face downward, Pauline lay for nearly two weeks without stirring. Then she was propped up in bed for the first time in five weeks, and finally she sat up, her back as straight as the cast in which she is still wrapped.

YACHTSMEN'S MAGIC EIGHT.

That Number of Letters Favored For Name of Vanderbilt Cup Racer.

Sentiment is taking hold in the matter of providing a name for the Vanderbilt syndicate cup yacht, designed by Nat Herreshoff, and it is a matter of public discussion about the Herreshoff boat shops at Bristol, R. I., that the new racer, yet in the initial stages of construction, will have a name of eight letters, conforming to a sentimental policy of long standing relative to cup yachts. A multitude of names has been suggested informally, but the naming of the yacht may not take place for weeks to come.

It is pointed out that the Reliance, Vigilant, Defender and Columbia, all successful cup yachts, had each only eight letters in their names, while the Constitution, a cup candidate in 1901, had several more letters in her name. She was not selected.

It is said that having eight letters in a yacht's name is a good omen.

Prosperous Year for Park and Downs Church

The annual meeting of the Park and Downs Congregational church was held, Wednesday evening. Business opened with the roll call by the clerk, Charles A. Richardson and Rev. William B. Ayers, the pastor, was elected moderator.

The clerk's report showed a net gain the past year of 13 members, 24 having been lost and 37 gained. Under the adverse conditions, this is a remarkable showing. The present membership is 216.

E. L. Blaisdell, treasurer; Arthur F. Capen, auditor and Thomas H. Irving chairman of the board of trustees all read reports which were accepted.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Deacons—William J. Colby, for four years, Victor Harrie and Amory H. Waite for one year.

Standing Committee—William B. Holmes, Charles Weeks, Richard Mayfield.

Trustees—Eugene Blaisdell for three years, Fred MacMulkin for one year.

Clerk—Charles A. Richardson.

Sunday School Superintendent—William J. Colby.

First Assistant S. S. Superintendent—Victor Harrie.

Treasurer of the Church—Fred Maxwell.

Assistant Treasurer—J. H. Kilpatrick.

Music Committee,—Charles A. Richardson, Charles Tanner and Emily Bjorkman.

Auditor,—Arthur F. Capen.

Collector,—John Stewart.

Reception committee,—Thomas G. Breen, Dr. James A. Zwicker, Alonzo Bissett, James A. Boone, Thomas H. Irving and Frank C. Blake.

Superintendent William J. Colby reported a gain of 80 in the Sunday School during the past year, bringing the total to an even 300. Since Mr. Colby took the office two years ago the school has doubled. At that time it numbered 140.

Artemus Dingwell reported for the Christian Endeavor Society and Miss L. Catherine Robinson for the Womens Missionary Society.

The report of the building committee was read by its treasurer Thomas H. Irving. As all obligations have been met this committee was discharged with thanks.

Mrs. Charles F. Bryant told how the Women's Guild had raised $1613 in its fiscal year. This organization was responsible for the new organ that graces the church.

John Dingwell reported for the Norwoll club, a boys organization of the church.

It was voted to change the prayer meeting night from Friday to Thursday beginning next week.

Preceding the meeting a fine supper was served by the following: Mrs. Alonzo V. Bissett, Mrs. Fred Maxwell, Mrs. F. J. Brown, Mrs. Amory Waite, Mrs. Dixon and Mrs. Leonard Mason.

AT HEAD OF TWO ASSOCIATIONS

Honors are coming thick and fast to officers of the Quincy court. Both the Police, District and Municipal courts clerks association as well as the Massachusetts Court Officers Associations held their annual meetings in Boston on Wednesday night at the Revere house, although in separate rooms.

At the meeting of the former association Lawrence W. Lyons of the district court was elected as president, and at the latter association William M. Marden, court officer at the Quincy court, was reelected as president.

The Court Officers association voted to petition the legislature for an amendment to the present law increasing the annual vacation of the court officers from 15 to 30 days each year.

One of the features of the Revels in which every one attending is interested is the selection and crowning of the King and Queen. There is considerable guessing as to who will be the lucky ones to mount the throne Friday night.

FIRE AT BRAINTREE.

The grocery and provision store of T. B. Cooper on Railroad street, Braintree was gutted by fire Wednesday evening, the first alarm from box 34 coming in at 6.45 o'clock. District Chief J. S. Hill realizing the dangerous locality sounded a second alarm bringing apparatus from South and East Braintree.

The all out signal was blown at 9.25. Mr. Cooper closed the store at 6 o'clock and everything seemed all right at that time. It is thought that an overheated stove caused the blaze.

The property is owned by Charles F. Cavanagh of Braintree. The loss is estimated at $1,200 upon which there was an insurance of $1,000.

MAY ENTER RELAY TEAM.

The interest of many athletes of the Quincy High school centers in the indoor title games that will be held in Mechanics hall, Boston, on Feb. 28. The affair has received the approval of the board of managers of the New England A. A. A. U. Several local runners are to compete, and it is possible that Quincy High will be represented by a relay team.

TENNIS LEAGUE MATCHES

Victories for Estes, Litchfield, Emery and Green

Although Jenner took the three string total with 314 in the weekly rolloff of the Wollaston Tennis Club on the Coliseum alleys Wednesday evening Jesse Litchfield needed but two more to tie him. Jenner however easily took high single, his 117 being in a class by itself. Litchfield's showing was consistent, while Jenner rolled less than 100 in his first and then increased by leaps and bounds.

Capt. Estes and Capt. Geddes, divided the points. But for the fine single by Jenner in the third the former would have secured but one point.

It was just a case of hold the lead when Capt. Emery's men met Capt. Baker's. A wide gap opened in the first, was cut down in the second and the third string went to Baker's five by ten pins. Only 20 separated the contestants in the total.

CAPT. EMERY.

QUINCY WINS AT NEWTON

Great Surprise for the Home Team of Newton

The Quincy Y. M. C. A. basket ball team gave Newton the surprise of its life Wednesday night by winning the league game at Newton by a score of 26 to 24. Newton evidently thought Quincy would be pretty easy for Jacobs did not show up for the game and the Captain Muir also was absent. Quincy took the lead at the start and was never headed, the work of the local backs being of a very high grade, especially in the first half.

Trask played one of his best games, his shooting being very good and his defensive game the best he has shown this season. The forwards Price and Rich did very good work, although Newtons backs were on the job all of the time. Johnson and Kenn played finely for Quincy during the first half but both men tired in the last session, Miley scoring 3 goals on Kenn in about as many minutes during the final spurt of Newton. Johnson was taken out with about five minutes to play and "Jack" Melville was substituted. Jack really saved the game for Quincy, for with only about one minute to play he blocked a try for goal by Miley, which if made would have won the game for Newton.

Quincy second team was a bit too confident it seemed. Newton has not yet been defeated, and Quincy had lost but two games this year, so the teams were pretty evenly matched. The Newton team took the lead at the start and were never headed although the play on both teams was very ragged through the entire first half. The score ended 10 to 5 at the end of the half and at the start of the last period Quincy rapidly scored 3 goals while Newton made but one. The scoring was much more rapid and the team played much better all through this period, first Quincy making a spectacular goal and then a Newton man coming back with one just as good. The work of Shirley as right back was of first class and he played the best game of the evening. Bills was Newtons best man, scoring 7 goals from the floor. Score 24 to 20 in favor of Newton. The Quincy team included Thomas, Bishop, Miller, Croucher and Shirley.

Y. M. C. A. BOWLERS ARE DEFEATED

The Clapp five lost the first string by two pins and were leading by two in the second. They won the third by 19 pins. The score:

MARTIAL LAW HITS WORKERS

Drastic Character of Regulations In South Africa

BOTHA'S STRONG GUARANTEE

Premier Says He Will Paralyze Labor For a Generation—Two Hundred Thousand Natives May Be Turned Loose—Would Mean Disaster For Rand For Many Years to Come

Capetown, S. A., Jan. 15.—The proclamation of martial law throughout the Union of South Africa in response to the declaration of a general strike by the Federation of Trades is regarded as making the issue a clear one between the state and syndicalism, or the system of organized sympathetic strikes.

The origin of the dispute between the railroad employes protesting against the policy of retrenchment introduced by their employers has been lost sight of in the great sympathetic labor war which has brought the trade and commerce of the colony virtually to a standstill.

The drastic character of the regulations which came into effect with the proclamation of martial law created great surprise. The employment of such epithets as "scab" and "blackleg" is prohibited under penalty of punishment, while any attempt to intimidate persons willing to work is forbidden. Newspapers are debarred from publishing false or alarming reports calculated to promote ill-will betweeen the disputants.

The strike region is divided into nine areas, each controlled by an officer vested with absolute power as in time of war. These are the only steps the authorities believe adequate to meet the situation, for the strike of the miners means not only the turning loose of the most turbulent spirits in the Rand but raises the whole question of the position of the native workers. Feeling runs high between the government's supporters and the strikers, and the chance of mediation is practically hopeless.

Premier Botha is said to have declared he would "guarantee that with the end of the present crisis there would not be another workers' strike in South Africa for a generation." Botha has addressed a circular to the natives advising them to obey implicitly the compound managers, assuring them of the fullest protection.

If the miners actually obey the strike order, the government will immediately take steps to send the natives under escort back to their kraals. This means that about 200,000 natives must be marched back by road to their homes at enormous cost. It will be most difficult after the end of the strike to recruit them again. In brief, such a step would mean disaster for the Rand for many years.

Although official reports from Johannesburg show improvement in the train service, reports from other districts are less encouraging. In Natal the situation is one of great tension, and it is feared that the loyalty of the trainmen will not stand the strain much longer. Practically no information is at hand as to conditions in the Orange Free State, but improvement there is not considered probable.

INSISTS ON MERIT SYSTEM

Wilson Opposed to Party Spoils In Postoffice Appointments

Washington, Jan. 15.—President Wilson let it be known that he was opposed to a return of the "spoils system" of postoffice appointments, and would veto the postoffice appropriation bill now before the house unless the "rider" in it, exempting assistant postmasters from the classified service, were eliminated.

The president, it is understood, has decided to call a halt to what has been charged by civil service advocates as a tendency in congress to break down the merit system.

LIMIT FOR PARCEL POST

Indications That It Will Be Increased to Hundred Pounds

Washington, Jan. 15.—Increase of the weight limit of the parcel post to 100 pounds is being seriously considered by Postmaster General Burleson. Experiments with the recently increased weight limit have proven satisfactory.

"I think during the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1914, we will transport approximately 600,000,000 parcels, and will derive a revenue of nearly 10 cents each," is Burleson's statement.

Widow's Ad. Brings Fortune

Burlington, N. J., Jan. 15.—Mrs. Beatrice Gordon, widow, put an "ad" in a paper for boarders. A man in Homesville, Neb., read it and Mrs. Gordon has been advised that she is the missing heir to an estate of several thousand dollars.

Bay State Boundary Ratified

Washington, Jan. 15.—The senate ratified the agreements reached betwenn the states of Massachusetts and Connecticut upon a permanent boundary line between the two states.

Portuguese Travel Tied Up

Lisbon, Jan. 15.—The entire railroad service of Portugal is suspended, owing to the declaration of a general strike by the employes.

CALUMET INQUIRY SHELVED

Senators Fear Ashurst Resolution May Prove a Boomerang

Washington, Jan. 15.—The signs point to no congressional investigation of the Michigan copper strike. In the first place, Senator Ashurst's resolution for such an investigation must run the gauntlet of two committees before it can be reported, if at all, to the senate.

The Arizona senator requested that the resolution be taken from the calendar and referred to the committee on education and labor and the senate assented without debate. Senator Townsend pointed out that under the law the resolution, if reported out, must then go to the committee on audit and control of contingent expenses.

The senate frankly fears that an inquiry such as the Ashurst resolution proposes would soon get beyond the control of its instigators and arouse animosities that would serve no useful purpose.

The two senate committees named are composed in the majority of conservative men and it can be taken for granted now that the Ashurst resolution if it ever sees the light again will be stripped of all the irrelevant proposals injected into it by the senator from Arizona.

THE THAW HEARING

Jerome's Request to Have It Further Delayed May Be Granted

Concord, N. H., Jan. 15.—Harry K. Thaw says he does not believe William T. Jerome will come here to protest against his being liberated on bail.

The New York state attorney says he will do so, and although he has requested Judge Aldrich not to have the hearing on the question before the middle of next week, no date has been set by the court as yet.

It is believed Jerome's request will be granted, and that the hearing will be held late next week. The illness of Aldrich, although not serious, may make it necessary that the hearing be held at an even later date.

WOULD HAVE GREAT POWERS CHECK WAR

Greece Fears Result of Threatened Conflict With Turkey

London, Jan. 15.—The assistance of the great powers in the prevention of another war between Greece and Turkey is being sought by Premier Venizelos of Greece, who, with his government, considers such a calamity most probable, since the advent to power as Turkish minister of war of Enver Bey.

It is stated that this was the chief object of the visit of the Greek statesman to the various European capitals. It was added that Greece fears the result of such a conflict, as Turkey is indisputably stronger on the sea since her purchase of the Brazilian dreadnought Rio de Janeiro.

MILLIONAIRE IN JAIL

Violator of Speed Laws Shares Cell With a Petty Thief

San Francisco, Jan. 15.—"Come and get it," was the unaccustomed summons to breakfast that greeted the ears of Richard McCreery, the millionaire and polo player, who was given five days in the county jail by Judge Shortall, on conviction of having raced his automobile on a public highway.

McCreery obeyed. No special favors are being granted. McCreery is sharing a cell with Joseph Fredericks, convicted of petty larceny.

PICKED UP BY LIGHTSHIP

Captain and Five Men on Schooner John Paul Are Saved

Vineyard Haven, Mass., Jan. 15.—Five members of the crew of the schooner John Paul, which sank in Nantucket sound, were rescued as they were being swept to sea by the crew of the Cross Rip lightship.

The cook, John Thorr, died from exposure just before the rescue of his companions.

The lightship's deck watch heard the hail of the men from the Paul and summoned the lightship's crew on deck.

FIVE YEARS IN PRISON

Sentence of Man Who Lured Newly-Made Bride From Husband

Kansas City, Jan. 15.—Homer McCord, 22 years old, who pleaded guilty in the district court here to the charge of violating the Kansas white slave laws by luring Mrs. Mary Dean, 16 years old, a bride of a day, from her husband, was sentenced to five years in the state reformatory.

Mrs. Dean testified that McCord exercised a hypnotic influence over her. She and her husband became reconciled.

OUR FRIENDS IN WOLLASTON

Give Added Praise. Their Statements Are Convincing.

It is gratifying for us to read such good news as the following, for it shows that the experience of our friends in Wollaston is the same as that of many Quincy men and women who have spoken out so heartily in these columns:

Richard W. Smith, painter, 14 Blake street, Wollaston, Mass., says: "I suffered from a painful back and kidney trouble for a long time. I was so stiff n damp and rainymornings that it was some time before I got limbered up enough to dress myself. There was a dull, heavy pain through the small of ny back. Two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills fixed me up all right. I have used this remedy off and on since, whenever I have needed a kidney tonic. Doan's Kidney Pills have never failed to put me in good shape. In my present work, painting, I find Doan's Kidney Pills to be just the medicine I need for keeping my kidneys in good working order. I have recommended Doan's Kidney Pills before, and am glad to do so again."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Advertisers Ask Only A Fair Trial

By HOLLAND.

ADVERTISERS do not attempt to make you agree to buy their goods for the rest of your life. They only want you to give their wares a trial, to subject them to actual test by actual use, and then be guided by experience.

Could anything prove more clearly that the advertiser has supreme confidence in his product, that he is absolutely certain that it will please you, that it will be all he says it is?

It would indeed be foolish to spend money to induce you to buy an article that would prove unsatisfactory and would result in your telling friends and neighbors of your experience. Advertisers spend millions making their trademarks known, and in order to make their trademarks valuable they must stand for a certain standard of worth. Having made their trademarks known, manufacturers exert every effort to keep the goods up to the expected high grade.

Peter Billy's Clothes

They Were Characteristic of the Man

By CLARISSA MACKIE

"I got a hunch that this is my last year as a lone, lorn bachelor man," sang out Peter Billy as he put on a celluloid collar that cruelly sawed his sunburned neck. He picked up a brilliant red and blue striped necktie and tossed the end around the collar.

"I reckon you think that this nigger minstrel getup's going to put you at the head of schoolteacher's class," grunabled Phin Morris from the door step of the bunk house. "Looks like a barber's pole!"

"Nigger minstrel getup, eh? You're plum's jealous, Phin," retorted Peter Billy. "A feller can't put on a biled shirt and a plain, ordinary necktie what they wear in civilized parts but what you kick up a fuss."

Who can blame poor Phin for sitting on the doorstep and indulging in gibes at his more fortunate rival's marvelous garments?

"It's going to be some dance at the schoolhouse next week," volunteered Peter Billy as he stepped past Phin into the starlit night.

"Maybe I'll go," said Phin drearily.

"The Dray girls are coming and a big crowd from Onderdonk. Mazie's going with me!" Peter Billy dashed away into the night, and to the clatter of his pony's hoofs Phin could hear the refrain of Peter's last gay words:

"Mazie's going with me!"

Mazie Fenwick was the schoolteacher.

Two hundred miles distant, in a Cheyenne hospital, an old man had suffered a sudden sinking spell. There was no time to send for his only relative, a cowpuncher, in another part of the state, so the nurse, a pale, sweet faced young woman, was listening to the weakening voice of old David Morris.

"Miss Drew, I got plenty of money of my own. It tells all about it in that letter I gave you. But you know I've been accepting charity from my nephew, Phin Morris? Of course you know; I told you all about it, and you wonder why I kept him stripped of his money for the last year.

"Phinny was a wild boy, and I've been afraid that he'd go wrong entirely with that wild bunch at Keeter's ranch. So I just let him think I was hard up, and so he's paid $20 a month out of his $30 on me, and I've sent it to the bank. I let him do it. It showed he's made of good metal. He's got the Morris blood in him, and he'll come out all right.

"LOOKS LIKE A BARBER'S POLE," SAID PHIN MORRIS.

"I'd like to have seen him, but I can't now, and you'll go down there and tell him all this and bring him back with you?"

"I'll go," promised the girl. "You know it's my vacation, anyway."

And later in the day, when there was no more to be done, Nan Drew took the letters and boarded the train that would reach Onderdonk Creek at daylight the following morning. Once there, she went to the hotel and sent word to Keeter's ranch for Phin Morris to come to her.

She was hardly prepared for the strapping young man whose head almost touched the ceiling of the hotel parlor and whose big voice filled every nook and cranny of the room.

And Phin was plainly embarrassed in the presence of the pretty little nurse who had come all the way from Cheyenne to carry out the last wishes of an old man.

Poor Phin was overcome with embarrassment when he discovered that Uncle David had confided all his affairs to Nan Drew, but the girl accomplished her mission so delicately and with such tact that Phin felt almost glad that his uncle had chosen such a sweet messenger.

"You don't look real strong yourself," said Phin, looking down at her delicate face.

"I'm not very well; I'm very tired," said the girl wearily. "But this air is wonderful. I feel better already."

"Can't you come and spend your vacation down here?" asked Phin eagerly. "They take lady boarders over to Dray's ranch. They learn to ride ponies and get brown as berries. You better come down here, and I'll teach you to ride."

"Perhaps I will!" cried Nan. "It sounds very attractive."

"Now I've got to go back to the ranch and tell Keeter I must have a few days off. I reckon I'll get in Cheyenne some time late tonight."

* * * * * * *

It was three months later when Phin Morris, riding down the trail toward Onderdonk Creek, overtook Mazie Fenwick riding her little calico pony.

"Stranger!" reproached Mazie, with a dazzling smile.

Phin could execute a dazzling smile as well, and he proceeded to make himself agreeable to Miss Fenwick.

He knew that for some reason Peter Billy was in the bad graces of the pretty schoolteacher, but Peter Billy was very reticent about the whole matter. As for Phin, he spent many of his evenings studying books, and Mazie had heard of it and dreamed that he was endeavoring to educate himself to her level.

"I'm nearly famished," sighed Mazie as they turned into the main street of the little town.

"Come in and have some ice cream," invited Phin cheerily.

They went, and Mazie's blue eyes gleamed when she saw that Phin Morris' pocketbook was not as empty as it had been in former days. Some one had whispered the story of the bedridden uncle who had left a fortune to the handsome young cowpuncher, and Phin had mounted higher in selfish Mazie's estimation.

Still he wore the same old clothes.

"Phin," said Mazie suddenly, dropping her hand on his big brown one in a friendly manner, "why don't you ever come to see me any more?"

"Too busy," smiled Phin uncomfortably. "Besides, Peter Billy's always had the front seat, you know."

"He's not sitting on the front seat now," retorted Mazie, with spirit.

"And he's some sore because he fell off," rejoined Phin.

"I'm not to blame for that—really, am I, now?" Mazie turned her cornflower blue eyes upon Phin, and her under lip trembled.

Time had been when that demonstration would have sent ecstatic shivers up and down Phin's spinal column. Now he shuddered uncomfortably, thinking what a blessing it was that he had missed marrying Mazie Fenwick.

"I am not to blame, am I, Phin?" quavered Mazie, with tearful eyes.

"I'm not a good judge. Peter Billy knows more about it than I do," said Phin reluctantly. "You see, Mazie, I was way back in the thirteenth row"—

"You're only joking!" cried Mazie angrily. "I guess it won't be any joke if that white faced nurse over at Dray's goes back to Cheyenne. She's"—

"She's my girl," said Phin slowly, and Mazie flinched at the cold anger in his voice and the hostility in his gray eyes. "I reckon we won't talk about Nan Drew."

Mazie said never a word, but she set her teeth hard and left the store at once. By the time Phin had paid the bill and had reached the sidewalk Mazie had mounted her pony and flown back along the trail toward home.

"Poor, selfish little girl!" muttered Phin uneasily.

On the way home Phin met Peter Billy riding desperately toward the town. He was wearing all his gala attire, and there was a glad look in his black eyes.

He stopped short at the sight of Phin.

"I reckon it won't hurt none if I tell you that she's sent for me!" he cried eagerly. "I guess that there hunch of mine has come true! I won't be no bachelor next year!"

"You mean Mazie?" asked Phin, and when the other held out his hand Phin gripped it hard. How was Peter Billy to know that the prize he dreamed he was getting was merely a poor tinseled package stuffed with sawdust?

So Peter Billy went joyfully on his way, and Phin turned into the trail that led to Dray's farm, where Nan Drew had been spending many happy months.

He met her on the trail. She was riding a cream colored pony and looking bewitching in her brown riding dress, with a wide brimmed hat on her golden brown hair. She had grown plump and rosy, and a golden tan covered her face and hands.

"She's my golden girl," whispered Phin, and then he felt suddenly scared at something he had to confess to Nan Drew.

"Come with me to Little Green canyon; I got something to say to you," said Phin seriously, so they rode there almost in silence.

And when they looked down on the green, cuplike hollow in the hills Phin leaned over and took Nan's little hand.

"Nan Drew," he said solemnly, "I just told somebody that you was my girl! Is it true?"

Nan lifted lovely, long lashed eyes and looked long into his loving gray ones. Then she turned to him with a little tender gesture of surrender and said:

"Of course I am your girl, Phin. I've never been any one else's."

"Gee, but I'm glad Peter Billy's a swell dresser!" remarked Phin after awhile, and, although Nan tried many a time to discover Phin's reason for making such a remark, Phin never told her. Perhaps poor Peter Billy might have guessed, or Mazie herself!

RESCUED FROM DOOMED SHIP

Wireless Appeals Save Lives of Those on the Cobequid

STEAMER'S BACK IS BROKEN

Thirty-Six Hours of Anxiety From Time of Disaster Until Rescuing Fleet Reaches Pinnacle Where Vessel Is Transfixed—None Apparently the Worse For Their Adventure

Yarmouth, N. S., Jan. 15.—Snatched from what seemed almost certain death, the passengers and crew of the Royal Mail packet Cobequid, numbering 108, are sung in Yarmouth harbor.

The wireless appeals for assistance which she had first made thirty-six hours before were answered as the doomed steamer was being racked to pieces on Trinity rock, six miles off Port Maitland. The rescue will go down in shipping annals as one of the most notable ever accomplished on the Atlantic coast.

The Cobequid had begun to break up under the cannonading of the terrific seas that had been merciless from the time that the vessel struck. Quantities of cargo covered the waters as the lifeboats ranged alongside.

The coast steamers John L. Cann and the Westport were first to get their small boats into the water and they were followed soon by the boats of the government steamer Lansdowne and and the steamer Rappahannock. As the work of rescue progressed the sea subsided considerably and no mishap marred the triumph over the waves. Captain Hawson and eleven of the crew decided to remain with the ship.

Trinity rock, on which the Cobequid was transfixed, is a pinnacle of granite rising abruptly from the sea half way between this port and Brier island, where the steamer was at first thought to have struck. The Trinity is awash at low water.

The Bay of Fundy was tossed by a typical western blizzard as the Cobequid, bound from the tropics, began to feel her way toward St. John. The crash came just before dawn and a few minutes later the wireless "S. O. S." was flashing over the angry waters.

The Cobequid's operator was unable to give her location, for no one on board knew it definitely. Four hours later flood tide and gale had driven the steamer still further on the rock, breaking her back and flooding the engine room. This put out the fires and interrupted the wireless apparatus.

The passengers were greatly alarmed but the courage of Captain Hawson and his abiding faith in his ship reassured them time and again. The steamer made water rapidly and the cargo began to tear away.

Throughout the day and the night that followed the officers scanned the sea for passing craft and the operator worked heroically to restore his wireless apparatus.

Meantime steamers that had picked up the first cry for help were searching for the distressed craft. The John L. Cann sailed around Brier island. Other steamers were making their way in the general direction indicated.

The United States revenue cutter summoned from the Maine coast fought her way through a fifty-mile gale and just missed a part in the rescue.

A heavy vapor caused by the action of the intense cold on the water handicapped the searchers and it was a fisherman on Port Maitland shore who first made out the Cobequid as the vapor rose and revealed the liner on the dreaded Trinity.

The government steamer Rappahannock was the first to bring hope to those on the Cobequid and she stood by until the John L. Cann and Westport appeared and the Lansdowne came steaming up.

Darkness was gathering fast, but the boatmen from the coastal steamers went at the work cut out for them with perfect confidence in the result.

Less than five hours later those who had faced death for two days were being warmed and fed in the most comfortable quarters in Yarmouth. So far as could be learned none of the party is permanently the worse for their adventure.

PATROLMAN SUSPENDED

Woman Charges That Worcester Copper Embraced Her

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 15.—Charges that Patrolman John J. Murphy embraced her and otherwise acted in a manner unbecoming an officer are made by Mrs. Bessie Levine in a complaint to the local authorities.

As a result of her allegations, Murphy has been indefinitely suspended, and Mayor Wright, it is understood, is to act in the matter. Murphy will be given a hearing.

GENERAL OROZCO

He Will Be Executed If Captured by Villa

PRICE ON OROZCO'S HEAD

Villa Will Pay $50,000 In Gold For Him, "Preferably Alive"

Presidio, Tex., Jan. 15.—A food famine threatens Presidio because of the hundreds of Mexican refugees marooned in the town. The United States military authorities and the Red Cross are co-operating to relieve the suffering, but many of the homeless are reduced to one meal a day.

General Villa caused proclamations to be posted in Ojinaga offering $50,000 in gold for the capture of General Pascual Orozco, "dead or alive."

"I want him taken alive if possible," said Villa, "so we can hang him."

PLANNING TO OUST THE OLD LEADERS

Curley Will Probably Head Boston Democratic Machine

Boston, Jan. 15.—Boston is soon to see a new Democratic machine spring into being for the purpose of ousting Mayor Fitzgerald and other old chieftains from the Democratic leaderships.

Mayor-elect Curley's supporters are contemplating this move. They would place the mayor-elect at the head of the new city machine and shelve Mayor Fitzgerald, Senator Timility, "Smiling Jim" Donovan and other old guard leaders.

Curley's friends say the mayor-elect does not feel that he is under any great obligations to Martin Lomasney. He will have to suffer with the other old big leaders, the young leaders say.

Several of the younger Democratic chieftains want to declare war upon those whose leadership they have followed in the past. The old leaders, they say, are passe, and have been in power long enough. Tuesday's fight gave then a taste of blood, and they want more.

COLD WAVE IS BROKEN

Caused Many Deaths and Much Suffering In Greater Boston

Boston, Jan. 15.—The two days' polar weather, that left in its wake death and destruction, that threw hundreds out of employment and made hundreds more homeless, has passed.

Eighty-two deaths were caused indirectly by the cold in Greater Boston, and hundreds of people suffered temporary or permanent disability from frost bite.

Fires caused by explosions of frozen pipes or by attempts to thaw out pipes, and doubly difficult to fight because of the ice-encased apparatus, destroyed thousands of dollars' worth of buildings.

Many vessels on the New England coast were caught in the bitter wind and washed ashore.

THRIFTY CONNECTICUT

More Than Half the Inhabitants Have Deposits In Banks

Hartford, Jan. 15.—More than half the people who live in Connecticut have deposits in the savings banks, according to the annual report of the bank commissioners.

The 622,087 depositors have $307,526,397 to their credit, an increase of 15,945 depositors and $9,$14,349 over the fiscal year of 1912. The average due each depositor is $494.35, a per capita increase of $1.88.

The estimated population of the state is 1,176,621. Of the total number of depositors 528,301 have accounts of $1000 or less.

Honeymoon on Street Car

New York, Jan. 15.—Sarah Lubinsky, 13, told the court her honeymoon consisted of an all-night ride on a trolley car with a box of crackers and a can of salmon as a wedding breakfast. Harold Owen, 18, her husband, was indicted for abduction.

Double Lynching In Florida

Tampa, Fla., Jan. 15.—After being permitted to sing a hymn and pray, Louis Peck and Waldo Jones, negroes, were lynched here for an attack on Case Tompkins, a white planter.

FAKE CALLS TO CITY HALL

Firemen Are Victims of the Practical Joker

The extreme cold weather Wednesday prevented the Mayor from coming to his office at City Hall. He was on deck this morning however. He said that he was feeling fine. He had nothing special in the news line.

Someone, said the Mayor, is trying to have some fun either at my expense or of some of the employees at the different fire stations. On two occasions this week firemen have visited my office in response to fake telephone messages, and were very much surprised when they entered the sanctum sanctorum to find that they had not been invited to City Hall for their advice relative to fire department matters.

It is not the first time that fake telephone messages have been received by parties connected with City Hall, evidently from some practical joker, although it is no joke for the man made the butt of the joke.

In the case of one fireman, who called on one of these fake messages, he said that the party called represented himself as the Mayor talking, and after asking how things were going at his station, the health of the horses, etc., asked what he thought of the idea of selling the horses and supplying a motor apparatus to the fire apparatus. Finding that his idea was favorable the joker requested the fireman to come to City Hall and talk the matter over with the Mayor. His feelings can be better imagined than expressed when he learned that he was the victim of a practical joker.

The Mayor expresed his regrets that the street railway company did not do something toward providing a comfort station for its patrons in City Square, and it is probable that he will take this matter up with the railway at a later date.

The pianist of the evening was Ray Glover. Speeches were in order by visiting officials and members.

He with others was participating in the game at noon. He cleared the back of another boy successfully but did not land fairly on the ground. His leg snapped and Dr. John H. Ash was summoned. He took him to the hospital where he is doing well today.

PARISH HOUSE FAVORED

Wollaston Congregationalists Adopt Report

At the annual meeting of the Wollaston Congregational church Wednesday evening it was formally voted to proceed with the erection of a new stone church and parish house to cost $60,000.

It was further voted to erect the parish house portion as soon as funds are secured and that the remainder of the church be built as soon as finances warrant.

The parish house as proposed will provide quarters greatly needed for the increasing Sunday school and will better allow the operation of the many social activities in connection with the church societies.

The following officers were elected:

Deacon—(To serve for four years) Alfred W. Thompson.

Deacon—(To serve for three years) George A. Smith.

Clerk—Charles F. West.

Treasurer—Louis S. Bugbee.

Superintendent of Sabbath School—Charles A. Campbell.

Moderator—Charles P. Hutchins.

Executive Committee—Henry C. Smalley, Barnabas H. Bain.

Prudential Committee—(For Three Years) George W. Stone.

(For Two Years) Edward S. Tenney and the Clerk—The Treasurer.

Music Committee—Chester I. Campbell, William A. Mann, Mrs. Amos T. Leavitt.

The meeting opened with the reading of the warrant by the clerk, Charles F. West and prayer by Rev. Isaiah W. Sneath, Ph. D., the pastor.

Reports were read by the treasurer Louis S. Bugbee, the collector George H. Murray and the auditor Charles E. Hathaway.

George W. Stone reported the budget for the prudential committee. Among its items were provisions for a $100 increase in the pastors salary and an appropriation of $1200 for music.

By vote of those present other reports were referred to the prayer meeting of next week Thursday.

Reports were received from Charles A. Campbell for the plans committee and Rufus B. Tobey for the finance committee in connection with the proposed new edifice.

Charles A. Campbell brought the recommendation from the plans committee that the parish house part of the project be erected first at a cost of $24,500.

Rufus B. Tobey reported his committee recommended that the church proceed with the erection of a parish house and that a new finance committee be appointed to take charge of the finances.

After an evening of lengthy discussion it was voted to adopt the recommendations of the plans committee, continue both committees in office, add Messrs Carlisle and Whitman to the plans committee and refer the entire matter to a special meeting to be held March 4.

A collection was taken to send flowers to Mrs. Charles L. Seavey, who lies sick in a Boston hospital. It was voted to apply the annual donation of Theophilus King to the Sunday school, each year.

After a further report of the finance committee showing a substantial amount of pledges for the new edifice, the meeting adjourned.

Preceding the meeting a supper was served in the vestry by the women of the church.

HOLDS POSSE AT BAY

Farmer Who Killed Overseer of Poor Refuses to Surrender

Mayville, N. Y., Jan. 15.—Edward Beardsley, the Summerdale farmer who shot and killed John G. W. Putnam, overseer of the poor of Chautauqua county, is barricaded in his little farmhouse, which is surrounded by a posse of twenty armed men.

In the sheriff's force are half a dozen crack shots who are under instructions to fire at Beardsley whenever he shows himself. Fear of wounding Mrs. Beardsley or the nine children in the house with the desperado was the reason for the sheriff's order confining the shooting to the sharpshooters.

Mrs. Beardsley begged food and firewood. She said there was no fire in the house and the children were starving.

The sheriff sent two men to the house with food. They had orders to rush Beardsley if they succeeded in getting inside. When they approached the house, however, Beardsley covered them with a rifle and made them pass the food through a window.

HUB TRAFFIC TIED UP

Boston and Maine and Elevated Roads Seriously Handicapped

Boston, Jan. 15.—Two fires in Boston resulted in the death of a fireman, the injuring of three other men and in the blockading for several hours of passenger train service on the Boston and Maine railroad and the Elevated north from the Dudley street terminal.

The traffic tie-up was the worst in many years. At least 75,000 persons were inconvenienced.

As the result of the burning of the main switching tower at the North station not a train entered the terminal for several hours. It will be many days before conditions will become normal.

The "L" blockade was due to the five-alarm fire which destroyed the department store of W. & A. Bacon, with an estimated loss of $500,000. In this fire Ladderman Joseph Hackett lost his life.

FAILS IN ATTEMPT TO KILL DIPLOMAT

Man Who Tries to Kill Cheriff Pasha Is Himself Laid Out

Paris, Jan. 15.—A sensational shooting affair, resulting from an attempt to assassinate Cheriff Pasha, leader of the Turkish Radicals, occurred here.

A caller, upon being refused admission to Cheriff Pasha's apartments, shot and killed a man servant and was a moment afterward shot himself by a son-in-law of the Turkish leader.

Cheriff Pash has been here for some time on a political mission. The would-be assassin was identified as Ismail Hakki, an agent of the Young Turks.

RESULT OF ARBITRATION

Decision Said to Favor Employes of the Boston Elevated

Boston, Jan. 15.—The decision of the Elevated arbitrators on the dispute between the carmen and the company on 127 points submitted to them for adjudication will be announced today.

While no authoritative statement was made public by the arbitrators last night, it is understood their decision will favor the carmen in the matter of the present wage scale and the length of time a man may have to work to reach the maximum of pay.

There are now 9450 employes of the Elevated road, 7300 of these being members of the Carmen's union and 5000 of them are "blue uniform" men.

JAPANESE ADM RAL DEAD

Ito Had Been Hailed Internationally as Nelson of Japan

Tokio, Jan. 15.—Count Sukinori Ito, fleet admiral of Japan, and late chief of the naval staff, died here, aged 70.

To Ito, more than any other Japanese, was due the present development of the Japanese navy. In addition to his capabilities as an organizer, Ito was also a sea-fighter of the first rank, and after his sweeping victory over the Chinese fleet off the mouth of the Yalu river, he was hailed internationally as the Nelson of Japan.

CALLS HIM A CUR

Judge Threatens to Beat the Head Off Corporation Counsel

Spokane, Jan. 15.—Stanley Webster, judge of the superior court, threatened to "knock the head off" of H. M. Stephens, corporation counsel of Spokane.

Webster ruled against the city and as he left the bench Webster addressed him.

"You have offered a gratuitous insult," responded Webster. "If you repeat it, I promise you, I'll beat your head off. You are a cur."

That proposed New York skyscraper 901 feet high would outsoar the Woolworth building, but would still be topped by the Eiffel tower in Paris. While going skyward why not go for a world record and be done with it, temporarily at least?

ORDER OF EAGLES INSTALL OFFICERS

Past President Edward S. Welsh, district deputy and Past President James Mellen, district marshall, assisted by the degree team installed President Frank J. Duffy and the officers of John Adams aerie, Fraternal Order of Eagles, in Electa hall Wednesday evening. The ceremonies were elaborate and were followed by the regular meeting when several applications were acted upon, four members reported on the sick list and plans made for the monster class initiation to be held this month.

Resolutions were passed on the death of Albert Johnson of Dewey road, Weymouth, who passed away Tuesday after a long illness.

Visitors were present from Hyde Park and Brockton aeries and from Dorchester, Boston, Beverly, Everett, Melrose, Somerville and Holbrook.

The annual ball of the aerie will be held in Alpha hall on Feb. 19 and the committee headed by James Mellen and the officers anticipate one of the biggest successes in the history of the organization.

Speeches were made by the installing officers, Retiring President, John J. Feeley and President Duffy.

A program was given after the meeting in Protection hall, the feature of which was the Irish step dancing by Thomas O'Connell, who won the Irish and American championships in the recent Watertown contests. He rendered several solos and gave an exhibition of double dancing with his brother Eugene. Songs were rendered by Adams Porter and Duncan McKimmock. Refreshments were served.

The new officers are:

Worthy president—Frank J. Duffy.

Worthy vice president—John C. Faircloth.

Worthy past president—John J. Feeley.

Worthy Chaplain—Frank J. Lynch.

Worthy Conductor—Bernard Burke.

Corresponding Secretary — Peter Dackers.

Financial Secretary — Henry J. Langelier.

Treasurer—Edward S. Welsh.

Inside Guard—Hugh McLeod.

Outside Guard—Edward Shaw.

Trustees—George Lister, George P. Woodman, Charles Casna.

Physician—Dr. John T. Reynolds.

MRS. KATE JOHNSON.

The funeral of Mrs. Kate Johnson, probably the oldest resident of West Quincy, was held from her home at 175 Willard street on Wednesday afternoon. There was a large attendance and many floral remembrances.

Services were conducted by Rev. Richard E. Armstrong, rector of Christ Episcopal church. The bearers were George and Albert Farnham and James Sweeney, nephews of the deceased, David Farrell, grand nephew, and John and Lawrence Falvey, grandsons. Burial was in the Hall cemetery.

Mrs. Johnson was a resident of West Quincy for many years. She is survived by three sisters, Mrs. Mary Farnham, Mrs. Ellen Sweeney and Mrs. Phobe Harris, and two daughters Mrs. Jeremiah Falvey and Mrs. Fred Leavitt.

BOARD OF TRADE

directors should consist of two members from each of the six wards of the city was offered and will come up for action at the next meeting.

RESULT OF BALLOT.

Messrs. F. F. Crane, W. Hodgkinson and William Kenyon were appointed as tellers. The vote resulted in the election of the following officers:

President—John L. Hamilton.

Vice President—Joseph A. Sedgwick.

Secretary and Treasurer—John O. Hall.

Directors, Ward One—Hon. E. R. Stone and Herbert S. Barker; Ward Two—A. L. Whitman and T. L. Williams; Ward Three—John R. Richards and Andrew Milne; Ward Four—William H. Teasdale and Charles J. McGilvray; Ward Five—E. O. Woodward and Charles L. Gilliatt; Ward Six—William E. Barnes and Carl E. Carlson.

President-elect Hamilton when escorted to the chair thanked the members for the confidence reposed in him. The number present bespoke a renewed interest in the Board. He believed the Board of Trade a very potent factor in the life of Quincy.

A rising vote of thanks was extended to the retiring treasurer, Charles H. Johnson for his seven years faithful service, and Mr. Johnson in turn thanked the Board for its kind expression. A vote of thanks was also extended to the retiring members of the board of directors.

NEW INDUSTRY.

Secretary Hall then spoke of a new industry that desired to locate in Quincy, for which capital was needed. The industry would give employment to from 300 to 500 hands. Quincy, it was desired, should become interested to the extent of $1,500. Mr. Hall and another member had already received pledges for $450 of that amount. In case the company fails to obtain the $50,000 or $60,000 capital it expects the money subscribed will be returned. Ample security would be afforded investors. Subscribers will share in the profits and the directors and treasurer are to be elected from local subscribers. The industry was a glass stopper for bottles. It worked on the system of floats and while a bottle once filled could be emptied the bottle could not again be refilled. Land for the factory building had been secured and a price agreed upon.

Peter T. Fallon thought that if the party had a good thing that he should bring it here and show it up. Quincy people had once before been induced to invest their money in a sand blast mining machine.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A communication from the Portland Chamber of Commerce, relative to encouraging the local senators and congressmen to favor a bill for increasing the force in the architectural department at Washington, was laid on the table.

A communication relative to the bills asking the government to purchase or condemn the Chesapeak and Delaware canal was received and Dock Commissioner Crane spoke of the benefit that would be derived to shipping by government ownership of this canal. It was then voted that the Board inform its senators and congressmen at Washington of its endorsement of the bills.

A communication asking the support of the Board in allowing the New Haven railroad to retain its sound lines between Boston and New York was received and after some discussion was referred to a proper committee for study.

It was voted to extend an invitation to the Massachusetts Retail Grocers' association to hold its 1914 convention in Quincy.

The President announced that the annual banquet would be held at Alpha hall on the evening of Feb. 10, and as the seating capacity was limited those desiring to attend were urged to secure their tickets early.

At this point a member of the entertainment committee put his head in the door and stated that the lunch was ready and that the ice cream was melting, and the meeting adjourned.

QUINCY POINT STREET VALUES

Quite a Difference in Washington and South Streets and Quincy Avenue

Shipyard and Street Railway Power Plant in This Ward

The second installment of the street values of the city in 1913, as compiled by Principal Assessor Adams, is given today, comprising all the streets of Ward Two, the Quincy Point ward.

Four streets in this ward are nearly the same length—Washington street, South street and Quincy Avenue—but there is a big difference in the property value. Washington street easily takes the lead, its property being valued at more than the other two combined.

But East Howard street, with the Fore River shipyard included, leads Washington street, and Wharf street with its power plant of the Old Colony street railway, is fourth, next to South street. Newcomb place shows up well and is pushing Quincy avenue for fifth place. Only these six streets have a valuation of over $100,000.

On most of the streets in this ward the value of buildings exceeds value of land.

THE Q. Y. C. ANNUAL DANCE

Alpha Hall Prettily Decorated with Yachting Flags

One of the most enjoyable dancing parties of the season was that given under the auspices of the Quincy Yacht club, Thursday evening at Alpha hall. There were upwards of eighty couples in attendance, and practically all took an active part in the festivities of the evening.

The hall was very attractively decorated with yachting flags. Suspended from the centre were several long championship and cock-of-the-walk

HARRY S. CRANE,
Commodore.

pennants, while long streamers of the blue, red and white regatta pennants, representing first, second and third prizes, as well the flags of the international code; a handsome naval flag was also draped on the platform the whole forming a pretty setting for the scene.

Music for the evening was furnished by Poole's orchestra and was particularly lively, especially the music for the one step. Modern dances prevailed, although it was noticed that while the hesitation and some of the other newer waltzes were danced, what is known as the extreme was eliminated.

The party was matronized by Mrs. Harry S. Crane, Mrs. Frank Fessenden Crane, Mrs. Herbert S. Robbins and Mrs. Ira M. Whittemore, and a very charming group they made in their cosy corner at the left of the platform. The ushers were members of the committee in charge of the affair and members of the club in general.

Among the past officers of the club noticed were ex-Commodores Frank Fessenden Crane, Herbert S. Robbins, and Ira M. Whittemore and ex-Commodore Frank E. Dawes of the Wollaston Yacht club, the skipper who did not haul up his yacht the Thordis until a few days ago.

Commodore Harry S. Crane headed the committee in charge of the evening, being ably assisted by Vice Commodore Edgar W. Emery, Rear Commodore Charles Laing and Treasurer George S. Morse.

Others on the committee were George Newcomb, A. F. Burrell, Edward McDonald, George Tupper, W. S. Hardwick, Roy Parris and ex-Commodores Herbert S. Robbins and Ira M. Whittemore.

Dancing was in order from 8 to 12 o'clock, frappe and fancy cakes being served during the entire evening in Union hall by C. C. Whittemore.

SCHOOLHOUSE FLOODED

Fire Supply Pipe Burst on Third Floor at Coddington

A pipe carying the water supply for use in case of fire to the third floor of the Coddington school burst during the night and when the building was opened this morning the stairways resembled miniature cascades. The building received such a general flooding that no session was held there today. Althought the pipe was immediately repaired it will not be possible to estimate the actual damage until the walls and ceilings dry out.

The pipe burst in the storage room, off the assembly hall, and when the water was released it ran along under the hall floor and soaked through the ceiling of the second corridor. It dripped through the plaster and when the pools on the floor deepened it commenced to trickle over the stairways.

By the time plumbers arrived to repair the break gallons of water were flowing through the building. Very little of it worked into the rooms on the second floor but those on the first floor were thoroughly drenched.

The basement was entirely flooded and in some spots the water was six inches deep. It got into the boiler room but the damage done there is only nominal.

When Commissioner of Public Works Fred E. Tupper was notified he called the plumbers and sent a gang of men to the building. They swept all the water in the building to the basement which was afterward drained.

Because of the extra dampnesss school sessions today were not even considered. It is probable that the children will go in at the regular time on Monday.

Lynn had a similar experience Thursday when a sprinkler pipe attached to the inside of the roof of the Lynn theatre, burst and caused a damage of $1500.

LIGHT FALL OF SNOW.

A snow storm came Thursday afternoon and evening instead of the rain which had been predicted. There was scarcely a breath of wind and the fine snow which fell made an even coating of white upon the earth. The weather moderated considerable during the afternoon and evening but not enough to turn the snow to rain. It snowed quite hard about 10.30, but it was a very fine snow and did not make very fast and not enough fell to ensure any sleighing. Up to the present time this winter sleighs have been a drug on the market in this vicinity. The ice men are pleased with the little fall of snow for it serves as a protection to the ice already formed on their ponds and for which preparations to cut are now under way.

DANCING RULES.

Charles J. French, mayor of Concord, N. H., and a former resident of Quincy, has just issued rules to govern public dances:

"Improper" dancing is forbidden, but not defined. A police officer and a matron must be present at all dances; there must be no "moonlight" or "shadow lighting" effects; no singing during dances; "pass-out checks are not to be issued," and no dance shall continue after 2 A. M., or on Saturday night after 11.45 P. M.

NEW GRANITE STREET BRIDGE

Will Be Built at Once Because of Heavier Locomotives

The New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad is to commence work immediately putting in a new iron railroad bridge over Granite street to replace the structure now in use.

It is announced that the railroad intends to use a heavier type of locomotive on the Plymouth division and in order to do so it is necessary that all bridges should be reinforced.

The reinforcing of the bridge over the brook on Newport avenue, near the Brooks Adams estate has just been completed, and work on the Granite street bridge is to be undertaken at once. The bridge over Town river in the rear of School street as well as Capen's bridge will also have to be reinforced. In the case of Granite street however an entire new bridge is to be built.

INQUEST OVER MRS. LOUDS DEATH

An inquest on the death of Florence Loud of Weymouth is being held before Judge Avery today. Eugene C. Loud, her husband who attempted suicide after committing the murder is as yet unable to leave the Quincy City Hospital. Assistant District Attorney Fred G. Katzman is present.

The witnesses were Dr. John E. Fraser, medical examiner, who viewed the remains; Deputy Sheriff George W. Conant, Chief Patrick Butler and Patrolman Elbert Ford of the Weymouth police, Charles H. Holbrook, James Carley, Carl H. Granger, Dr. Vincent M. Tirrell, Dr. Edwin M. Mayberry, Dr. George E. Emerson, George C. Torrey, John B. Reade, George P. Niles, Harry E. Field, all of Weymouth, Weston L. Loud of Rockland and G. Russell of Plymouth.

The tragedy ended a series of domestic troubles between Loud and his wife and occurred in the presence of their children in their home on the evening of Jan. 4. Mrs. Loud was horribly slashed and before her death is said to have told the physicians that her husband did it with a razor.

Arthur W. Harris of Whitney road is in Chicago on a business trip.

Many people regard a Jan. 1 bill paid as so much spending money lost.

THE LOAN SHARK.

One voter out of every four in the larger cities, say social workers, has to resort regularly or occasionally to loan offices. He must often put up two days' work to get the price of one.

To meet these grinding conditions. Andrew Carnegie, Vincent Astor, and other philanthropists are working on a plan just announced to supply loans at reasonable rates to honest working people.

Not merely does the victim of the usurer have to pay an inordinate rate of interest. Frequently also he is assessed a string of charges for legal expenses whenever he fails by a few days to make a payment. The grip tightens day by day.

A final resource is to send a clerk into the place of business where the man is working, and bawl out a demand to pay so every one can hear. Then he probably goes off to some other money shark and borrows money at 100 per cent to pay the first loan.

Yet efforts so far to make these small loans at low rates have not commonly been successful. Some philanthropists tried it in Cincinnati. They found that to make the small loans self supporting, they had to charge 48 per cent. All these companies are the victims of swindlers whose resourcefulness is beyond belief. Everyone thinks it is fair game to cheat a usurer.

No doubt a great many of these offices charge only a rate of interest sufficient to pay expenses, charge off a volume of losses yearly, and pay a decent profit. The honest man pays the freight for the dead beat. Money lenders have existed since the earliest glimmering of history. No laws can drive them out. Close up their doors, and they do business from the vest pocket.

No doubt offices conducted as a charity would considerably reduce the prevailing rates. But the only permanent remedy is to instruct young people in a perfect horror of debt, as the most crushing ill of life.

THE PANAMA EXPOSITION.

Entertaining, feeding, and swindling the American tourist, is one of the chief industries of Europe. Our travellers spend hundreds of millions over there yearly. They leave a trail of prosperity wherever there is a ruin, an art gallery, or burial place of a noted man.

The tax on our travellers abroad for the minutiae of life, often for soap in the hotel and the napkin in the restaurant, reaches the point of extortion. But our people swallow irritation at slippery haggling, and pay down their stream of coins with characteristic American good nature.

One would think the European governments would feel a reciprocal interest in our enterprises, a willingness to spend a little money in advertising at such affairs as the Panama exposition.

These governments have been very grouchy about this show. Sulky indifference will not promote the tourist industry. But gradually they are "coming across." The Italian government indicated a willingness to exhibit the past week. Probably most of the others will be on hand.

This big show will be visited by hosts of Americans in easy financial circumstances, who have never crossed the seas. One would think their favor was worth having from the most selfish view point. Our people buy woolens and silks freely in Europe, and have just enacted a new tariff giving liberal privileges of competition.

Even if exhibits of manufactured goods do not pay, one would think it would be a business proposition to put up buildings or model villages giving suggestions of European romance, historic scenes, and ways of living. If a few enterprising Americans were put in charge of entertaining our tourists abroad, they would have such exhibits permanently located in every large city.

HOUGHS NECK SCHOOL FACTS

Necessary to Put Seats In Corridor for Overflow

Editor Daily Ledger:

Your editorial concerning the Houghs Neck school in Wednesday's issue is a clever bit of special pleading, but it ignores material facts, and for that reason is misleading and likely to prejudice the contention of His Honor the Mayor relative to the need of enlarged quarters for the school mentioned.

I greatly dislike to get into print with school affairs so early in my incumbency of the office of chairman of the School Committee, but your treatment of the question leaves me no alternative which can be chosen in justice to the children at Houghs Neck whose rights are paramount.

The figures you present are, I believe correct; but they don't by any means present the case fairly to the people of Quincy. Knowing you to be not only public-spirited but also friendly to our schools, I am confident that you will publish these additional facts.

1st—The enrolment thus far this year is 219 as against 197 last year—a gain of 22.

2nd—One room on the lower floor has a registration of 72 pupils; the present active membership is about 70. There are seats for only 48.

3rd—Another room with seats for 48 has a registration of 63, and a live membership of almost 60.

4th—January 26th will see 15 more pupils admitted to the rooms just referred to.

I hope the councilmen will visit this school. They will see 16 seats in the upper corridor for the expected new-comers. They will also find six teachers working in the four rooms and the halls.

In view of these facts, Mr. Editor, who can deny that the need of additional rooms is imperative?

John D. Mackay

Quincy, Jan. 16, 1914.

QUITE A GUY ALL RIGHT.

They are telling a story about the State House, says the Traveler, of the little joke that ex-Gov. John Q. A. Brackett had at the expense of Councillor Charles W. Guy of Quincy who defeated Guy Ham for election to the executive council. The venerable ex-Governor met Councillor Guy for the first time in the executive chamber just prior to the inauguration of Gov. Walsh.

"So you are Councillor Guy," exclaimed ex-Gov. Brackett, as he shook hands with the other gentlemen. "Then you are the Guy that defeated the other Guy. Well, you're quite a Guy all right, any way," he added as an afterthought; "the people thought you were the right Guy."

TEMPLE A. WINSLOE ILL.

Pleased with his success in the Quincy campaign, Temple A. Winsloe returned from New York in time to take an active part in the Boston campaign. While speaking in Roxbury, on Monday evening in the interest of Mayor-elect James M. Curley he overtaxed himself and had a collapse. He has been confined to his bed since, and his condition has been reported as serious. The Ledger learns on inquiry at the Wollaston Centre garage that Mr. Winsloe's condition is not serious and he will be out in a few days.

FOR CHRONIC COUGHS

Milton, Pa., Woman Has Found a Remedy.

Mrs. Howard Wagner, of Milton, Pa., says: "I had a bad cold for months, and would cough every night until midnight. I consulted a doctor and took two kinds of medicine but got no relief. Vinol was recommended and after taking it a week I could sleep all night without coughing once. I continued its use and now have a fine appetitie, never felt better and my cough is entirely gone."

It is a well known fact that when a person in run-down, stomach out of order, or the system overloaded with waste matter, vital resistence is lowered and colds and coughs are easily contracted.

The safest and surest method we know to overcome this condition is by taking our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, Vinol. In the most natural manner Vinal tones up the digestive organs, promotes a hearty appetite, enriches the blood, and as a specific for chronic coughs, colds and bronchial troubles Vinol is unexcelled.

Try a bottle of Vinol on our offer to return your money if it fails to help you. Edward J. Murphy, Druggist, Quincy, Mass.

FRESH WAR NOT UNLIKELY

Powers Doing Their Best to Suffocate Outburst

TURKEY IS SEEKING REVENGE

Prepares Risings In Favor of Placing Izzet Pasha on Throne of Albania, but Is Frustrated—Mussulmans Want Disturbance Which Will Eventually Cause Greece to Suffer

London, Jan. 16.—The situation in Albania is much more grave than is generally known or officially acknowledged by the European powers, according to authoritative information gathered in diplomatic circles, and the various governments are directing all their efforts to suffocate a fresh outburst in the Balkans.

The tension is considered to be greater at the present moment than at any time preceding or during the recent Balkan wars, and is said to have reached such a point that Germany has proposed joint Austrian and Italian intervention in Albania.

The suggested intervention is the reason why Italy and Austria have recently concentrated their warships along the Albanian coast. Both nations, however, hesitate to follow German advice, as they fear further complications, and they also are restrained by anxiety as to what might happen in their respective countries, where a costly expedition into Albania would be unpopular because it would bring little or no return to either of them.

The European governments have secured proof that the Mussulmans both in Constantinople and Albania had prepared risings in favor of placing Izzet Pasha, formerly Turkish minister of war, on the throne of Albania, and that this object was frustrated by the arrest of six Turkish officers and 200 soldiers when they arrived at Avlona, the Albanian seaport, from Constantinople.

Evidence also has been obtained by the powers that the Mussulmans are determined to use Albania as a centre of disturbance which will radiate from there to other parts of the Balkans and especially to Greece, against which Turkey's resentment is said to be particularly directed.

In the meantime the note of the powers comprising the triple alliance —Germany, Italy and Austria—in answer to Sir Edward Grey's note with reference to the disposition of the Ægean islands, agrees with the British foreign secretary's plan to allow Greece to hold the Ægean islands now in her possession, including Samothrace and Lemnos. Turkey receives Imbros and Tenedos, and some small islands north of Tenedos.

HEADS STATE DEMOCRACY

O'Leary, Avowed Curley Man, Will Also Act as Executive Secretary

Boston, Jan. 16.—Mayor-elect Curley took the first step toward extending his control over the state Democracy, for although Curley is in Washington, Michael A. O'Leary of Cambridge, an enthusiastic Curley man, was elected chairman of the Democratic state committee by acclamation.

He was nominated by former Chairman Riley, a Curley sympathizer, and the nomination was seconded by Curley's campaign manager, John F. McDonald.

O'Leary will also act as executive secretary. The latter position carries a $1200 salary.

AN EXPENSIVE UNDERTAKING

Two Score Railroads Entering Chicago Plan to Electrify Lines

Chicago, Jan. 16.—That forty railroads entering Chicago have joined in planning a co-operative system of electrifying their systems for both passenger and freight transportation within the city of Chicago and the industrial zone surrounding it was the report made to a council committee that met to consider a smoke abatement ordinance.

Representatives of the roads declared that the plan, if carried out, would entail an expenditure nearly equal to the cost of the Panama canal.

QUARRELED OVER MONEY

Allen, Who Murdered Cunningham, Receives Life Sentence

New Haven, Jan. 16.—William B. Allen, charged with the murder of Francis B. Cunningham, in the Westville woods, pleaded guilty to second degree murder and Judge Shumway sentenced him to life imprisonment in the state prison.

It was alleged that the two men quarreled over money and that Allen later lured Cunningham into the woods and shot him.

HUNDRED SHEEP KILLED

Waverly, N. J., Jan. 16.—Speeding through here at fifty miles an hour with mails bound for the west, a Pennsylvania passenger train "sideswiped" a cattle train.

All the passengers were shaken in their berths, the fireman of the cattle train was injured and more than 100 sheep were killed.

WOMAN'S GUILD.

The Woman's Guild held its annual meeting in the parish rooms of St. Chrysostoms church Wednesday afternoon, which was preceded by an all day sewing meeting. An appetizing luncheon was served to the members by Mrs. Charles J. Hennigar and Mrs. William J. Crouchier. The president, Mrs. Daniel C. Miller presided and put through the business of the afternoon in her usual efficient manner.

The members were grieved by Mrs. Millers announcement of the very serious condition of Mrs. Elisha D. Atkins and prayer was offered for her after the usual prayers of the Guild.

The secretary and treasurer, Miss Annie Clean, read yearly reports giving a review of the year's work which included six all day sewing meetings held through Lent, when articles of wearing apparel were made for a needy family in the parish. Also had six other sewing meetings for the coming fair. Under the direction of efficient members of the Guild luncheon was served to members at cost of the food. A gift of a sewing machine from Mrs. Edward F. Parlee was most gratefully accepted.

These meetings have served a double purpose, for not only has a great deal of work been accomplished but the members have become better accquainted and a greater interest has been shown in the work of the guild. The guild has given three successful suppers and has thus been able to make an addition to the kitchen closet of new dishes and silver. A welcome gift of two table cloths from Mrs. David L. Jewell and Mrs. Herbert H. Albee has been thankfully received.

The guild voted to give $200.00 towards the deficit in current expenses. The parish treasurer has been paid $116.00 of this money. With the assistance of the Girls Friendly and Junior Auxiliary societies we have been enabled to buy 75 chairs for the parish rooms. We have also given $50.00 towards repairing the church organ. At the last meeting in May the Guild voted to ask each member to earn a dollar during the summer the money thus earned to go towards furnishing the ladies parlor in the proposed new parish house. Last year Miss Josephine F. Bumstead gave us an interesting talk on Cuba. Our Christmas barrel was for the colored work in Virginia. On December 12 Mrs. Cleveland invited the members of the Guild to meet at her home to make bags for the birthday party to be given before Lent. We had an excellent missionary committee with Mrs. David L. Jewell, chairman and our monthly meetings have been interested and instructive. It is with sadness that we recall the death of two beloved members, Mrs. Frank Flood and Mrs. David Fulton. It was voted to make Mr. Charles N. Faulkner a generous gift showing the Guild's appreciation of his faithful services as sexton.

The officers elected for 1914 are: President, Mrs. Daniel C. Miller; first vice president, Mrs. Howard D. Fowler; second vice president, Mrs. Ferderick S. Waite; secretary and treasurer, Miss Annie Clean.

PHEASANTS FOR THE PARK

Several to be Liberated at an Early Date

The Fish and Game Commission is preparing to liberate a number of pheasants in Merrymount Park on the recommendation of several citizens who are interested in the preservation of game birds. The spot is ideal because the birds take kindly to the heavily wooded land on the easterly end of the park which surrounds small stretches of swamp land here and there.

Several years ago on the recommendation of the late Dexter M. Wadsworth, then chairman of the park commissioners, a large number of pheasants were put in the park section. The flock increased amazingly but the inroads made by boys armed with shot guns and air rifles and reports from the shooting at the gunning stand at Adams shore tended to scare them away.

They worked across Hancock street to the large areas of the Rice estate and the wooded hillsides on Third hill and are now as far west as the marsh sections in Montclair. upon their appearance a real slaughter commenced and up to the time that Game Warden Tribou put in an appearance there was no limit to the killing. Since then there has been a decided decrease in the number slain.

Under the statute, park land, whether private or public and highways are game preserves and the law for preservation of game birds which includes pheasants, is strict and carries a heavy penalty.

The police department will be asked to co-operate with the Fish and Game Commission after the liberation of these birds, and if the general public also assist in preventing indiscriminate shooting quail and partridges will be released at a later time.

It is the belief of the commission that the presence of different birds in Merrymount Park will have a tendency to popularize the section and serve as an inducement for children and adults to pass more time in the attractive and extensive parkway.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

At the annual meeting of the Womens Missionary society, held Wednesday afternoon in the Park and Downs church, Mrs. Charles A. Richardson was elected to the presidency. Upon relinquishing her office, Miss L. Catherine Robinson, the retiring president was presented with a bouquet of pinks with the good wishes of the club and as a testimony to her faithful services. The following officers were elected: President—Mrs. Charles A. Richardson; Vice President—Mrs. William J. Colby; Secretary—Mrs. Fred R. Busler; Treasurer—Mrs. Celia C. Mackay. Reports were read by the secretary, Mrs. Frank Knowlton and the treasurer Mrs. Artemus M. Dingwell.

SURPRISE PARTY.

A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Walfred Nordquist, a well known young man of Whitwell street, Thursday evening, where he was tendered a surprise party. In behalf of those present he was presented a beautiful signet ring. With a few well chosen words he thanked his friends for their kind token of friendship. Refreshments were served and games were enjoyed until a late hour. Guests were present from Quincy, Braintree, Wollaston and Weymouth.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

Bowling Contests — Athletic Leagues
Illustrated Lectures — Banquets
Basket Ball — Conferences

The attendance at the Business Men's banquet on Jan. 27 promises to be larger than it was a year ago, and the seating capacity of the gym will probably be taxed to its uttermost.

The Senior pool championship will probably be decided this week. Rich and England will try conclusions Friday evening and Brooks will play the winner of that match Saturday evening.

The first meeting of Sunday School superintendents and older boys of the Sunday School will be held in the Y. M. C. A. parlors, Monday evening, Jan. 19, at 7.30, to discuss the organizing of basketball and bowling teams to represent the Sunday schools.

The return match with the Clapp Memorial bowling team will be held in East Weymouth later in the month. Quincy expects to "come back" in this match and take all four points.

The Junior Bible classes have their regular meetings today. After the meeting of the older fellows Mr. Melville has arranged for a game tournament including pool, ping-pong and checkers.

The Davis class of the Calvary Baptist church is to hold a bowling tournament in the alleys this evening.

"Rex" Hitchcock, the big guard on the championship Harvard eleven this fall will speak at the boys meeting Saturday morning on "Football as an education." All the boys in the city want to see the famous representative of Hawaii and hear the "inside dope" on football.

In the Junior gym. contests, B. A. A., captain Wester, has come out ahead so far, taking seven points in the first series of games.

For the Employed Boys, Carlisle, captain Gronberg, and Tufts, captain Moodie, are leaders in the "gym" work with six points apiece. Harvard, captain Beation is following close with a total of five points.

Osgood of the Yale bowling team had the high average in the Employed Boys bowling season with 85 plus. O. Djerf of Harvard was second with 83 plus.

An important basketball ruling has been made by Mr. Hepbron, editor of Spaulding's basketball guide, and in response to a letter from Mr. LaRose, physical director of this association he writes as follows with reference to players catching the ball immediately after the jump:—"When the referee throws the ball up between two players, neither player can under any circumstances catch the ball until it has been played by some other player than the two who are jumping."

This ruling of course, applies not only to the jump at centre, but also from scrimmage. This point has been the subject of considerable argument and in order to clear it up Mr. LaRose referred it to Mr. Hepbron.

The first basketball team meets Tech. '16, and the second team plays the Melrose Y. M. C. A. team Saturday evening on the local floor.

PETITIONER IN BANKRUPTCY

Hezekiah C. Welch of 28 Edwards street, Quincy, has filed, through Clarence W. Dealtry, a Boston attorney, a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. His total liabilities are $50,377.52 of which $95 is for taxes; $1,753.50 secured, there being two secured creditors; $48,529.02 unsecured among more than 80 creditors.

He has assets amounting to $39,824. His principal asset is unliquidated claims for $29,000. He also has debts due for $6,500.

The principal unsecured creditors are the Mechanics and Traders National Bank of Portsmouth, N. H., $6200; H. A. Bingham of Springfield, Vt., $15,000; W. F. Cox of New York, $2,000; E. L. Turner of Everett, $5,000.

The occupation of Welch, as given in the petition is salesman.

Welch, widely known in New England as a shoe manufacturer and promoter, was head of the International Trading and Finance Co. of Constantinople, a $15,000,000 corporation of Boston which suspended business because of the interruptions due to the Turkish-Italian war.

About three weeks before the suspension Welch was stricken with aphasia and was confined to his home at 28 Edwards street, Quincy Point. It was said at the time that although not confined to his bed he was unable to recall anything that had transpired since the time he severed his connections with a Haverhill Shoe firm. He has practically recovered.

An article of a sensational nature which appeared in one of the Boston morning papers, Nov. 29 brought an explanation from his attorney in which he stated that nothing had occurred on which to base the story but that the probable effect of it would be to force any persons, however solvent, into bankruptcy.

RATE RAISE HALTS IN GRANITE STATE

Suspended Because It Worked Hardships on Shippers

Concord, N. H., Jan. 16.—The public service commission issued an order suspending until Aug. 1, 1914, the new schedule of express rates filed by the American, National and Canadian express companies in compliance with the new "block system" rate order of the federal interstate commerce commission.

The commission finds that the interstate commerce commission order, while making a substantial reduction in long distance rates, increases rates for short hauls, and, as most of the express business of New Hampshire is within the state, the order works a hardship on New Hampshire shippers.

JUDGE DROPS DEAD

Was Preparing to Leave His Home to Attend Session of Court

Lowell, Mass., Jan. 16.—Judge Nathan D. Pratt of the superior court dropped dead at his home here as he was getting ready to go to Boston to preside at the fifth session of the Suffolk superior court. An attack of indigestion had affected his heart.

Mr. Pratt was appointed to the superior bench by Governor Foss in 1911 and was 62 years of age. He was admitted to the bar here in 1875. He was elected as city solicitor of Lowell in 1883, became an alderman in 1886 and two years later was defeated as Democratic candidate for mayor.

LABOR MEN INDICTED

Moyer and Thirty-Seven Other Officials Charged With Conspiracy

Houghton, Mich., Jan. 16.—President Moyer of the Western Federation of Miners and thirty-seven other officials of that organization were indicted for conspiracy on three counts by the grand jury here.

Warrants were prepared for the thirty-eight union men accused of conspiracy, and the deputy sheriffs scurried over the country serving them. Circuit court commissioners in Houghton and Calumet were kept busy approving bonds of $1000, under which many of the prisoners were released.

DRANK POISONED BEER

New York Man Slain For Two Dollars and a Cheap Watch

New York, Jan. 16.—The murder of Ivan Martysewicz, whose body, crammed into a trunk, was left in the street by two pushcart men, was described by Stefania Kiviatkowska, a Polish girl, one of the six persons under arrest in connection with the crime.

She said that two of the men now in prison killed Martysewicz with a drink of poisoned beer. The motive was robbery, she said, but all the murderers obtained was a cheap watch and $2 in money.

DEFIES BESIEGERS

Beardsley Warns Officers From His Home Under Pain of Death

Maysville, N. Y., Jan. 16.—Still barricaded in his house near Summerdale, Edward Beardsley, who shot and mortally wounded Overseer of the Poor Putnam, defied Sheriff Anderson and his deputies to cross a certain line in front of the house.

When reminded of his promise to surrender he laughed and warned Deputy Van Cise, who carried messages to him under a flag of truce, not to approach the house again under pain of death.

MANY STABBED IN STREET RIOT

Rival Syrian Factions In Serious Clash at Lawrence

BATTLE BETWEEN TWO BOYS

Arrest of One Causes Partisans to Start Rumpus Because of Alleged Unjust Treatment and Two Hundred and Fifty Persons Become Involved—Girl Leader Arrested

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 16.—Knives, brickbats and missiles of many kinds figured in a wild riot in the Syrian quarter last evening in which 250 persons, including several women, were engaged, and which was not broken up until the police charged upon the struggling mass of humanity with their night sticks.

Eight persons, one of them a woman who led the mob, were arrested. One man is suffering from five stab wounds in the back and from a cut that nearly severed his left ear. Dozens went to their homes and summoned physicians to patch them up as best they could.

The trouble grew out of the fact that there are two camps of Syrians in the quarter, each consisting of persons who came from particular sections of that country. Its occasion was the arrest of a boy belonging to one faction for fighting a boy of the other group.

Partisans of the boy who was arrested felt he had been unjustly treated and did not hesitate to express their opinions. Numerous street brawls which resulted, together with fights in the coffee houses, finally coalesced in a riot that filled Valley street with a surging mass of men and women, divided into two groups that lined up against each other, armed with any weapon that came to hand.

From windows and house tops women and children, who dared not take part in the pitched battle on the street, hurled bricks and pieces of wood at the combatants and poured hot water upon them. In the street knives were used freely.

Back and forth along Valley street the battle raged, one side first gaining an advantage only to lose it later to the other. The groups were about evenly matched.

Those who were too far in the rear to come to blows with the opposing faction hurled brickbats and stones over the heads of their friends, trusting that some of the enemy's forces might be put out of commission.

For a few minutes after the arrival of the police, the crowd still filled with the lust of blood, continued to keep up the battle. A few even attacked the patrolmen. The officers, however, at last charged upon the combatants, and, with the aid of their clubs, managed to restore order in the street.

Among the eight persons arrested was Miss Chehalem Salem, 22 years old. She is a sister of Michael Salem, 18, who was the boy arrested for fighting. Joseph Hetar, 18, was Salem's opponent on that occasion. The fact that Hetar was not arrested infuriated the members of Salem's faction.

AN UNUSUAL REQUEST

New York Engineers Ask That Their Big Salaries Be Halved

New York, Jan. 16.—Three city employes gave Mayor Mitchel a surprise by applying for a reduction in salary. They were J. R. Freeman, W. H. Burr and A. H. Noble, each a consulting engineer to the board of water supply.

The engineers suggested that their salaries be fixed at $3000 a year each, instead of $6000, as at present. They explained that with the completion of the Catskill aqueduct the board needed their services no more than half the time they had previously devoted to city work.

HARD TO RAISE CASH

British Sponsors of Olympic Fund Give Up Their Task

London, Jan. 16.—The Duke of Westminster's Olympic fund committee has decided to resign after disposing of the funds collected to the British Olympic council.

The sponsors of the fund aspired to raise $500,000 through a national subscription, but the amount subscribed and promised is less than $55,000, nearly one-half of the promises being conditional.

A very considerable amount has been utilized for expenses and the liabilities amount to $4190.

New York Seen Upside Down

New York, Jan. 16.—Lower New York upside down was the strange sight that greeted passengers of the steamer Prinz Joachim as the vessel, in-bound, paused off Sandy Hook, waiting for the mist to clear. In the dense vapor raised by the cold weather appeared a clear-cut mirage of the tip of Manhattan—inverted.

LOOT HIDDEN IN CROCK

More Than $12,000 Stolen From Express Company Is Recovered

Connellsville, Pa., Jan. 16.—More than $12,000 of the $13,000 stolen by Ralph Wiant, a clerk of the United States Express company here, was found in a crock partly filled with flour in the home of Fred B. Wiant, a brother.

Detectives had learned from Miss Margaret Dunnington of Morgantown, W. Va., that Ralph Wiant visited her and informed her he had left most of the stolen money with a friend in Connellsville.

Fred Wiant's home was searched from top to bottom. A crock, containing flour, was overturned and $12,000 of the stolen money rolled onto the floor. Wiant then admitted that his brother had called on him and requested him to hide the money.

SCENTS WAR WITH MEXICO

Gillette Scores Secretary of State In Rap at Administration

Washington, Jan. 16.—Intervention in Mexico as the only result of the present policy of the United States was predicted in the house by Congressman Gillette of Massachusetts, during the course of a war speech, in which he assailed Secretary Bryan.

Recognition of Huerta early in the Mexican trouble, Gillette said, would have offered the best chance of quieting the disturbance.

"When the war comes," said he, "it will be no excuse that the secretary of state has delivered brilliant speeches in favor of peace. An emotional and oratorical glorification of peace is not sufficient atonement for a policy whose legitimate and logical result is war."

SURRENDER FORCED BY MACHINE GUNS

Three Hundred Men Arrested at Johannesburg

Johannesburg, S. A., Jan. 16.—After a siege of more than twenty-four hours, Secretary Bain of the Trades Federation and 300 strikers, who had been cooped up in Trades hall, surrendered.

The labor men gave up when 1000 policemen and armed burghers with machine guns surrounded the building and threatened to open fire. All were arrested.

Shutesbury, Mass., Jan. 16.—The body of Myron L. Moore, 70, a hermit, who lived for more than a generation in a small hut on wooded land on the outskirts of the George Derry estate, was found by neighbors lying frozen on the cabin floor.

Gossip has it that Moore withdrew from society because of a wrong suffered him in an affair of the heart. A woman on whom he centred his affections ran away from him, met and married another.

The last seen of Moore was on the morning of Jan. 4, when a farm hand on a neighboring estate noticed him in the woods.

Nervy Burglars

NEW THREE STRING RECORD.

Bernard Burke, who has been netting big results in his bowling and who recently rolled 351, setting the Quincy record for three strings made in competition got the unusual score of 370 outside of competition on the City Square alleys Thursday evening in three consecutive strings. Beyond a doubt it will stand for some nights to come as the local record unless he comes into the limelight again with a larger one. The total was made directly after a match in which he netted a total of 325 which included a high string of 130. In the record smashing contest he rolled 131, 130 and 109. The only man that has broken the pins for a higher total is Paul Poehler, the champion.

TOOK ALL FOUR POINTS.

Two teams composed of employees of the Pneumatic Scale Co. held a special match on the Coliseum alleys Thursday evening. No. 2 beat No. 1 by score of 1279 to 1174. High single was rolled by Dunn, who got 107 and 292 for high total. The score:

No. 1	430	420	429	1279
No. 2	385	385	404	1174

EXTERMINATION OF MOSQUITO

Squantum Man Introduces Bill in Legislature

Squantum comes to the front again this year with a bill filed in the Legislature on Thursday by William N. Kenyon, president of the Squantum Improvement association, which provides for the extermination of the mosquito nuisance of the state under the direction of the State Board of Health, and local Board of Healths. The bill also requires the owners of salt marshes and other breeding places of mosquitoes to treat their land, subject to the approval of the local Board of Health, to the end that no standing water shall remain.

Squantum, while being a beautiful summer resort, is also the resort of the mosquito pest, and residents of that section of the city have suffered greatly from them.

A similar bill was presented to the legislature by Squantum residents last year. Experiments made last summer were encouraging. The city was asked to make a special appropriation for that purpose but the City Council did not pass the order.

RALLY TEAMS SELECTED.

Quincy herd, No. 1, Benevolent Order of Buffaloes, met Thursday evening in Hibernian hall on Franklin street. President Charles H. Finn was in the chair. Two rally teams were formed for the purpose of soliciting new members. A prize will be offered the team which does the best work. William Porter is captain of the "Buffalo Hustlers," while George Davies leads the "Red Sox." Plans are being formulated for the annual ladies' night of the herd, which will soon take place. Vice President John J. Byron was appointed at the head of the entertainment committee with Albion Dixon as secretary. Three applications for membership were received. A degree team has been formed which will soon commence work under the direction of President Flynn. The usual refreshments and a social hour followed the business session.

The newly elected officers of John Adams Loyal Ladies Orange lodge for this year are:

Worthy Mistress—Mrs. Annie McKenzie.
Deputy Mistress—Miss Grace McKinnon.
Recording secretary—Mrs. Annie Lamont.

BASKET BALL.

In Long's hall, Braintree, Thursday evening, an assembly of 300 people witnessed two exciting games of basket ball between the first and second teams from the Cunningham gymnasium, Milton. The first team, which has lost no games thus far this season, won the opening game by the score of 31-10. The snappy work in this contest was a revelation to the fans. The other game went to the second team by the score of 23-15.

WOLLASTON CLERKS DEFEATED.

The Quincy All Stars beat the Wollaston Clerks on the City Square alleys by a wide margin Thursday evening. Burke was high with 325 for a total and a single of 130. Ross was second with 113. Goodhue of the Clerks was high man for the losers, getting 107, 103, 103 for a total of 313. The score:

All Stars	494	464	459	1417
Clerks	448	420	431	1299

—Report that the owners of the Robert Browning love-letters are trying to sell them to the British museum because they can find no rich American to pay a fancy price for them, is interesting as a symptom of returning sanity among our prominent and generally respected citizens. There is a point at which the American book-lover and curio collector ceases to be "easy." There have been people willing to pay $35,000 for love letters, but they were usually men that wrote them and longed to have them back. Moreover, they were not poets.—Taunton Herald.

PANAMA AND THE CANAL

John R. Hamilton Speaks Before Y. M. H. A.

President John L. Hamilton of the Quincy Board of Trade spoke Thursday evening before the Y. M. H. A., his subject being "Panama and the canal." He had an attentive audience. He first told of his trip to Jamaica and thence to Colon. In turn were explained the Colon breakwater, the city of Colon, the Gatun dam, the Gatun lake, and the spillway, the Culebra cut, the locks and the city of Panama.

Mr. Hamilton said that the main obstacle in the way of building the canal was the presence of mosquitos. Through these and the disease germs they carried with them, thousands of Frenchmen lost their lives and it was owing to this that France finally had to give up the project. It took the United States government, with its sanitary ideas, to clear the infested canal zone from disease. The zone is now just as habitable as any spot on the continent.

The enormity of the undertaking may be fairly understood, when it is estimated that the whole amount of waste dug up would fill a continuous string of freight cars running four times around the world.

The man to whom the most credit for the completion of the greatest feat of engineering skill ever undertaken is due, is Colonel Goethals, of the U. S. Army. He is called the "old man" of the Canal zone and is loved by everybody. A story is current in Panama that if Col. Goethals were to run for president he would get 80,000 votes from the zone, because every worker of the 40,000 on the canal would vote twice for him.

Mr. Hamilton described in detail the action of the three great locks. He illustrated his talk by means of camera pictures taken during the trip. The audience was amused by the relation of many funny incidents which occurred on the trip.

At the completion of his talk Mr. Hamilton was given a rising vote of thanks for his kindness. The chairman of the evening was Edward Berman. The next speaker on the list will probably be Senator Louis F. R. Langelier, who will speak on Jan. 29, on "How the laws are made at the State House."

NOW AT COLLEGE.

Harold Chapman, captain of the champion Quincy A. A. second team, has entered Williston academy, where his brother Peter Chapman has been a student since his graduation at Quincy High school in 1911. "Bootus" as he is familarly known throughout the city, had his name entered on the academy roll Jan. 2.

Although is was generally understood that it has been his intention to prepare for college few were aware that he had taken the decisive step.

He is a graduate of Quincy High school and while there demonstrated an athletic prowess that augured a brilliant future. He excelled in the three major sports and after graduation became connected with the manufacturing establishment of his father.

It was during this period that he took earnestly to basket ball, and while captain of the Quincy A. A. second team his showing was so remarkable that sporting writers and promoters stated his future was particularly bright.

He is a good back stop and last summer was given a tryout with the Worcester team in the New England league. He finished the season at Frederickton, N. S., where his average exceeded all other men on the team.

"Bootus" is as good a loser as a winner, and above all, he is always a gentleman. In fact that trait is characteristic of his brothers Peter and Millard, the latter being a companion in sport of "Bootus." Peter is the youngest of the trio but since he entered Williston has attained athletic honors by the score.

The Quincy A. A. second team will be seriously crippled this season by the absence of the Chapman brothers. Millard is at present in New York, where it is expected he will spend the greater part of the winter.

CITY IS RUINED BY TIDAL WAVE

Kumamoto Suffers Severely From Earthquake Shock

MANY THOUSANDS ARE DEAD

Wall of Water Washed Up as Result of Volcanic Eruption Sweeps All Before It—Great Suffering In Many Districts of Japan—Five Hundred Square Miles Devastated

Nagasaki, Japan, Jan. 16.—A second tidal wave, caused by renewed activity of the volcano Sakura-Jima, swept the coast of the island of Kiushiu at Kumamoto, bringing a fresh toll of death in the series of calamities which are overwhelming the Japanese empire.

Washed up by the earthquake shocks which are accompanying the violent eruption of Sakura-Jima an irresistible wall of water rolled over the harbor at Kumamoto, sinking ships and quays and destroying part of the city. Kumamoto had a population of 60,000, many thousands of whom are dead, missing and homeless.

A wireless dispatch from a Japanese warship in Kagoshima bay said that the west side of the Sakura-Jima volcano burst yesterday, throwing molten lava for miles into the bay. The mountain is now a fiery furnace, with flames and smoke billowing for 5000 feet above the seething craters.

The blowing off of the mountain's cap was accompanied by more severe earthquake shocks than had previously been felt in Satsuma province. The waters of the bay became so turbulent from the subterranean disturbances that the relief ships had to withdraw from the vicinity of Sakura island.

Clouds of steam arose from the water where the molten lava rolled into the bay.

In all directions north of the stricken city of Kagoshima earth tremors brought damage. Buildings were shaken down. Railroad bridges were destroyed, preventing the shipment of food and clothing into the devastated district.

More than 13,000 homes have been destroyed, it is estimated. Of the 100,000 refugees many are missing. Greater fissures opened in the earth in the district north of Kagoshima, where hordes of homeless had taken refuge. Some of these fissures are nearly a mile long and as they stretched apart engulfed houses, trees and human beings.

A zone of 500 square miles was devastated.

Emperor Yoshihito has received telegrams from all parts of the world expressing sympathy for the chain of calamities which have stricken Japan. There are 10,000,000 starving people in the famine stricken provinces of the north.

At a conference of ministers in Tokio it was decided to donate 2,000,000 yen as a preliminary relief measure.

Scientists reported to the government that the worst eruptions of Sakura-Jima and other volcanoes in southern Japan will probably follow. Warnings have been sent to all quarters for the people to protect themselves against earthquake shocks.

Wilson Appeals For Aid

Washington, Jan. 16.—President Wilson issued an appeal to the American people, as president of the American Red Cross, for funds to assist the people of Japan, who are suffering not only from earthquake, but from the failure of crops.

Red Cross headquarters announced that an appeal had been sent out to all state chapters, asking local chapters to gather the funds.

SUFFER IN OPEN BOAT

Sailors Who Abandoned Schooner Martin Are Landed at Boston

Boston, Jan. 16.—The rescued crew of thirteen men and one woman of the foundered five-masted schooner Grace A. Martin were landed at the Plant line dock by the rescuing steamer A. W. Perry, in port from Halifax.

The sinking vessel was abandoned thirty miles south of Matinicus lightship. The crew had a terrible wait for twenty-one hours in a drifting twenty-five-foot gasolene boat, which had been frozen out of commission by the bitter cold, before the final rescue by the ice-encrusted Halifax steamship 100 miles northeast of Boston lightship.

GOT INTO A COFFIN TO PROVE HIS BET

"Human Ruler" Got Angry When Lid Was Screwed Down

Chicago, Jan. 16.—The "Human Ruler" has been found. The discovery led to both the "discoverer" and the "ruler" being brought before Judge Scully.

"We were making a coffin," George Rycoch told the court, "and I told Clyde Olin, who works with me at the casket factory, that the coffin was 5 feet 4 inches long, just my height. He bet me that it wasn't. I crawled into it to prove it, and then he screwed down the lid. When I got out I tried to lick him."

"I don't blame you," said the judge, "but I'll put you both under peace bonds."

THE PURE FOOD ACT

Dispute Concerning Circulars In Packages Comes to an Issue

Washington, Jan. 16.—The government's right under the pure food law of 1906 to censor circulars enclosed in packages of medicine on the market is to be passed upon by the supreme court.

Department of agriculture officials claim that the public is being deceived every day by exaggerated statements of the efficiency of nostrums to effect all kinds of marvellous cures. They claim the pure food law was enacted to wipe out this evil.

Manufacturers of medicines, however, contend that the pure food law merely authorizes government officials to regulate statements on the labels of medicines and does not confer any authority over circulars enclosed in packages.

COBEQUID ABANDONED

Steam Packet Liner and Her Cargo Will Be Total Loss

Yarmouth, N. S., Jan. 16.—The Royal Mail steam packet liner Cobequid, which struck on Trinity rock and held together long enough to save the lives of the 108 persons on board, has been abandoned completely and will go to pieces.

The captain and eleven of the crew decided to remain on board in the hope that the vessel, or at least her cargo, might be saved, but when it ere were unmistakeable signs of her break-up the twelve men were quickly taken on board the Canadian government steamer Lansdowne.

Pope's Vicar Declares That Certain Fashions Are Perverting Souls

Rome, Jan. 16.—Cardinal Basilio Pompili, vicar general of Rome, representing the pontiff, issued a pastoral letter denouncing the tango and also certain newspapers, theatrical performances and fashions, which, he declared, are perverting souls.

He warns parents that if they do not protect their children from corruption they will be guilty before God of failure in their most sacred duties.

Advertisers Ask Only A Fair Trial

By HOLLAND.

ADVERTISERS do not attempt to make you agree to buy their goods for the rest of your life. They only want you to give their wares a trial, to subject them to actual test by actual use, and then be guided by experience.

Could anything prove more clearly that the advertiser has supreme confidence in his product, that he is absolutely certain that it will please you, that it will be all he says it is?

It would indeed be foolish to spend money to induce you to buy an article that would prove unsatisfactory and would result in your telling friends and neighbors of your experience. Advertisers spend millions making their trademarks known, and in order to make their trademarks valuable they must stand for a certain standard of worth. Having made their trademarks known, manufacturers exert every effort to keep the goods up to the expected high grade.

The Man In Seedy Clothes

How a Famous Gambling Resort Came to Be Discontinued

By F. A. MITCHEL

Half a century ago the celebrated gambling house at Monte Carlo did not exist. At that time Baden Baden was the center of attraction for those who wished to "buck the tiger." The building devoted to the purpose was not as splendid as that now at Monte Carlo, but it was a handsome one for those times.

One night a man of mean appearance entered the spacious gambling hall at Baden Baden, shambled up to the table and stood behind those inclosing it looking at the game. His eyesight seemed to be sensitive, for he wore colored glasses. His clothing was shabby, and his appearance was by no means improved by his beard, which was long and scraggly.

After watching the game for awhile he pushed his way to a seat beside the table that had been left vacant by a woman who had lost all her money and had nothing for a stake. On the stranger's left was a German baron, who, looking aside at his new neighbor and not relishing the proximity of such a looking man, gathered up the coins before him and withdrew.

The seedy individual drew from his pocket a purse, from which he took a few gold pieces and distributed them over the numbers he wished to cover. The wheel was spun, the ball rattled about in the inclosure, and the croupier announced what had won and what had lost. The stranger was ahead on his bets. The next time he lost, and next won and continued to win and lose, his winnings usually equaling his losses.

At the table directly opposite the newcomer sat a young man, whom a number of the players recognized as a member of the ducal court. He was known to be talented and a favorite with his sovereign. Much of his time was spent at the gaming table, and report said that a splendid estate he possessed was gradually being transferred to others through the roulette table. On this occasion he was playing feverishly, risking large sums and usually losing.

At last he had nothing more to lose and sat with his hat drawn down over his eyes, doubtless to conceal his emotion, looking fixedly on the red where he had lost his last stake.

At the moment a handsomely dressed woman entered the hall with a hasty step and approached the table evidently looking for some one. Seeing the nobleman, she went to him, stood behind him and was about to lay a hand on his shoulder when the seedy individual opposite pushed a handful of gold pieces in front of his vis-a-vis. Whether the latter did not understand that an offer of a loan had been made him or whether he declined to accept a favor from one of such disreputable appearance none could tell. But he continued to gaze as before on the red, making no motion to use the proffered coins. Then the man who had made the offer partly rose, reached across the table and placed the money he had offered on a spot where if it won it would win 5 to 1.

This incident held the hand of the lady behind the nobleman, and instead of letting it fall where she had intended she waited. The wheel was spun, the ball rattled, and being at last caught in one of the receptacles, the croupier announced the result. A dozen gold pieces that the seedy man had placed for his vis-a-vis were covered by sixty pieces of the same denomination.

All eyes were fixed on the winner to see what he would do. Would he accept his winnings? If so would he repay the loan? Would he replace his new stake? Would he leave the whole amount where it was?

He answered these questions by doing nothing. He made no motion. His hat concealed the upper part of his face so that no one could see what it expressed. Since he did not withdraw his winnings it was assumed that he would leave them where they were. If he lost he would lose the whole amount; if he won he would win five times the sixty or 300 gold pieces.

The direction "Make your bets" was given, and the wheel was twirled.

By this time those about the table had largely lost interest in their own bets in the more absorbing diversion of watching this reckless player, who seemed resolved to risk all on one turn of the wheel. The ball rattled louder than ever in the surrounding silence. The hush continued till the croupier announced that the 5 to 1 bet had won again, then burst forth a din of exclamations.

The only impassive person at the table was the winner. He made no sign of excitement, did not extend a hand toward the gold that was poured on to the table for him to take up. The seedy man who was the cause of all this good fortune had ceased to bet, being apparently intent upon the person he had befriended. But his features, too, were concealed, the principal one, his eyes, being covered by the colored glasses.

The exclamations of the onlookers were succeeded by another hush. Could it be possible that the winner would leave what now amounted to nearly $2,000 of our money where it was, taking the chances again of losing all or winning five times the amount? The silence was broken by a soft voice coming from the woman standing behind the object of all this interest:

"Carl, hadn't you better take up some of your winnings?"

There was no reply—at least none was heard, for at that moment the ball rattled again.

For the third time the five to one won.

What was before mingled exclamations was now a hubbub. The heap of coins would be too large for the spot covered, and an I O U was laid on the pile. The seedy man sat stolidly looking at the man for whom he had rendered possible these winnings, but he made no protest against tempting fate further.

"Oh, Carl!" cried the woman behind the gambler. "Don't! Please don't risk it all again."

But the appeal was disregarded. The spinner of the wheel waited a few moments, but, receiving no sign that the money on the five to one spot would be changed, twirled it, and again the croupier announced that the bank had lost.

Something like $50,000 had now accrued to the credit of the winner. The woman behind him put her arms about his neck, with her face close to his. It was noticed that she shuddered. The seedy man opposite arose with his eyes glued to the couple before him. Then the woman gave a shriek.

Some one pulled the gambler's hat off. A burst of horror followed the uncovering of a face that bore the pallor of death, eyes that were fixed in a vacant stare on the pile of gold before them. The woman fainted and was carried out of the room by one party of attendants, while the dead gambler was carried out by another. These two objects of interest having been removed, the crowd looked about for the man with the threadbare clothes who had furnished the original stake.

He had disappeared.

While the excitement, the horror, was at its height he was leaving the gambling hall and, passing out of the gardens in which the building stood, called a cab, got in and to the driver, who bent down to hear to what point he wished to be driven, said:

"To the palace of the grand duke."

Stopping before a door in the rear of the building the "fare" turned him over to a lackey for his pay and hurried upstairs. Entering one of the apartments, he summoned attendants, who divested him of his clothes and handed him others.

"Send for the Count de ——" he said.

The Count de —— was the prime minister. In half an hour he appeared at the palace and was ushered into an apartment where the grand duke was awaiting him.

"Count," said the latter, "Baden Baden must cease to be a gambling hell."

The count, astonished, waited an explanation. The grand duke continued:

"One of our brightest young men, Baron Carl Steinforth, whom I have intended for a high position, has recently—so I heard—been losing his patrimony. Knowing that he has frequented the Casino every day and evening, I went there tonight in disguise partly to see him for myself and partly to look upon what is going on there. I was present when he staked and lost his last coin. I put up a stake for him, which he did not notice, and I now believe he was dead at the time I offered it. I placed it for him where it would win, and it did win several times in succession. The baroness, his wife, came in to look for him doubtless to get him away at the moment I put up the stake. She waited while he won, then discovered the truth. She was carried out of the hall unconscious; her husband was carried out a corpse.

"I desire that you immediately take steps to recall the gambling privileges accorded to this nefarious concern. Let it be your first business on the morrow."

Such is the story of the recall of the license for gambling at Baden Baden as I heard it told by one who had been intimate with members of the grand ducal court. Had it not (the gambling) been transferred to Monte Carlo Europe would have got rid of a central point for gamblers. As it is, the business was simply moved from one point to another. But Germany is fortunate in putting it off her territory.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE IN BOSTON AND VICINITY

KINCAIDE THEATRE.

A very attractive and thoroughly enjoyable program is now being presented at Quincy's Pretty Playhouse and large audiences yesterday afternoon and evening were on hand to enjoy it.

Mr. and Mrs. Lamont with their troup of trained birds proved most interesting entertainers. The beautiful birds went through a series of stunts showing almost human intelligence, and their act closed with a fine scene that was really wonderful.

Elo imitated to perfection a full brass band and incidentally illustrated the wonderful possibilities of the human voice.

Reidy and Currier sang several songs to the delight of all and Miss Currier's playing of the harp was received with great applause.

Jack & Foni in their acrobatic exhibition showed skill and strength which was wonderful.

Nothing but praise for the pictures can truly be written. They were splendid. Manager Wardwell surely made no mistake by changing to Universal service.

Coming Monday is an all new show. The Keith-quality vaudeville attractions will include McNally & Stewart, novelty comedy duo, Blue Cloud & Co. Indian scene novelty; Lillian Dora, the girl with the golden voice and Polzin Brothers, European comedy gymnasts.

QUINCY MUSIC HALL.

The feature at Music hall Saturday afternoon and evening will be a wonderful three-reel war drama "Old Mammy's Secret Code," a thriller from start to finish and will be appreciated by old and young. A very good Keystone Comedy will also be in Saturday's program and four big acts of vaudeville. This is one of the biggest bills to be seen at this popular playhouse. All seats are reserved.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

Shakspeare is always a favorite with Boston playgoers, and especially with those who go to the Castle Square. Mr. Craig's announcement that he is to give "Hamlet" next week is therefore good news. It will be a new "Hamlet" in every respect, the especial novelty being the stage settings and costumes from designs by Livingston Platt, who has placed the scene of the play, as it should be placed, away back in barbaric Scandinavian times.

The cast of this revival will include Mr. Craig as Hamlet, Miss Young as Ophelia, Mr. Walker as Polonius, Mr. Ormonde as the Ghost, Mr. Carleton as King Claudius, and Miss Colcord as the Queen. There is certain to be a rush for seats, and patrons should secure them at once.

PARK THEATRE.

Robert Hilliard brings to the Park Theatre, Boston, next Monday evening, January 19, the original and only company presenting that remarkable New York success of last season, "The Argyle Case" which ran for seven months to capacity at the Criterion. Mr. Hilliard will have a cordial greeting for he enjoys popularity with Boston playgoers. He has the best part in his career as Asche Kayton, the resourceful, well-poised detective who solves the two tense and thrilling mysteries of "The Argyle Case." This is not a crime, crook nor white slave drama, but the first real detective play since "Sherlock Holmes." It is wholesome, ingenious, fascinating, and its suspense is sustained until the last moment. The methods employed are those of detective William J. Burns, whose achievements have made him prominent in the public eye and an international figure as a great investigator. Mr. Burns cooperated with Harriet Ford and Harvey J. O'Higgins, a popular magazine writer, in the authorship. But it bears no relation to any of his famous cases nor does it involve politics, graft or industrial conditions.

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

"Little Women," one of the most delightful plays seen here this season enters its fourth week begining Monday, Jan. 19th, at the Majestic Theatre, Boston, where it has been playing to most enthusiastic appreciative audience, since its opening. Lovers of "Little Women"—all the thousands who dote on the book—need not fear that their illusions will be shattered by anything that the dramatic version contains. They will see realized with every deference to the spirit of Miss Alcott's book, the familiar speech spoken as the author would have wanted to hear it. In its new dramatic version "Little Women" is destined to conquer more thousands who will fall under the spell of its wit and its pathos and be grateful that they have learned them in one medium, if not in another.

The scenes, so familiar to the readers of the book, have been faithfully reproduced in the stage version. The first three acts of the play are laid in the old Alcott sitting room in the famous old Orchard house in Concord, Mass. The last act, which represents the apple orchard at Plumfield, is one of the prettiest stage pictures seen for many months. In it genuine apple trees are used laden with golden fruit, and in this scene is brought to life the realization of all the girlish romances of the Alcott family. During the present engagement which is a limited one, there will be matinees Wednesday, Friday and Saturday.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE.

There is no doubt that Boston likes "Under Cover," the Selwyn and Company melodrama that is playing its fourth week at the Plymouth Theatre. As other plays come and go "Under Cover" gains prestige and patronage and it is the one play that leaves a lasting memory of a story well told. No better tribute has been written nor has the attraction of this drama been better described than in the comment of H. T. Parker dramatic critic of the Boston Transcript in his theatrical column, Friday Jan. 9. Mr. Parker wrote:

"Few plays seen in Boston have made their way more quickly into the attention and the interest of the public. Applauding reviews may have done a little for the piece but mouth to mouth commendation has done much more. The cause of this liking for 'Under Cover' among all sorts of playgoers is not far to seek. It is the old and universal liking in the theatre no less than on the printed page for an interesting, exciting and surprising story, ingenuously, suspensively and engrossingly told. 'Under Cover' is a story-telling play and nothing else and the story is a capital and exciting yarn with an unexpected twist at the end, all set in a relatively fresh environment of the custom house and its officers, high and low, and the fashionable folk amongst whom the smugglers, real and suspected, take refuge. The most 'highbrowed' of us can hardly resist so good a story in its kind so well told as it is by the players at the Plymouth. The average of us rejoice unfeignedly and unashamed in it. One peril only threatens to make the overtalkative and the thoughtless need a word of warning. If you like 'Under Cover' then you are the more bound not to tell your neighbor the secret and the surprise of the play. Once more 'gunshoes' and a story have proved their virtue in the theatre."

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

Whatever are the qualities that give a man almost universal popularity, John Drew possesses them in an uncommon degree. No actor has a larger or steadier following among cultured playgoers. As a light comedian he is unequalled on the American stage. Mr. Drew has always taken his success with modesty and remained a calm and sane man of the world. "Man of the world" is perhaps a phrase that best describes him. A man without illusions, whose view of life is ironically good natured—a man sure of himself and of his powers, enjoying his success but not exaggerating its value. To talk intimately with him is to find a man with experience and tolerance, with knowledge and wit.

In his latest successes, Haddon Chambers' "The Tyranny of Tears" and J. M. Barrie's new play, "The Will," which comprise a delightful double bill, Mr. Drew has proved that his power of expressing pathos is as great as his purely comedy gifts.

Belonging to an old theatrical family, the uncle of Ethel, Lionel and John Barrymore, he has reason to be eminently content with his profession, his success and with life in general. There is always in his acting a perfect knowledge of his medium, the result of heredity and early training. As a matter of fact Mr. Drew's career has been a long series of individual studies, in each case approaching perfection. He is an artist in the fullest sense of the word. In each new impersonation, Mr. Drew always adds to the author's creation the result of his own intelligence and observation.

Never have his fine powers been exerted with better effect than in the delightful double bill in which he returns here for his annual visit.

CORT THEATRE.

The Cort Theatre, Park Square, Boston, one of the several houses which John Cort is building in the east, will be opened Monday evening, Jan. 19, with Joseph Santley in Philip Bartholomae's musical comedy "When Dreams Come True." Absorbing interest is aroused by the event, largely owing to the popularity of Mr. Cort in the theatrical profession; his extensive theatrical holdings in the West, and his progressive activities in theatre-building in the East. There is no doubt the first night will be the most brilliant affair of this kind of the season, socially as well as professionally.

More than ordinary importance is attached to the building of this theatre. The primary intention in building in the east, especially that of the New York house, was to have a theatre in the metropolis to present his many productions and those of his associates. The New York theatre has been such a success that Mr. Cort decided to invade Boston, and this house will form the eastern link to the chain of theatres under his control, ending in the West with the Cort Theatre, San Francisco.

The Cort Theatre is the first house in Boston to break away from the line of Tremont or Washington streets and seek a location with room enough open space, and the most ample transportation service close at hand. The principal entrance is on Providence street, a thoroughfare 100 feet wide, bidding fair to become the principal artery of the traffic between the east and the west. It is directly opposite and only a short distance from the entrance to the subway and from the Boylston street line of cars going up Columbus avenue pass right by its doors. It was the first building to be located on the Providence railroad lands, but since this theatre was started, several millions have been expended in the improvements immediately adjoining, and many more millions are planned to follow as speedily as the development will allow, and Park Square, with this beginning, will undoubtedly be for many years to come the most important focal point of the city.

NEWSY BRIEFS

Mrs. Charlotte H. Atkins, mother of Mrs. Charles W. Miller, died of pneumonia, early this morning after an illness of two days, at the home of her daughter on Cherry avenue. The funeral and interment will be in South Amherst, Mass.

The George L. Gill Associates held a whist party in Odd Fellows hall Thursday afternoon. Several tables were in play. The winners were Mrs. William R. Thomas, Mrs. J. Kenily, Mrs. Mary Jones, Mrs. E. E. Field and Mrs. Mary Phelan.

Carroll Bill of Braintree who has been such a striking figure as the cardinal in the coronation procession at previous Revels, has been called unexpectedly to New York and Williams Ward Whitcher has consented to be the cardinal in tonight's Revels at Music hall.

The funeral of Margaret E. Sprunk, wife of Wendell J. Sprunk, was held from her home at 60 Farrington street this morning. A high mass of requiem was celebrated at the Sacred Heart church by Rev. Fr. John P. Cuffe, pastor. The Gregorian chant was rendered by the regular choir. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

One of the most delightful affairs that Wollaston people are looking forward to is the concert to be given in the school hall, Friday evening Jan. 30, by the Wollaston Woman's club chorus. The chorus will be assisted by Harold Tripp, tenor, Miss Lucile Adams, reader, and the Wollaston Glee Club.

It is rumored that among the many elegant costumes to be worn tonight at the Revels none will surpass those of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Stetson, who are to be attendants of the king and queen. Mr. Stetson is to wear a full court costume of black satin, correct in every detail and Mrs. Stetson's court costume will be of black velvet with long ermine cape. A diamond tiara, will adorn her elaborate coiffeur while diamond necklaces, pendants, and pins will add their brilliancy.

UNCOLLECTED TAXES ARE LESS

But Sum Now Due the City Is $429,012.60

During the year 1913 Tax Collector Sandberg made a record for his department by collecting $912,332.40 more than half being voluntary payments on account of the year 1913. Good showings were made on the taxes of 1911 and 1912, and the balances for these years are smaller than usual.

City Auditor Fairbanks presents these figures:

The uncollected taxes extend over eleven years as will be seen by the following summary, which shows the balance due the first of the year and the balance unpaid at the end of the year 1913 for the taxes of each year:

Winter Reverie

I saw the moon so broad and bright
Sailing high on a frosty night,
And the air swung far and far between
The silver disk and the orb of green,
And here and there a wisp of white
Cloud film swam on the misty light,
And crusted thickly on the sky,
Higher and higher and yet more high,
Were gold star points dusted through
The great, wide, silent vault of blue.
Then I bethought me God was great
And the world was fair, and so, elate,
I knelt me down and bent my head
And said my prayers and went to bed.

SANTO DOMINGO SAID TO BE ON BRINK OF REVOLT

Letters Tell of Slaughter of Patriots and Reign of Terror.

Late advices from Santo Domingo received from private but well informed sources, supported by newspaper accounts, indicate, says the New York Herald, that another revolution is brewing in the Dominican Republic, with every prospect of early development. According to these letters, many of the best citizens are leaving the country, while others known to oppose the administration of President Bordas are prisoners in the fortresses in Santo Domingo city and Puerto Plata.

Dominicans recently arrived from Santo Domingo say a state of terror exists.

President Bordas' summary removal of Supreme Justice Figueroa on Dec. 13 and his appointment of a successor obectionable to the lawyers of Santo Domingo have precipitated trouble, as lawyers refused to plead their causes before this justice, the result being a general stagnation of business of the tribunal.

Letters to Dominicans in New York give unpublished details of what is called a "massacre of patriots," which occurred in Santo Domingo city on Dec. 2, but regarding which the newspapers were permitted by the administration to publish only the barest accounts.

"We had gone 300 strong to the palace to insist upon free elections, which had been guaranteed to us by the constitution," wrote one correspondent. "President Bordas' address was received in ominous silence. While we were considering the president's ultimatum and a spenker was addressing the crowd the gates of the fortress opened and a regiment of troops issued therefrom. The presence of the troops was scarcely known until we were surrounded.

"'Surrender!' shouted the officer in command.

"The crowd turned upon the soldiers, and their spokesman assured the commanding officer that they were in peaceful assembly, but suddenly from the outskirts of the crowd came the cry, 'Down with Bordas and the troops!' The officer gave the order to fire without further parley. Eleven men, all belonging to influential families, were killed instantly, while nineteen were severely wounded."

NAMES 13 MISTAKES IN LIFE.

Supreme Court Jurist Gives Rules That Make For Happiness.

Here are what Presiding Judge of the California Supreme Court Paul J. McCormick has announced as "Thirteen Mistakes of Life:"

To attempt to set up your own standard of right and wrong.

To try to measure the enjoyment of others by your own.

To expect uniformity of opinions in this world.

To fail to make allowance for inexperience.

To endeavor to mold all dispositions alike.

Not to yield in unimportant trifles.

To look for perfection in our own actions.

To worry ourselves and others about what cannot be remedied.

Not to help everybody, wherever, however and whenever we can.

To consider anything impossible that we cannot ourselves perform.

To believe only what our finite minds can grasp.

Not to make allowances for the weaknesses of others.

To estimate by some outside quality when it is that within which makes the man.

HORSESHOEING AT CORNELL.

Farriers Will Be Taught Higher Principles of the Trade.

A course in horseshoeing is an innovation announced by the trustees of Cornell university at Ithaca, N. Y. All horseshoers of the state are invited to enter without charge.

The course will be given by the farrier's department of the State College of Veterinaries. The last legislature made an appropriation for equipment.

"The purpose," said Director Moore, "is to offer horseshoers an opportunity to acquire a more thorough knowledge of the principles of horseshoeing. Besides setting shoes it is important that these men should be familiar with the anatomy and physiology of the horse's foot and the danger of certain infections, such as tetanus or lockjaw.

"One hour each day will be given to lectures and the rest of the time to practical work in the shop. The course will run for six weeks, and if there is a demand for it it will be repeated."

—According to the Boston News Bureau lawyers are at work upon at least three very important suits that will be leveled against the income tax after March 1. Some lawyers are very firm in their belief that they will be able to deal the law a body blow as not only unjust but unconstitutional in its discriminatory features. And then there is Dr. Anne Shaw advising woman suffragists to refuse payment of this tax, on the principle of no taxation without representation, The income tax may cause some little commotion in various ways; but it will probably prove to be as effective as it was designed to be.—Taunton Herald.

—We do not know how common the practice has been for moving picture concerns to "fake" films of persons who have become famous for one reason or another, but the verdict obtained by Jack Binns, the wireless hero will discourage anything of the sort in the future. A fake picture purporting to have been Binns was made by one concern and he brought suit, obtaining a verdict of $12,500. A judge tried to cut this verdict and asked Binns to accept $2500, but he refused and the award has recently been confirmed by a higher court. Hereafter makers of the movies will be pretty sure to get the original when they desire pictures of famous men.—Taunton Herald.

FRENCH PLAY PRESENTED

By Members of Quincy Teachers Association

One of the most enjoyable of the meetings of the Quincy Teachers' association was that of Thursday evening which was held at the High school hall.

The program for the evening's entertainment was somewhat of a novelty being a drama, a translation from French, entitled "A scrap of paper."

The characters were taken by members of the association and several were pronounced above the average of excellence for amateurs. The drama was one of three acts, act 1 being laid in the drawing room in Baron de la Glaciere's country house, Act 2 in Propser's room in the house of Brisemouche, and the third act in another room in the Baron's country house.

Between the acts music was furnished by Miss Victoria M. W. Zeller and the High school orchestra under the direction of Miss S. Maude Amsden, supervisor of music in the public schools.

The cast was as follows:

Prosper Couramont	Frank L. Mansur
Baron de la Glaciere	L. L. Woods
Brisemouche	Ernest L. Collins
Anatole, his ward	S. W. Blanchard
Baptiste, servant	H. Forrest Wilson
Louise de la Glaciere	Doris Burnham
Mlle. Suzanne de Ruseville	Sally F. Dawes
Mathilde, sister to Louise	Alicia B. Elcock
Mlle. Zenobie, sister to Brisemouche	Annie J. Flieger
Madame Dupont, housekeeper	Ethel Vogler
Pauline, maid	Mildred D. Speare

BETTER OFF THAN OTHERS

A Boston paper is responsible for the following story: an Atlantic man coming home from a strenuous day's work and with anything but a contented frame of mind saw a sight that changed his mind, and instead of grumbling to his wife when he entered the house, agreeably surprised her by remarking: "Well, I was pretty tired, but there's one man up against it more than I am." The man referred to was the driver of a coal team with several tons of coal aboard. He had been congratulating himself because itwas his last trip when a wheel broke and the wagon remained a fixture about a block away from its destination. Telephoning to the office he received instructions to find a way to deliver the coal. There was nothing to do but deliver it in a basket and the tedious labor in the biting cold added just two hours to his day. But he held on to his good nature and refused a warm supper because he wanted to get home quickly to his sick wife. Verily chronic kickers should sit up and take notice.

MRS. M. H. KINGSBURY.

Mrs. Mary H. Kingsbury, widow of Rev. Josiah W. Kingsbury, passed away suddenly at her home 115 River street, Braintree, Wednesday afternoon, having suffered from a shock. This was the fourteenth anniversary of Mr. Kingsbury's death.

Mrs. Kingsbury was a member of the First Congregational church, and attended both the morning service and the vespers last Sunday. She greatly loved her church and all its branches. She leaves a family of eight children and five grandchildren Wm. J. of Derry, N. H.; Joseph J. of 109 River street, Braintree; Samuel of Needham; George D. and M. Elizabeth, who lived with her; Mabel H. of Proctor, Vt.; Noah Jr. of Schenectady, N. Y., and Grace E. of Philadelphia.

Funeral service will be held at the residence on Sunday at 2.30 P. M. Friends invited. On Monday the body will be taken to Tamworth, N. H., her old home, where her husband was taken fourteen years ago, and a service will be held in her old church, where she was first united to membership.

TWO SLIGHT FIRES.

The alarm from Box 614 at 7.51 Thursday night was for a slight fire in house of Peter Hannon on Old Colony avenue. The fire was caused by a torch used in thawing out a water pipe setting fire to sawdust and was extinguished without any loss.

Thursday afternoon Combination 4 at Quincy Point was called out on a still alarm to extinguish a fire in one of the awnings in front of the store of A. L. Whitman on Washington street. The fire was started by someone in the upper story of the building throwing a lighted cigarette out of the window. The fire was extinguished by the use of a hand chemical, although the combination was on hand in case its services should have been needed.

CARNIVAL SPIRIT WAS SUPREME

Twelfth Night Revels of Quincy Women's Club the Merriest Social Event of Season

Chandler W. Smith the King, and Mrs. Smith the Queen

The fourth annual Twelfth Night Revels surpassed all its predecessors, and even the famous Mardi Gras at New Orleans. The first Revels in 1911 were merry; the second in 1912 were merrier; last year was the merriest and "most funsome;" but true to prediction the carnival spirit was supreme at the Revels last night at Quincy Music hall.

Each year the party has outdone itself in brilyliancy and fun. This year it was a special triumph, for it was a series of jollification and clean mirth. The dancing was above reproach and that is a triumph in these days when the question of dancing is so much before the public. An evening spent in relaxation and clean wholesome frolic and fun is good for the participants and the on-lookers. Each goes back to the next days duties with a lighter heart and so the committee who plan the Revels went back into history and literature and in weeks of study got together representatives of characters from fiction and fable.

There were St. George and the Dragon, and the fair maiden who is rescued; there were knights in armor from King Arthur's Round Table who tilted their lances against each other, there were Wassail songs by some jolly friars, to say nothing of jesters and clowns; there were the King and Queen in Elizabethan robes, and a platform full of royalty, besides a number of the court people who were massed at one side of the hall; all brilliant in the splendor and elegance of rich raiment.

The Beadle, Delcevare King was in his jolliest mood, and was busy all the evening in carrying out a program which was full of surprise and sport.

The Revels are given under the auspices of the Civic Committee of the Quincy Womens Club, and great credit is due to the chairman, Mrs. H. H. Kitson, who was untiring in her work to make them a success. She had very able assistants in Mrs. John D. Mackay and Mrs. W. H. Doble and the other members o fthe committee.

Nearly 400 were in costume and half as many more were onlookers in the balcony. Among the spectators were Rev. and Mrs. A. L. Hudson and prominent citizens.

Just before the opening march the lords and ladies were escorted to the platform, and each was given a sun flower fan. The platform was a court scene and was approached by a broad stairway in the centre.

Among the royalty seated on the throne at the right and left of the King and Queen were: Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Doble, Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Safford, Commodore and Mrs. James A. Ring, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Burgin, Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Faxon, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Stetson, Dr. W. L. Anderson and Mrs. Kate L. Wadsworth.

Then came the bugle call, and the march of the populace began It was not a stately grand march, but led by the Beadle the couples went hop-skipping around the hall waving hands and shouting. Then they were seated on the floor in front of the throne.

The Beadle read the usual proclamation but was frequently interrupted with shouts, as it was difficult to restrain the jollity.

A great cake was brought forth by the royal bakers and was noisily welcomed. "Ah" "Yum- Yum," "I want some, "etc." The Beadle cut the cake with a sword and it was passed around, each taking a piece. It was announced that the cake contained a bean and a ring and the man and woman finding the same would be proclaimed King and Queen.

A shout from some of the populace One rushes forward, saying, "Here it is! Here it is!" The Beadle asks the baker, "Is this the Boston Bean which you put into the cake?" The baker replies, "It is the veritable Boston Bean! Beadle announces that "Fate has chosen Chandler W. Smith to be King of our Twelfth Night Revels."

And then jostling among the populace and shouting the king is brought forth, the other baker is questioned, etc. Beadle announces Mrs. Chandler W. Smith is our Queen. Let the coronation robes be put upon the King and Queen ,and the crowning forthwith take place."

The bugle sounds and the coronation procession enters. First acolytes, crown bearers and Father Christmas; then the King and Queen and train bearers. Ward L. Whitcher was Father Christmas and with due ceremonies the King and Queen were crowned and took their seats on the throne.

The King made a speech from the throne to the loyal populace, and there wre wild huzzas for the King and Queen.

High carnival reigned for an hour or more. The Beadle first announced the sail song which was beautifully sung by five Monks.

Una, the fair maiden, Mrs. J. H. Slade, then entered, closely pursued by the dragon, Lucien Thayer; but by the timely appearance of St. George, J. H. Slade, she was rescued after a very realistic scene which interested all.

Solo dancers appeared and gave a fine exhibition. There was Midnight, represented by Miss Ruth Bass; Laughter, by Miss Ella Packard; Mirth and Frolic, by Miss Eleanor Whittemore and Mrs. Simpson; Pleasure by Miss Nita Metherell; Jollity and Wit, by Miss Minnie Packard and Miss Catherine Saville; Song by Miss Beatrice Morrison; Revelry by Miss Ethel Hersey.

One of the gems of the evening was the dream of a barrister represented by City Clerk Emery L. Crane, said to have taken place beneath a chestnut tree. It went back to the revels of Thomas Morton of Merrymount and reviewed local history up to the Revels of the Woman's Club. He was often interrupted by shouts and calls.

Very pleasing solos were rendered by Walter E. Anderton and Dr. Arthur R. Gould.

At this point the Jester, Ira M. Whittemore, tells the Beadle that he has discovered that a number are unmirthful and unmerry, whispering their names. Beadle announces the extraordinary fact, and calls the court officers to seize them and hale them before the King for just sentence. The King sentences them for being unmirthful and unmerry to do stunts which shall add to the general merriment and mirthfulness. Victims are lined up: Gum-chewing; pillow-swatting; whooperty-whoop; jesters and clowns revelling follows. Whistles, creaketts, horns, swatters, ets., were distributed to the populace; hats distributed to all onlookers with compliments of the Beadle.

The exhibition by the knights in armor from King Arthur's Round Table was much enjoyed, the knights being J. H. Slade and Fred Thayer.

The populace then burst into tuneful and rollicking choruses including "Oh, you beautiful doll;" "H-E-R-P-I-C-I-D-E" and others. Revelling continued until the supper was announced. The refreshments included crackers, doughnuts, cider, etc. General dancing followed. Dummy dolls were introduced, also sparklets. A confetti battle concluded the festivities just before midnight.

All nationalities were represented as will be seen by a list of those in costume. The chain gang, which kept together most of the evening attracted much attention:

We Shouldn't Worry About Monroe Doctrine

By HUNTINGTON WILSON, Assistant Secretary of State In Taft Administration

WE ought to be able to discriminate between the vastly different republics, and we ought not to overrate their solidarity and mutual affection. Granting the MONROE DOCTRINE TO BE OBSOLETE as a unilateral policy in the sphere of the "A B C countries," the opening of the Panama canal would be a curious occasion to consider the abandonment by the United States of its mandate in the Caribbean.

There is room indeed for mutually advantageous co-operation through commerce and otherwise. In spite of a great difference of temperament, international, like domestic, politics often makes strange bedfellows.

ONE MUST AGREE WITH PROFESSOR BINGHAM IN HIS DEPRECATION OF CANT ABOUT SYMPATHY SO FAR AS RACIAL CHARACTERISTICS ARE CONCERNED AND ABOUT GEOGRAPHICAL PROXIMITY WITH THE DISTANT SOUTH. AS HE SAYS, KEY WEST IS NO NEARER RIO DE JANEIRO AND BUENOS AIRES THAN IS GIBRALTAR.

This suggests that Buenos Aires is not appreciably nearer the Caribbean than Key West is near to Buenos Aires and that by the same token it is quite as absurd for the Chilean, Brazilian and Argentinian to worry about American policy in the Caribbean as it would be for the UNITED STATES TO WORRY ABOUT THE MONROE DOCTRINE AT CAPE HORN.

Should Be Partnership Between Industries to Help Farmer

By PETER RADFORD, National Lecturer of Farmers' Union of America

FARMING is the BIGGEST BUSINESS IN THE WORLD, and constructive work that will permanently benefit agriculture must be arranged on a BIG, BROAD, COMPREHENSIVE BASIS. Co-operating with the farmer as an individual is not sufficient and will not reach the heart of the problem. The heavy and more important work can only be done through organization.

THERE MUST BE A PARTNERSHIP BETWEEN INDUSTRIES AND EACH LINE OF ORGANIZED INDUSTRY WORK WITHIN ITS OWN ORBIT. THE BANKERS CAN RENDER A SERVICE IN WORKING OUT A SYSTEM OF CREDITS BETTER ADAPTED TO THE BUSINESS OF FARMING. THE TRANSPORTATION LINES CAN HELP US BY LOCATING MARKETS AND REACHING THEM IN BEST CONDITION AT THE LOWEST EXPENSE.

The executive board of the Philergians met at the home of the president, rMs. Lucy C. Wales of Elm street yesterday afternoon.

Monday, Jan. 12, the members of the class in modern literature met with Mrs. F. O. Wellington of Quincy avenue, East Braintree. The subject: "Modern poetry in its Relation to Modern life" was ably treated by the teacher, Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney and she read many poems by various modern poets of the times. She called attention to the poetry which appeals to the very young child, the more developed mind and the mature thinker. She said that the poetry of life underlies youth, love, religion and art. She thought that although the practical may exist, poetry should always be found as an essential basis of life and love. It is always possible to find the thing that satisfies heart hunger in the realm of the poets. She read from modern magazines such selections as illustrated her points. Writings which portrayed the love of life nature, the problems of the day such as woman's suffrage, immigration, child labor, the labor question and others which clearly presented the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man were beautifully read by Mrs. Gurney.

During the afternoon, Miss Ethel Raymond of East Weymouth played beautifully on the pipe organ. The music seemed to supplement the poetry, making the afternoon a harmonious symphony. Miss Raymond presented the following program:—

Marche de Fete	Svendsen
Capriose	Lemargr
Die Antivort	Wolstenholme
Humoresque	,Dvorak

COURT DELAYS BAIL FOR THAW

Aldrich's Decision a Heavy Blow For the Fugitive

HEARING ON HABEAS CORPUS

Must Be Disposed of Before Question of Release Can Be Considered—Thaw Camp Was Confident Early Date For Bail Would Be Granted and Freedom Speedily Follow

Concord, N. H., Jan. 17.—Immediate bail is denied Harry K. Thaw in a decision announced by Judge Aldrich of the United States district court for New Hampshire.

This is one of the heaviest blows Thaw has suffered in New Hampshire. Aside from the personal freedom bail would give him, Thaw and his counsel ardently desired the weight of the legal precedent which would be given his side if Aldrich had seen fit to accept bail for him even before the final hearing on his habeas corpus writ.

Judge Aldrich ruled that the bail question must wait until the habeas corpus hearing. Aldrich's ruling is as follows:

"I do not think I ought to grant the petitioner's application for a thirty-day extension of time in which to file briefs, but, in view of the engagements of counsel set forth, and the importance of questions involved in the main case, an extension of twenty days is granted.

"All questions under the motion for bail and all questions in respect to the report of the commission, as to Thaw's present mental condition, are postponed until the final hearing upon the questions involved in the habeas corpus and extradition proceedings."

The original time for filing briefs on the habeas corpus and extradition hearing was Jan. 6. The brief for Mr. Jerome's side has been filed. But Mr. Shurtleff of the Thaw counsel made a motion for a month's more time in which to file his brief.

An early date for arguing the bail question was desired. The Thaw camp was confident that, after this argument, bail would be allowed. Thaw himself said Jerome probably would not trouble to come over here and argue the bail question, though Jerome declared he would fight it to a finish.

A hearing on the bail question was expected on Jan. 22 or 23. But Aldrich's order means that the whole question is postponed until the hearing on the main habeas corpus question. And the date for that hearing has not even been fixed. The latest date in the habeas corpus schedule is the new time limit for filing the Thaw brief, Jan. 26.

TO BECOME MISSIONARY

"Bald Jack" Rose Plans to Start Campaign Against Evil

New York, Jan. 17.—"Bald Jack" Rose, gambler and self-confessed graft collector for the police, has announced that he will spend his remaining days as an exhorter, beginning his campaign against evil next week at Sayville, L. I.

There is only one drawback to the plan of campaign the notorious witness against Lieutenant Becker, now in the death house at Sing Sing, has mapped out for himself as a saver of souls. That is that some one of those from the East Side who have vowed a vengeance of blood against him may be able to carry out their purpose as he stands in the pulpit, a bright and shining mark.

BY VOTE OF TWO TO ONE

Citizens of North Reading Agree to Change Name of Town

North Reading, Mass., Jan. 17.—The name of the town of North Reading is to be changed. The referendum vote on the matter resulted two to one in favor of a change in the name of the township.

A committee will be elected at the next meeting of the town to select a name and to take steps for the necessary legislation. The reasons assigned for the change are that many people believe that North Reading is a part of Reading and that the town officials are of the opinion that the name is detrimental to the best interests of the town.

BRIEFS

The Ladies Benevolent society of Memorial church is giving a chicken pie supper Wednesday under the leadership of Mrs. Harry W. Read.

Many people in Atlantic as well as other localities appreciated the comforts of a good kitchen stove during the recent cold snap.

Miss Glenny Pollard, violinist of the Hoffman studio, Boston has opened a studia in Atlantic at the home of Mrs. Benson on Madison street.

Herbert Barclay of Atlantic street has gone to Jacksonville, Florida to build some bungalows of the type which has become so popular on the Atlantic boulevard.

Go-to-Church Sunday at Atlantic M. E. church was well attended considering the severe cold weather. The congregation was double the usual number.

Rev. Mr. Pollard, pastor of the Atlantic M. E. church begins Sunday morning a series of missionary sermons. The evening services will be along revival lines.

Sunday evening in the Wollaston Methodist church, Rev. George M. Bailey will preach on "The Gospel of Good Health." The sermon will be preceded by a short talk by Dr. E. R. Johnson upon "the maintenance of good health."

The regular monthly meeting of Charitable Ten Circle of King's Daughters will be held at the home of Mrs. E. C. Butler, Russell park, Monday afternoon. As it is the annual meeting it is hoped all members will attend.

The moving picture theatre of Atlantic added its help to make the Go-to-Church" Sunday a success, and the Ward Six Patriotic Association at their entertainment Tuesday evening in Music hall invited the large audience to try a go-to-church next Sunday.

Tead gave a very interesting talk before the Ladies Benevolent society of Memorial church, Wednesday of his work in the social settlement work at the South End House, Boston. The next in the course of lectures and concerts being given at the Hall Place M. E. church will occur Tuesday evening when the Copley Square School of Music will give another of their famous concerts with fifteen or more musicians. Any one who has heard these fine musicians play here previously needs no explanation of their good work nor any urging to hear them again. This is the third time this same company has given a concert in this church.

Memorial Sunday school had its annual meeting Wednesday evening. A Dutch supper at 7 o'clock was followed by an election of officers. W. F. Cummings was elected superintendent; Gorden Sherwin secretary; Clifton Young, assistant secretary; W. H. PLAN TO ELIMINATE "RULE OF REASON"

Amendment to Sherman Law Sent to Congress

Washington, Jan. 17.—Congressman Stanley of Kentucky, after a conference with President Wilson, introduced an amendment to the Sherman law, which would make illegal the monopolization or restraint of trade "in any degree." It is designed to eliminate the "rule of reason" laid down by the supreme court in the Standard Oil case.

The measure would also invest the circuit courts of the United States with jurisdiction to restrain and prevent violations of the act, irrespective of the attorney general. It was drawn to meet the wish of the president to reduce the debatable area surrounding the Sherman act.

GETS A SURPRISE

Man Who Carried a Concealed Weapon Is Sent to Prison

Boston, Jan. 17.—Vincenzo Mazzeferro, who, the police claimed, had shot and slightly wounded Salvatore Coicocci of this city, appeared in court to answer to that charge.

Since the affair the two men had adjusted the differences amicably and Salvatore declared he would not testify against his friend.

Vincenzo jauntily walked to the bar when his name was called and pleaded guilty to the charge of carrying a concealed weapon, and was considerably surprised when Judge Chase sentenced him to serve three months in the house of correction..

BRIEF, BUT EMPHATIC

Outline of Wilson's Message to Be Delivered to Congress

Washington, Jan. 17.—President Wilson's trust message probably will be delivered to a joint session of congress next Tuesday, and will be characteristically short, containing not more than 2000 words.

It will deal in principles only, not indorsing any specific measures, nor pointing the way to the maze of details that surround the subject.

The message emphasizes the necessity of creating a federal trade commission, which will not have any of the powers of a court. No corporation which receives information from this board will be able to make the plea that it has been given an "immunity bath."

The message also lays stress upon making more definite and specific the offenses prohibited in the Sherman law. It deals with the subject of interlocking directorates in only a general fashion.

BATES IS INDICTED

Pleads Not Guilty of Alleged False Abatement of Taxes

Boston, Jan. 17.—Charles H. Bates, one of the assessors of Revere, pleaded not guilty to two indictments, totalling seventy-five counts, for alleged falsification of public records of abatements of taxes and making falsely abatements of taxes.

The indictments were returned by the grand jury. Bates was arraigned before Judge Chase of the superior court and was held in $1000. Bail was furnished and Bates was released.

Bates was secretary of the board under Samuel A. Segee, then chairman. Segee was convicted last year of making false public records, and was sentenced to the house of correction for three years. The sentence was stayed pending exceptions in the supreme court and he is out on bail. Bates was one of Segee's bondsmen.

TO CLAIM TITANIC WAS UNSEAWORTHY

Negligence Will Also Be Alleged by British Claimant

London, Jan. 17.—The plea that the Titanic was unseaworthy when she left England in April, 1912, on her disastrous maiden trip to the United States, which cost the lives of over 1000 persons, is to be advanced in a suit for damages brought against the White Star line by Thomas Whiteley, one of the surviving stewards.

The plaintiff suffered a fracture of the right leg in the wreck. Whiteley's counsel will also argue on behalf of his client that there was negligence in the steering of the ill-fated vessel. The hearing has been provisionally fixed for March 1.

This will be the first time that a suggestion in regard to the unseaworthiness of the Titanic has been raised in the courts.

Hunt For Murderer of Magyar Actress Has Been Abandoned

Budapest, Jan. 17.—Mysterious circumstances connected with the hunt for the slayer of Else Turcsanyi, the Magyar actress who was strangled to death and robbed of jewels worth $20,000, indicate that powerful influence is being brought to shield the murderer.

Though the police declared confidently they had a good clue and suspected a member of the nobility, they refuse to discuss the case. Detectives have been given other work, and it is declared by one of these that "there are some crimes that must not be solved."

BIRTHMARK LED TO ARREST

Man Wanted for Stetson Burglary Held at Fall River

A man giving the name of Manuel Pachece, supposed to be one of the parties concerned in the break at the residence of James H. Stetson on School street, last summer while the family were at their summer home in Harwich, is under arrest at Fall River, and efforts will be made to bring him to Quincy for trial, although he is wanted by the police of Fall River for robbery and is also said to be wanted by the police of New Bedford.

The burglary at the Stetson residence took place sometime between Friday afternoon and the following Tuesday, when it was discovered by Mr. Stetson. A very large amount of silverware, valuable draperies, etc., was taken the total value of which was estimated to be from $3,000 to $4,000.

It was sometime before the police were enabled to find how the break had been made. Later in the morning however it was found that the man had forced a catch of a window. The windows were covered with thick paper on the inside and the curtains were then drawn down tight. So skilfully had entrance been made that once inside, the paper and curtains were replaced and the burglar or burglars were able to work at leisure without any danger of their presence being know. It must have been quite a difficult job to carry away the loot and the impression at that time was that the parties went out the rear door and across the field to the railroad tracks.

When Mr. Stetson returned from Harwich Tuesday morning the break was discovered, cigar stubs and burnt matches on the floor, and crumbs of food were evidence that the parties took their time while in the house. Some valuable things, which might easily lead to detection were overlooked while other valuable articles which might more easily be disposed of were carried away.

The police were up against one of the hardest tasks it ever had as there was not the least clew to work upon. The Burglar Insurance Co. assigned officers to the case, and private detectives were also engaged, but no trace of any of the stolen goods could be found in any of the pawnshops of Boston which were thoroughly watched.

Circulars describing the articles stolen were issued and sent broadcast, in the hope that some of the missing articles would eventually turn up, and furnish a clew.

It was not until the week of the Brockton fair however that a clew was obtained. It was during that week that Inspector Goodhue located about a thousand dollars worth of the Stetson silver with a Brockton dealer, who informed the police that he had bought the stuff from a man with a prominent birthmark on the side of his face near the jaw.

The police then set a trap to catch the man as it was believed that he would return with more goods to sell but after waiting some time it became evident that the fellow was too clever to attempt to dispose of more goods at the same place.

The silver recovered in Brockton was identified by Mr. and Mrs. Stetson, but the fact that any of the goods had been recovered was kept quiet, as it was hoped that the party would eventually try and dispose of more of the goods and in this way he would be captured.

Circulars were issued and sent to every police department in the state, asking the police to look out for a man with a prominent birthmark on his jaw. Nothing else remained to do, as it was a case of wait until the man turned up, as he was sure to do sooner or later.

Thursday, Inspector Violette of Fall River, while walking along the streets of that city, met a man with a birthmark on his face similar to that described in the circular issued by Inspector Goodhue, and arrested him on suspicion.

He gave the name of Manuel Pachece, although the police say that he is also known as George Conant, John Printworks and Manuel Charumba. While being searched at the Fall River police station the police found on his person a gold watch, which turned out to have been stolen earlier in the day. The watch was identified by a young son of the man who lost it, and when shown the timepiece, imediately said "That is my father's watch."

Friday morning Chief Burrell sent Inspector Goodhue to Fall River to look the man over. On his way down Inspector Goodhue stopped in Brockton and took the man who had bought the silver several weeks ago with him, to see if he could identify the prisoner as the man from whom he had purchased the stolen gods.

Richard H. Cole a Brockton dealer in second hand goods, was the man who made the purchase some weeks ago, and he readily accompanied Inspector Goodhue to Fall River. The minute he laid his eyes on Pachece he said, "That is the man."

The man is being held in Fall River for the robbery of the gold watch and it is also said that the police of New Bedford want him for larceny or a break in that city.

Inspector Goodhue interviewed the man and tried to learn something from him but all he would say was that he was in and about Fall River up to Oct. 21 and after that he was in New York state, but he would leave that to the police to find out. It is believed that the fellow was not alone in the burglary as it would have been almost impossible for one man to have carried off all the articles taken from the Stetson home, but he is keeping mum and giving no clew as to his confederates. The police however, now that one of the parties has been placed unde rarrest, are in hopes to be able to land some of the others.

Application was made by the police this morning for a habeas corpus writ and bring the man to Quincy, as this is the most important crime of the three for which he is wanted.

In addition to the silver taken from the Stetson house, there were a number of valuable furs and valuable draperies taken of which no trace has been obtained. It is believed that the man may have sold these to some second hand dealer in another city, as he appears to be too wise to attempt to sell his stolen goods in pawnshops although it may be possible that he or others of the gang have them stored away, waiting for a convenient time to convert them into cash.

The Stetson break was one of the most puzzling cases the police of Quincy have ever run up against as the burglars did not leave the slightest clew behind them as to their identity, and for this reason they may well feel elated over the success in landing at least one of the parties concerned in the burglary.

The man who sold the stolen goods to Mr. Cole of Brockton gave his name as Gerge Conant and his address as 391 Belmont street, Brockton. This was probably a fictitious address.

QUINCY HIGH WINS AGAIN

Surprised Revere High in Their Own Hall

Quincy High School defeated Revere at Revere Friday afternoon 16—11 in the roughest game Quincy had to play. Revere's defeat can be laid directly to the roughness of its play, for in the second period E. Bates scored six points on free tries, thereby winning the game.

Quincy's defensive work was particularly good. Time and time again, after Revere forwards had received the ball from the center, Hamlin and Page took it before it could be passed. The low ceiling interfered with Quincy's scoring, shots that were headed for the basket being deflected because of their height.

White did the best all round work of the day, his work being the best displayed this year. He intercepted passes continually, and held H. Bates the Revere star, to one basket, scoring two himself.

Between periods, Quincy second defeated Revere second 32-24. Crocker did the best work for Quincy, and Greenbaum and Orr for Revere.

Quincy is at home next Tuesday afternoon to Salem High school in place of Haverhill, who have cancelled.

REPORT FROM RELIEF PARTY

Deaths From Volcano Probably Number Ten Thousand

NONE SURVIVED ON ISLAND

Unable to Escape Deadly Effusions of Volcano as Its Fumes Enveloped Sakura—Many Bodies Beneath Ruins—Vigorous Sanitary Precautions Necessary to Prevent Disease

Tokio, Jan. 17.—Ten thousand persons are missing in the district in southern Japan devastated by the eruption of the volcano Sakura-Jima by earthquake, tidal waves and fire, and it is feared they all have perished.

Messages received by the government from the authorities of Satisum province, in the southern part of the island of Kiushiu, stated that, with the exception of thirty-three persons who took refuge in a cave, nearly 10,000 persons surely must have been killed on the island of Sakura, upon which the volcano is located.

The lava beds were too hot and the clouds of poisonous fumes too dense to allow a complete exploration of the island by sailors from the warships in Kagoshima bay, but it was ascertained that no human being could have escaped the deadly effusions of the volcano.

The island had a population of 15,000 souls before the eruption and of this number only a few more than 5000 escaped, it is estimated in official dispatches.

The eruptions of the volcano have abated, although lava is still flowing from the mountain. The physical aspect of the island has been completely changed.

Examination of the city of Kagoshima, which was overwhelmed by the earthquakes, fires and tidal waves, show that many bodies are still beneath the ruins and that vigorous sanitary precautions must be taken to prevent an epidemic of disease.

Troops and sailors have been put to work clearing away the wreckage in the district around Kagoshima. Tent cities have been established for the refugees.

UNCONSCIOUS AT POST

Engineer Struck Down as Express Speeds Over the Rails

Baltimore, Jan. 17.—With the engineer unconscious in his seat from a fractured skull, the New York and St. Louis express on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad sped over the rails for a brief time without a controlling hand on the throttle.

The plight of the engineer, J. R. Moxley, was discovered by the foreman of locomotives, who was riding on the engine. His attention was drawn to Moxley by the latter's failure to blow a crossing signal as the express was running through Brunswick.

It is believed Moxley was struck by a piece of ice or a rock falling from a cliff a short distance east of Brunswick. His condition is critical.

New York, Jan. 17.—The Life Savers' Benevolent association presented gold medals to Captain Aspinwall and the three officers of the Booth line steamship Gregory for their bravery in rescuing five men from a lifeboat of the tank steamer Oklahoma, which broke in two off Barnegat on Jan. 4. President Raven of the association made the presentation.

"It was just a little thing," said Aspinwall in reply, "what we would want anybody to do for us, pulling those fellows in."

"HEALTH DAY" OBSERVED

Sanitary Conditions Discussed by People of Granite State

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 17.—Throughout the state of New Hampshire Friday was generally observed as health day, in accordance with the recently issued proclamation of Governor Felker.

Social and charitable organizations generally took occasion to speak of the need of sanitary conditions about the homes and workshops. In the schools the teachers dwelt upon the theme at length, in exhorting the students to aim at health.

DEATH OF CARL BROWNE

Was Lieutenant of General Coxey In Famous Army of Unemployed

Washington, Jan. 17. — Carl Browne, lieutenant of General Jacob Coxey, who led an army of unemployed to Washington in 1893, died here one hour after he was stricken with acute indigestion. He was 55 years old.

Browne recently finished a speech he began twenty years ago on the Capitol steps. On the first occasion he was stopped by the police.

BIG BOOST IN PAYROLL

Another Batch of Employes Made Happy by Mayor of Boston

Boston, Jan. 17.—The greatest batch of increases in salary ever made at city hall at any time was published in today's City Record, the official municipal organ, showing that Mayor Fitzgerald, during the closing days of his administration, has increased salaries by the wholesale in addition to the expense of more than $200,000 a year by increasing the pay of all the firemen and policemen in the city.

In addition to the firemen and policemen, the list of employes given increase in salaries during the past few days numbers more than 300, and these increases vary anywhere from a few dollars a week to $700 a year.

With this list of increases authorized by Fitzgerald, practically every employe of the city has received an increase of some amount during the mayor's four years in office, and in some cases employes have twice had their salaries increased.

SOCIAL EVIL IN EUROPE

Flexner Finds That Police Regulation Fails to Check It

New York, Jan. 17.—After a year of personal investigation in eleven European countries, Abraham Flexner, commissioned by the bureau of social hygiene, has come to the conclusion that police regulation of the social evil in Europe is a failure and is rapidly dying out.

Stringent legislation, on the other hand, has practically stamped out the so-called white slave traffic in young girls, and segregation, he finds, is non-existent anywhere in England or the continent.

These views, upsetting beliefs widely current in this country as to the status of commercialized vice in the old world, are set forth in a 450-page volume, issued today.

BEARDSLEY SAYS HE WILL SURRENDER

Farmer Moved by Suffering of His Nine Children

Mayville, N. Y., Jan. 17.—Edward Beardsley sent out word from his barricaded farmhouse at Summerdale that he was ready to discuss terms of surrender with the sheriff, provided his brother, James Beardsley, was brought here from Titusville to look after the children.

Sheriff Anderson believes Beardsley's offer is the first sincere one he had made since he barricaded the farmhouse after the shooting of Postmaster Putnam on Tuesday afternoon, and he at once sent a deputy to Titusville to ask the brother to come here.

The sufferings of the nine hungry and frostbitten children in the house, the sheriff believes, drove Beardsley to consider a peaceful surrender.

MAY MUZZLE ALL DOGS

Case of Rabies Causes Doctor to Warn the Citzens of Concord

Concord, Mass., Jan. 17.—The discovery of a dog affected by rabies, who had bitten a man and half a dozen other dogs in town, has led Dr. Fielder, assistant director of the vaccine laboratory in the health department at New York, where the man was sent for treatment, to urgently advise the citizens to pass an ordinance requiring the muzzling of all dogs for not less than six months after the occurrence of the last case of rabies in the neighborhood.

He adds that all dogs found unmuzzled should be seized and killed.

FIANCEE IS PROSTRATED

Police and Coroner Disagree as to Cause of Lankford's Death

New York, Jan. 17.—Prostrated by the sudden death of her fiance, Richard D. Lankford, vice president and secretary of the Southern railroad, Miss Helen Patterson is under the care of two nurses at her home in Brooklyn. The wedding was to have taken place yesterday.

The police and Coroner Volk are in conflict as to the cause of death. The former declared that circumstance surrounding the case pointed to suicide. The coroner, however, asserted that the railroad magnate's death was accidental.

TREMONT THEATRE.

Beginning Jan. 19 for a limited engagement the Tremont Theatre will enjoy the signal honor of housing David Belasco's original production of the delightful comedy, "Years of Discreation." This comedy comes to Boston with the proud record of 198 consecutive performances at Mr. Belasco's famous playhouse, where last season it ruled as the most important comedy triumph of the year. In sending "Years of Discretion" on tour with the notable Belasco company and production. Mr. Belasco again shows his determination to maintain that very high standard of excellence that marks every offering that he sponsors. To find in one play the names of Effie Shannon, Alice Putnam, Herbert Kelcey, John Flood, Louis Massen, Robert McWade, Jr., Frank R. Barnes, Grant Mitchell and Camille Dalberg, assures a performance of perfect artistic merit. This sparkling comedy deals chiefly with characters of middle age. The theme discloses the purpose of all these characters to regard themselves as still young and romantic, and from this thesis develops a series of situations and complications highly amusing. Also there is delicious sharp satire and not a little romance. The story is of particular interest to Bostonians owing to the fact that a Brookline widow is the central character and one of the scenes of the play is in that fashionable suburb of Boston. Matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday.

Incognito

The Story of a Royal Marriage

By MAY C. ETHERIDGE

"I am tired," said Prince Adolf, "of having people gape at me whenever I appear."

"Your royal highness," said an equerry, entering, "a man has been brought to the palace by the police charged with personating you, the prince. He resembles you so closely that those who arrested him cannot be certain whether he is or is not an impostor. What orders shall I give as to his disposition?"

"Is he much like me?"

"So nearly that had he not been poorly dressed I, who am in constant attendance upon your highness, could not tell him from you."

"Bring him to me."

The equerry disappeared and in a few minutes entered, conducting the man in question. The prince started at the marvelous resemblance to himself.

"Why have you personated me?" asked the prince.

"For fun, your highness."

"How would you like to personate me for a consideration?"

"I am at your royal highness' service."

The prince made a deal by which this man, Shuster, was to personate

"HOW WOULD YOU LIKE TO PERSONATE ME?"

him till the moment he should meet his bride. The prince wished to do some shopping, and it was arranged that, while dressed as a commoner and with his hat pulled down over his eyes, he should enter a store by one door while Shuster, as the true prince, should enter by another.

So the next morning at the usual hour of the prince's going forth Shuster was driven through the usual crowd of loiterers at the palace gate, all of whom took off their hats, the salute being gracefully acknowledged by Shuster. The prince, looking down from an upper window, saw the exit.

Leaving the palace by a rear exit, the prince took a shorter route to the first shop he intended to visit and reached it just in time to see his spurious self alight from his carriage, the footman open the door and Shuster pass through a small gathering who, recognizing the prince's livery, had run to the spot to catch a glimpse of him. Then the prince did his shopping in another part of the store, though he found it difficult to secure attention, so eager were the clerks to see his royal highness.

The prince was much relieved and pleased at being able to buy a pair of stockings or a necktie without having a crowd about him, kept back in some instances by the police. He wrote his fiancee of his ruse and that he would arrive incognito, his personator coming in state. The princess was caught by the device and wished that she might herself be personated in the same way. She at once sent her favorite attendant out to search for a young woman who resembled her. The woman spent a week on the street, in shops, at evening entertainments, and at last found a young lady who sufficiently resembled her mistress to warrant an attempt to pass her for the princess. The lady was commanded to go to the palace. She expressed some surprise and at first refused, but changed her mind.

When the princess saw the person who was to represent her she was much pleased, not so much at the resemblance as the carriage, for the lady had the bearing of one of high degree. Some difficulty was met with to induce her to act the part of princess, but at last she consented and began her official duties in personating the princess on a shopping tour, as Shuster had personated the prince.

The marriage between Prince Adolf and the Princess Wilhelmina was a state marriage and had nothing to do with love. Indeed, the two had met but once—when the marriage contract was signed. But this made but little difference so far as the prince's arrival and the wedding were concerned. According to the arrangements, when a carriage drove up to the palace where dwelt the princess amid salvos of artillery he was received by the princess' personator, the princess herself standing back and enjoying the farce that was being enacted.

"What a joke it would be," she said to herself, "if these two could be brought to marry, each thinking the other to be of princely blood! As soon as the prince arrives I shall propose the plan to him."

She did propose the plan when her fiance arrived the same evening and was admitted through a rear door of the palace. The prince was evidently much struck with the proposal and said he would think it over. He expressed a desire to see his man, Shuster, with a view to giving him further instructions, and the representative was introduced to his apartments. What passed between them was not known, but after the meeting the prince told the princess that he had proposed her plan to Shuster.

It had been arranged that the prenuptial festivities should last a week, then the wedding, after which there should be another week of rejoicing. The princess was much interested in her matchmaking between the two representatives and was quite pleased to find every evidence that the two had been violently smitten with each other. The prince and his representative had conferences occasionally, and the former reported to the princess that the latter had agreed to her plan of passing through the ceremony of marriage with her who was enacting the part of bride expectant, though he feared to get into trouble by marrying a princess while pretending to be a prince. But Adolf declared that he would make that all right, assuring the man of his personal protection.

The conspirators could not, of course, go so far as to have a public marriage celebrated between the two, so it was arranged that Shuster and the princess' representative should be married privately—that is, if the spurious princess would consent to the match. The day before the royal marriage was celebrated Shuster announced that he had won the lady's consent, and the prince and his fiancee agreed that the marriage should be celebrated that same evening in the private chapel of the palace.

A few of those most intimate with the princess were admitted to the secret and to the ceremony. All watched the proceedings with great gusto. Nothing could be more interesting than a marriage between two commoners, each thinking the other to be of royal blood. Many comments were passed on the pair, the most frequent of which was that, though commoners, each possessed the carriage and dignity of a person of the blood royal.

The groom had stipulated that immediately after the ceremony he should take his bride whither so ever he pleased and no questions asked. So when the pair had been congratulated they stepped into one of the royal carriages and were driven away.

That night the prince disappeared. On the dresser in his apartments was found a note stating that his name was Herman Shuster. He had personated the prince till just before his arrival at the capital, when his royal highness had suddenly decided to enter in his own propria persona. He whom the princess had taken for a dummy was the real prince. He had fallen in love with the princess' representative and married her.

The princess, astonished, mortified, gave orders to cease the preparations for the wedding that was to take place that day at high noon and shut herself up in the palace. There was but one matter of comfort for her—if her betrothed had jilted her he had married a commoner. This would insure innumerable troubles for him in the future and might cost him a crown.

But within a few days strange news came from a neighboring kingdom. The king of this country had recently died and left the throne to his daughter. The young queen was much beloved by her subjects, being given to charity. She was used to going among the poor and the institutions for the poor incognita for the purpose of studying the needs of the former and correcting abuses in the latter. She had found these incognitas so pleasant, relieving her, as they did, from the gaze of curious crowds, that she had adopted them when traveling. In one of her journeys she had been summoned to the palace of the reigning sovereign and had been assigned a duty by the princess royal, the latter thinking her to be a commoner. While in the palace she had happened to meet the heir apparent of another kingdom, a love affair had resulted and the queen had been privately married.

When the princess heard this news she was more astonished than before. What an imposition had been practiced upon her and what an extraordinary coincidence, the queen and the prince meeting under such circumstances! But what excited the wrath of her father, the king, was that two kingdoms being near his own would now be united under one sovereign, the two together being far stronger than he was himself.

Soon after his marriage Prince Adolf sent a deputation to the lady to whom he had been betrothed to offer an humble apology. They said that after informing her that he would be represented by another he had been seized with a desire to win her love in that way, but her adoption of a similar plan as his own had placed him under an influence that he had been unable to resist.

VESSEL LOST IN WAR GAME

Eleven Men Are Trapped In British Submarine

HOPE OF RESCUE ABANDONED

Salvage Boats Are Grappling In Whitesand Bay For "A-7," the Sixth of Her Class to Come to Grief—Not Known Whether Machinery Became Disabled or Hole Caused Sinking

Plymouth, Eng., Jan. 17.—Two officers and nine men, composing the crew of the British submarine boat "A-7," are trapped in their craft 100 feet deep or more, in the waters of Whitesand bay, about five miles southwest of Plymouth.

Whether the men are dead or alive has not been established, but navy officials here express the opinion that all have perished. The exact spot where the little vessel sank has not been definitely fixed.

The "A-7," in company with the "A-8" and "A-9," made a plunge while engaged in maneuvers. Her sister ships came to the surface at the end of the maneuvers, but nothing was seen of the "A-7" since she opened her valves and dived.

At first it was believed by the men on the other submarines that the "A-7" was merely over-staying her allotted time beneath the water, but when the officers realized that the boat was in distress they sent out signals for aid.

Rescue boats were immediately rushed to the vicinity where the "A-7" went down. They threw out grappling irons and dragged the bay all yesterday afternoon and until darkness set in. Their efforts were fruitless, however, for never once was there a tug at a chain to indicate that the iron sides of the plunger had been struck.

The grappling operations begun again at daylight today and in the hope that the submarine will be found a boat capable of lifting her to the surface has been ordered to Whitesand bay.

The cause of the accident is not known. Whether the submarine's machinery became disabled or whether she tore a hole in herself on some sunken object is the merest speculation.

Naval officers estimate that in case the vessel's hull has not been punctured the men on board her might live at least twelve hours beneath the water.

This is the sixth submarine of class A which has come to grief. The "A-7" was built in 1904 and measured 150 feet in length. Her submerged displacement was 204 tons. Her engines developed 600 horsepower, which gave her a surface speed of sixteen knots and a submerged speed of nine knots.

CONCERT AT WEYMOUTH

Choral Society Present Program of Merit

The concert given by the Weymouth Choral Society at Bates Opera house Friday evening, Jan. 16, was a great credit to the society. The opera house began to fill slowly about seven thirty and at eight o'clock was filled close to its capacity. When the curtain arose a magnificent scene confronted the audience. The chorus, seventy-five in number, twenty-five male and fifty female, arranged as they were with the men in the centre and the ladies on either side made a very pretty picture. A stand had been constructed in the form of a flight of stairs so that each row in the chorus was a step higher than the row in front of them thus giving a clear view to all parts of the chorus.

The program was opened by the orchestra with an Overture, "If I were King," by Adam, after which the chorus sang, "Daybreak," in a manner that pleased the audience greatly and showed very plainly the immense amount of time the members of this band of singers have been spending in their endeavor to increase the interest in the singing of good music.

Miss Harriet A. Shaw then played a harp solo entitled "Mazurka" by Fanning with great skill. Miss Shaw received loud applause as she came on the stage and was forced to play an encore which she did in a pleasing way choosing for her selection "Believe Me of All Those Endearing Young Charms." The men of the chorus then sang Wagner's "Battle Hymn" in the way that only trained singers can.

Miss Edith Castle, the contralto soloist, then rendered four selections as follows: "Night and Dawn," by Fairfield; "The Danza" by Chadwick; "Since You Went Away" by Johnson and "Mammy's Lullaby" by S. Homer and although these are very difficult to sing Miss Castle made light work of them which brought loud applauding in hopes of an encore. The orchestra then gave two selections, "Salut d'Amour" by Elgar and "Anima" by Lincke, after which the chorus sang "Hoist the Sail" by Broome.

Miss Shaw then played "Concert Valse" by Zabel on her harp. A wire was broken on the harp during this selection but was quickly replaced by Miss Shaw and she was again forced to play an encore which she did willingly, using "The Romance," one of her own compositions.

The women of the chorus followed Miss Shaw's selections with the song, "In May," by Parker. Miss Castle then sang, "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice," which greatly pleased the audience and was followed by a harp solo, selected and composed by Miss Shaw, entitled "Song of the Fisherman." For an encore Miss Shaw used "Song of May," also composed by her. The chorus then sang the closing selection "Holy Art Thou" by Handel-Kingmere, making as complete a concert as is possible.

The concert was well conducted by James W. Calderwood, who is the musical supervisor in the Weymouth schools. Mrs. William A. Hodges accompanied at the piano. Weymouth is proud of this society and its work and can well afford to be, so complete is it in its endeavors.

IMPORTANT GRANITE BILL

Other Quincy Bills Introduced in the Legislature

A bill in which granite manufacturers are vitally interested has been introduced in the Senate by Senator Langelier. The bill if it becomes a law will permit granite manufacturers to put a lien on monuments after they have been set in cemeteries, when not paid for.

In years past granite manufacturers have been the losers of considerable sums by parties ordering granite memorials, who have neglected to pay for the same after they have been erected in cemeteries. Under the present law, there is but little redress for the manufacturer thus stuck for they could not place a lien on the monument after it was once set in a cemetery. The proposed bill seeks to give the granite manufacturers this relief.

This bill has been referred to the Committee on Judiciary who will give a hearing on the same next Tuesday at 10.30 at the State House.

Senator Langelier has also introduced a bill in the senate calling for an appropriation of $3,000 for the removal of objectionable material and mud from certain parts of the Quincy Shore Boulevard, at Atlantic.

Senator Langelier and Representative Sandberg have introduced a bill calling for an appropriation of $20,000 for dredging the channell in Wollaston Bay.

Ex-Councilman Charles E. Cherrington has presented a petition asking that the question of extending the provisions of the Civil Service to the Chief Engineer of the Fire Department be again submitted to the citizens of Quincy at a referendum vote for acceptance. This same matter came before the voters of the city under a special act at the election of December, 1912, but was defeated by a decisive vote, 1936 yes and 2082 no.

Representative Sullivan has filed a bill which provides for the exemption of taxation of all homesteads not having a value in excess of $2,000.

BRIEFS

Out of town friends would appreciate a copy of the Daily Ledger, with its full report of the "Revels."

It was Past Commander F. H.Stoddard and not Frank H. Chubbuck who was presented a gold mounted sword at the installation of Abner B. Packard camp, Sons of Veterans.

The Y. M. C. A. teams are scheduled for two hard games tonight in the local "Gym" judging from the past record of Tech and Melrose. The First team will line up against the strong Tech Sophomores.

Newsdealers all over the city report an increasing demand for the Daily Ledger and the call for more has made the running off a second edition necessary on several days recently.

The mthers of the many pupils at the Woodward Institute witnessed an exhibition of folk dancing and basket ball in the gymnasium Friday afternoon. The affair was by the Athletic Association of the school under the direction of Miss MacCarty, physical director, and was for the purpose of demonstrating gym work. All said afterward that they were very much impressed with the system in vogue.

WAY DOWN IN MAINE.

From North Penobscot, Maine, a letter has been received from Harry Allen, recently of the Braintree High school and a past master at football. No more football for him for he has decided to stay "Way Down East" and become a lumberman. He is now interested with his father in the woods logging, to furnish logs for a stave mill. Not being very strong since his football knockout he writes "I am not very strong yet but can do an awful lot of bossing. In fact there is so much money in logs here now that Harry can not afford to come back to Braintree."

Flaming Finish.

"My grandfather," said the old-timer, "used to put all his money in his stocking." "Wa-all, things hain't changed much," said his old friend. "My grandson, who's takin' a course in modern deportment at one o' them eastern colleges, puts most all his money into socks."—Judge.

Same Thing.

Wife (bitterly)—"How can you talk that way? You know that I never pester you for money." Hub—"No, but the people you buy things from do."

ASSOCIATED CHARITIES

Much Accomplished During the Year Just Closed

During the past few weeks the Associated Charities office has been a busy place. The Thanksgiving and Christmas work was heavy. A large number of families were aided by different churches, clubs and individuals after consulting with this office. The system inaugurated two years ago of comparing lists of names to be aided has worked very successfully and as a result it has been proven that it is possible to aid many more needy ones, at these seasons than formerly by avoiding duplication.

An amusing incident was told at Thanksgiving:—A well known applicant for aid, known to every agency in Quincy, went to a local charity asking for a dinner. The agent who had the list made out and had conculted the Associated Charities secretary, said, "But you know, you are to receive a dinner from —— church" "Yes," the woman replied, "But I am going to have company to dinner that day and I shall need two dinners. Since the Associated Charities came we can only get one dinner."

Many generous givers have made it possible to aid a large number of families in need, especially coal and shoes and clothing for children. One cash contribution for relief from a Sunday school provided new shoes and stockings for five children in one family and material to mend the shoes of the remaining four children. Another gift has made it possible to send small quantities of fuel to people in need of immediate aid in this line, another provided warm flannels for a sick boy, another warm mittens for a whole family.

A pathetic Christmas story is told by one of our visitors. A call was being made on the school teacher to consult regarding the needs of a certain child. The teacher said, "Mary is one of my best pupils, although she loses some time on account of sickness in the family as she is the oldest of ten and her mother's helper. She brings very little lunch to school and I always share with her. She had two dollars given her at Christmas. When asked what she did with the money, Mary said, there was very little food in the house so she bought groceries with $1.90, saving ten cents for herself. Then the baby needed an article of clothing so she bought a present for the baby with the extra ten cents.

Many puzzling cases interest the Associated Charities workers. One is a family of ten children, father and mother. The man is lazy, unfortunate, inefficient, untruthful and an occasional drinker. The mother is a good manager but shields her husband in every possible way, the children are bright, well mannered and interesting. The smallest excuse is enough for the man to give up work, a few weeks is long enough for him to work at any one thing. They are always appealing for aid. The man pleads, especially the size of his family as a reason why he should be assisted.

A recent experiment, beginning in holding neighborhood conferences was the recent conference held in the Wollaston school on invitation of Miss Thayer and Mrs. Thomas Lacey. Most of those invited attended the conference. Miss Thayer of the Wollaston school and her committee co-operated as well with the Associated Charities in the Thanksgiving work.

A pleasant outing for children, already noticed in the papers, gave much pleasure at Christmas and thanks are due to Chester Campbell and others who arranged the outing and accompanied the children.

The secretary expresses gratitude to those people who report families needing help of any kind, and who use the society to investigate cases of apparent need and undertakes to visit and to aid at once where aid is necessary. As the recent weather reminds us, much of our winter is still to come. The society has more calls for relief this year, more cases of sickness, more men out of work. This means more demands on the office force and on the volunteers, who are doing much to help by visiting the sick and the poor. The society welcomes the assistance of any who are interested to help.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED

Rev. Charles B. Ames a Former Quincy Pastor

The following clippings from Maine papers will be of interest to the Quincy friends of Rev. Charles B. Ames, formerly assistant pastor of First church:

A delightful "surprise party" was held at the home of Miss Marian Wells, in Belfast Thursday evening Jan. 8, when her engagement to Rev. Charles Bulkley Ames, pastor of the First Parish Unitarian church, was announced. Miss Wells ,who came home from Boston shortly before Christmas, had invited a few friends to supper and to spend the evening with their needlework. Shortly after six the guests were ushered into the dining room where two daintily appointed tables had centerpieces of beautiful pink roses. Tiny ribbon-tied pink crepe paper baskets filled with pink candies were at each place, and when one of the guests investigated the tiny pink ribbon bow at the base of her basket, two pink hearts emerged from under the centerpiece and tied between them were the cards of Miss Wells and Mr. Ames. When the discovery was made, excitement reigned supreme, and congratulations and best wishes were showered upon the hostess.

Since Thursday both Mr. Ames and Miss Wells have been widely congratulated. Miss Wells, who has been studying vocal music in Boston for several years is one of of Belfasts most talented musicians, and her beautiful voice has often been heard with pleasure in local churches and at concerts and recitals. Mr. Ames, who has been in Belfast, pastor of the First Parish church for about two years, has made a distinct place for himself in social as well as in intellectual circles, and has the esteem of all. The engagement is not to be a long one, though the date of the marriage has not been announced.

The engagement of Miss Marian Wells, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George G. Wells of Belfast and one of the most attractive young women in this section of Maine, to the Rev. Charles Bulkley Ames, pastor of the First Parish Unitarian Church of Belfast, has just been announced. It caused quite a surprise in social circles here, as the existence of an attachment between the young couple was not even suspected.

In addition to being an unusually charming girl, Miss Wells is a singer of more than ordinary attainments. She has been studying in Boston for the past five years, and her soprano voice is of unusual sweetness and range. She has recently been soloist in a Commonwealth avenue church. She sang with a concert company last season, when her appearances were uniformly successful. Miss Wells has also been devoting a part of her time to the study of languages while in Boston.

Rev. Mr. Ames came to Belfast from Quincy, Mass., and he has made many friends both in and out of his church since his residence here. He is receiving hearty congratulations.

IDEAL PLANS FOR CONTAGIOUS HOSPITAL

Quincy Fortunate in Having Good Site Presented by Henry M. Faxon

Cost of the Building Will Be About $35,000

The project of a Municipal Hospital for the care of contagious diseases in the City of Quincy has been completed so far as location and plans are concerned by the Board of Health.

Chapter 75, Section 35, Revised Laws, were amended by Chapter 613, Acts of 1911, requiring each city or town or a combination of two or more adjoining cities and towns to establish and constantly maintain one or more isolation hospitals for the reception of persons having diseases dangerous to the public health with a penalty of $500.00 for each refusal or neglect.

Chapter 151, Acts of 1912, amended the previous act by the provision that "Each city shall, and each town may, and upon the request of the State Board of Health, shall, establish and maintain, etc.," and in this act it specifies 'small pox, diphtheria, scarlet fever, tuberculosis or other diseases dangerous to the public health, unless there already exists in the city or town a hospital for the reception of persons ill with such diseases, which is satisfactory to the State Board of Health' etc., with the same $500.00 penalty.

CITY REQUESTED.

On Dec. 5, 1912, the Mayor received a communication from the State Board of Health requesting that this city comply with this Law. Later a second communication was received by him. This communication was forwarded to the Board of Health with request that they furnish Albert H. Wright, architect, such data and suggestions as they saw fit to offer to formulate a proper plan for this purpose.

The board influenced by a desire to comply with these acts with as little financial expenditure by the city as was possible first endeavored to obtain permission to use the present Mt. Pleasant Tuberculosis Camp for this purpose.

TEMPORARY PLAN.

After considerable inspection by the State Authorities they received permission to enlarge the camp and receive the subsidy of $5.00 per week per patient of all those who showed tubercle bacilli in their sputa and were cared for in the proposed improved camp, but only for a temporary period until a proper new hospital could be erected by the city.

As this would entail an expense of several thousand dollars for a temporary expedient only, the Board did not consider it wisdom or economy to follow this idea. The Board of Health therefore investigated the various sites in this city which might be used for this hospital. Amongst them was the lot on the southerly side of Faxon Park; one in the pine grove on the Cunningham estate in West Quincy; one on the southerly side of Third Hill below the reservoir; one on the Eldredge estate on Quincy avenue; one at Quincy Woods, and one at Squantum.

SITE PRESENTED.

Many complaints had been received by the Board of Health regarding the location of the present tuberculosis camp, and during an investigation of this camp it was suggested by Henry M. Faxon that perhaps a better location could be found for it. Following this suggestion Mr. Faxon offered confidentially to the secretary of the Board, a location on the southerly side of Faxon Park for their new municipal hospital, offering as much land as they thought was necessary for the purpose, provided however that the proposed hospital be a proper one. The cost of obtaining and of the other sites and the advantages of the various proposed locations were such that this location suggested by Mr. Faxon was the most desirable.

It is practically at the greatest elevation in our city, is protected from the north by Faxon Park and has a beautiful outlook over the Fore River valley to the south, and is in a position whereby the prevailing southwest winds of summer would keep the hospital as cool and as comfortable as is possible in our city. Its elevation and its abutment to a large public park, its reasonable access to street car lines seemed also to make it the most desirable site.

IDEAL PLAN.

After visits to various tuberculosis and other hospitals and after carefully investigating this subject, the Board with the assistance of Mr. Wright formulated a plan which has been amended in detail several times so that now they feel that they have an ideal plan for this hospital.

As the Board has been paying for the care of about thirty cases of tuberculosis, the plan contains provisions for thirty beds for tuberculosis cases; eighteen for males and twelve for females; provision in the scarlet fever ward is made for three males and three females; in the diphtheria ward for three males and three females; and the contagious building contains as well a small ward of two beds for an isolation ward.

The wards have the advantage of

MORE QUINCY BILLS IN LEGISLATURE

Port Directors Asked to Build Breakwater Along Manet Avenue

Highway Commission Asked to Build Sea Street

(Special to Daily Ledger.)

As usual a deluge of new bills was filed at the State house on Saturday, which was the last day for recording new measures with the clerk of the House, James E. Kimball. Among them was a bill presented by Michael T. Sullivan of Quincy that homesteads be exempt from taxation.

Edward J. Sandberg of Quincy presented a bill to establish the salaries of the heads of certain state departments. Section 1 says that beginning with the fiscal year the secretary of the commonwealth, the treasurer and receiver general, and the auditor of accounts shall each receive an annual salary of $7,000, and the expense of procuring the bonds which the secretary, the auditor and the treasurer and receiver general are required to give shall be paid by the commonwealth. The petitioner is William L. V. Newton.

Edward J. Sandberg filed a bill authorizing the directors of the port of Boston to improve a channel in Quincy bay. The bill provides that the directors shall improve the channel, formerly dredged by the commonwealth, extending to the club houses of the Wollaston Yacht club and the Squantum Yacht club, by widening and deepening the same so that it shall be 70 feet in width on the bottom and three feet deep at mean low water, and also by extending the present channel, with a width of 70 feet and a depth of three feet at mean low water, until it reaches a point in the bay where the water is three feet deep at mean low water. For these purposes the directors may expend a sum not exceeding $20,000 to be paid out of the Commonwealth flats improvement fund.

By Representative Michael T. Sullivan that the grade crossings of the Old Colony Railroad, New York New Haven & Hartford railroad, Lessees, in Quincy be abolished according to the plan adopted by the city of Quincy and known as the City plan of depression.

By Representative Sullivan that $10,000 be appropriated to be expended by the directors of the Port of Boston in the construction of a breakwater on that part of the shore of Quincy Bay bordering on Manet avenue in the vicinity of Newton street.

By Representative Sullivan authorizing the harbor and land commissioners to improve Weymouth Fore river.

By Representative Sullivan that a sum of $25,000 be appropriated to be expended by the Massachusetts Highway Commission in the improvement of the highway leading from Quincy square in the city of Quincy to Houghs Neck and known as Sea street and Coddington street.

Frank B. Homans of Hyde Park, through Senator Langelier has filed a bill in the legislature which makes it easier for a travelling man and others to vote while away from their legal voting place.

The bill provides that a man can secure a travelling card from the registrars of his city or town which shall bear his photograph and signature, and on election day after complying with certain formalities be entitled to vote in any precinct in the state.

The penalty for voting in more than one place is one year's imprisonment.

If through a hair cut or a trimming of the beard his general appearance is altered his right lapses if he presents an old card, no matter how definitely he can establish his identity. The bill is one of the friekiest pieces of legislation that has been presented to date.

MRS. CHARLES L. SEAVEY.

The funeral of Grace Saxe Seavey wife of Charles L. Seavey, one of the best known club women of the city, was held Sunday afternoon in the Wollaston Congregational church. Among the friends that filled the edifice were members of the executive board of the Quincy Womans Club and members of the Wollaston Womens Club and the Parent-Teachers Association of the Wollaston grammar school.

Dr. Isaiah W. Sneath officiated and pronounced a short eulogy, in which he reviewed the work of Mrs. Seavey. The favorite hymn, "Hark, Hark, My Soul," by George E. Nevins was rendered by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Y. Follett. Mrs. Chandler W. Smith, president of the Quincy Womens Club presided at the organ and played the Chopin Funeral March and 'O Rest in the Lord." The floral remembrances were many and included a handsome bouquet of roses from the Arts and Crafts Committee of the Quincy Womens Club of which Mrs. Seavey was chairman.

SUDDEN DEATH AT ICE POND

Allan Newcomb Has Been Subject to Fits

The body of Allan E. Newcomb of Elm place, aged about 25 years, was found this noon in the rear of the engine house at the Meadow Brook ice pond at South Quincy. The young man had been employed by the ice company harvesting ice. This noon evidently feeling a fit coming on he went back of the engine house and sat down. He was found in this condition and a telephone call sent for the police ambulance and for physicians. When the ambulance arrived however the young man was dead. Medical Examiner Dr. F. E. Jones was notified.

The young man was a son of the late Elmer Newcomb and has been subject to fits for some time. When a boy, while playing near his home, he fell striking his head on a rock. Since that time he has been subject to fits, and it was during one of these that he died this noon. He lived with his mother on Elm place.

The plumbers are still very busy because of the freeze-ups last week.

CITY COUNCIL THIS EVENING

Appointments of Mayor Miller Are Expected

The first regular meeting of the City Council since inauguration day will be held this evening. No committees have met since Inauguration day and there is not much business to come before the meeting. The main interest in the meeting will be the appointments of department heads and administrative boards, which the Mayor is expected to send to the Council at this meeting. The interest in these appointments augurs well for a good attendance of citizens. All that the Council can do with the appointments is to receive the communication and place it on file.

Another matter that will come up is the hearing given to Alexander Cowe, for him to show cause why the seat in the City Council, to which he had been elected, should not be declared vacant, or in other words for Mr. Cowe to show cause why he should not be disqualified from serving, for the reason that he had not been a citizen of the United States for a year at the time of election. Mr. Cowe has been a resident of the city several years.

It is understood that Mr. Cowe will claim under the Federal law as a naturalized citizen he is entitled to all rights and privileges accorded a citizen of the United States, although under the City Charter he is not eligible to serve.

Whether action will be taken after the hearing relative to a new election is not known.

No temporary loan order has been offered in the City Council this year as yet, owing to the fact that the balance on hand at the beginning of the year was sufficient to carry on the city for a time. It will be necessary however to pass a temporary loan order at an early date.

It is probable that Mayor Miller will send several communications besides the appointments.

WHY BURDEN OTHERS?

The most contemptible legislation before the new Legislature cames from the town of Brookline! Why is it that a rich town like Brookline, with a low tax rate and abundantly able to pay its share of taxes, seeks to put upon the poor and less favored towns an additional burden! Not content with being favored in Metropolitan park assessments, Metropolitan water assessments, and other assessments and the general taxation law, Brookline now tries to escape from county taxes, and put a burden on all the Norfolk County towns.

In the organization of the Legislature Representative Curtin of Brookline is House chairman of the Committee on Taxation and it looks like a frame-up to benefit Brookline.

The Daily Ledger has not been favored with a copy of Brookline's petition, but a Boston paper gives this information:

A bill to make Brookline a part of Suffolk County was filed Saturday by Daniel J. Daley of that town, on this the last day for filing new business with the State Legislature. Mr. Daley, who is a Boston attorney and a Brookline assessor, was asked if the measure meant the anexation of Brookline to Boston and he promptly replied in the negative. "It is merely that we may reduce our county tax by 50 percent, for the bill has a provision that Brookline's county tax shall not be more than $50,000. We are paying $100,000 now, which is too much. Furthermore we are much nearer the seat of Suffolk County, while the Norfolk County seat is so remote. Our interests are like those of Suffolk County, and that's where we belong."

It is true that Brookline pays about one-third of the Norfolk county tax, but why shouldn't she. The town has one-third of the valuation, something like $125,000,000. It has a representative on the board of Norfolk county commissioners, and is responsible for its share of the Norfolk county debt and current expenses. The county seat at Dedham is handier to Brookline than to Quincy, Braintree and many other towns. A monthly session of Norfolk county probate court is held in Brookline, and the town has nothing to complain about, relative to its treatment in Norfolk county.

Brookline should consider itself fortunate that it is not forced to become a part of the city of Boston. That is where it belongs. It is practically surrounded by different wards of Boston and obtains Boston benefits in a greater degree than any suburban city or town. The unwise move to join Suffolk county may bring this about much quicker than Brookline desires.

The Daily Ledger will have something more to say about this in a few days, but the city government of Quincy and the Norfolk county towns should get busy, because a hearing may be held in a few days.

An aeroplane has just visited Jerusalem for the first time, but they are an old story in New Jerusalem on the shores of the Hudson river.

The members of the new Society to Encourage Thrift, formed in Chicago do not necessarily come from the rural districts.

ELECTRIC CAR UPON HIS LAWN

Norfolk Downs Car Derailed But No One Was Hurt

One of the big electric cars run on the Norfolk Downs line left the iron Saturday night while rounding the curve from Billings road onto Elm avenue and running across the sidewalk came to a stop near the house of Charles E. Decker. There were half a dozen passengers in the car at the time and when the trolley came off it left the car in darkness. The passengers made a rush to get out but before they could get the doors open the car came to a stop. Neighbors in the immediate vicinity came to the rescue with lanterns and after some delay the car was got back onto the rails. No one was injured but the passengers were shaken up somewhat and more or less frightened.

The alarm from Box 614 at the corner of Glover avenue and Newbury avenue at 7.48 Saturday night was false, and the fire department had its run for nothing. On arrival the box was found open but no one near it. The firemen were unable to find any fire any where and the recall was immediately scunded. This is not the first time that this box has been rung in for a false alarm and sometime the parties who take this way of having fun will get caught and made to pay dearly for their fun.

FOR STOMACH TROUBLE

John W. Skillen of Sidney, Ohio, Has Found a Remedy.

Experts declare that the reason stomach disorders are so common in this country is due to hasty and careless habits of eating. Stomach troubles and run-down conditions usually go together.

John W. Skillen of Sidney, Ohio, says: "I had a bad stomach trouble for years, and became so weak that I could hardly walk or do any work. My appetite was poor, and it seemed impossible to get any relief. Since taking 'Vinol' I find a remarkable improvement in my health, my digestion is much stronger, and I have gained in weight. I would not be without Vinol."

Vinol makes weak stomachs strong because it strengthens and tones up the weakened, tired and overtaxed nerves of the digestive organs. Vinol is easily assimilated by the weakest stomachs, and is delicious to the taste.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you. Edward J. Murphy, Druggist, Quincy, Mass.

WOMEN'S FIGHT FOR FRANCHISE

New Faction Seeks Greater Activity For the Cause

WEARY OF PRESENT REGIME

Say It Is Degenerating Into Bureau of Facts and Figures—In Open Revolt Against Present Leaders—Attribute Their Recent Defeat in Washington to Lack of Organization

New York, Jan. 19.—Women advocates of suffrage are forming themselves into two distinct armies preparatory to waging one of the greatest political battles for the cause that ever has been fought.

It has just been learned that a band of insurgent women is quietly but nevertheless determinedly growing in strength of purpose and number ready to oppose the great national organization which has in the past controlled, to a certain degree, the destinies of all campaign states. This body represents some of the flower of the franchise movement and the most progressive advocates of political equality.

With such women as Miss Jane Addams of Chicago, Mrs. William Kent of California, Mrs. Robert La Follette of Wisconsin, Mrs. Thomas Hepburn of Connecticut and others from insurgent states approving the work of the new faction, there is reason to believe that the conflict, which must take place soon, will be sharp and decisive. For the insurgents declare they have had enough of the regime which, they say, is gradually degenerating into a bureau of facts and figures instead of a centre of progress and activity which would help to win new states for suffrage.

This insurgent body, without attacking individuals, is on the point of open revolt against the leadership of Dr. Anna H. Shaw, president of the National American Woman Suffrage association, which has headquarters in this city; Mrs. Mary W. Dennett, secretary, and those of her board who are against progressive campaign tactics.

The insurgent leaders declare they will not be put down again by the supporters of the conservative element. They attribute their defeat at the last election in Washington just before the end of 1913 to being unorganized. And, realizing that lack of organization has lost for them more than one important point, they began at once to get their political machine into working order and prepare for the next great conflict.

BIG STRIKE IS BEGUN

Five Thousand Men Going Out on Delaware and Hudson

Albany, Jan. 19.—A strike of approximately 5000 employes of the Delaware and Hudson Railroad company's line from Rouses' Point, N. Y., to Wilkesbarre, Pa., was begun today as a result of the refusal of the company to grant the men's demands for the reinstatement of two of their number.

Engineers, firemen, conductors, telegraphers and trainmen were ordered out. Shop workers and office employes were not included.

All trains will be run to their terminals in order to avoid tying up mail and express. Agents, telegraphers, signalmen and towermen will be permitted to remain on duty until noon.

COPPER STRIKE CONTINUES

Labor Leaders Believe It Will Last Throughout the Winter

Houghton, Mich., Jan. 19.—With the end of the sixth month of the copper miners' strike in sight, operators and union men appear to be no nearer an agreement than they were when the struggle began on July 23 last.

The continued mild weather has confirmed labor leaders in the belief that they will hold the striking forces intact throughout the winter. They assert that the Wesern Federaion of Miners is prepared to support the local organization through a long contest if necessary.

The mine owners maintain that the backbone of the strike has been broken and that if the strikers do not return to work without further delay, all their places will be filled.

SUNDAY IN QUINCY CHURCHES

NOTE—Press corespondents of Churches are requested to limit reports of sermons to 100 words, unless abstracts are requested. Where fifty or more sermons are delivered in Quincy every Sunday it is impossible to report them at length. Brief items of church news are requested. Name and address should accompany all reports.

Sunday was an ideal winter day. The air was clear, cold and sharp, but there was no wind to speak of. When the sun came out it warmed up a little, but the air remained sharp all day. At noon the temperature was but 21 above zero. It was however a welcome change from a week ago when the wind blew almost a gale and the temperature was but a few degrees above zero. The effect of "Everybody-go-to-church" Sunday was apparent by large audiences at all of the churches, showing that renewed interest has been aroused in church attendance. The announcement of the State wide "Everybody-go-to-church" Sunday on Feb. 8, was made from many pulpits.

BETHANY CONGREGATIONAL.

Large congregations attended the Sunday services at Bethany, especially in the evening when there were 520 present by actual count. In the morning the pastor's subject was "A high calling" and music was a feature.

In the evening the pastor spoke on "Those hypocrites." He said in part:

"The hypocrite, was originally a play-actor, he wore a mask to hide his features, and sought to appear what he was not. When Jesus therefore spoke of the Pharisees as "hypocrites" he meant, they used religion to hide what they were; to make them appear what they were not.

"The hypocrite has always been a stumbling block to others, and many men and women who love reality, have said, 'I hate a hypocrite and have met so many of them who are members of the church that I have stopped going to church and will not myself be known as a Christian.'

"I have no brief for the hypocrite, any more than Jesus had, but I do say that you do a wrong to the gospel of Jesus and to the church to renounce christianity, and the church for such hypocrites, we hope you will become a disciple of Jesus who is your only Saviour, but neither we nor He desire you to be a hypocrite. You as a man have a right to be judged by your purposes rather than your failures; by your best rather than by your worst moments. The church and the christians have a right to be judged by their purposes and principles which they seek to proclaim.

"Is the purpose to bless or to curse men? Will the adoption of that faith make men better or worse? Will the life of God in the soul make it meagre, or will it make good men still better and bad men good?

"You know, do you not, that the hypocrite is not a christian, then why blame christianity for such a man? You would not refuse to accept a dollar bill because men pass counterfeits.

"You say men only counterfeit real things, so if the hypocrite is a counterfeit christian, the real one must be all right. Condemn him if you can, but do not condemn that which he seeks to counterfeit, for such acts only prove the excellence of that which is imitated.

"After all is said about the faults of the church, and they are many, it remains to be said, it is a divine institution whose charter has been signed with the sacrificial life and death of the Son of God. She is the only institution on earth that has a world-wide commission given by the Son of God, and an eternal destiny in the bosom of the Father as the bride of Christ. No government has ever persecuted her without injury to itself and dire calamity following; men who have evilly treated her have suffered sooner or later.

"Let us be more careful how we label men. Endeavoring to be more stern with our own sins; more compassionate toward our fellowmen. Let us seek to discriminate between the man who tries and fails, and the man who is a hypocrite."

The annual meeting of the Bethany church corporation will be held Wednesday evening, when all officers and organizations will report and new officers will be elected.

Henry G. Smith, the general manager of the Fore River shipyard, will address the Knights of King Arthur Friday at 6.30.

FIRST PARISH.

The sermon of Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson yesterday on "The First Parish in Quincy" was in part a most interesting historical review, and in part a stirring summons to the people of the parish to meet the present opportunity with renewed devotion and loyalty.

He showed that from the earliest gathering of the society to the present time the emphasis had been placed upon character rather than creed. "It is no accident," he said, "that the register of this parish has furnished so many great names to the records of our nation's history . They were the natural product of the whole atmosphere of the church.

He referred to the wonderful growth in mechanical, industrial and commercial efficiency during the life time of the present generation. But during the same period there has been a serious decline in moral efficiency, owing to the neglect of the churches by those most actively engaged in the world's work.

With the active support of the strong men of the parish, supplementing the self-sacrificing devotion of its loyal women, there is no reason why the future of the old First Parish should not become even more glorious than its past, and of even greater service to the community and nation.

Tomorrow evening will be held the January meeting of the First Parish club at which Prof. T. Phillips Terry, a well known author and magazine writer will speak on "Mexico."

On Wednesday there will be an all day meeting of the Fragment society with luncheon at 12.30.

HALL PLACE M. E. CHURCH.

Miss Wood of the New England Deaconess Association presented the Deaconess cause at the Sunday evening service of the Hall Place M. E. church, speaking of its founding and increase in power. She touched upon every phase of its work, the Training school where young women are receiving the training which fits them to go out into the larger activities of life better equipped to meet the problems which confront them and to take up the active Deaconess work of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of its hospitals at Brookline and Concord where hundreds of people both rich and poor are healed in body and soul and many are helped in various ways. The rich and the poor here receive the best Christian care and kindness regardless of their station in life or their ability to pay for their treatment. The Deaconess Home in Boston where the visiting Deaconesses and the Evangelistic Deaconesses live and where the Institutional work is done, the sewing and cooking classes for the girls and classes for the boys, the older girls classes and the Mother's meeting, the work of the resident Deaconess physician and the visiting Deaconess, the Fresh Air Home at Haverhill for children in the summer, the Home where working girls can rest during the winter and the Rest Home for women during the winter months, the work of helping the poor, caring for the sick and the dying and winning the sinner to Christ, helping to bring the world nearer to its Saviour, all of these phases of the great Deaconess cause were carefully presented together with incidents which have been met in the course of the work.

Harold Norris led the Epworth League Devotional service on the subject of "Missions" and presented plans for the starting of a Mission Study class.

Thursday evening the Fowler Chapter of the Brotherhood will have a debate on the question: Resolved that the Home has larger influence on young men than outside associations.

Prayer meeting Friday evening at 7.30 followed by Choir rehearsal.

Junior League at 3.45 P. M. Friday.

SWEDISH BAPTIST.

Rev. A. Manuel of the Boston Seamen's Mission gave a very stirring and interesting sermon Sunday morning, to a large audience, who were also favored by a solo from him. The Christian Endeavorers met at their usual time. The evening service was in charge of the pastor Rev. Paul Hallin, who took for his subject "Christs' power to forgive sins."

Three special services will be held during the week at the Swedish Baptist church Tuesday, Thursday and Friday at 7.30. Rev. A. Manuel will speak at each of these meetings. Extra singing. Scandinavians cordially invited.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

"Entering into Life," was the subject of the morning's sermon Sunday, but "Two ways of entering into life" was really the thought. The pastor, Rev. Joseph Walther, explained that there was one way, that of moral perfection, but that no one would ever dare to claim himself worthy to enter on those grounds. The other way is that of unmerited grace and mercy on God's part and that of penitence and confession on man's.

There was a good attendance in all departments of the Sunday School. The school is so organized that there are classes for all ages from the organized classes for older men and women to the kindergarten.

At the Junior meeting at 3.30 in the Chapel, the Blue team of the membership contest gained several points on the Reds. As the contest draws near its close, the interest is constantly increasing, and many of the children come from long distances every Sunday to listen to Mrs. Walther's talks on subjects of interest to ones of the Junior age.

The C. E. meetings have been most enthusiastically attended during the fall and winter and a large number were out Sunday evening to discuss the subject of "Ambitious Endeavorers." The meeting was in charge of C. Percy Foss, the vice president of the society.

At 7.00 a musical service with a brief sermon on the topic "Overlooked people" was held in the auditorium. Miss Ruth L. Hardy sang "O rest in the Lord" from "Elijah."

The Walther's men's class will be entertained Tuesday evening by Clarence Bradford Mudge, a blind man, with music, travel and feats of memory; and by Ernest W. Campbell who will tell of his recent visit to Vesuvius and Pompeii.

The Women's Home and Foreign Mission Societies will hold their annual meetings Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Charles E. Goodspeed.

The Red-Green banquet of the Rand class will be held in the chapel on Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock.

The adjourned annual meeting of the Sunday School will be held Thursday evening after the midweek meeting.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

At the Sunday morning service of worship Rev. Carl G. Horst considered the Book of Job, one of the most remarkable books in the Bible, teaching unflinching faith in God—"Though he slay me, yet will I trust in Him."

He said, "No intelligent reader of the Hebrew Scriptures can fail to notice that the Satan of the Book of Job bears no resemblance whatever to the Satan in popular modern theology. In the four Old Testament texts where Satan is spoken of he is represented, not as an enemy, but as the servant of God. In the Book of Job he is pictured as coming to the courts of Heaven among the other sons of God to receive the divine commands. He is not a rebellious devil, but a faithful messenger and servant of Jehovah. He is not a tempter, but an examiner, one who tests righteousness and character of men to see whether their apparent goodness be pure gold."

At the Young People's Religious Union meeting in the evening Mrs. C. G. Horst gave the address.

A preparatory class for the study of "Fundamentals in Religion" is being organized by the minister. All who desire to unite with the church on Easter Sunday are especially invited to attend.

The Ladies Aid Alliance will hold a whist party at the residence of Mrs. Frank A. Page, 103 Grand View avenue.

The annual business meeting of the church on Monday evening, Jan. 26, will be preceded by a dinner to which all legal members of the church are cordially invited. There will be written reports presented by the minister, the treasurer, the collector, the Sunday School, the Unitarian Club, the Young People's Religious Union, the Ladies' Aid Alliance, the Social Service committee, the treasurer of the Repair Fund, the Choir Guild, the chairman of the committee on cushions and the editor of the Dial.

The Unitarian Sunday School Union of Boston, of which Charles H. Johnson of Quincy is president, meets in Bulfinch Place Church, Boston, this evening. Dinner at 6 o'clock.

Clerk William H. Boynton read the warrant for the annual meeting of the church yesterday at the morning service.

Special services for the deepening of the moral and religious life will be held as usual during Lent. Among the preachers this season we take pleasure in announcing the Rev. Charles F. Dole, D. D., of Jamaica Plain and the Rev. Frederic Gill of Arlington.

WOLLASTON METHODIST.

Rev. George M. Bailey, chose Sunday morning the following theme: "The straight gate and the narrow being easily enlarged with a very small expense for more tuberculosis cases by extending the walls on either end and in the scarlet fever and diphtheria wards by glazing in the verandas and placing beds in them. Its capacity could be doubled almost immediately should an epidemic arise.

It has the advantage that as the scarlet fever and diphtheria cases are cared for in one building, one nurse, in a glass observation room in the center, can have observation and control over all these diphtheria and scarlet fever wards, should but few cases be cared for.

RESIDENT PHYSICIAN.

The scheme back of this plan entails the employment of a resident physician, who as well as caring for the cases in this hospital, will do such laboratory work for the physicians of Quincy, free of charge, as will enable them to obtain, quickly and easily, reports of cultures of all kinds taken from their cases of contagious diseases and will entail also a visit from this physician upon every case of contagious disease which may arise in the city as well as subsequent visits from the nurses of the hospital, who trained in this particular work, will, at least by teaching hygienic and preventative measures in the household, be a most valuable aid in stopping the spread of our contagious diseases and as well give to the sick cases their better opportunity for a successful recovery.

BEST PLANS PRESENTED.

Considerable work has been done by this Board, with but little encouragement at times. The Recess Committee of the Legislature however before whom the city of Quincy was called to present reasons why it had not complied with the law causing the erection of this hospital, stated that these plans were by far the finest they had yet seen, that the enthusiasm of those who had this matter in charge was the greatest they had yet seen, and they commended highly the Board and Mr. Faxon for their effort to produce such an ideal hospital.

Some objection to these plans were made by a member of the State Board of Health which was quickly overruled by the whole State Board, and he has later concluded and expressed himself unreservedly that this plan is splendid.

The plans have been submitted as well to the Trustees of the Hospitals for Consumptives, the District Police and the State Board of Charities, and no objection of any sort to them now exists that the Board is aware of. In fact they have received most glowing commendation from practically every one who should know what a proper hospital of this sort should be.

IDEAL LOCATION.

Mr. Faxon publicly has announced his willingness to give to the city for this purpose the proposed location. This he also announced to the Recess committee when we were brought before them, and the Board feels that the city now has an ideal location for this hospital as well as an ideal plan.

His Honor ex-Mayor Stone has been a source of the greatest encouragement to the Board in their work and the city should acknowledge to him the impetus which has carried this movement to its present state. Mr. Wright has given freely of his time and suggestions, remaking plan after plan as improvements were indicated and has promptly aided the Board in every manner.

HOSPITAL IN DETAIL.

The proposed hospital consists of a central administration building with a ward on either side, one for male tuberculosis cases, the other for female tuberculosis cases and a covered runway leading back from the administration building to the Contagious wards which are combined in a separate building.

Owing to the danger of fire from the boiler, the kitchen and laundry in the Administration Building, the basement walls and ceiling are to be fireproofed and the ends of the wards adjoining the Administration Building are to be fireproof walls.

The basement contains the main kitchen, wherein is cooked the food for the entire hospital. The food is then hoisted on dumb waiters to the various diet kitchens where it is transferred to dishes belonging to the various wards or dining rooms and the remaining food in their uncontaminated receptacles is returned to the main kitchen. A truck is used to carry this food through the covered runway to the contagious wards where it is sent up on dumb waiters to the wards in the same manner. The kitchen receptacles containing food and ladles cannot in this manner be infected. Each ward or dining room has its own dishes, linen etc.

STERILIZING ROOM.

Infected material which is to be used again is carried to the sterilizing room in sealed bags either by truck from the contagious wards or by a chute from the floor above for material from the Tuberculosis wards. It is then placed in the sterilizer and sterilized, being taken out from the other end of the sterilizer which is in an aseptic room, separated from the septic room where the infected material was placed in the sterilizer, by a solid brick wall. From the aseptic room after sterilization it is taken to the adjoining laundry and washed. Chutes for uninfected material enter the laundry from the floor above.

A dining room is shown in the basement for the hospital help, their food being carried on trays from the kitchen.

Two large store rooms, one for food supplies and one for hospital furniture, etc., with a large refrigerator room and coal pockets complete the basement plan.

SOCIAL HALL.

The first floor of the Administration building contains a large dining and social hall, which with a portable stage and piano will prove an attractive feature of this hospital. A small operating room and office which will be used as a dispensary and laboratory as well, is here located. The nurses dining room is also on this floor and is by its own service room and location absolutely safeguarded from infection.

The second floor of the Administration building is reserved entirely for the nurses and female help of the hospital and is equipped with a well located living room and baths, as well as a large room for matron or head nurse. This floor shows sleeping accommodations for seven.

The top floor is reached by a separate stairway from the lower floor and contains rooms and bath for the male service of the institution. Large fire escapes are provided for each of the two upper floors.

TUBERCULOSIS WARDS.

The Tuberculosis wards are placed as near the administration building as is possible to save steps for nurses and patients. Each section is a separate unit in itself, composed of a large ward which is over two-thirds glass on the southerly side with small high glass windows on its northerly side and which contains ample heating facilities, so that it may be comfortable in winter, particularly in the early morning. The peculiar type of windows and doors used will practically entirely open the south side and the small northerly windows will be open in summer and double sashed in winter.

As the percentage of reported tuberculosis cases is practically three males and two females, the size of these large wards is made accordingly. Each section contains a locker and dressing room where each patient keeps his clothing. Adjoining this is the toilet and bath room, complete even to tooth washing bowls and shower baths.

These two rooms are placed next to the large ward to make them as convenient as possible, and being on the ward floor instead of in the basement they are much more attractive and serve their purpose better.

Between the bathroom and the Administration building is a ward for advanced cases, which is heated and will be kept at a more equable temperature for these cases, and next to this ward is a one bed room for an isolation room or for dying cases. These two rooms are next to the Aministration building to minimize the distance for the nurses as these advanced cases require considerable attention.

The wards will be equipped with wheel beds and the corridors are so arranged that cases may be easily wheeled in their beds onto the large veranda, as well as facilitate their easy removal in case of fire.

CONTAGIOUS BUILDING.

The Contagious building is unique in that scarlet fever, diphtheria and possibly other contagious diseases are cared for on the same floor of a building and five wards can be supervised by one nurse. This is accomplished by having a glass walled room in the centre of the building, from which an unobstructed view can be had by the nurse in charge of every patient in the contagious wards.

As the average monthly number of reported scarlet fever and diphtheria cases is less than eight per month and as less than 50 per cent of these can be reasonably expected to enter our hospital for the treatment we should theoretically receive for care about two cases of scarlet fever and two cases of diphtheria per month for treatment from our city.

This normal monthly average is deceptive however because these two diseases are prevalent usually only in winter and spring. Arrangements in the Contagious wards are therefore made for six beds for each of these two diseases, three in each male and three in each female ward and as most of these cases are children, each ward can easily contain six cribs in an epidemic.

The verandas are large and are built so that in an epidemic they may be glassed in and used as wards without disturbing the administrative features.

The nurses enter the wards through what may be called air locks which are located between the glass observation room and the wards, through double glass sashed doors which tightly close. A current of air is carried from an air inlet below up through each air lock and out through the roof, and each air lock contains a wash bowl and a place for gown and slippers, so that contagion may not be carried from one ward to another.

ECONOMICAL FEATURES.

This is a decidedly economical feature, as one nurse can be used during much of the day and one at night instead of one nurse by day and one nurse at night by each of the wards, and as it may happen that we may have but one case in each side it would be ludicrous to require four nurses for their care.

The Contagious wards are well lighted and well equipped with diet kitchens, baths and locker space, have large verandas with convenient and ample exits for wheeling cases onto verandas or to remove them immediately in case of fire.

Clothes chutes and dumb waiters are conveniently located. A doctor's room with proper toilet and lockers is also provided. Patients coming to the hospital enter from the covered way and if not ambulant are wheeled by truck to their proper bed.

The roadway will run alongside Faxon Park to Kendrick avenue near the head of Phipps street, land for this purpose having been donated by Mr. Faxon.

ICE GATHERING ON SUNDAY

A Second Crop Will Be Necessary to Fill Houses

The ice men are making the most of the cold snap and all of the local firms are housing their crops. As a rule the ice being harvested runs from eight to ten inches in thickness. The cold weather which has continued for a week, made the ice quickly and the continued cold weather has not caused it to thaw any. On the contrary if anything the ice is gradually growing in thickness. However, when ice reaches a certain thickness, it makes slowly. Eight and nine inch ice however is a good thickness to handle and the ice men will be able to make at least one cutting of their ponds.

The Eaton Ice Co. have cut their pond over once and a new crop has formed.

At the Meadow Brook Co. pond at South Quincy, cutting commenced last week and was continued all day Sunday an men are still at work on the pond. The housing of the first cutting of the pond will be completed today or tomorrow and the company are in hopes to be able to make a second cutting later.

At Sheppard & Sons' pond in Braintree the same condition prevails with the ice about the same thickness as at the ponds in Quincy. This makes it certain that there will be no great scarcity of ice the coming summer.

CALL ACCEPTED.

Rev. Albert P. Watson of Franklin N. H., has accepted the call to the Congregational church at Braintree.

Not a Pleasant Surprise.

A man told his daughter that if she learned to cook he would give her a surprise. She learned the art, and he surprised her by discharging the servant girl.

THE Y. M. C. A. DEFEATS TECH

Second Team Loses to Melrose Y. M. C. A. Boys

The Y. M. C. A. teams split even in their games on Saturday night. The Quincy first team won from Tech, '16, by the score of 46 to 26, while the Quincy second team lost to Melrose Y. M. C. A. in an overtime game by the score of 28 to 26.

The first team game was close and exciting all through the first half, the period ending 19 to 11 in Quincy's favor, but in the second half the local players ran up a large score making 27 points to Techs 15. Trask and Price did some fine shooting for Quincy, and Dewson was the only man of the visiting team who seemed in form. This is the third time that Dewson and Trask have lined up against each other, and the Y. M. C. A. man has outscored his rival each time.

The summary:

QUINCY		TECH
Price rf		lb Wylde
		lb Miller
Rich lf		rb DeMerritt
Trask c		c Dewson
Kenn rb		lf Merritt
Parker rb
Melville lb		rf Reycroft

The second team game was a hummer from the start. Melrose brought over a fast and heavy team, composed of players who were experienced in all of the fine points of the game. The first half ended 15 to 13 in the visitor's favor but Quincy came back strong in the last period and soon went into the lead. Melrose tied it up and the score was nip and tuck until the whistle blew for the end of the game. It was found that each team had 25 points and play was resumed until one or other of the teams had scored 2 points. A double foul was called and each basket scored making it 26-26. After about three minutes of play, Wentworth lost Miller and on a long pass from Brock, he dropped the ball into the net for the winning points, final score being 28 to 26.

Thomas and Croucher played best for Quincy while Brock and Wentwork did the best work for the visitors.

HALL SECURED FOR GAMES

Quincy A. A. Basket Ball at Alpha Hall

The Quincy A. A. basket ball team has engaged Alpha hall for the Greater Boston league games.

The central location of the court offers fans a fine opportunity to witness the champions in action and also gives them a wide berth for a further development of the passing game at which they excel.

The first and second teams have been New England champions for two years and last summer competed at the national championships at Chicago, having won honor through their showing.

The first game will be Jan. 29 with the Junior Holy Name Society of Lynn. This date was scheduled for that team and the Pickering Whites of Salem, but the latter has withdrawn from the league.

Owing to previous bookings of the hall all league dates are not available and a revision of the schedule will be necessary. The announcement that Alpha hall had been secured came as a pleasant surprise and is the first definite statement issued by the Quincy A. A. this season.

With it comes word that the first team available players are Dan and Sid Duggan, centre and forward; Joe O'Rourke, forward; Cy O'Rourke, Bernie Boyle, Putt Kelly and Charlie Hebert on the backs.

The second team will be without the services of Bootus Chapman and his brother Millard, and Harmon, but will probably play Manning, Captain Cummings of the football team, and several other men. Scollard and "Bull Moose" Brown may join the squad this season.

Both Nedzo Bennett of the first team who is under suspension and Webb McDonald, who has allowed his registration to expire, will apply for reinstatement.

WOULD BENEFIT THE RAILROADS

President Wilson Seeks to Aid Them by Legislation

REGULATION OF BOND ISSUE

As Well as Elimination of Interlocking Directorates Will Be Considered In Message—Executive Favors Interstate Trade Commission's Idea In Relation to Trust Question

Washington, Jan. 19.—"Helpful" administrative action toward the railroads of the country, an effort to eliminate interlocking directorates and fix heavier criminal penalties for wilful violation of the anti-trust laws, and the conferring of more power for amicable adjustment of difficulties by the department of justice are the principal points forecasted in President Wilson's message to congress which will be read tomorrow.

As the result of these forecasts much interest is centering in the railroad features of the message. They are expected to bring new encouragement to the transportation lines in that efforts will be made by the administration to help the railroads study their "high cost of living" problem and if possible find a way to remedy the difficulties. Regulation of stocks and bonds is also to be recommended, it is understood.

It is believed the president's present intention is to explain clearly in his message the close relation between the prosperity of the country as a whole and the prosperity of the railroads. In other words, he will advocate fair treatment and may emphasize the vast importance of the decision which the commission is now considering.

There is a distinct impression in official circles here that the commission intends to grant the increase. The railroads have presented striking evidence of the falling off in their net revenues during the last three years. The opinion was expressed by the board of arbitration in the recent controversy between conductors and trainmen of the eastern railroads that the railroads should be permitted to increase their rates.

President Wilson will say it is necessary to pass laws to remedy the evil of interlocking directorates and to simplify the methods of procedure against trusts and provide criminal penalties of sufficient force to deter wilful violators of the Sherman law from resorting to reprehensible practices.

Discussion of the trust question has centred about the interstate trade commision idea, which the president is said to favor in some form. The department of justice officials are still inclined to the belief he should be permitted to negotiate with the trusts for bringing about agreements outside of court. They are opposing the proposal to permit individuals to go into court of their own motion and institute anti-trust actions. These officials believe such a provision would lead to additional litigation in the courts and hinder peaceful dissolutions of large combinations—a policy which now finds favor with the department.

TO REMAIN IN CONGRESS

Curley Declares He Cannot Desert the Immigration Bill

Washington, Jan. 19.—Congressman Curley declared last night that he had no intention of resigning his post as congressman when he takes up his duties as mayor of Boston.

He declares the leaders of the fight against the immigration bill have requested that he stay and take part in directing the fight against the bill and that he intends to do so. He says he has made many promises to his constituents that he would stay in the immigration bill fight to a finish and he cannot now desert. At present he does not intend to resign his seat in congress and may not resign at all.

Wealth of Country Storekeeper Unearthed by Administrator

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 19.—John C. Koons, a grocer in the town of Dundee, who died a few days ago, was known to possess considerable wealth, but none of it could be found when the administrator took charge of the estate.

In taking stock of Koons' grocery store, however, the administrator discovered tucked away in barrels, boxes, old crockery and rice bins, cash, notes and mortgages amounting to $40,000. The search is being continued.

NEW RELIGION A "REHASH"

How Twentieth Century Christianity Is Viewed by Baptist Editor

Boston, Jan. 19.—"Dr. Eliot's Twentieth Century Christianity is a rehash of the heresies of the ages," says Rev. Dr. Merriam, managing editor of The Watchman-Examiner, the Baptist weekly of New England.

"It strikes us that Dr. Eliot, who is also editor of 'Five Feet of Books,' should be a little modest about suggesting a new religion," says Merriam. "However, there is not much that is new about Dr. Eliot's 'Twentieth Century Christianity.' It will not turn the world upside down."

Present day customs with their fads and follies and the attempt to invent "new religions" were assailed by Cardinal O'Connell yesterday afternoon at the cathedral of the Holy Cross.

While no names were mentioned in connection with the latter subject it was plain that the inference was to the work of Dr. Eliot. The attempts were classed as "all sham," and the creed announced as "a conceited notion of their importance" by the inventor.

CHURCH SOCIAL AND DANCE

To Be Given Weekly by Episcopal Church at Hartford

Hartford, Jan. 19.—So successful was a preliminary or experimental german Saturday night that it was announced at St. Thomas' Episcopal church in this city yesterday that hereafter the church would each Saturday night give a social and dance, and had engaged professional instructors to teach the modern steps as they properly should be danced.

Rev. Franklin H. Miller, the rector, says the idea is to teach proper dancing if the present dance craze must continue, and it will also serve as an opportunity for young people to meet, with the possibility of happy marriages resulting.

KASSO NO LONGER IN CZAR'S CABINET

Russian Jews and Educational Circles Are Rejoicing

St. Petersburg, Jan. 19.—There is great rejoicing in educational circles all over Russia owing to the resignation of Minister of Public Instruction Kasso, who recently expelled 1200 Jewish students from Kiev university following the Beilis trial.

Besides this action, Kasso has done more than any one man in Russia toward preventing the growth of education, the powerful weapon so feared by the czar.

The reason for Kasso's resignation is the public comment caused by his acquaintance with a St. Petersburg society woman. A divorce suit is to follow. Meanwhile the czar has accepted his resignation.

O'Brien accepted the challenge and resigned, and presents himself for re-election. He declared his readiness to meet any member of the Irish party as the opposing candidate, to decide whether the home rule bill as it now stands is acceptable to the Irish people.

DRAIN OUT BLOOD, PURIFY, PUT BACK

Surgeons of Johns Hopkins Perform Marvelous Feat.

HEART ACTION UNDISTURBED

Every Drop of Fluid Removed From Body of a Dog and Run Through Fifty Foot Coil of Tubes—Mysterious Force, Not Weight or Convolutions, Gives Brain Power, Says Dr. Mellus.

Three doctors from Johns Hopkins university of Baltimore, by actual demonstration on a living animal, showed members of the Federation of American Societies For Experimental Biology, in session in Philadelphia, that it was possible to remove every drop of blood from a living animal, clean the blood of its impurities and return it to the animal without interrupting the heart beats.

The demonstration was made on a dog. The demonstrators were Professor J. J. Abel and two of his colleagues, Dr. L. G. Rountree and Dr. B. B. Turner, all of Johns Hopkins. In their experiment they had every drop of blood out of the dog's body and coursing through a coil of tubes whose connected length measured nearly fifty feet.

Onlookers Amazed.

Scientists who watched the demonstration in wonder saw the entire circulation of an animal going on in glass tubes outside the animal's body and blood propelled through the tubes by the action of the dog's heart, which never stopped beating while they watched it.

At the same time, by the use of a salt solution, through which the blood was coursing, the animal's blood was being purified of sugar, urea and all diffusable materials. By varying the solution and sending the blood through chemicals of different sorts, other kinds of poisons can be removed from the blood by the same process.

Professor Abel and his colleagues would venture no prediction as to a practical application of their method.

Scientists who witnessed the demonstration, however, did not conceal their enthusiasm over the channel of opportunity opened up by the Baltimore men.

"If this method of diffusion removes urea from the blood," said one, "it can be used as a cure for uraemia. By varying the chemical the same process can be used to remove acetone from the blood, the poison associated with nephritis."

May Remove Bichloride.

Dr. W. Salant, head of the federal public health service at Washington, made this comment:

"This apparatus is positively the newest thing for cleansing the blood. It is the most interesting thing in this convention. It may be possible, though I have not tested this machine, to remove bichloride of mercury from the blood."

Dr. A. J. Carlson of the University of Chicago demonstrated on himself the efficiency of a hunger testing machine, which is his own invention.

Dr. Carlson defined hunger as a sensation which arises in the stomach, while appetite, he explained, is a nervous phenomenon of the brain. He swallowed a small cigar shaped rubber balloon which had been fitted with long rubber tubes, inflated the balloon in his stomach through the tubes and then attached the latter to sensitized paper.

Hunger, he said, caused the muscles of the stomach to grip the balloon and drive out the air which registered the amount of hunger on the sensitized paper.

Upsets Old Brain Theories.

In a recent paper read before the American Physiological society of the University of Pennsylvania by Dr. E. Linden Mellus of Johns Hopkins university he contradicted the theory accepted by many scientists that the intellectual prowess of human beings depends to a large extent on the convolutions and size of the brain. His announcement was assumed to have opened up an entirely new field for scientific research.

"The theory that the weight of a brain has anything to do with its efficiency," Dr. Mellus said, "was of course exploded long ago. The later theory, generally accepted, that intricate convolutions were a sign of brain power or efficiency seems based rather on the desire for anatomic explanation than on any procurable facts. I have investigated countless brains of all classes of individuals, and I have yet to meet with anything that would bear out this theory."

The results of investigations, said the physician, convinced him that some mysterious force not yet found or defined and as strange as the nerve impulse itself animated the brain cells, changed their formation and their relations and thus made for or against mental efficiency regardless of the size, weight or outward appearance of the brain itself.

PICTURESQUE MARCH ENDED

Mexicans Reach Marfa, Tex., After Intense Suffering

WARDS OF THE GOVERNMENT

Six Generals Among the More Than Three Thousand Beaten Federal Soldiers Are Shorn of Swords—One Baby Born and Several Wounded Men Die During Trip

Marfa, Tex., Jan. 19.—Footsore, ragged, almost famished from their three days' march on foot of sixty-seven miles over a wind-swept mountain road, the 3300 Mexican federal soldiers and generals routed by the rebels from Ojinaga, Mex., with 1057 women and about 300 children, arrived within a few miles of Marfa, whence they are to be transported by train to Fort Bliss at El Paso.

The remnant of the Huerta army, which sought asylum in this country rather than face possible extermination by the rebels, will be formally interned at Fort Bliss as wards of the government. They are to be held there indefinitely. It will be the first time the American army has been called upon to shelter, feed and clothe an entire division of a foreign army, which includes six disarmed generals.

None of those in the unique caravan of Mexican soldiers, women, children, horses, burros and dogs, was more visibly affected on coming within sight of Marfa than General Mercado, Huerta's former military chief, who ordered the evacuation of Ojinaga.

Mercado was confessedly humiliated, not only at the defeat of his army and the necessity of his flight to foreign soil, but also because of a report from Mexico City that he would be courtmartialed should he return to his native country.

Besides General Mercado, and mingling with the United States cavalrymen, who acted as guards, marched the federal Generals Castro, Aduna, Landa, Orpinal and Romero, all shorn of their swords.

The picturesque march abounded with incident. The birth of a child, the death of several wounded soldiers, the search for water in the desert, the constant straggling away from the line of march and the rounding up again of scores of the refugees were some of the difficulties with which the United States cavalry, commanded by Major McNamee, had to contend with. The Mexicans guarded virtually as prisoners outnumbered the escorting American soldiers ten to one.

Viewed from a hilltop the oncoming army as it zigzagged through the mountain passes and reached backward into the dusty distance ten miles away was a picture of exhaustion, although the prospect of soon reaching the railway and ample supplies of rations seemed to revive fresh courage.

Since they were routed from Ojinaga by General Villa's rebel forces and compelled to cross the border into the United States at Presidio, Tex., eight days ago, the Mexican soldiers have had only scant food supplies.

Three camps had been established along the road to Marfa, but these camps were supplied with limited rations, because all foodstuffs and water had to be carried by wagon from Marfa. Many of the foreigners were poorly clad and without blankets, so their suffering at night was intense.

Soldies and civilians who have been through battles, endured exposure, hunger and misery, and turned their backs on their own country, look forward hopefully to life in a new and strange land.

SEVENTY DAYS IN COMA

Woman at Times Retained Mental Faculties While Sleeping

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 18.—After lying in a state of coma for seventy days, in spite of the determined efforts of Boston specialists to arouse her, Mrs. Emily P. Eagan died at the home of her sister, Mrs. A. P. Harriman, in this city.

A remarkable feature of the case was that while she slept Mrs. Eagan apparently at times retained her mental faculties. She could not speak and her food was fed to her through a tube.

RAISED ON ALFALFA

Hog Weighing Nearly Eight Hundred Pounds Breaks Record

Alton, Ills., Jan. 19.—Fred Minturt of West Alton marketed the biggest hog ever sold in Alton. The animal was a few pounds short of weighing 800 pounds, and expert stockmen said that the animal could have carried 200 pounds more weight on its giant frame without trouble.

Minturt said he had raised the hog on alfalfa, and that he had kept a close account of it, the animal eating a ton of alfalfa.

Young Wife Dies From Burns

Beverly, Mass., Jan. 19.—After five days of intense suffering, Mrs. Blanche Jacquith, 18, died last night from burns received while rescuing her nephew from a fire at the home of her parents. The child tipped over an oil stove and Mrs. Jacquith's clothes caught fire.

WHAT 1914 MAN WILL LOOK LIKE

Designers' Decree Is That His Clothes Fit Tight.

RADICAL CHANGES COMING

Even the Conventional Dress Suit Is to Undergo Transformation — Overcoats For Next Fall Will Be Startling Horse Blanket Creations With Wild Designs.

Mere man is about to undergo a radical transformation in his style of clothes. It has all been arranged for by the National Association of Designers of men's wearing apparel. That body of sartorial experts in convention assembled at Baltimore this month, after due and weighty deliberation, arrived at some interesting conclusions.

The one conclusion of these arbiters of man's fashions which stands out above all others is that suits must be tight fitting. Just as little cloth as possible will be used to frame the manly figure. It is not exaggerating to say that the suits of mere man, 1914 model, will cling to his form like tights to the pony ballet.

Artificial Shoulders to Go.

"Clothes au naturel"—that's the final dictum of the designers. Away with padding that tricks the eye. A man to be in fashion will have to stand or fall in his little tight suit and the shoulders that nature has given him.

But there's one saving grace about the tight suits which the designers have decreed. The feelings of the tall, thin man and the short, fat man will be spared to the extent that he can choose quiet color effects and meet with fashion's demand in that respect; in fact, there is to be a decided leaning toward sober shades of cloth.

But the overcoats to be worn next fall will make up for the quiet tones of the suits. Wild designs are to run riot in overcoats in horse blanket effects and with batwing sleeves on the kimono order. They will have wide lapels extending away down the front and strap loops through which to thrust the arms.

In their determination to envelop man in the smallest possible amount of cloth the designers have even extended their activities to the sacred dress suit. That, too, has been abbreviated. It is short and form fitting.

The designers have imposed an edging more than an inch wide on the lapel, practically dividing the lapel with a line of galune.

Here is the official rendering of the innovation: "Grosgrain facing an inch and a quarter wide, piped with three-sixteenth inch silk galune." The buttons are of black polished ivory.

Another model has jet buttons with grosgrain facing on the lapel and edging of galune.

GOOD SKATING.

The young people have had plenty of opportunity during the past week to enjoy those Christmas skates and they have made the most of it. Unfortunately there are not many ponds near City Square that are available for skating, Butler's pond being about the only one. The young people have scraped the snow from this and every day and evening the ice is covered with skaters. The meadow at the corner of Hancock and Beale streets has also been flowed and is now frozen over and is much in use. The best skating pond, however, is that on the Fore River basin on DesMoines road, but this is too far away except for those living in Ward Two. Skating has also been allowed on the Meadow Brook ice pond. Many of the young people in the West Quincy section have been able to enjoy the skating on the Cunningham pond at Milton.

HOLY NAME SOCIETIES

Attend Union Services at St. John's Church

Members of the Holy Name Societies of three parishes attended the union services in St. John's church the mother Catholic church of the city, on Sunday afternoon. All of the priests of Quincy united in the observance of the feast day which consisted of solemn high vespers, a sermon and Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. The hymn to the Holy Name, but recently composed by Cardinal O'Connell was sung by the entire membership and the others who attended.

Rev. Fr. John P. Cuffe, pastor of the Sacred Heart church at Atlantic and the dean of Quincy priests, was the celebrant of vespers. Rev. Fr. John J. Casey and Rev. Fr. Walter A. Quinland, curates at St. John's church were deacon and sub deacon respectively, and Rev. Fr. John J. Coan, pastor of the church was master of ceremonies.

Rev. Fr. Thomas B. McCoy, who succeeded Rev. Fr. Henry T. Grady as pastor of St. Mary's church, and a former diocesan director of the Holy Name Societies preached the sermon. Although suffering from the effects of a severe cold he waxed eloquent on the significance of the observance.

The society having the largest membership present was from St. Mary's church. Headed by Father McCoy and President Martin A. King they marched to Quincy. The long line of 450 young and old men was one of the finest religious demonstrations the city ever had and the inspiration given to non members will have a lasting and abiding effect.

The society of the Sacred Heart parish, numbering about 150, was transported in special cars to the Walsh corner and they marched from there to the church, headed by Father Cuffe and William Lavery, its president.

The society of St. John's church was seated in the church when the other two arrived, and promptly at 3 o'clock the procession of altar boys and clergy proceeded from the sacristy to the altar and the services were begun.

At 8 o'clock mass Sunday morning all of the members had received holy communion. It is estimated that aside from the 800 members that participated in the observance of the feast day as members of Holy Name Society that fully 2500 other Catholics also received holy communion at the three churches.

The ushers at the church were Frank Avery, James Grant, A. A. McDonnell, Robert T. Foy, Michael Sullivan, Michael Sweeney, David Crotty, John Guthroe, Frank Foy, David Dewey, Joseph Purpura and William Higgins. The Gregorian chant was sung by the regular choir under the direction of John Mahon, organist. They were assisted by members of choirs of other churches of the city.

Father McCoy took as his text, "Go therefore, teach ye all nations, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." He spoke of the religious indifference and roundly scored the tolerant beliefs and attitudes of many people. He said in part:

"The words of the text were addressed by our Divine Lord to the Apostles. He had been their teacher. They had listened to the words of heavenly wisdom from his sacred lips. They are the mission to go forth and teach all nations of the world to observe all things, whatsoever I have commanded you.

"They have a special significance for you. Today while you witness this glorious sight in St. John's church in Quincy, a scene that would gladden any Christian heart, you must realize we are only a small part; that this morning 40,000 souls, free from sin and with hearts aglow with the fire of divine love knelt in fervent prayer and received their Lord in Holy communion.

"Men of the Holy Name Society, remember this commission of the Divine Lord was not restricted to the Apostles, it was and has been laid down upon everyone of Christian faith and if all are bound to teach the gospel of Jesus Christ in its entirety this duty especially devolves upon you men of the Holy Name Society. You must express your belief in words, but especially by the potent influence of life in perfect accord with Jesus Christ.

"One of the most popular and at the same time one of the most pernicious practices is the religious indifference of the times. It prevails to a large extent in the world today.

You cannot make any compromise with unbelief, nor can you select what you will believe or reject. Christ has commanded you to observe all things. In your moral life you cannot adopt two codes. You must obey the entire moral law, both its precepts and its counsels, for Christ has said observe all these whatsoever I have commanded.

The theory about religion of the present day is the theory which teaches that a man can be quite indifferent to what creed he professes providing outwardly he is not at variance with the laws of the community, and even when these are criticised society readily condones the crime and welcomes the unrepentant transgressor.

This is the indifferentism which prevails to an alarming extent in the world today. It is what some call broad mindedness or liberalism in religion. We must be on our guard lest we become contaminated with its attractiveness, dangerous and absolutely false principles.

Never become contaminated by it. Show the world that you live in a special way under the spiritual guide of Jesus Christ, that you revere his sacred name, the only name by which you can be saved. The good soldier loves his general and the general loves his men.

The preacher then went on to show that religious indifference is contrary to the dictates of human reason and to divine revelation.

Membership in the society he said protects its members against every new "ism" in which the distorted intellect of men may evolve. "You are not left to be carried about as the apostle of the Gentile said, by every wind of doctrine. You are protected by the loving arm of Gods inevitable church, which church can go back centuries after centuries until we find ourselves kneeling with Peter at the feet of Jesus Christ.

Do not be contaminated by the religious indifferentism of the world around you. The truth is yours, Love it, depend it, practice it. This is what God demands of you, this is what the world expects of you and what the Holy Name Society wonderfully aids you in accomplishing.

Membership in the Holy Name Society requires that you receive holy communion at regular intervals. It means human nature strengthened and elevated by the presence of God.

"Without the aid of the society men are liable to grow careless, and in their own weakness the inevitable result is sin. Love the society. Your general is Almighty God himself, he who has given you all that you possess. Be loyal and devoted to him and be assured if you are faithful and devoted soldiers he will not be unmindful of you, and I ask you as you kneel in the presence of your divine general upon this altar to solemnly promise him that you will be faithful to the meetings and the communions of your societies. These the providential means that God offers you to combat the religious indifference of the world, and if you live up to these promises he does not ask too much of you.

Then you will prove that you are loyal and devoted soldiers to this army of Christ and having proven yourself such you may confidently expect from your divine general the reward, not the perishable reward that the world offers you, but an eternal one, the possession of him who has guided and strengthened and led you to victory that will last for eternity.

MRS. M. ALONZO MINCHIN.

The funeral service of Mrs. M. Alonzo Minchin, nee Alice S. Gould, formerly of Quincy, was held at her late home, 255 Middle street, Braintree, Sunday afternoon at one o'clock. Rev. D. Roy Freeman, pastor of All Souls' church, officiated and the singing was by the church quartet. Their selections, were "Rock of Ages," "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere" and "Lead Kindly Light." Flowers in abundance were beautifully arranged, occupying two sides of the parlor. There was a large attendance of relatives, neighbors and friends. FINDS CANCEROUS FISH IN STATE HATCHERIES.

Disease Transmitted by Salmon and Trout to Dogs and Rats.

After six years' study Dr. H. H. Gaylord of Buffalo, director of the New York State Institute For the Study of Malignant Diseases, has submitted a report to Governor Glynn in which he sounds a note of warning provoked by the discovery that fish in the hatcheries of the state, in common with the fish in nearly all the other fish cultural stations in this country where species of the salmon family are kept for breeding purposes, are more or less infected with cancerous diseases. The salmon family includes the various varieties of trout, so popular with the sportsman angler.

"How to check the spread of this disease among fish is the most serious and important problem in fish culture," says Dr. Gaylord. "If the artificial propagation of trout is not to be deliberately abandoned, research will have to be instituted immediately to determine how fish culture may be carried on without the propagation of the disease also."

The disease, according to the report has been transmitted successfully from the malignant growths in fishes to dogs and rats. Dr. Gaylord expresses the opinion that human beings susceptible to cancerous afflictions would acquire goiter were they to drink water coming from hatcheries, all of which undoubtedly contain the infected agent which is the cause of this disease.

In wild fish Dr. Gaylord has found specimens infected with cancer in only three instances. He has observed the disease in sixteen specimens of salmon The mouth and gills of an infected fish are affected first. Eventually the disease attacks muscles, bone and cartilage. One tumor may embody all the various types of the disease.

SHAVE, SHINE, BED—5 CENTS.

Hotel Life on a Nickel a Day at the Dawes Hostelry In Chicago.

The latest innovation at the Rufus F. Dawes "nickel" hotel in Chicago is a barberless barber shop. Every man who enters for a night's lodging is welcome to a free shave and a shoe shine—only there is no barber to administer the shave nor a porter to supply the shine.

Upon applying to the clerk a guest will receive a razor. There is no shaving soap nor brush. William D. Taylor, manager of the hostelry, has discovered that an adequate lather can be raised with the ordinary soap supplied in the washrooms. Shoe brushes and polish also are furnished each applicant without cost.

Charles G. Dawes, founder of the institution, is responsible for the innovation. While visiting the hotel he noticed that most all of the guests wore ragged beards or heavy growths on their faces. He suggested that the men be supplied with razors, in order that they might start out in quest of a job in the morning with clean faces.

MARTIAN ICE CAP FORMING.

Lowell Observatory Reports Curious Phenomenon at South Pole.

The Lowell observatory has noted that the Martian south polar ice cap is beginning to form, in the same curious manner as in 1911, by the deposits of hoarfrost over certain regions in latitude 60 degrees, longitude 30 degrees, and latitude 58 degrees, longitude 55 degrees.

This is quite unlike the aspect of the snow around the north pole, which shows a solid field of white, now in process of melting at its edge.

An Official Defense of the Barn Owl.

The department of agriculture is trying to educate ranchmen who shoot the barn owl on sight as to its value in destroying pocket gophers. Gophers destroy orchards and garden produce. Ranchmen in California and other states have attributed dead trees to this blight. Some of these trees are valued at $100 apiece.

PROTEST MEETING

Finnish Socialists Raise Funds For the Miners

The Finnish Socialist club arranged a protest meeting for Sunday night in behalf of the Calumet Copper Mine Strikers. The Finnish Temperance Association and members of the Congregational church of Buckley street took part making the meeting very sucessful. The hall was packed to the doors, containing over 600.

The Socialist Band "Hunkkaja" and the "National" band furnished music. There was speaking by State Secretary Fred B. Chase of the Socialist party in English and by J. A. Paaktari, secretary of the Finnish Socialist organization of Massachusetts in Finnish, also choir singing by the Finnish choir.

A collection was taken to help out the struggling strikers and their families which netted $141.43. Collecting has been going on for a couple of weeks and the committee expect to get over $300 in collections.

After the meeting, lunch was served at the Finnish socialist hall on Arthur street, where most of the goods were furnished free of cost by the two co-operative stores at Brewers corner.

At the meeting resolutions were adopted denouncing the methods of the owners of the mines and State officials in trying to break up the strike of the copper miners. Also demanding a Congressional investigation of the strike and the government ownership of the mines. These resolutions are to be sent to the President and the our Congressmen.

She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Robena A. Mitchell, Helen G. and Edith M. Atkins, and one son, Herbert S. Atkins. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

.... SCHOOL DISMISSED.

The Coddington school building which was badly flooded Thursday night by the bursting of the fire supply main in the upper part of the building, opened again this morning. As some of the wood work had not thoroughly dried out however, and the building was still somewhat damp, it was demmed inadvisable for the children to remain and the school was again closed. The most of the water was in the halls but little getting into the school rooms. A hot fire has been kept in the building since Friday and the walls were well dried out but not sufficient to be considered safe for the children.

CLAN MACGREGOR SERVICE.

The funeral of John Garmory was held from his home at 42 Rodman street Sunday afternoon and was well attended by relatives and friends. The floral remembrances were many. Services were conducted by Rev. J. A. Matheson of the First Presbyterian church and the Clan MacGregor service, of which society the deceased was a member, was read by Chief Angus D. Martin. The body was escorted to Mt. Wollaston cemetery, where interment took place, by a delegation of Clansmen.

DID NOT LIVE FOR TRIAL

E. C. Loud, Who Murdered His Wife, Dead at Hospital

Eugene C. Loud of South Weymouth who cut his own throat, after murdering his wife, two Sundays ago, died at the City Hospital this morning at 7.35. Sunday the surgeons who have been attending Loud at the hospital found that the wound in his neck was healing on the outside, but was not healing on the inside, and an operation was determined upon to save his life. This was performed by Dr. George L. Tobey of Boston, assisted by local surgeons. The operation was pronounced a success and his recovery was looked for. Complications set in however, and he passed away.

The death of Loud will save the county a large expense, which would have been necessary for a trial.

The inquest on the case was started in the Quincy court last week but was not completed, having been adjourned until this week, and it was planned to arraign Loud in court as soon as possible.

He was token to the Quincy City Hospital by the police immediately after the murder and was apparently doing well and on the road to recovery when it was discovered that the wound was not healing on the inside.

The murder and attempted suicide occurred about two weeks ago, when without warning Loud slashed his wife's throat with a razor, causing almost instant death, and then turned the weapon on himself in an effort to take his own life.

BODY MISSING.

The body of August Anderson of Brockton, who is thought to have been drowned in Quincy bay while on a fishing trip, has never been recovered although a strict watch has been kept by people of Houghs Neck.

The boat which Anderson had hired on No. 28 from J. L. Harvey was found drifting off Peddock's island by Portugese fishermen. The men at the Life Saving station at Point Allerton, J. L. Harvey and others that frequent the bay, have been looking for the body but have picked up no trace of it.

—After running for two weeks, the Lorgnette, a twice-a-week newspaper published by the class in journalism at the Spokane Lewis and Clark high school, died a sudden death at the hands of the faculty because the editors took so much interest in the newspaper work that they promised to register "flunks" in their classes. The Lorgnette also put an appreciable crimp in the school's monthly magazine, as the students much preferred writing live stories from day to day to preparing dry, lack-newsy stuff once a month.

The Epworth League service at 6 o'clock was conducted by the new president, Mr. Roberts, who read and commented on the League Pledge, and showed how every member by co-operation could help in the work of the organization.

There was a short song service at 7 o'clock and special music by the choir and Miss Holbrook. Dr. E. R. He spoke of how to obtain the greatest efficiency out of the human body by observing proper rules for its care.

Work is necessary and should be done under healthful conditions and in a happy frame of mind. Rest should be taken regularly, it would be a fine thing if the day could be divided into thirds, with eight hours each, for work, play and sleep. Exercise aside from the regular work should bring into use the muscles which are not exercised in the work and taken in the open air when possible. Water is essential both internally and externally and food must be properly cooked, avoiding too much meat and sugar and taken in reasonable quantities."

Vol. 29 No. 17 QUINCY MASS. TUESDAY EVENING JANUARY 20, 1914 PRICE TWO CENTS

ALMOST A CLEAN SWEEP OF OFFICIALS AT CITY HALL

MOSES L. BROWN NAMED FOR COMMISSIONER

Gustave B. Bates Will Be New Chairman of Board of Assessors

W. S. Pinkham for City Solicitor and Faxon Billings for Chief Engineer of Fire Department

With one swish of the broom, Mayor Miller has, with one or two exceptions swept City Hall clean of the officials who served under Mayor Stone for the past two years, and after Feb. 1, many new faces will be seen in the various offices. Thus he has carried out the prediction that there would be a clean sweep.

The exceptions, or perhaps it might be said those who have weathered the storm are City Clerk Emery L. Crane, Water Front Commissioner Frank Fessenden Crane, and City Engineer Ezekiel C. Sargent. The first two were reappointed but no appointment was made to the last office, and it is rumored that the Mayor intends to abolish this office, but City Engineer Sargent will be allowed to finish out his term of office.

Then there are some of the present officials on administrative boards who will remain.

It is rumored that the two remaining members on the Board of Assessors are to be removed and two new men appointed to these places, in face of the fact that it was the intention of the City Charter that this should be a continuous board.

The greatest plum, as far as salary goes is the office of Commissioner of Public Works which goes to Moses L. Brown of Wollaston.

COMMISSIONER BROWN.

Moses L. Brown the new Commissioner of Public Works, was born in Scituate, in 1877. Shortly after graduating from the High school of that town he entered the employ of the Engineering department of the Massachusetts Highway Commission and after spending four years in the surveying department, was put on construction as resident engineer in charge of road building in western Massachusetts.

He left the Highway Commission in 1902 to take a position with the Boston Transit Commission, remaining with them for seven years, during the construction of the East Boston tunnel and the Washington Street subway, as concrete inspector and draughtsman.

In 1909, desiring to see the business from the contractor's standpoint, Mr. Brown worked with the H. P. Nawn Contracting Company as concrete foreman. At the starting of the Cambridge subway he entered the employ of the Boston Elevated Railway Co., Bureau of Elevated and Subway construction, as inspector on the Dana Hill tunnel station. At the completion of the tunnel he spent six months in various factories in Ohio and Western Pennsylvania as inspector of materials for the Elevated.

On returning he had charge of the construction of the Kendall Square surface station and connections.

He returned to the Massachusetts Highway Commission the latter part of 1911 as resident engineer in southeastern Massachusetts and the Cape, which position he still holds.

He has lived in Quincy since 1908. He is a member of the Massachusetts inspector Association, and of the Konohasset lodge A. F. and A. M., Cohasset.

CHIEF ENGINEER BILLINGS.

Faxon Billings the newly appointed chief of the Fire Department is a Quincy boy having been born May 28, 1866. He has been a member of the fire department for 21 years, five of which were as a call man and 16 as a permanent man. For the past 12 years he has been the captain at the station of Combination 2 at Atlantic. He served for five years as a member of Co. K 5th regiment when that company was located at Braintree, and for nine years as a member of Troup D of the Roxbury Horse Guards, during a part of which time he was riding instructor of the troop. He retired from the troop with the rang of sergeant.

He has always taken a deep interest in fire department matters and it is stated that during his days off it has been his custom to spend the day at some station of the Boston fire department getting points, and on account of his interest had a pass which permitted him inside the lines at a Boston fire and also to ride on the apparatus responding to alarms.

CITY SOLICITOR PINKHAM.

Walter S. Pinkham the new City Solicitor, is almost too well known to need any introduction to the people of Quincy, for he has served the city as a member of the City Council for a number of years, a part of the time as its president. He also served on some of the administrative boards. Mr. Pinkham was born in Cambridgeport Aug. 21, 1865, coming to Wollaston in the spring of 1870. He received his education in the public schools of Quincy, the Adams Academy and Harvard, graduating in 1887 as a P. B. K. man. He then entered the Harvard law school and in 1890 he received the degree of A. M. and L. L. B. That year he was admitted to practice.

His first public position was as a member of the City Council from Ward Five serving in the years 1895, 1896, 1897, 1898 and 1899. During the year 1898 he presided over the deli-

OFFICIAL FAMILY MAYOR'S OWN CHOICE

Mayor Miller had little in the way of news to give out this morning. He had no comment to make on any of the gentlemen selected for his official family other than to say that the men were his own choice.

Incidentally he said that he had lost the friendship of one of his supporters in the recent campaign, James S. Wall who had withdrawn his friendship for the reason that a certain man was not appointed. In regard to this man, whose name the Mayor did not mention, Mayor Miller said that he had been visited by delegations of citizens both for and against this official and that he had personally looked into the matter, and made his decision from what he had found. He was emphatic in his statement that he had not been dictated to in the appointments made.

In regard to the office of City Treasurer he said that Mr. Curtis probably did not know that he was to be appointed as he had not consulted with him in regard to the office.

He further said that he had intended to announce the appointment of a member of the Board of Registrars but he had found it necessary to consult the City Solicitor in regard to the matter owing to certain provisions of the law. Under this ruling it was impossible to appoint an enrolled Progressive to the board. The Mayor however did not intimate whom he had in mind to appoint to the position.

His Honor appeared to be in a happy frame of mind this morning, and doubtless felt much relieved that the appointments were off his mind and that he would be relieved of many callers, who had been camping at his office door for the past two weeks in the interest of this man or that.

VACANCY DECLARED IN CITY COUNCIL

Alexander Cowe Made an Able Argument But Law Was Against Him

Council on Record Against Extension of Civil Service

The City Council chamber was packed with citizens Monday night at the first regular meeting of the City Council since Inauguration day. Not only was every available seat on the floor of the chamber taken but the balcony was packed as well and as many more stood. Interest was of course centered in appointments of the City officials. Every member of the City Council was present at roll call and the appointments came the very first thing. They came in the form of a communication from Mayor Miller.

For some reason unknown to the public the appointment of members of the Board of Health was held up at the last minute. The names of the new Board appeared in the list given to the newspapers on Saturday but they were withdrawn before the communication was forwarded to the City Council. It was also noticed that no appointment was made to the office of City Engineer, and rumor has it that this office is to be abolished, and put in charge of the Commissioner of Public Works. The complete list of appointments is given in another column.

MINOR APPOINTMENTS.

Communications were received from the Mayor making the following minor appointments:

As constables, Charles H. Johnson and John Stuart. Confirmed.

As public weighers, Arthur Sylvester, Algot Bartholdson and Ezra Decelle. Confirmed.

QUINCY POINT BRIDGE.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from the United States Engineers office requesting the use of the Council Chamber on Jan. 21, for a public hearing on complaints as to the operation of the draw in the Quincy Point bridge. The use of the Council Chamber was granted.

TEMPORARY LOAN.

A communication was received from the Mayor recommending the passage of a temporary loan order, for an amount not exceeding $500,000. Laid on the table until later when Councilman Bailey offered an order for that amount. Referred to Finance Committee.

WOODWARD MANAGER.

On ballot, Richard R. Freeman was unanimously elected as a member of the Board of Managers of the Woodward Fund and Property.

SUBWAY WANTED.

Councilman Ross presented a petition from residents of Ward 3, that land be acquired near the corner of Federal avenue and Quincy street extension for a subway beneath the railroad tracks or for an overhead bridge. Referred to Committee on Streets.

PETITIONS.

A petition was received from the Telephone Co., for attachments. Granted.

Petitions were received from the Telephone Co., for a location for poles and for permission to lay underground conduits on Franklin street and Independence avenue, and from the Electric Light Co., for a location for poles on Bennington street. Laid on the table until later when Councilman Gilliatt offered an order for a public hearing Feb. 2. Adopted.

Petitions were received for the apportionment of sidewalk assessments. Referred to Finance Committee.

A petition for the acceptance of the unaccepted part of Hamilton street was referred to the Committee on Streets.

An application from William G. Nash for a hackney carriage license was laid on the table until later when it was granted.

A petition of the Central Garage for a license to keep and sell gasoline was received and laid on the table until later when an order for a public hearing Feb. 2 was adopted.

VACANCY IN COUNCIL.

A public hearing was held at 8 o'clock on the question of the eligibility of Alexander J. Cowe to serve as a member of the City Council from Ward Three.

Mr. Cowe, speaking in his own behalf made a good impression. He said that he always considered that a naturalized citizen was entitled to all the rights and privileges. In looking over the matter he had come to the conclusion that he was entitled to a seat under the Constitution of the United States. The vital question of citizenship was concerned in this mat-

THE APPOINTMENTS.

It is very unfortunate for the city that there are so many changes year by year in the department officials. Few of the supporters of Mayor Miller desired such a sweeping change as his honor has announced. Some very efficient officials are dismissed for no particular cause, and it is doubtful if any improvement will result. However the voters accept the verdict graciously and hope for the best. Mayor Miller and his official family will have the support of the Daily Ledger, and the people generally, because we believe in working for the best interests of the city.

The reappointment of City Clerk Crane and ater Front Commissioner Crane were merited, and it would have been a mistake to remove them. Evidently the name "Crane" looks good to the Mayor.

Some of the appointees have had experience in the same offices in past years, and there will be no anxiety about the city treasurer and tax collector.

Chief Enginer, Faxon Billings has had long experience in the Quincy fire department and has made it a study, and should make good. Walter L. Pinkham should also make one of the best city solicitors the city has ever had.

Commissioner Brown is unknown generally, but comes well recommended. If he does as well as his predecessor, the taxpayers will be pleased.

Another new man in public life is Overseer Perry Green, but he is a taxpayer and people are willing to give him a trial.

Probably the greatest criticism comes on the selection for Principal Assessor. Mr. Bates has many good ideas but others are too rodical. Much depends on the other two members of the board. At present the other members are Wellington W. Mitchell of Ward Three and Eben Stocker of Ward Six, but it is rumored that other men are slated for their places. Good men are needed on the board of Assessors, and the city should be willing to pay better salaries that strong men may be secured. It is perhaps the most important department of the city.

THE APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Though the proposed anti-trust laws now have the spot light in Congress, the regular appropriation bills come home quite as close to where people really live. The correspondents do not mention them much, unless representatives become belligerent, but the money-spending of our legislators should not escape with this slight scrutiny.

Much is being said at Washington, and it is good talk, about the need for economy. But one should remember that a sure way to get applause in in Congress is to demand economy, and also that a sure way of being defeated for re-election is to refuse to vote for appropriations that help your own district.

Every one laughs at the absurd duplication of needless army posts, for which the United States pays a heavy bill. Yet if the appropriation for a single one of these posts is cut out, Congress is flooded with petitions and letters of protest from boards of trade, mayors, governors, city councils and citizens.

The river and harbor act of 1919 contained appropriations for 296 congressional districts out of 391. It was a marvel of pork distribution. It is an easy thing to get an initial grant of $100,000 on a $2,000,000 project. Then a like sum is sure every year, on the ground that otherwise the money previously spent will be wasted.

It has always been customary for each cabinet minister in this country to hand in a bill of what he wanted, regardless of what any other department asked. This is the only civilized government in the world where the administration has always assumed so little responsibility for the total amount of money expended.

Congress will be extravagant just as long as the Congressmen are sent to Washington primarily to get jobs for constituents and expensive improvements for their own districts.

CITY COUNCIL

ter. Had he known that he was not eligible he should not have run for the office, and put the city to unnecessary expense, but he believed that as he was a citizen he was entitled to all privileges under the constitution of the United States which stands above all other laws. Section 14 of the constitution states that no state shall enforce any law that shall abridge the rights of a citizen.

When the federal court issues a naturalization certificate it is like a dollar issued by the mint. It is invested with a certain value and no city can pass an ordinance which shall say it shall not become a dollar until a certain period has elapsed. A certificate of naturalization is just like a dollar; it is worth its full value as soon as issued.

He therefore considered the clause in the City Charter as unconstitutional. When he became a candidate for office no question was asked as to his eligibility and Ward Three was entitled to its full right and should see that the man elected was sworn in.

When asked his opinion, City Solicitor McAnarney said that this was probably his last opinion as City Solicitor and he very much disliked to give an opinion against Mr. Cowe, but it was his duty to declare him not eligible. The City Charter is created by an act of Legislature, and all duties as to the government of the city are vested under that charter. The City Council cannot question the law in this matter. If any citizen desires to appeal he has a right to go before the courts of the commonwealth or of the United States. Section 42 of the charter provides that a man must be a citizen of the United States for at least one year at the time of his election to serve as a member of the City Council. There was nothing unconstitutional about that clause, and similar clauses could be found in many states.

Councilman Little — Then that clause does not conflict with the laws of the United States.

City Solicitor—It is in perfect accord.

Councilman Griffin inquired if the Council was within its bounds in declaring a vacancy, to which the City Solicitor replied, that under the charter it was compelled to do so.

Councilman Little—Is it impossible to seat him under the City Charter?

City Solicitor—Yes.

The hearing was then closed and the order laid on the table until later when Councilman Craig offered an order declaring a vacancy in the office of Councilman from Ward Three.

Councilman Barrows asked of the City Solicitor if declaring Mr. Cowe not eligible if the votes cast for him should not be counted as blanks and that the next highest man be declared elected.

City Solicitor replied no; that it was not a blank vote.

The order was adopted by roll call.

GASOLINE HEARING.

A public hearing was held at 8.15 on petition of the Edmund Van Bever Co. to keep and sell gasoline. No one appeared for or against the petition. The hearing closed and the order was recommitted.

WASHINGTON SCHOOL.

Councilman Griffin offered a petition from 400 residents of the Washington school district asking that an addition be built to the Washington school. Referred to Committee on Public Buildings.

POLICE PENSION.

Councilman Hadlock offered an order retiring Timothy J. Golden on a pension. Referred to the Finance Committee.

AGAINST CIVIL SERVICE.

Councilman Ross offered a resolve requesting the City Solicitor and directing the Committee on Elections to appear before the committee of the Legislature and oppose the enactment of the proposed law extending the provisions of the Civil Service law to the Chief of the Fire Department.

In support of his resolve Councilman Ross said that this petition was introduced by a former councilman who had a "fire bug" to give a man a life job who had never been tried. Quincy has had several chiefs and none of them have been asked to be placed under civil service. He did not believe that the Mayor desired the enactment of the bill, as it tied the hands of the executive.

Mayor Miller stated that he was opposed to the passage of the bill in any form. If you want to run a department you must have it so that you can hold a club over the officials head so that he may lose his job if he does not do his duty.

Councilman Thompson moved reference to the Ordinance committee. Motion lost and the resolve was adopted.

GRIDLEY BRYANT SCHOOL.

Councilman Little offered an order for $400 for eight drop lights and for certain repairs at the Gridley Bryant school. Referred to Committee on Public Buildings.

BROOKS AVENUE.

Councilman Ross offered an order for $1,800 for rebuilding Brooks avenue from Liberty to Intervale streets. Referred to Committee on Streets.

ATHERTON HOUGH SCHOOL.

Councilman Griffin offered a resolve requesting the Mayor to have plans made for an addition to the Atherton Hough school at Houghs Neck and forward the same to the Council with the approval of the School Committee with an estimated cost of the same. Adopted.

Councilman Griffin offered an order for street lights on Watson terrace and Newcomb place. Referred to Executive.

WILLARD STREET.

Councilman Little offered a resolve for a committee of three members from the City Council together with the Mayor, City Solicitor and Commissioner of Public Works to attend the hearings Feb. 4, before the Highway Commission and favor the acceptance of Willard street as a State highway. Adopted.

The President appointed on that Committee Councilmen Little, O'Dowd and Thompson.

On motion of Councilman Gilliatt the petition of the Telephone Co., for a location for poles on Newhall street was taken from the committee and the petitioners given leave to withdraw.

SKATING PLACES.

Councilman Gilliatt offered an order for $200 to be expended under the direction of the Commissioner of Public Works in providing skating places in the different wards of the city. Adopted.

WARD THREE ELECTION.

Councilman Craig offered orders calling the primaries for the special election in Ward Three Feb. 17 and designating the polling places for the primaries. Adopted.

Adjourned at 9.03 until Feb. 2.

POSSIBLY ANOTHER BATTLESHIP

Mayor elect Curley of Boston conferred on Sunday with Dr. Ronaldo S. Naon, Argentine minister, relative to the building of another ship for his government and learned that this was contemplated. On Monday Mayor Curley was informed by Charles M. Schwab of the Bethlehem Steel Co., that if his company secured the contract the ship would be built at the Fore River shipyard.

The Rivadavia is almost ready for the remainder of her trials. It was generally understood when construction started that the Argentine government would consider another ship if the Rivadavia, and the Moreno which is being built at the yard of the New York Ship Building Co. fulfilled expecattions.

The words of Minister Naon is taken as an assurance that his government retains the same intention. In the event of the ship being built in Quincy additional employment will be furnished to many unemployed men.

—Municipal inaugurations have gone off, and the new bodies are now getting down to a working basis. As usual, there has been no little talk about "economy." It will be a sight good for sore eyes to see some of this quality in municipal administration.—Salem News.

NOTHING TO FEAR FROM NEW TARIFF

President Believes Trade Has Been Stimulated by It

Washington, Jan. 20.—Business conditions throughout the nation are most hopeful and encouraging, according to reports received by President Wilson.

The president made this declaration in response to inquiries as to whether the Underwood-Simmons tariff law had had a harmful effect on business.

He said that, on the contrary, it had had just the opposite effect, and with the exception of a few specialized trades dependent upon railroad orders, business conditions were excellent. This is particularly true of small dealers, he declared.

The only opposition to the confirmation of Williams was voiced by Senators Bristow of Kansas and Smith of Michigan. Senator Bristow reviewed the action of Williams in depositiong funds with the Munsey Trust company when it took over the United States Trust company in this city to avert a panic.

JUDGE'S STAND IN THAW CASE

Exception Taken by New York State Authorities

MAY APPEAL TO WASHINGTON

Think Good Faith of State Was Questioned In Statement by Aldrich—Slayer of White Alarmed and His New Hampshire Attorneys Are Called to Concord For Conference

New York, Jan. 20.—Following a long conference between former District Attorney Jerome and Attorney General Carmody, Jerome announced here they were considering the propriety of submitting the entire Thaw extradition proceedings in New Hampshire to the department of justice at Washington for such action as it might deem wise.

The New York state authorities took exception to the attitude of Judge Aldrich in questioning the good faith of New York state in the extradition proceedings.

In his statement Aldrich declared the real and substantial purpose of New York authorities in endeavoring to procure Thaw's extradition for the crime of conspiracy is to recenfine him in Matteawan, thus showing bad faith in the extradition case.

"It looks as though Judge Aldrich thought he could arraign the state of New York at the bar of his court and inquire into its motives and purposes in seeking the extradition," said Jerome.

"It seems to the attorney general and myself that this would be an usurpation of power by a federal court entirely unjustified under the constitution of the United States and would tend to destroy good feeling betweeen the United States and the several state of the union."

Jerome also said Thaw's commitment had been thoroughly fought out before the state supreme courts and appellate divisions on habeas corpus proceedings, and Justice Dowling's commitment of Thaw held to be constitutional.

Thaw Forces Alarmed

Concord, N. H., Jan. 20.—That Harry K. Thaw and counsel are alarmed over the recent activity of New York officials, including Governor Glynn and Attorney General Carmody, was confirmed by the calling of Merrill T. Shurtleff to Concord for a conference with Thaw and his New Hampshire attorneys.

It was understood the attorneys will plan to meet the onslaught of New York officials on Stanford White's slayer in their briefs to be filed with the federal court Jan. 26.

Thaw and his legal staff were confident of release on bail until New York officials suddenly became active and Glynn and Carmody issued statements regarding the delay in proceedings.

STRIKE AT FALL RIVER

Folders' Troubles Force Out Nearly Fifteen Hundred Employes

Fall River, Mass., Jan. 20.—Nearly 1500 employes of the American Printing company were made idle by a strike of 100 folders. The strikers went out a week ago for an increase of pay and because the president of the union, T. F. Cummings, was discharged.

The mill management claims Cummings was dismissed because he refused to obey orders. On the wage question the folders ask for a flat rate of $18 a week for 600 pieces a day. They average now $16.51 a week.

FAST DISAPPEARING FORESTS.

The Massachusetts Forestry Association is sending out this message:—Massachusetts is sadly behind the times in regard to its forests. We do not yet appreciate the importance of forests. There is a great deal of waste land in Massachusetts which should be planted to forests. Our trees have been cut down and not replaced, so if we don't get to work we will be at a great loss. Industries which depend upon forests will move to other states, our water supply will suffer, there will be no nesting places for birds and without them to keep down the insect pests our farms will suffer.

What trees do for us! Large forests in some degree effect the temperature especially in the heated term of the year. They possibly effect local rain storms, they purify the air, they furnish a home and breeding place for all wild life, birds and animals. They conserve and control the water flow. They act as wind-breakers.

As to their effect upon local rainstorms. Where hills and mountains looming up into the atmosphere, are brought into contact with the clouds filled with moisture, and being cooled by the great forests, the moisture condenses and local showers occur. They purify the air because they are constantly throwing off large quantities of oxygen.

Where great forests are, there are to be found nature's reservoirs. Nature's reservoirs are the finest, most successful and scientific of all reservoirs. Where there is no forest, there is very little of nature's reservoir left. Nature's method of restraining, holding and paying the water out, is destroyed when the trees are cut and moved away.

In less than 25 years—at the rate we are going and in the way we are managing, there will be no lumber of any kind in the United States worth mentioning, except that which is held by states and the nation in their preserves, and by a few rich men and corporations, who are able to hold it for a greatly increased price. Should we not then carefully conserve that which we have and undertake immediately to produce more for the future? Our forests are being cut five times as fast as they are being reproduced.

Give Your Neighbor an Equal Chance

By HOLLAND.

IF you have been buying goods of a mail order house you doubtless think it has been to your advantage to do so. You have believed that you were saving money or were getting better goods. Let us see if this is true.

Have you tried to do business with your local merchant—your neighbor—on the terms that the mail order house exacts? No? Then suppose you try it.

Just go into the store, plank down your cash and tell what you want. You might even tell the merchant that you will wait a few days for the goods. See if your local merchant can't serve you better and as cheaply as the mail order house.

The local merchant usually extends credit for two, four or six months. The mail order house demands cash in advance. It uses your money as working capital. It loses nothing in interest, nothing in bad debts or on slow paying customers. Try this cash in advance plan on the local merchant—the man you know—and see if he can't make it to your advantage to herations of the City Council. After a lapse of several years he again entered the City Council of 1907 serving one year.

SKETCHES OF MAYOR'S APPOINTEES

During his seven years in the City Council he served on practically all of the standing committees of that body. He is a past Master of Wollaston Masonic lodge and the present District Deputy Grand Master of the 26th Masonic district. He is also a member of St. Stephen's Royal Arch chapter and Quincy Commandery, Knights Templar.

TAX COLLECTOR O'HARA.

John J. O'Hara the newly appointed Tax Collector, enters the office with an experience gained in the same office under the administration of Mayor William T. Shea, being appointed by that official in 1910 to fill out the unexpired term of Timothy J. Carey who resigned to accept a position on the State Board of Charity. He was reappointed the following year.

Mr. O'Hara is a Quincy boy and was born Oct. 4, 1880, receiving his early education at the Washington school and Adams Academy. While at the Adams Academy he was much interested in athletic sports and was the star man in the three standing jumps. He also played on the third bag for the Academy ball team. Leaving Adams Academy he entered Boston college where he was graduated with an A. B. He entered the Georgetown University at Washington, D. C., attending the law school of that university from which he graduated in 1904 later being admitted to the Massachusetts bar.

In 1907 he was elected as a member of the School Committee from Ward Two serving three years.

He is a member of Quincy council, Knights of Columbus, Quincy lodge of Elks, and of the Boston college and Georgetown University alumni associations.

While Tax Collector he proved himself to be an efficient official and made a record of which he might well be proud for tax collections.

CITY CLERK CRANE.

Emery L. Crane re-appointed as City Clerk, has during his past two years service proved himself to be the right man in the right place. Mr Crane was born in Quincy June 29 1861, and was educated in the public schools and at the Adams Academy. Leaving school he entered the leather house of Converse, Stanwood & Co., of Boston, afterward Emery & Crane, where he remained for some years. During the year 1911 he was employed at the Fore River shipyard in the purchasing department.

He served as a member of the board of trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library for five years having been first appointed by Mayor Porter. He also served as a member of the School Committee for six years four of which were as chairman.

He is a past Master of Rural lodge of Masons and has been the secretary of the Quincy Historical society for several years.

CITY TREASURER CURTIS.

After a vacation of two years John Curtis will return to City Hall as City Treasurer to which position he has been appointed, so that he will enter the office fully conversant with its duties. Mr. Curtis comes from a family that held the office of treasurer under the town form of government for many years. His father Thomas Curtis was at one time town treasurer, and Noah Curtis his grandfather was also town treasurer for thirteen years. Benjamin Curtis another relative also served the town as its treasurer, while Mr. Curtis the subject of this sketch served four years as City Treasurer under Mayor Shea.

Mr. Curtis was born in Quincy, Dec. 9, 1855, and was educated in the public schools. When a young man he learned the shoemaker's trade which he followed for some years. Later he engaged in the grocery business at South Quincy and East Milton.

He served as a member of the City Council from Ward Three in 1892 and in 1894 served as an assistant assessor under Mayor Hodges, which position he held for four years, part of the time being under Mayor Adams. In 1899 he was appointed to the same office by Mayor Keith and served one year.

He was appointed as City Treasurer by Mayor Shea when he came into office and served for four years.

OVERSEER OF POOR.

Perry Green, appointed as Overseer of the Poor, has been a resident of the Quincy Neck district since 1899, which year he came to this city from East Cambridge where he was born in 1874. He is a son of Andrew Jackson Green who in 1902 voluntarily retired as principal assessor from ward three Cambridge after a continuous service of 42 years. Previous to retiring his father purchased a summer home in Quincy where his son had already established himself.

The subject of this sketch started in to raise flower novelties for wholesale dealers, and later built himself large greenhouses and began to raise flowers for the retail trade, which business he has since carried on.

As far as known the office of Overseer of the Poor is his first public office. He is a member of John Adams Lodge of the Eagles.

CITY PHYSICIAN.

Dr. F. A. Bartlett who has been named as City Physician, has been a resident of Norfolk Downs since 1909. Dr. Bartlett was born in Warren, N. H., in 1881, and was educated in the public schools of his native town and at the High School. He then entered Tufts Medical school from which he graduated in 1907. He then entered the Maine State Hospital at Portland, from which he graduated in 1908. He came to Boston and entered the Children's Hospital where he remained until 1909. During this same year he was connected with the Boston City Hospital Relief station. Since 1909 he has practiced in Quincy and he is at present on the staff of the Quincy City Hospital.

He is a member of the Massachusetts Medical society, the Children's Hospital alumni. He is also a member of Wollaston Masonic lodge.

INSPECTOR OF BUILDINGS.

Lora C. Merrill who takes the position of Inspector of Buildings held by Warren S. Parker since the office was established, was born in Hartford, Me., Feb. 21, 1870. After obtaining his education he learned the trade of a builder from his father, which he has since followed. He came to Quincy 20 years ago settling in Wollaston where he has since carried on the business of a carpenter and builder. He has also been largely interested in the real estate development of that part of the city. He is a member of Quincy Board of Trade.

WATER FRONT COMMISSIONER.

Frank Fessenden Crane who succeeds himself as Dock and Water Front Commissioner, has the distinction of being the first and only person to hold that position in Quincy. Mr. Crane was born in South Boston in 1855 and came to Quincy in 1863. Here he obtained his education leaving the Quincy High school to enter the employ of Abram French Co., as a salesman, with whom he remained until 1878, when he bought a half interest in the furniture business of the late Samuel H. Spear, which firm continued until Mr. Spear was appointed postmaster under President Cleveland, when he retired from the firm which Mr. Crane continued, until his real estate business became so large that he was obliged to drop the furniture business. Many real estate deals have been put through by Mr. Crane the most notable of which was in 1899 when he acquired the water front at Quincy Neck and induced Thomas A. Watson and Frank O. Wellington to locate the Fore River Ship Building Co., in the City of Quincy.

He is an enthusiastic yachtsman sailing his first race off the old Willow house at Houghs Neck in 1874. He joined the Quincy Yacht club in 1880 and has served as its vice commodore, commodore and is at present its rear commodore. He also organized the Cape Cat boat association.

DOCK COMMISSIONER CRANE.

He has long been an enthusiastic water front man and perhaps realizes more than anyone else what a great asset Quincy has in its water front. He has attended as a delegate from Quincy as well as a delegate from the State many waterways conventions in different parts of the country and is at present vice president of the Atlantic Deeper Water Ways association. He has by his persistence obtained appropriations of many thousands of dollars for the improvement of Quincy's water front and channel and is a firm believer in the benefits that will be derived from the establishment of a public dock in Quincy.

ASSESSOR BATES.

Gustave B. Bates, named as Principal Assessor, is a man who has been in the public eye for a long time. He is a frequent contributor to the public press and his articles are always brimfull of spice. He has frequently expressed his opinion on how property in the City of Quincy should be assessed, and as his ideas are entirely at variance with the present method, interesting developments are sure to result before the year is out.

Mr. Bates is perhaps best known as "the man with a depressed feeling" as he has fought tooth and nail to have the railroad grades separated in Quincy by depressing the tracks.

He was born in Boston July 24, 1869, and educated in the public schools of Braintree and Weymouth. He learned the plumbing and tinsmith trade which business he has followed for many years, later adding hot water heating to his business. He carried on his trade in Braintree for three years coming to Quincy in 1889, where he has since conducted business. He is also interested in the granite business being the owner of the Weymouth Seam-face granite quarry.

He is a large real estate owner in Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth, Scituate and Nantasket, and has done much in the way of developing his property.

He is a member of Puritan lodge of Odd Fellows, the Royal Arcanum, Quincy Yacht club and Quincy Y. M. C. A.

EX-BANDIT SEEKS TO BE GOVERNOR

Al Jennings Tells Why He Wants to Rule Oklahoma.

WOULD REFORM PRISONS.

Man Who Was a Train Robber Sympathizes With First Offenders—Explains Why He Quit Life of Crime and Scores Respected Rogues Less Crude Than He Was.

Al J. Jennings, ex-train robber and federal prisoner, who won the Democratic nomination for county attorney of Oklahoma county, Okla., in 1912, is about to announce his candidacy for the governorship of the state of Oklahoma.

"I am entering the race," said Mr. Jennings in New York recently, "as a Democrat. Many of my friends have urged me to seek an independent nomination, but I have always been a Democrat. My object is to clean up the party in Oklahoma. I intend to fight double dealing, political thieves, with whom no self respecting outlaw of former years can associate.

"All I want is to see absolutely honest men at the head of the government, and after I have announced my candidacy if some man whose integrity and uprightness are unquestioned becomes a candidate I shall withdraw and support him with all of my ability.

Why Jennings Reformed.

"Some people do not seem to be able to understand how an outlaw, an ex-train robber and federal prisoner can become sincerely law abiding and a reformer in politics, but the explanation is simple. I made a mistake and defied the law. I was caught and punished—kept five years in prison—and then saw how I had been wrong to become an enemy of society. I decided to reclaim my place in society and set about doing it. As soon as I became a free man, living in a free community, I began to appreciate the differences in lawbreaking and the consequences thereof, and that made me a political reformer.

"I had been a train robber, a crude, open defier of society, and I had been caught and punished. I saw all about me men who wore the best clothes and stood high in society robbing the people right and left and not getting caught or being punished. They were not as primitive as I had been in the method they chose. They did things in the dark and only appeared in the open when they had on their Sunday clothes, so to speak."

Mr. Jennings says he will carry on the same kind of aggressive, personal campaign for the gubernatorial nomination as he carried on for the county attorneyship. He claims he has no money behind him and will not be able to establish headquarters.

"I will stump the state," he said, "and speak from the street corners and halls wherever I can."

Mr. Jennings said that if he is elected governor he will make it his chief object to enforce the law without respect to persons, but that from lessons derived during his own prison experience he will also apply himself to prison reform in Oklahoma.

Pledges Aid to First Offenders.

"I favor the adoption of a reformatory parole system," he said, "by which first offenders can be given a chance to redeem themselves. I think that a young man who is convicted for the first time should be allowed to stay at home and work under the watchful eye of the state instead of being locked up in a prison where, in all probability, he will be made a confirmed criminal. There will be no wholesale release of prisoners if I become governor, but I will exercise the power of pardon and parole with the view of reclaiming for society every man I can. As long as there is a chance of making a good citizen of a man we should try to do so."

Jennings was a train robber in Oklahoma and the southwest for several years before his final capture in 1897 and subsequent conviction in a federal court. He served a few years in the prison at Columbus, O., before being pardoned by President McKinley. His citizenship was later restored by President Roosevelt, and he began the practice of law in Oklahoma City. In 1912 he ran for the Democratic nomination as county attorney of Oklahoma county against six other candidates. Before the primaries five of the candidates withdrew to concentrate the vote against him, but in spite of this he obtained the nomination. At the general election he was defeated by a narrow margin by a Republican who was supported by both the Republican and Democratic organizations.

Daniels Lauds Naval Heroes.

The secretary of the navy has highly commended Oscar B. Peterson, oiler, on duty on board the U. S. S. Boston at Portland, Ore., for risking his life to save a man from drowning in the Columbia river. Charles Zebley, seaman, and Albert D. Russell, fireman, second class, have also been commended by the secretary. An enlisted man fell overboard at Portsmouth, N. H., and Zebley jumped overboard. The water was icy cold and the current so strong that both were nearly lost. Russell started to undress and jump after the men, but was restrained. The two men were rescued by a boat.

EX-MAYOR AS PRESIDENT

Hon. Charles M. Bryant at Head of Sachem Club

At the first meeting o f the new board of the Sachem club of Wollaston, Monday evening, Eugene F. DeNormandie was unanimously re-elected as president, but respectfully declined to serve.

CHARLES M. BRYANT.

On the second ballot choice went to ex-Mayor Charles M. Bryant, who was unanimously elected. The ballot resulted as follows:

President,—Charles M. Bryant.

First Vice President—Edward E. Jameson.

Second Vice President—Eric H. Ewertz.

Treasurer—William F. Kimball.

Secretary—Russell T. Anthony.

The directors sent a telegram to William F. Kimball who with his wife sails today from New York on the Hamberg-American liner "Sicily" bound for Mediterranean ports, informing him of his election as treasurer.

The business of the evening was given over to a discussion of the clubs policy, no definite action being taken.

The next regular meeting of the board of directors is scheduled for February 9, but it is probable that President Bryant will call a special meeting before that time to announce his committees.

MAKING THE BEST OF IT.

The present city officials who go out of office the first Monday in February do not seem to feel very bad because they were not re-appointed, for instead of long faces which some imagined would result after the announcement of the new officials, all of the present officials faces were wreathed in smiles this morning. They simply look upon it as one of the fortunes of war. A man who holds political office should not take it too much to heart if he is tipped out of office with the coming of a new administration. Apparently the present officers look upon it in the same light.

LINEN SHOWER AT SQUANTUM

Miss Fitzpatrick to be Bride of Thomas E. Clifford, Jr.

A linen shower was given Miss Susan M. Fitzpatrick of 61 Bowdoin street, Dorchester, Sunday night by the Misses Margaret, Frances and Anne Allen at their home in Squantum. It was a delightful affair and Miss Fitzpatrick was the recipient of a handsome chest of linen. On Wednesday, January 28, she becomes the bride of Thomas E. Clifford, Jr., of Roxbury. The marriage will take place at St. Peter's church, Dorchester.

The Misses Allen proved charming hostesses. A dainty luncheon was served. Toasts were given the bride by each member of the party. They were composed by Miss Elizabeth Dowd and were exceedingly clever. There were readings by Miss Isabelle McDonough, an unusually talented elocutionist.

TO EXAMINE COWS AND PIGS

Some Well Developed Cases of Tuberculosis in Cows

An examination of all cows for tuberculosis, and all pigs for cholera, will be commenced today by Dr. Francis Abele, the inspector of animals for the city. Within a few days he has found well developed cases in several cows.

Dr. Abele stated this morning that in ten years there has been a marked decrease in the number of cows in the city and a corresponding decrease in pigs, but that generally the stock has proven to be in good condition.

One of the frequent symptons of tuberculosis in cows is a labored breathing which becomes very noticeable if the cow is forced to run. In fact, he says that in a recent case that came under his notice the cow breathed so hard that it was similar to a miniature steam whistle.

ON PETITION OF THE MAYOR

The bill for the abolishment of grade crossings presented to the Legislature by Representative Sullivan was on petition of Mayor Miller. It is short and briefly sets forth its purpose as follows:

"That the grade crossings of the Old Colony Railroad, New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, lessees, in Quincy be abolished according to the plan adopted by the City of Quincy known as the city plan of depression."

—The discovery that members of Congress are sending in their income tax contributions prematurely throws an interesting sidelight on just how much these sagacious gentlemen know about the law they themselves enacted.—Milford Gazette.

SCHOOL NEEDS A FLAG

Some of Its Pupils Have Never Seen the Stars and Stripes

Washington, Jan. 20.—Because the government does not make any provision for furnishing flags to public schools, Secretary Lane of the interior department has been forced to turn down the request of a school teacher living in the southwest for a flag for her pupils.

"I have pupils in my school of all ages up to 16 years who have never seen a United States flag," the teacher wrote the secretary, "except two very small ones which I chanced to bring along with me. This is a new country, a new district and is, consequently, not so well off financially I thought it might please the department to assist us in our struggle by supplying our school with a flag."

The county in which this school is located has an area of 870 square miles and in 1910 had a population of 1474.

Charles Crane, one of Quincy's old time merchants, was stricken with a shock Monday afternoon at his room on Saville street, and is in a serious condition, one side being entirely paralyzed. TEAR FLOORING WITH A JIMMY

Three Criminals Escape From a Boston City Van

ARRESTED IN RECENT RAID

Gunmen With Bad Records Drop to Street and Flee to Railroad Yards While Van Driver and Court Officer Are In Ignorance—Patrolman Fails In Effort to Recapture Them

Boston, Jan. 20.—Tearing a hole in the wooden flooring of the police court van with a steel jimmy, while they were being taken to the Charles street jail, and dropping through it to the street, three gunmen, noted for their daring burglaries, made good their escape.

Seven other prisoners, herded into the old-fashioned conveyance, not only refused to take the chance for liberty, but shouted through the ventilators in an attempt to attract the attention of Court Officer Twombley and Driver Bresnahan.

The three who escaped are Charles Ronan, known to the police as "Raffles Ronan," who was formerly an express detective; George A. Ward, known as "Kid Francis," and William H. Jones, recorded in the rogues' gallery as "Casey Jones."

They were arrested in a raid on the lodging house at 668 Shawmut avenue. Ronan and Ward were found asleep with loaded automatic pistols under their pillows. Jones was located later, with a similar weapon in his pocket. The guns were part of the loot of a recent burglary in a hardware store in Kennebunk, Me.

Other stolen property found in their possession indicated that they had been involved in three burglaries in Boston.

The three men were arraigned in the city police court before Judge Ely. Jones was held in $1700 for the grand jury, and the other two in $1200 for hearings in the same court Jan. 26.

In default of bail they were all ordered committed to the Charles street jail, pending trial, and they were placed in the court van in the Somerset street enclosure.

The jimmy, the police believe, had been passed to them by somebody while they were being led through the corridors of the courthouse.

The men were searched twice at headquarters. This search was so thorough that unset diamonds were discovered in the linings of their coats. The police say it is impossible that they could have had an instrument concealed on their persons that would have enabled them to rip up the floor of the van so quickly.

As soon as the van started the three desperate prisoners began to tear up the flooring, working with silent speed lest the van reach the jail before they finished. The other prisoners dared not to make an outcry during this time for fear of bodily harm.

When the three burglars dropped on the pavement in South Russell street, they were seen from a distance by Patrolman Casey, who started in pursuit as the men fled down Blossom street, but was unable to overcome the lead they had, and watched them disappear into the railroad yards.

After the wagon had passed South Russell street both Bresnahan and Twombley heard considerable noise in the van being made by the prisoners. They paid no attention to the matter and it was not until after the van had reached the jail yard that they learned the cause of the disturbance.

The other prisoners who refused to take the chance of escape had been pounding in an effort to tell the officer and driver that three prisoners had made their escape.

YEAR'S PROFITS OF $150,000

Expected From San Francisco's Municipal Street Car Line

San Francisco, Jan. 20.—Profits on the first municipal street railway in the country—the Geary line—were $85,345 net for 1913.

For the earlier half of the year, during which the road was not completed, the net profits were comparatively small, and the returns for the last six months indicate that profits of at least $150,000 may be expected for 1914.

EMPLOYES RETURN TO WORK

Delaware and Hudson System Paralyzed For Sixteen Hours When Key Telegram "Go to It, Old Man," Announces Settlement—The Company Yields to Demands of Its Employes

Albany, Jan. 20.—The strike on the Delaware and Hudson railway was settled last night.

Company officials met the union's demands that they restore two discharged employes, Engineer J. A. Lynch and Conductor F. A. Slade, to their former positions.

All strikers will return to duty at once. G. W. W. Hanger, a member of the federal board of mediation and conciliation, brought about the agreement.

"Go to it, old man," was the key telegram which flashed over the wires from Martin M. Carey, who led the union forces, to various union leaders along the system when the strike was settled. The last message was filed just sixteen hours after the first man walked out.

A settlement was reached only after Hanger had suggested to the company officials that they yield to the demands of the men. Arbitration, he declared, was impossible.

Normal conditions would be restored in two hours, union officials promised. As soon as Clifford S. Sims, vice president and general manager of the railway, and union officials had signed the agreement, orders were sent out for men to report for work as quickly as possible. Many crews that had been tied up at terminal points were notified by telegraph to resume their runs without reporting here.

A few minor matters still remain unsettled, but these will be adjusted at the convenience of the union and railway officials. They have to do with the cases of other discharged employes, but they did not enter into the strike proper. Union officials agreed that when the cases of Slade and Lynch were disposed of the strikers would return to work.

Slade and Lynch were discharged more than a year ago, when a car on their train, running on the Susquehanna division, jumped the track and bumped along the ties for three and one-half miles. The men were discharged on the ground that they were negligent and had violated a company rule and caused much damage to property.

The union officials replied that the accident was unavoidable and that no serious damage was done.

Thereby developed the trouble. For several months the company and union officials debated the proposition of restoring the men to work. Then, a week ago, 98 percent of the employes voted to strike if Slade and Lynch were not restored to duty.

At 8:45 o'clock yesterday morning the first body of men walked out. From then until noon, engineers, conductors, trainmen, telegraph operators and tower men gradually quit as the safety of passengers would permit. At noon it was estimated that 5000 men were out and the entire sysem was paralyzed. Shop workers and office employes alone remained on duty.

Quietness characterized the walkout. Crews brought their trains to terminal points, took their engines to roundhouses and went to their homes to await the result of a conference between union leaders and officials of the company.

The strike meant the shutting down of about thirty coal mines operated directly by the Delaware and Hudson company in the Lackawanna and Wyoming valleys, and upwards of twenty other operations whose product goes out over this railroad, in all affecting at least 30,000 men in the mines.

Cities north of Glens Falls and Rouses Point were the greatest sufferers from the strike. The Delaware and Hudson line is their only means of transportation. On this branch line are several state hospitals and Clinton prison.

THREE HUNDRED KILLED

Cliff Falls on Japanese Refugees From Volcanic Island

Kagoshima, Japan, Jan. 20.—Three hundred refugees from Sakura were buried under a falling cliff in a neighboring village.

This new disaster is a result of the volcanic eruption and earthquakes which for a week have devastated the island of Sakura and made a wreck of this city. The eruptions and earthquakes continue, but with activity much subdued.

There is great suffering in the entire section, for it has been found impossible to give shelter or food to the thousands who have lost their homes.

POLITICAL DEFEAT DRIVES TO LIQUOR

Would-Be Mayor of Lawrence Is Sent to Prison

Somerville, Mass., Jan. 20.—Thomas F. Griffin, aged 49, who declared in open court that he was a candidate for the mayoralty at Lawrence last year and was defeated by only six votes, was sentenced to the state farm at Bridgewater for drunkenness in the police court here. The complaint was prosecuted by his wife.

Mrs. Griffin was a widow when she married her present husband eighteen months ago. At that time, he told the court, he was an orderly and sober member of society. After his political defeat in Lawrence, he said, he took to alcohol and has been drinking heavily ever since. He occupied several minutes in an eloquent appeal for leniency.

NO TRACE OF THE "A-7"

Search For the Lost British Submarine Is Being Continued

Plymouth, Eng., Jan. 20.—"The submarine 'A-7' must be found," was the order issued from the office of the naval commander-in-chief, who is determined that the search for the ill-fated vessel which has been missing since Friday, when she disappeared with her crew during maneuvers here, shall not be given up.

Twelve destroyers have steamed slowly up and down, sweeping with cables the bottom of Whitesand bay, but thus far without result. The quest is to be continued throughout the week, if necessary, but the impression is growing that the "A-7" may already have been swallowed up by the quicksands which prevail in the vicinity.

$150,000 FOR BREAD LINE

Gescheidt Leaves but One Twelfth of Estate to His Widow

New York, Jan. 20.—Henry M. Gescheidt, a lawyer and patent medicine manufacturer, who died a few days ago at the age of 65, left half of his $300,000 estate to the corporation of Trinity church for the establishment of a bread line. If the church is unwilling to accept the legacy for the purposes named the $150,000 is to be divided up among the Five Points house of industry and several hospitals.

The will leaves the widow only one-twelfth of the estate, or $25,000. Minnie D. Gescheidt, an adopted daughter, is said to have been provided for more amply than Mrs. Gescheidt.

Gescheidt's first wife, from whom he was divorced fourteen years ago, received a settlement at that time said to have been $100,000.

FINDS RELATIVES DEAD

Monahan Arrives at Brockton as Funeral Is Being Held

Brockton, Mass., Jan. 20.—After hurrying from a Maine woods lumber camp, Thomas H. Monahan arrived at St. Edward's church as the double funeral services of his wife, Mrs. Mary Monahan, and his son, W. B. Monahan, who lost their lives in Saturday's lodging house fire, were being held.

Monahan had been separated from his wife and family for two years. He read in the newspapers Sunday of the death of his wife and boy, and he hastened through the wilderness to the railroad station.

No one in the church recognized the rough appearing stranger until after he had gazed at the dead and burst into tears. Monahan will live in this city with his son and daughter.

BORN 103 YEARS AGO.

Students of history are familiar with the great Indian battle fought out in Indiana on the banks of the Tippecanoe river 192 years ago. It is known as the Battle of Tippecanoe and it was here that General William Henry Harrison achieved the fame which had much to do with making him President of the United States. Indiana and all the great west were then new. Settlements had scarcely begun where now there is an advanced civilization, with great cities and many millions of people. It is a long time ago, but it does not reach back to the beginning of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. Johnson's Anodyne Liniment was born 103 years ago. For over one hundred years it has been a household friend all over New England and in many other sections of the country. The number of people who have used it cannot be estimated; but what a story of usefulness in its life of 103 years! Other liniments come and go. Few live more than a score of years, but Johnson's remains because of its worth.

A Bird In The Bush

Overbalanced by One In the Hand

By SARAH BAXTER

When mamma and I went to London we took letters to persons there who were abundantly able to introduce us to society. Lord Barkerdale, eldest son of the Earl of Edgerton, showed me especial attention and ended by proposing to me. He told me he loved me desperately, and when I protested that a marriage between us was out of the question, owing to my not having a fortune, he declared that he loved me so well that a dowry made no difference to him whatever.

Now, the facts about my pecuniary condition were these: While I had no fortune and my parents were only passably well off for worldly goods, I was to inherit $2,000,000 or more from an old bachelor uncle who had one foot in the grave. Very few persons in America knew anything about this expectation, and I had not only refrained from telling any one in England, but had especially cautioned mamma not to do so. I was therefore satisfied that Ralph Barkerdale loved me for myself alone, and since he was a fascinating man and I was pleased at the prospect of some day becoming Lady Edgerton I accepted his proposal.

I was invited to the country seat of the Edgertons and well received by the earl and the rest of the family. This was very gratifying to me because I had been told that the earl, except for land, was poor, and it seemed to me that he would expect his successor to the title to marry some one with means. I had a charming visit and went back to London well satisfied with my matrimonial arrangements. Nothing was said about setting a time for the wedding, but since we were only recently engaged that was not expected. I was young, had not seen much of life and was in no hurry.

It was about a month after this visit, when the London season was at its height, that Ralph said to me one evening:

"There's something I wish to say to you by way of precaution. If you were English I wouldn't need to say it, but I have understood that you Americans expect from the moment of an engagement that your fiance shall devote himself exclusively to you. Our girls know that any attention we pay to any one else doesn't mean anything and are not so exacting."

"It doesn't matter to me how many girls you devote yourself to," I replied, "provided you don't concentrate your attentions upon one person."

"That's just the reason I'm going to tell you about it. I'm going to show considerable attention to an individual. My cousin, Roger Battersea, has got himself engaged to Lady Constance Everard, a younger daughter of the Duke of Wiffington. Roger is a deuced fine fellow, but Lady Constance, while she is of good family, is—well—will you keep a secret?"

"Yes; go on."

"Lady Constance has a husband. The world doesn't know it, but such is the fact. She married suddenly, and her father packed the fellow off by a payment of £10,000. They're getting an annulment or divorce or something of the sort, and when it is obtained she is going to marry Roger. His mother is furious over it. She asked me if I wouldn't try to persuade her son to give up his infatuation. I told her that to interfere would be to get myself disliked. Then she suggested that I prove to him how unreliable Lady Constance is by winning her away from him. I told her I couldn't do it without your consent."

I didn't like the arrangement at all and said nothing for some time while he awaited my reply. Presently I gave it:

"You are free and with my consent to devote yourself to any one you like until we are married. After that I will not divide you with any other woman. I have heard that marriages here among the nobility are usually made for convenience instead of love and that the wife is expected to stand a great deal from the husband. If other American girls care to put up with that sort of thing they are welcome to do so. I won't. You may tell your aunt that you have my consent to save her son from an unfortunate marriage, and I confess I think your plan an excellent one."

"Spoken like a sensible girl," said my fiance. "You American girls have so much snap to you! One of our girls would have whined and made a fuss."

I met both Roger Battersea and Lady Constance in society and became acquainted with both of them. Battersea struck me as a man who would not need to be saved from a misalliance, and Lady Constance seemed to be an ordinary woman of fashion, with no especial depth to her, but otherwise unobjectionable. But one doesn't get to know persons by meeting them casually, and for some time after I met these two I saw very little of them.

I was aware, however, that Ralph had begun the work of proving to his cousin how fickle was the woman he wished to marry. I heard nothing about this secret marriage of Lady Constance, but since it was secret I did not expect to hear anything of it.

One evening at a function of some sort Battersea came to me and said:

"Miss Bradley, I suppose your fiance will not object to my giving you as much attention, provided, of course, you honor me by accepting it, as he gives another woman."

"I consider myself free." I replied, "to accept all the attention offered me till married. After that I shall be bound to decline any to which my husband shall object."

"That's an American idea, I fancy, but I admit it is the correct one. Our men over here would not consent to be so tied up to a wife."

There is a lot of chicanery going on in the world, especially in society. I didn't pretend to know or understand why this man was devoted to that woman, who were jealous or what infidelities were practiced. These things were all varnished over so smoothly that they were not apparent. I did not know why Roger Battersea chose to show me attention, but it seemed probable that he was preparing to pay his cousin in her own coin. I found Battersea so agreeable that I was quite willing to spend with him the time he chose to spend with me. I couldn't understand how a man of apparently such force of character could be in love with a woman of as little depth as Lady Constance, and I told Ralph so. He said that intellectual men seldom mated with intellectual women; they almost always married the doll kind.

The situation in time became somewhat unpleasant to me. My fiance was devoting himself to another woman, though when with me he was as demonstratively affectionate as before. Roger Battersea's attentions to me became so constant that they were beginning to be remarked. One day I asked Ralph how long a time would be required to bring the matter he had on hand to a head. He said he was trying to get Lady Constance down in writing. If he went to Roger with a story that she preferred to marry a lord Roger would not believe him; if he showed Roger a note to that effect there would be nothing further to do in the premises. Somehow, although Ralph's object in saving his cousin from a misalliance was a worthy one, it seemed to me that his way of doing it was unwarranted.

One evening when Roger and I were together he began to talk to me in a roundabout way. He said nothing directly about his cousin or Lady Constance, but I knew well that he was speaking of the situation in which the four of us were interested. But Roger and I gradually threw off the mask and agreed that matters were not going to suit us. A remark of Roger's arrested my attention. He said that one feature attending his cousin's engagement to me had surprised him. He could not understand how Ralph would be willing to marry, or the family would consent that he should marry, a woman without a fortune. "They need money," he added, "and can't get on without it."

For the first time it occurred to me that Ralph might know of the property that in all probability would soon be mine. I straightway began a series of investigations, probing here and there among those intimate with these two young men, which resulted in a discovery that my fiance had learned through agents in America of my expected fortune. From this starting point I did a lot of theorizing. I did not believe his story about Lady Constance's unfortunate marriage. Then I hit upon the information that she had a fortune in her own right of £100,000. This opened my eyes still further, and I began to see my fiance's scheme.

He was balanced between a fortune of half a million dollars in the hand and two millions in the bush. Unfortunately for him, the smaller amount was contingent upon his supplanting his cousin.

I was tempted to break with him at once, but refrained, desiring to let the comedy play itself out. Mother and I went to Paris to do some shopping and were gone a month. When I returned to England my fiance received me with a more demonstrative affection than ever before.

"Thank heaven!" he exclaimed. "I've got rid of that bothersome, meddlesome affair of Roger's. It has not been to my taste at all and has kept me away from you."

"Have you saved him?" I asked.

"Not that I know; I simply decided to have nothing more to do with such an underhand business. I told my aunt that if Roger wished to make an ass of himself I would not aid him."

I was at a loss to account for this change in Ralph, but was disposed to think that he had noticed a change in me and was fearful of losing me and my millions. Or perhaps he had learned that he could not win Lady Constance. But I was not ready to show my hand, and, enduring his caresses as best I could, I said not a word to enable him to judge of my suspicions.

The very next day after he made his announcement I received a letter from America announcing the sudden death of my uncle, and, since I was left his sole heir, I was advised to return at once.

"That accounts for it," I said to myself. "Ralph has some one in America who has been keeping him posted on my affairs."

A steamer sailed from London that afternoon, and mother and I sailed on it. I hadn't a minute to write a line to Ralph, and I don't know that I should have written him if I had.

On reaching home I wrote Ralph, breaking our engagement. He was more successful in the other part of his matrimonial—or, rather, financial—scheme than that which pertained to me. Though he was obliged to give up my two million, he secured Lady Constance's half million, having supplanted his rival, doubtless, by means of his being heir to a title.

As for Roger Battersea, he afterward married a lady better suited to him. I am engaged to an American business man.

PELLAGRA NOW MENACES NATION

Fifty Thousand Known Cases In the Last Six Years.

FUNDS NEEDED TO FIGHT IT

Startling Report of Surgeon General Blue to Secretary McAdoo Is Likely to Result In Call Upon Congress to Make Appropriation For a Hospital In the South.

So alarming are the reports of the spread of pellagra laid before Secretary McAdoo by Surgeon General Blue of the public health service that congress probably will be urged to make a special appropriation to rent a hospital building in the south, establish laboratories there and make a study of the disease in all its phases.

Since the disease was discovered in 1907 there have been about 50,000 cases of it in thirty-four states of the Union, and a national remedy, a national defense, is said to be imperatively needed.

While pellagra has been recognized for several hundred years, it is still one of the most baffling diseases with which the medical profession deals. The public health service has been struggling hard with investigations of the disease since its discovery in this country a half dozen years ago, but the alarming extent to which it has spread has brought a flood of appealing letters to Secretary McAdoo and has led to a determination to urge congress to act quickly.

Sometimes Causes Insanity.

In some of its phases pellagra resembles leprosy, and in some respects it is even more to be dreaded than leprosy, physicians say, because pellagra frequently affects the mental organism and leaves its victims insane.

One physician, in reporting conditions in his locality, recently said:

"Calling it 'pellagra,' the public does not know the nature of the malady and gives very little heed to its great menace, but were we to speak of it as leprosy the whole country would be crying out in wild alarm. And, so far as the public menace goes, we are not yet justified in saying that it is not just as great a dread as leprosy itself."

Corn Diet Theory Unproved.

There has been a popular notion that it is caused by a corn diet, but physicians are not yet ready to adopt that theory. One of the chief purposes in establishing the special hospital is to develop research in that direction. It is also unknown whether or not the disease is communicable and by what means it is transferred, if at all.

The most characteristic symptom of the disease is an acute rash on the hands and parts of the body. This manifestation is said oftentimes to resemble a scald or severe sunburn. Soon after this appears, in severe cases, the patient becomes seriously ill, and many times death or insanity quickly follows. Sometimes the attacks disappear and recur with increased violence.

While probably existent in parts of the United States for a great many years, pellagra was an unknown and a negligible quantity in this country until six years ago. Appearing then and recognized in small numbers in Alabama, it has since steadily increased in the number of its victims, and the territory involved, until it has become a national problem.

GEN. BUCKNER IN HISTORY.

Last Confederate Lieutenant General Responsible For Grant's Sobriquet.

With the death of General Simon Bolivar Buckner in his ninety-first year the last lieutenant general of the Confederate army has passed to the great beyond. General Buckner was a former governor of Kentucky and candidate for vice president on the gold Democratic ticket in 1896. He was leader of the Law and Order league, which helped to put down night riding in Kentucky.

General Buckner commanded a Confederate brigade at the battle of Donelson, surrendering the fort on Feb. 16 to General Grant, and it was through General Buckner that General Grant became known as "Unconditional Surrender" Grant. Buckner wanted to know what terms he could get if he gave up.

"No other terms than an unconditional surrender can be accepted," replied the Union general. "I propose to move immediately upon your works."

General Buckner was the oldest living graduate of West Point.

LIVER DIET CAUSE OF GOITER.

Discovery Is Made Through Experiments on Fish.

Goiter is caused by improper nutrition, according to an announcement in the Journal of Experimental Medicine, the official organ of the Rockefeller Institute For Medical Research.

Dr. David Marine of the H. K. Cushing laboratory of Western Reserve university in Cleveland has demonstrated that brook trout fed on liver in hatcheries developed the disease and that a group fed with whole sea fish did not contract it. Fish suffering from goiter recovered on a sea fish diet.

The observations of Dr. Marine are important, as the exact cause of the disease has been unknown.

How the Milkmaids of Holland Carry Heavy Loads.

ADVANTAGES OF A YOKE.

Two Pails Are More Easily Borne Than One When Balanced on the Shoulders. Things of Interest to Little People. Puzzles and Games.

To carry two pails of milk or water is easier than to carry one if you know how and have a yoke such as the girl in the picture has balanced on her shoulder. Every boy who has ever carried water from the well in a bucket knows it is a pretty hard job, and he usually sticks one arm out to help balance the loaded side. When he has two buckets the job is easier, if they are not too heavy. The weight of one offsets that of the other, and he is able to walk erect, but finds it difficult to prevent the pails knocking against his legs. The girl in the picture is a milkmaid and she lives in Holland, or the Netherlands, which is a famous dairy country. You notice that she has a wooden yoke placed at the back of her neck and resting on her shoulders. On each end of the yoke she suspends two great pails of milk and is able to carry them with ease. The weight is balanced on the shoulders, which she relieves somewhat with her hands. But one of the pails is shown, space not permitting the other to appear in the picture. Those who have to carry water any distance might use this scheme to lighten themselves.

A Natural Sundial.

There is no need for clocks on the Aegean sea whenever the sun is shining. There nature has arranged her only timepiece, one that does not vary with the passing centuries. This natural time marker is the largest sun dial in the world. Projecting into the blue waters of the sea is a large promontory which lifts its head 3,000 feet above the waves. As the sun swings round the pointed shadow of the mountain just touches one after the other a number of small islands, which are at exact distances apart, and act as hour marks on the great dial.

Going to Jerusalem.

As many chairs, less one, as there are players are arranged in a row; then the children are formed in line, with a leader. A march is played on the piano and the line moves around the chairs. The instant the music ceases, the children try to secure a seat; of course one is left standing. He takes the lead, a chair is removed from the line, the music begins and the game continues until there is one chair left, with two contestants marching around it. The one finally securing the seat is said to have arrived at Jerusalem.

A Tale of Timbuktu.

Oh, tell me, have you ever been Across to Timbuktu?
And have you any notion what
The Timbuktuzers do?

You see, I know exactly what
They say and how they look,
For I read all about them
In a big three volume book.

To sum it up concisely,
Here's the gist of what I read.
The Timbuktuzers rise—they eat—
And drink—and go to bed.

And now, although I hate to end
This interesting story,
That's all I know of Timbuktu
And the Timbuktuzers' glory.

CITY HOSPITAL IN FLOURISHING CONDITION

Although There Has Been Increase in Patients, Expenses Have Not Increased

Total Number of Patients 651 of Which 467 Were Surgical

The annual meeting of the corporation of the Quincy City Hospital was held in Union hall Monday evening. It was largely attended and several remarked that it was evidence of the growing popularity of the institution since it was not necessary this year, for the first time, to search the highways and byways so that a quorum could be obtained. Fred B. Rice presided and among those present were several members of the Hospital Aid Association.

Warren W. Adams was re-elected clerk and the present board of trustees was re-elected. Charles P. Hutchins sent a letter stating that he would be absent for several months this year and thought it best to give another the opportunity to look after the work of a trustee on that account. This proved to be contrary to the wishes of the members who re-elected him.

The trustees elect are: George E. Adams, William R. Bateman, Richard D. Chase, Daniel L. F. Chase, Joseph A. Dasha, Henry M. Faxon, Thomas Fenno, Dr. John A. Gordon, Henry R. Holden, Dr. Nathaniel S. Hunting, Charles P. Hutchins, Perry Lawton, Albert N. Murray, N. G. Nickerson, George E. Pfaffmann, Fred B. Rice Harry L. Rice, Joseph A. Sedgwick, Dr. George M. Sheahan, Fred H. Smith, Dr. John F. Welch, Frank P. Waterhouse.

The by-laws were amended so that they would permit the continuance of the medical and surgical staff as at present.

Miss Caroline B. Hill, matron, Miss Eva Blair head nurse, Dr. Daniel B. Reardon and Mrs. Perry Lawton were elected members of the corporation.

The trustees are supervising a fund of more than $1200 contributed by pupils at the Quincy Mansion School, and other residents for many years, and the question was brought up as to whether, in the event of the construction of a Tuberculosis hospital by the city, it should properly be turned over to the city.

Richard D. Chase, a former treasurer said it had been contributed in small amounts from time to time and further remarked that the city usually is able to create a deficit in what they do and we will find a place where it will fit.

Dr. John H. Welch said that primarily the fund was contributed to eliminate the possibility of an epidemic of infectious diseases. The late Dr. Willard of the Mansion School was an able exponent of the idea and gladly spoke on the topic at any time. Dr. Welch favored interviewing the contributors with the purpose of learning their wish in its disposition, and if they allowed it to remain with the Hospital he felt the money could be advantageously applied to the cost of the installation of the laundry machinery.

A committee was appointed to interview the contributors.

Fred B. Rice spoke of the decrease in the membership of the Hospital Aid Association, and said that their fine work in the past was of such assistance that he hoped to see the membership reach its former figures, and the fine assistance continued.

Dr. John H. Welch, who is very familiar with the needs of the institution, said it has never been in as good shape as at present. "Notwithstanding the 23 years of use, the plant is in good order and necessary repairs have been made. The acquisitions of the last few years have brought the institution up to the standards of a modern and well equipped hospital. We never expect to make it profitable. I never knew of one from a financial point of view that was. The increase of 33 per cent in the number of patients, without a large increase in accommodations shows that hospital education is getting in its work. Quincy does not differ from other communities. Prejudice exists of course among people not familiar with the workings of hospitals, and it will be overcome as the value of the institution becomes known. Despite our hardships we have grown better and successful.

Dr. Welch sounded a popular note when he said he thought the institution had lost, he believed, several legacies through the forgetfulness of people, and he favored the making of a public announcement that the hospital was not well to do, the form being in the nature of a bequest which would appear frequently in the local papers.

Fred B. Rice in speaking of the accommodations of the hospital said Quincy people were entering Boston institutions when a well equipped hospital was in their own city, and he deplored the occasion he said when well known citizens felt obliged to forget the Quincy City Hospital in their sickness.

SECRETARYS REPORT.

Perry Lawton, secretary, reported that the number of patients in the Hospital on Jan. 1, 1913, was 26, admitted during the year 625; a total of 651 cared for.

Of this number, 570 were discharged, 60 died, and 21 remained December 31, 1913.

Of the 651 patients, 467 were surgical cases, 167 were medical cases, and 17 were maternity cases.

There were 388 full paying patients, 53 were part paying, and 210 were free.

It is interesting to note that there were 174 patients (36.5 per cent) more than in 1912, and 231 (55 per cent) more than in 1911.

It is also interesting to note that the percentage of paying patients is increasing. In 1911, 55.5 per cent were paying patients, in 1912, 62.5 per cent and in 1913, 67.75 per cent.

Miss Alma Grant resigned as matron, leaving on July 1, and has been succeeded by Miss Caroline Hill, the present matron, who came to us August 15.

The training school has at the present time 15 pupil nurses, and the senior class of four who will graduate shortly, is the first class that has taken a three year course and the first which has practical training in maternity cases.

The pupils now receive practical as well as theoretical instruction in invalid cooking and food values from a resident trained dietetian, in a diet kitchen of our own that has been fitted up for the purpose.

Arrangements have been made with the Boston Dispensary so that each member of the senior class receives three months training in the care of children at the dispensary.

During the year the Hospital has received for the endowment fund $3,591.38 from the estate of the Caleb Sumner Hollis of Braintree.

July 1, 1913, a complete change of the staff was made. Formerly there were 12 doctors, each serving two months and attending all cases whether surgical or medical. Now the Hospital has a surgical staff of six surgeons, each of whom serves two months, and four assistant surgeons, each of whom serves three months; also a medical staff of 12 physicians of the regular school each serving two months and four physicians of the homeopathic school each serving three months. During the six months that the new plan has been in operation it has shown itself to be a very decided improvement over the old one.

Friends have remembered the hospital in many ways during the year as will be seen in the annual report when printed, but especial mention should be made of the Ladies Aid Association, which has given liberally in things, needed, particularly linen and blankets.

The plant is in good condition. During the year a diet kitchen has been equipped as already noted, a complete X-ray outfit has been installed, a gift from Col. William B. White, and on Sept. 19 a maternity ward was opened in what was the women's ward in the early days of the hospital, and the long needed laundry machine is now being installed.

The hospital enters upon the new year with the feeling that, as regards the plant, the hospital is better fitted than ever to care for the sick of the community.

TREASURER'S REPORT.

The treasurer's report, as submitted by N. G. Nickerson shows that although there has been an increase of 36.5 per cent more patients, the cost of running the hospital has not increased. This in the opinion of the corporators present was something which is worthy of the public commendation since it shows, the growing perfection of the system and how well the management of the hospital is doing. The report at the close of Dec. 31, 1913, follows:

T. A. WINSLOE IMPROVING.

The many friends of T. A. Winsloe will be glad to know that he is on the road to complete recovery. The doctor allowed him to have one caller Monday for the first time in two weeks. His guest was Alexander Falconer. Mr. Winsloe sat up about an hour Monday, and it is expected he will come back strong and vigorous as ever.

—The state of Maine ought to secure Miss Fern Hobbs of Oregon as governor or sheriff. When the governor of Oregon was away the other day, Miss Fern was left in authority, and she immediately began to show a rare degree of authority and some courage. Because places selling liquor would not observe the law, she put one community under martial law called out the militia and placed them on guard over the rum shops—and the place is reported as drier than Sahara. NEWSBOYS ON HORSEBACK.

Carriers Make Quick Time to the Suburbs In Montevideo.

Most American newsboys think themselves well off if they own a good suit of clothes, but in the Uruguayan capital of Montevideo there are over fifty newsboys who own horses and peddle their papers on horseback.

Montevideo has 300,000 inhabitants, but it spreads over more territory than an American city of the same population; there are almost no tenement houses, and there are several large parks.

Like Americans, the Uruguayans want their evening paper as soon as possible after it comes from the press. The horseback newsboys supply this demand with astonishing rapidity. La Razon, one of the leading evening journals, is issued at 5 o'clock. About twenty minutes before that hour the newsboys, mostly young men from eighteen to twenty-five years of age, gather in the street in front of the newspaper office. When the papers are brought out the clerk hands a bundle to each, and away he starts at a full gallop. All the business in the center of the town is done by ordinary "foot newsboys;" the horsemen race away to their "beats" in the suburbs, shouting with all their might, "La Razon! La Razon!"

A customer who wishes to buy a paper steps to the sidewalk and holds out his arm. The horse knows the signal and pulls up so short that it is a wonder the rider is not catapulted over his head.

So efficient is this system of equestrian newsboys that a dweller in the outskirts of Montevideo gets his evening paper almost as soon as the man who lives in the very heart of the city.—Youth's Companion.

ORIGIN OF THE TELEPHONE.

It Sprung From Bell's Efforts to Teach the Deaf to Speak.

Professor Alexander Graham Bell is reported to have explained in a lecture how he came to invent the telephone as follows:

"My father invented a symbol by which deaf mutes could converse, and finally I invented an apparatus by which the vibrations of speech could be seen, and it turned out to be a telephone. It occurred to me to make a machine that would enable one to hear vibrations. I went to an aurist, and he advised me to take the human ear as my model. He supplied me with a dead man's ear, and with this ear I experimented, and upon applying the apparatus I found that the dead man's ear wrote down the vibrations.

"I arrived at the conclusion that if I could make iron vibrate on a dead man's ear I could make an instrument more delicate which would cause those vibrations to be heard and understood. I thought if I placed a delicate piece of steel over an electric magnet I could get a vibration, and thus the telephone was completed.

"The telephone arose from my attempts to teach the deaf to speak. It arose from my knowledge not of electricity, but as a teacher of the deaf. Had I been an electrician I would not have attempted it."

"Belling the Cat."

"Who will bell the cat?" is a curious old proverb, famous in parable and in history. The mice, says the parable, held a consultation how to secure themselves from the cat, and they resolved to hang a bell about the cat's neck to give warning when she approached, but after they had resolved on doing it they were as far off as ever, for who would do it?

Both parable and proverb have immortalized themselves in history. When the Scottish nobles met at Stirling in a body they proposed to take Spence, the obnoxious favorite of James II., and hang him and so get rid of him.

"Ah," said Lord Grey, "that's very well said, but who'll bell the cat?"

"That will I," said the black Earl Angus. He undertook the task, accomplished it and was called "Archibald Bell the Cat" until his dying day.—Glasgow Times.

His Foot In It.

"Well," said the hostess, bidding her guest good night, "you have a long drive home, but it's a lovely evening."

"Yes, isn't it a fine night?" answered the guest addressed.

"So you'll have a nice drive and won't wish you hadn't come to see me."

"On the contrary, I assure you, I always think that the drive home is the very best part of affairs like this."

Another one of the things that might have been put differently if one had had time to think it over.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

National Flowers.

Teacher—Now, children, can you tell me what are the national flowers of England? Class—Roses. Teacher—And France? Class—Lilies. Teacher—And Spain? (Silence for a minute—then small voice at back of the schoolroom) —Bulrushes, ma'am.—Life.

His Bluff Called.

"My dear, you grow prettier every day."

"And shabbier, John. Compliments are all very well, but I'd like to see a little ready cash occasionally."

Maternal Solicitude.

"Is she good to the children?"

"Very. She lets them do everything their father doesn't want them to do."—Detroit Free Press.

The greatest man is he who chooses with the most invincible resolution.—Seneca.

DEATH COMES TO HER RELIEF

Efforts in Behalf of Mrs. Couchier Were Too Late

Word was received in Quincy this noon of the death at Taunton shortly before 12 o'clock of Mrs. Caroline Torrey Couchier of Wollaston. Mrs. Couchier was taken to the observation hospital at Brookline shortly after the fire which destroyed her home at Wollaston, in which her brother lost his life. The physicians at the observation hospital decreed her insane and ordered her removal to Taunton where she has since been confined.

Her commitment to Taunton aroused a storm of protest and several patriotic societies took up the matter. At the session of the probate court held last week a guardian was appointed for Mrs. Couchier and steps were being taken to have her placed in a home if the authorities at Taunton would permit. Before such action could be taken however she passed away.

Mrs. Couchier was formerly a teacher in Quincy and Boston, and was a member of the Daughters of the Revolution, Daughters of 1812 and other patriotic organizations.

Funeral services will be held on Friday at 2.30 P. M. at the Wollaston Unitarian church.

CAMPBELL-MARTIN WEDDING

Last evening, in South Framingham one of the prettiest weddings of this season took place, when Miss Elsie B. Martin of Quincy was united in marriage to John Allan Campbell of South Framingham.

Assembled about the rooms were many friends, who waited in hushed silence during the prelude of Lohengrin's Wedding March, for the bridal procession. The bride was given away by her father, Mr. John Martin of Quincy. The marriage ceremony performed by Rev. J. A. Matheson, was most impressive.

After the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Campbell were assisted in receiving by, Mr. John Martin, Mrs. Gilchrist, the groom's mother; the bridesmaid, Miss Pauline Walker of Somerville and the best man, J. T. Kingsman of South Framingham.

The bride was attired in white brocaded satin, trimmed with point lace and cut en traine; and wore a veil prettily draped and fastened with orange blossoms. The bridesmaid wore a gown of point d'esprit over pink chiffon trimmed with rosebuds and carried a bouquet of Killarney roses. She also wore an exquisite necklace, the gift of the bride.

The bride is well known in Quincy, both as an efficient teacher of the Cranch school and as a popular young lady in society circles. The groom is one of South Framingham's most successful business men.

After the bride and groom left on their honeymoon, the guests admired the many gifts and the attractiveness of the new home, the bride's gift from the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Campbell will be at home to their many friends after April first at Cochituate road, South Framingham.

The Coddington school building which has been closed since last Friday on account of a break in the fire main in the upper story was reopened this morning, for school purposes.

EXPENSES OF CAMPAIGN

Winsloe and Falconer Were Large Contributors

The expenditures by the mayoralty candidates in the last campaign have been filed at the office of City Clerk Crane.

John L. Miller, the successful candidate expended $127, covering mailing and postage.

The Miller campaign committee return shows that T. A. Winsloe and M. McQuade jointly contributed $500, and Alexander Falconer $82.25. The expenditure was divided as follows: Printing, etc., $109.25, hall hire $50, band hire $99, postage $215, and advertising $109.

Dr. John H. Ash, the Democratic candidate spent $292 of which $70 went to the Democratic City Committee, $108 for printing, and $114 for autos.

Charles H. Johnson, the Republican candidate expended $138.92 of which $35 was given the Republican City committee and the balance spent in advertising, mailing and hall hire..

The Republican City committee, through its treasurer, Ira M. Whittemore, shows a balance of $24 on hand. In addition to $35 contributed to the fund by Candidate Johnson, others gave $61. Autos and other expenses are listed at $72 and advertising cost $270.

KINCAIDE THEATRE.

It truly is one good show after another that Manager Wardwell of the Kincaide playhouse provides for his patrons but the show now on is more than good—it's great. Each act and each picture is thoroughly enjoyable and you'll really miss a treat if you fail to take them in tonight or tomorrow.

Blue Cloud Co., presented a pretty Indian camp scene and their singing and dancing delighted one and all: Redit & Hilton made a big hit with their comedy act. They introduce an "animated doll" which proves very interesting and amusing; Polzin Brothers, European gymnasts, go through a series of stunts that are wonderful; McNally & Stewart are comedy entertainers whose equal here is seldom seen. The pictures are excellent.

One of the attractions coming Thursday is Mlle. DeVarros with her leopards and Jaguar. An immense iron cage is built of the stage and in this the daring young lady puts these ferocious beasts through all sorts of stunts. Plan to see this.

FIELD STREET FIRE.

The alarm from Box 227 at 4.53 Monday night was for a slight fire in the house at 22 Field street occupied by Antonio DiBona, and was caused by a too hot fire in the stove, setting fire to a mattress. The fire was extinguished with small loss.

Mayor Miller Lives on Street With Most Property in the Ward

Water Street a Good Second to Franklin Street

Franklin street and Water streets lead in assessed values in Ward Three the former with property valued at $359,300, and the latter with a valuation of $300,675. No other streets of the ward have property to the amount of $200,000. Next in line, in the order named, are Independence avenue, Liberty street, Granite street, Federal avenue and Centre street. Several streets are close onto the $100,000 mark.

As in other wards the buildings are usually more valuable than the land, but there are several exceptions, notably School, Summer, Presidents avenue, Penn, Madison avenue, High and Fort streets.

The 1913 assessed value street by street, as compiled by Principal Assessor Adams, was:

SALEM HIGH BY ONE POINT

Defeats Quincy High in Very Interesting Game

Salem High continued its string of victories by defeating the Quincy High basket ball team 12 to 11 in the local gym Tuesday afternoon. The winning points were scored in the last three minutes of play. The class of 1915 beat 1917 by a score or 32 to 3.

The visitors, with but one loss this season, were threatened with defeat most of the game, but quickly took advantage of the weak playing of some Quincy men and tossed the winning points.

The first period closed with the score four apiece, and when the second period was half over Quincy was leading 9 to 6. Not until several blind passes lost Quincy the ball did Salem appreciate the opportunity to win and Quincy was unable to break up the play.

The winning baskets were made in rapid succession, Green, the Salem centre, getting two from very difficult angles. His playing featured during the game.

Although each team covered up with a vengeance there was but little rough work, and no evidence of poor sportsmanship on the part of players. Rice, the visiting left forward, while after the ball, tripped and his head struck the floor. Dazed for the time being, play was stopped, but he recovered and was able to finish in his position.

The sensational basket of the game was contributed by Captain Jenkins of Quincy, who scored on a direct sharp pass from the centre of the floor. Leon White nosed one over the edge of the net on a toss up, a feat that always receives applause from the spectators.

Earl Bates, who, compared to White looks like a mere child, threshed about the floor in good style, and although he was tossed here and there he continued wearing his gamey smile. Hamlin at times saved Quincy from a worse defeat through his close following of the ball when Salem started short passes toward their goal.

Paige played a stronger offensive than defensive game although his man shot but one basket. Jenkins was withdrawn from play in the closing minutes and Lawrence Martin sent in.

The cause of Quincy's loss primarily was poor shooting. With every chance in the world of piling up 30 points the Quincy men failed repeatedly in their attempts. The passing was good, but incomplete and at several critical moments the players resorted to passing instead of shooting for the basket when almost under it. They also allowed Salem to toss at the net at three different periods of the game, and although the ball was switched to their side of the hall it seems to have occurred as a matter of course.

The popularity of the game at the school is growing to such a proportion that it means the team is to receive well merited support, and even if the quintette did not display the class shown in past games the students admitted that a team must get off color now and then.

For the first time this season a visiting team was cheered and Rice was given a salvo when he re-entered the game.

Quincy's next game is at Holliston on Friday, and the next home game is Tuesday, Jan. 27, with Rockland.

REGRET OVER APPOINTMENTS

Park Commissioner Pfaffmann Should Have Been Retained

Editor of Daily Ledger:—

To all who have come in touch with the work of George E. Pfaffmann as chairman of the Board of Park Commissioners for the last two years,, it must be a matter of especial regret that our Mayor has not reappointed him.

As chairman of the Citizens Playground Committee, I have come in close touch with Mr. Pfaffmann's work on the public playgrounds and I know that under his leadership the public playgrounds in Ward Three and Ward Four increased notably in efficiency and usefulness the last two years.

I believe that Mr. Pfaffmann has done valuable service in the other departments of work which come under his supervision. It was, I understand, chiefly through his effort that there is the excellent running-track and athletic field in Merrymount Park.

Mr. Pfaffmann has not merely worked in this unpaid position with good judgment and executive ability, but with fine earnestness and enthusiasm. One of the great basic principles of good government is to continue those who are found efficient; and when Quincy can secure the services of such a man as Mr. Pfaffmann, it is indeed a matter of keen regret that there should be a failure to reappoint him.

All will, however wish well to his successor, Mr. Whittemore, who has already had experience on the Park board.

EIGHTIETH BIRTHDAY.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Litchfield of Pearl street kept open house on Tuesday in honor of Mr. Litchfield's eightieth birthday. No invitations were extended, but the date was known to many friends and they could not let the anniversary pass without extending congratulations and best wishes. Mr. Litchfield is a carpenter and usually about his daily work, but he took a day off, and appreciated the thoughtfulness of his friends. It is said that he ate an ice cream with each group of callers, having a great fondness for the dish.

Mr. and Mrs. Litchfield celebrated their golden wedding anniversary, Jan. 27, 1911, and continue to enjoy good health. They have one son, Jesse I. Litchfield and one grandson. Mr. Litchfield is a veteran of the Civil War serving in Co. C, 4th Heavy Artillery.

COLLARS FOR PAST GRANDS

Presented at Installation of Mount Wollaston Lodge

The annual reports were received at the regular meeting of Mount Wollaston lodge, I. O. O. F., on Tuesday evening, and it was also the night for the installation of officers, and several surprises. The reports showed the lodge to be in an excellent financial condition, with over $3,000 in the regular fund, and also a building fund and a contingent fund. The membership is steadily growing, and the meetings are well attended.

The following officers were installed by District Deputy Grand Master Frederick A. Goodwin of Dorchester assisted by Past Grand Benjamin Herrick as grand marshal and a suite of past grands of Mount Wollaston lodge:

Past Grand,—Matthew Swanson.
Noble Grand,—William S. Esau.
Vice Grand,—Robert Wood.
Recording Secretary, — Charles Prout.
Financial Secretary.—A. W. Stetson.
Treasurer,—E. Frank Mitchell.
Warden,—J. Herbert Baker.
Conductor,—Alex. C. Marnock.
Chaplain,—Ethan A. Rich.
R. S. S.—Albert T. Echburgh.
L. S. S.,—Arthur H. Sylvester.
R. S. N. G.,—D. Edward Macdonald.
L. S. N. G.,—Charles N. H. Hodgkinson.
R. S. V. G.,—Albert Wood.
L. S. V. G.,—Robert Welch.
Inside Guardian,—Frank O. Hallquist.
Outside Guardian,—Charles S. Jones

Scarcely had William S. Esau been installed as noble grand when Past Grand George Horace Ellison of the lodge at Allston, in behalf of fellow employees on the Boston Transcript, presented him a beautiful bouquet, and spoke of the esteem in which he is held by his associates. Bro. Ellison was formerly an employe of the Quincy Patriot.

Other presentations followed. Past Grand Frank L. Carlton, in behalf of the lodge presented the retiring past grand, Arthur Dunstan, a beautiful past grand's collar. Past Grand Frank W. Flowers then went back to the earlier days of the lodge, and in behalf of the lodge, presented Past Grand Frank F. Prescott a similar past grand's collar. The speaker had kind words for the charter members of 1884 and for Bro. Prescott who was the first recording secretary. Both past grands responded in appreciation of the gifts.

Other addresses were made by the district deputy and members of his suite. Upon adjournment refreshments were served and music was enjoyed.

GRANITE MEN AT STATE HOUSE

No Opposition to Bill Permitting Liens to Be Placed on Monuments

Quincy Manufacturers Put Up a Good Case

(Special to Daily Ledger.)

The granite industry of Quincy massed to the support of Francis Morrison's petition for more equitable legislation at the hearing Monday in the State House by the committee on judiciary.

Of the fifty representatives of the industry present at the hearing a majority were from Quincy. Senator Louis F. R. Langelier conducted the hearing in behalf of the petitioners and Representatives Michael T. Sullivan and Edward J. Sandberg added their voices to the insistence of the granite representatives.

The petition for legislation would permit the makers of tombstones and mortuary monuments to establish a lien upon all such structures erected principally in cemeteries to commemorate the dead. Senator Langelier said that the unjust condition of the present period permits the purchaser of such structure to evade payment and the manufacturers have no lawful right to seize the property if payment for it is not made. He said the granite industry is perhaps the only industry known to the business world that is not now protected. He said that when a structure is once taken inside a cemetery it is a total loss to the manufacturer unless the purchaser is obsessed by an honest desire to pay the manufacturer. In several instances contracts between the manufacturer and the purchaser were held by the courts to be invalid.

As there was no opposition to the purposed legisiatlon it is likely that the committee will report favorably.

DEMOCRATIC EXPENSES

Committee Return a Balance to the Candidate

The expenses of the Democratic City Committee on file in City Clerk Cranes office show that Dennis J. Crowley contributed $130 and Dr. John H. Ash, the party candidate, $70. Of this amount $152.40 was expended during the campaign and $47.60, the balance, has been returned to Dr. Ash. Work on election day, which include checkers at the polls, etc., cost $90, and the balance was spent in hall hire and circularizing.

NEXT YEAR'S REVELS.

Quincy Music hall has already been engaged for Friday evening Jan. 15, 1915, for the fifth annual Twelfth Night Revels and plans have been begun to make them even a bigger success than the Revels of this year.

STRUCK BY LOCOMOTIVE

Nicholas Carey Had A Close Call This Noon

Nicholas Carey had a narrow escape from being killed this noon when he was struck by the inward train due to leave Quincy at 12.04. Mr. Carey was walking up the path near the railroad tracks along side of the old old Hancock cemetery. His cap was pulled down over his ears and he evidently did not hear the approaching train. As the train whizzed by it struck him a glancing blow on the arm which threw him one side. He fell in a heap on the path but the train passed by without doing him any further injury

The Cornell faculty are talking of charging lazy students extra fees for tuition. Possibly they have not yet learned what boys go to college for.

New York City wants a big regional bank, housed in a big tall building, with lots of gilt, even of the pillars have to be of papier mache!

One of the advantages of being an interlocking director is that it keeps you from knowing too much about your own business.

James J. Hill says our high and common schools are dismal failures. Still they furnish excellent preparation for the college and professional ball teams.

Modern dancing received a hard blow when the English nobility indorsed the tango.

Emma Goldman has been defying the Patterson police, who are so unkind as not to arrest her.

As it takes six months longer to get a divorce now the Reno business has closed up, there are many people who will take six minutes longer to deliberate about getting married.

Miss Margaret Woodrow Wilson eldest daughter of President Wilson made a plea Monday night at a Civic improvement meeting in Washington to have the school houses of the country opened to the public as social centres. The social centre movement she said "is the fundamental principal of democracy. No matter how cultured we are we cannot get ideas alone and must get together and get them from each other" Miss Wilson has the right idea. Our school houses cost too much to be used a few hours each day a part of the year.

THE MINIMUM WAGE.

One can but feel admiration for the generosity of the Ford Automobile Company in creating a minimum wage of $5.00 per day, a rate, which even the most menial of its adult employes is to receive. If this disposition to share one's gains were more general, the possibility of the Kingdom of Heaven might seem to exist even after the close of the Sunday School hour.

Yet is there an obligation on prosperous employers, to pay rates of wages double those existing in the open market?

One might imagine, where such munificence is displayed, that routine tasks calling for little intelligence might become too attractive. It is easy to foresee a long line of hungry applicants at the doors of the Ford factories, pleading for jobs as floor sweepers.

Were prosperous business men to adopt this policy generally, would it not tend to encourage young men to hunt for "soft snaps," through personal "pulls," rather than to train themselves for the highest efficiency?

Most people have to take the market valuation for their labors. When they receive wages above the prevailing rate for actual value of service, they become too dependent on a single employer. If for any reason, they lose their favored berths, they are not used to rough competition on a basis of the survival of the fittest.

A ten per cent increase now and then would meet with more general favor.

This calculating age is not likely to provide many imitators of the warm hearted Ford policy, so that there is no need of issuing warnings against it.

WANTED TO KILL LAWYER

Congressman In Near-Tragedy In the National Capitol

Washington, Jan. 21.—A brisk fist fight between Congressman Johnson of Kentucky and John R. Shields, a Washington lawyer, broke up a meeting in the house district committee room and threatened to turn into a tragedy.

Committee clerks separated the men after both had landed telling blows; then Johnson, with blood streaming down his face, broke away and dashed into his private office, shouting: "Let me get my pistol; I'll kill him!"

Someone closed the door and held it, and before Johnson reappeared Shields had been hustled away, leaving his coat and hat behind, and committeemen and spectators had made a hasty retreat.

The incident apparently is closed. Johnson said he "had been in the game too long to keep on when a fight's over," and Shields said he had acted in self-defense and indicated that he did not expect any aftermath.

CLAIMS SELF-DEFENSE

Man Shoots Intruder Who Appears Armed With a Club

Peabody, Mass., Jan. 21.—Shot down by Louis Glichouse when he appeared with a stout oaken club at the door of Glichouse's home, Henry Penchuk is suffering from two bullet wounds, one in the nose and one in the hip.

Penchuk had come to the house to see his wife, who is employed as a nurse for Mrs. Glichouse. He had persistently called at the house, despite protests from Mr. and Mrs. Glichouse, and at last his wife had considered having his sanity tested.

Glichouse surrendered himself and was charged with assault with intent to murder. He pleaded not guilty, claiming self-defense, and was held in $1000.

ALL THE STRIKERS ARE BACK AT WORK

Freight Congestion Bothers Delaware and Hudson

Albany, Jan. 21.—Normal conditions are rapidly becoming restored on the Delaware and Hudson railroad, which was tied up completely by the shortest and most effective strike on record. All of the 5000 employes who struck are back at work and all trains are running on regular schedule.

It may take several days to relieve the freight congestion caused by the walkout. The surrender of the railroad to the demand for the reinstatement of Conductor Slade and Engineer Lynch and the order with which the brief struggle was conducted are declared to be without precedent in labor annals.

KEEPS "SYSTEM" SECRET

Professor Tells London Court of Big Winnings at Monte Carlo

London, Jan. 21.—Dr. Ernest V. Appleby, formerly lecturer at the University of Minnesota, astonished the court of king's bench with stories of his successes at Monte Carlo. He was giving evidence in a suit brought by him to recover $20,000 from Baroness May de Pallandt.

Appleby said he did not gamble, but "I exchanged money at the tables and made money every year by my investments there. One year I made more than $50,000 profit." Dr. Appleby added that he was a sure winner in the way he played.

Judge and counsel tried to get an inkling of Appleby's system, but the plaintiff told them they wanted to know too much.

APPLES NOT AFFECTED

Interstate Ban on Cold Storage Foods Does Not Apply to Them

Washington, Jan. 21.—Apples are not intended to come under the ban of the bill to prohibit the interstate shipment of food products kept in cold storage two months or longer, according to a statement by Representative McKellar of Tennessee, who framed the measure.

The bill is to come up for a hearing on Feb. 4 and members of the committee and McKellar have been flooded with telegrams from apple growers and dealers who thought the measure might affect apples.

CULLOM SERIOUSLY ILL

Family of Ex-Senator From Illinois Fear End is Near

Washington, Jan. 21.—Weakened by the advance of age until his heart and lungs respond only faintly, but with his mental faculties clear and alert, Shelby M. Cullom, former senator from Illinois, is in a critical condition.

Members of his family express fear that the end is not far distant, though their hopes are encouraged by the remarkable display of fortitude and recuperation which the statesman has shown. He is 84 years old.

He Was Sensitive.

Blobbs—You're pretty much stuck on Miss Gobbs, aren't you, old man? Hobbs—I was once, but after what she said to me last night I'm not going to pay any more attention to her. Blobbs—Gee! What did she say? Hobbs—"No!"—Cleveland Leader.

STATE FORESTS.

Eleven reasons why Massachusetts should have state forests are as follows:

One fifth of Massachusetts or about 1,000,000 acres is wild and waste land, producing nothing commercially and scarcely anything through taxation. More land is becoming waste, as the white pine is cut off, and grey birch, alder and scrub oak takes its place. Private owners can't afford to reclaim this land, many towns are too poor, and the state is the only agency that can deal with the problem.

Only seventeen per cent. of the wood from the nineteen principal native species used in Massachusetts industries is raised in the state. The rest is imported, costing the consumer much more than if raised locally.

Wood using industries are leaving Massachusetts and following the raw supply. Can we afford to lose such industries?

In the city forest of Zurich, Switzerland, one man is employed the year around for every thirty-three acres of forest. In the winter months many other men are taken on. If we were to place under State Forest a half of this waste land, the State could at that rate, eventually, give regular employment to fifteen thousand men, not to speak of the thousands that could be given employment during dull seasons in other lines. In Belgium one-tenth of the men used in the forest are employed all the time, the other nine-tenths are employed for the four winter months. This is one means of solving the problem of the unemployed.

Much of this land is being burned over almost annually, destroying what fertility it has. This would not likely happen if under the direct supervision of the State Forestry department.

The forest could be used as wild out-lying parks for recreation purposes. In Germany large hotels are maintained in the forests by the states and cities. Thousands of people use these forests for play.

Employment will be given to prison labor, under the present bill, thereby conserving men as well as the forests.

Tubercular patients could be given an opportunity to do light work in the open, as is the case in some other states.

These forests could be made bird and game sanctuaries, a much needed factor in this state.

The protection of our water from impurities and its conservation for power will be greatly enhanced by the establishment of large forest areas. These forests would complement a system of reservoiring which is now being investigated in this state by a special commission.

The new western states are reclaiming their waste lands, Massachusetts is only making more. When is this to be stopped? New Hampshire, Vermont, Connecticut and New York, all have State Forests. Three and one-half million acres of state forests are to be found in the United States, yet Massachusetts has but a few scattered plots, aggregating but a few hundred acres, and in no wise real forests. We are behind the times in this work and are going backward. This is fact—not conjecture. This procedure is not typical of the Bay State.

THAT TIRED FEELING

Suggests Grandmother's Remedy

It's true, the season is here with its sudden changes, and the old idea that we need a blood medicine is not without reason. Too much heavy food has caused a torpid liver, sluggish blood, and a weak, tired out feeling.

Sulphur, cream of tartar and molasses was grandmother's remedy but that has long ago been displaced by Vinol, a combination of the two most world famed tonics, namely, the medicinal curative elements of the cod's liver, without oil, and iron for the blood.

Vinol builds you up, makes you eat more and digest better, makes your blood rich and pure—puts healthy color in your cheeks.

N. G. Clift of Opelika, Ala., says: "Last spring I was all run-down, no strength, no appetite. I took Vinol and was greatly benefited by its use, as I soon felt strong and well as ever."

We guarantee Vinol to satisfy you and refund your money if it does not. Edward J. Murphy, Druggist, Quincy, Mass.

AT HOME OF AUNT

Bradley Girl Not Going to Return to the Family Homestead

New York, Jan. 21.—Delilah Bradley, the 16-year-old eloping Sunday school teacher, was not brought back to the family homestead at Pemberton, N. J. She will remain with an aunt in Camden and rejoin her parents when they have moved away from Pemberton, as it is reported they intend doing.

The girl's father brought the girl back from Mobile, where she was arrested with Joel M. Foster, the wealthy married poultry farm owner of Brown's Mills.

PARTICIPATED IN MOTHER'S MURDER

Schoolgirl Was Infatuated With Her Stepfather

Galesburg, Ills., Jan. 21.—Julia Flake, the 15-year-old schoolgirl who confessed her part in the pact that resulted in the slaying of her mother, Mrs. Robert Flake Higgins, was taken to Aledo and placed in custody of a probation officer. She probably will escape prosecution.

The confession of her stepfather, Robert Higgins, that he shot the girl's mother because of his infatuation for Julia, brought no display of emotion from the girl, but she denied she had promised to marry Higgins and told the county authorities that only the discovery by her mother of her relations with her stepfather prompted her to play the part she did in the killing.

ARE BARRED FOREVER

Alien Slavers Once Accused Cannot Enter United States

New York, Jan. 21.—The ruling of the United States supreme court that "intended concubinage" is ground for the exclusion of aliens was broadened and supplemented by the United States court of appeals in a decision disposing of the habeas corpus proceedings instituted in behalf of Hans Bauer, a Swiss millionaire, who, while belonging to the class excluded, applied for naturalization and obtained first papers in September, 1911.

The decision holds that aliens who have been excluded for "intended concubinage," whether they return singly or together, are forever barred from the United States.

ADVISED TO LEAVE TOWN

But Labor Organizer Declares It Is His Intention to Remain

Claremont, N. H., Jan. 21.—The business interests of this town gave notice to John Luthrinter, a labor organizer, that they did not want him in the town and advised him to leave immediately.

The organizer met their mandate with the rejoinder that he would remain, notwithstanding.

Luthrinter, organizer of the International Association of Machinists, came to Claremont to organize the machinists, but he met with opposition from the manufacturers and the business men, who urged the workers to discourage the efforts of the organizer.

INTERVENTION IN MEXICO

Favored by Speaker at Dinner of First Parish Club

If it took 100,000 soldiers to put down the revolution in Mexico in 1847, then it would not take more than 25,000 to quell the present trouble, was one of the many startling statements made by T. Phillip Terry on Tuesday evening at the First Parish club in his address on Mexico.

As usual the members of the club assembled at 6 o'clock and after a half hour's social time adjourned to the chapel, where a roast beef dinner was served. The attendance was the largest the club has ever had, upwards of 175 being present.

At the head table in addition to the President, Rev. A. L. Hudson, and the speakers of the evening, were Rev. Louis C. Cornish of the First church, Hingham, who offered the invocation, Walter E. Piper, James H. Stetson, Henry M. Faxon, Frederick H. Smith, Clarence Burgin and H. Everett Crane.

The dinner was well cooked and was pronounced excellent. In introducing the speaker of the evening Rev. Mr. Hudson told of the present interest in the unrest in Mexico, and said that it required the most astute diplomacy to deal with the Mexican type of people. It was difficult to understand the conditions in Mexico, but the speaker was one who had spent many years in that country so that the club would hear at first hand about it.

In opening the speaker said that there were some curious things about Mexico, and it was at the present time an interesting subject to the United States. He went into detail about the origin and characteristics of the Mexican race, whom he said were of Asiatic origin. The early settlers came from Alaska. He also spoke of the many connecting links between Mexico with Japan and the Spaniards. Mexicans were of many grades and 63 languages and dialects were spoken, although Spanish was the common language. When Spain conquered Mexico many of the old aspects, temples and libraries were demolished. It was only necessary to dig but to a small depth in Mexico City to find relics of the olden days. From 1521 to 1821 Mexico was under the iron rule of Spain, so that the habits of the lower classes come from the Spaniards.

In Mexico there were three murders every two days and the death rate was from 62 to 72 per 1,000 while here in Quincy it is but 15 to 1,000. The war of independence lasted from 1810 to 1821, when the Spanish yoke was broken off. Mexico is constantly the scene of revolutions and but for the Munroe doctrine Mexico would soon lose its nationality. The Mexicans were constantly fighting among themselves.

Passing on to the time of President Diaz he told how he had ruled the country and how it had prospered under his reign, and how it had been developed, but he was deposed when he got old.

Under Maderio vast concessions were granted, and it is more than probable that he died while trying to be rescued by his friends. Under Maderio's reign the national credit was shattered.

The speaker said that if Roosevelt had been President he would not have allowed the American people in Mexico be treated as had the present administration in Washington which he severely criticised for the stand it was taking in the present situation. No other country in the world, said the speaker, would allow its citizens to be subjected to such treatment.

Instead of protecting Americans President Wilson had ordered them to leave Mexico, with the result that 30,000 had been driven out and hundreds of millions of dollars of American property had been destroyed. No other country would allow its people to be robbed as the Americans had been. He hoped that every man who desired to see our citizens protected would see to it we had the right kind of government. Roosevelt would have crushed the present revolution at its inspiration.

Just think of getting first hand information about Mexico through Sweden. Minister Wilson was removed from Mexico because he did not behave in a lady-like manner. Washington does not seem to grasp the situation.

He ridiculed the idea of a new election, saying that 70 percent of the people cannot read or write, and do not know who their President is. If the most popular bull fighter was put up for President he would get elected. Many of these people were little more than savages. There is no name bad enough to call them. They are fighting tooth and nail to throw out the Americans. They are utterly incapable of appreciating kindness. Americans are regarded with hatred. Force of arms is the only argument to use with them, and the only argument they can understand. They can only be ruled by the militia as Diaz says. They will accept new ideas only at the point of the musket. If Huerta had been recognized he would have quelled the revolution a year ago.

Vila is a man known for his murderous record and his skill in appropriating property of others, when they are not looking. Unless some strong man puts down the revolution by force it will never be done, because as soon as one side gets up the other gets after him. History shows that the average revolution in Mexico lasts seven years, and if the United States does not intend to stop it, it should step aside and allow some other nation to do so.

The present hesitation will get us into war with some other nations. It will be an act of humanitarianism if the United States will step in. Mexicans do not want to fight, and if an army was sent to put down the rebellion they would have to tramp a thousand miles to find any Mexican soldiers to fight. He believed that the better class of Mexicans would welcome the United States.

Mexicans, he said, do not appreciate their beautiful country, which at this point the speaker described. The mean temperature of Mexico City is 68 degrees. It produces 2 percent as much copper as the United States, 5 percent as much gold, and 3 per cent as much oil.

Again turning to the present situation, the speaker said they have no desire for war other than to plunder. He doubted if they could assemble 50,000 troops to fight. They have no desire to fight a well drilled army. If it took 100,000 men in 1847 it would only take 25,000 now. President Wilson has no right to parley with them. Minister Wilson did not kill Madero but tried to rescue him.

In speaking of the morals of Mexico, the speaker said that until Nebraska and New Jersey had become clean they should not talk about Mexico.

As the speaker concluded his address the audience arose as one man and cheered him to the echo, showing that his conclusions in regard to Mexico had struck a sympathetic chord with them.

Mr. Terry said that he would be glad to answer any questions about Mexico, and several took the opportunity to ask questions.

A half hour's social followed the address.

The movement started by the Rockland Women's club and the Rockland Commercial club for cleaner streets in Rockland is a good one and ought to meet with the commendation of the townspeople. There is no doubt that there could be an improvement in the appearance of the streets of Rockland and the sooner some plan is devised to keep the streets free from refuse the better it will be. The town should take up the matter and no-doubt it will when it is brought to the attention of the people as it will be by the Woman's club and Commercial club. Rockland is a pretty clean town as a rule but there is no reason why the streets should not be kept cleaner and the move to make them so is a move in the right direction.—Rockland Standard.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

The Twelfth Night Revels last week Friday evening at Quincy Music hall given by the Civic committee for the benefit of the children's gardens and playgrounds, was by far the jolliest and prettiest party ever given in the city. Throughout the evening the floor was thronged with the revelers in every kind of costume and presented a gay scene to the onlookers. It was a great social success, although not financially as much so as expected on account of heavy expenses. The Civic committee was indebted to Miss Georgiana C. Lane and Delcevare King in carrying out many special features and to club members.

For the next regular meeting of the club instead of the dramatics as scheduled in the year book, the afternoon will be in charge of the Civic committee. Mrs. H. H. Kitson chairman is arranging for a lecturer who will speak on sociological questions and an interesting afternoon is promised. Tuesday's meeting will be at the clubhouse and a social tea will follow the lecture.

Mrs. Henry C. Mulligan ex-president of the Massachusetts State Federation is to be present Tuesday afternoon and speak on the Endowment fund.

The dramatics will take place at Quincy Music hall Feb. 10 and rehearsals are well underway by the Program committee and a fine performance may be looked forward to. At the last meeting of the club it was voted to give club members unlimited guest privileges for the dramatics for their women friends. The tickets must be obtained in advance as none would be sold at door and can be procured of Mrs. Z. S. Arnold, 38 Coddington street and of the Custodian committee—Mrs. Charles R. OUR NATIONAL PRESIDENT.

Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, has taken time and made opportunity since she was installed in office to travel about the United States and get acquainted with the local club problems and with the local club women who make up the million on the Federation's membership lists. Recently she was halted long enough to glean from her some interesting information as to her observations, impressions and conclusions about club women in general and club work in particular.

When it is remembered that Mrs. Pennybacker's itineraries have extended over nearly the whole of the United States during the last year, it is evident that what she says can be taken as striking "the universal note" for the club women of America as the testimony of the more limited observer could not be expected to do. "In travelling about the country do you know what impresses me most deeply is the fact that the majority of the club women into whose homes I go are good housekeepers and home makers," she says. "Women realize that home making now extends beyond the four walls of a woman's own house. The most hopeful feature of club life is that women have discovered one another, have learned to admire one another and have become able to do good team work. Club women' possess a fine spirit one toward another."

Much of Mrs. Pennybacker's career has been spent as an educator. Both as teacher and textbook author she was for years identified with the educational work of the Lone Star State. In her husband, who was one of the founders of the public school system of Texas, she found an earnest sympathizer with her ambitions for the women's club movement. Soon after her marriage she tried to organize a club of men and women. "But I soon found that we could not depend upon the men for regular attendance and for systematic work, as they were mostly professional men." Then she organized one of the earlier Texas women's clubs, the "first literary club," and later still she organized a city federation. Ever since 1901, when she became president of the Texas Federation of Women's Clubs, she has been, year by year, more prominently identified with woman's club work.

CULP—CARRENO.

The concert which Julia Culp and Teresa Carreno are to give in Symphony Hall a week from Sunday afternoon, January 25th, will be for many the most attractive of the winter series. Julia Culp in her appearances here has established herself in the favor of Boston as has been the fortune of very few other singers. At her song recital the other day Jordan Hall was filled to its utmost capacity and naturally she will draw from a much wider public for a Sunday concert.

Madame Carreno likewise has a large and loyal public who will welcome her appearance. Madame Culp will sing three groups of songs, the first will be by Schumann, the second by Jugo Wolf and the third will be English, Scotch and Irish songs. Madame Carreno's numbers will be Beethoven's Sonata Opus 57; a group of Chopin numbers; an Impromptu, No. 3 by Schubert and Tausig's arrangement of Schubert's Marche Militaire.

VAN DYCK KITCHEN

Room In Old Farmhouse Remodeled Into Dutch Interior.

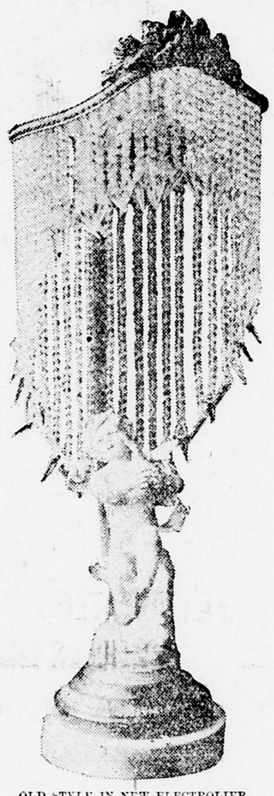
WALLS OF COBBLESTONES.

The Apartment Trim Painted Gray. Brick Red In Pottery—Chimney and Hearth Add to the Very Quaint Effect of the Arrangements.

A wealthy woman is remodeling an old farmhouse into a modern home. The old kitchen has walls made of cobbles or bowlders found in the region. It has a pointed ceiling about twenty feet high at the peak, with hand hewn beams fastened with pins in the old fashioned way.

In remodeling her kitchen she wished to keep as many of the old features as possible, so she has whitewashed the bowlders, allowed the high ceiling to remain and is having worked out for her a color scheme of white, gray and brick red which will be most picturesque.

The large five foot range will be brick set with a hearth of red brick on two sides. The old red brick chimney will also add its note of color, as will the immense copper boiler near the range.



OLD STYLE IN NEW ELECTROLIER.

The beams of the ceiling are to be painted terra cotta, and many articles of pottery, like casseroles and big jugs, will all be in harmony.

All the new trims will be painted gray, which, with the whitewashed walls showing the old cobbles and the brick red in pottery, chimney and hearth, will make a kitchen which reminds one of the pictures of some of the Dutch painters of interiors.

For rooms furnished in the old time effect the very modern electrolier pictured, carried out in colonial design with prism trimmings, is one of the latest novelties.

Kitchen Keynotes.

A very good way to save the coal bill will be found by dissolving half a teaspoonful of saltpeter in half a cupful of water; then pour over a scuttle of coal.

To bleach white goods that have become yellow dip them in strong blue water after washing, let them become very blue and then hang out to dry. When they are washed they will be thoroughly bleached.

After filling a rubber water bottle with hot water it is a good plan to press the side of the bottle before putting in the stopper. This allows all the steam to escape, and there is little danger of the seams coming undone, no matter how boiling hot the water may be.

To remove scorch from linen use the juice of an onion. Bake a large onion and squeeze out the juice through a piece of muslin; mix with an ounce of fuller's earth, a little finely shredded soap and a wineglassful of vinegar. Boil together till the soap has dissolved, leave till cold and then apply the preparation to the scorched linen. Let it dry and then wash in the usual way.

Large holes in the knees and heels of socks and stockings, if mended as follows, will be found to wear longer, look neater and be more comfortable than if mended in the usual way: Take some strong black net, rub out any stiffness with the hand, cut slightly larger than the hole and tack neatly on the wrong side. Then darn out and into the net on the right side until the hole is well covered. The darning will hardly be seen, and you will be delighted with the results.

New Ice Cream Freezer.

To save time and trouble in making two kinds of ice cream at home a twin freezer has been put on the market. Each compartment holds a quart, and two flavors or a cream and an ice or frozen pudding may be prepared simultaneously.

Give Your Neighbor an Equal Chance

By HOLLAND.

IF you have been buying goods of a mail order house you doubtless think it has been to your advantage to do so. You have believed that you were saving money or were getting better goods. Let us see if this is true.

Have you tried to do business with your local merchant—your neighbor—on the terms that the mail order house exacts? No? Then suppose you try it.

Just go into the store, plank down your cash and tell what you want. You might even tell the merchant that you will wait a few days for the goods. See if your local merchant can't serve you better and as cheaply as the mail order house.

The local merchant usually extends credit for two, four or six months. The mail order house demands cash in advance. It uses your money as working capital. It loses nothing in interest, nothing in bad debts or on slow paying customers. Try this cash in advance plan on the local merchant—the man you know—and see if he can't make it to your advantage to

SPEND YOUR MONEY WHERE YOU MAKE IT.

THE CHILDREN'S PLAY.

The Children's Players are busily at work rehearsing for the annual plays to be given next month for children. This year's play "The Merry Fiddle" was written by Miss Louise Burleigh of Boston formerly of South Braintree. It is a pretty play especially good for small children as there are no dragons or things to frighten them. This is the third season plays have been written and played especially for children and it is now something the children look forward to.

The performances will be given at the Shubert theatre, Boston, that of Friday afternoon Feb. 13 for Boston children and Saturday morning Feb. 14 for out of town children.

Miss Esther Sidelinger is one of the Children's players and Mrs. Wilson Marsh one of the patronesses. Other Quincy people are also interested.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE MEETINGS.

Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont of New York, mother of the Duchess of Marlborough, will preside at the "Statesmen's Meeting" in Tremont Temple, Boston, Saturday evening. Three United States senators will speak: Senator Clapp of Minnesota on "Woman Suffrage," Senator Kenyon of Iowa on the "Kenyon Red Light Bill," and Senator Thomas of Colorado, chairman of the Senate Woman Suffrage Committee, on "The Federal Amendment." Two plans proposed by the Boston City Federation for the better protection of women on thoroughfares and in other public places were discussed at the legislative conference held this afternoon at the New England Women's Club rooms. Miss Marion Nichols, chairman of the legislative committee and others spoke.

NOT APPOINTED.

Some of the newspapers got things badly mixed in reporting the list of appointments as made by Mayor Miller Monday night. One of the worst blunders was publishing a list of members of the Board of Health when as a matter of fact none were appointed. The Mayor intended to send in a list of members of this board with the other appointments but something arose at the last minute and he withdrew the list.

In addition to this, these same papers published among the list of appointments those of Daniel Scouler, Jr., as Inspector of Milk, James M. Cantfill as sealer of weights and measures, Jeremiah J. Keniley as plumbing inspector, Dr. Francis Abele, Jr. as inspector of animals and James Allan as inspector of provisions. None of these latter were appointed, and in fact their names were not given out by the Mayor for appointment.

Messrs. Scouler, Cantfill, Keniley and Allen are under the provisions of the civil service law and therefore do not have to be appointed, while Dr. Abele's appointment as inspector of animals it is understood has to be confirmed by the council.

If attention had been paid to the list of appointments as read in the council these annoying errors would not have occurred.

—A well-known physician has said that too many clothes are the cause of colds. A lot of modern women ought to be immune if that is the fact.

Merciful Wife.

A Cincinnati man who attempted to dictate what his wife should wear is now defendant in a divorce suit. It is a wonder he isn't the central attraction in a jam-up funeral.—Houston Post.

Miss Evelyn McCormick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Columbia McCormick of 83 Tremont street, South Braintree, had a narrow escape from death last Tuesday morning. Miss McCormick is a pupil in Grade 8, at the Noah Torrey school and with some playmates was on her way to school across Sunset lake, when she broke through the thin ice which had formed after the last cutting near the ice houses of J. F. Sheppard & Sons and she was plunged into the cold water. The screams of the girls attracted the attention of Wallace Scott, 16 years old, who was delivering groceries on Pond street and he rushed to the rescue. Unable to reach the girl, he took off his jacket and throwing it towards her, she was able to grasp it and with the combined efforts of the party was pulled to safety. INSTRUCTIONS TO BURGLARS

In Book Found In Raid on a Brooklyn Flat

IT HAS SEEN MUCH SERVICE

Two Young Men Surrounded by Loot Are Taken Into Custody When Detectives Discover School For Crime —Skeleton Keys and Five Hundred Pawn Tickets Found

New York, Jan. 21.—In a raid made in Brooklyn on what is said to have been a school for burglars, a book of instructions to young burglars was found. An index to this remarkable book, which was entirely written in pen and ink, showed that it contained instructions how to pick all kinds of locks, to avoid finger prints, to pry apart iron bars from windows, and how to prevent women from screaming.

Two young men came through Manhattan avenue, Brooklyn, and attracted the attention of Detectives Carroll and Van Gallizer. The men both carried heavy bundles, and, seeing they were followed, dropped the bundles and ran. One was caught; the other escaped.

At the station house the prisoner said he is Carmine Youran. Both bundles contained new linen tablecloths. A card was found on Youran on which was written "93 George street.

Carroll and Van Gallizer, with two other detectives, went to the George street address and broke into an apartment on the third floor. There they came upon two young men who were surrounded by loot, clothing and jewelry.

The men, who said they are William Gallanta, 20, and Frank Vetter, 20, were arrested. Detectives searched the flat and found 500 pawn tickets.

On the mantel was the book of instructions. In the front part of it were the questions and in the back part the answers. The book was finger marked, showing that it had seen much service.

Then the detectives found a bunch of skeleton keys, one of which is most intricate. The book of instructions explains it will open a lock, even though there is a key in the opposite side. It is so constructed that the end of the skeleton key takes hold of the other key and turns it.

Suddenly the door was opened and a pale, haggard, stoop-shouldered man entered. Before he could retreat he was seized and searched. In his pockets were found several boxes of heroin, which he intended to sell in the "burglar school." He said he is Charles Abel.

Charges of burglary were made against the three other prisoners. The police expect them to implicate others, and, possibly, the man who ran the "burglar school."

TO END HER AGONY

Aged Man Says He Killed Sick Wife at Her Request

Philadelphia, Jan. 21.—How he killed his 65-year-old wife, who, suffering frightful agonies from cancer, begged him to put her out of her misery, was told in court by William Eberwein, an 89-year-old veteran of the Civil war.

Judge Wahling sentenced him to solitary confinement in the eastern penitentiary for not less than seven years and not more than fourteen. This is practically a life sentence.

Eberwein's wife, who had been an invalid for years, was found dead in her home. It was found that death was caused by a fractured skull, she having been beaten over the head with a board.

ENFORCEMENT IMPOSSIBLE

Circuit Court Judge Declares Wisconsin Eugenic Law Void

Milwaukee, Jan. 21.—The Wisconsin eugenic law which provides for the issuance of marriage licenses only upon a certificate of a clean bill of health, including the Wasserman test, from a physician, was declared unconstitutional by Judge Eschweiler of the circuit court. The case will go to the supreme court.

The law is praised because of its movement toward suppression of sexual diseases, but is condemned because its enforcement is practically an impossibility.

Portrait Brings $150,000

London, Jan. 21.—Holbein's famous portrait of Thomas Cromwell, earl of Essex, which has been in the possession of the family of the earl of Caledon for many years, was sold for $150,000 to Thomas Agnew & Sons, London art dealers.

Flocking From United Kingdom

London, Jan. 21.—According to an official statement just issued, 388,813 emigrants left Great Britain and Ireland in the year 1913. Of this number 94,660 went to the United States and 190,903 to Canada.

Lineman Killed by Live Wire

South Framingham, Mass., Jan. 21.—John B. Henderson, 24 years old, a lineman, was electrocuted when 2300 volts of electricity passed through his body while he was working on a pole.

THE BRYAN-CLARK FEUD

Hatchet Buried Last Spring Appears to Have Been Resurrected

Washington, Jan. 21.—The feud between Secretary of State Bryan and Speaker Clark, resulting from Bryan's attack upon Clark at the Baltimore convention, has broken out anew.

T. H. Pickford, a local politician, received from Clark a formal but final declination of an invitation to a Democratic dinner and "love feast" this evening. Clark sent "regrets" after he discovered Bryan was also to be a guest.

Friends of the speaker say Clark is adhering to a policy not to attend functions where Bryan is invited. It has leaked out that members of Clark's family have also raised the anti-Bryan banner.

Clark apparently "buried the hatchet" with Bryan at a dinner last spring, but his formal statement of "reconciliation" issued at that time was vague and cold.

GRAFT IS CHARGED

Alleged Widespread Use of Money to Effect Legislation In Quebec

Montreal, Jan. 21.—The Montreal Daily Mail publishes charges of alleged "incredible corruption among the members of the legislature at Quebec." The Mail says a committee of the legislature should be appointed to investigate thoroughly the charges which The Mail asserts it will put forward with supporting evidence. The Mail says:

"We know that money has been paid members of the legislature for legislation, which, on the face of it, is so subversive of the public interest as to need more condemnation than its clauses bear. The legislation was literally smuggled through at every stage in such a way as to evade the scrutiny of the more decent elements in the two houses and the members of the press gallery."

STAY OF EXECUTION IN WAKEFIELD CASE

Woman Will Not Go to the Gallows on March 4

New Haven, Jan. 21.—Mrs. Bessie J. Wakefield will not be hanged March 4, the date set for her execution.

By agreement between counsel before the supreme court in this city the hearing of the motion for a new trial was postponed until the March term of the court.

As the case will not be reached at this time so that decision on the appeal can be made, the postponement acts automatically as a stay of execution until the motion for a new trial can be decided.

James Plew, convicted jointly with Mrs. Wakefield of murder of her husband and sentenced to be hanged also on March 4, has not appealed his case, and will undoubtedly be executed on the date set.

KILLS SELF AND CHILD

Woman and Young Son Found Dead In Gas-Filled Room

Pawtucket, R. I., Jan. 21.—With the body of her 4-year-old son clasped in her arms, Mrs. Nathan H. Studley was found dead in a gas-filled bedroom on the street floor of her house. Two jets were open. The medical examiner pronounced the case one of suicide and homicide.

Mrs. Studley's husband is a traveling salesman, and left home Monday. His wife was the daughter of Rev. Frank Rector of the First Baptist church. The son was their only child.

Mrs. Studley had been under a doctor's care and, although she was not believed to be demented, it was learned she had had hallucinations.

PLEAD NOT GUILTY

Justices of the Peace Arraigned In Nomination Paper Cases

Boston, Jan. 21.—Jeremiah G. Herlihy and John Kearns, justices of the peace, who were among the four men secretly indicted for making false attests on jurats to Kenny and Curley nomination papers, were arraigned before Judge Chase, pleaded not guilty, and were held in $1000 bail each.

Both Kearns and Herlihy contend that the men to whom they administered the oaths represented themselves as being the persons named.

A Woman's Exploit

She Was Sent Out as a Spy by President Lincoln

By F. A. MITCHEL

The life of President Lincoln is so thoroughly identified with the four years of war—the last four years of his earthly existence—that we are not accustomed to think of him in any other connection. During that brief period we see him under many lights—now he is endeavoring by wise diplomacy to prevent foreign governments from intervening between the north and the south to insure the separation of the states and on the same day gives to a woman of low degree the life of her son, who has been sentenced to be shot for desertion; at one moment he is urging the generals to move their armies against the enemy; the next he is sending out an individual—a girl in her teens perhaps—to bring him information of the Confederates.

It is this last named field that connects Mr. Lincoln especially with the romance in adventures of the war.

A secret service bureau was organized, with headquarters at the capital, by Allan Pinkerton. It was his business to provide and equip spies, but it was Mr. Lincoln who laid out their work for them. He told them what information he needed, and it was their part to get it for him. The risk they ran was very great, and their pay—when they worked for pay—was proportionately large.

Possibly the most successful of Mr. Lincoln's spies—that is, considering the importance of the information obtained—was a young woman. Kate Beale had lived in Richmond, the capital of the Confederacy, and during her residence there had naturally become familiar with the place and taken on the accent peculiar to Virginia. Moreover, she was supposed to sympathize with the southern cause. She was at the time of Mr. Lincoln's incumbency the only support of an invalid mother and found it difficult to provide the necessary supplies.

It occurred to Miss Beale that she might put her knowledge of Richmond to advantage by going there and bringing information to the federal government. True, if she were caught in such work she was liable to suffer death or at least be kept in a southern prison till the end of the war, leaving her mother without either support or attendance. She went to Allan Pinkerton and told him of the advantages she possessed for secret service work at Richmond and found him a willing listener.

But Pinkerton before employing her must make sure of her fidelity to the Union cause. She proposed to deceive her friends in Richmond, but she might if she chose deceive those in Washington, for her plan was to offer her services to the Confederate government to go to Washington and bring back information for President Davis. Washington was full of southerners ready to convey information to the Confederate government, and it was difficult to tell who could be trusted.

Pinkerton pretended to trust Miss Beale, but before employing her sent decoys to her to try to draw from her a betrayal in case she intended to work for the Confederacy instead of the Union. She stood all these tests, and at last Pinkerton, becoming satisfied that she was to be trusted, sent her to President Lincoln. This was in the spring of '65, when the war was drawing to a close.

On arriving at the White House she was admitted to a room, in which she found Mr. Lincoln alone. He had a very simple but very important work for her.

"Mr. Pinkerton informs me," he said, "that you are familiar with Richmond. I am anxious to learn what provisions they have there on which to subsist in case our armies surround and cut off their lines of supplies. It will be your part to take notice of their depots, to see how well filled they are and if necessary, or you can do so without too much risk, learn what they have from officials. My object is to discover whether they are in condition to stand a siege or must surrender in case General Grant, who is south of them at Petersburg, captures the place, cutting off their only communications southward."

Miss Beale understood perfectly what was required of her and its value if executed. Mr. Lincoln sent her off with a "God bless you and bring you back safely from your perilous work."

Citizens were occasionally passing to and fro between the lines, and Miss Beale, having President Lincoln's pass, had no trouble in getting to Richmond. She pretended to be bitter against the Federal government and securing the acquaintance of the wife of the officer in charge of the commissary department of the Confederate capital was introduced to him as a person who was anxious to serve the Confederate cause. She asked the commissary how she could aid in the matter of getting supplies into the Confederacy from the north. She was taken to President Davis for a reply and held a conference with him and the commissary general in the executive mansion.

There were but two ways by which supplies could be introduced into the Confederacy from the outside—blockade running and landing a vessel at some point not guarded by Federal troops. The former of these methods was the common one. Miss Beale said that she knew Confederate sympathizers in Baltimore who would be glad to send a load of provisions to some point on the Virginia shore if they could be assured that the ship would be met by a Confederate force. It is not a hundred miles down Chesapeake bay to North Cumberland county, Va., and there were many convenient points on the Potomac and the bay for landing. Mr. Davis and the commissary general were much pleased with Miss Beale's plan and spent some time conferring together in her presence as to the most convenient place for them to send a force to meet the ship bringing them.

All this was but a cloak for the spy to learn of the available stock of provisions in Richmond and to secure a return to the north. While the matter was pending she learned that there were very few commissary stores in Richmond, and if General Grant should cut the only line of supply still open—that through Petersburg—the capital of the Confederacy would be obliged to surrender.

At last, a point for landing supplies by the fictitious Baltimore sympathizers having been agreed upon, Miss Beale was given a pass to go through the lines and resolved on her departure the next day.

But now at the last moment a danger came up in a singular coincidence. A Confederate spy was in Richmond who was playing the same game on the Federal that she was playing on the Confederate government. It happened that this person had seen Miss Beale coming out of Allan Pinkerton's office in Washington. Whether he remembered just when and where he had seen her, or whether he was not quite sure of it, she knew at once by the scrutiny with which he looked at her that she was in danger.

All her faculties were concentrated on losing the man or his losing her before he could take any decided action. Appearing not to notice his interest in her, she walked on till espying an empty cab she called the driver and entered it.

And now comes one of the most remarkable cases of assurance under peril that have ever been manifested by either man or woman. With lightning rapidity she formed her plan.

"Drive me to the executive mansion," she called to the driver.

She was whirled away, but a glance at the man she was trying to avoid assured her that he was watching her, though he was endeavoring to make it appear that he was not, and when she reached the mansion and alighted at the door she saw him hurrying after her. Entering the house, she asked for the president and was shown to the anteroom to wait her turn for an audience. She had nothing to communicate to Mr. Davis, her object being to indicate to the man who followed her that she had business with the government. Finally, when she thought this had been effected, she determined to make an exit.

If her shadower were outside waiting for her, she felt that she was lost. Her heart was in her throat as she passed from the house. She dare not look about her, but so far as she could see the man had vanished. At any rate, she saw nothing of him. If he were still shadowing her he was keeping out of sight.

But she must seek safety in flight. A few miles from Richmond to the southward are the battlefields fought over by Lee and McClellan during the peninsular campaign. Miss Beale directed the cabman to drive out to these fields. Having reached her destination she dismissed the cabman and started for Fortress Monroe, some seventy miles to the southeastward.

The story of this journey, on foot, by wagon, by boat on the James river, is a romance in itself. It was a flight from prison, a flight from the halter. At last, worn with fatigue and exposure, the fugitive reached the fort, on whose battlements floated the stars and stripes, and she knew she was safe.

The closing act in the drama is when Miss Beale reappeared at the White House. Mr. Lincoln was in his office one morning when a messenger gave him the name of Kate Beale as one desiring to see him.

"Thank God!" muttered the president. "Bring her to me at once."

Mr. Lincoln's joy at his emissary's safe return was enhanced by the news she brought him that the Confederate capital was without supplies. General Grant was hammering at Petersburg and was destined a month later to capture the place. So Mr. Lincoln was assured by Miss Beale's report that as soon as Grant had finished his work the capital of the Confederacy would be at the disposal of the Federal government and that the end of the war was in sight.

Kate Beale was well paid for her work. Indeed, she received enough to supply her mother's and her own wants for a long time to come. Luckily, the war soon after her exploit ended, or doubtless the fascination of the danger involved would have led her to risk her life again. But the pitcher that goes often to the well is at last broken.

Such episodes as this have connected Mr. Lincoln's name with adventurous story. But this is but one of the many branches of romance that, taken together, have woven a charm about him which will last as long as his name and his work are remembered. But that which especially endears him to the American people is his many acts of mercy to the humblest of those who begged for it during the period when the shedding of blood seemed to move the clock of the world back twenty centuries, necessitating a new message of peace on earth and good will to men.

DAILY BILL OF ABOUT $2500

What It Costs Uncle Sam For Care of Refugees

DEEP GRATITUDE IS SHOWN

Mexicans Pleased at Treatment Accorded Fugitives From Ojinaga, Who Are Now Ready For Transportation to Fort Bliss—Officers Must Remain In Stockade

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 21.—The kindly treatment accorded the Mexican federal refugees from Ojinaga by the American government has excited deep gratitude among the people of Monterey and vicinity, and has done much to encourage the belief that the United States is really friendly to the Mexican people, according to a report from Consul Hanna.

Care of the uninvited guests is proving costly. Even before the evacuation of Ojinaga the United States government had expended about $150,000 for the keep of Mexicans under detention, and with the Ojinaga fugitives added the daily bill will amount to some $2500.

For a time the Huerta government regularly remitted the money to pay for feeding the refugees interned at Fort Rosecrans and Brownsville, but the payments stopped some time ago because of the exhausted condition of the Mexican treasury.

All of the 3300 Mexican soldiers and the 1367 women and children refugees who were driven out of Ojinaga by the rebels have arrived in Marfa from the border and the first trainload is ready to come to come to Fort Bliss, where they are to be interned indefinitely. The Mexicans have been assorted into their original commands and will be so kept during their detention.

Like the common soldiers, General Mercado and his officers will not be permitted to leave the barbed wire fence built like a stockade, around the Fort Bliss camp. The women and children likewise will be denied permission to leave, as they elected to share the fate of the soldiers.

Scenes of unbounded joy attended the arrival of the Mexicans at the American camp at Marfa after their four days' march over the sixty-seven-mile road from Presidio. The exhausted and half-famished soldiers literally dropped to the ground.

The camp provided for them witnessed an unbroken in-rush of soldiers, women, children, horses, burros and dogs. Less than 200 American cavalrymen, commanded by Major McNamee, had brought the refugees over the trail and had kept them from straggling from the line.

TRIES TO KILL FAMILY

Dying Man Then Ends His Own Life With a Revolver

New York, Jan. 21.—Dying of tuberculosis, William J. Blumann attempted to kill his wife and stepson, George, 16, here, and failing, turned a revolver upon himself and ended his own life.

As Blumann's wife knelt at his bedside seeking to encourage him he placed a revolver at her breast and pulled the trigger. It snapped on an empty chamber. As he attempted to fire again George grappled with him and forced his thumb under the raised hammer. The boy's thumb was torn.

As Mrs. Blumann and her son fled from the room they heard a shot from the revolver, and, returning, found Blumann dying.

MISSING OVER A WEEK

Relief That Five-Masted Schooner Prescott Palmer Is Lost

Boston, Jan. 21.—No word has been received of the missing Prescott Palmer, with her crew of thirteen men, and it is generally believed that she has been lost.

The revenue cutters Gresham and Androscoggin have been searching all along the coast and out to a distance of 150 miles to sea for a trace of the schooner, which was last sighted over a week ago rounding the cape.

It is generally conceded that the missing five-sticker will never be heard from again, except as her wreckage is washed ashore by the tide.

OUTLAW STANDS PAT

Beardsley Says He Cannot Afford to Give Up to Authorities

Mayville, N. Y., Jan. 21.—Doubt is expressed by persons who talked with Edward Beardsley, the Summerdale outlaw farmer, that he will walk to Mayville jail and submit to arrest for the shooting of Poormaster Putnam.

For several days Beardsley has been reaping a harvest of dollars by signing picture postcards and posing for his photograph. He says he hates to give up the revenue.

Putnam is improving daily and there is hope for his recovery.

New Attack on House of Lords

London, Jan. 21.—Postmaster General Samuel announce in a speech at Henley that within a year the premier would submit to parliament proposals for the complete elimination of the hereditary peerage principle and the thorough democratization of the house of lords.

SPOT LIGHT IS ON HISTORIC FAIRFAX

Virginia In Fight to Regain Martha Washington Will.

INSISTS MORGAN GIVE IT UP

Testament Cut From the Records of Fairfax County During Civil War and Discovered In Father's Library Six Years Ago Is Prized Beyond Price In the Old Dominion.

The stage is being set for a bitter battle between the state of Virginia and J. Pierpont Morgan in Virginia's avowed intention of recovering "at all costs" the will of Martha Washington, which was stolen from the records of Fairfax county, Va., during the civil war. This historical document is in the possession of the New York financier, who has declined to accede to the request of the state that he surrender it.

Representative Charles C. Carlin, who represents the Fairfax district, has come forward to aid the state and county officials to recover the will.

"The people of Virginia are aroused over this matter," said the congressman recently. "The will is ours, and we are going to have it restored to where it belongs."

"Virginia will recover the will of Martha Washington at all costs," declared Crandall Mackey, commonwealth attorney for Alexandria county.

"Until Mr. Morgan persisted in his refusal to return the will to the archives from which it was purloined the fight was one between him and the people of Fairfax county, to whom the document belongs, but now it has become a state wide question."

Will Lost For Fifty Years.

The will of Martha Washington, wife of the first president of the United States, was cut from the records of Fairfax county while the war between the states was raging in that part of Virginia. Virginians believe that one of General McDowell's soldiers carried off the Martha Washington will along with other records, but how it got into Mr. Morgan's possession no one seems to be able to guess.

For more than fifty years the people of Fairfax county have searched for the Martha Washington will, which they prized very highly as a relic. Not long ago some one who saw the will among Mr. Morgan's collection notified a friend in Fairfax, and an effort was made to have the document returned to where Virginians say it rightfully and legally belongs.

Mrs. John S. Barbour, regent of the Falls Church (Va.) chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, acting for her organization, wrote and asked Mr. Morgan to return the will, which, she said, had been "taken from the records of Fairfax county, Va."

An unfavorable reply was received from Mr. Morgan's librarian.

Futile Appeals to Elder Morgan.

The report that the Washington will was in the Morgan collection first was heard six years ago. Several letters were sent to the elder Morgan, but he never replied to any of them, so it is said.

After his death the Fairfax people became interested in the will again. The Daughters of the American Revolution and the Falls Church chapter joined forces in an effort to recover the testament. When gentler means failed it was decided to enlist the aid of the state.

The suit planned to recover the will is unique in that the state of Virginia sues an individual before the supreme court of the United States. It is one of the few instances where a state has sued a citizen in the supreme court.

Ferdinand D. Richardson, father of the present clerk of Fairfax county, was clerk of the county when the will was taken.

Mrs. Washington's estate at the time the will was made was one of the largest in the south.

REDFIELD ON PROSPERITY.

Secretary of Commerce Makes Bright Forecast For Year.

In an article in the Chicago Tribune Secretary of Commerce Redfield forecasts prosperity for 1914 and scoffs at pessimistic predictions. He says in part:

The facts are such as should fill us all with hope. There is little in them to justify either doubt for the present or fear for the future.

The crop of winter wheat already planted to mature next summer is not only in finer condition than a year ago, but is of much larger extent, promising well for the future if weather conditions prove favorable and certainly justifying no present anxiety.

Referring to American industries, he says, "One does not need to be worried by this cry of wolf, for the cry has been made before, and the wolf did not come."

Asks Divorce Because He's Bald.

Because he is bald and his wife sent him a comb and brush as a Christmas present, Jeremiah Schlestenberg of Midway, Pa., began an action for divorce on the grounds of cruel and barbarous treatment. "I can't grow hair on my head and I can't stand her jibes," says Schlestenberg.

Important News In Advertisements

By HOLLAND.

THE valuable news of the day is not confined to the news columns. It is also seen in the advertisements. Of course it is important to know what President Wilson is doing, what the latest developments are in China or what baseball club leads the league. But it is also important to know where a bargain in boys' waists, garden hose, breakfast food or straw hats may be found.

These bits of commercial news are among the advertisements. Wise persons look for them and take advantage of them when they are doing their buying. The leading merchants are continually telling you news of their stores, news that is important because it often means a real saving and always means something new and worth while.

Read the advertisements if you seek important news. Read them regularly and always with the thought that back of each advertisement are the reputation and business standing of the merchant. He could not afford to deceive you even if he were so inclined.

RARE TREAT AT WEST QUINCY

Eighteen Musicians from the School of Music

A rare treat was enjoyed at the Hall Place M. E. church Tuesday evening when the Copley Square of Music gave a grand concert for the benefit of the church. This was the fourth number in the course of lectures being given during the winter months. It is the third time that Prof. Frank M. Davis and his orchestra have come to West Quincy, and in spite of the stormy weather a large crowd were present to welcome them.

As Prof. Davis entered the auditorium he was roundly applauded by his audience which appreciated his good work. He announced the program, giving a brief sketch with each selection. It included vocal numbers, piano solos, violin solo, cornet solo, and readings. Prof. Davis read the poem entitled "The Lost Chord" and explained the finding of the lost chord upon the organ.

Prof. Davis was accompanied by eighteen musicians, some of whom have been with him each time he has been here. Before and after the concert the Juniors sold candy. At the close a light collation was served to the guests.

BRIEFS

Miss Elizabeth C. Falvey of 223 West street, who underwent a serious operation at the Quincy City Hospital on Monday passed a very good night and was comfortable this morning.

The no-school signal sounded at 8 o'clock this morning. It was a particularly nasty morning to get about for the snow and rain during the night had turned the snow to slush, that made ordinary rubbers of but little use.

Many of the officials appointed Monday night by Mayor Miller have already visited the City Clerks office and qualified by taking the oath of office. They are supposed to qualify within five days from receiving their notice.

City Clerk Crane announces that nomination papers for the special election in Ward Three will be ready for delivery Friday, and papers must be filed with the Registrars of Voters on or before 5 o'clock on January 31. The date of the primaries is Feb. 31.

At the entertainment to be given by the Kings 'Daughters at Bethany church on Tuesday evening, Jan. 27, a very pleasing program is assured. Charles Everett of Wollaston is to be the baritone soloist, there will be readings by Miss Reta Myers of Somerville, and selections by the Quincy Women's Club Glee Club.

The snow and rain coupled with the drop in temperature has resulted in giving the streets a coating of ice which makes it possible for the first time this winter for sleighs to make their appearance. One or two pungs were noticed in City Square this noon and on some of the streets where there are no street car tracks the sleighing is very good.

There was quite a sudden drop in temperature this morning. Tuesday the temperature was mild, so much so that the snow soon turned to rain and the walking was very slushy. Shortly after 9 o'clock this morning the mercury began to drop rapidly and in an hour had gone down to 23 above zero. The walking then improved.

FOX MUFF PRESENTED

Young Lady Is Then Tossed After the Usual Custom

The Dorcas society of the Swedish Lutheran church of Quincy met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gustaf Nelson on Nelson street, East Braintree Tuesday evening. The Dorcas society meetings are ordinarily for the purpose of sewing, but this was in the form of a birthday party in honor of Miss Sadie Nelson. A large number of the society were present and also friends who are not attached to it, the total number present being about sixty. The pastor Rev. Leander Hokenson opened the meeting in the usual way. Attention was then drawn to Miss Nelson. The pastor spoke very highly of her, referring to her as one of the best workers the church has, and in closing his speech presented the young lady, commonly known as Sadie, with a beautiful black fox muff with the good wishes of all those present. Miss Nelson made a short speech of thanks.

J. Bergvall a prominent member of the church choir was then called upon to speak which he did very nicely. Many others were called upon but none answered their call so the fun of the evening began.

It is the custom of the Swedish people to toss the person they are honoring at such an occasion from the floor to the ceiling once for every year that has passed. Messrs J. Bergvall, J. F. Johnson, F. Swanson and N. Carlson did this very cleverly much to the surprise of Miss Nelson.

Light refreshments were served during the evening, the latter part of which was given to the singing of popular music and many very jolly games which were greatly enjoyed by all. Guests were present from Quincy, Braintree, Wollaston, Brookline and Weymouth.

Next meeting of the Dorcas society to be held at the home of Mrs. Ammelius on Cotton avenue, East Braintree, Tuesday evening, Feb. 3, and choir rehearsal at the home of Mr. J. Bergvall in Quincy Wednesday evening, Jan. 28.

DELAYS AT POINT BRIDGE

Hearing Scheduled for This Morning Postponed

The hearing scheduled to be held by the United States Engineers this morning on the matter of delays in operating the drawbridge at the Quincy Point bridge, was postponed until a future date, because the United States ngineers office did not know they could have the use of the Council Chamber soon enough to advertise the hearing.

Several parties interested in the subject however, including Capt. Kemp of the Fore River Co. Dock Commissioner Crane and Supt. Gammons of the Street Railway Co.

It will be a surprise to many to know that there has been such complaint in regard to the drawbridge that the United States should take up the matter. It appears however that the hearing is the result of a complaint made to the United States Government at Washington by Albert B. Shedd of 109 High street,. East Weymouth.

It appears that Mr. Shedd who is employed as a draughtsman at the shipyard was a passenger on a street car coming toward Quincy which was held up for ten minutes by the drawbridge being open, on Nov. 8, 1913.

The draw had been opened to admite the passage of the barge Harvard which was in charge of the tug Palace. The tug with its barge were coming with an incoming tide and according to the gentlement present this morning there was no unnecessary delay.

As a complaint had been made however the United States Engineers office at Boston was ordered to give a hearing.

BERNARD JOHNSON.

Bernard Johnson of 69 Parker street died this morning from pneumonia. He was in his 48th year and was four times stricken with the same illness, since coming to Quincy. He was a stone cutter by trade and during the past five years has been the janitor of the Swedish Lutheran church on Granite street. He was one of the best known Swedish residents of the city and was unmarried.

RENO'S KNELL AS DIVORCE MECCA

Six Months' Residence Law Made Little City Famous.

BUSY MART FOR FOUR YEARS

During That Period 2,216 Actions Were Filed There, and the Final Rush Was Heavy—More Recently the Number of Men In Quest of Quick Freedom Showed Marked Increase.

The Reno divorce colony isn't what it used to be. No longer will dissatisfied married folks be able to settle in the Nevada city for six months and then obtain freedom from their mates. That procedure will hereafter take one whole year.

With this change the foremost inducement to divorce seekers from other states is eliminated and the advantages of short residence requirement, as may yet be enjoyed in two other states, under equally broad bases for causes of action, can have its only sequel—the diverting of future divorce activities from Nevada.

Last Minute Rush.

For four years, from 1910 to 1914, Reno has occupied a spot light position in the attention of the world. The divorce colony during this four year period numbered 2,250 men and women. Ninety-one persons rushed in just as the curtain was about to fall during December, the last day breaking all daily records for the four years in the history of the "colony."

The last rush brought the number of divorce seekers from other states up to approximately 650—390 women and 260 men—making the proportion 60 and 40 per cent greater in favor of the men than it previously was. Until then fully 75 per cent of the total were women.

Reno's Four Years' Record.

The total number of actions filed during the colony's period of greatest activity extending through the past four years to Jan. 1, 1914, follows: 1910, 492 cases; 1911, 546 cases; 1912, 588 cases; 1913, 590 cases; grand total, 2,216 cases.

Eighty per cent of the total number filed were granted decrees; 95 per cent of the prominent applications from the Atlantic coast secured decrees. The greatest number of actions filed in any one month was 102 in December, 1913. Communities furnishing the greatest number of colonists stand in the following order: New York, California, Canada, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Illinois and Pennsylvania.

There have been recently about thirty divorcees at Reno under assumed or using their maiden names, for the purpose of covering their identity. A year ago this number was double what it is now. Many gave up this effort to prevent identification, learning from the experience of others who preceded them that it is generally useless.

About 120 of the colony have immediately remarried, at Reno in most instances, to their "affinities," who have been simultaneously living there, either also for divorces or to be with their prospective husbands or wives. In several instances each never met the other until one or the other arrived in Reno.

WIDER WAR ON GERMS.

Public Health Service Has Big Program For Current Year.

The public health service is looking forward to the biggest year's work it has ever undertaken. From the mountains of Kentucky, where two field hospitals and dispensaries are teaching the mountain people how to combat pellagra, to the water fronts of San Francisco and Seattle, where federal experts are helping state authorities to prevent the carrying of plague germs by rats and squirrels, the service has pushed its activities into many unusual fields.

Much of the research work of the health service is done in the hygienic laboratory in Washington. In the search for the means by which infantile paralysis is transmitted experts there succeeded during the last year in carrying germs from one monkey to another by the bite of a stable fly. But where this succeeded once it failed on all other attempts. The public health service is still working on the problem.

Practically every phase of sanitation is being studied and taught by officials as fast as funds permit.

WANTS MEN STENOGRAPHERS.

Government Can't Get Them at From $840 to $900 a Year.

The United States government is in urgent need of competent male stenographers and typewriters. The demand far exceeds the supply.

The civil service commission will hold examinations in the larger cities of the country Jan. 27. Salaries for shorthand writers are small, ranging from $840 to $900 a year, but opportunities for promotion are reasonably rapid, it is stated.

Thirty-one and Wed Seven Times.

L. B. Maynard, thirty-one years old, of East Lynn, W. Va., has just taken a seventh wife. She was Rebecca Wilson of Huntington, W. Va. Maynard divorced three of his wives and three died. He says each of the last three had proved an ideal helpmate.

PASSES AWAY IN HIS SLEEP

Lord Strathcona Active For Seventy-Five Years

WORK PROLONGED HIS LIFE

Adventurous Scotch Youth Appeared In Canada When It Was a Wilderness and Rose by Successive Stages Until He Was Rewarded With Post of High Commissioner

London, Jan. 21.—Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, high commissioner for Canada, died this morning, peacefully in sleep. He had been virtually unconscious since 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Lord Strathcona's death was due to prostration, the result of a severe attack of catarrh. He had been ailing, however, ever since the death of his wife on Nov. 12 last, which proved a great shock to him.

Lord Strathcona's life spanned nearly a century and his active career a full three-quarters. "The best way to live to an old age," he explained when found at work at his desk in London, on his 93d birthday, Aug. 6 last, "is by not thinking about age at all, but just go on doing your work."

From his 18th year, when as Donald Smith, a sturdy Scot, he sailed for Canada, into his 94th year, which would have been completed next August, he lived up to his maxim of work.

His first years in Canada were those of an adventurous youth in what was then a real wilderness. The Hudson Bay company, which controlled practically all of British North America, engaged him as clerk, and by successive stages he grew to the head of the corporation and was its last resident governor.

During this service, which was mainly in Labrador, he was threatened with snow blindness and had to make a forced march of 500 miles through the snow to Montreal for an operation on his eyes. This is one of many instances of his perseverance.

After thirty years in the eastern wilds, he took what he called a slight "rest" as resident governor in Montreal and then accepted the offer of leading Lord Wolseley's expedition to the northwest.

Later he bent his energies toward opening up the west and is credited with having pressed the Canadian Pacific railway to completion across the continent. He also had political experience as a member of the Manitoba legislature for many years.

In 1896, fity-eight years after he had first landed in Canada, Lord Strathcona's fellow countrymen thought their "grand old man" deserved a rest and he was sent to London as high commissioner.

One of the most trying roles of his position was being entertained.

From the vast fortune he accumulated, Lord Strathcona often dispensed large sums for educational and charitable purposes and he also was a patron of many branches of sport.

SHOWS KNEE TO JURY

Woman Complies With Request of Lawyer In Court

Hartford, Jan. 21.—Upon request Mrs. Jennie L. Doubleday of Springfield, Mass., complied with the lawyer's suggestion and showed her knee to the jury in the superior court here, where trial was begun of her $5000 damage suit against the Connecticut company, under which title the New Haven road operates the trolley systems of this state.

Mrs. Doubleday alleges that while on a car in this city the conductor gave the signal to go ahead before she had finished alighting, that she was thrown to the pavement, sustaining injuries to her arm and left leg, which still bothered her.

ATTEMPTED BLACKMAIL

Man Who Threatened Society Girl Gets Three Years In Prison

Salt Lake City, Jan. 21.—W. L. Cummings, 23 years old, pleaded guilty in the federal court and was sentenced to three years' imprisonment for attempting to blackmail Miss Dorothy Bamberger, a wealthy society girl.

The attempted blackmail attracted wide attention. Cummings threatened to kill Miss Bamberger with an infernal machine of his own invention, which could be exploded at a distance by the use of a wireless attachment. The evidence showed he was the tool of others.

NEW BRIDGE OVER NEPONSET

Petition from Dorchester Introduced in Legislature

Also a bill for a new highway bridge over the railroad at Medway street, Dorchester.

SMOLLETT—McCLAY.

James M. Smollett, of 179 Common street, a popular conductor, and Miss Mary McClay of Wibird street, who were married Monday night by Rev. Richard E. Armstrong, rector of Christ church, managed to keep the news of the ceremony quiet until this noon. None of their many friends and few members of their respective families were aware of the marriage. The groom reported for duty at the car barn Tuesday and took his car at the regular time. This morning he worked until noon. When he reports to finish his days run this afternoon, other employees who have learned of the marriage are preparing a pleasant surprise. His bride is well known in this city.

ELKS BALL.

Plans being formulated for the annual charity ball of the Quincy lodge of Elks in Quincy Music hall, Wednesday evening, February 11, indicate one of the most brilliant functiops of its kind in the history of this city. A hustling committee is hard at work to make the dance an unparalleled success. Every arrow points to the accomplishment of this aim.

REMARKABLE MEMORY FEATS

Also Talk on Visit to Vesuvius and Pompeii

One of the most entertaining events in the series of mens nights at the Wollaston Baptist church was furnished Tuesday evening by a combination of music, travel, impersonations and memory feats by Clarence Bradford Mudde, the noted blind entertainer of Boston, and Ernest W. Campbell of Wollaston in a talk on a recent visit to the crater of Vesuvius and a day among the ruins of Pompeii.

Mr. Mudde gave in addition to his many dialect stories a most remarkable example of feats from memory, repeating in order a list of 30 subjects written by various persons in the audience, then reversing the list accurately and even naming them as they were called for.

Mr. Campbell delivered an instructive lecture in describing how the crater appears today, also an account of his trip down the inside of the cone for some distance. The various grades of ascent of 18, 35 and 55 per cent were explained as well as the mechanism used to ascend, the the government now permits travelers to come to the cone without military guard.

One guard was employed and the description of the final trip was well portrayed.

Samples of the lava from the crater were shown by Mr. Campbell, as well as some of the ashes that engulf Pompeii. Then followed the story of Pompeii with its history and the various sights in the ruins, mosaics, architectural features, ceramic paintings, etc., all of which furnished a fine entertainment for one of the largest attendance records of the season.

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION

Constance F. Stecher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stecher, gave a most enjoyable party to her friends at her home, 82 Botolph street, Monday evening, from five to eight in celebration of her ninth birthday which was the day previous.

The rooms were artistically decorated with evergreen and poinsettia. These with two large bouquets of pinks on the table made very attractive surroundings.

Games were played until six o'clock when dinner was served to the guests the menu consisting of chicken soup chicken salad, bread and butter sandwiches, ham sandwiches,, crackers, pickles, olives, ice cream, cake, confectionery and peanuts.

After this, games were again enjoyed until "good-bye" had to be said. The birthday cake contained favors, which appeared when ribbons were pulled.

Constance was the recipient of many pretty gifts but neither these nor the guests' souvenirs are necessary to recall the happy evening spent.

Those present were Marjorie Dame, Olive Fuller, Elizabeth O'Doherty, Marion Gurney, Ruth Beeman, Helen Cherrington, Barbara Hobbs, Margaret Cornell and Marietta Luke.

MASQUERADE COSTUMES to rent from $1.00 up. Mrs. R. E. Woodward, 162 Beach street, Wollaston. 14-12t

GUNNING STAND DESTROYED

Loss of $1,000 by Fire at Merrymount Sub-Division

The gunning stand of the Wollaston Gun club situated off Norton street on the Merrymount sub-division was destroyed by fire shortly before midnight. The stand is erected on the shore, and was covered with thatch so that a little distance from the shore it resembled a grass plot. Inside, the stand was fitted up for winter occupancy, being provided with swinging lamps and a stove. The only person in the stand at the time of the fire was Daniel Cameron the caretaker. The fire is supposed to have started from an oil lamp, and so rapidly did it burn that the caretaker had difficulty in getting out. All of the ammunition in the building exploded, adding to the danger and several valuable guns were destroyed. The fire department were notified by telephone and the Central station apparatus rsponded. About all they could do however was to extinguish the dying embers. It was understood that this was the last season that the land would be used for a gunning stand and that it was to be torn down in the spring. The loss is estimated at $1,000.

SNOW STORM SIDETRACKED.

The snow storm predicted for Wednesday night got sidetracked and there was but little fall. Between 5 and 6 o'clock there was quite a brisk snow storm, but it was a very fine snow and did not make very fast. At times during the evening there was a fine snow but not enough to amount to anything. The drop in temperature and high wind predicted came along all right and at midnight it was blowing quite a gale. This morning at sunrise the temperature registered from 8 to 10 above zero. The continued cold weather is welcomde b ythe ice men for if it continues a few days it will give thick enough ice for the second cutting of their ponds. As it is however it is assured that there will be no scarcity of ice next summer as far as Quincy is concerned.

DIRECTORS ELECTED.

REDS SERVE FINE SUPPER

Defeated By Greens in Rand Class Contest

The "Red and Green Feed," of the Rand class which closed a strenuous two months contest for members and attendance between two teams of the above colors, was held Wednesday evening in the Wollaston Baptist chapel.

The Green's were victorious, winning by some 12 points, and sat down to a fine supper served by the Reds shortly after 7 o'clock. The repast was also enjoyed by the Reds with the exception of a committee of servers.

Elaborate red place cards graced the tables showing a menu starting with consomme, with roast beef as the main dish and finishing off with many delicacies.

Harold Thomas, vice president of the class, presided and called upon Rev. Joseph Walther the pastor as the first speaker.

It was a fine thing to win, but a greater thing to lose successfully. He had noticed the hustle that had characterized the campaign. He urged that in the future they work willingly, watchfully, warmly, wisely; objectively, openly, optimistically overflowingly; really, resolutely, radiantly, royally and lastly kindly.

Elford L. Durgan, superintendent of the Sunday School congratulated the boys on their efforts, and J. Arthur Sparrow, teacher of the class, spoke briefly.

Harold Neal, captain of the Greens thanked the Reds for the royal way in which they were being entertained and William Bullock, captain of the Reds replied, urging all to unite and continue the good work. Edward Bullock and William Bartlett were other speakers.

Ernest W. Campbell was the guest of the evening and related many interesting events of his recent foreign trip. He described the Coliseum at Rome and told of his experiences in the catacombs. Venice was described and the talk closed with advice concerning those intending to make a trip abroad.

The evening closed with a song fest in which the Reds and Greens joined and a flashlight group picture was taken by Kendall F. Harriman.

The supper was served by a committee consisting of William Bullock, Kenneth Albee, Earl Church and Arthur Bullock.

SOCIAL AT PARK AND DOWNS

A large number attended the monthly social of the Women's Missionary Society in the Park and Downs vestry, Wednesday evening, when Professor J. F. Bartlett of Scranton, Pa., delivered a stereopticon lecture on "The romance of coal." The lecture not only dealt with the methods of mining coal, but of its origin and formation. Many views of mining camps with their breakers tipples and power houses were thrown on the screen. Theuses and by products of coal were interestingly explained, and many other pictures were shown. At the close of the lecture refreshments were served by a committee, of which Mrs. Charles A. Richardson was the chairman.

PATRIOTIC SOCIETES TO ATTEND

Several patriotic organizations have been invited to attend the funeral on Friday of Mrs. Caroline Torrey Couchier to be held at 2.30 P. M., at the Wollaston Unitarian church, and will attend in a body. These include the Old South chapter, D. A. R.; the Massachusetts State Society, Daughters of 1812; and Maj. George L. Stearns W. R. C. of Charlestown; and they will enter by the Farrington street door at 2.15. The pastor, Rev. Carl G. Horst, will officiate; Mrs. Chandler W. Smith will preside at the organ; and Mrs. Frank A. Page will be the soloist. All friends are invited.

CITY HALL HAPPENINGS

Many of the New Appointees Call on Mayor Miller

Moses L. Brown, the new Commissioner of Public Works, was at City Hall this morning. He came to take the oath of office afterward calling upon Mayor Miller with whom he was closeted for an hour or more. While in conference with the Mayor, City Engineer Sargent was also called into the consultation.

Although the suspense in regard to the Mayors appointments has been relieved somewhat, His Honor still continues to have many visitors, so that he has but little time in which to transact the business of the city.

Aside from those, who doubtless have some scheme in which they desire to interest the Mayor, nearly all of the new appointees when they call to be sworn in visit the Mayor office for a few minutes conference. Wednesday several of these officials were closeted with the Mayor, and in the afternoon John Curtis the new treasurer called.

Mr. Curtis has received a letter from City Treasurer Tilden, the present incumbent, extending the courtesies of the office, in case he desires to familiarize himself with any of the matters before taking office on Monday, February 2.

Neither Chief of Police Burrell or Michael E. Shea, foreman in the Street department, whose resignations were asked by the Mayor the day following the inauguration, have have complied with the request, and from what can be learned they do not intend to resign.

Rumor has it that the Mayor intends to remove Wellington W. Mitchell and Eben Stocker the two remaining members of the Board of Assessors, but nothing has developed in this line.

Among the Mayor's callers this noon was Temple A. Winsloe of Wollaston, who was Mr. Millers campaign manager during the recent campaign and about whom there have been many rumors that he and the Mayor had fallen out. Mr. Winsloe has been confined to his home for ten days and today was the first time he has been at City Hall for nearly two weeks. Mr. Winsloe drove up to City Hall in a 1914 Rambler and was as smiling as ever. At that time the Mayor was in consultation with the new Commissioner and the present Commissioner so that he had to wait his turn at the office door.

CHARLES CRANE PASSES AWAY

Charles Crane, one of Quincy's old time business men passed away Wednesday night as the result of a shock sustained on Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Crane was 76 years of age had not been actively engaged in business for many years, although for the past year, up to within a few months, he has had a store in the block near the High school, where he disposed of many of his former household effects.

During his younger days he conducted a market on Hancock street on the site of the Music Hall block, also driving a butcher wagon about the city before and since.

Mr. Crane was married twice and leaves a daughter and son both of whom live out of town. He was a prominent member of Maple lodge, Knights and Ladies of Honor, being one of its charter members. For many years he lived on Greenleaf street at the corner of Hancock street

Funeral services will be held Saturday from Bethany Congregational church at 2.30 P. M.

BETHANY CHURCH IS PROSPERING

Finds it Easy Now to Raise Funds of $10,000 for Current Expenses

Increase in Pastor's Salary and for Music

Bethany church is enjoying an era of great prosperity, as was shown by all the reports at the annual meeting Wednesday evening, and the fact that pledges are already made which will give a surplus after appropriating a budget of $6,840 for the current year. This budget includes an increase of $300 in the pastors salary, an increase for music, and anticipates all the needs of the year 1914.

The church is now a regular incorporated body, and Frank W. Crane presided as moderator. The report of John F. Hunt, the clerk, showed a membership on Jan. 1, 1914, of 498, which includes 184 men and 314 women, a gain of 59 during 1913. The accessions numbered 71, and included 22 by confession, 37 by letter, 10 by reaffirmation, 2 reinstated. The losses numbered 12 including 3 by death, and 9 by letter. Since Jan. 1 the membership has grown to 516.

W. F. Sidelinger, the treasurer, reported that the total receipts of the year were $9,813.20; that the expenses were $9,462,22. leaving a balance of $350,98. All bills are paid. The expenses included $1,027.04 for benevolences.

Rev. B. A. Willmott in the pastor's report referred to the peace and unity that prevailed and the hearty co-operation of all. The results could not be told in figures, but he noted an average attendance of 107 at the midweek meetings. During the year the pastor had attended and spoken at 281 meetings in the church, and 26 outside the church, and had also attended 28 other gatherings; also committee meetings. He had attended 27 funerals, officiated at 24 weddings, and made 305 calls in the homes.

F. K. Damon for the prudential committee reported the church property in a better condition than ever before and told of improvements. He complimented the sexton.

E. V. Fitts, for the finance committee, reported that the church was never in a better financial condition. A budget for 1914 had been prepared and he announced that pledges had already been made for the full amount $6,840. The budget was adopted later without debate. It includes $2500 and house rent as pastor's salary, a total of $3,000; the sum of $1000 for music, $800 for repairs, $450 for Bible school and other generous appropriations.

There were also interesting reports from the music committee, the Auditor, the Bible school, the Brotherhood, the Christian Endeavor the Junior Endeavorers, the Bethany Ladies Union, the Makaria Fraternity, the Philathea class, the Knights of King Arthur, the Cradle Roll, and other organizations of the church.

A vote of thanks was extended to M. P. Hayward, the superintendent of the Bible school, and the Ladies Union was complimented on its untiring work and financial assistance.

Deacon R. D. Chase could hardly believe the good news. He said the reports were the best in forty years, and it was remarkable that the church had expended nearly $10,000 the past year, and that the finance committee had all the funds needed for 1914.

Theophilus King said the solution was easy; all organizations needed a strong man to gather around, and the pastor was all this.

The officers were elected by an Australian ballot, a double list being presented, and the following were chosen:

MIDWINTER ADVERTISING

To the man who follows the advertising and real estate trade game for a period of years, the buying public resolves itself largely into two classes. First, there are the people who buy when they feel like it, or run short of articles, without much system. Second, those who watch the local trade market as keenly as the buyer of a manufacturing concern watches the commercial papers.

That may take time, but it's scientific buying. The canny housewife knows that in the month of January, the merchant is up against the proposition of reducing stocks. Not all his ventures have succeeded. He did not expect them to. Some chances must be taken. Irregularities in weather and caprices of popular taste have left parts of his stock unsold. He must do one of two things. Carry stock over, borrow money to hold it, pay heavier insurance, take chances of style changes or deterioration, or cut his prices.

The majority of the merchants cut prices regularly during the latter half of the winter, to meet these conditions. The scientific house buyer makes the bulk of the winter purchases during this period. What is not needed this season will be useful another winter.

This trade is mostly reached through advertising. Every advertisement at this time of year is closely scanned, not merely with the casual hope of some unexpected bargain that may fit in some time, but in pursuance with a settled policy of buying in the lowest market.

As it takes too much time to run around the stores and see what the merchants are doing, the public watches the newspapers, and visits the places that have made known their bargains. January is peculiarly a month when the newspaper is a directory of economy. The people who don't read the Store advertising miss chances to keep the cost of living down.

Insanity For Us to Guarantee Peace In Philippines

By Former President of the United States WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT.

THE Moros have notified us that they will not stand Filipino government, and the Filipinos say they cannot take over the islands unless they take over all of them. The minute that a strong background of a powerful government is withdrawn the difference between the Filipinos and Moros, who are mutinous and have no sympathy with the Filipinos and have a racial hatred for them, will at once develop.

© by American Press Association.

FOR US TO LEAVE THE ISLANDS AND TO GUARANTEE TO THE NATIONS OF THE WORLD, IN EXCHANGE FOR THE TREATIES OF NEUTRALITY WITH RESPECT TO THE ISLANDS, THAT LAW AND ORDER WILL BE PRESERVED AND THAT THERE WILL BE NO CIVIL COMMOTION IN WHICH LAW AND ORDER CANNOT BE MAINTAINED, WOULD BE AN EVIDENCE OF LACK OF SANITY THAT I CANNOT THINK THE AMERICAN PEOPLE WOULD EVER DISPLAY.

If they should it would not be a year before we would have to go back into the islands in order to maintain the peace that we had guaranteed to the world. As one prominent Filipino expressed it to me, "YOUR VESSELS CARRYING AWAY YOUR GOVERNMENT WOULD HARDLY GET THROUGH THE PASSAGE BETWEEN MARIVALES AND CORREGIDOR, IN SIGHT OF MANILA, BUT THE THROAT-CUTTING WOULD BEGIN."

United States Should Conserve Radium

By FRANKLIN K. LANE, Secretary of the Interior

THERE appear to be in the United States less than two grams of radium—that is, less than one-fourth of an ounce. This is valued at one hundred and twenty thousand dollars a gram, and all of it has been procured from Europe, where there are in France, Austria, Germany and England laboratories for its discovery.

THREE-FOURTHS OF THE RADIUM PRODUCED IN THE WORLD DURING THE YEAR 1912 CAME FROM AMERICAN ORES, YET WE HAVE UP TO THE PRESENT TIME TAKEN NO STEPS WHATEVER TO PRESERVE FOR OUR OWN PEOPLE THIS INVALUABLE METAL.

Under all these circumstances it seems to me that the only prudent course that the United States can follow is to WITHDRAW SUCH OF ITS LANDS AS ARE SUPPOSED TO CONTAIN RADIUM FROM PUBLIC ENTRY. This will guard against these lands being taken up by those who would not put them to their highest and most beneficial use.

Lawyers Who Ask Big Fees Hold-up Men

By Lieutenant Governor BARRATT O'HARA of Illinois

WHEN WE HEAR OF THE $100,000 FEE IN THE SULZER CASE IN NEW YORK, THE $47,000 CHARGED THE STATE AND THE RECENT FEE OF $10,000 CHARGED COOK COUNTY, WORK WHICH ANY YOUNG LAWYER COULD HAVE HANDLED SUCCESSFULLY, WE KNOW THAT FEES ASKED BY SOME LAWYERS ARE EXORBITANT. IN FACT, MANY LAWYERS ARE LEGALIZED "HOLDUP MEN."

A new generation of young lawyers, however, realize that they owe a public service, and those that do not wish to realize it will be forced to do so by public sentiment.

FRANK A. REED PRESIDENT

Good Fellowship Night of Men's Club at Braintree

The January meeting of the men's club of the Congregational church at South Braintree was held in the chapel Wednesday evening, and the attendance was very good, considering the inclemency of the weather. As this was the annual business meeting and election of officers, there was no program of entertainment provided. It was "good fellowship" night and the atmosphere of sociability and brotherhood made it one of the most enjoyable gatherings ever held by the club.

At 6.45 was served a delicious supper of roast beef, baked potatoes with gravy, turnip, boiled onions, rolls, coffee, doughnuts and apple pie.

The report of the treasurer showed the past year to have been the most successful one in the club's history. The secretary's report was equally encouraging. The following officers were elected for the ensuing years:

President—Frank A. Reed.

First Vice President—George Dunn.

Second Vice President—Benjamin H. Woodsum, Jr.,

Secretary—Dudley P. Howland.

Treasurer—Ernest C. Woodsum.

Executive committee—Ralph L. Wiggin, Harry S. Snow, Edwin S. Loring, Harry A. Simonds, Frank C. Allen, Isaac E. Pearson and Louis N. Hathaway, together with the presidents, vice presidents, secretary and treasurer.

Interesting remarks were made by the retiring president R. L. Wiggin, the pastor Rev. Tyler E. Gale and other members, all speaking in such optimistic and determined vein that the coming year promises to be a banner one for the club.

A rising vote of thanks was tendered the retiring treasurer, R. E. Whitman for his three years of faithful service, and also to all the out-going officers.

An important amendment to the constitution was adopted viz: that any man 18 years old or more, of good moral character etc. may become a member of the club regardless of church affiliations. This was a very important change from the former policy and it is thought will be a big factor in increasing the membership.

"Smokes" were in order all the evening as the proceedings were held in the banquet room and there was some enjoyable chorus singing of popular songs, with Otis Randall presiding most acceptably at the piano. After a rising vote to the ladies who aided in the kitchen, the meeting was closed at 9.20 o'clock.

The committee in charge of the supper included: Nelson E. Hayden, Harry E. Dolbeare, Frank E. Drake, Harry S. Snow, George Dunn and William L. Grover. These gentlemen were assisted by Mrs. W. A. Torrey, Mrs. George Dunn, Mrs. H. S. Snow and Mrs. F. E. Drake.

BALKED IN LOVE

Prince of Wales' Recent Affections of the Heart End Unhappily

Paris, Jan. 22.—The young Prince of Wales is susceptible, and two of his recent love affairs have ended unhappily, the Paris newspapers state.

While visiting his grandmother, Alexandra, the prince saw a photo of Lady Dalkeith, immediately fell in love with it and pocketed it. His mother, hearing of this, soundly scolded the prince.

Shortly afterward he became infatuated with the daughter of a Buckinghamshire landowner. He visited her every week, but, unfortunately, a letter he wrote to one of his friends, Lord Wendover, fell in the hands of his tutor.

The prince was immediately summoned to Sandringham, where the court chaplain was deputed on this occasion to remonstrate with him fittingly.

ABORIGINAL REMAINS

Unearthed by Archaeologists In Northern Wisconsin Counties

Madison, Wis., Jan. 22.—Important finds of Indian earthwerks of which there had been no previous record have been made in northern Wisconsin by two members of the Wisconsin Archaeological society.

The aboriginal remains were discovered by J. P. Schumacher and W. A. Titus in Portage, Marathon and Lincoln counties. Near Bradley and Heafford surveys were made of six distinct groups. The largest of these consisted of thirty-three conical and oval mounds.

An emblematic mound in one of these groups is the only one of its class yet located in northern Wisconsin. A plot of old Indian garden beds also was found.

Life-Savers' Surfboat Driven Back by Wind and Sea

Chatham, Mass., Jan. 22.—The schooner General Adelbert Ames was wrecked off Monomoy Point. Captain Hart and the seven men in his crew were brought safely to shore by the lifesaving crews from the Monomoy and Monomoy Point stations.

The schooner, laden with laths from St. John for Philadelphia, struck on Bearse's shoal, and later slid over into the rip north of the Shovelful lightship and about 200 yards off shore.

The lifesavers launched their surfboat, but were driven back by the wind and sea. For the first time in many years the breeches buoy was brought out. The lifesavers, working waist deep in water, shot four lines from the beach gun before getting a rope across the wrecked craft.

New Bedford, Mass., Jan. 22.—After a preliminary hearing, Charles Matroni, captain of the barge Snipe, was adjudged probably guilty of the murder of Annie Walsh, and was held without bail for the February term of the superior court.

Louis Therrien, the principal witness, was held in the sum of $500 for his appearance and Flora Therrien and Mrs. Mary Keogh, two government witnesses, were allowed to go on their personal recognizance.

LAW NEEDED FOR PROTECTION

Sad Case of Mrs. Couchier Reviewed by Mrs. Titus

Editor Quincy Ledger:

Will you allow me space to extend my thanks to all the patriotic men and women of Quincy, who so promptly responded to my appeal in the Daily Ledger of Jan. 2 for the relief of Mrs. Caroline Torrey Couchier, who was so cruelly sent to the Taunton insane asylum on Dec. 22, after the fire, which destroyed her home in Wollaston, when her aged brother was burnt to death?

Thanks are due Rev. Carl G. Horst of Wollaston, who twice visited Mrs. Couchier in Taunton; to Commander Grogan of Post 149, Charlestown; to Womens Relief Corps No. 9; The old South chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution; the Massachusetts State Society U. S. Daughters of 1812; Camp 95, Sons of Veterans; The Adams Chapter, D. R., of Quincy; the Massachusetts Hospital Reform Society, as well as many private individuals, who freely offered both time and money for the investigation and relief of this distressing case.

But above all the thanks of our citizens are due to Charles A. Price of Quincy, who so promptly responded to my appeal for help. Owing to his earnest work, a suitable guardian was appointed, and a pleasant room secured for her in the John A. Andrew home in Roxbury where everything was in readings for her recention, but she failed so rapidly it was impossible to remove her from Taunton and nothing could be done.

In behalf of the Massachusetts State Society, U. S. Daughters of 1812 of which Mrs. Couchier has been a member many years, I desire to thank Mr. Price for so nobly coming to the relief of this poor lady. I consider it was a disgrace to the city of Quincy that this poor old lady should have been railroaded into an insane asylum with so many friends and homes open to receive her, and Mr. Price deserves the thanks of all citizens of Quincy for his earnest efforts to try to right this wrong. I feel we all owe a debt of gratitude to Mr. Price which should never be forgotten.

But all our efforts were in vain. Worn out by the exertions at the fire, and the horror of finding herself shut up in the insane asylum, not knowing when, if ever, she would be released, was too much for the frail old lady to bear, and she gradually failed day by day, finally passing away on Tuesday.

But our poor friend will not have died in vain if her sad case may serve to arouse a righteous indignation here in Quincy, which will secure such legislation as well in future make it impossible for heartless relatives to railroad people, who are not insane, into asylums, where they must endure the horrors and be treated as insane persons until the slow wheels of justice revolve for their release.

Why should not a hearing be given to friends of persons before they can be committed to asylums, as well as to relatives, who usually have interest in dividing up the personal and other property after the rightful owner is safely shut up behind the bars?

Why should there not be a law to punish persons who wrongfully commit persons to insane asylums and deprive them of their personal liberty?

An immediate public hearing given to all parties interested before a person could be legally committed to an insane asylum would prevent such a tragedy as that of our poor friend, Mrs. Caroline Torrey Couchier.

L. B. Titus.

GRANITE CITY WHIST.

Nine tables were in play Wednesday evening at the weekly whist tournament of the Granite City club. There were several good scores noticed during the evening and it was problematical who would win out. It remained for George W. Jones, around the corner, however to carry off the palm, while the second best score went to E. J. Thompson of Wollaston Park. Ice cream, cake and coffee were served after the tournament.

MRS. MELORA E. HARRIS.

Mrs. Melora E. Harris, widow of Everett A. Harris, passed away Wednesday night at her home on Newcomb place, where she has resided for many years. Mrs. Harris was a quiet unassuming woman and one who made many friends and was much beloved by her neighbors and friends. She leaves three sons.

Girl Turns on Power While Testing "Wet Weather Wire"

New York, Jan. 22.—Miss Irene Roche, 18 years old, accidentally shocked herself to death in the Goodyear Insulating company plant, where she was employed as wire tester.

In testing a spool of "wet weather wire," Miss Roche, in violation of the company rules, reached to a nearby switch and turned on the power. With one hand on the wire and the other on the switch, she formed a circuit which permitted a current of 10,000 volts to pass through her body.

There was a sudden flash and Miss Roche fell back rigid in her chair. Fifty other girl operatives in the room instantly ceased work. Miss Elizabeth Sandman, who was nearest Miss Roche, pulled the emergency cord and turned off the power in all parts of the factory.

URGES RAILROAD DIVORCE

Public Service Board's Report Said to Indicate Receivership

Boston, Jan. 22.—The recommendations of the public service commission, made public in the annual report of the board, regarding the railroad situation are interpreted by prominent financiers as pointing to a receivership for the Boston and Maine railroad. The recommendations which compelled this interpretation were:

The immediate and complete separation of the Boston and Maine and the New Haven systems and the operation of the former road in such a manner as to prevent its serving any other system or the diversion of traffic to any other system.

The retention of the Fitchburg by the Boston and Maine.

The complete reorganization of the Boston and Maine within itself.

The cases of thirty defendants were appealed, and new trials were ordered for six of them. This action has the effect of staying sentence on the cases of the remaining twenty-four until the supreme court of the United States passes on an appeal.

Application to this court for a writ of certiorari will be made by Attorney Zcline for the defendants on Feb. 7.

Woman Who Was Married In a Balloon Succumbs to Pneumonia

Kansas City, Jan. 22.—Mrs. Violet Hartman, 21 years old, known as "the bride of the air," whose marriage in a balloon to Dr. Milo E. Hartman was the opening event of the national elimination balloon race here in 1912, died here of pneumonia.

Mrs. Hartman was formerly Miss Violet Davis. She left school, where she was a pupil, to carry out the novel marriage ceremony and honeymoon. The two were married in the balloon basket before an assemblage of 10,000 persons, and sailed away. The balloon landed in a pig pen on a farm thirty miles away.

The fire originated with the explosion of an oil lamp. Miss Shannon's clothing was burned from her body. It is believed the money and bonds were burned in her clothing.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

Although the lack of branch reading rooms at Wollaston and Norfolk Downs is much to be deplored, it is not as though we had no means of distributing books to these sections; and so we wish to call attention to the delivery baskets, which we send to these places each Thursday and which are returned to us on the Wednesday following. The place of delivery at Wollaston is Mrs. L. W. Grant's store 6 Brook street; at Norfolk Downs, W. H. Russell's, 392 Hancock street.

Persons already registered at the Central library wishing to borrow books through this means may send a letter in the basket, stating what they would like, whether fiction, or fiction and non-fiction, how many books they would like and whether or not they wish to have a book selected for them, in case none of the books from their list of numbers are in.

A book may be renewed by sending a note in the basket in which is given the number and title of the book and the date when due. Fines for five days instead of seven are charged on books returned the week following the one when due, allowing for the time taken in transit.

The basket is now in charge of Miss Dorothy Kingsbury, a resident of Wollaston, and if there is any trouble in receiving books, patrons are asked to send a note, explaining the nature of the difficulty, which will receive immediate and personal attention.

We hope that many former users of the library through the basket privilege will renew their patronage and that others will find opportunity to make one visit to Crane Memorial Hall for registration in order to use the basket accommodation.

SCHOOL DEBATING.

The Superintendent of Schools acted as one of the judges Wednesday evening at the annual debate between the debating teams of the Brockton and Milton High schools held in Brockton. There is some indication that this most stimulating form of school activity is again coming to the front in the public schools. Time has been, before the athletic and social phase of school life became prominent, when debating was a favorite form of school occupation and enjoyment. If it again comes into prominence the schools and the pupils will be so much the richer for it.

WHEN DOCTORS DISAGREE.

The Wollaston school hall has during the present month been the forum for two dramatically opposite theories of child training. Those who were privileged to hear the addresses by Dr. Wood Hutchinson and Dr. Marshall Perrin can understand some of the perplexities that assail the modern parent. As between the let-alone, the almost spineless policy advocated by Dr. Hutchinson, and the vigorous policy of Dr. Perrin the average man would have little difficulty in choosing. There is a current feeling, rather wide spread, that the "let-alone" policy has already been carried too far for the good of the children.

TRADE EDUCATION.

Those who are following the course of the school department in its policy of providing trade education for the boys of the city will be interested in the distribution of pupils at present enrolled in the half-time school. There are twenty-six pupils learning the machinists trade, two learning gear construction, four sheet metal trade, three copper smithing, eight joiner trade, eight telephone construction, five ship-plumbing, eight mould loft trade. One boy who recently left the school to go on full time, having completed his trade, receives 31 1-4 cents per hour. How many boys leaving High school without a trade can do as well to start?

Boys are received in the school at any time. Since the School Committee has published its plan for an all-day school, to bridge the gap between the elementary school and the part time school, and to relieve the High school, the number of inquiries and applications received indicates that the first year class which it is proposed to start with 36 members will be filled with a waiting list beside. From the pre-vocational classes alone from 15 to 20 boys have already signified their intention of entering the Industrial school, if provided by the city. With this school in operation, the system of trade opportunities would be complete for boys and would undoubtedly be taken advantage of in increasing numbers.

SCHOOL GROWTH.

In view of the interest in the ever present problem of school accommodations, it is worth while to list the school rooms of the city at present unoccupied. The new Adams school has two, the Cranch one, the John Hancock one temporarily not in use, and the Gridley Bryant one. The last named school may have two vacant rooms after September in case the district continues to lose school population as rapidly as it has in the last few years. As the growth of the city's school population is annually a number sufficient to fill five or six rooms, the problem of providing school accommodations for them all will be a constant one.

GRIDLEY BRYANT ALUMNI.

The concert, sale and alumni dance held in St. Mary's hall last week was a most successful affair socially and financially, about $120 being added to the school fund. This will enable the school to purchase the latest Victor talking machine with a good supply of graded records to use in music and folk dancing.

The Alumni Association elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

President—Charles J. McGilvray, '97
Vice president—James E. Geary, '98.
Secretary-treasurer—Miss Gertrude M. Burke, '03.

These officers with the following appointed by the president constitute the executive committee:—Vincent A. Bolger, '99; Walter Pendis, '00; Mrs. Mary Keenan Duggan, '01; Miss Rina Bizzozero, '02; Lawrence E. Donovan, '04; Miss Isabelle McGilvray, '05; John F. Sheehan, '06; Miss Dorothy C. Foley, '07; James Edward Joyce, '08; Daniel F. Riley, '09; Miss Anna T. Hagerty, '10; Miss Margaret E. Byron, '11; Miss M. Esther Knight, '12; Edwin G. Lakin, '13.

SCHOOL ATHLETICS.

Not for several years has the student body at the Quincy High school demonstrated their interest in athletics as they have during the basket ball season. The attendance at the base ball and foot ball games was discouraging to the promoters of sport but with the entrance of the basket ball quintette into the Inter-scholastic league there has been a noticeable chance in the students attitude. Teams are supported by athletic associations, but the prospects are that this season will be profitable. An organized cheering section is being formed which if effected will do much to bring the attention of indifferent pupils to the balance of games scheduled.

European Nostalgia For West Africa.

There is a wonderful charm about West Africa, says Major Tremearne in "Some Austral-African Notes and Anecdotes," which few Europeans can throw off. Then he tells of a man who, after living for ten consecutive years in a lonely part of southern Nigeria, made up his mind to have a trip home and sailed away in splendid spirits.

The Gold Coast ports were part of West Africa, and so he managed to make himself fairly at home while there, though the life on board ship was already beginning to bore him, and he wished that he had never left Nigeria. Sierra Leone he did not like at all, as it was not the West Africa which appealed to him, and he began to long for his home in the bush. After leaving that port and with no sight of land to cheer him he became desperate, and on arrival at Las Palmas he declared: "I shall go no farther. I must return at once. I have had quite enough of Europe."

Open Windows at Night.

It is difficult to get doctors to agree and to agree with the patient listener. For years I had been a slave to the open window, the fresh air at night. That doctrine of the open bedroom window was my obsession, but recently doubt crept in. By accident the bedroom window had been closed, and I slept peacefully and woke refreshed in a closed room. There was no ventilation of the official medical variety. To a medical journalist I put the problem of the window at night, and, to my astonishment, he told me that I am an animal when I sleep and do not want fresh air at all.

"Look at the animals! When they sleep they choose the stuffiest nooks they can find, and they know what is best for them. Shut your bedroom windows at night and open them in the morning." And when I reflected on the dormouse and the dog I am encouraged to tuck my nose with the other animals.—London Chronicle.

An Old Caddie's Retort.

He is an old caddie on an east coast course, and being a noted figure on the links he endeavors as far as possible to caddie only for thoroughly efficient golfers. Occasionally, however, he finds himself accompanying a "foozler," and on these occasions his dignity is injured.

One day recently he found himself caddying to an old gentleman who was out, clearly, more for exercise than for the love of the game and who was playing shocking golf.

By the time the twelfth hole was reached he had been in most of the bunkers en route and had succeeded in breaking a club. "I think I shall give up this hole," he remarked at last to his indignant caddie. "Na, na," retorted the old worthy bitterly; "feenish the course, sir—feenish the course. Ye've gotten other four clubs to smash yet an' nine bunkers tae dae it in!"—Glasgow News.

A Merciful Farmer.

A young lady from the city was going one summer to make her first visit to a cousin in the country. At the station she was met by the cousin, and after a half hour's drive he told her they were approaching his farm.

In one of the broad fields that met the young lady's attentive eye stood a windmill, and gathered around it, some standing and some reclining, were several hogs.

"Well, that beats anything I ever heard of!" exclaimed the fair one. "I didn't know that you farmers were so considerate."

"What does?" queried the country cousin.

"That over yonder," replied the city girl, pointing a pretty finger. "Just think of having a fan out in the field to keep those hogs cool!"—Christian Endeavor World.

Courage of Despair.

Professor McCoy of Melbourne university in a book about snake experiments tells a strange story illustrating the courage of despair. Putting a mouse into a box that contained one of his captive cobras, he watched the reptile glide slowly toward it. The mouse shrank terrified into a corner, and then when the cobra's flattened head was within an inch of it it sprang into the air and alighted on the back of the neck of its foe. It sat there and clinched its sharp little teeth in the reptile's flesh. The cobra could not shake it off, and it bit deeper and deeper until the cobra lay dead.

An Irish Bull.

An Irishman was trying to lead a bull. He tied the rope to his wrist, and the bull took the lead. He took it with a vengeance. As the Irishman was flying around the corner a friend shouted, "Where are you going, Pat?" "I don't know," he replied. "Ask the bull."—Exchange.

Spoiling Good Paper.

"Poetry should be written on one side of the paper, shouldn't it?" asked the budding bard.

"That depends on the poetry," replied the editor wearily. "Lots of it shouldn't be written on either side."—Philadelphia Record.

"When did you find that you cared for him?"

"About a quarter of a minute after I discovered that he no longer felt that life would not be worth living if he couldn't have me."—Chicago Record-Herald.

GETTING TRUST BILLS READY

Congress Prompt to Act Upon Suggestions of President

FULL AND FAIR HEARINGS

Shrewd Politics Being Played In Dividing Work—Each Congressional "Author" of Measures Will Get Prestige He Demands—Adjournment by June Prophesied by Underwood

Washington, Jan. 22.—The White House has served notice upon congress that full and free hearings must be given upon all the administration anti-trust bills. The president evidently learned a sharp lesson from his experience with the currency bill, which measure was materially improved by the senate committee on banking and currency after open hearings, which the house committee had refused to grant.

The debate on the currency bill in the senate led also to important amendments, and the president now is inclined to agree that time will be saved rather than lost by giving the business interests an opportunity to dissect the administration measures and aid them with intelligent criticisms.

Shrewd politics also is being played in dividing the work of preparing the anti-trust bills. In accordance with a notion of Mr. Underwood, Mr. Adamson's committee on interstate commerce will consider the bills relating to the interstate trade commission and government approval of railroad stock and bond issues, and Mr. Clayton's judiciary committee will consider all other subjects of the president's anti-trust message.

On the senate side, Mr. Newlands as chairman will consider the same subjects being taken up by Adamson in the house, and the judiciary committee, of which Mr. Overman is acting chairman, will handle the bills coming from Clayton. This disposal will obviate joint hearings and will give to each congressional "author" of the anti-trust billls the prestige he demands.

Having smoothed out congress upon his most important matters, President Wilson will unite with the leaders to bring about an early adjournment.

"I hope congress will finish the work of the session by June 1," said Underwood. "I think the anti-trust bills will go through without great delay. We shall not consider much but the administration measures and the appropriation bills."

Five bills to carry out the supggestions of President Wilson's trust message are being completed in congress.

CARRIES OUT SUICIDE PACT

New York Man Kills Wife, Two Daughters and Himself

New York, Jan. 22.—John Steierhain, an interpreter, his wife, Josephine, and their two daughters, Gladys, 12 years old, and Edna, 9, were found dead in their home in the Bronx. The man, carrying out a suicide pact with his wife, had committed triple murder and then shot himself. He left a note to this effect.

Neighbors had seen no one enter or leave the place since Monday and the police think the tragedy occurred on that day. The little girls lay dead in one bed, the mother in another, and Steierhain was stretched out on the floor. He was 46 years old.

MRS. DOUBLEDAY LOSES

Woman Showed Her Knee to Jury In $5000 Suit For Damages

Hartford, Jan. 22.—A jury in the superior court refused any part of $5000 damages to Mrs. Jennie Doubleday of Springfield, Mass., although she bared her knee to prove her claim of severe injury in a trolley mishap.

Mrs. Doubleday, who is a leader of the W. C. T. U. and other societies in her home city, sued the Connecticut company, which operates the trolleys of the state, alleging that a conductor started his car while she was alighting at Union station.

Jail Doctors Do Not Care to Operate on Wife Slayer's Brain

Chicago, Jan. 22.—Preferring to let him die a painless death rather than live a hopeless maniac, county jail physicians recommended that no operation be performed to remove a bullet from the brain of Andrew Olesen, alleged wife murderer.

Olesen shot himself in the head. An examination convinced the surgeons that use of the knife would leave his mind a blank forever.

Plymouth, Eng., Jan. 22.—The British submarine "A-7," which sank to the bottom of Whitesand bay on Friday last during maneuvers, was located in twenty-three fathoms of water, four miles from shore.

The submarine is lying a little east of the spot where she disappeared. The raising operations were begun this morning.

THE PHILERGIANS.

The regular meeting of the Philergians of Braintree was held in the Cochato club house hall Tuesday afternoon at half past two. The meeting was conducted by the president, Mrs. Lucy C. Wales. After the reading of the records various notices of importance were given. A letter of thanks was read from the secretary of the Friendly Aid association thanking the Philergians for the assistance rendered them on the Nurse's Supply day of recent date.

A letter was read from the Music department of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's clubs. Suggestions were offered that the subject of music may be as seriously considered in the club work as any other subject which claims the attention of club workers. Various outlines were suggested, one a series of topics on the Folk Music of different countries to develop more musical appreciation among those who have no special musical training. Another outline is the study of the growth and development of music which is intended for persons who enjoy music and who desire to study it further. It was announced that Havrah W. L. Hubbard of the Boston Opera house would continue his talks on Operas next winter. By the end of the season Mr. Hubbard will have given these talks about three hundred times before women's organizations. "Keep Mr. Hubbard in mind for another season."

The proposed Forest Taxation Act was explained in part, the purpose of the act is to encourage the growing of timber in larger amount and to full maturity. The proposed act does not exempt timberland from paying its fair proportion of taxes, but defers these taxes until timber is cut. Taking advantage of the act is entirely optional with each owner. He may have his land registered when it is subject to certain new taxes instead of the ordinary taxation. At a recent meeting of the board it was voted to submit to the club the mind of the gathering viz: whether or not the club should write to our senators and representatives endorsing the bill. The recommendation of the board was adopted by the club. A letter was read from Sarah Louise Arnold, president of Simmons college endorsing the character and worth of Miss Salls to whom the Simmons College Scholarship will be given. Miss Salls is a graduate of the Braintree High school and will be greatly encouraged by this assistance rendered her by the Philergians.

Mrs. Martha C. Fuller of Middle street will serve as director for two years in the place of Mrs Fannie W. Powers who has resigned.

Thre was considerable interesting information given concerning the teachers salaries and their increase. The maximum wage now being received is $550. It is proposed to gradually increase that amount to $700.

Mrs. Frederick Folsom presided at the piano and sang a group of American Indian songs. She was in excellent voice and sang with rare expression portraying the varied emotions with artistry.

The topic of the afternoon was Woman's Suffrage. Mrs. George W. Pfieffer of Allston well known to many of the club members because of her teaching of Parliamentary Law presented the argument against suffrage and Mrs. Marion Booth Kelley of Cambridge spoke for suffrage.

The first named spoke for the conservation of womanhood, feeling that woman's sphere is not in the political arena but rather in the home. There she is a social force and exerts an influence in the state and community. In disputing the oft repeated statement that the ballot is a natural right, the speaker proceeded to show that was not so when she proved that the vote was a privilege granted to certain people; many, including sailors, those in the army, travelling salesmen, the colored men, the Japanese and others being exempt. Doubling the vote won't change it and the existing evils of intemperance, white slavery, the labor problem and other pertinent subjects will not be changed immediately. She quoted statistics which showed the vote had done little to improve conditions in the states where it had been tried for the past nineteen years or less. She felt that the power of woman can be used to shape public opinion and thus remedy the many wrongs of the time without the ballot. Mrs. Kelley spoke easily and fluently for Women's Suffrage. She felt that women's influence is needed to enforce good legislation, that woman has a high ideal for the home and her children, that the influence of motherhood should be exerted to all children. She did not claim that the ballot would instantly correct all the evils of social life but that woman working shoulder to shoulder with man, sharing all the responsibilities of life, could by her different view point aid in the uplifting of the home and the vast improvement of social service. Experience has shown that womans interests center around questions affecting education, public cleanliness, morality, civic improvements, charities public health, pure food and similar subjects which intimately concern the home life and aid the prosperity of the family and public. Men lose sight of many such things because of business pressure and think in terms of dollars and cents.

Thus men and women working in co-operation may bring about a reform which will be far reaching in its influence for good. There was no discussion of the subject until after the meeting had been adjourned, then the speakers were surrounded by club members and many interesting questions asked and answered.

WOLLASTON WOMEN'S CLUB.

At the regular meeting Tuesday afternoon of the Wollaston Women's club in the Wollaston Unitarian church the president, Mrs. Arthur D. Ropes was in the chair.

Members were requested to notify the corresponding secretary of any errors or changes in name or address in the year book. A letter was received by the president from the president of the Sachem club' asking the women's club to appoint a committee to work jointly with the Sachem club committee in connection with the building of the proposed clubhouse for the Sachem club. It was voted that the executive board be the committee. The principal business of the afternoon was the revision of the bylaws by a committee composed of the president, Mrs. Thomas Fenno, Mrs. Harold Waterhouse and the executive board. The corrections and admendments as proposed were adopted.

In response to an appeal from the Massachusetts State Federation which is trying to raise $10,000 for the National Federation endowment fund the club will contribute a substantial sum.

The Civics committee has placed civic pride rubbish cans on various street corners in Wollaston and an endeavor has been made to secure a train to Boston at about one o'clock for the benefit of matinee goers.

The Glee club is to give a concert in Wollaston school hall Jan. 30, assisted by well known Boston talent and the Wollaston Glee club.

The president spoke of the death of Mrs. Charles L. Seavey, the first loss by death in the club membership. A letter of condolence was sent to Mr. Seavey by the corresponding secretary.

The speaker of the afternoon was Charles Frederick Whitney, brother of Mrs. Edward S. Tenney, a club member. He is supervisor of architecture and color harmony in the schools of Salem.

Mr. Whitney spoke on Color Harmony in the Home and gave a most interesting and instructive talk and at the close of the meeting a conference was held when Mr. Whitney described and gave samples of interior decoration of individual homes.

An informal tea was served in the vestry and there was also a large sale of home cooked food.

The next meeting will be held at the Park and Downs church Tuesday evening Feb. 3.

NEWSY BRIEFS

A regular meeting of the Granite Cutter's International Union was held in Clan MacGregor hall Wednesday evening. President Brault was in the chair.

Quite a few pungs and sleighs were noticed out this morning and sleighing is reported good. The ground is covered with a thick coating of ice and snow and with a very little more snow the sleighing would be prime.

A regular meeting of the Town River yacht club will be held this evening to which prospective members of the club are cordially invited. In addition to what business is to come up, there will be an entertainment and refreshments.

The Bicycle Club met Wednesday evening in Clan MacGregor hall. President Robert Craig was in the chair. Preparations are under way for the annual Burn's supper, which will be held Jan. 30 in Clan MacGregor hall.

—Each pledging himself to wear a monocle every day until Jan. 30, 13 members of the senior class of the Lewis and Clark high school in Spokane, Washington have organized a secret society known as the Monocle club. The boys divulged enough secrets so that it is known that the members have sworn to appear behind monocles at all school social functions this month, and the faculty is disturbed over the announcement that the glass eyes will be worn on the stage at the commencement exercises. The number 13 has been chosen as the symbol of the club, and the membership is limited to that number.

TENNIS CLUB BOWLING

This Week's Contests the Closest of the Season

Several exciting incidents occured in the weekly rolloff of the Wollaston Tennis Club on the Coliseum alleys Wednesday evening. Raymond shattered the bunch for 118 in his last string and took high single. Emery and Hutton got 108 each, Jenner 107, and Hoxie 106. Other strings run less than 70 by the other bowlers.

The teams of Captains Baker and Estes tied in their team total, duplicating the experience of the Mavers and McKenzies teams of the Clan MacGregor league on Tuesday night. The rolloff resulted in the Bakers taking 3 of the four points.

FACULTY WIN AGAIN

Defeat Sophomores at Basket Ball 41 to 6

The High school faculty team defeated the Sophomore basketball team Wednesday afternoon in the High school gymnasium, the score being 41 to 6.

The Faculty played a good game and at all times showed a fine eye for baskets and passed the ball in a good way. The stars for the victors were Mansur, French, and Thompson, and for the Sophomores Welsford and Sawyer, who did some good passing. The playing of Thompson is especially to be noted for the reason that the thumb and forefinger of his playing arm were in bandages. This makes the second victory for the Faculty, they having defeated the Senior team about two weeks ago. An enthusiastic assembly of teachers and members of the class of 1916 cheered for their respective teams.

The line up was as follows

FACULTY	SOPHOMORES
French, rf	rg, Johnson
Mansur, lf	lg, Lyons
	lg, Favreau
	lg, and c, Torrey
Thompson, c	c, Sawyer
Paulsen, rg	rf, Welsford

Score—Faculty, 41; Sophomores, 6. Baskets—French 10 and 1 on foul. Mansur, 7, Paulsen, 2, Thompson 1, Welsford 3. Referee, Collins, Umpire, Aschenbach. Time keeper, Aschenbach. Scorer, Atwood.

BEARDSLEY IS LANDED IN JAIL

Starts Lively Scuffle After Surrendering to Lawyer

HE RIDICULES THE SHERIFF

His Terms Put Down In Legal Phraseology and Properly Signed and Witnessed Before He Gives Up—Makes Certain That Children Will Be Properly Cared For

Mayville, N. Y., Jan. 22.—Edward Beardsley, the "Chatauqua terror," was locked in a cell in the county jail here after having stood off fifty deputy sheriffs besieging his home near Summerdale for more than a week.

Beardsley laid aside his rifle, unstrapped his cartridge belt and surrendered peaceably to Charles Backus, an attorney, but after being housed in a hotel here displayed another outbreak of warlike spirit when a deputy came to take him to jail. After a scuffle, during which Beardsley was roughly handled, he was overpowered.

Beardsley was arraigned before Justice Young, charged with assault in the first degree as a result of the shooting of Poormaster Putnam. A plea of not guilty was entered. Putnam continues to improve and it is now believed he will recover.

The Beardsley children are still in charge of their grandmother, Mrs. Edith Austin of Youngsville, Pa. It has not been arranged when they will be removed to Mrs. Austin's home in Pennsylvania.

"That sheriff is rotten. I could have held out another week if I had enough fuel," was Beardsley's sharp criticism of the county guardian.

Beardsley is an undersized man, rather slim, but apparently muscular. He wore a workingman's rough shirt, rough trousers and high boots. He talks with ease and fluency of his troubles. He was at one time a teacher and a preacher of a humble sort, and his conversation is that of a man who knows exactly what he is talking about.

He said he did not intend to shoot Putnam and is sorry he did, but he acted in defense of his home.

Beardsley had a definite notion of what he wanted before he would surrender and he made his attorney, Ray F. Pickard, put it all down in legal phraseology and have it properly signed and witnessed before he would consent to give up.

There was first a paper signed by Putnam, consenting to the removal of Beardsley's nine children from the townships of Chatauqua county. There was also a paper by which Beardsley's brothers, Charles of Titusville, Pa; Carl of Kiantone, N. Y., and William of Steamburg, N. Y., agreed to care properly for the children, Beardsley relinquishing all claims to them. The third document specified that the children would not be molested after the brothers took charge of them.

Pickard, accompanied by Charles Backus of Mayville, drove to Beardsley's house. Beardsley laid aside his guns and read the papers carefully.

"My wife is not included in this agreement," said he. "You must put her name in so there can't be any hitch as to the legality of my brothers taking the children."

So Pickard journeyed over the three miles of drifted roadway to procure the signature of the woman who is the mother of four of the children, but who says she is not the wife of Beardsley. He had no trouble in locating her, for she is in jail. The paper was revised and she signed it.

Beardsley demanded that the children's grandmother, Mrs. Austin, be brought from Youngsville, Pa., to prepare them for the journey. His demand was complied with.

HAS $5,000,000 FORTUNE

But Mentally Deficient Danish Woman Is Deported at New York

New York, Jan. 22.—Because she resented the questions of the immigration authorities, Miss Palamara De Freschow, a Danish woman worth $5,000,000, was deported. She came here from Jamaica, where she had been visiting friends, and was sent back there on the Santa Marta.

Miss De Freschow told the officers they were impertinent when they asked her if she was married or single. Her answers to other questions made them fear she is not mentally capable of taking care of herself, and they refused to admit her.

AFTER REPRIMAND BY THE PRESIDENT

Howard Deprived of Command of Asiatic Fleet

Washington, Jan. 22.—An echo of the Carabao banquet, at which the administration's Philippine policy was ridiculed here last month, was heard at the navy department when Secretary Daniels revoked an order assigning Rear Admiral Howard to command the Asiatic fleet, succeeding Rear Admiral Nicholson.

Instead Howard will relieve Rear Admiral Cowles, commanding the American squadron off the Pacific Mexican coast, and Cowles will take command of the Asiatic fleet.

Admiral Howard was chairman of the Carabao dinner committee and with the other members, high army and navy officers, was reprimanded at the direction of President Wilson after an investigation of the travesties and songs which featured the military society's banquet.

MURRAY PLEADS GUILTY

Flagman Concerned In Wreck In Which Twenty-One Lives Were Lost

New Haven, Jan. 22.—Charles H. Murray, flagman of the Bar Harbor express of the New Haven railroad, wrecked at North Haven Sept. 2, causing the loss of twenty-one lives, pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the superior court here.

Murray did not go back the proper distance to protect the rear end of his train with which an on-coming train collided.

Murray, Conductor Adams of the Bar Harbor train and Engineer Miller of the White Mountain express, were all arrested, charged with manslaughter.

The trial of Adams and Miller have not started. Judge Shumway deferred Murray's sentence until a later date.

FISH IS CONVICTED

Captain Found Guilty of Burning Yacht to Obtain Insurance

Boston, Jan. 22.—Captain John A. Fish of New York was convicted by a jury in the United States district court here on an indictment charging him with burning his yacht Centa in the harbor of Edgartown, Martha's Vineyard, to get $15,000 insurance money.

Pending an appeal sentence was stayed and Fish was released on $10,000 bail.

During the trial United States District Attorney French introduced evidence which showed that the defendant lost two yachts and an automobile by fire, all within a little more than a year. Both yachts had the same name and were insured for the same amount.

CHECK FOR TWO CENTS

Retiring Governor of New Jersey Will Retain It as a Souvenir

Trenton, Jan. 22.—When Leon Taylor left the state house he carried with him a check for 2 cents as a souvenir of the four months he acted as governor of this state.

The check is the smallest ever issued by the controller's office here, and represents a balance due for salary, which was discovered by an eagle-eyed clerk in the controller's office after it had been thought Taylor's claim against New Jersey had been settled in full.

30,000 VOICES!

And Many Are The Voices Of Quincy People.

Thirty thousand voices—What a grand chorus! And that's the number of American men and women who are publicly praising Doan's Kidney Pills for relief from backache, kidney and bladder ills. They say it to friends. They tell it in the home papers. Quincy people are in this chorus. Here's a Quincy case.

Charles J. Somers, barber, 17 Newcomb St., Quincy, Mass., says: "I had a lame back and weak kidneys for ten years. Nothing ever relieved me until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. They soon restored my kidneys to their proper working order and corrected the other ailments. I publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills after they helped me so much, and I have watched their effect in other cases since. I have no reason to change my high opinion of them. I still use Doan's Kidney Pills off and on and I wouldn't be without a supply."

Heloise Durand

She Became an Object For National Protection

By MARIAN KNOX

The Riviera is a favorite place for the aristocracy of Europe to winter, especially Russians, who are often glad to escape the snow and ice and cold winds of that bleak empire. Nice, Mentone and other points on the Mediterranean sea are during the months of December, January and February thronged with people, who find there both a balmy climate and gayety.

About the middle of the nineteenth century an American girl gifted not only with beauty, but a remarkable histrionic genius, seventeen years old, was visiting the Riviera with her mother and brother. One afternoon while walking on the promenade on the Mediterranean shore the party met among the throng of idlers a tall, handsome young man whose light hair and blue eyes marked him for a northerner. As he passed the girl his gaze was fixed upon her with admiration, while she lowered her gaze to the ground.

These two were real personages, but since this is a story rather than an account we will call the girl Heloise Durand and the man Count Stremoff. The latter was a young Russian, a member of one of the most aristocratic families of St. Petersburg. He lost no time in discovering who was the girl of such striking appearance he had met and in looking for some one to introduce him to her.

He was successful in making her acquaintance, and then began a courtship which would likely have but one ending for so young a girl courted by a nobleman handsome as a picture and possessing the most charming manners. Satan is pictured with cloven feet and a disagreeable countenance. But his most effective work is done under the guise of beauty. The two listened to the music to be enjoyed at Nice, promenaded on the sea walk and were together in sailing parties on the blue waters of the Mediterranean. And all this while the count was pouring into her ear his tale of love.

The Durands were satisfied that the count's position was all he claimed it to be, and since Heloise was of an age when a girl is easily won she was not likely to resist an extremely fascinating man. European society has always been full of unprincipled men whose main object is the conquest of women, but it does not appear that this American family failed scrupulously to observe the etiquette relating to the association of young persons of opposite sex which has always been in vogue in Europe. The count, by asking for the hand of Miss Durand, seemed to indicate that his intentions were perfectly honorable.

One precaution, however, was not taken. While the Durands had evidence that Count Stremoff held the rank, the position and the wealth to which he pretended, they had no information as to his character. This is the rock on which so many American girls abroad, in making matrimonial contracts, have been wrecked. Once satisfied as to the position of the man they want, they are not likely to pay any attention to what he is in himself. The catalogue of Americans who have married titled foreigners to their cost is large, and still it grows.

Count Stremoff being a Russian, any marriage he might make was amenable to Russian law. That law explicitly required that a marriage should take place in the Russian or Greek church and in accordance with its ceremonies. There was no Russian church on the Riviera, and it was arranged that the couple be married at the consulate. The wedding took place, putting Miss Durand in the paradoxical position of being Stremoff's legal wife, while he was not her legal husband.

It was arranged that the Durands and the count should go to Paris, where there was a Greek church, and they could be married according to the Russian law. Stremoff preceded the others. It was then the Lenten season, when no marriage can be celebrated in the Greek church. This the count doubtless knew. Nevertheless, he departed, ostensibly to make preparations for the celebration of the wedding.

When the Durands reached Paris they discovered the fact that the marriage making Heloise the legal wife in Russia as well as other countries could not be completed for some weeks. And now the count showed his true character. He used all his persuasive powers to induce the young girl to go away with him, assuring her that she was his legal wife.

"Go with me," he pleaded, "to Russia, where we can be married according to the requirements of the Greek church, where I will be at home and where my family may attend the wedding. Here we must pass dreary weeks waiting, while there we can be united at once."

This was not true. No couple could be married in the Greek church during Lent in Russia any more than in Paris. The girl protested, but in vain. Stremoff seemed determined, and, becoming fearful of his integrity, not daring to keep her secret longer, Heloise told her mother of his solicitations.

At the same time rumors came to Mrs. Durand that Stremoff was a rake and a profligate, without any sense of honor whatever. Fortunately the Durands were relatives of the American minister at St. Petersburg, and the mother wrote him with reference to the marriage and the rumors she had heard. The ambassador wrote her to come at once to the capital.

The fact of having the influence of one of so much importance at the Russian court makes this episode in real life one of the remarkable stories of the world. Mrs. Durand and the young bride—the latter assumed the title and name of Countess Stremoff—went to Russia and stayed at the American embassy. They were informed by the count's brother that he was a villain and that they had better have nothing further to do with him.

Stremoff while drawing a young American girl into his toils had no idea that she had the opportunity of calling to her aid the power of the United States. Her cousin, the ambassador, took the matter as an indignity to an American citizen to the Russian government and asked for redress for the young countess. The result of his representations was an arrangement between the two powers that the pair be officially married at Warsaw, in Russian Poland. The count, who by this time had thrown off the mask, showing that he had intended to make Miss Durand his dupe, refused to go to Warsaw or be married.

And here comes in among the wrongs that may be perpetrated by despotic power a case of right. Probably no other sovereign, no head of a republic surely, would have been able to compel this rascal to do justice to the girl he had intended to win for the purpose of deserting her when won, except the czar of Russia.

One day Stremoff received an official document from the czar ordering him to go to Warsaw and complete the marriage that he had begun on the Riviera. An order from the autocrat of all the Russias to one of his subjects is not to be despised. One who by a nod can send persons, without the semblance of a trial, to work in the dreaded mines in Siberia is not likely to be disobeyed when he directs a man to do justice to a woman. And the wronged girl had behind her the power of the great American republic to re-enforce the czar.

Count Stremoff dared not disobey his sovereign's order, and at the appointed time the so called wedding party met at the church, the bride wearing a black dress, attended by her father, her mother and the groom's brother, who had been very kind to the injured girl. The father had concealed on his person a revolver, determined that if the villain refused to convey the necessary legal rights to his daughter he would at least prevent his working any more mischief.

The bride and groom met at the altar rail. Probably no more dramatic scene, certainly no more unique one, ever was enacted in a church. The groom was simply passing through a form in obedience to the will of one who held over him the power of life and death; the bride was enduring an ordeal to make her a legal wife. But for her it was a terrible crisis, knowing as she did that her father was armed and at the slightest disposition on the part of the groom to recede the ceremony would be turned into a tragedy. She must have prayed silently there before the altar that she might be spared a bloody ending of her misfortune.

The priest began the marriage service, all save the bride keeping their eyes fixed on the count, wondering by what loophole, if any, he might attempt to escape what was to be forced upon him. To all, especially the bride, the service seemed interminable. But at last it was ended, and Heloise Durand had become legally as well as really the Countess Stremoff. The bride and groom parted at the door of the church, never to meet again.

The Americans fled from Russia at once, for by the Russian law the husband can imprison, beat, in every way ill treat his wife if he can get his hands on her. They reached the border the same day and were safe.

What became of the groom, whether he continued his villainy or had been sobered by this one experience, is not known. The wedding took place more than half a century ago, and his name, save for this episode, wherein he showed his villainy, has sunk into oblivion. Not so his wife. She became one of the world's famous actresses. Yet of all the dramas in which she ever played it is questionable if any was so truly dramatic as the one in which she had played the real, the principal role in the days of her early youth.

FIGHT STARTED OVER GAFFNEY

Murphy Threatened to Wreck Sulzer Administration

TESTIMONY OF EX-GOVERNOR

Declares Under Oath That O'Gorman Characterized Man Who Wanted to Be Commissioner of Highways as "Chief Bagman" of Tammany's Head —Story of Spicy Interview

New York, Jan. 22.—William Sulzer testified under oath here that Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, threatened to wreck his administration as governor of New York if he didn't appoint James E. Gaffney commissioner of highways.

He said he had declined to make the appointment after a conference in Washington with United States Senator O'Gorman.

The senator told him, he said, that Gaffney was Murphy's "chief bagman" and that Gaffney had attempted to hold up James O. Stewart, a state highway contractor and client of the senator, for $100,000, "and that to appoint him would be a disgrace to the state of New York."

Sulzer's testimony was his first sworn statement of charges he had made against Murphy and in many particulars he elaborated them.

Sulzer appeared as a witness in District Attorney Whitman's John Doe inquiry into state highway graft. He was called to explain why, as governor-elect, he had sent a telegram to the state canal board requesting it to defer action in the matter of a $3,000,000 canal contract upon which Stewart was the lowest bidder.

Stewart, who failed to get the contract, testified at a previous hearing that a man named Gaffney had asked him for a contribution of 5 percent of the contract.

Sulzer testified he had sent the telegram because he had been told there was danger that Stewart's bids would be thrown out and that this would be a great injustice to Stewart and the state of New York.

For having requested the canal board to defer action in the matter Murphy summoned him, Sulzer said, and told him that he was "butting in where he didn't belong" and that he was "not beginning right as governor."

When Sulzer resented this and told the Tammany chief he intended to be his own governor, he swore Murphy replied:

"Like h—l you will. I'll see where you'll end up d—d quick."

This interview, Sulzer intimated, marked his first clash with Murphy.

"I told O'Gorman," said Sulzer, "that Murphy was putting the screws on me and bringing to bear all his influence to have me appoint Gaffney commissioner of highways. The senator said, 'If you appoint Gaffney it will be a disgrace to the state of New York, and will ruin your administration. Don't you know that he's Murphy's chief bagman, and goes around holding up contractors, and that he held my friend Stewart up for $100,000?'

"He told me he had gone to Murphy and told him that he would not have his client black-jacked; that Murphy tried to side-step and disclaim all connection with what Gaffney had done, but that he knew that wasn't so.

"I said to the senator: 'I'm glad to hear you say that. I agree with you that it would be a disgrace to the state of New York to appoint Gaffney.'"

Sulzer said that he saw Murphy the next day at O'Gorman's house in Washington. "There were several other Democrats there," he said, "and I listened to what they had to say. When I went out of the room Murphy followed me into the corridor and said he wanted me to stay over until next day. I told him I had to be back in New York.

"Then aagin he importuned me to appoint Gaffney. He said if I would do that I could have my own wish. He said Gaffney knew what to do and that it was an organization matter. I told him I would refuse to appoint him. Then he said, 'It's Gaffney or war.' If anybody should ask you," said the former governor, "it has been war. I told him that the appointee should be above reproach. Murphy pooh-poohed that and said it was an organization matter."

DEATH OF EDWIN GINN

Ginn is survived by a widow and five children. Notable among his enterprises were the construction of model tenement blocks in the West End of Boston and the endowment of the world peace foundation with $1,000,000.

GOOD PIE CRUST.

Secret Lies In Having Pastry Cold and Oven Hot.

When making pie crust one must use the best lard, butter and sifted pastry flour. If possible have a marble slab for rolling out. Have the butter, lard and water as cold as possible, handle as little as possible, work quickly and keep the crust cold until it goes into the oven. All crust is greatly improved if mixed and placed in a bowl directly on the ice for five or six hours before using. The true secret of good crust is to have it icy cold and the oven very hot when the pie is first put into it.

For one ordinary pie with an upper and a lower crust, use six tablespoonfuls of sifted flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one generous tablespoonful of lard and a scant tablespoonful of butter, with sufficient ice water to hold the paste together. Sift the flour and salt together, and with a double chopping knife chop in the ice cold lard and butter. Do not mix with the fingers. Chop thoroughly until the flour resembles coarse meal; then very gradually add the ice water and mix with a wooden spoon to a paste that is not crumbly, but sticks together without adhering to the sides of the bowl. Now cover with a slightly damp napkin and set on the ice for four or five hours. When ready to make the pie divide the crust exactly in two with a sharp knife, dust the board and rolling pin lightly with flour to prevent sticking, but use no more flour than is absolutely necessary. Roll the crust out quickly into a very thin sheet, always rolling away from you, and be careful when you lay the paste in the well greased pie plate not to stretch it, but see that it covers the plate loosely. Always brush the lower crust over with a little white of egg to keep the liquid from the filling from penetrating it.

Then put in the filling, wet the paste around the edge of the pie, lay on the upper crust, press the edges together with the tines of a silver fork and make several vents in the upper crust for the steam to escape. Brush over the top of the pie with a little milk (to give a good brown color), trim off the superfluous paste and bake in a very hot oven. If a lower pie crust only is to be made, as for lemon meringue pie, use half the recipe and prick the paste shell across the bottom to keep it from puffing up.

CANDY RECIPES.

Old and New Ways of Making Sweets For Children and Grownups.

No matter how much candy one is able to buy, there is a pleasure in making certain varieties of sweets at home. Besides, the home manufactured product is much cheaper and purer than the kinds purchased in the shops for small sums of money.

When making candy granulated sugar is preferable. Candy should not be stirred while boiling, and cream of tartar should not be added until the sirup begins to boil. Butter should be put in when the candy is almost done. Flavorings are more delicate when not boiled in candy, but added afterward.

Cocoanut cream candy is delicious made by this recipe: One cocoanut, one and one-half pounds of granulated sugar. Put sugar and milk of cocoanut together, heat slowly until the sugar is melted, then boil five minutes; add cocoanut (grated finely), boil ten minutes longer and stir constantly to prevent burning. Pour on buttered plates and cut in squares. The candy will take about two hours to harden. When cold cut into small squares.

Candied Popcorn.—Put into an iron kettle one tablespoonful of butter, three tablespoonfuls of water, one teacupful of white pulverized sugar, then throw in three quarts of nicely popped corn. Stir briskly until the candy is evenly distributed over the corn. Take the kettle from the fire and stir until it is cooled a little and each grain is crystallized with the sugar and separate. Be careful not to burn the corn.

Cream Candy.—One pound of granulated sugar, three tablespoonfuls of vinegar, one teaspoonful of extract of lemon, one teaspoonful of cream of tartar. Add a little water to moisten the sugar and boil until brittle. Put in the extract and turn out quickly on buttered plates. When cool pull until white and cut into squares.

Ice Cream Candy.—Three cupfuls of sugar, crushed or cut loaf; a little less than one-half cupful of vinegar, one and one-half cupfuls of cold water, piece of butter the size of a walnut. Flavor with extract of vanilla. Boil until it hardens, then pull until white.

Good Dishwashing Machine.

Dishwashing is still the bugaboo of many women, so any device that can assist this part of the work deserves to be used and used extensively. A new washer is just on the market which has been tested with good results. The makers claim that it washes the dishes from the average family meal in three minutes. It washes the silver and glass as well as the dishes, and, as it uses boiling water, the dishes need not be dried. It is impossible to break a dish with this washer, which in itself is a wonderful recommendation. It occupies the same space as a kitchen chair and, as it is on rollers, can be moved easily from place to place.

Fuel Savers.

Fireless cooker comes first in the list.

Gas griddles are heat conservers.

Combination teakettle and double boiler saves time.

Device utilizing one burner for baking is on sale.

Portable oven has window that prevents loss of heat.

RUFFLES IN SIGHT.

Spring Skirts Will Disport Themselves In Fluffy Frills.

Plaited tunics made of a succession of five inch ruffles slightly gathered and many more flounces of various shapes and widths point to a return of ruffles for spring and summer dresses.

Just how they will be used is a matter of conjecture, but in all probability the scant foundation skirt will remain, with the fullness given only by the flounces. One of the latest words from the center of fashion, Paris, is that a spiral flounce will be worn in corkscrew effect.

There is going to be a new vogue for batiste embroideries on an ecru ground. Various widths of these are to be seen in the shops, and some appear in colored embroideries, in view of the futurist art that is now influencing the dress world.

Taffeta also will be a popular dress material next spring, as it always is with the Parisienne, in soft qualities with the chiffon finish. Many dainty evening frocks are being made now of taffeta with lace flouncings.

Blue is to be a popular spring color. Also of interest to women is the news that short coats will be very smart. Illustrated here is a two toned costume in blue. The coat is of blue tussdowne over a draped skirt of satin. Embroidered silk gloves are brought up to meet the sleeves, which end just below the elbows.

K. OF C. ANNIVERSARY

Braintree Council Gives Entertainment and Dance

Braintree council, No. 1462, Knights of Columbus, celebrated the fourth anniversary of the founding of the council by an entertainment and dance at Braintree Town hall Wednesday evening. It was ladies' night and the fair sex was much in evidence.

Preceding the dance there were vocal selections by the Alpha male quartette and impersonations by Ernest Wright, entertainer. Solos were rendered by members of the quartette and there were selections by Abel's six piece orchestra which also played for dancing.

After the concert, dancing was enjoyed until 12 o'clock, the musicians being almost hidden behind a bower of flowers and potted plants. Frappe was served.

There were about 75 couples present and the affairs was in charge of the following committee:

Grand Knight, L. E. D. Gaudreau, chairman, Walter S. Fouche sec'y and treas. Eward V. Heffernan, John H. Sullivan, John J. Davis, J. Frank Megley, Edward P. Cuff, W. F. Bourbeau, Joseph W. Mulcahy, Joseph V. Cuff, Moses H. McGaughey.

Visiting knights were present from surrounding cities and towns, among them being Edward Barrett, Grand Knight of Quincy Council. Among the large number from this town were noticed, Rev. M. F. McDonnell and Rev. A. J. Fitzgerald of the St. Francis church and Representative Moses H. McGaughey. The affair was highly successful in every way and reflects great credit on the committee of arrangements.

MAPLE LODGE ENTERTAINMENT

Amateur theatricals were given after the regular meeting of Maple lodge, Knights and Ladies of Honor, in Protection hall, Wednesday evening by a local company. All enjoyed "Pooh Bah Peace Town," the playlet which introduced rural and city life characters.

The sketch rests on the business of Joshua Spivens (William H. Walker) who in connection with his duty as postmaster, Grand Army Veteran, local express agent, and several other distinctive positions is called upon as justice of the peace to rearrange the domestic affairs of Mrs. Harold Van Goldbuild (Miss Lillian Reed) and Harold, her husband (Bert Reed,) who also took the part of Widow Brown, a charming relic of the old school.

Refreshments followed the presentation and dancing was enjoyed, music being furnished by Mrs. Effie Rhines. The committee in charge was Mrs. Agnes G. Fletcher and Miss M. Lizzie Furnald.

Mr. Walker has become one of the best known amateurs in the city because of his frequent portrayal of high class character parts, and Bert and Lillian Reed are the talented children of Mrs. Rose A. Reed a member. It is probable that the sketch will be repeated at an early date.

SMALL—MOIR.

A simple but pretty wedding was solemnized Tuesday afternoon at 2 P. M. at the First Congregational church, Braintree, by the Rev. Harry Grimes, when Miss Eva A. Moir became the bride of Alfred K. Small, Jr., of Springfield, formerly of Quincy.

The couple were unattended. The wedding march was played by the organist, Dr. W. Porter Pratt of Quincy, and a large assemblage of friends filled the church.

The bride is a popular Braintree girl having graduated from the public schools of the town, and was a careful clerk at the Braintree postoffice for several years, closing her duties last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Small received many pretty and useful gifts and with the hearty congratualtions of their friends accompanying them, left for a short wedding trip to Lake George, N. Y. and the Adirondacks where they intend to participate in the various winter sports of that place. They will be at home to their friends at 83 West street, Hyde Park after Feb. 1.

The speaker of the evening was A. M. Jameson, who gave a very interesting talk on "Beginnings of Wollaston." Mr. Jameson came here in the summer of 1870 and for many years has been in the real estate business. His remarks proved of high interest and were thoroughly enjoyed by those present.

A bright and entertaining number of the Wollaston Herald was read by its editor T. E. Perley. Further selections by the quartet and the serving of ice cream and other refreshments brought the evening to a close.

The watch was thought to have been stolen by a room mate. The man, a fellow countryman occupied the room with Bonavita on the night in question but arose early and disappeared. At the same time a gold watch also disappeared. A tracer was sent out to the pawnshops in Boston but it was not until this week that the time piece turned up. Capt. OUR GUNS BEST, BUT INSUFFICIENT

None Available For Volunteers, Says General Leonard Wood.

SUPPLY 42 PER CENT SHORT

Army Officer In Last Report as Chief of Staff Points Out Weak Spots as He Sees Them and Declares There Is Urgent Need That Deficiencies Be Provided For.

From the standpoint of national defenses probably the most important part of the annual report of Major General Leonard Wood, chief of staff U. S. A., is that urging provision for more field artillery guns. The army is short by 42 per cent of these armaments that have for years been recognized as indispensable. In case of war it would be impossible to buy such guns, and there would be no time for their manufacture under even the most fortunate combination of circumstances.

Experts say there is no field artillery service in any army that surpasses that of the United States gun for gun. The three inch gun, which is the most effective for the mobile army, with the one standard shell containing two high explosive charges, one in the head of the shell to detonate on impact and another in the shrapnell chamber to detonate by time fuse, has no equal in any army, it is said.

But General Wood points out that if war came there would not be a single field artillery gun to put in the hands of the reserve, if there were one, or the volunteers, on whom the United States always depends for the larger army required in war.

He holds that a reserve of trained men available for duty with the United States forces in the event of war is the chief need in connection with the maintenance of military defenses.

General Wood recommends the creation of sufficient additional regiments to permit the organization of three complete infantry divisions, or one field army. He also favors legislation providing for the elimination from the service of all officers who have either outlived their efficiency or who have failed to make themselves useful.

Encouragement of rifle practice among civilians and schoolboys, expansion of army camps for college students, established experimentally last summer; more strict supervision of state militia organizations and insistence that the colleges receiving federal land funds conform to the letter and spirit of the law in the matter of military instruction and drill among their students are among other recommendations.

This report is General Wood's last one, as he is to be relieved as chief of staff next April.

DUNCE A STAR AT THE PIANO

Musical Prodigy Can't Solve Mystery of Three "R's."

In the class of dullards in Public School 28, Jersey City, N. J., has been discovered a lad who is believed to be a musical prodigy—Francis Cesario, aged fourteen, who was consigned to the special class of Miss Helen Sewell because his progress was so slow that the service of the specialist was necessary to drill into him a primary training.

Miss Sewel suggested to the school board that a piano might aid in the work of development of the dullards. Soon after the instrument was installed the discovery was made that the Cesario boy is a natural musician. His playing astonished Professor Moritz Schwartz, musical director of the public schools. He said:

"What are the three 'R's' or the mysteries of dead languages when a boy like Francis has music in his soul? I am going to help him all I can, and I predict a brilliant career for him."

ARRESTS BRIGHT'S DISEASE.

California Physician Describes New Remedy and Its Effects.

A newly discovered treatment of "washing" the kidneys with an alkaline solution is declared by Dr. A. T. Charlton of the Los Angeles County (Cal.) hospital to be a positive "arrest" of Bright's disease in any stage, and Dr. Charlton cites as proof twenty cases in which he applied the method.

Dr. Charlton's most severe test was that of John Frohman, a laborer, who was brought to the hospital in the dropsical or last stage of the disease. By using a "high irritation" pressure, Dr. Charlton declared, he had not only enabled Frohman to leave the hospital, but that the man would live his natural span of days so far as his kidneys were concerned.

Dr. Charlton is engaged in making a minute report of his discovery, its application and the cases treated by him to the American Medical association and to several other scientific bodies.

"Women Intellectually Inferior."

"I do not regard women as the intellectual equals of men," said Mayor Robert H. Fordyce of Paterson, N. J., in explaining to a committee from the Paterson Woman Suffrage league why he had refused to appoint a woman to membership on the board of education. The mayor is married and has two daughters.

MEMORIAL TO IMMIGRANTS

A. O. H. to Erect One of Quincy Granite at Cohasset

All arrangements have been completed, according to Dennis J. Slattery State treasurer, for the dedication of the monument at Cohasset on Memorial Day to be erected by the Ancient Order of Hibernians in memory of a band of immigrants from Ireland who were washed ashore at Cohasset in 1847.

They were coming from Ireland to America to escape the results of the famine there, and were wrecked in a heavy storm off the South Shore. Three days passed before it became known in Boston. Many members of the party were lost and others washed ashore. There were 147 aboard the ship when she foundered and the recovered bodies were buried in Cohasset in one large plot.

The monument will be set on this lot and the ceremonies will be elaborate. National and State officers will be present and the Grand Army posts of the South Shore will assist.

The money has been raised by subscription and already over $2,500 has been collected by the committee. The monument is of Quincy granite, is seventeen feet in height and the base, a three step affair will be surmounted by a Celtic cross. The cross piece is four feet wide. Emblems of the A. O. H., and the Ladies' Auxiliary will appear on each side. The inscription will be written by Rev. Fr. Edward J. Fitzgerald of Worcester.

The work is rapidly nearing completion at the granite yard of Patrick Tangney on Garfield street where it is being viewed daily by hundreds of members of the order, many of whom have come considerable distance.

DISTRICT COURT.

William Barrett was arraigned for keeping an unlicensed dog at Holbrook. Case continued until Jan. 29.

Louis P. Montaln of Somerville was arraigned for neglecting to support his illegitimate child at Quincy and was ordered to pay $2 a week for the child's support.

The ladies' Society connected with the M. E. Swedish church, Rev. A. E. Hillman pastor, met at the home of Mrs. John Johnson, 2 Gothland street, Wednesday afternoon, and despite the bad weather of the morning there was a large attendance. The meeting opened with the usual routine of business, after which a social hour was enjoyed. Refreshments were served.

THE QUINCY DAILY LEDGER

LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION IN THE CITY

Vol. 29 No. 20 QUINCY MASS. FRIDAY EVENING JANUARY 23 1914 PRICE TWO CENTS

WOMAN BURNED AT WEST QUINCY FIRE

Clothes of Mrs. Catherine Rooney Took Fire When She Was Alone in House

Was Evidently Trying to Rebuild Furnace Fire

Mrs. Catherine Rooney, a sister of Representative Michael T. Sullivan, and widow of Ex-Councilman Rooney, was burned to death Thursday evening at her home at 30 Bates avenue. Mrs. Rooney was at home all alone at the time, and just how the fire started is somewhat of a mystery. It is supposed that she attempted to start a fire in the furnace with a piece of lighted paper and that a back draft blew the flames against her clothing, setting it afire and that before help could be summoned or she could do anything to help herself, she had been overcome. She had evidently dragged herself from the furnace door as far as the coal bin in her efforts to escape when she fell and was burned to death.

Joseph Rooney, one of her sons employed in Boston, came home early Thursday evening and entering the house was surprised not to find his mother. He ran through the house shouting for her but got no response. Becoming alarmed he rushed to the door leading to the cellar which he threw open and was greeted by a sheet of flame and smoke.

He started down the cellar stairs, and through the smoke could see his mother lying on the floor enveloped in flames. He made an heroic effort to reach her, but was repeatedly driven back. He then ran to Box 149 situated near the Granite Railway Co. yard and rang the alarm which sounded at 6.13.

Hose 3 of West Quincy was the first to reach the scene, and the firemen broke open the bulkhead door and tried to enter. By this time however the cellar was a roaring furnace and they were unable to enter. When Chief Litchfield arrived he opened the door leading to the cellar to provide draft for the smoke to escape and it was not many minutes before the firemen had the fire under control and were able to enter.

They found the body of the woman on the floor of the cellar burned in a horrible manner. All of her clothing had been burned and her right leg and arm had been burned off. About the cellar floor were a number of old papers and magazines some of which were partly burned. The body was covered with a rubber blanket and Medical Examiner Fred E. Jones was summoned. Dr. Ash, who had also been summoned, was soon on the scene as was one of the priests connected with St. Mary's church.

An examination of the furnace showed some pieces of wood on top of the coals and from appearances it would seem that Mrs. Rooney had gone down cellar to start a fire in the furnace. That she had evidently lighted a piece of paper intending to throw it onto the wood to ignite it, and that when she opened the door of the furnace there must have been a backdraft which blew the flames back onto her, seting fire to her clothing.

There was a kerosene can on a shelf near the stairway, but the fire evidently did not reach this. One theory advanced was that this oil can had exploded, but there was no signs that such had been the fact.

Had the oil can exploded it was pointed out that the timbers of the first floor would have been charred but they were not all of the fire seemed to be on the cellar floor among waste paper.

Joseph Rooney, the son who discovered the fire, was prostrated by the terrible accident as was also another son John Rooney, who is employed by the Street Railway company.

Mrs. Rooney was about 51 years of age, and a widow of John H. Rooney, and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Sullivan of Main street.

According to Medical Examiner Jones fire must have been burning about the body of the woman for an hour at least, for it would take some time for fire to burn her to the condition in which she was found. The damage to the house by the fire was slight and was confined wholly to the cellar.

MASQUERADE AT ALPHA HALL

Prizes Awarded for Best Dressed and Other Features

Court John Ericson and Circle Daughters of Viking, Foresters of America, held a masquerade party in Alpha hall Thursday evening which was well attended. Dancing was enjoyed to music furnished by Wilson's orchestra.

The judges were Matthew Fay, Fred Johnson, Robert Olsen, Edward Boigeson and John Troupe. They awarded the prizes as follows: Best dressed lady, Selma Olsen; best dressed gentle man, Tyyko Carlson; most original lady, Mrs. John Truesdale; most original gentleman, Otto Peterson; most comic lady, Hrs. Anna Anderson.

Nearly 200 people were in costume. Refreshments were served in Union hall.

Th committee included John Matson, Olga Lundquist, Ida Peterson, Anna Peterson, Mrs. Matilda Johnson, Mrs. Minna Gibson, Swan Cedarstrom, Carl Anderson, Algot Ericson and Otto Celotte.

SLIGHT FIRE IN ALPHA BLOCK

The alarm from Box 23 about 1 o'clock this morning was for a slight fire in one of the stores of the Alpha hall block on Cottage avenue, occupied as a candy shop by Merlin Bros. The fire did but little damage, the greater damage being done by outsiders before the department arrived when they smashed in the front door with a big timber, obtained from the block under construction near by.

When the firemen arrived they found the front door smashed in and a wreck. What little fire there was seemed to be in the rear of the store back of a screen where some sweepings had accumulated, and it is thought that a cigarette started the blaze. A chemical stream soon put the fire out and but for the smashed door the loss would have been slight.

GOOD SLEIGHING.

Sleighs have been quite common for the past few days, and several sleigh parties are being arranged by the young people. The sleighing is exceptionally good, especially in streets where there are no car tracks. Over through Milton and on the park system the sleighing is reported as fine and there are many handsome turnouts on the parkways every day.

BAPTIST SUNDAY SCHOOL

One Pupil With Perfect Record for Eleven Years

The Wollaston Baptist Sunday school held its postponed annual meeting in the chapel Thursday evening, following the weekly prayer meeting, and elected the following officers:

Superintendent—Elford L. Durgan.
Assistant Superintendent—Louis S. Cleaves.
Secretary and Treasurer—Oscar A. Blaisdell.
Assistant Secretary and Treasurer—Miss Isabel L. Albee.
Auditor—Charles B. Hall.
Librarian—Harvey D. Black.
Superintendent Primary Department—Mrs. Charles B. Hall.
Superintendent Home Department—Mrs. Edith M. Carpenter.
Musical Director—Amos D. Albee.
Pianists—Mrs. Charles M. Roach, Miss May Critchley and Mrs. Joseph Walther.

Special note was taken of two wonderful records of attendance. In the last eleven years Miss Edna Rhodes has not missed a session of the school and for the last ten years Miss May Critchley's attendance has been perfect.

Last year Miss Rhodes was fittingly reminded of the completion of her tenth year of perfect attendance. This year Miss Critchley having passed her tenth milestone in this respect a committee, consisting of her teacher Mrs. J. A. Jewell and two members of her class was appointed to properly observe the occasion.

The following have been present every session the past year:

Revere Dresser, Harvey D. Black, Elford L. Durgan, Rev. Joseph Walther, Evelyn McFarland, Howard Walther, Mrs Ada Burgess, Sam Drew, Martha Waring, Marion Rand, May Critchley, Edna Rhodes, Mrs. Gleason, Mrs. McFarland.

With this meeting Oscar A. Blaisdell completed his tenth successive year as secretary and treasurer of the Sunday school. Elford L. Durgan, on behalf of the school, presented him with a goldpiece as a token of appreciation of his faithful services.

The past year has been a very successful one for the school with an average atendance of 277 and running as high as 370 on some Sundays.

The school has an enrolment of 551 divided into 10 officers, 33 teachers and 465 scholars, 31 on the cradle roll and 12 in the home department. There are 32 classes in all.

The meeting opened with the report of the secretary and treasurer followed by that of the librarian Harvey D. Black.

Mr. Black recommended the enlargement and re-organization of the library. As a result it was voted to appoint a committee of four to assist the library committee in this respect.

The following delegates were appointed to the South Baptist Sunday School Association.

Mrs. Charles B. Hall, George E. Thomas, Miss Marjorie Rideout, Mr. and Mrs. J. Arthur Sparrow, Mrs. George E. Pinkham, William Talbot and Mrs. Herbert W. Pinkham.

Mrs. Charles B. Hall reported for the primary department and unofficial reports were received fom Mrs. C. A. McFarland for the Albee class, Charles B. Hall for the Walther Class, Ernest Neal for the Rand class, William Talbot for the Goodspeed class and Mrs. J. A. Jewell for the Gleaners.

The school contributed $150 for benevolences this year.

CITY HALL HAPPENING

New Chief Engineer to Sleep at Fire Station

News was quiet about the Mayor's office this morning although he had about the usual number of callers.

Thursday afternoon G. B. Bates, the new chairman of the Board of Assessors, was closeted with the Mayor for some time, as was also John J. O'Hara the new Tax Collector.

One of the early callers this morning was Perry Green who is to be the new Overseer of the Poor. Mr. Green remained in the office nearly an hour. Several others who were waiting to see the Mayor, including Howard Rogers who has been appointed to the Board of Managers of Public Burial Places got tired of waiting and left the hall after being sworn in.

The next caller was Faxon Billings who is to be the Chief Engineer. Mr. Billings in talking to the reporters while waiting said that he would make his headquarters at the Central Fire Station and that he would sleep at the station so as to be ready at all times to respond to alarms.

He said that the department was handicapped for men, and that at certain times the Central Station was without an officer in charge. This happened when the captain or lieutenant had their day off, and the officer on duty was out to his meals. Mr. Billings stated that he intended to be at the station at such times.

Out of a force of thirty men there were six off every day on days off, and at meal hours there were just enough men left in the several stations to drive apparatus; which did not leave anyone to handle it after it arrived at a fire. For this reason he believed that the department should have more men.

When asked if he intended to drive the Chief's red devil himself, he said that he would have a driver for the machine when responding to alarms.

It is reported that the room at the Central station now used as a billiard room is to be altered over for the new Chief's headquarters, which leads the men to think that perhaps they are to lose the use of the table.

This was mentioned to Mr. Billings this morning, but he did not state state whether such was the fact or not, but he did state that alterations would be made so as to give him a room at the Central station.

He spoke very highly of the members of the department and said no better fighting force existed in the state for its size.

As Perry Green came out of the Mayor's office and Mr. Billings went in, the Mayor stopped long enough to say that there was no news for the newspapermen today.

The general impression about City Hall is that the Mayor has learned a thing or two about how business has been run at City Hall, since he took possession of the Mayor's office, and that things are not so bad as some people have painted them. And it is also the impression that if he had to make his appointments over again some of the present officials would be retained.

POLICEMENS BALL.

The eighth annual concert and ball of the Quincy Police Relief association is announced for Thursday evening Feb. 5, at Music hall. The program calls for a promenade concert from 8 to 9 o'clock by Wilson's orchestra and dancing until 2 A. M. That the ball will be largely attended is an assured fact if experiences of past years are a criterion. No pains will be spared by the committee headed by Lieut. Mark E. Hanson, president of the association and Chief Frank E. Burrell, to make the affair one of the most enjoyable of the season.

ANNUAL BANQUET ST. MARYS C. T. A.

Monsignor Ambrose F. Roche Regrets to Learn of West Quincy Vote on License

Members Urged to Keep Saloons Out of Quincy

St. Mary's Catholic Total Abstinence and Mutual Relief Society observed its 39th anniversary with a banquet in its hall on Willard street, West Quincy, on Thursday evening. There were 175 present.

President Thomas F. O'Brien was toastmaster and the speakers were Monsignor Ambrose F. Roche of Watertown who delivered a vigorous anti-saloon argument; Rev. Fr. Thomas R. McCoy, chaplain of the society and pastor of St. Mary's church; Rev. Fr. Andrew J. O'Brien, professor of dogmatic theology at Brighton seminary; Rev. Fr. William J. Duffy, curate, at St. Mary's church, Cornelius M. Duggan of Atlantic, John Cusick, deputy to the society, Dr. John H. Ash, who has given his services as physician gratis for many years, and William H. Teasdale, the only surviving charter member whose photograph has been hung in the hall.

During the evening solos were rendered by Joseph Morrisette, specialties were given by Fred McDonnell, buck and wing dancing by Thomas Joyce, songs by William McDonnell and William R. Teasdale, Jr., and quartette selections by Joseph, Paul and Peter Morrisette, Joseph Daley, Walter Pendis and Thomas Joyce, John Mahon was the accompanist of the evening.

Letters of regret were received from Rev. Fr. Henry T. Grady of Somerville, a former pastor of St. Marys church, who said parish duties required his attention; and Hon. John L. Miller, mayor of the city, who pleaded poor health. Both men included their congratulations.

Monsignor Roche, was given round after round of hand clapping which spontaneously broke into three mighty cheers. He congratulated the society on its 39th anniversary and spoke of the trials and hardships encountered in its formation by the good men of years ago. The society, he said, has done God's work and may God bless it for many 39 years yet to come.

Taking up the subject of no-license, Monsignor Roche said he was surprised at the attitude of West Quincy on the no-license vote, surprised that it had voted for the saloon in spite of the society. I call it to your attention. The decreasing majority against no-license is a great danger. Arguments of years ago were that it would be better to have the saloon because men who became drunkards would eventually reform and become members, but he remarked, this view was a childish one. You ought to thank God that sentiment here was strong enough to take the saloon away, so many years ago that scarcely one of you remember it.

Safety consists only in absence, in flight and in keeping temptation away. A man with temptation placed before him must be a great man not to yield. As a business argument the sale of liquor and the saloon is ridiculous, and the man that makes it is willing to sell your soul in order to get more money.

The saloon is the worst enemy of the church, home, young men, education, of the acquisition of enough to take care of yourselves in old age, and of your mother who is your best friend.

You should take more interest and as fast as you become 21, register and vote and have an interest in your place. Anything that concerns the city concerns you, the development of your district means your development and anything that adds to the prosperity of the people, makes better homes, neighbors and surroundings should not go by default. Take an interest. Stand for the decency, protection and advancement of your district and vote to keep out the saloon.

Years ago conditions were different as far as population goes. I don't blame the Catholic people for the vote. There are men in this city who have no idea of what it is to be American citizens. They want to indulge in what they had free access to in their own country. You are not going to sell out to them? You will not let them rule your district? I hope it is not to be so. Some of our own sometimes stand in the light but they should not be taken as examples and mottoes.

I have the most profound regard for the people of West Quincy, and I don't like to see them falling backward in this way. The Fore River shipyard has brought men here accustomed to debauchery, and they want to indulge their sensuality to excess, but do not let them do it. Once, saloons did their work of destruction here. Young men that would have been great, good, prosperous and alive today fell victims to circumstances that existed then and must exist again unless we are careful.

Family men readily see why temptation should not be placed in front of

How can the Congressmen expect re-election, if they don't quit Washington early in the spring and shake hands with every one in the district?

President Wilson, refusing to make cart-tail speeches, says he never talks when he has nothing to say. He will never succeed as an after-dinner speaker.

Much anxiety is felt in Congress lest there should be a surplus after the appropriation bills are passed.

Many of our conscientious people feel that they can't condemn the tango intelligently unless they learn to dance it.

WINTER CLIMATE.

The belief is entertained quite widely by many people in the northern half of the United States, that winters are steadily growing milder, and that snow fall is lighter.

January weather so far this year has been cold enough to indicate that Mother Nature hands out about the same goods from one generation to another. It will be remembered also that in January, 1911, there was a considerable period of exceptionally cold weather.

As respects snows, this is allied with the mystery of rainfall. In many sections nearly every year for a decade has shown a sharp decline in precipitation. The drought in Kansas and other states broke all records. Of course if no moisture falls, there can be no snow.

As storms come from the oceans by which the United States is bounded, and as these have not dried up appreciably in the past decade, it will take more than ten years to prove any permanent decline in the water supply.

WOMEN'S WAGES.

Nothing seems to rankle more with women, than the fact that they receive less pay than men for the same work. The subject is suggested by recent utterances of Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, a Suffragist leader, in complaining of the Ford Automobile Company for failure to include women equally with men in their profit sharing plan.

A woman teacher gets only about $800 for school work for which a man would be paid $1500. The same is true in almost all salaried positions. To be sure, woman's work is sometimes more irregular, and she may throw up her job any time to get married. So do men throw up their jobs at any time, for good reasons or whims.

Perhaps the root of the trouble is that women crowd into occupations paying low wages. Out of 4,800,000 women wage earners in this country, 1,165,000 are servants. There are 328,935 washerwomen.

Department store employes and sweat shop workers, paid some meager amount like $5 a week, have often protested against a minimum wage law. They say there are plenty of girls ready to take their places, and they fear worse competition if wages are raised.

When an ambitious man finds himself in an employment where the supply of workers is greater than the demand, he tries to fit himself to compete in a higher class. Women must do the same. If they could make women teachers relatively scarce, this occupation would have to pay higher wages.

Women who go into business, particularly in such lines as dressmaking, millinery, restaurant, lodging house, and hotel keeping, seem to do well. If a woman serves the public well, the fact of sex does not count. She is on even terms with men. Here is a great field for feminine enterprise. The more enter it, the less other occupations will be overcrowded.

Guard Against Private Privilege In Establishing Forests

Hostile Passions Obliterated by Temporizing

By ALFRED H. FRIED, Distinguished German Pacifist

THE manner in which the United States government delayed rushing into precipitate action in the California-Japanese controversy, the quarrel with Great Britain over the Panama canal tolls and the strife with Huerta is CHARACTERISTIC OF THE PEACE POLICY which America deliberately pursues.

It has been properly recognized there that it is not the main thing to settle every conflict on the strict basis of rights, but to give conflicts such a character that they can be settled by the sensible means of either arbitration or compromise. The best means to attain that end is to EXCLUDE THE PASSIONS WHICH NATURALLY ARISE FROM INTERNATIONAL DIFFERENCES — passions which are the chief menace to an amicable settlement.

Hostile passions are most effectually obliterated by a policy of temporizing. The European powers traditionally cherish the fear that prestige is shattered unless the saber is rattled at every possible opportunity and an "energetic tone" is employed.

THE IDEA IS PROPAGATED THAT IT IS BENEATH THE DIGNITY OF A GREAT POWER TO YIELD. WITHOUT A HISTORY AMERICA HAS MORE MODERN AND SENSIBLE CONCEPTIONS. THEY ARE PLAINLY EXPRESSED IN THE NEW PEACE TREATIES OF SECRETARY BRYAN.

Wealthy Women of London Very Charitable

By Mrs. MARY E. IDE of Chicago, Well Known as a Prison Reformer

I WAS impressed with the amount of charity work done by the women of London. I was given to understand that the wealthier ones give HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS TO THE POOR EVERY YEAR. The Duchess of Marlborough and other American duchesses are leaders in this work. The general result of this method of charity, however, seems to be unsatisfactory.

IT APPEARS TO TEACH THE CHILDREN OF THE POOR TO BECOME PROFESSIONAL BEGGARS, THE CITY HAVING BECOME INFESTED WITH THEM. IT IS CERTAIN THAT MANY FAMILIES LIVE ON CHARITY THROUGH SHEER INDOLENCE. I BELIEVE IT WOULD BE BETTER IF THE MONEY WERE DEVOTED TO STARTING COMMUNITY FARMS AND CREATING OTHER FORMS OF LEGITIMATE EMPLOYMENT.

BOX WITH $2500 WORTH OF LOOT

Ready to Be Carted Off When Burglars Are Captured

GIRL NOTIFIES THE POLICE

Squad Despatched to House Where Crook Walks Into Arms of Bluecoats, While Two Others Are Found Under Beds—Armed Trio Promptly Taken Into Custody

Boston, Jan. 23.—Three armed burglars, two of them from New York and one of Boston, were arrested by five policemen of Brookline last night as they were concluding their work of looting the home of Mrs. Ella F. Bailey, in Brookline.

When surprised at their work by the police the men had collected and placed in a box for removal $2500 worth of personal property.

Miss Nellie Kerrigan, daughter of neighbors of Mrs. Bailey, observed three suspicious looking men loitering about the Bailey residence a little after 8:30 o'clock. Assured from their continued inspection of the residence and the surroundings that they were bent on robbing the place, she telephoned the police station.

Lieutenant Bartlett at once detailed four patrolmen, Tolman, Knowles, O'Connell and Wharton, to the scene. On their way they were joined by Reserve Officer KeKily. Tolman was assigned to the rear of the house, Wharton went through a basement window into the cellar, O'Connell and Kelly guarded the front and Knowles prepared to follow Wharton through the cellar window.

As these plans were being executed the front door opened. John Lester stepped forth into the open, mindless of the presence of the policemen. O'Connell drew his revolver and told him to raise his hands.

Knowles, who was half way into the cellar through the window, heard the order, backed out of the window and ran to the porch, where he placed the handcuffs on Lester after taking a magazine gun from his pocket.

O'Connell held Lester at the front door. Knowles and Kelly entered the house and met Wharton coming from the basement with a lighted lantern. The three searched the first and second floors.

Doubled up in small space, they found Fred Downey hiding under one of the beds. Kelly and Knowles went through the rest of the fifteen-room residence for the third man. He was found under a bed on the third floor, hiding behind the overhanging counterpane. He is James J. Stevens.

The house had been ransacked from top to bottom. A box 3x4 feet on the second floor was found filled with the loot that the burglars were preparing to take away when they were surprised by the police. Fur coats, silverware and jewelry of varied descriptions were among the property.

The box and its contents were removed to the station. Mrs. Ella F. Bailey, with her daughter, had been visiting at the time. They identified their property at the police station.

DEATH TO BE PROBED

Charge That War Veteran Received Injuries In Insane Asylum

Augusta, Me., Jan. 23.—Authorities of the Maine asylum for the insane here are facing a searching investigation of the death of Melvin Stimpson, a patient, who was a veteran of the Civil war.

A mysterious letter from here to the postmaster at Kittery, where some of Stimpson's relatives live, charging that he received a broken leg and other bad hurts just before his death, started the probe.

This latest indictment against the way the asylum is run is expected to be a factor in the thorough airing of its affairs, which has been ordered by Governor Haines.

HUNT FOR OLD BALLADS

Bureau of Education Would Preserve English and Scottish Songs

Washington, Jan. 23.—Convinced that many of the English and Scottish popular ballads of olden times which still survive in the United States are threatened with extinction unless steps are at once taken to revive them, the federal bureau of education announced that it has instituted a nation-wide search for versions of these old ballads.

It is planned also to ask teachers and others to co-operate with a view to starting a ballad collection for each state so that state folk-lore societies may be encouraged to aid in the work.

Ducoin is said to have amassed a fortune of $300,000 in a short time. According to the police he openly boasted that he was enjoying police protection and defied arrest.

ABANDONED THEIR VESSEL

Captain and Crew of Prescott Palmer Are Safe at Bermuda

Portland, Me., Jan. 23.—The crew of the missing five-masted schooner Prescott Palmer were picked up by a steamer which landed them at Bermuda, according to a cablegram received by the owners. The schooner was abandoned during the severe storm last week. The cablegram was sent by Captain Carlisle, master of the Palmer.

The Prescott Palmer was in the north-bound coastwise fleet that was caught off Cape Cod in the gale of Jan. 12. Her loss makes the marine casualty list for the gale one steamer, seven schooners and one barge, but so far as known only one life was lost.

The Prescott Palmer was built at Bath twelve years ago at a cost of about $75,000. She registered 2307 net tonnage and was 288 feet long.

DOGS ON THE RAMPAGE

One Killed and One Escapes After Attacking Several Persons

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 23.—A pair of vicious shepherd dogs ran amuck in the eastern section of Worcester and, after attacking several people, one of the animals was shot and the police are looking for the other.

Miss Ethel C. Ward, a school teacher, was saved from serious injury by her heavy coat, which was torn into shreds before she could escape into a store.

Michael H. Hagan had his trousers nearly torn off his legs by the brutes and was forced to seek safety in a boiler room.

A woman and a boy were also attacked and their clothing torn before the police began their hunt, which resulted in the death of one of the dogs.

FRIENDS HAVE LONG EXPECTED BREAK

Goelets Not on Terms of Harmony For Long Period

New York, Jan. 23.—That the papers filed in Newport, R. I., would show all that was to be said of Mrs. Robert Goelet's suit against her husband for an absolute divorce, was the reply Samuel Untermyer, her attorney, made to inquiries here.

New York friends have known of differences between Mr. and Mrs. Goelet. While they continued to occupy their Fifth avenue mansion, friends say, it was only to keep up appearances of harmony and there was no hope of reconciliation.

Goelet is the son of the late Ogden Goelet, and is the owner of an estate of more than $35,000,000. He is a member of many clubs. In 1908 he bought and presented to his wife a $500,000 chateau at Sandicourt, France.

San Francisco, Jan. 23.—Seven times Winfred I. Denison has reserved a stateroom on a liner to Hong Kong; seven times he has sent his trunk to the dock and stood awaiting a telegram that would permit him to go, and seven times he has turned back and paid the rent on his hotel room until next sailing day.

Denison waited yesterday until the last minute at the liner Siberia's dock in the belief that he would receive word from Washington that President Wilson's nomination of him as secretary of the interior for the Philippines has been confirmed by the senate, but no word came.

Opera Singers Entertain Knights of the Pencil at Boston

Boston, Jan. 23.—Various members of the Boston Opera company, headed by Director Henry Russell, entertained the Boston Press club last evening.

The program woke even the most blase newspaperman to a state of enthusiasm that meant encore after encore for the various singers. But it might be said the climax came when Russell escorted Mme. d' Alvarez to the piano and played her accompaniment for the "Habanera" from Carmen.

ATLANTIC IMPROVEMENT

Beach Plan Meets With Favor Committees Named

The Atlantic Improvement Association is looking to have some definite improvements carried through this year for the good of the community and to encourage the new comers to the city.

The directors of the Association met last week and appointed committees to carry on the work of the year.

For streets and side-walks,—Ralph W. Hobbs, Russell T. Green, Walter T. Taylor, Edward Sweeney, John J. Cusick and George W. Baker.

Gas and electric lighting.—Charles A. Hadlock.

Entertainment Committee,—Frank P. Leavitt, Orlando M. Niles, F. E. Brooks, W. H. Davis, and James G. Hill.

Membership committee,—Wm. E. Barnes, Welcome C. Young, Wm. L. Buckley, Frank P. Leavitt, and F. E. Brooks.

Visiting committee,—Rev. T. W. Davison, Henry F. Mosses, and W. H. Davis.

Railroad committee,—C. E. Carlson, Geo. W. Baker, Wm. L. Buckley, Charles A. Hadlock and John R. Nelson.

Legal and Restrictions on Real Estate,—Ralph Hobbs and John R. Nelson.

Committee on Police and Fire Station,—Geo. W. Baker, Edward Sweeney, and Dennis O'Neil.

Committee on Playgrounds,—Wm. MacMahan and Dennis O'Neil.

Committee on Drainage and Water Supply,—M. E. Kilpatrick, Rev. T. W. Davison, Henry F. Mosses, F. E. Brooks, and Jesse I. Spear.

The committee appointed at the last meeting of the Atlantic Improvement Association to see if the Mteropolitan Park Commission would take up the proposition of R. Jones of Chelsea who offers to pay two thirds of the expense of cleaning the Atlantic Beach if the Park Commission will pay one-third and let the material be used to fill the land he has bought between Faxon road and the Boulevard has been hard at work.

Rev. T. W. Davison has enlisted Senator Langelier to help present the need, and Mr. Langelier has already put in a petition to the Park Commission and a bill in the Legislature, asking for the appropriation, so that Mr. Jones can go to work at once and the people receive the benefit of a larger beach next summer.

This will benefit Atlantic by improving the beach, and will benefit the city by developing a tract of land that will be very desirable for building—thus making one more attraction for would-be investors in Quincy real estate.

Murder Suspect Is Being Sought by Means of Wireless

London, Jan. 23.—Wireless telegraphy was again brought into play to track down a suspected murderer who is supposed to be on board the steamer Grampian, now on her way from Liverpool to Canada, the first port she touches being St. John.

The victim of the mysterious crime was Kent Reeks, who until recently was engineer on board a steamer. Reeks arrived in England on Jan. 17 and was found shot dead near Wolverhampton on Jan. 20. He had several hundred dollars of American banknotes in his possession and the money is missing.

Reeks is said to have made the acquaintance in Liverpool of a man from Chicago, whose name has not been revealed, but whom the police are now inviting to communicate with them to see whether he knows anything of Reeks' movements.

Fireman Injured In Wreck Aids Others by Great Sacrifice

Ashland, N. H., Jan. 23.—Fireman John Morrill filled the role of a hero when, scalded, bruised and cut, he fought his way for a mile through a blinding snowstorm, and dritts sometimes six feet deep, to seek aid for three other trainmen who lay injured in the snow where their engines had crashed together.

Morrill staggered into the Ashland station with just enough strength left in him to gasp out that his comrades, so badly hurt they could not move, were freezing to death a mile away at Ashland Summit.

The startled operator burned up the wires to get a relief train from Plymouth, and in a few hours all four wreck victims were safe in the Plymouth hospital with good chances of recovery, thanks to Morrill's grit.

Bowling Contests — Athletic Leagues
Illustrated Lectures — Banquets
Basket Ball — Conferences

Edwin Mulready, deputy commissioner of Probation for Massachusetts, will be the speaker at the Saturday morning meeting for Y. M. C. A. boys this week. Mr. Muready has chosen for his topic "Responsibility." A large attendance of boys is expected.

Replies for the Business Men's banquet are coming in fast and it looks as if over 200 would be present.

The Davis class is to have another bowling match tonight, the Married Men vs the Single Men.

Practice for the Sunday School basketball series will begin next week. This year there are to be two divisions instead of one. Boys under 15 will be in class A, and boys 15 and 16 will be in class B. Most of the Sunday Schools will put teams in both divisions. The superintendents of each Sunday School have been notified about the days for practice.

The Wanderers defeated the Pilgrims in the opening match of the Junior bowling league, winning by a margin of 25 pins. On Saturday B. A. A. and the Puritans bowl off their first match.

The Senior bowling tournament for which the Hobbs trophy is offered as a prize is progressing rapidly. LaRose and Brooks are showing the best form so far, although Hunt and McFarlane are doing well.

The Junior Bible classes hold their regular sessions this evening. Messrs. Melville and Hunt, the teachers, are having very good success with the course which is "Men of the Bible" by Davis.

A Duffers bowling tournament for Employed Boys is to start Saturday. Eligibility in this contest is governed by the question whether the would-be contestant has ever won a prize.

An all around tournament has been arranged for Student members. Each contestant is to play one set of ping pong, bowl one string, shoot one rack of pool, and play one game of checkers. The highest point winner gets the award. In scoring the following system is to be employed. In ping pong a 6 to 4 winner would score 60 and his opponent 40. In bowling the actual pinfall will count. A contestant winning in pool by 8 balls to 7 will score 80 to his opponents 70. In checkers the winner scores 100 aand the loser 0.

A bowling league is being organized for Sunday School classes of young men. It is probable that there will be six classes in the league including the Davis class, Makaria, the Rand class and three others representing other churches.

Mr. Bromley, Mr. LaRose and President Sidelinger, are to attend the joint meeting of general secretaries and physical directors next Wednesday afternoon and evening.

Lee Brooks defeated Ernest Rich in the final match of the Senior pool tournament Thursday evening by a score of 50 to 24. Brooks as winner gets a handsome jointed pool cue.

The monthly meeting of the board of directors will take place on Tuesday evening immediately after the banquet.

The monthly meeting of the Boys department committee will be held Monday evening.

MABEL'S CHITCHAT

The Long Drawn Out Goodby at the Station.

MAKE YOUR DEVOIR QUICKLY.

"The Colonel's Lady and Judy O'Grady Are Sisters Under Their Skins." Difference In Their Viewpoints—Be Modish and Wear the New Sautoire.

Dear Elsa—The goodbys of women are funny things, aren't they? I went to the station recently to see Dick off on a trip, and there were two girls at the train making perfect spectacles of themselves and almost holding up the express with a lot of senseless "don't forget" conversation.

For such a little word, "goodby" sometimes takes a long time to say.

These girls could not make up their minds to part even after the conductor's "All aboard!" rang warningly in their ears. They had said all there was to say, but the girl on the platform still kept adjuring her friend at the car window to write, and the latter shrieked her promises as long as the flutter of her handkerchief could be seen.

How much better it is to accept the fact of the traveler's departure, say your goodby and leave the station before the train is actually in motion!

Then there is the woman visitor who insits upon lingering in the hall at the door and halfway down the front steps (letting in the winter winds or the summer mosquitoes) to prolong her conversation and to say what she might have said and probably did say two and a half hours before.

No, dear; there's nothing like saying goodby and meaning it and acting upon the meaning. I know only one woman who does it. Not myself, oh, no! I'm not half so emancipated, more's the pity.

I must tell you, Elsa, an amusing story about a friend of mine, a young matron, who has an Irish laundress a good and capable sort of person Mary's spouse is also from the "ould country," but neither good natured nor capable, and he is too fond of looking upon the beer, if nothing stronger, when it's foamy. Likewise when he has satisfied his thirst, from an outsider's viewpoint, he is ready to work off some of the nastiness of his disposition. After the last few "celebrations" Mary arrived for the day's washing at the apartment of my friend with a badly swollen eye. Upon being told the cause of the injury the young housekeeper indignantly exclaimed: "Why, Mary, it's an outrage! Why do you stand it? You can earn your own living. In fact, you work for the whole family."

Mary pinned up her apron preparatory for the tubs and casually replied, "Oh, sure he don't mean no harm at all, at all! Men is queer. If it isn't one thing that is the matter with them it's another." The young matron raged inwardly and the subject was dropped.

Now the husband of my friend has a position which requires working at home. A few minutes after the conversation with Mary and her mistress the young husband called out to his wife: "Edith, dear, would you mind bringing me a glass of water? I can't get up without upsetting all my work."

"All right, just a minute," called back his wife and turned to get a glass. Then she beheld Mary, eyes flashing fire and arms akimbo. "The idea! That big man expecting a little woman like you to wait on him! He ought to be ashamed! I wouldn't stand for it!"

The young wife ran into her husband's study, where she sank on the couch and laughed hysterically.

"What is so laughable?" very naturally demanded the astonished man, and when she could speak his wife answered, "Her point of view."

Now for a little fashion gossip. Have you a sautoire? I know that you possess such a modish accessory, but you are probably still calling it a lorgnette chain. Be up to date and speak of your new ribbon, which is a quarter inch wide band of black grosgrain ribbon a yard long, as your "sautoire."

The smart sautoire is fitted with slides in brilliants or pearls, and I have a charming one with butterfly slides done in enamel. I gave mother a sautoire with slides in cut jet for a birthday present. I think it is most appropriate for an elderly woman.

But the very latest wrinkle in neck adornment is the silk cord of yard length and of a vivid shade of green or blue or red, supposed by the initiated to match the wearer's hosiery. In some cases it may. At all events it gives a dashing touch of color to the costume and also serves to display one of the new pear shaped pendants which come in pearl, amber, jet or brilliants, whichever one can afford.

Mme. Poiret, wife of the famous Parisian dressmaker, wore these cords with her gowns while in this country recently with her aristocratic husband.

Well, it's time to show up at a club meeting, so fare thee well until the next budget of news reaches you from yours devotedly. MABEL.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE IN BOSTON AND VICINITY

KINCAIDE THEATRE.

The mid-week change of program at Quincy's Popular Playhouse was witnessed Thursday by large audiences both afternoon and evening, and all were delighted with the show.

Mlle. DeVard, with her trained Leopards and Jaguar in an immense iron cage created a great sensation.

The Raynors proved very pleasing entertainers, both being good singers, and Miss Raynor an accomplished violinist. Van Cello is a very clever foot juggler and his act was watched with interest and liberally applauded.

The comedy cut-ups, Marion & Moore, made the house ring with merriment. They have a lot of laugh-lifting jokes, several good songs, and talk about piano playing, Mr. Marion is certainly a cracker-jack.

The new program which begins at Monday's matinee will be more of the Keith quality of vaudeville.

QUINCY MUSIC HALL.

"The Ghost of the Hacienda" is to be given at Quincy Music hall at the Saturday matinee and evening. This picturesque drama of Old Mexico deals with conditions of life and temperament seldom understood or appreciated by the average North American citizen. The action takes place in a land of dolce-far-niente—a country where the word tomorrow applies to every business or social proposition.

Enid Hale and her father, having purchased the hacienda, come down from the States to take possession—and are joined by Billy Thompson, a young and handsome engineer who presents most satisfactory letters and who is in charge of the nearby construction camp of a new railroad. Pedro, the hacienda peon, amuses them in the evenings with his excellent singing and guitar-playing—throwing in for good measure much of the Mexico folk-lore, and, particularly, the story of Enid's aunt—the Senora Ysolda—who was killed by the terrible El Capitan, and whose ghost haunts the hacienda to this day, as everyone knows.

It happens that Billy unwisely decides to make up his weekly pay-roll at the hacienda, while a certain Senor Tocquinado is spending the day there—the Senor being really none other than the infamous El Capitan. And the natural outcome is an attack upon the place by his gang.

The real background of this play is most convincing—so are the Mexicans, the young engineer and the American girl who is fond enough of adventure to risk living in such a place. The story winds up with a love-match—naturally. That's "real life" also. And the gun-play is by no means a fake—it appears to be the real thing.

TREMONT THEATRE.

Another evidence of David Belasco's wizardy in picking out the good things in stage fare is shown in "Years of Discretion" now current at the Tremont Theatre, Boston. The play is a delightfully entertaining comedy which presents in spirited and not over exaggerated fashion the struggle made by the smart set of the larger cities of this country against the first signs of age. The central figure appeals particularly to New England audiences as the character is that of a rich Brookline widow whose younger years have spent quietly and placidly in the home circle of suburban Boston. In a fashionable Fifth Avenue home she tosses her frumpish attire and her discreet bearing to the winds and gowned in the most modish of Parisian frocks and her 48 years seemingly reduced to 25 by skilled beauty doctors, she becomes the centre of a whirling round of frivolous pleasure seeking. The lines fairly sparkle with wit, humor and epigram and the situations of the three acts are keenly amusing.

The company is typically Belasco, each one admirably fitted for the character part portrayed. Effie Shannon as the Brookline widow has never done better or more charming work in her artistic career. The longing for youth she so vividly portrays is what every woman recognizes in her heart and yet she subtly conveys its constant possession by the capacity of enjoyment and the delicious humor which lightens up every phase of her characterization..

CASTLE SQUARE THEATARE.

A romantic comedy such as "Hawthorne of the U. S. A." invariably pleases. It will be seen at the Castle Square next week, and with its scenes laid in a European principality it possesses an abundance of fantastic and exciting incident like that to be found in "The Prisoner of Zenda", "Graustark," and other popular dramas of recent vogue. Its two leading characters, Anthony Hamilton Hawthorne and the Princess Irma fall in love with each other, and it is the course of their true love, which does not always run smoothly, that the audience will watch with delight. The cast of "Hawthorns of the U. S. A." at the Castle Square will be headed by William P. Carleton and Miss Doris Olsson the roles of Hawthorne and the Princess Irma. All the other charcters will be in the competent hands of Mr. Craig's company.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE.

Described by the critics and endorsed by the public as the "best melodrama that has ever visited Boston," Selwyn & Co's. "Under Cover" begins its second month at the Plymouth Theatre as the most popular play in the city. There are so many distinctly clever situations in the rapid-fire action that the audience is kept on the move to keep up with the pace that leads through thrills and comedy to a conclusion that forms the most unexpected surprise and pleasing ending of a tense mystery and suspense. Arch Selwyn, the man who saw the great possibilities in "Within the Law," says of "Under Cover": "I think this the greatest play I ever saw, and I produced 'Within the Law.'" The latter play ran 76 consecutive weeks at the Eltinge Theatre, New York City, without a change in the cast, a new record in the theatrical world. In his newest production Mr. Selwyn believes he has not only another "Within the Law" but a play that will go even farther in the matter of records. While a crime is involved in the plot "Under Cover" it is not in reality a "crook play." Its action is placed among persons of high social position and the dialogue is smart, snappy and witty. It is unusual in melodrama to find opportunity for elaborate dressing but this play allows the display of the latest Parisian models that were designed especially for the women of the company by Mme. Julie. The story begins with the impressing into secret service by the chief of the customs house agents of a young woman of high social degree to play the spy upon a man suspected of having smuggled a valuable necklace into the country. Though she finds the man she is set upon to be the man she loves she is forced to go on in order that she may prevent her younger sister being sent to prison. The man is exposed finally in a scene that is an ideal climax to all that preceded but the denounment is on that is wholly unexpected and decidedly pleasant.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

John Drew has scored another brilliant triumph at the Hollis Street Theatre with his latest successes "The Will" and "The Tyranny of Tears." Mr. Drew appears in both plays at every performance and affords his clientele of admirers an opportunity of gauging his versatile powers. Mr. Drew remains at the Hollis for only one more week; consequently playgoers must avail themselves of these final eight performances of his present engagement. The new Barrie play "The Will" in which Mr. Drew's characterization of Philip Ross is convincing prrof of his rare gift for emotional expression, will live in the memory of all who see the play. The actor completely sinks his own individuality in this portrayal of one man at three crucial epochs of his life. Barrie has never written a more dramatic and enthralling work for the stage than this wonderful play. "The Will" and Mr. Drew has certainly never acted with greater sincerity and depth of feeling. He is a past master of the technique of his craft and his impersonation of the dominant character in "The Will" is the very essence of stage illusion. "The Will" is one of the gems of the present dramatic season and nobody who appreciates the best in modern drama can afford to miss it. It furnishes a striking contrast to the bright, amusing comedy "The Tyranny of Tears" in which Mr. Drew is seen in one of those suave, debonair roles with which his name and a fame are so closely identified. Moreover he has the support of the best organization that has been seen on the Boston boards in many months. Mr. Drew's engagement terminates Jan. 31.

BASKET BALL.

A crowd of 250 or more witnessed the basket ball games in Long's hall, Braintree, Thursday evening and enjoyed the playing. The first team of the Braintree A. A. took the Harbor Views of Hingham into camp, the score standing 51 to 21. Scollard of Braintree got twelve goals from the floor and 1 from fouls, making 25 points out of the total of 51. The second game which was fast and furious was between the Roxbury Y. M. C. A. and the B. A. A. second team. Roxbury won 22 to 13, inflicting on the locals their first defeat on the home court. The playing of Frazier at centre for Roxbury was remarkable, and Cahill was the star of the home team. A new feature was the dancing after the game. Atkinson's orchestra furnished the music.

GANZEL FUND.

Contributions to the fund being raised among the base ball fans for Charlie Ganzel continue to come in, and the committee in charge of the fund announce that it has now reached the sum of $1,136.01. While this is quite a substantial sum, the committee hope to increase it considerably.

BIG BUSINESS TO THE FRONT

Should Lend its Aid In the Program of Reform

FIGHT FOR SOCIAL JUSTICE

Question of What They Must Do Now Confronts Captains of Finance—Good Legislation Depends Upon Them, as Fashion of Attacking Them Has Been Established

Washington, Jan. 23.—"The salvation of our system of government rests with the captains of finance. They must fight with and not against the people for social justice, not for industrial slavery. It is not what they would do but what they must do that now confronts them."

In these striking words Vice President Marshall compressed the essence of a situation which is causing intense anxiety in Washington among men responsible for policies of the administration and their outcome.

The words of the vice president fit conveniently into a situation suggested by the statements of administration leaders that full and free hearings would be given upon the anti-trust bills.

Underlying the anxiety for these hearings is the feeling that unless cooperation of the business world is secured in the enactment of the legislation of the future socialism will be given such an advantage that it may become menacing alike to organized business and to the government.

The Alaskan railroad bill has been the direct cause of the anxiety in both house and senate, for it is regarded by the anti-Socialistic element as the entering wedge for a system of government control whose end cannot be foreseen.

The bill is assured a safe margin in the senate and probably in the house, but Mr. Underwood and some of his colleagues are alarmed over its possibilities and it will be strongly debated before it is put to a vote.

The opinion of the conservative leaders, baldly stated, is that unless big business comes to the front on anti-trust bills, confesses its situations and joins in a program of reform, radical amendments to the anti-trust bills will be adopted and the legislation be made a menace to business comfort.

The fashion of attacking the captains of finance and industry has been set and now a situation has developed which threatens to run beyond control. Some senators are saying openly that the salvation of good legislation depends upon the financiers of New York, Chicago and Boston, whose aid is now required to assist in an agreed program of legislation which can be protected against successful assault.

The foregoing is in a measure an explanation of the reassuring words of President Wilson in his message of last Tuesday, and of his desire that no more hasty legislation shall be railroaded through congress until hearings have been given all interests likely to be affected by it an opportunity to speak for themselves.

HURT AT SMALL BLAZE

Women Become Victims of Would-Be Volunteer Rescuers

Derby, Conn., Jan. 23.—Three women went to the hospital after an apartment house fire in which excitement ran high and the monetary loss was small.

Mrs. Harriet Minneroy dropped her granddaughter, Emma Rath, from a third-story window into an outspread blanket held by volunteers. The blanket gave way and Miss Rath was hurt. Her grandmother was carried out unconscious from smoke.

Edith Spero was tossed from a second-story window to a blanket, but the young woman received a broken leg and other injuries. One child was thrown into the blanket without harm.

RAISING ANOTHER ARMY

Huerta May Personally Lead Forces Planned to Meet Villa

Mexico City, Jan. 23.—War Minister Blanquet announced that another federal army would be put in the field to meet General Villa's constitutional army in its march against the capital.

President Huerta is expected to lead this army in person if certain negotiations relating to the conduct of the government are successful, and if the war office is able to find a sufficient number of soldiers to form a new division.

BUTTER FROM ARGENTINE

Placed on Sale In New York and More Is on the Way North

New York, Jan. 23.—The first big shipment of Argentine butter, consisting of 2000 boxes of sixty pounds each, was put on sale here.

It cost about 29 cents laid down in New York, with all charges paid. Four hundred boxes are being shipped to Boston. Another cargo of 5000 boxes is on the way.

AVIATOR HAMILTON DEAD

Suffers Nervous Breakdown and Succumbs to Hemorrhage

New York, Jan. 23.—Charles K. Hamilton, one of the best known aviators in America, died suddenly at his home. He was found in bed by his wife, suffering from a hemorrhage, and he lived but a few minutes afterward.

Hamilton, who was 34 years old, had been in ill health for two years and on several occasions went to private sanitariums for treatment for nervous breakdown. He learned to fly under the tutelage of Glenn H. Curtis.

MURPHY GIVES LIE TO SULZER STORY

Says He Is Willing to Testify Against Impeached Governor

New York, Jan. 23.—With William Sulzer before the grand jury to repeat his story told in the John Due hearing of the highway graft investigation, Charles F. Murphy denounced Sulzer as a liar, and said he was ready to take the stand at any time and refute the charges made by the impeached executive.

Murphy denied that Senator O'Gorman, as Sulzer testified, urged him to stop an attempt to "shake down" Contractor Stewart for $150,000.

Murphy denied having met Sulzer at various times as the former governor alleged, and gave the lie to each statement.

TAKEN BY THEIR UNCLE

Beardsley Children Given New Clothing Before They Go Away

Mayville, N. Y., Jan. 23.—Fitted out with clean clothing, new shoes and stockings and in the care of their grandmother, the nine children who were imprisoned in the barricaded house of their father, Edward Beardsley, were sent to Titusville, Pa. There they will be cared for by Charles Beardsley, their uncle, who has adopted them.

The children presented a pitiful spectacle as they trooped into a hotel here. Little attention had been given to clothing them other than to see that their little bodies were covered.

MAY BE SET FREE

Woman Has Been Under Sentence of Death For Twelve Years

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 23.—Mrs. Kate Edwards, who has been in the Berks county jail for more than twelve years under sentence of death for the murder of her husband, will probably be set free by the state board of pardons.

Because of her sex, no governor since 1901 has cared to fix a date for her execution and sign papers for the carrying out of the death sentence.

BULLET IS REMOVED

Bare Chance That Wife Slayer Oleson Will Recover From Operation

Chicago, Jan. 23.—The bullet which was believed to doom Andrew Oleson to hopeless lunacy if allowed to remain in his head, or to death if removed, was taken out by the jail physician. There is a bare chance of his recovery, it is said.

Oleson fired the bullet himself, after he is alleged to have murdered his wife last September, since which time he has been in a comatose condition.

The Baby Did It

A Story of President Lincoln

By F. A. MITCHEL

"What's that?"

President Lincoln was sitting in his room at the White House dispatching the enormous business involved in the great struggle that he was directing, while his anteroom was crowded with those waiting their turn for—all they could expect—a few words with him. The door between him and these persons stood ajar, through which came the cry of a baby. The president ceased from his labors and listened. The cry was repeated. The work of administering a government with 1,000,000 soldiers in the field, struggling for its existence, was brought to a standstill by the cry of an infant.

Mr. Lincoln called an attendant, charged with the introduction of visitors, and asked him what it meant.

"A woman is waiting without who has been here two or three different days. She comes from a long distance and has to bring her child because she knows no one in Washington and has no place where she can leave it."

"YOU SHALL HAVE YOUR HUSBAND," HE SAID.

"Bring her in," the president directed.

A young woman poorly dressed carrying a child in her arms was ushered into the presence of the head of the nation—not the "august presence" by which we are accustomed to describe those who wield governmental power, but the presence of a long, thin man of large bone and a melancholy eye. Mr. Lincoln directed the messenger to hand the mother a seat beside him and asked:

"What can I do for you, my good woman?"

The visitor told her story, not in the words it is given here, for she would not have been able to give it as elaborately, and the government clock could not have been stopped long enough for her thus to tell it, but her words, spoken in a tremulous voice, interrupted occasionally by the fretting of her child, were doubtless far more effective than the following version:

In the spring of 1861, when the war drum was calling from the Atlantic to the Pacific for volunteers to fight for the Union cause, a regiment was drawn up in the state of Pennsylvania in column formation ready to march to the railway station to entrain for Washington. Just before the order "Forward!" was given a girl of twenty, carrying a small bundle, came running up to one of the companies looking eagerly for some one. Private Jack Williams waved his hand to her, and, approaching him, she handed him the bundle containing the last bit of food she could hope to prepare for him in many a month to come. There was but time for an embrace when the word "March!" rang out, the band struck up an inspiriting air, and the regiment moved away.

"Is that your sweetheart?" asked Williams' file closer of him as they marched to the tune of "The Girl I Left Behind Me."

"Sweetheart and wife," was the laconic reply.

Jack Williams, though he had been married but a few months, heard the call of President Lincoln for the 75,000 volunteers that constituted the first detachment of the great army for the Union and enlisted at the nearest recruiting station. One night in Virginia he was on picket duty, standing peering into the darkness for an enemy. Suddenly he felt his arms grasped from behind and a hand clapped over his mouth. His musket fell over in the long grass without sound. He was pushed forward until the picket line of which he had formed a part was left behind. Then a gruff voice said:

"Move on, Yank, if you don't want an inch of lead in your noddle."

A very neat job of picket capture had been achieved by a single Confederate soldier.

The next morning, when the pickets were relieved, the officer of the retiring picket post where the capture had been made asked:

"Where's Williams?"

There was no reply to the question.

"Where's Williams?" the officer repeated, and, still receiving no answer, asked where he had been posted.

"Third man to the east of the pike," replied the sergeant, "between Rice and Kimball."

"Did either of you men hear anything of Williams during the night?" asked the officer of the men mentioned.

Both men replied that they had not.

"How far apart were the men posted?" asked the officer of the sergeant.

"On the west side of the pike I put them a hundred feet apart; on the east side I fell short of men and made it about two hundred. The ground was bad for a picket line; scrubby trees and bushes scattered irregularly."

"Gone over to the enemy," said the officer.

The name of Private John Williams was entered on the regimental rolls of his regiment as a deserter.

Meanwhile Williams was huddled in with other prisoners of war in the rear of the Confederate lines, awaiting transportation to Libby prison at Richmond. He spent some months there, when, the prison becoming crowded, a detachment of prisoners was sent to a stockade prison situated in South Carolina. Williams, with others in the same car with him—a freight car—laid a plan to escape. One of them had concealed a caseknife on his person and during the long hours of prison life had occupied his mind inventing ways to make a saw of it by nicking the edge. He had made poor headway until a fellow prisoner lent him a file. After that the matter was easy.

Williams and his friends in the freight car by means of the improvised tool managed to saw through a board in the floor of the car. When the train stopped during the night they removed the board and let themselves down through the aperture. Of three men who made the attempt two succeeded in getting away; the third was shot by the guard. Williams was one of the men who got away, but he and the other ran in different directions and did not come together again.

An account of the wanderings of Private Williams would be much the same as other escaped prisoners of war from '61 to '65. He traveled at night and was hidden by the negroes during the day. His compass was the north star. He suffered terribly from exposure and lived on berries, green corn and such other vegetable food as he could find except when some kind negro gave him a little corn pone.

Williams in order to escape detection took often to swamp lands. There he contracted fever, and when finally he dragged himself into the Union lines he was placed in a hospital.

It was about this time that the United States government was beginning to pay bounties to those who would enlist. This afforded an opportunity for criminals to secure the bounty and desert. Enough of this was done to attract the attention of the generals, and they sought to put a stop to it by trying the bounty jumpers for desertion and shooting them in presence of their comrades.

It was reported to the colonel of John Williams' regiment that a soldier was in hospital who had given that name on being received there. He became delirious, but was now better. The colonel directed the surgeon in charge of the hospital to send Williams to him under guard as soon as he was discharged.

What has been told here having been briefly stated to the president, the woman handed him a soiled letter to read. It had been dictated by her husband, who was lying ill at the time, to one of those self sacrificing women—both of the north and the south—who gave so much comfort to the sick and wounded of the war. It recounted his capture, his escape, his wandering and privations, ending with a pititful request for her to come to him.

"I was helped to go to him by friends," she added, "and when I found him he told me that as soon as he was well enough he would be shot for desertion."

The poor woman had been told what was true. Her husband could at that time get no proof of the story he had to tell. His witnesses were all cut off from him by a bristling line of bayonets. And even if he could have been free to go to them he would not have been able to find the only witness who could clear him, the man who had captured him. His wife had appealed to his colonel for mercy, but he had set his teeth, resolved to stop desertion if he had to shoot every man in the army.

Such was the situation that was brought before Mr. Lincoln by the cry of a babe. And it would have been even more pathetic had the kind hearted president known when he heard it that the cry was an unconscious pleading for its father's life. Mr. Lincoln had no proof that the woman's story was true; he required no proof. He saw a woman pleading for her husband's life with his child in her arms, and he had no desire, no time, to investigate.

"You shall have your husband," he said, "and he shall have his pay, with leave of absence and transportation to his home."

The end of the scene was told in these words by the messenger who had introduced the woman to the president and was present during this interview of life and death:

"As he turned to his desk to write the order the poor woman absolutely lost consciousness of her surroundings in her joy and gratitude. She stood by the president's side, holding the baby on one arm, while with her disengaged one she gently stroked the president's ruffled hair, saying, 'God bless you! God bless you.'"

LID IS PLACED ON HEARINGS

Fear Relations With Japan May Be Further Strained

BRYAN'S REQUEST IS GRANTED

Secretary of State Believes Final Settlement of Alien Land Controversy Will Soon Be Settled—Action Due to Makino's Speech and Anti-American Demonstrations In Japan

Washington, Jan. 23.—While Secretary of State Bryan insists that a complete settlement of the Japanese anti-alien land law controversy is impending and denies any sinister meaning in the speech of Baron Makino, the house immigration committee decided to call off for the present scheduled hearings on the Baker bill to bar Asiatic immigrants.

They acted on request of the secretary of state, who, it is understood, wrote that he desired that no step be taken which might delay a new treaty between Japan and the United States designed to fix the exact status of Americans in Japan and Japanese in America.

Bryan said Makino's declaration that "another way" would be adopted to settle the controversy was not a surprise to diplomatic officials here and would cause no embarrassment. It was asserted that the state department had been apprised in advance by Ambassador Chinda of the contents of Makino's speech.

Decision by the immigration committee to drop hearings on the Asiatic bill came after an executive session of an hour and a half. A dozen witnesses, including Commissioner of Immigration Caminetti, waited outside.

Chairman Burnett put the ban of secrecy on the proceedings in executive session, but it is understood he received a letter from Bryan in which the secretary detailed all the treaties and laws which the Baker bill would repeal or contravene. The state department did not oppose the bill, but suggested the international entanglements it made possible.

When the committee met Representative Moore of Pennsylvania objected to public hearings, in view of Makino's speech and anti-American demonstrations in Tokio and elsewhere.

Members of the committee might take up the bill Jan. 29, at which time Bryan will probably be called to give his opinion on the legislation.

The address by Makino, outlining the status of negotiations over the California anti-land legislation, and declaring that the Japanese government had "come to see the necessity of considering some other way for solution of the question" because the replies of the United States had not been found satisfactory, was cabled in full from Tokio to the Japanese embassy here.

The address announced that the third note of protest, presented to Bryan by Chinda on Aug. 18, remained unanswered. It also revealed the fact that the ambassador, under instructions from Tokio, saw President Wilson on March 5, the day after the president's inauguration, and asked that he make an effort to stop the threatened legislation in California which has since been enacted.

REBELS' EASY VICTORY

Take Two Haitien Towns After Government Troops Vamoose

Cape Haitien, Jan. 23.—Both Cape Haitien and Fort Liberte, on the north coast, are in the hands of the revolutionists.

The vanguard of the rebels under General Paul entered Cape Haitien without resistance, having previously dispersed the government troops.

Fort Liberte, which lies southeast of Cape Haitien, was garrisoned by a large body of government troops who, however, on the approach of the rebels, boarded the dispatch boats Pacifique and Nord Alexis.

The two vessels proceeded at once to sea, steaming in the direction of Port au Prince.

STICKS TO PLATFORM

President Will Not Recommend Anything but What Is In It

Washington, Jan. 23.—President Wilson indicated to his callers that he would not recommend regulation of stock exchanges. He made it plain that he did not propose to recommend anything which was not in the Democratic platform.

The president insisted there was no intention in his mind of making legislation regulating the finances of railroad corporations and giving the interstate commerce commission control over such finances, retroactive.

Life Convict Asks Pardon

Providence, Jan. 23.—Earl V. Jacques, under life sentence for murdering Mary Eddy, a mill worker, and robbing her of her week's wages five years ago in Greenville, filed a petition for pardon.

Would Bar Negro Vote

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 23.—The South Carolina general assembly went on record as favoring the repeal of the fifteenth amendment to the United States constitution, which in effect gives the negroes the right to vote.

WHERE ONE MAY USE JAPANESE CRASH.

Japanese toweling, or coolie cloth, as it is called, has been exploited quite a little of late, but new ways of employing it in decoration are continually being found. In fact, there seems to be no limit to its possibilities.

Anything prettier than portieres of this fabric can hardly be imagined. Curtains and bedspreads to match are sold in the oriental shops, but any ingenious girl can easily make these and many other pretty things for her room.

Cushions for the window seat, couch covers, dresser and table runners, laundry bags, bookshelf curtains—these are but a few of the ways in which she may employ the Japanese toweling.

One clever woman applied this material very happily in the decorating of her nursery. She covered the walls with plain gray burlap and used a strip of the Japanese toweling in stone blue and white as a frieze. The bluebirds proved to be veritable "bluebirds of happiness" to the little fellow who toddled about there all day. The same baby had bibs made from the "bunny" pattern, and a big bag covered with storks held his toys.

As to its use in the dining room, the Japanese toweling table sets are becoming more and more popular. The designs are fadeless, and successive launderings only serve to soften the texture. The wistaria, cherry blossom and pine needle patterns are most effective.

Taking it all in all, you will hardly find a fabric so adaptable to a truly decorative scheme as Japanese toweling.

THE POTATO HABIT.

Now There's a Shortage In the Popular Tuber.

And now word comes that there is a potato shortage of 92,000,000 bushels, and it would seem as if we are to be deprived of still another cheap and nourishing staple.

But it may be sincerely said that the average American table has seen the potato too often and in too many unattractive forms. "Fried potatoes" is an omnipresent Americanism, which is to blame for much of our national dyspepsia.

Potatoes by chemical analysis show (boiled):

Protein	2.5
Carbohydrate	20.9
Fat	.1
Water	75.5

This, of course, puts them into the "starchy" class, along with white bread, rice, macaroni, hominy and many of the cereals. It is true that many times we have committed the sin of having "three starches" at the same meal. Investigators insist that women eat too many starchy foods. When combined with a quantity of the usual white bread, it is true that the average meal is too high in starch value and still more true it is that our usual manner of peeling the potato before using robs it of its chief value—that of its mineral salt. Baked potatoes are the best and most economical way of serving the tuber.

Even if there is a potato shortage its place can be taken by more extensive use of rice as a "vegetable" and by using hominy, spaghetti and parsnips, which nearly duplicate its qualities, in its place.

Neat and Very Convenient.

The woman who likes dainty, attractive table service will appreciate the newest invention for serving eggs and toast at the first meal of the day.

The egg rack pictured is of bright nickel ware, and the six egg cups, as well as the salt bowl, are of blue ware not unlike the old "willow patterns." Attached to the rack is a glass dish to hold toast. The present high cost of eggs brings them into the luxury class, and consequently they require a fitting setting. (No attempt at a pun intended.)

EGG SERVICE AND TOAST RACK.

The Breakfast Apple.

There is an interesting device to make the preparation of the breakfast apple easy. To begin with, there is a little circular board on which the apple is placed. Then there is a circular band of steel, with three or four crosspieces of metal, sharp on the lower edge, fastened at each end to the steel circle and bisecting each other in the middle. The big circle is placed outside the apple, which is now on the little board, and then is pushed down to the board. The crosspieces cut the apple into segments, each just the right size to pare and eat or to eat unpared if you have a taste for apple skin.

Blue and White Dainty.

A small square cushion, which should be especially nice for a guest room, is covered with blue silk, and over this a fillet lace cover of white is drawn. This dainty little bit of blue and white is then supplied with blue and white headed pins, neatly arranged, all ready for the guest's use.

TOWN HALL CLOSED TO LABOR LEADER

To Hold Open Air Meeting in Defiance of Authorities

Claremont, N. H., Jan. 23.—The town hall of Claremont, which is used for all sorts of public gatherings, entertainments and dances, has been closed against John Luthrinter, the New Jersey labor leader, by the selectmen.

Luthrinter appeared before the selectmen and asked to rent the hall. When denied this request he announced to the chief of police that he would hold an open air meeting outside of the Sullivan Machinery company gates regardless of arrest threats.

The labor federation has engaged attorneys to attend the open air meeting and defend Luthrinter when the expected arrest is made.

Cabaret Singer Sues Tenor Constantino For Lost Love

New York, Jan. 23.—Florencio Constantino, the Spanish tenor now under engagement with the Boston Grand Opera company, and owner of the "Teatro Constantino" in Buenos Ayres, appeared in court to defend a breach of promise suit brought against him for $100,000 damages by Miss Marcelle Hontabat, who has appeared in the chorus at several theatres in this city, and is at present employed as a cabaret singer.

The suit was begun before Justice Platzek and a jury in the supreme court.

Counsel for the girl said in his opening remarks that he would show the famous tenor had promised to make the cabaret songster his wife.

SYMPATHY FOR BRYAN

Taft Thinks Talk Will Facilitate Digestion of "Brother Bill"

New York, Jan. 23.—The annual report of President Hill of the International Peace forum, read at a luncheon given by that organization, declared that peace had made greater progress in America than in any other part of the world.

The guests of honor at the luncheon were former President Taft, Oscar S. Straus and Seth Low. In the preface of the impromptu speech Taft said:

"I am beginning to have a good deal of sympathy for Brother Bill Bryan. Talk seems to be necessary to facilitate digestion. It is good exercise for the diaphragm and the jaw."

Important News In Advertisements

By HOLLAND.

THE valuable news of the day is not confined to the news columns. It is also seen in the advertisements. Of course it is important to know what President Wilson is doing, what the latest developments are in China or what baseball club leads the league. But it is also important to know where a bargain in boys' waists, garden hose, breakfast food or straw hats may be found.

These bits of commercial news are among the advertisements. Wise persons look for them and take advantage of them when they are doing their buying. The leading merchants are continually telling you news of their stores, news that is important because it often means a real saving and always means something new and worth while.

Read the advertisements if you seek important news. Read them regularly and always with the thought that back of each advertisement are the reputation and business standing of the merchant. He could not afford to deceive you even if he were so inclined.

BOOST QUINCY ALL THE TIME

All Wards Represented on Board of Trade Committees

President John L. Hamilton of the Board of Trade today announces sixteen standing committees for the year after conference with the directors. As in the election of the board of directors it has been the aim of the president to have each ward as far as possible represented on each committee. The first named is the chairman, then a Ward One man, Ward Two man, etc. The committees seem to cover all branches of endeavor, but special committees may be necessary from time to time.

It is the intention of the president and board of directors to make the year 1914 a notable one for the Board of Trade. The policies will be, first of all, to boost Quincy all the time. Efforts will be made this year to secure a membership of at least 500. To assist in improving, where possible, conditions of industries now located in the city; any suggestion to this end will be most welcome. To encourage new industries to locate in Quincy. To advocate and urge a municipal dock for Quincy.

These policies are to be incorporated in a sign to be painted and hung in the Board of Trade rooms as a constant reminder.

The Board is fortunate in having as its president a live wire like John L. Hamilton, who enters upon his second year. A year ago he was almost unknown in this city at large, but as president of the Board he has been on his job all the time, and has stimulated others. The Board of Trade has become a live body interested in all parts of Quincy, and promises to be much more successful this year.

ANNUAL BANQUET

the home. You are not safe. Bright and strong men have fallen and in contest between liquor and the man, without the grace of God the man generally falls if the temptations are strong enough.

Thank God for the examples of total abstinence that were given you by the men that formed this society. They were accused of being fanatics, but if a man is able to control himself one way he is able to do so other ways, and if there is anything that will distinguish a man it is the control of himself in temptation.

Monsignor Roche eulogized the founders, termed them heroes, and asked for the perpetuation of the society, and in closing asked God's blessing for the society, parish, priests and in every way 100 fold on the good that has been done and is being done. (Prolonged applause and cheers.

At frequent intervals during the address, Monsignor Roche referred to the fine work done by Father Grady as pastor, and said that a continuance of it meant fine work by Father McCoy, a noble man to have as a leader.

REV. T. R. McCOY.

As Father T. R. McCoy, arose to speak he was given a fine reception. He said "I looked forward to this occasion. Last Sunday your observance of feast of the Holy Name so enthused me and filled me with admiration, that although suffering from a severe cold I did not want to refuse to talk to you, and I strained my vocal cords. I would not be here tonight, my dear boys, only for the deep affection I have for you.

I want to thank you for many of the complimentary things said about me, many of which are not true. The warmth of your greeting was a great testimony of the love and affection and appreciation of the great work done amongst you by Monsignor Roche. His heart must have been gladdened, for remember that priests are human and they do love appreciation.

"I would love to linger with you longer, and say a few things I have thought of speaking about, but I cannot do it. I told you in church what I thought of your society. A review of its 39 years of life prompts me to say God speed you in your noble work, and in your great fight against intemperance. I was a stranger amongst you at last election. We all understand each other now, and let us work heart in hand so that when the vote is counted the great work will be realized and West Quincy will register itself as a strong protest against license. (Applause.)

FATHER O'BRIEN.

Father O'Brien was given a tremendous reception: He said "God fills my heart, and happiness abounds in my soul for whose heart is not filled and whose heart is not stirred to stand in the sanctuary of his home, in the midst of his friends. I love the rock bound hills of my native home. I bow in sincere reverence before the gray haired fathers and mothers of the city, who have done their work and are awaiting the masters' call, and I cherish the friendship of all the men that are sowing seeds of virtue that tomorrow will turn into victory.

"When the night is dark and the weight of my work if crowding upon me, I love to wander back in thought to my native place, and I love to return in reality and frequently in fancy to the bright love of friendship, and may the sun of your love shine upon those seeds and bring them to the fullness of flowers.

"I stand here as an anointed priest of God, a representative of the church. My place is here because there is a bond that unites you and I, that joins your work with mine.

In each of us there is a God given soul, Noble and great as it may be it cannot of tiself accomplish its work unless that soul possesses a human body. The greatest thing under the heavens is God's church but God's church needs a human body to accomplish its work in the world.

"The purpose of the society is to carry the message of temperance. You stand, an army, to teach the world a great lesson. Can there be a greater lesson to teach men. Wherever there is human sorrow, crime, death, there you have the effects of that supreme error, intemperance.

"This society stands as a living Catholic monument to this district. Never do I enter the hall, but I thank God that he has peopled this district with good Catholic mothers to sow the seeds and water the flowers and raise to manhood the men who are here tonight. Give God his praise first and foremost, but let each one of us not forget those white haired mothers who are traveling towards eternity."

Cornelius M. Duggan in addition to a short speech sang several of his original songs and was warmly applauded.

Father Duffy urged the young men to be Catholic as well as total abstainers and requested them to learn the greatness of the history of the church so that by modern beliefs they would not be puzzled. He also suggested that they be temperate in action in public halls.

The committee included Peter Duggan, Thomas F. O'Brien, Frank L. McPherson, George E. Reinhalter, William R. McDonald, Roderick Connelly and Bart Flaherty.

MRS. JOSEPH GALVIN.

Amelia Galvin, who came to Quincy from Provincetown a few years ago as the bride of Joseph Galvin of 15 Wilson street, died at the Tuberculosis camp on Thursday after a long illness. She was in her 23rd year and leaves a husband and family. Mr. Galvin is employed by Maguire and O'Hearn who built the Plymouth monument. While staying in Provincetown he met the girl. Since their marriage they have lived in this city.

Utilizing Air Space.

It is proposed to span a 2,500-foot gully at Akron, Ohio, by the erection of a series of industrial buildings, the roofs of which are to be used as a passageway.

MAYOR MILLER GETS QUITE A SCARE

But the Package That Resembled a Bomb Was Only a Calendar

Many Compliments Received on His Appointees

Mayor Miller says that his callers are falling off somewhat and that he hoped soon to be able to get more time to attend to the business of the city.

The Mayor got quite a scare Friday when he received by mail a small square package, which looked as though it might be a bomb. On removing the cover of the box he found the top covered with small scraps of paper and he became more suspicious. Determined, however, to find out just what it was, he pulled off the pieces of paper, when a card was disclosed bearing the name of Councilman Charles L. Gilliatt. Digging down a little deeper he drew forth a small iron frame desk calendar issued by the Norfolk Iron Co., of which Councilman Gilliatt is the proprietor. The Mayor breathed easier then.

Speaking of the petition received by the City Council last Monday evening for an addition to the Washington school, he said that he was not strongly in favor of expending $38,000 for an addition to this building. He believed

PLEASING ECHO OF THE FOURTH

Greetings from Battleship Michigan to Quincy People

The Daily Ledger received a visit Friday, from W. A. McGunagle of the battleship Michigan, which visited Quincy on the Fourth of July to assist in the celebration. It will be remembered that the ship sailed the next day for Mexican waters, and it did not return north until Tuesday of this week, the ship being now at New York. Mr. McGunagle is in Atlantic boy, and is home on a ten days furlough, but he was delegated by the crew to return thanks to the Daily Ledger for the write-up concerning the visit, and to say that all had very pleasant memories of Quincy and hoped to be detailed here again next Fourth. Never were the crew so well entertained ashore, and many personal friendships resulted. About half the mail received aboard the Michigan of late has come from Quincy.

It was Mr. McGunagle who arranged for the complimentary dance given at Quincy Music hall to the young people of the city, which was such an enjoyable occasion. Jan. 30 the ship will sail for Celebra in the West Indies for winter manoeuvres. All mail should be addressed to Battleship Michigan, New York city.

APPRECIATED OUR HOSPITAL

Editor Daily Ledger:

It is important that the public be told from time to time how things are done at the City Hospital, as they help support it. I have been under treatment there during the past eleven days and had excellent opportunity to observe the workings of the institution.

I take pleasure in saying that the present matron is possessed not only of ability but also of tact and courtesy. The nurses are capable, loyal and kind. Nothing within reason is left undone which might relieve pain or add to the comfort of the patient.

I noticed that the matron is fair to her nurses and considerate of their rights.

There is absolutely no discrimination shown. The poor man receives the same attention as the well-to-do.

Needless to add, the doctors are efficient and faithful to their trust.

QUINCYS WIN FROM STATE CHAMPIONS

Holliston High Defeated for First Time in Five Years at Basket Ball

Score Was 28 to 18 in Favor of Quincy High

Quincy High school defeated Holliston High school basket ball team, claimants of the state championship, at Holliston Friday by a score of 28-18. Quincy's victory is calculated to have a decided effect on its athletic standing in the state. For five years Holliston's team had been undefeated on its home floor, and this year, up to date, seventeen victories and no defeats were to its credit.

Yesterdays game was a whirlwind from start to finish. Quincy realized the proposition on its hands, and rose to the occasion. When the Holliston boys saw the game slipping out of their grasp their play became even more furious than before, but Quincy always seemed to have the necessary reserve to meet the attack.

Star plays cropped out everywhere and the crowd was cheering quite as much for Quincy as for the home team before the game was done. Earl Bates furnished the sensations for Quincy, by scoring two baskets in succession from a third of the way down the hall in the first four minutes of play. With his two other baskets and six points on free tries, the little Quincy forward scored half the points for his team. Leon White found a difficult proposition in 6 ft. 6 Brown, but kept up his end by playing him even in the scoring and outplaying him on the floorwork. Hamlin scored two nice baskets on long shots and kept Pond, who has been scoring six and eight times a game regularly to two baskets. Page's work as well as Jenkin's was for the most part defensive but was top notch at all times

Brown and Pond excelled for Holliston not less than six times did Pond dodge down the floor through the entire Quincy team, carrying the ball on the dribble, only to be unable to score. Browns superior weight and height gave him his advantage on the jump up at center.

The form shown by the Quincy team far outdid anything shown this year. Had the same fight and spirit been displayed against Salem, the latter team would have been snowed under. Teamwork was evident everywhere, while any number of Holliston rooters commented on the disinclination to foul, something they were evidently not used to on the part of visiting teams.

Tuesday, Rockland visits at Quincy. This team is much stronger than usual, and should furnish as snappy a game as Salem did.

The lineup:

QUINCY		HOLLISTON
Bates	rf	lb Herrick
Jenkins	lf	rb Whiting
White	c	c Brown

Score—Quincy 28, Holliston 18. Goals from floor, Jenkins 2, Bates 4, White 3, Hamlin 2, Pond 2, Brown 3. Goals from fouls—Bates 6, Pond 7. Referee— Haley. Umpire— French. Timer— Maloney. Time— 20 min. halves. Attendance—400.

GEORGE W. CLAPP PASSES AWAY

George W. Clapp, one of Quincy's life long residents, passed away Friday evening at his home 66 Merrymount road of heart trouble, after an illness of a few day's duration. Mr. Clapp who has had heart trouble for years, was taken with a bad spell last Sunday and took to his bed, where he has been confined ever since.

Mr. Clapp was a son of the late Elbridge Clapp, and was born in Quincy about 58 years ago. He received his education in the public schools of Quincy and soon after completing his education entered the store of his father which was located for years on the lower floor of what is now the Daily Ledger building, with whom he remained until his father went out of business. He was then employed as a salesman for some years, and several years ago opened a small store in the block on Hancock street near the High school. He soon built up quite a substantial trade and did a good business. Just before last Christmas his wife opened a small wares goods store at the other end of the block.

In his younger days he was quite a ball tosser and for years played with the Actives, who were then Quincy's crack base ball team. He has always taken a deep interest in the national game but not actively for many years.

Mr. Clapp was twice married. He leaves a widow, a daughter by his first wife, who is now Mrs. Brooks Keyes, and a son by his second wife, Elverton, who has been an assistant in his father's store.

WARD FOUR VOTE.

The No-License people were greatly pleased with the address of Monsignor Ambrose F. Roche at the banquet of the St. Mary's C. T. A. & M. B. Society. When a pastor at West Quincy he was a tower of strength to the No-License cause in the city and helped materially to place Quincy in the enviable position she occupies—an unbroken record of over thirty years for No-License. At the last election many West Quincy voters evidently forgot the advice and pleadings of Fr. Roche, for the vote of Ward Four on the License question was in favor of license:

	Pre. 1	Pre. 2	Total
YES	204	190	394
NO	181	184	365

Both the West Quincy precincts, it will be seen voted in favor of admitting the saloons, but they were the only precincts in the city to give a Yes majority. It was this vote that grieved Fr. Roche, and this was why he spoke as plainly as he did. He was sorry to see his many years of work go for naught. His address was fully reported in the Daily Ledger of Friday and should be read and reread. It would make an excellent campaign article for distribution next November. We believe it will have a good effect and that next year West Quincy will return to the No-License column.

THE PASSING OF RENO.

Nevada's new and stricter divorce law, in effect with the new year, drives away from Reno and other cities an exotic and motley tribe of restless women. There will not be so many Paris gowns, Fifth Avenue styles, and extreme slit skirts on the streets of Reno. But the change marks the tendency of the newer commonwealths to accept the same moral standards that prevail in older states.

In the feverish life of the old mining towns, moral obligations and family ties were as easy to shift as place of residence. For the prospector, staking his all on the gold indications of a valley did not seem essentially different from taking a similar risk on the turn of the roulette wheel. In a country considered destitute of three essentials of life,—water, feed, and women,—the six months' residence required for a divorce was an extended and weary period.

The new development of Nevada's resources reads like a romance. Called the driest state in the union, it is found that water is almost everywhere in the valleys a few feet underground. Prospective irrigation projects are to fertilize nearly two million acres. Along the streams and canals, little oases of green, with comfort and hope, are springing up.

This new development brings all the materials needed for a stable civilization. In place of the gambling joint, there springs up the Sunday School. The divorce colony flung around a lot of loose change that filled Reno with social glitter. In its place now comes the farmer adding to the productive capital of the state.

The mining industry tends to standardize itself. It brings in a host of technology and college men, whose service is needed to operate mining plants scientifically. Illusion and the gambling spirit thus tend to fade out of the gold district, which becomes as prosaic and every day as making shoes. Still Nevada has untold possibilities of mineral development, and the dreams and adventures of the prospector will furnish romance for many years.

GIFTS ARE PROHIBITED

President Issues Order to Prevent "Influence" In Canal Zone

Washington, Jan. 24.—By executive order, President Wilson promulgated what is practically an anti-tipping law for the Panama canal zone.

Aside from prohibiting employes of the canal organization from receiving rebates or commissions on supplies, it prohibits gifts intended to influence any employe on the isthmus without the knowledge of the employer.

It is entitled an order "to prevent corrupting influence of agents or servants," and provides a year's imprisonment and fines ranging from $10 to $100 for violations.

The order attracted much attention, in view of the fact that Colonel Goethals now is investigating charges that John Burke, commissary agent of the Panama railroad, received rebates on contracts.

CONSISTENT EXERCISE

Yale Expert Submits Facts to Show It Develops the Body

New Haven, Jan. 24.—Consistent exercise has value in promoting physical development and makes a sturdier physique, in the opinion of Dr. Born of Yale gynasium, who completed sets of figures showing the change in physical measurements of students due to gymnasium work of the winter months.

Born's average figures show that the consistent gymnasuim worker gains 19 pounds in weight, 2 inches in shoulder breadth, 4 inches in chest girth and 38 cubic inches in lung capacity.

In the same period the student who does not exercise gains 4 pounds in weight, 2-10 of an inch in shoulder breadth, 1 inch in chest girth and 18 cubic inches in lung capacity.

AWARD OF $25,000 IS CUT TO $10,000

Court Says Miss Lapham Must Accept It or Lose All

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 24.—Judge Raymond of the superior court handed down a decision in the breach of promise suit of Miss Amy A. Lapham, a school teacher, against Bertrand F. Aldrich, a lawyer, cutting to $10,000 a verdict of $25,000 that had been awarded to Miss Lapham by the jury that heard the case at a former session of the court.

Raymond rules that the award of $25,000 is excessive and he decreed that unless the reduced award of $10,000 is accepted by the plaintiff within ten days the entire verdict will be set aside. Miss Lapham has taught school in several places in New England.

CONSTANTINO WINS SUIT

Jury Finds He Need Not Pay $100,000 Claim to Miss Hentabot

New York, Jan. 24.—Although Florencio Constantino modestly admitted he was "no Joseph," a jury in the supreme court decided that the confession should not militate against the Spanish tenor, and the songster should not have to pay a penny to Miss Marcelle Hontabot, who sued him for $100,000 for alleged breach of promise to marry.

The tenor, who was a witness in his own defense, admitted that Miss Hontabot called frequently at his apartment in Boston, but he denied that she was ever there with him alone. He also emphatically denied having placed a string of pearls about her neck and offered them to her.

Nogales, Ariz., Jan. 24.—Jack Wilson, prisoner on a charge of stealing arms and ammunition from the camp of the Fifth United States cavalry last May, treated his captor, Charles R. Price, United States deputy marshal of Phenix, to a dinner here last night.

When the two finished eating, Wilson dodged out of the back door of the restaurant and ran across the international boundary, 200 feet away. Price was left to pay the bill and mourn the sad ending of his first arrest.

Corruption Said to Exist in Quebec Government

SPECIFIC CASES OF BRIBERY

Investigation Which Cost Backers $150,000 Declared to Have Shown That Members of Provisional Government Set $9500 as Price For Montreal Fair Measure

Montreal, Jan. 24.—The sensation of the year has been sprung here by the Daily Mail, a new morning newspaper, which charges incredible corruption among members of the provincial government of Quebec. The Mail openly accuses Louis Berard, Achille Bergeyin and J. O. Mousseau of accepting bribes. All of which was done in connection with an act to incorporate "The Montreal Fair association in Canada."

This evidence is based in part upon the result of an investigation carried on in Montreal and at Quebec during the past four months by some of the best staff operatives of the William J. Burns Internationad Detective agency.

David W. Hyland, who figures as one of the incorporators of the Montreal Fair association, is none other than G. B. Biddinger, assistant general manager of the Burns agency, and next in authority to Burns himself. Biddinger has conducted many investigations into corrupt conditions throughout the continent.

Associated with Biddinger throughout this investigation has been George S. Sampson, another of the important men in the Burns agency. These two men have had the assistance of a full complement of Burns operatives. At times twenty-five to thirty men and women have been working under their orders in unearthing conditions in Montreal and Quebec.

The price set for the passage of this bill, The Mail says, was $9500. Of this amount the promoters have paid members of the legislature $4850. They still owe $4650. One of the accused, Berard, is Premier Gouin's law partner. The amount already paid, the persons to whom it was paid, and the times and places at which payment was made, The Mail gives in detail.

These are the outstanding features of the case which the Daily Mail alleges against members of the Quebec legislature. Dictaphones were largely the means of recording employed. The backers of this project, The Mail claims, have spent $150,000 to obtain this evidence.

The accused members deny all the charges and the owners and editors, M. E. Nichols and B. A. McNab, of The Mail, have been summoned to appear before the house at Quebec to prove the charges made.

MUTINY ON OCEAN LINER

Devonian Returns to Port and Nineteen of Her Crew Are Arrested

Liverpool, Jan. 24.—Mutiny broke out on board the steamship Devonian shortly after she left Liverpool for Boston, and she was compelled to put back to Holyhead, where nineteen of her crew were arrested.

The outbreak was caused by trouble between union and non-union seamen. The crew was a mixed one, and a few hours after the vessel left port the union sailors refused to obey the orders of the ship's officers until the non-union men had been put ashore.

The captain thereupon ran back to Holyhead with mutiny signals flying and asked that police be sent on board. A detachment of local police responded and arrested nineteen union seamen.

"RADIUM HYSTERIA"

Agitation Will Set Back Cure of Cancer, Says Boston Doctor

Washington, Jan. 24.—Dr. Francis D. Donoghue of Boston has filed a brief with the house committee on mines and mining in which he maintains that radium is not a cure for cancer and declares that "radium hysteria is a disease which is likely to set back the cure of cancer by giving result to acute mental disease which will add to the suffering of cancer patients."

Donoghue favors, however, the government ownership of lands containing radium ore and recommends a leasing system so that the ore may be mined by government capital.

MAY NOT OPPOSE DIVORCE

Goelet Is Reported to Desire Custody of His Two Sons

New York, Jan. 24.—Robert Goelet, whose wife is suing him for divorce in the supreme court of Rhode Island, intends, it is reported, to be in Europe when the case is tried. Goelet has not been served with the papers. He dined Wednesday night at the Knickerbocker club, but efforts to locate him have been unavailing.

If Goelet does not contest the suit it is highly probable that he will fight for the custody of the two children—Ogden, aged 6, and Peter, aged 3. The complaint filed in Newport is sealed and will remain so until the hearing is held, which will probably be in the course of a month.

In the trial it was shown that Dorr lived with an aunt who was an adopted daughter of the murdered man, and that the aunt was to receive an estate of about $150,000 on the death of Marsh. Following conviction the case went to the supreme court, and the appeal was dismissed a few days ago.

$10,000 SCHMIDT FUND

Said to Have Been Raised to Defend Priest In Murder Trial

New York, Jan. 24.—Where the funds for the defense of Fr. Hans Schmidt, priest-murderer, are coming from is as much of a mystery as ever, but it is reported that $10,000 has been received to finance the second trial of Schmidt for the brutal killing of Anna Aumuller. For the first trial $15,000 is said to have been raised and expended.

Counsel for the defense and prosecution have agreed to call but two alienists each in order that the case may be closed as soon as possible.

NEWS ITEMS FROM MILTON

The debating team of Milton High won over Brockton High at Brockton Wednesday evening. The subject was "Resolved, That a commission form of government is not better than the prevailing form of municipal government in the United States." Milton had the affirmative, and Brockton the negative. On the Milton team were Kenneth D. Johnson, Harold C. Weber and Edwin F. Melvin. The Brockton team included Ulric Renaud, George Erickson and Dewey Stone. The judges were Henry P. Arnold, master in Boston High school of Commerce, Prof. S. Lee Garrison of Harvard University; Superintendent of Schools, Albert F. Barbour of Quincy. A loving cup was presented the winners by Head Master Whitcomb of Brockton and accepted by Capt. Edwin F. Melvin. It was conceded that Brockton had won the debate until the Milton team came back so strongly in rebuttal that they turned the tide.

A glee club, composed of the boys and girls at Milton High school is beheing organized under the direction of Miss Whitcher, musical director. Applications are pouring in and it is probable that within a week the organization will be effected. The purpose is to add an attractive feature to many concerts held during the year.

All the younger folks of East Milton are anxiously watching the skating bulletins and efforts are being made to get the large Cunningham pond in shape for immediate use. The rink has been in good condition since cold weather. The overseers will be as strict this year as formerly, and will not permit skating until a card is secured. This must be worn in a conspicuous place. Cards will not be issued to non-residents.

The second chapter on the billboard war in East Milton is due. The Adams street and Granite avenue board was removed because of the protests of many residents and members of the Milton Woman's Club, it was said. The effect of the protest on the bill posters was expressed a few days after when they commenced building one twice the size of the first on the McDonnell lot on Adams street. It is now covered with advertisements.

GARDEN AND FLOWER SEEDS.

Congressman Edward Gilmore announces that the Department of Agriculture has carefully selected packages of garden and flower seeds to be distributed under his direction to the people living in his district.

These seeds are fresh and valuable specimens of the best kinds and it is his desire to have them get into the hands of all those who would like to plant them. He will be pleased to grant the request and send seeds to any one applying in his district.

He would be pleased to hear from Superintendents of schools or school teachers in his district who have scholars interested or about to become interested in school gardening. For schools, have the teachers state the number of packages required for his or her school or room.

He will welcome requests from granges, societies and lodges who have members interested in gardening.

For the convenience of those requesting seeds and the listing and forwarding of same in time for the opening of the planting season, the Congressman suggests that a postal card be used with name, street and town written plainly upon it and that they be sent in early.

With the general interest all over the country in agriculture, the Congressman is taking this work up for the purpose of encouraging the people to have a garden at home and create an interest in the subject among the people, that will be not alone interesting but profitable to them.

IN PRESENCE OF WOMEN

Boston Man Who Led Dual Life Kills Himself With Revolver

Boston, Jan. 24.—George Adams, 48 years old, shot and killed himself in a small tenement when his wife, Mrs. Mabel N. Adams, discovered him living with Miss Alice M. Sanborn, 22 years old, who was formerly employed by Mrs. Adams as a housegirl.

Adams did the shooting in the presence of the Sanborn girl, when his wife had turned to leave the house after she berated her husband for his conduct and accused the Sanborn girl of being responsible for breaking up her home.

Adams was employed as night superintendent of a downtown office building. He told his wife that on account of the difficulty in reaching home in Dorchester late at night, he had taken rooms nearer his work.

He visited his wife and his 12-year-old boy, Edward, several times a week until recently, when he appeared at his home less frequently. Mrs. Adams became suspicious and at last discovered her husband was leading a dual life.

BLEASE EXPLAINS PARDON OF 1000

Gives Reasons For the Turning Loose of Convicts

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 24.—Explanation of why he has pardoned nearly 1000 prisoners is contained in a memorandum made public by Governor Blease.

He set a negro wife murderer free, he said, "for the good of humanity," because the woman's death prevented the raising of more negroes; he freed several negroes charged with assault on the ground that the negro race hadn't "any standard of morality;" he held that there could be no complaint arising out of fraud in horse-trading.

One man was pardoned because he bore the same name as a boyhood friend of the governor.

NEW CORT THEATRE.

John Cort's new theatre, The Cort, Park Square, Boston, that opened Monday evening Jan. 19, with Joseph Santley in the tuneful and dancing musical comedy "When Dreams Come True," has, during the past week attracted much excellent comment for its dainty and harmonious effect, both in design and its luxurious furnishings. The constructive genius of Mr. Cort, who owns and has built many theatres, is everywhere apparent.

This latest of the Bartholomae pieces which continues next week contains many tuneful songs, an abundance of comedy, and has a clever cast to interpret it, the main feature is found in the number and variety of modern dances with which is abounds In fact, "When Dreams Come True" might have been termed "a carnival of dancing."

BASKET BALL TONIGHT.

One of the best games of the season is scheduled for tonight at the Y. M. C. A. The first and second teams line up against the crack Cambridge fives. The only league game that Quincy has lost so far this year was won by Cambridge about two weeks ago at the University Gym.

Since defeating Quincy, Cambridge has also taken Boston and Brockton into camp, the latter game being one of the big surprises of the year. A win tonight by Quincy would give the local boys a clear hold on second place in the Greater Boston Y. M. C. A. league, and from all accounts the Cambridge players are just as anxious to win.

Second team game ought to be won by Quincy as the boys had no trouble in defeating Cambridge in their own gym; running up a score of 23 to 8. Wilband of Chesea will officiate and the first game will commence at 8.15

SPORTING NOTES.

The Fore River league has 11 more rolloffs before the winners of the season's prizes can be announced. To qualify for individual prizes it is necessary to roll three quarters of the matches. This precludes the possibility of Bernard Burke copping any of the prizes. His return from Panama was after the league started and if his three string record of 351 stands the money cannot be given him. George Westland's 135 looks good for high singles.

Although Russell Sullivan's team in the Knights of Columbus league is in fourth place, Captain Sullivan is commencing to show some class. Outside of competition he is doing well and in the recent matches has made a good showing.

M. and Mrs. B. Forbes, whose marriage took place six weeks ago are in their new home at 40 Green street, Wollaston.

The ten high men in the Knights of Columbus league are Avery 91, McGee 88, Fallon 86, Rus Sullivan 86, Walsh 85, Tierney 85, Thompson 84, Flaherty 83, Ford 81, Mahon 81.

The organization of a hockey team at Quincy High school was a surprise to the fans in general. Capt. O'Donnell is rounding his men into form and expects to show some class before the ice melts.

Johnny Noonan, the well known boxer met his first Brockton defeat at Brockton Friday night at the hands of Howard McRae of Cambridge. Noonan never was defeated in this city.

Waltham High is fathering boxing and wrestling and among the approving spectators were School Superintendent William H. Parkinson and Faculty Managers Burke and Ward. They are training for the football game with Quincy next fall.

Holliston, the home of a hitherto undefeated champ basket ball team is wearing crepe today, mourning their defeat on Friday by Quincy High, 28 to 18.

The St. Mary's beat St. Josephs Friday night, 14 to 13 in a Greater Boston N. E. A. A. A. U. basket ball game. Both teams are due in this city in February to play the Quincy A. A.

The schedule of Weymouth high basket ball team includes six games: Brockton two, Oliver Ames, East Bridgewater, Watertown, and Weymouth Alumni as the opponents.

Fred Morrison Kingsbury of Newton street, Wollaston has entered the quarter mile in the Coast Artillery corps games that are going to be held this evening at South Armory, on Irvington street, Boston. Kingsbury was captain of last year's track team at Quincy High school and brought the team through the most successful year that any team at High has ever had. He is running, for the Boston Athletic Association.

Carl Gram who starred at "Tech" is in training for the indoor meets. He remains a member of the B. A. A.

MILTON HIGH WIN.

The hockey team of Milton High continued its victories on Friday, and administered an overwhelming defeat on the Revere High school sextette. Sweeney, Milton's centre scored five goals and Simpson, left wing, got four. Milton beat Quincy a week ago.

SERIOUSLY ILL.

Assistant Engineer Daniel J. Nyhan who is seriously ill at his home on Hancock street, passed a comfortable night Friday and this morning although still every weak is reported as being comfortable.

GETTING DOWN TO BUSINESS

Administration Measures Are Taken Up by Congress

INTRODUCED INTO THE HOUSE

Reference to Prohibition of Holding Companies, as Suggested by President, Omitted In Trade Relations Bill For the Present—Clash In Senate Over Jurisdiction

Washington, Jan. 24.—Administration leaders in congress have settled down to deliberations on the tentative anti-trust measures designed to supplement the Sherman act, in accordance with suggestions of President Wilson.

Measures prohibiting interlocking directorates, defining restraints of trade included within the meaning of terms of the Sherman act, and prohibiting "cut throat" competition were introduced in the house by Representative Clayton in the form agreed upon in conferences. Senator Newlands, chairman of the interstate commerce committee, planned also to introduce them, with the interstate trade commission bill, in the senate as soon as the Alaskan railroad bill was out of the way.

In the trade relations measure no provision was made for the prohibition of holding companies, as suggested in the president's message, but it was announced that the committees would further consider that phase of the trust regulation program and probably would add a section to the bill. It was explained that the reason for omitting reference to that subject was that neither the president nor the administration leaders had determined just how far the government should go.

A sharp conflict as to the jurisdiction of committees in the senate over the question of trust legislation has already arisen. Such a collision occurred in the house between the judiciary and the interstate commerce committees and it has been settled by deciding to send part of the "five brothers" to judiciary and part to interstate commerce. Now the same question confronts the senate.

The interstate commerce committee held a meeting and discussed a trust legislation program. It was brought out that the judiciary committee of the senate, one of the most powerful committees of that body, would insist on jurisdiction of some of the trust bills. But the interstate commerce committee determined to claim jurisdiction of all of them. The judiciary committee had jurisdiction of the Sherman measure and the original interstate commerce measure. But, as Newlands and other senators on interstate commerce pointed out, that was before the interstate commerce committee was created.

The controversy might look like a tempest in a teapot but as a matter of fact it is of importance. The interstate commerce committee is generally considered the more radical of the two committees and it has probed much deeper into trust problems than judiciary. Senator Overland is acting chairman of judiciary and it is known that Overman would prefer no trust legislation at all at this time.

The interstate commerce committee yesterday informally discussed hearings, procedure and the like. It was the general feeling that there should be but limited hearings and that they should be held in conjunction with house committees in order to save time. Also it was the general feeling that the trust bills should be put through with expedition.

As to whether the bills would be made party caucus measures, Newlands, as chairman, told the committee that the bills which have been made public are tentative, that suggestions for improvement from every source will be welcomed and that he hopes the legislation may be adopted without partisanship and without resort to caucus.

HE WANTED ASSISTANCE

Crank Starts Rumor of Attempt to Assassinate German Prince

Berlin, Jan. 24.—Rumors of an attempt to assassinate Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm arose through the efforts of a supposed insane man to see the prince. As the prince approached his town house in Unter den Linden, a man ran up to his automobile and demanded to see him. The sentry seized the intruder.

At the police station the man gave his name as Leopold Salomon. He declared he was a brother of the prince and wished to ask for assistance. It was later learned that he is a tailor.

FUNERAL OF MRS. ATKINS.

The house was filled with friends, neighbors and relatives to attend the funeral of Mrs. Gertrude E. (Creswell) wife of Captain Elisha D. Atkins at her home on Bromfield street Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. Frederick H. Steenstra rector of St. Chrysostom's Episcopal church officiating. Mrs. Mary Hastings Slade sang "Lead, Kindly Light," and "For all the saints, who from their labors rest." The room was one mass of blooms, the roses, calla lilies, carnations, sweet peas and orchids were silent messengers.

Among the floral tributes were beautiful pieces from G. G. Deering, Bath, Maine; Gray, Ireland & Company, Baltimore, Crowell and Thurlow, Boston, The Woman's Guild of St. Chrysostoms church, Wollaston Lodge of American Benefit Society and Dr. and Mrs. Schmidt of Baltimore The burial was in the family lot at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

For the past year Mrs. Atkins has been ill, but her natural temperament was full of good spirits and her courage through these months is worthy of remark. She had a peculiar gift of attaching every one to her with whom she came in contact. Her husband and family have in her life and memory a heritage that is vouchsafed to but few, and they have the warmest and heartfelt sympathy of a wide circle of friends.

"I cannot say, and I will not say,
That she is dead. She is just away,
With a cheery smile and a wave of her hand,
She has wandered into an unknown land.
And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be since she lingers there.
And you, oh you! who the wildest yearn
For the old-time step and the glad return,
Think of her faring on, as dear
In the life of there as the life of here,
Think of her still as the same, I say;
She is not dead—she is just away."

Besides her husband Capt. Atkins she is survived by three daughters Helen G., a senior at Simmons college, Robina A., wife of Cleneith R. Mitchell of Blake street and Edith M. and one son Herbert S. Atkins.

Crossed Valentines

They Brought a Surprise on the Good Saint's Day

By CLARISSA MACKIE

"If I had known you could be so hateful!" Milly Telford had sobbed.

"If I had only known you had such a waspish temper!" Harry Blake had hotly retorted.

And that was the beginning of the few bitter words that ended their engagement.

So Milly hastened to pack her trunk and run away to Fern Hollow, where her Aunt Amelia Telford lived the quiet, uneventful days of a New England spinster.

"Broken your engagement to Harry Blake?" echoed Aunt Amelia when Milly had made confession.

"Yes," sighed Milly. "And, Aunt Amelia, I'm so thankful that I discovered my mistake in time!"

"I hope, dear, that you won't regret it," said Aunt Amelia, with a troubled expression in her sweet blue eyes.

"I never shall! And, Aunt Amelia," added Milly brightly, "I'm never going to marry. I'm going to spend my days a happy, care free spinster like you!"

Aunt Amelia went away without a word, and if Milly had followed she would have seen the little woman looking wistfully across the valley at the red chimneys of an old graystone house set against the wintry hillsides. If she had had more faith in the lover of her youth that graystone house would have been her home today.

"Poor child—poor foolish child!" she murmured sadly, and one could not tell whether she pitied her niece Milly or the spirit of her own lost youth.

* * * * * * * *

The window of the little stationery shop was gay with love missives. They hung from wires in long strings or were fixed cunningly in place by hidden props at the back.

Valentines, valentines, everywhere. They cluttered the glass showcases and were festooned overhead in a riot of alluring color.

Outside it was snowing fast, and Milly Telford in her scarlet coat and knitted cap made a brilliant flash of color as she ran up the steps of Mr. Ware's shop and opened the door.

AMELIA READ THE LINES OVER AND OVER.

Mr. Ware, having dismissed his last customer, hurried forward to meet her.

"I want some drawing pencils, please," said Milly, approaching the glass case.

"Valentines!"

Milly's breath came faster as the tender missives stared her in the face. "I forgot it was St. Valentine's day," she murmured, with an odd little laugh.

"When I was a young man girls didn't forget St. Valentine's day," said Mr. Ware reprovingly.

Milly laughed lightly. "There are so many things to think about," she apologized. Then, having purchased her pencils, she lingered, looking over the valentines. If she had not quarreled with Harry—why, she would undoubtedly be selecting a valentine for him and he would send her some ridiculously sweet remembrance of the day and she would pretend that she could not guess the sender.

"It isn't too late to buy some now, Miss Milly," wheedled Mr. Ware across the counter. "'Tain't Valentine's day till tomorrow."

"I'll take some of these cute little hearts," said Milly. "I've quite forgotten my sister's children."

While Mr. Ware slipped the hearts into envelopes ready for direction, Milly hovered over a dainty satin valentine on which was painted a wreath of forgetmenots, and within the wreath was a verse lettered in gold:

Though bitter pride holds us apart,
Thy image lingers in my heart.

It seemed to be a verse written for estranged lovers. Milly Telford's heart beat quickly as she took out her purse and paid for the white satin valentine. She evaded Mr. Ware's kindly, quizzical glance as she hastened from the place. Up in her own little room at Aunt Amelia's Milly examined the valentine once more before inclosing it in its box and wrapping it securely.

At last it lay before her, a dainty package wrapped in white paper. She carried it into the spare bedroom where on the old fashioned writing desk Aunt Amelia kept her writing materials.

Milly smiled a little as she lighted the candle and heated the stick of red sealing wax. Aunt Amelia's ivory handled seal was there, and Milly used it, afterward holding the clear cut impression to the light. Against the red wax was the impression of a sailing ship tossing on a stormy sea; underneath in tiny letters it read, "Such is life."

Then in a laboriously disguised hand Milly wrote Harry Blake's name with some of Aunt Amelia's violet ink. "I will address it to the house; he will surely receive it then," murmured Amelia, blushing hotly.

* * * * * * * *

It was Miss Amelia Telford's morning custom to walk demurely down the village street and call at the postoffice for her mail and then do her marketing for the day. St. Valentine's day was no exception to the rule, and when Miss Amelia walked up the prim path to her front door she carried a handful of letters and newspapers. Milly was waiting with thinly disguised impatience in the cozy sitting room.

"Any mail for me, Aunt Amelia?" she asked.

"Yes; a box of candy from some one," laughed Amelia.

Milly snatched up the big box of sweets, and the look of eager anticipation died from her face as she scanned the address.

"Oh! It's only from Billy Wakeman," she said carelessly, pushing it aside.

Amelia removed her cloak and hat and sat down to look over the mail that had come to her. She read several letters with quiet enjoyment, then picked up a large square white missive heavily embossed.

"A valentine for me!" she cried, with gentle excitement. She carefully opened the envelope with her embroidery scissors and drew out a large white satin heart, on which was painted a smaller heart of forgetmenots. In the center of the small heart was a verse in gold lettering:

Though bitter pride holds us apart,
Thy image lingers in my heart.

Amelia read the lines over and over with trembling lips that refused to utter more than a whisper. Then she bowed her head, where the crinkled bronze tresses were mingled with a powdering of white, and she wept softly.

Milly crept to her and listened to the old story of a lovers' quarrel extending over many years, and now of the valentine which had come as an olive branch of peace from her old lover.

"It was so unexpected, my dear," sobbed Aunt Amelia. "I never expected to hear from Henry Blake again."

"Henry Blake?" echoed Milly, picking up the embossed envelope and scanning the address. She knew the bold masculine hand that had penned the words, giving her the formal name by which she had been christened as Aunt Amelia's namesake:

"Miss Amelia Telford, Fern Hollow, N. H."

That was Aunt Amelia's name too! How funny that her aunt should have thought the valentine was for her—from her old sweetheart! Of course it was for the young Milly, from Harry himself!

"Just fancy one valentine doing for two of us!" thought Milly ecstatically. Then, with sudden thought, she added:

"You said his name was Henry Blake, Aunt Amelia?"

Amelia lifted her tear wet eyes; she was smiling happily. "His name is Henry Blake, and he is your Harry Blake's uncle. Of course I never told you that I knew him when he lived in the old stone house across the valley. I never expected this"— She was holding the valentine close to her heart.

"How odd!" breathed Milly incredulously. "And Harry lives with his Uncle Henry, you know; they keep bachelors' hall in the most delightful apartment—and, dear, there is the doorbell."

Milly flew to the front door to admit the tall, dignified form of Mr. Henry Blake. "Why, Milly!" he cried cordially, clasping her hand. "I—er—came—er"— Milly saw that in one hand he carried a flat package wrapped in white paper with broken red seals.

"You came to see Aunt Amelia," smiled Milly, as she pushed him toward the sitting room door. "I know all about it," she nodded wisely.

"You do?" he laughed. "Then you can see that I recognized Amelia's seal and her violet ink. But that rascal Harry fought to the last ditch that it was intended for him. This duplicating family names is a nuisance."

"It's a blessing in disguise sometimes," giggled Milly as he disappeared within the sitting room.

Ten minutes later Milly was in the village drug store talking over the telephone to Harry Blake in New York.

"Did you send me a valentine, Harry?" she asked, and when he answered in the affirmative she told him enough of the story to bring him down to Fern Hollow by the next train.

Conspicuous among the wedding presents received by Mr. and Mrs Harry Blake were two valentines, almost alike in design and each bearing the same trite little couplet. Attached were the cards of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Blake.

"Those valentines," explained the bride to her dearest friend, "are proof to me that St. Valentine in truth keeps a watchful eye on his people. Almost identical, they crossed each other in transit and brought happiness to four people—and that's expecting a good deal from two valentines!"

WILL BE GIVEN GREAT POWER

Goethals Is Mitchel's Choice For Head of Gotham Police

BECAME FAMOUS AT PANAMA

Reluctant About Quitting Great Engineering Work Until Assured He Would Not Be Hampered In Organization of New York Department Under Certain Conditions

New York, Jan. 24.—Colonel George W. Goethals, chief engineer of the Panama canal, has decided to give up his position under the government and become police commissioner in New York, under certain conditions.

He has been Mayor Mitchel's choice for the place from the first, but has been reluctant about quitting the great engineering work that has made him famous the world over. At last, however, he has expressed his willingness to come here and to take control of the police department, provided he receives certain powers which he thinks necessary to a successful careying out of his work.

He is understood to want positive assurance that he will not be hampered by anyone in the organization of the department, and that he shall have absolute authority to make all appointments, to promote men he deems worthy, and to demote those he considers unfitted.

It is believed Mitchel can cause the necessary changes to be made and that Goethals will be appointed police commissioner. There is little doubt that if he comes to New York he will have greater power than any other police commissioner ever had.

Goethals' great executive ability has brought him many offers of high position. Several cities in this country have urged him to accept important administrative offices, and he is believed to be President Wilson's choice for governor of the canal zone.

Mitchel, who knew the capabilities of Goethals long before he became mayor, has waged a systematic campaign to get the army engineer as his police commissioner.

At first Goethals refused to take the position, although it is said that the mayor was ready from the start to meet the many conditions under which the canal builder said he might be induced to take charge of the force.

The visit of Mitchel and his wife to Panama soon after his election is now reported to have had for its chief end an attempt to persuade the colonel to enter his cabinet. At the time, Mitchel declared he was taking a trip to recuperate from the strenuous campaign.

President Surprised

Washington, Jan. 24.—News that Colonel Goethals was expected by Mayor Mitchel to become police commissioner of New York came as a distinct surprise to President Wilson.

It was understood from the White House that Goethals had been selected to be first governor of the canal zone, and that the Washington government had been relying on him to put into operation its plans for the first permanent government of the zone.

LIVED ALMOST IN POVERTY

Will of Recluse Howard Is Sustained by Superior Court Jury

Brockton, Mass., Jan. 24.—The will of the late Horace W. Howard, a recluse, contested by his sister, Mrs. Maria Howard, on the ground that he was of unsound mind, was sustained by a jury in the superior court. It disposes of $25,000, most of which is left to charity.

A considerable sum of money was also left to Mrs. Sarah Burns of this city, who Howard characterized, according to testimony in the case, as his "only friend."

Howard was of eccentric disposition. Despite his wealth he lived almost in poverty.

MEXICANS VACCINATED

Smallpox Breaks Out In Camp of Those Interned at Fort Bliss

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 24.—Several cases of smallpox were discovered among Mexicans interned with the federal soldiers and refugees from Ojinaga at Fort Bliss. All the Mexicans were ordered vaccinated.

Although the discovery of smallpox resulted in an exclusion of sightseers from the camp, the physicians said there was no danger of an epidemic. The patients were isolated.

Appendix Is Gone Now

New York, Jan. 24.—Two surgeons took from Clinton Van Vliet his apendix and $1800 three years ago. Taken ill again, Van Vliet went to a hospital and the "missing" appendix actually was cut out.

No General Mine Strike

Indianapolis, Jan. 24.—There will be no sympathetic walkout of United Mine Workers on account of the Colorado strike, according to the vote of the miners' convention.

BRIEFS

The cases of Laura E. McLaughlin and James W. McLaughlin of Quincy on the Bay State Street Railway are on trial in the Norfolk Superior court the former alleging personal injuries.

Rev. Richard E. Armstrong of Christ church and Rev. Frederick H. Steenstra of St. Chrysostom's church exchange at the Sunday morning service.

The annual meeting of St. Chrysostoms church will be held next Wednesday evening. Reports will be received and officers elected. The Womans Guild will serve refreshments.

A financial campaign is being carried on to lift all local indebtedness and to raise the church budget to an amount that will cover all expenses of the Atlantic Methodist church. The outlook is favorable for victory as 100 percent has been added to the membership since September.

The opposition to Bayfield road being cut up into building lots continues to grow, and it is understood that some of the councilmen from Ward Six intend that there shall be a public hearing before the city gives up any easement it may have on the street.

Jacob Dizer has his new hot house on Walker street already in use. Mr. Dizer recently celebrated his eightieth birthday. Few young men could work with him at carpentering or gardening. He is one of the most aggressive members of the Men's Club of Atlantic and the younger men are proud of his presence in their midst.

Word has been received from Frederick W. Carlson now in the Panama canal zone, expressing satisfaction with his position as civil engineer in the water works department of the city of Corozal. He is the son of Peter M. Carlson of 45 Curtis street. He receives the Quincy Patriot weekly.

The January meeting, which is also the annual of the Hospital Aid Association will be held Thursday afternoon, Jan. 29 at the home of Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann, Goffe street. It is hoped there will be a large attendance of members, also of any who many be interested in the Hospital and its work.

Joshua D. Rollins, one of the old time residents of Wollaston and almost one of the constituent members of the Baptist Church of which he became a member in 1873 died Wednesday at the Baptist Home, Brookline street, Cambridge where he and Mrs. Rollins have made their home for over fifteen years. The funeral was held Friday morning at 10 o'clock and was conducted by Rev. Joseph Walther of the Wollaston Baptist church. Burial at the Cambridge cemetery.

APPRECIATED BY ATHLETES

Fred Kingsbury Regrets Removal of Mr. Pfaffmann

Editor Daily Ledger:

"I think that Mayor Miller has treated Geo. E. Pfaffmann unfairly in not appointing him chairman of the Park Commissioners. Mr. Pfaffmann has spent a great deal of time and thought to give Quincy one of the best playground systems that can be had. The three playgrounds that are in the city and open during the summer months, are keeping over a thousand small children off the streets and Mr. Pfaffmann has been the main one in getting them in such good condition for the children.

"Mr. Pfaffmann has taken great interest in all the athletic sports of the city. He has helped the Grammar School Leagues to come up to any in the State and has by untiring effort given to Quincy the best city owned track in the State. He has tried for several years to get a good track in place of the old one, and at last succeeded. All the athletes are well pleased with the track, and say it is the best in the State. All the members of last year's High School track team thank Mr. Pfaffmann for the part he took in getting such a good track.

"By having such a track we easily turned out the best team that ever represented the school.

"Mr. Pfaffmann has made Merrymount Park into one of the best parks around Boston and deserved to be reappointed to the Chairmanship again.

Fred Kingsbury,
Captain of last year's High School Track Team.

THE VILLAGE SAGE.

Old Archibald Todd was the village sage.
You couldn't fool him on a woman's age.
There wasn't a thing in the whole broad land
That Archibald didn't understand.
And no man above or below the sod
Ever knew so much as Archibald Todd.

There wasn't a prize fight e'er pulled off
That wasn't a cinch for this old toff.
He'd pick out a winner every time
In an offhand way that was quite sublime.
The only thing that would spoil his fun
Was the fact that the wrong man always won.

The weather was ever his strong forte:
He always "scooped" Uncle Sam's report.
When his left hind leg would acquire a pain
He would prophesy a good two days' rain.
By the words of wisdom from Archie's mouth
The whole town knew there was to be a drouth.

Old Archibald lived long in the land
And ruled the country with tireless hand.
The old folks all listened to his advice—
For it was really beyond all price.
For they were sure when advice he'd spring
They could safely bank on the opposite thing.
—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

—It is evident that the new chief of police of Indianapolis has something to learn. Upon assuming the duties of his office he banished reporters from the police station and gave orders that they should not be permitted to accompany the police on emergency runs. He says that he is not going to suppress news but that he is going to decide what shall be given out. He also announces that bulletins will be posted giving information in all cases a day or two after they have happened, and forbids officers talking with reporters about police news.—Taunton Herald.

PATRIOTIC SOCIETIES

Attend the Funeral of Mrs. Carrie L. P. Couchier

The funeral of Mrs. Carrie L. P. Couchier held Friday afternoon at 2.30 from the Wollaston Unitarian church was largely attended and many were the floral tributes.

The services were conducted by Rev. Carl G. Horst, pastor of the church. Mrs. Chandler W. Smith presided at the organ and Mrs. Frank A. Page sang "Abide with me" and "Still still with thee."

Many patriotic societies, in which the deceased was greatly interested in were represented at the exercises. The organizations met in the vestry and marched into the church, led by the standard bearers of the Relief Corps, which participated in the services.

The societies represented were: Woman's Relief Corps, No. 9, of Charlestown; Veteran Firemen's Auxiliary of Charlestown; Old South Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution; Massachusetts State Society, U. S. Daughters of 1812; Post 149 of Charlestown, represented by its commander Mr. Crogan; Ladies Auxiliary of the General Joseph Hooker Commandery, No. 9, U. V. A.

Among other floral offerings were beautiful pieces from the Old Bay State S. of T., the Quincy Womans club, the Unitarian Ladies Aid Alliance and Mrs. Thomas A. Edison.

The interment was in the family lot at Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

Mrs. Couchier died Tuesday morning at the Taunton State Hospital where she was committed on December 23. Her confinement brought forth a storm of public sentiment and legal steps were being taken to secure her release when the end came.

Her nearest relative is a niece, Mrs. Carrie Frances Harvey of Waukene, California. Other relatives are two cousins Mrs. Lizzie Billings of Roxbury and J. Q. A. Field of Quincy who was trustee of the property of the deceased.

For many years Mrs. Couchier lived with her brother Quincy A. Torrey on Farrington street, Wollaston.

In December the house was visited by a fire which resulted in the death of her brother. Mrs. Couchier was then taken under observation and upon medical advice placed in the State Hospital at Taunton.

This move aroused vigorous protests from her friends in Wollaston and the patriotic societies of which she was a member.

A legal guardian had been appointed in the Quincy Court and another week would probably have seen her release.

Since her confinement at Taunton Mrs. Couchier failed rapidly. An autopsy showed death due to pneumonia, with which one lung was effected, and contributing causes of old age.

Always Asking Questions.

"How do you like your teacher, dear?" little Mary was asked after her first day at school.

"I like her real well," said Mary "But I don't think she knows much for she just keeps asking me questions all the time."—Philadelphia Ledger.

MAYOR MILLER

that the immediate district surrounding the Washington school had grown as much as it ever would, and that the time was not far distant when this section would become more of a business centre especially when improvements were made to Town river.

What was needed, and what would soon have to be done, was to erect a new school building in the Bigelow Park district, and he believed that instead of expending $38,000 for an addition to the Washington school that land should be immediately secured in the Bigelow Park district for a school building.

Speaking of his appointments, the Mayor said that he had received many compliments on his selections, and that where he received one criticism he had received ten congratulating him on his selections.

Speaking of his appointees, he said that there would be quite a temperance party at City Hall this year for several of those whom he had named never tasted liquor in any form, and several of them did not smoke.

Speaking of the new Commissioner, he said that one man (who was in favor of another gentleman) had stated that the reason he had appointed Mr. Brown was because a certain Councilman had a string about his neck. This the Mayor denied. He said that the Councilman in question had not broached the subject to him, and that when he sent for Mr. Brown to come and see him, that the Councilman had refused to go with him to introduce the two. The reason that he had selected Mr. Brown was that he had looked up the matter of getting a Commissioner and had found that Mr. Brown was an ideal man for the position and that he had sent for him to come and see him,

It is quite well known that when the Mayor gave his appointments to the newspaper men last Saturday morning that some one leaked, and that before noon it was quite well understood what the appointments were to be. No conscientious newspaper man would leak on a matter that had been given him in confidence, and the fact that this matter did leak was a reflection on all the reporters. This morning the Mayor said that he had received direct information as to just who had done the leaking. While not mentioning any names it can be said that the leak did not come from anyone connected with the Daily Ledger office.

MRS. MARY A. MULLANE.

Mrs. Mary A. Mullane who died Thursday was buried this morning in Malden. Her funeral was held from her home at 72 Main street and was well attended. A high mass of requiem was celebrated at St. Johns church by Rev. Fr. John J. Coan. The Gregorian chant by the regular choir was sung under the direction of John Mahon, organist.

Scallops Are Fine Now.

Fried scallops are usually the only choice on the average bill of fare, notwithstanding the fact that there are many delightful ways of preparing these little shellfish. The following may reveal some of their possibilities to the housewife who is seeking new ways.

To one pint of scallops (washed and drained) use two tablespoonfuls of butter, two tablespoonfuls of flour, one beaten egg, one pint of hot milk, pepper and salt to taste. Melt the butter in a saucepan, take from the fire and add flour, stir until smooth and return to the stove and cook until it bubbles, then add the hot milk, salt and pepper and egg and let the mixture cook fifteen minutes. Then add the scallops and cook fifteen minutes longer. Serve on buttered toast and garnish the dish with watercress. This is an excellent way to cook scallops, as it brings out their delicate flavor.

Another appetizing way to cook scallops is as follows: Wash and drain the scallops, make a smooth, rich cream sauce flavored with pepper, salt and onion juice. Let the sauce cook for ten or fifteen minutes, otherwise it will taste pasty, then add the scallops and cook slowly for ten minutes. While this is cooking, prepare some peppers (as many as required) by washing, remove the stems, cutting a piece from the top and taking out the seeds. Stand the peppers in a baking pan and fill them with the creamed scallops, sprinkle with breadcrumbs and bake until the crumbs are brown. Serve at once.

To Peel Oranges.

There is for sale a little knife that costs 13 cents. It is not really a knife, but it is a small piece of metal with a hook on one end that hooks under the orange skin and tears it open and pulls it from the orange. It is a great convenience, for it skins the orange without piercing the transparent inner skin that holds the pulp and juice in shape.

MR. GANZEL IS GRATEFUL

Thanks His Friends Through the Press for Help

The fund for Charles Ganzel now amounts to $1136.01. Those who have contributed to the fund and all those who are interested in the worthy cause will find the following letter from the former Boston National League base ball player of interest:

"Quite a few years ago I was asked this question: 'If you had your choice of money or friends, which would you take?' I answered the question without any hesitation: 'I would prefer the friends.' Today I am more convinced than ever I made no mistake in my decision, for friends certainly have come to my help in time of my trouble and have made it possible for me to remain a while longer with my loved ones; and, who knows, it may be God's wish that I may get well.

"I wish it were possible for me to thank everyone by a letter or in person for their help. This I cannot do. It is hard for me to talk and when I write a little I am 'all in.' So I take this opportunity of the kind offers of the press, to thank each and every one of those who have sent me words of encouragement, as well as those who so freely gave to the fund. Later on, if it is God's wish, I will tell the public what Mrs. Ganzel and I have planned to do with the money for future protection.

"In closing, let me especially thank the newspaper writers and the press of Boston and Quincy and the committee who have worked so hard to make it a success. Yours very sincerely,

"Charles W. Ganzel."

CHASE FOR RABBIT.

Officer Avery pleased young America by capturing the prize rabbit of Sammie Drew of South Central avenue Friday night. The capture was effected after a long chase through the snow in streets of the neighborhood. Early in the morning Pete (the animal's working name) burrowed under the netting and disappeared. No trace of him was found until after nine o'clock, when he popped across the path of Officer Avery. An attempt to catch him was unsuccessful and he was not the toils of the law until half an hour after. Sammie and his friends had appealed to the officer to watch for the rabbit and have given him a vote of thanks.

STREET RAILWAY BALL.

There was a good delegation from the Quincy division of the Street Railway employees union at the annual concert and ball of the Brockton division at Brockton last evening. The grand march was led by General Superintendent John Conway with his daughter Miss Edna W. Conway of Quincy.

Lawrence J. Barrie, 139 Whitwell street, returned Friday from a three weeks' visit to his sister, Mrs. William Chute, New York, N. Y.

ON DEFAULT WARRANT.

August 5, 1912, Inspector Goodhue arrested Luigi Faiella on a complaint charging him with violation of the liquor law. He was brought into court and was fined $50 and given until Sept. 14 to pay his fine. Before that time however Luigi took French leave and the next heard of him was that he had gone to Italy.

He returned to Quincy from his visit to his native home the first of the week, evidently thinking his skipping had been forgotten.

Inspector Goodhue spotted him, however, and brought him into court this morning on a default warrant when he was fined $50 and the costs of the complaint and default warrant proceedings.

—Governor Fielder of New Jersey, in his inaugural, promised to follow in Wilson's footsteps, but his hopes to go the whole route are slim; Quincy, Mass., being the only town we can recall, that ever furnished more than one President.—Boston Transcript.

Hancock Street Leading Beale and Beach Streets

The Wollaston ward has more streets than any other ward of the city with property assessed over $100,000. Perhaps Hancock street would not be picked as the leader but it is a long street and in a class by itself with property valued at $354,300.

Beale and Beach, the one a continuation of the other, are having a close contest for second place. The others with over $200,00 worth of property are Grand View avenue, Linden street and Highland avenue.

Then comes South Central avenue, Elm avenue, Newport avenue, Safford street, Winthrop avenue, Brook road, Belmont street, Prospect avenue, Fayette street, Farrington street, Arlington street, Lincoln avenue, Marlboro street, West Elm avenue, Adams street, Taylor street, Bromfield street and North Central avenue.

Several other streets have nearly $100,000 worth of property as will be seen by the complete list below. On some streets the land is worth more than the buildings.

Battleship Rivadavia Sails Away

Eleven Minutes Passing Draw

The battleship Rivadavia, the greatest fighting ship in the world, left the Fore River shipyard this morning for the worlds greatest passenger pier, the Commonwealth docks at Boston where she will be coaled for the remainder of her trial trips.

The boat left the yard in command of Capt. Joseph Kemp of the Boston Tow Boat Co., and passed through the bridge in exactly eleven minutes. It was his intention to pass through on or before 10.15 but it was 10.49 before her bow entered the draw.

In making the passage the bottom of the boat scraped, and two out of eight submarine cables carrying electric currents were strained and immediately burned out. An overhead cable also burned out and the supply furnishing the current used in closing and opening the draw was broken and the bridge was closed by hand.

It is not thought that the bottom was damaged in any way because there was nothing solid which she could scrape on. Four tugs, the Mercury, Pallas, Saturn and Neptune assisted the ship from the yard, through the draw and down the tortuous channel. The right angle turn was made at Power Point without difficulty.

It was about 10.30 that the whistles aboard signaled for the tugs to snake her from the fitting out dock and turn her bow toward the bridge. The passage quickly followed.

The delay in the closing of the bridge caused a delay in the trolley service between Quincy and East Weymouth and many teams and autos were held up from 10.40, the time the bridge opened, until after 11.20 when it closed.

With the departure of the Rivadavia from the yard nearly 300 men were laid off for several days.

The ship will dock at the Commonwealth pier this afternoon and coaling will commence immediately. About 1,000 tons of choice coal will be placed in the bunkers for the trials which include runs of eight hours at 22 1-2 knots, 30 hours at 20 knots and 30 hours at 15 knots. Gun tests will also be held.

Aboard the boat this morning were the members of the Argentine Commission, representing their government. The company was represented by Admiral Bowles, General Manager H. Gerrish Smith; John Lovell, chief engineer; James F. Page, chief machinist and F. O. Wellington. Among others on board was Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson of the First Unitarian church.

TO DELIVER SUBMARINE.

The K submarine boats which are under construction at the Fore River shipyard will be reduced by one Wednesday with the delivery to the government at the Charlestown Navy Yard of K 2. The submarine will be taken over by a government crew which has been here several weeks awaiting the completion of minor adjustments.

Another submarine, K 1, which is practically completed will be ready for delivery in about one week. Work is being done on the other K boats under construction

LARCENY OF MANURE

Cheeky Fellow from Braintree Is Arrested

Many complaints have been received by the police of parties from Braintree stealing manure from stables in the vicinity of West Quincy. The habit of these fellows is to drive up to a stable in the day, after the men folks have gone away and load up their team. All remonstrance on the part of the women folks at home is of little avail, for the driver of the team claims not to understand English.

This morning a young man drove up to the stable of Frederick H. Bishop at 182 Summit avenue and proceeded to load up his team. Mrs. Bishop tried to drive him away, but was unsuccessful, for the fellow kept on. From there he started toward West Quincy and seeing a pile of manure at another barn started in to throw that on his team when he was stopped by one of the Metropolitan Park officers and made to unload. He was also made to return the load taken from the Bishop residence.

In the meantime Capt. McKay, who had been notified by telephone was on his way to West Quincy, and when he arrived he placed the young man under arrest. The fellow gave his name as Edmando Jacobacci of Braintree and said that he had been told by his boss to get the manure. He was brought to court and arraigned for larceny and the case continued until Wednesday.

TRIALS OF TANK STEAMER

Amolco Makes Speed in Excess of Contract

The Amolco the biggest tank steamer afloat left the Fore River shipyard Sunday for her trials in Massachusetts bay after which she was delivered to the American Molasses Co., at South Boston. An effort was made to hold the trials on Saturday but the crew were unable to complete the preparations.

In command of Capt. John Thompson she went through the draw and out into the waters of Boston harbor without incidents. Captain Thompson was formerly in command of the Nelson. When transferred to the Amolco his entire crew was shipped with him, an unusual thing in shipping circles.

The course of the trial trips was out to Boston light and back. The contract speed of nine knots was exceeded easily, an average of over 10 being maintained. On the run down the engines turned up 10 knots against an incoming tide and on the return they reached 11 knots, running with the tide.

QUINCY MERCHANT DIES IN TEXAS

John A. Sutherland of 172 Whitwell street who went to Texas some weeks ago died in San Antonio on Saturday. Mrs. Sutherland was with him and will accompany the body to Quincy. He was 40 years of age and leaves five children who are with Quincy friends. For ten years he was in the oil business, and was a prominent member of the Swedish Congregational church. Funeral services will be held in Quincy on Thursday or Friday.

The mild weather and hard rain Saturday afternoon and evening played havoc with what snow and ice covered the streets and sidewalks so that on Sunday morning the ground was bare.

NEW CITY SOLICITOR ASSUMES DUTIES

Resignation of John W. McAnarney, at His Request, Accepted by Mayor Miller

Rumors That Axe Might Fall Today Not Verified

The principal news from the Mayor's office this morning was the receipt and acceptance of the resignation of John W. McAnarney as City Solicitor. Mr. McAnarney was obliged to leave this morning for the west where he has an important court case, and as he would be absent all of the week he tendered his resignation in a letter to the Mayor this morning.

The resignation was accepted and the Mayor immediately appointed Walter S. Pinkham as City Solicitor to fill out the unexpired term of Mr. McAnarney. Mr. Pinkham visited City Hall this morning and qualified and immediately entered upon the duties of the office. Mr. McAnarney's term would have expired on February 1, on which date the new appointee will take office.

There were several rumors about City Hall this morning that there was something doing, but when asked if the axe had again dropped the Mayor shook his head and said nothing doing today.

There was a rumor about the corridors this morning that something was likely to drop at any time, but just what it was no one seemed to know, although it is thought that the coming week will see the matter of Chief of Police Burrell take definite shape.

The Mayor in a letter sent to Chief Burrell soon after inauguration asked for Chief Burrell's resignation, but it has not been forthcoming, and it is very doubtful if the Chief does resign. A letter sent the same day also asked for the resignation of Michael E. Shea, foreman of the Street department, but that official has not handed in his resignation, and the latest report is that he does not intend to.

Then there is the matter of the other two members on the Board of Assessors, whom rumor has it the Mayor desires to remove that he may appoint someone that is in sympathy with his ideas. Nothing however as far as known has been done in this line.

The Mayor said in a joking manner this morning that it looked as though the reporters were getting about as much news outside of the office door as they were from him. While this is true in a sense there is this difference, the news received outside is purely rumor and is published as such, while that received from the office is authentic news.

Perry Green, who is to assume the office of Overser of the Poor, was at the Hall this morning and visited the office of the Overseer of the Poor in the basement and met Overseer Elcock, who initiated him into some of the duties of the office. Mr. Elcock later accompanyed the new Overseer to the Quincy Home for an inspection and visit. One thing that is bound to happen in this office is that a new chair will have to be provided for the new Overseer, for the present chair is several sizes too small for the new man.

Tonight is an off night with the City Council and there will be no meeting of that body. The next regular meeting will be held a week from tonight and it is probable that the remainder of Mayor Miller's appointments will be announced at that time.

FUNERAL OF CHARLES CRANE

The funeral of Charles Crane, one of Quincy's old time business men, was held Saturday afternoon from Congregational church and was largely attended, those present including a large delegation from Maple lodge, Knights and Ladies of Honor, with which he had been affiliated for many years. The services were conducted by Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott, the pastor of the church assisted by Rev. Edward Norton, pastor emeritus, and a neighbor of Mr. Crane, who gave the eulogy. Following the regular service, the burial service of the Knights and Ladies of Honor was held by the officers of the lodge. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery. There were many beautiful floral tributes.

PROF. O. A. MORTON COMING.

The Civic committee of the Quincy Woman's club has secured as a speaker for Tuesday afternoon, Prof. O. A. Morton of the Massachusetts Agricultural College. He speaks upon gardening. The committee had hoped to have him come to Quincy but did not receive word until Saturday that he would positively be here. The other speakers engaged for that afternoon are glad to shorten their time and give an opportunity to hear Prof. Morton.

NOTICE

Again we ask those sending news or other matter by mail to direct it to the company or newspaper rather than to individual members of the company or employees. If addressed to individuals and they were ill or not at the office, it might be several days in reaching its proper destination and if news matter would be too late for use.

Good for the express companies, which now begin to advertise in the newspapers and show some enterprise! Formerly the profanity of their patrons gave them all the advertising they wanted.

Gen. Rosalie Jones and her band of Suffragettes are again walking from New York to Albany, but one suspects that the old man has to get out the machine when they want to go to church.

THE SMALL ADVERTISER.

Smaller retail merchants sometimes become discouraged by the competition in newspaper space of larger stores. They imagine that people do not read the smaller notices.

Any newspaper man can give incidents out of his personal experience showing the contrary. A man with a very small space indeed often tells his story in such a pertinent, business-like conversational way, that readers turn to his little ads just as a financial operator turns to the stock market.

It does not take a gift for saying smart and sharp things to make this kind of impression. It is simply the idea of writing as you talk, saying the things in advertising that you would say to a customer if you had him before the counter.

A merchant who desires to try advertising in a small way should have his notice put somewhere near the same place right along. He should not try to say too much in that space. Just a few words each time, about some one particular thing, is most effective.

THE AUTOMOBILE SHOWS.

The big motor-car shows, held about this time in many cities, strike the passing observer as the final word in decoration, illumination, and display of mechanical achievement. Yet many of the manufacturers of cars are far from cheerful about them. At one big recent show, the gate receipts paid only 40 per cent of the cost. The industry stood the rest.

One reason commonly assigned among manufacturers for holding these exhibitions, is that they are educational. They display to the public the ease, beauty, and pleasure of motoring. They show the economy of the motor truck in business. Yet there is a question if these shows are not an artificial stimulus, applied to a business that already tends too far toward personal extravagance.

Some of these shows have been an Aladdin's palace of plate glass mirrors, painted scenery, and electric fairyland. This fascinating luxury draws in many people who can not afford an expensive machine, or ought not to buy one of any kind.

The extravagant display of wealth represented in these mechanically perfect cars, in the gorgeous decorations, creates an atmosphere of free expenditure. The most parsimonious person feels some loosening of his purse strings. The seed of desire is planted. By the next summer he is behind a steering wheel, while his creditors walk.

Automobiles are a wonderful time saver, and it is for the interest of the public to have them produced as cheaply as possible. If automobile shows, as some manufacturers say, not merely cost high in actual time and money, but disorganize the sales forces of their plants for weeks and months, they are a tax on the industry which the buyer finally pays.

These costly methods of marketing a product suggest that motor cars will be cheaper still in a few years.

SEIZURE OF BANK ACCOUNTS

Expected to Throw Light on Empire State Contracts

SIX INSTITUTIONS HOLD OUT

Four In New Jersey and Two In Pennsylvania Refuse to Divulge to District Attorney Information Regarding Deposits by Murphy and Gaffney —Politicians Deeply Interested

New York, Jan. 26.—While Charles F. Murphy remained Sunday at his country home at Good Ground, L. I., and made no statement regarding the seizure by District Attorney Whitman of his bank accounts, together with those of his close associate, James E. Gaffney, Whitman's experts submitted to the district attorney reports of the accounts, and Whitman expressed considerable satisfaction when he compared the bank entries with the dates of the letting of aqueduct, highway and canal contracts.

However, the district attorney makes no secret over his disappointment at being unable to obtain from four banks in nearby New Jersey cities and two in Pennsylvania information regarding deposits in them. There is no way to compel the submission of this information. Could he obtain it he would be in a better position to prosecute a charge of a widespread conspiracy to loot the state treasury through the official juggling of the contracts of those employed to build and repair the state highways, the barge canal and the New York city Catskill water supply.

Friends of the Tammany leader, however, profess not to be at all dismayed by the seizure of Murphy's bank accounts. They say he is prepared to make any explanation that Whitman may demand as a result of a study of the entries. It is known, however, that so far the examination of Murphy's bank accounts has not revealed any information regarding the letting of the contracts.

Whenever the investigators find any records of large deposits following the awards of contracts the contractors will be summoned before the grand jury and in the John Doe investigation.

Assistant District Attorney Edwards, who has charge of the investigation of the aqueduct contracts, grilled several witnesses to ascertain the relations between James G. Shaw and James E. Gaffney. Shaw is the man who testified before the grand jury that he had brought from Pittsburg for Patterson Brothers a package containing $41,250, but could not tell to whom he had handed the money.

The position of Senator O'Gorman as a witness in the John Doe inquiry is regarded as of the greatest interest, and while the senator knows that he will by his testimony reveal a condition that will be damaging to the Democratic chieftains, it is known he feels that his duty as a citizen compels him to reveal everything he knows. He will also have to contradict his own client, James C. Stewart, because he has told Whitman that Stewart told him the name of the man who demanded a $150,000 contribution from him from state canal contracts, while Stewart on the stand denied flatly he knew who the man was.

When Mr. Sulzer again resumes the stand he will be questioned at length regarding some of the communications he submitted, which Sulzer believes will be the basis for obtaining indictments against several persons who are accused of having brought about his impeachment. One letter flatly accuses several senators with having been paid $50,000 obtained from a railroad corporation to vote for his impeachment.

PURE BOOZE FOR HUB

Excise Commission Vigorously at Work Testing Liquors

Boston, Jan. 26.—"Down with impure liquor" is the slogan which has been adopted by the Boston board of excise commissioners, and as evidence that this expression is not to be taken in the usual jocular manner, the board, through its agents, has been quietly but vigorously rounding up samples of liquors for the purpose of chemical analysis.

Excise Commissioner Fowler denies that these tests have as yet revealed anything of a startling nature. He said, however, that the work practically had just begun and that there were possibilities of remarkable developments.

FISHERMEN'S LUCK

Tales of Misfortune Are Told by Two Gloucester Skippers

St. Pierre, Miq., Jan. 26.—Hard luck stories were told by the skippers of two storm-battered Gloucester schooners, the Monitor and Margaret, which staggered into this port. Although the Margaret was out of Gloucester three weeks and the Monitor six weeks neither vessel made a catch.

Both lost their dories, their sails were torn and rigging damaged. The Monitor also lost her cable. One of her crew was sent ashore with a broken leg. The Monitor was able to make only one set, which was a failure.

THE OLD STAGE HERO.

He of the Mid-Victorian Age Has Gone From Us Forever.

The stage hero of the mid-Victorian age wept on all the available articles of furniture when his manly heart was wrung. He was certain to observe a noble silence at exactly the wrong time, enabling the gay and glittering gentleman who was more than suspected of being an atheist to get the girl. He was cross once in awhile, when he was keeping another's secret at the expense of his own character and somebody took him at his word.

But oh, how dependable he was! How sure to meet a train or make an excellent omelet if the fragile heroine had mislaid the cookbook! How strong he was and how fond of carrying people upstairs. How well he brought up his first wife's children if he was a widower, or the heroine if he was her guardian!

He will not come again—not he nor such as he. He has passed, always with a certain dignity, his heroine's drooping curls brushing his protecting arm, into the country of last year's snow, and year before last's presidential candidate, and all forgotten, irrecoverable things. And, as his favorite author, the Swan of Avon, said, "We shall not gaze upon his like again."—Atlantic.

WHICH WOULD YOU CHOOSE?

All the Land In Great Britain or Calico to Cover It?

If—and don't forget the "if"—you were offered as a present either all the land in the United Kingdom or a piece of cheap, common calico of the same area, which would you choose?

Probably, without a moment's hesitation, you would say, "The land" and would imagine that you had got very much the better of the bargain. From one point of view, of course, this would be so, for land lasts longer than does calico. On the other hand, however, you would be choosing very much the cheaper of the two offered gifts.

The land of the United Kingdom, including town areas, is estimated to be worth £2,500,000,000. A piece of cheap calico of the same size as the United Kingdom would cost more than £9,000,000,000.

Difficult to believe, isn't it? Still, the facts cannot be denied. Average agricultural land may be reckoned as being worth £20 an acre; building land, say, twenty-five miles from Charing Cross, £100 an acre; ten miles from Charing Cross, £500 an acre. Now, a common calico costs £121 an acre, a good calico £200, while a good quality linoleum costs £750 and an ordinary Turkey carpet £3,600 an acre.—London Answers.

The Spy In the Reading Room.

An interesting story reaches me, says a London correspondent, of an agent of the Russian imperial police having been stationed in the reading room of the British museum for the purpose of noting the arrival of revolutionaries in England. The type of man who is driven out of Russia is generally the intellectual, and the reading room is probably the first place he seeks out after his arrival in London. My informant tells me that the spy used until recently to sit at a desk near the door, whence he could observe everybody that entered and used to work his way steadily through the monumental catalogue of the museum, taking out books which he opened, but did not read, in alphabetical order.

Welcomes a Whistle.

"It may be ag'in th' statoots," said "Big Barney" O'Toole as he lolled in the assembly room of a police station, "but whin I'm poundin' th' pavement after midnight there's nothin' I like better to hear out 'f a la-ad than a good healthy whistle. A la-ad what's pipin' a tune about his love or th' Blue Ridge mount'ns o' Virginia is seldom up t' anny divilthry. Whin a crook has somethin' on his mind he ain't advertisin' himself so ye can loosen yer grip on th' locust. When ye hears th' la-ad wit' th' whistle he's yer fri'nd."—New York Tribune.

She Would Get Even.

Tired out with an afternoon's shopping, the mother sat back in her easy chair to recite in detail the afternoon's experiences to a sympathetic home circle.

"And to cap it all I met that horrid Annie Green, and she was very impudent to me as usual," she wailed.

"The mean thing," sympathetically snapped out six-year-old Ella. "Why didn't you impudent her right back?"—New York Sun.

No One to Lean On.

"What's the matter, Tommy?"

"Oh, I'm tired of school. I'd like to go to bed for a week."

"Why, how's that?"

"Well, you see, I'm in a very awkward position. I was next to the boy at the bottom of the class—and he's left.—Manchester Guardian.

He Forged.

Trotter—When young Biffkins left college a few years ago, he declared he was going to forge his way to the front. Did he make good? Homer—As a forger—yes. He's now occupying a front row cell in the penitentiary.—Chicago News.

Life's Changes.

Life is full of changes. One day we have an office cat and no catnip, and the next day we have plenty of catnip and no cat.—Toledo Blade.

LOSES A PROPELLER

Cruiser Tacoma Puts Into Newport When Accident Is Discovered

Newport, R. I., Jan. 26.—The United States cruiser Tacoma put in here with her starboard propeller gone. She was on her way from Vera Cruz, Mex., to the Portsmouth, N. H., navy yard, where she is to be repaired.

While off Nantucket the officer on deck found that something was wrong with her steering gear and an investigation showed the propeller was missing. On account of the high winds and the rough sea it was not deemed safe to continue the journey and the cruiser was headed for here.

STANDS BY CANAL WORK UNTIL 1916

Goethals Cannot Accept New York City Commissionership

New York, Jan. 26.—Colonel George W. Goethals will not become police commissioner of New York until the canal is completed.

While Mayor Mitchel was reiterating in this city that he expected Goethals to be the next commissioner within a few months, Goethals stated in Panama that he could not be induced to leave his canal work until it was completed. That will not be, it is estimated, until 1916.

Told that Mitchel had virtually announced his appointment as police commissioner, Goethals said:

"I will have to refuse to accept if the mayor has announced my appointment. I adhere to my previous statement that I will not accept the police commissionership of New York or any other post until the Panama canal is finished."

A GREAT MILKER

Sophie XIX. of Lowell Sets New World's Record For Jersey Cows

Lowell, Mass., Jan. 26.—Sophie XIX., a cow owned here, has broken the world's milk production record for Jerseys for one year and for five years, according to an official announcement from the American Jersey Cattle club.

The test just completed gives a yield for the year of 17,557 pounds, 12 ounces of milk, equivalent to 1175 pounds, 7 ounces of butter. The five years' yield amounted to 64,253 pounds, 2 ounces, equivalent to 4428 pounds, 14 ounces of butter.

KILLED BY HAIR TONIC

Two Convicts Drink Poisonous Mixture as Substitute For Alcohol

Philadelphia, Jan. 26.—Hair tonic which, according to prison officials, they drank to satisfy a craving for alcohol, caused the death last night of Charles Harris and Charles Reitz, each 24 years old and serving sentences in the eastern penitentiary for burglary.

The men are said to have obtained the liquid from one of the prison barbers on the plea that they wished to "fix up" for some visitors.

A TWELVE-STORY JUMP

Wife of Prominent New York Drug Importer Takes Her Own Life

New York, Jan. 26.—Mrs. Alice Amend, wife of Robert F. Amend, of a prominent drug importing firm of this city, was instantly killed last night in a plunge from a twelfth-floor window of a fashionable West Side apartment house.

According to the police reports, Mrs. Amend jumped after a woman companion had vainly struggled to prevent her from ending her life.

Says Dogs Carry Disease

Topeka, Kan., Jan. 26.—W. A. S. Bird, speaking to the Kansas Improved Stock Breeders' association, advocated the extermination of 90 percent of the dogs of Kansas and all the crows and pigeons, charging they were carriers of disease.

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY

Former Residents Celebrate at North Weymouth

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henry Chubbuck of North Weymouth, former residents of Quincy Point, observed their golden wedding on Saturday, entertaining from 8 until 11 at their residence on Curtis street.

Mr. and Mrs. Chubbuck were assisted in receiving by their daughter and sons-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Chester H. Stoddard of North Weymouth, Dr. and Mrs. George B. Hunt of Pittsfield, Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Maybury of Ashmont, Mr. and Mrs. George O. Crawford of South Weymouth, and their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Chubbuck, Jr., of East Weymouth. The ushers were Arthur Russell Wolfe, Howard Chubbuck Maybury and Stuart Francis Maybury, grandsons of Mr. and Mrs. Chubbuck.

Music was furnished by Miss Hazel F. Clark, violin; John H. Tower, viola, and Miss Ethel F. Raymond, piano.

Mr. Chubbuck was born in Quincy Point, July 13, 1839. He became a ship carpenter on a merchant vessel sailing out of Boston to New Zealand Australia and India. When the Hancock Light Guards of Quincy were waiting for a train for Boston Capt. Curtis found the ranks were not full and called for volunteers. Young Chubbuck responded and joined the company, but while marching through the streets of Boston, was "discovered" by the captain of the merchant vessel on which he had previously sailed, and was ordered to give his gun to the next man in the ranks and remain at home. Later, as ship's carpenter, he sailed all over the world and was finally wrecked in the Rangoon River, India.

In 1866 Mr. Chubbuck came back to North Weymouth and, as a member of the firm of Brown & Chubbuck, began building houses. After four years the business was carried on alone by Mr. Chubbuck, and he has built more than 70 structures, including the Third Universalist church and the Bay Side hotel.

Mrs. Chubbuck was born in Dedham July 4, 1842 and has lived in Dedham, Neponset, Quincy Point and North Weymouth. Both are charter members of Monatiquot Colony, Pilgrim Fathers and connected with the Third Universalist church.

ATTENTION MOTHERS

If You Have or Know of a Delicate Child Read This Letter.

"My little daughter Louise, age 9 years, has always been delicate, anaemic, had no appetite and seemed listless, and we could not seem to find anything that would help her, until we were advised to give her Vinol. She started taking it six week ago and inside of two weeks she showed a marked improvement both in appetite, vim and looks. Being so well pleased with the results, I continued giving it to her, and words fail to express my gratitude, and faith in Vinol both as a blood maker and body builder. As my child was an anaemic for so long makes the reason all the stronger for me to recommend it to others in similar conditions." Geo. E. Munro, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Vinol restores health and strength in conditions like this because in a natural manner it increases the appetite, tones up the digestive organs, enriches the blood and strengthens every organ of the body.

Every bottle of Vinol is guaranteed to give satisfaction or money refunded. Edward J. Murphy, Druggist, Quincy, Mass.

TRAGDY AT FAMILY PARTY

Man Who Shot Cousin by Mistake Killed by Victim's Husband

Revere, Mass., Jan. 26.—A cheerful Sunday family party was turned in a few minutes into a tragedy last evening, when Rocco Bianco, struggling in half-drunken sport with two women over the possession of a shotgun, discharged the weapon into the body of his cousin, Mrs. Filomena Frusciello, who was looking on.

Then, according to the police, the stupefied Bianco sat still, awaiting the vengeance which John Frusciello, maddened by the sight of his wife's agony, was not long in wreaking on him.

The husband, they say, went up stairs, secured a weapon, came down again and shot Bianco through the forehead, inflicting a mortal wound.

Then he accompanied his wife in an ambulance to a hospital, where doctors found that the needless shooting has cost the life of Mrs. Frusciello's unborn child.

Frusciello was locked up, charged with murder. Bianco died at the hospital. The doctors say that Mrs. Frusciello, despite the terrible nature of her injuries, has a chance to recover.

LYNN POLICEMAN QUITS

McCray Pleads Guilty to Being Present at a Poker Game

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 26.—The resignation of Fred C. McGray, the patrolman who was accused and acquitted of having stolen $1000 from Nathan Mendlow of Lynn during a poker game, in which he, Mendlow and William S. Sargent took part, was offered to Mayor Newhall and was accepted.

McGray had a private hearing at which he was charged with being present at a poker game in violation of the regulations of the police department. He pleaded guilty. His plea of guilty was made through his attorney and was at once followed by his resignation.

AMERICANS RELIGIOUS.

The American people are far more religious than they think, know or will admit. I have been told that I make too wide claims for religion, that I give it too much credit. Its recent claims in the United States have been too narrow; it has had too little credit. Is not the very essence of democracy the spirit of good will? No democracy has ever been or ever can be built on force. You cannot compel me to a brotherhood with you. All religion is not of the church. The organization of all social and religious altruistic work is really religious. Let me repeat that there may be very good religion outside of the church, just as there may be a very good democracy outside of political parties. —Dr. Hugh Black, Union Theological Seminary.

ALASKA RAILROAD BILL IS PASSED

Senate Approves Measure For Government Owned System

Washington, Jan. 26.—The bill for a government railroad in Alaska, of an estimated length of 1000 miles, was passed in the senate by a vote of 46 to 16.

Fifteen Republicans and one Progressive voted for the bill. Senators Smith and Bacon of Georgia and Williams of Mississippi were the only Democrats to vote against it. The amendment for a steamship line to operate in conjunction with the proposed railroad was rejected, 51 to 11.

An amendment making the federal employes' liability law applicable to the government as a railroad operator was adopted without dissent.

HOME RULE THIS YEAR

Redmond Sees No Prospect of Purchasing Good Will of Ulster

Waterford, Ire., Jan. 26.—"Every sane man knows that, bar accidents, the home rule bill will be the law of the land this year," said John E. Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalists, speaking before an immense gathering here.

"If any change is made in the home rule bill," said Redmond, "it will only be to buy the good will of our opponents. But I say frankly that I see no prospect of their good will being purchased at any price whatever. That good will is worth purchasing at a big price, but any change in the bill should be consistent with the unity of Ireland."

SUNDAY IN QUINCY CHURCHES

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH.

Rev. Fr. Thomas W. Buckley, son of Edward Buckley of Bates avenue, whose ordination to the priesthood on Jan. 10 by Cardinal O'Connell was several months ahead of the time usually required, celebrated his first public solemn high mass at St. John's church Sunday. Father Buckley will probably remain in St. John's parish until Rev. Fr. John J. Casey recovers from illness.

Rev. Fr. Walter R. Quinlan was deacon and Rev. Fr. John J. Coan was sub-deacon. Turner's mass was rendered by the regular choir under the direction of John Mahon. Father Quinlan in his sermon spoke on the work of a priest. The edifice was thronged with members of St. Mary's, Sacred Heart and St. John's parishes, all of whom received the blessing at the altar rail after mass.

FIRST PARISH.

Rev. Thomas W. Davison of the Atlantic Memorial church exchanged pulpits Sunday with Rev. A. L. Hudson of the First church. The exchange was something more than a mere personal courtesy between the two ministers, coming as it did in line with a suggestion at the last meeting of the Ministers association of Quincy, that the spirit of growing unity among the churches might be promoted by such interdenominational exchanges.

Rev. Mr. Davison took his next from the first chapter of Joshua and his theme was efficiency and ability. The eyes of many, he said, were closed to the possibilities of development and character building and of what they might attain because they do not see the possibilities of life. These people we call easy going, and we find them in the slums of the great cities. They have a lack of initiative and do not see the opportunities for growth and accomplishment.

There was nothing more tragic than spiritual failure. We are what we are because of our love for God, and of our love for a christian character. Men and women who have affection for mankind have the joy of life. These are the things that the church stands for today; no matter what denomination or creed. They stand to enthuse God in the hearts of mankind. If charity is possessed daily then the soul is becoming God like.

Are we losing our enthusiasm? It will be well to take account of stock and see if we stand for efficiency. There is danger of trusting too much to environment. If we are to have the gospel of efficiency, we must have church power houses. Send us out as missionaries to teach that the church stands for the development of the best things in life.

Next Sunday morning Rev. Mr. Hudson will preach upon "President Elliot's Twentieth Century Religion and its critics."

BETHANY CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. B. A. Willmott, the pastor preached Sunday morning on the theme "The grace of God." The musical selections included an anthem by the choir and a solo by A. L. Brayden.

The pleasant Sunday evening service attracted over 500 people, when the pastor's subject was "Among thieves." He criticised those who neglect their duties.

Next Sunday evening the pastor will answer the address of Cardinal O'Connell, who recently addressed the Holy Name Societies and was quoted as follows: "The Cardinal denounced the modern fads of a new paganism and ascribed the moral degeneracy of the times to the decay of even the semblance of Christianity outside the church due to the attacks of the intellectuals. Outside the Catholic church the pulpits are controlled by the rich, and ministers are paid starvation wages to preach sermons which extol the virtues of coal barons and steel kings and oil emperors."

The Norfolk and Pilgrim branch of the Woman's Board of Missions will meet at the First church, Braintree tomorrow at 10 and 1.45.

Rev. Howard Fox of Hingham will speak at the midweek meeting of the church on Thursday evening.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN.

All the usual services were held at the Water Street Presbyterian church on Sunday and were well attended. The pastor, Rev. J. A. Matheson preached inspiring and helpful sermons both morning and evening. The regular choir sang at both services.

Next Sunday at this church will be celebrated a Young Peoples' Go-To-Church Sunday and at the regular morning service the children of the Sabbath school are invited to be present and children who attend no other Sunday school will receive a hearty welcome. The pastor will deliver a special sermon to the children and it is hoped that the parents will see that their boys and girls are present at this service, and that as many of the parents as can will come and enjoy his hour with the children.

In the evening at 7.30 will be a special sermon for the Christian Endeavors and all young people of the church who are requested to occupy the front pews of the church which will be reserved for them. The pastor will deliver a special message at this hour to young people and those attending will derive a great blessing thereby. The older members of the congregation are cordially invited to this service and all strangers will receive a hearty welcome.

The regular monthly Christian Endeavor business meeting will be held Tuesday evening and a free social will be enjoyed.

CALVARY BAPTIST.

The Calvary Baptist Sunday school held its annual business meeting and election of officers for the ensuing year. The reports for 1913 were very encouraging. There was an increase in membership and the finances are healthy. The list of officers and teachers are as follows:

Superintendent—F. G. Pettee.

Assistant Superintendent—Thomas Cortrell.

Secretary—Mrs. Lindsay Smith.

Treasurer—Mrs. H. Harden.

Supt. of Primary Department—Mrs. A. A. Beaulieu.

Assistant Superintendent—Mrs. Kidder.

Teachers—Miss E. McDonald, Mrs. Thayer, Mrs. H. Harden, Miss Tilly, Miss Cousins, Mrs. Beatiere, Mrs. Kidder and Messrs. J. Farquhar, F. Pettee McLean and Tilly.

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

Sunday morning Rev. Dr. Sneath, preached upon the topic, "Jesus the World's Radium." He spoke upon the wonderful discovery of radium and made comparisons of its characteristics to Jesus Christ, "the light of the world." At the request of the Men's class the sermon will shortly be put into printed form. Mr. Everett sang very effectively "It is enough" from "Elijah."

Tuesday evening the Wollaston Congregational Club will sit down to dinner at 6.30 after which it will be instructed and entertained by T. H. Murnane, base ball editor of the Boston Globe and president of the New England baseball league. Also by G. Pray Smith, president of the Metropolitan Driving club.

Tuesday an institute of the Woman's Board will be held in the Braintree church. Mrs. E. S. Tenney will preside at the banquet with other notable women to speak.

Wednesday there will be an all-day session of the Ladies Benevolent society in the church. Mrs. Sneath will have charge of the study class. Ladies are requested to bring their own work which they are preparing for the sale.

Thursday evening at the midweek service, the pastor will give "a Bible study" and illustrate one form of teaching the Sunday School lesson.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of this church is planning to observe Christian Endeavor week and next Sunday morning all endeavorers will attend the church service and Dr. Sneath will preach a special evangelistic sermon. It has also been decided to make it an every-body-at-church Sunday for the members of the Sunday school.

The Superintendent of the Sunday school announced that Washington's birthday, February 22, would be Fathers' day in the Sunday school and all fathers were urged to reserve the day.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

Sunday morning Rev. Carl G. Horst used this text "Let us now praise famous men. The Lord hath wrought great glory by them, leaders of the people by their counsels, such as found out musical tunes and recited verses in writing. Their bodies are buried in peace and their name liveth forevermore." Ecclesiasticus 44-1.

He said: "Our text this morning is taken from Ecclesiasticus, one of the apocryphal books full of moral and religious instruction. Religion has always found its highest expression in poetry. Poetry by its very nature is optimistic. It penetrates into the heart of things, into the mysteries of life. Poetry is the handmaid of piety. The early faiths of mankind we find preserved in poetry, as e. g. in the Hindu Rig-Vedas, in which the ancient Brahmins sought to express in hymn and song their religious convictions about God and Man. The Zend-Avesta embodied for the Persians the sacred teaching that quickened their life.

"In the Hebrew Psalms inspired prophets and poets cast their yearnings and aspirations and faith into lyric forms, and poetry became the vehicle of divine revelation. The refining and inspiring power of good poetry cannot be overestimated. We may well accept it as one of the appointed means of grace. A great help "to make our daily life divine" we find in the poems of Longfellow, a life-long member of the Unitarian church.

A large number of the members of the Y. P. R. U. attended the mid-winter meeting of the Boston Federation of Y. P. R. U.'s, which held afternoon and evening sessions Sunday in the Richmond Street church, Dorchester.

The annual business meeting of the church will be held this evening. Dinner will be served to all members at 6. 30 o'clock.

The Ladies' Aid Alliance will hold an all-day sewing meeting for the benefit of the Quincy City Hospital, at the home of Mrs. Charles T. Baker, 215 Safford street. Luncheon, at 25 cents, will be served at noon. All the ladies in the parish are invited to come and help one of the best public institutions in our city.

Sunday evening, Feb. 1, the Y. P. R. U. will hold its regular meeting at 7 o'clock.

Rev. Carl G. Horst attended the Ministerial Union meeting in Boston this morning at which the Rev. Joel H. Metcalf, Ph. D., gave an illuminating address on "The Higher Life as an Interpreter."

The next vesper service will be held Sunday afternoon, Feb. 8.

PARK AND DOWNS.

At the Park and Downs Congregational church Sunday the subject for the morning sermon was "Patience as a Christian virtue." The supreme example of patience is found in the life of Christ. With Him patience was not the passive and meek suffering of all evil but steadfastness in a great and just purpose. Patience is continuance in well doing against all opposition and over all obstacles. It is tenacious holding on to all good with a firm and continuous stand against all evil.

A treat was given those who attended the evening service, being a sermon "On the Mission of Christ." The established religion would have nothing to do with Christ. He did not set up an opposition church. He really did not found a religion. He simply radiated a light-giving force that passed from Him into the common life about him and started on its work down through the ages. Those who felt its power gradually came together and organized. The organization grew because rich and powerful. And ambitious men often used it to their own self-seeking ends. Often today it stands simply as a club of minds, exclusive, cold, indifferent to the great and crying needs about it. If the Christian church is the representative of Christ in the world then it must do Christ's work, or cease to exist as such. Don't you think if God (whom we believe made this earth and in love, its creatures) had a representative in this world that He would demand of that representative that it should enter into every department of human existence, by promoting justice, right and health, happiness and truth, really represent Him? The whole purpose of Christianity is to be a life-giving leaven entering into and leavening the whole lump of human existence. Then followed an analysis of the Mission and opportunity of the local parish.

WOLLASTON METHODIST.

At the Sunday morning service the theme of the sermon by Rev. G. M. Bailey the pastor, was "The New Song." The Epworth League service was in charge of Miss Rena Chamberlin, the first vice president.

The fourth quarterly Conference was held at six o'clock wtih Rev. Dillon Bronson, D. D., the district superintendent presiding. Dr. Bronson at the evening service explained the "Indianapolis plan," the object of which is to have a complete canvass taken of the church constituency by the laymen of the church thus promoting the interest and efficiency of the work.

The Ladies' Aid Society will have a special meeting on Monday evening at the home of the president, Mrs. George Crothers.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

The auditorium was practically filled at the Sunday morning service and a good number were present in the evening. The subject of the pastor's discourse was "The way to greatness." The thought expressed was that those who are greatest in Christ's eyes are those who will do the most menial task in His name; following His example. "Even Christ pleased not Himself."

There were 303 present at the Sunday School session at 12.15. In the Men's class, Harold Thomas spoke on the Student Volunteer convention, held recently in Kansas, which he attended.

Miss Florence Barbour addressed the Juniors at 3.30, telling of her work in the settlement districts, among the Italians and Armenians. 66 children present.

The monthly missionary meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E. was held at 6 with Miss Ruth L. Hardy as leader.

"Be good to yourself" was the subject at the song service in the auditorium at 7. The choir sang Shelley's "The King of love My Shepherd is." A meeting if the standing committee followed this service.

Tuesday evening at 7.45 a cottage prayer meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Grass, 52 Ardell street, Montclair.

Wednesday afternoon at 4 the pastor's class in the fundamental principles of the Christian faith will meet in the parsonage.

Wednesday evening at 7.45, the Personal Worker's Training Class will meet in the parsonage.

Thursday evening at 7.45, the monthly covenant meeting of the church will be held in the chapel. At this meeting several persons will be proposed for membership. Our people should be present in large numbers.

ATLANTIC MEMORIAL.

Rev. A. L. Hudson of the First Parish church occupied the pulpit of the Atlantic Memorial church Sunday morning in exchange with the pastor Rev. Mr. Davison. Rev. Mr. Hudson was greeted with a congregation that filled the church. He preached an eloquent sermon on the theme that the Progress of civilization was dependent on the preservation of religious ideas. The exchange of ministers was in line with the suggestion made at the last meeting of the Ministers association of Quincy that the spirit of growing unity among the churches of the city might be better promoted by such exchanges.

FINNISH CONGREGATIONAL.

The members of the congregation of the Finnish Congregational church thronged the edifice Sunday evening to hear their retiring pastor, Rev. J. E. Lillback preach his farewell sermon.

Rev. Mr. Lillback will leave Quincy on Friday for Brooklyn, N. Y., where he will be pastor of the Finnish Congregational church.

During the week the trustees of the church will extend a call to Rev. Andrew O. Groop of the Finnish Congregational Church at Fitchburg. Rev. Mr. Groop has preached in this city on many occasions and has many friends here.

HALL PLACE M. E.

The services of the day were as usual at the Hall Place M. E. church. The attendance at Sunday school shows a steady increase. The "Roll of honor" is proving a center of interest for all classes.

Miss Jessie Burke led an interesting Epworth League devotional service on the subject "Peter from wavering to steadfastness."

At the evening service the pastor preached a good sermon on the text "Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it" —St. John 2-5.

The regular business meeting of the Epworth League will be held in the vestry, Monday evening at eight.

Prayer meeting will be held Thursday evening at 7.30 in the vestry, instead of Friday night, in order to give the Sunday School workers a chance to attend the Sunday School Workers Conference.

Choir rehearsal and practice for the old folks concert will be held Saturday night.

NOT FOR SELF ALONE.

Christian, is your burden heavy?
Have you pain or sorrow known?
Hear my message: Toil and trial
Are not meant for you alone.

Not for self alone the pathway
That your shrinking feet have trod;
Comfort others as you also
Have been comforted of God.

Not for self alone the music
Christ is making in your heart;
Some one listens for your singing—
Sing, the listener may depart.

Not for self alone, beloved,
Are the simple, common things.
What helps you may help another.
Breathe your thought and give it wings.

Not alone to make us better
Brighten our own altar fires,
But through all the Father trains us
For the service he requires.

CAMBRIDGE DEFEATED

Quincys Take Both the Basket Ball Games

The smallest crowd of the season saw one of the best games ever played on the Y. M. C. A. floor Saturday night when Quincy won from Cambridge by the score of 24 to 20. Cambridge has been playing great ball having defeated Quincy, Boston and Brockton in succession, and the game of Saturday meant a rise in position in the Y. M. C. A. league if won by them.

The Quincy boys took an early lead in the game and throughout the entire first half were always three or four points to the good; at the end of the half the score was 15 to 11 in Quincy's favor. Cambridge came back strong in the second period and scored seven points while the locals were making two. With only two minutes to play and the score 19 to 18 in Cambridge's favor a foul was called on the visitors and Trask made the point tying the score. This one point seemed to put new life into the local players for Flanders caged a beauty after a few seconds play, Trask scored on another foul try as did Cambridge also making the score 22 to 20 in Quincy's favor. Rich clinched matters by drooping the ball through the net with a half minute to play and the game was over the final score being 24 to 20.

The Quincy team included Price, Rich, Trask, Kenn and Flanders.

The Second team had an easy time winning from the Cambridge 2d, the score being 45 to 30. Croucher put up his best game scoring 6 baskets from the floor and holding his opponent to three goals. Kemp failed to show up and "Toodie" Dineen was played in his place. He showed that he was still there by getting 5 goals and also did some clever passing to his team mates. Thomas played well. Miller and Shirley were also on the Quincy team.

SATURDAY SPORTS.

The Cunningham gym team beat the Congo Five at Milton Saturday night, 38 to 20. D. Reid scored 20 of the points for Cunningham from the floor.

The Braintree A. A., which opened its season a few ago continued its winning streak Saturday night by beating the Tilton A. C. 52 to 20. Scollard scored 12 baskets and Cahill nine.

Carl Gram run with the B. A. A. relay team which was defeated by Harvard at the meet of The Massachusetts Coast Artillery Corps at the South Armory, Boston, Saturday night. He was pitted against Biddle of the Crimsons who ran an excellent race and out down a lead of one and one half yards to about a yard.

LIVED AS MAN OF REFINEMENT

Burglar of Remarkable Character Arrested In Boston

CAUGHT IN PROVISION STORE

Criminal of Worldly Polish and Manifold Attainments Confesses to Six Burglaries In Last Few Months, While Police Believe He Is the One Responsible For Many Others

Boston, Jan. 26.—With the arrest of August Kaufman, the police believe they have solved the mystery of numerous safe-blowing jobs in the business district during the past year.

Kaufman was arrested at the point of a revolver early Snuday morning almost in the act of blowing the safe of Rhodes Brothers' provision store, 410 Tremont street.

In Kaufman, the police they, they have one of the most remarkable and dangerous burglars ever encountered in the annals of crime in Boston. He is a self-confessed criminal of worldly attainments.

After some hours of questioning in the East Dedham street police station, Kaufman told Captain Driscoll that he did two jobs in Epstein's drug store at Essex and Washington streets, and the one in the Union Furniture company's store on Eliot street, besides three other jobs, all in the last few months.

He refused to talk about some other down-town jobs, but the police believe he will make a fuller confession eventually.

Caught almost in the act of cracking the safe of the Rhodes store, Kaufman has turned out to be a scholar, scientist, Socialist author, literateur and lover of humanity.

While the police are trying with great hope of success to fix on the prisoner the murder of at least one policeman and a series of other daring crimes in this vicinity, 5-year-old Elvina Merrill, the daughter of his landlady at 257 Shawmut avenue, is crying because she is not allowed to see him, her dear friend and playfellow.

Kaufman had made a special pet of the little girl, and his love for children in general seems to be one of the salient points in his character.

It was a visit to Kaufman's luxurious quarters in the house of Mr. and Mrs. Merrill that fully opened the eyes of the police to the extraordinary qualities of their prisoner.

The rooms were fitted up with the taste of a somewhat finical man of the world. There was a profusion of toilet articles, many of them silver mounted, and of powders and lotions that suggested a lady's boudoir more then a burglar's den.

Books, papers and drawings were scattered about. The burglar's love of children cropped out in his choice of literature, his library including many epics of childhood.

There was also a book called "Dynamite," containing the history and chemistry of this and other explosives. This was the only hint in evidence of the most astonishing collection of burglary equipment concealed beneath the pleasant surface of the room that the police had ever seen.

The layout included an electric battery, forty feet of fuse, a can of gunpowder, a large "jimmy," drills and a ratchet brace, a dark lantern smeared with blood and complete apparatus for the home manufacture of nitroglycerine.

There were bottles of raw glycerine, nitric acid, sulphuric acid, scales to weigh the ingredients and a thermometer to test their temperature.

Everything points, the police think, to Kaufman having been the author of a number of bold safe cracking affairs in the centre of Boston in the last twelve months.

DARKNESS IN SOUTH AMERICA

FURLONG TELLS OF JOURNEYS

Customs of the Stone Age Still Prevail Among Indians In Terra Del Fuego—Yahgans Live In Open Canoes In One of Stormiest Climates of the Globe

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 26.—Charles W. Furlong, South American explorer, who is in Los Angeles, believes there is more unexplored territory in South America than in Africa, the "Dark Continent."

Furlong was the first American to go through the heart of Terre Del Fuego. He also explored the tropical forests with only native as guides. There was no other white man in the expedition.

The travels of Furlong in South America aggregate 40,000 miles and include visits to many strange regions. He made a special study of the customs and habits of the three tribes of primitive Indians: Yahgans, of the Fuegian archipelago; the Onas, of Terre Del Fuego, and the Patagonians.

"It is difficult for Americans to realize the great size of South America," Furlong said. "There are thirteen political divisions in the continent and one of them, Brazil, is larger in area than the United States. Argentina is one-half as large as the United States.

"The most interesting natives are the Yahgans, or canoe Indians of the Fuegian archipelago in the region of Cape Horn. There, in one of the stormiest climates of the globe, they live most of the time in open canoes. They have the strange custom of keeping fire burning in the bottom of their canoes. Their only method of starting a fire is by rubbing sticks together, and as this is a very difficult process they are careful to keep their fires burning. They place sod in the bottom of the canoes, on which the fires are built."

Furlong said the Indians who live in the deep forests and mountainous regions of Terra Del Fuego perhaps are the most primitive people now in existence. They are still living in the stone age. Their weapons and implements are made of flint. They travel on foot and have no canoes or horses or any means of transportation.

The climate is very cold, but the Onas wear only a single garment made from the skin of the guanaco, an animal resembling the wild Hama. This animal furnishes them with food and clothing, just as the bison did the North American Indians.

"The Patagonians, who have frequently been mentioned in history, are a very interesting people," Furlong continued. "While they do not have the immense size attributed to them by Pigafetta, the historian of Magellan's expedition, they are unusually large, perhaps the largest human being living today. I noticed that most of the men were more than six feet tall and weighed 225 to 240 pounds. The women were proportionately large."

Fall River, Mass., Jan. 26.—An exploring turn of mind which led 9-year-old Walter Prepetor down cellar saved the life of his father, Kasimer Prepetor.

BOMB IN BROOKLYN

Police Wonder That Occupants of House Escaped With Their Lives

New York, Jan. 26.—The lives of twenty persons were imperilled by a bomb explosion at 231 Hamilton avenue, Brooklyn. That any of the occupants of the three-story brick structure escaped with their lives is a wonder to the police, as the bomb tore gaping holes in the floors and carried away doors, broke windows, and also partly demolished a stairway.

The bomb was thrown into the barber shop conducted by Frank Tillizo, where four men were sleeping. The four men were rendered unconscious, being severely cut by the flying glass and splinters.

Tillizo can give no explanation why any one should have attempted to blow up his place. He says he has not received any threatening letters, but neighbors say the belief prevails among many that he is a man of considerable means, and the police have a theory that perhaps the bomb was a warning that he would have to pay.

SPOOKS' AID INVOKED

Police Adopt Unique Method to Force Confession From Prisoner

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 26.—The "third degree" with a "ghost" as the central figure was supplied by the police in a futile attempt to obtain from John Grondin, a young druggist, a confession that he killed his wife, Zella, according to a statement by his attorney.

Grondin's counsel declared that shortly after he was arrested he was taken by detectives into a darkened room where a "ghost" soon appeared and demanded: "Why did you murder me?"

Grondin was charged with having poisoned his wife. Her body had been exhumed, although a coroner's jury had declared her a suicide.

Pathologists reported that they had found poison in Mrs. Grondin's vital organs. Grondin's arrest followed. Mrs. Grondin was a native of Waterville, Me., where she married Grondin when he was 21 years old.

Mayville, N. Y., Jan. 26.—Edward Beardsley, who defied arrest for eight days at Summerdale, was arraigned before Justice Young here on a charge of assault, first degree, for the shooting of Poormaster John G. W. Putnam.

Four witnesses were sworn. They were Sheriff Anderson, Under-Sheriff Colegrove, Dr. Reynolds and Edna Austin, the mother of four of the Beardsley children. The woman said she was never married to Beardsley, nor was her sister.

While she was still on the stand Beardsley's attorney waived examination and he was held without bail for the grand jury, which meets Feb. 2.

MAY DENY SLAYING

Counsel For Schmidt Said to Be Building Up "Accident" Case

New York, Jan. 26.—It is believed that attorneys for Hans Schmidt, who is on trial charged with the murder of Anna Aumuller, will try to show that that the priest did not actually kill the girl as he confessed.

Schmidt's lawyer has indicated that he is building up his case to show that the injury inflicted by a falling bed might have resulted in her death, and that Schmidt then dismembered the body, hoping to save the young woman's good name.

MARTHENA'S DUTY

It Did Not Prove to Be a Sacrifice

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Marthena Judd locked the schoolhouse door with a little sigh of relief and walked slowly down the village street toward home.

There came a clatter of hoofs on the road, and Lionel Forbes rode gallantly around the bend and pulled his big black horse to a standstill beside Marthena.

"How do you do, Miss Judd?" he asked, smiling down at her from his brown eyes.

Marthena's eyes were dazzled by Lionel Forbes and his too evident beauty. The sudden interest of Sharon's richest young man in the humble schoolteacher was flattering. Marthena Judd was pretty in a pale, delicate way, but one always thought that she gave promise of greater beauty when she could have a rest from teaching the robust youngsters of the village school.

While Marthena smiled and blushed under the bold glance of Lionel Forbes, Miss Myra Finney, who kept the postoffice, peered from an unobstructed corner of the window and made comments to her sister Susan.

"If I had a child in Marthena Judd's school I would put my foot down about one thing!" said Myra after Lionel and Marthena had walked slowly on.

"What's that?" asked Susan lazily.

"I'd put a stop to her flirtation with Lionel Forbes. It sets a very bad example to the children. Why, Susan, she's all took up with him so's she's forgotten to come for her mail, and here's a letter from her brother Henry way out in Wyoming. He don't write very often. I wonder if there is anything the matter."

"Marthena writes to him every Sunday," remarked Susan. "Let me see—Henry lost his wife, didn't he?"

* * * * * * *

Marthena blushed and then paled when she read her brother's letter.

Dear Marthena—I am wondering if you can't take pity on me and come out here and keep house for me. You needn't do any real hard work; Lee Sing, the Chinaman, does that, but it does need a woman's hand out here, and I'm plain lonesome for you. It was different when Ida was alive, but you know how it is. I'll pay you what you get for teaching the Sharon kids, and you'll have a horse to ride and anything else in reason that you want. Do come. Send me a telegram and I'll meet you at Bitter Tree whenever you say. Your loving brother, HENRY.

Marthena's face paled as she read the letter. It was so plainly her duty to go to poor Henry, but her dawning love for Lionel Forbes held her back. If she went away now his too fickle heart would seek another. Yet, knowing this, she yearned after him. He had opened the rosy doors of romance to Marthena Judd. He would forget her if she went. And yet it was her duty to go to her brother.

She would let Aunt Hepsey decide. Aunt Hepsey was a large, capable woman who ruled her family of grown sons and daughters with an iron hand. She had spared a small gabled room for Marthena Judd, her orphaned niece, and Marthena's board money paid for music lessons for the three girls.

Aunt Hepsey read the letter and then settled her gold framed spectacles on her nose.

"Marthena, it's your plain duty to go to Henry," she said. "He's doing splendidly out there on the ranch. He's getting rich, so Larry Barnes wrote to George. You know Larry went out there, and Henry gave him work on the ranch. Seems Larry's a foreman or something out there. I s'pose you've forgotten all about Larry Barnes now that Lionel Forbes is sweet on you; but, Marthena, you can't place any dependence on Lionel. He's a butterfly, always running after some pretty girl, and—now, don't get mad—you asked my advice and"—

Aunt Hepsey looked after Marthena's flying form with disapproval in her eyes.

"Don't it beat all," she asked of the empty air, "how folks will ask your advice and then fly all to pieces if it don't suit their ideas?"

It was a heavy hearted Marthena who packed her trunks and bade farewell to the little Maine village where she had lived all her days.

The train left Sharon and the old life far behind. While the ache of parting was still in Marthena's throat the novelty of travel interested and comforted her. Five days later Marthena entered upon the rolling prairie land that to her eastern eyes seemed like a dust colored sea bounded by the purple hills rising and melting away against the horizon as they sped on.

At Bitter Tree her trunks were dumped out on the platform, and the train went on into the golden glory of the sunset, while Marthena stood there feeling strangely small and forlorn until Henry's big voice and Henry's strong arms greeted her.

She looked at him with wondering eyes. Henry Judd had gone forth from Sharon village a tall, lanky New Englander dressed in ill fitting store clothes. The man before her was big and stout, and his cowboy hat and shirt and his corduroy trousers tucked into high heeled boots gave him the look of a stranger. But the old merry look was in his eyes as he put his little sister into the buckboard and took his seat beside her.

"Hold on to your hair, sis," he advised. "These bronchos are walking on their hind legs today."

Marthena Judd never forgot that wild ride across the prairie. The ponies actually pawed the air as they started forth, and then in a spirit of recklessness they galloped madly for miles and miles, while Marthena held her breath and Henry laughed as he put one arm around her and drove the ponies with the other hand.

"Home!" cried Henry as he turned in between two rail posts and with a last clatter of hoofs and scattering of sand and gravel the ponies stopped at the broad porch of a pleasant ranch house that overlooked the Bitter Tree valley with a glimpse of the shining river at the bottom and the everlasting hills beyond.

Henry made her go straight to bed, and he carried her supper to her in the little room that he had furnished for her with all of a man's clumsy tenderness.

"Larry Barnes went to Choco with me, and we picked out the stuff. Larry said he remembered that blue was your favorite color, so we got everything blue and white. Larry chose the pictures. He said the one of St. Cecelia there looked like you. Great fellow, Larry! Now, you close your eyes and go to sleep. Get up when you like and order what you want for breakfast from Lee Sing. Good night."

With Henry's kiss on her brow Marthena went to sleep with a little smile on her lips and awoke to the glory of a perfect morning.

After she had leisurely dressed she went down to the veranda, where Lee Sing, with many polite gestures, invited her to breakfast. While she sat there she heard the mad clatter of hoofs and saw a horse galloping around the yard. From the distant corral came a shout as one, two, three, more horses leaped the gate and followed the first untamed animal. Three cowboys mounted on horses pursued the runaways, with lusty shouts and lariats held ready for action.

Marthena wondered vaguely if Larry Barnes was one of these cowboys who rode so fearlessly and so gracefully.

She went to the edge of the veranda and waved her table napkin at the vicious black horse that pawed the steps, and he scuttered away to fall a victim to the lariat of the most graceful rider of them all, a bareheaded giant with blue-black hair and a skin bronzed like an Indian's.

Then Marthena, when it was all over and the horses had been driven back into the corral, realized that she had displayed unwonted enthusiasm. She had not only waved her napkin frantically at the victorious riders, but she had cheered them on to greater efforts, so that she went back to her seat with scarlet cheeks and shamed eyes.

A step sounded behind her and she looked up to see the graceful, brown cheeked rider who had flashed white teeth at her as he captured the black horse.

There was a strange familiarity about him that puzzled her.

"Don't remember me, Marthena?" he asked, holding out a big hand.

"Oh, Larry—Larry Barnes!" cried Marthena. "What have you done to yourself? I didn't recognize you."

"I hope the change is for the better," said Larry gravely.

"It is. Oh, it is!" cried Marthena, with such evident admiration in her tone that both of them suddenly laughed outright in the pure joy of youth and perhaps in the discovery of something that both of them had lost.

"Henry's gone to Chico," said Larry, sitting down on the railing of the veranda, "and he has delegated me to give you your first riding lesson. Cherry is the prettiest little pony you ever saw, Marthena, and Henry and I picked out the saddle the other day, and"—

"Thank you for helping Henry choose the things for my room," said Marthena gratefully. And she wondered why Larry blushed so furiously and changed the subject. She felt very kindly toward him.

"Well, sis," said Henry that night at supper, "you look as rosy as can be. How do you like the sagebrush?"

"It's heavenly!" cried Marthena so heartily that Henry laughed aloud, and Larry, who had been invited to supper, blushed deeply.

"Then you don't want to go back to Sharon?" teased Henry.

"Never!" exclaimed Marthena. "I'll tell you when I do, Henry."

"I'll wager that will be never," said Henry, but he said it to himself so that no one could hear. He had read the signs of reawakened interest in the betraying eyes of his sister and Larry Barnes, and he was very glad. Larry was a capital fellow, and Aunt Hepsey's letter about Lionel Forbes had been disquieting.

Three months afterward Marthena and Larry came in from a long ride with the glory of perfect happiness shining in their faces. Henry, standing on the veranda smoking his pipe, smiled tenderly as they came up the steps.

"Blessings, my children!" he said heartily, for he had read that day in a paper from Sharon that Lionel Forbes had married a girl from the city, and he knew that Marthena would receive the news with indifference.

Marthena, standing in her little bedroom that night amid all the pretty blue and white furniture chosen by the two men who loved her devotedly, smiled through her tears as she knelt down to say her prayers.

"It's wonderful!" she murmured. "It's marvelous how the path of duty leads one to love and happiness!"

HERE IS A REAL SCHOOL OF LIFE

Pupils Taught to Do the Work of Farmer and Wife.

GROW CROPS, COOK AND SEW

Use Arithmetic and Other School Subjects Only as Need Arises In Course of Duties—Woman Directs Activities of Unique Juvenile Institution—Bureau of Education Interested.

Complete freedom from restraint is the lot of the children who attend the experimental rural school at Winthrop college, Rock Hill, S. C., as described by Mrs. Hetty Browne in a bulletin of the United States bureau of education. There are no seats or desks in this school, no classrooms, no rule of silence, but a free activity guided and directed by a woman who is in complete sympathy with country children and country life.

In this and other respects observers have noted a resemblance to the Montessori schools, but Mrs. Browne began her work several years ago quite independently of the theories of Mme. Montessori. Furthermore, the Rock Hill school makes no claim to a deliberate scientific basis. It is essentially "experimental," with the aim of learning by actual experience what kind of a school is best adapted to rural life.

Lunch Served on Spacious Veranda.

The building is a farmhouse, with rooms fitted up as "sitting room," kitchen and workshop. A large veranda surrounding the house is used for the midday meal, served by the pupils, and for other purposes.

There is plenty of ground about the school, including space for a large garden. This is the center about which instruction revolves. From the study of soil and seed in the winter time to the actual planting, cultivating and harvesting at the other seasons the garden remains the center of the children's interest and activity.

Arithmetic, spelling, etc., are not taught as subjects, but only as the need for them arises in connection with the activities of home and garden. Laying out the garden involves arithmetic, and even geometry, both of which are absorbed by the children without effort. The making of towels for use at the school naturally develops new words having to do with sewing and many other things. Words and numbers are given the children only as the need for them develops, and then with as little formality as possible. The whole idea is having the children find out things, if possible, without being told.

Perform the Tasks of Grownups.

The children in this rural school are not assigned to "classes" and "periods," as in the traditional school. A visitor will see one group working in the garden, another group on the veranda sewing, another in the kitchen at a cooking task, and still another doing "numbers" or reading with the teacher in her room.

The aim of the Rock Hill school is thus summarized by Dr. A. P. Bourland in an introduction to the bureau's bulletin: "The resolve was to make a school that will train the farm children for their future work in the home, on the farm and in the social life around them. Hence we began frankly with the activities of the farm. The aim was not a cut and dried plan, but rather a working idea to enable the teacher to create a growing agency for the development of farm life."

WHY EAT MEAT AND EGGS?

Both Unnecessary, Declares Kansas City Champion Woman Hiker.

Mrs. Margaret Clough Montville, matron of the Kansas City (Mo.) General hospital, has not eaten meat for sixteen years, and for four years she has not tasted an egg.

"And at fifty-seven I feel like a schoolgirl," she said the other day.

Mrs. Montville's experience with a vegetable, fruit and nut diet has been interesting. Primarily she stopped eating meat because she believed it wrong to take lives in order that she might live. Then one day she figured out the muscle building power of her diet as compared with that containing meat. The result was amazing, she says, so she had another point to bring out when her friends wondered at her ability to live without meat.

"But now I've got the best one of all," she says. "When I hear one of them going into hysterics about the price of steak and eggs it does me good to tell them what my grocery bill amounts to."

Mrs. Montville is active in physical culture. She is fond of taking young women on long walks through the country or nearby towns. She always comes in first at the end of the hikes.

First Woman Diplomat.

The first woman to take up the diplomatic service as a profession has just been appointed at Christiania, Norway. Miss Henrietta Hoegh, a pretty woman of twenty-seven, is to be first secretary at the Norwegian legation in Mexico. She passed examinations in international law and political economy two years ago. As first secretary she will have the privilege of wearing the diplomatic uniform with the exception of the ornamental sword and gold braided breeches.

MIX MAPS AND MEALS.

An Easy Way of Studying Geography While You Eat.

In the dining room of one family there hang two large colored maps, one of the world, the other of the state in which they live.

The parents and children are forming the habit of talking during meals about what they read or hear of places and events outside the visible horizon. And whenever any unfamiliar place is mentioned one of the children immediately leaves the table long enough to locate it on the map. "It is near such and such a town or river or mountain," "That is where so and so lives," or "Such a thing happened there," is the information usually added to the first statement.

They do not limit their conversation to bookish things, but speak naturally about whatever they are interested in, turning to the maps as one looks at a railroad guide when traveling, to place themselves. In this way bits of knowledge are linked together, and as sight knowledge requires so much less mental effort than ear knowledge it is more fun.

Besides, the maps, hanging low and in a good light, make a splendid rainy day game for the two younger children, aged eight and ten. The mother, sitting near with her sewing, gives them "hard ones to find" (names of more or less obscurity), and they keep score as to which gets the most "firsts," calling twenty the game.

No wonder the whole world seems like one big picture to this family, and geography but a play.—Woman's Home Companion.

LEAPING FOR THE FIRE NET.

Safe Jumps of Eight or Nine Stories Have Been Made.

At a recent Fifty-sixth street tenement fire in New York that resulted in more of a smoke alarm than a blaze a man and his wife were seen to get out on the ledge of a fifth story window. The firemen told them to wait a moment, that there might be no need to jump. The man cried that they were suffocating and must jump.

The firemen stretched the net and shouted for them to poise themselves properly and jump one at a time. But even while the firemen were shouting the instructions the couple kissed each other, locked arms and leaped. They came down straight and sure as a plummet right into the net. They rebounded about fifteen feet and fell in the net again in a sitting posture, still embraced.

The firemen let them gently down to the sidewalk. They still sat there looking at each other incredulously. Then they were told there was not even a good fire to justify their jump. It had all been smoke from a smouldering lot of rags and other rubbish. The man and wife heard the news with expressions of wonder, thankfulness and condemnation of their silliness.

Jumps of eight and nine stories without injuries have been recorded. The makeup of the jumper is what counts. The firemen have to be prepared for all kinds. Sometimes they have to shift a few inches quickly because of the bad judgment of distance shown by the jumper. But in most cases the leap to the net saves life.—New York Sun.

A Little Paint Badly Applied.

The play "L'Homme de Destin" was taken from the stage when its triumph was at the zenith. One evening Napoleon, accompanied by his friend Duroc, went in disguise to the Porte St. Martin theater, where the piece was being performed. Eugene Chevalier appearing as the man of destiny. They bought a box, but had hardly entered it when the emperor broke forth in violent execrations against the "fool managers." It seemed that the decorators had left in the box pots of oil and paint, and into these the emperor had stepped. Wild with rage, he rushed from the house and to make matters worse was recognized in the lobby. No paper mentioned the incident, but by order of the emperor the play was never produced again, and Chevalier never appeared again as the man of destiny—and all on account of a little paint badly applied.

Theory and Practice.

Little Beatrice was taking piano lessons and learning at the same time something of theory. Like many other children, she disliked practicing her finger exercises. One day her mother, who was working in an upstairs room, noticed a sudden lull in the playing. She looked down and saw Beatrice sitting perfectly motionless.

"Beatrice, why don't you practice?" she called down sharply.

"I am practicing, mother," replied the child with perfect self assurance. "I'm practicing my theory." — New York Post.

Parliament and Congress.

The British parliament and the United States congress have many points of difference. The parliament is practically omnipotent, while the congress is subject not only to the provisions of the constitution, but to the president's veto. Congress represents the people, while parliament to all intents and purposes is the people. — New York American.

Thoughtless.

"I offered Chollie a penny for his thoughts."

"Did you get them?"

"No, he was out of thoughts as usual."—Boston Transcript.

SELECTMEN OF MILTON

Henry H. Barnes Dies at Boston Hospital

Henry H. Barnes, chairman of the Milton Board of Selectmen died Saturday at the Massachusetts General Hospital. He had been ill since last autumn and was removed to the hospital for treatment about two weeks ago.

Mr. Barnes was one of the best known and most popular young men in Milton, as was testified to at the last two elections when he received the largest vote ever cast for a selectman in a contested election. He was born in Boston, Aug. 28, 1868, son of the late Henry T. Barnes. When he was about five years of age his parents moved to Dorchester Lower Mills. He attended the old Stoughton School and nearly twenty years ago moved to Milton, where he has since made his home, his residence being at 116 Maple street.

While still a boy he entered the wholesale dry goods trade in Boston with Brown, Durrell & Co., and remained there until a number of years ago, when he joined the newly organized house of John R. Ainsley & Co., in the same line of business, where he held a responsible position up to the time of his death.

Mr. Barnes entered local politics in Milton about seven or eight years ago, when he was elected an auditor. After serving three years in that office he was elected a selectman and was in his fourth consecutive term in that office. He was also chairman of the commission appointed last spring to construct the Granite-avenue bridge, the other members of the commission including the mayors of Boston and Quincy and the chairman of the Norfolk County Commission.

He was a member of Macedonian lodge of Masons and Dorchester R. A. chapter and of the Knights of Pythias. He is survived by his wife, a son and two daughters, also by his mother and two sisters.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 2 P. M. from the Village Congregational church.

Food For Thought.

Theodore—I want to ask you something, uncle.

Uncle—Well, what is it?

Theodore—If a boy is a lad and has a stepfather, is the lad a stepladder?—Philadelphia Press.

THEY DON'T WASTE WORDS.

Nyasaland Natives Exist In a State of Partial Coma.

Referring to the native peculiarities in Nyasaland, the author of "Hunting the Elephant In Africa," Captain C. H. Stigand, comments on a certain state of coma into which the "boys" descend when there is no active work for them to do, or at least when there is no compulsion to do it. He believes that the native is capable of assuming a state in which the mind is absolutely detached and not working, and when in such a state he is only recalled by a start to his present surroundings.

The life of the head man of a village in Nyasaland, when not engaged in the strenuous pursuit of his official duties, is something like this: At sunrise he crawls out of his hut and sits outside. After a short time his wife crawls out and offers him some food. He eats this and then makes his way to a tree, perhaps a hundred yards from the village. Under this he sits in deep abstraction, till about noon a child brings him some food and water. After partaking of this he moves a little so as to get the afternoon shade. He then sits in deep meditation until sunset, when he crawls into his hut and goes to sleep.

Sometimes he is joined by a few other old men under his tree. They hardly ever speak to each other, and if they say anything it is to make some obvious remark, as, "There is a dog," "Yes, it is a dog," "Oh," "Ah," and a further period of silence.

MADE HIMSELF AT HOME.

When He Got Through His Standing Was Unquestioned.

Robert Thorpe, an old Missouri stage driver, used to tell a story of how Anderson, the jayhawker, got one of his recruits. The Anderson boys held up Thorpe's stage near Glasgow one day. Among the passengers was a raw-boned young Missourian who looked about as tough as the jayhawkers themselves.

"Give me yer val'bles," Anderson demanded of the youth, as he went down the line.

"Ain't got none," answered the young squirrel hunter.

"Where ye goin'?"

"To join Anderson's jayhawkers."

The leader sized him up a bit.

"Kin ye swim the Missoury river?" he asked him.

"Reckon so," the young man answered.

"Could ye kill a man?"

"Reckon so."

Anderson stepped forward and spat in the youngster's face. The youth bounded at the jayhawker like a cat, caught him full in the face with a right swing and went down on top of him, kicking and clawing.

The jayhawkers pulled the young demon off their leader, and he got up.

"You belong," he said. "Boys, give him a hawse."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Recognition Comes Slowly.

"The late Alfred Russel Wallace, the codiscoverer with Darwin of evolution, had a hard row to hoe at first," said a physiologist.

"Poor Dr. Wallace had in fact such a vary hard row to hoe that he couldn't afford to marry till he was sixty-three, when to balance matters he married a young girl of eighteen by whom he had a son and a daughter.

"I commiserated in London last summer with Dr. Wallace.

"'It was too bad,' I once said to him. 'A man of genius like you, cramped with poverty till past middle life! It was too bad.'

"'My friend,' Dr. Wallace replied, 'always you will find the fire of genius takes a long, long time to make the pot boil.'"—Detroit Free Press.

Bad For the Laurels.

William Dean Howells, according to the Washington Star, was admonishing a young novelist, who, after writing a fine novel, had produced only slight commercial things.

"Two critics," he said to the young man, "were discussing a certain author.

"'His laurels,' said the first critic, 'already seem faded and bedraggled.'

"'That,' the other critic agreed, 'is because he has been resting on them.'"

In the Customary Place.

A well known English bishop some time since lost his third wife. A clergyman who had known the first wife returned from Africa and wanted to see the grave. He called at the cathedral and saw the verger.

"Can you tell me where the bishop's wife is buried?"

"Well, sir," replied the verger, "I don't know for certain, but he mostly buries 'em at Brompton."—London Mail.

No Wedding Bells.

The mutual friend was speaking:

"If you love the girl and the parents on both sides are willing and you have $1,000,000 each I see no reason why you should not be married."

"Just one thing prevents it."

"Yes?"

"Yes. She won't have me."—Spur.

Her Chin.

Dawson—The facial features plainly indicate character and disposition. In selecting your wife, were you governed by her chin? Spenlow—No, but I have been ever since we married.

In the Sideshow.

Visitor—These dwarfs of yours are pretty big! Showman—Pardon me sir: these are giant dwarfs.—Meggendorfer Blatter.

Hatred is like fire. It makes even light rubbish deadly.—George Eliot.

DISCOVERED IN TIME.

Officer T. A Malone was Johnny on the spot Sunday night, and his promptness saved calling out the fire department and possibly a bad fire. A spark from a passing locomotive set fire to some grass just south of the Meadow Brook Ice houses and the grass fire was working well along toward the oil tanks just over the Braintree line. Officer Malone discovered the fire and promptly extinguished it.

NO PRECINCTS IN MILTON.

The special committee, which has had under consideration for some time the question of percinct voting for Milton has decided against the proposition. The report has been filed with the Selectmen, and there was one dissenter, James S. Gallagher.

The committee favors holding the election on the first Saturday in March and postponing consideration of the articles in the warrant until the following Saturday afternoon at 1.30. Charles S. Pierce, W. Newton Harlow, James S. Gallagher, John Forbes Perkins and Murray Ruggles comprise the committee.

DEMOCRATIC CITY COMMITTEE

The Democratic City Committee of 1913 held its final meeting of the year in the Johnson building Saturday night. A salad supper was served. Among the speakers were Jeremiah O'Leary of Sharon, the defeated candidate for county commissioner, and Councilman Thomas Griffin. A letter of regret was received from David I. Murray, the defeated Senatorial candidate. William Kelly, chairman presided. Nearly 150 members of the party called at the rooms during the evening.

ONLY A RUMOR.

There were rumors in City Square this noon that there had been a shooting affray on Penn street. What lent color to the story was that the patrol wagon was seen in that vicinity about 9 o'clock. The police however have no report of any shooting and the reason of the presence of the patrol wagon was due to the Italian from Braintree who had been arrested for stealing manure.

☞A cordial invitation through this paper is extended to all school teachers in Quincy and vicinity, to see free of charge the great educational and historical event "The Battle of Gettsburg," Wednesday after school at 4.15 at Quincy Music hall. Children at this matinee accompanied by teachers will be admitted for 5 cents. This will be the only time that "The Battle of Gettysburg" will be given in Quincy, as it goes from here to Europe. Teachers should take advantage of this generous offer of the management and call at the Ledger office for a ticket.

DISTRICT COURT.

John McClay, Jr., was arraigned for assault on his father at Quincy. Case continued until Thursday. It is said that young McClay attempted to put on his fathers coat and wear it off and that the senior Clay objected, and as a result he was assaulted by his son. It is understood that satisfaction will be acknowledged when the case comes up Thursday.

Patrick White was fined $15 for drunkenness at Quincy.

SQUANTUM STREET LEADS WARD SIX

East Squantum Street Alone Has $290,825 Without West Squantum Street

Hancock Street Is Leading Atlantic Street

The Ward Six street values (exclusive of Squantum) are published today. In justice to East Squantum street, it should be stated that this street extends into Squantum where it has a valuation of $115,325. When added to the $175,500 in the list below, the total valuation is $290,825, making it the leading street in Ward Six. When East and West Squantum streets are added together the total is $400,025.

That part of Hancock street which is within Ward Six limits is second, closely followed by Atlantic street and Billings road.

The only other streets with a valuation of over $100,000 are Newbury avenue, Billings street and Sagamore street in the order named.

It is interesting to compare the value of land with value of buildings on the different streets. All streets of Ward Six except those at Squantum are included. Squantum streets will appear later:

CHIMNEY FIRE AT GREENLEAF

The alarm from Box 24 at 12.10 this morning was for a chimney fire in the Greenleaf block. The chimney is on the rear of the building and was filled with soot which took fire. When the department arrived, a chemical stream was first put into the chimney, but as this did not reach it a line from a hydrant was used. There was no loss and no smoke entered any of the rooms of the Greenleaf apartments although some of the occupants were pretty well frightened. The alarm from this box brought apparatus from Atlantic and Quincy Point which however was immediately sent back to quarters. Quite a large crowd collected but there was little to see.

WARD THREE CANDIDATES.

Robert T. Foy who was defeated for the election to the City Council from Ward Three at the December election has filed papers as a Democratic candidate for the City Council at the special election to be held in March.

Nomination papers are also being circulated for Andrew H. Morrison as a Republican candidate for Councilman. Mr. Morrison who came to Quincy from Fall River has served his native city in the Senate and House of Representatives.

DISTRICT COURT.

Lawrence Sullivan was fined $15 for drunkenness at Quincy.

Albert McAdams was sentenced to three months in the house of correction for larceny at Quincy.

The liquors seized from Affie Carlo at Quincy were forfeited.

COMPETENT MEN REMOVED

Protest Against Changes of Library Trustees

Editor Daily Ledger:

I do not mean to take up all the columns in the Daily Ledger this week, but will ask you to use as much of what I send herewith as you wish.

First of all, our new Mayor's refusal to reappoint Morton Smith and Charles C. Hearn as Library Trustees is as rank a thing as I have ever met in my long career. Personally, I am glad to be relieved from my duties as member of the book selection committee. These were very arduous and a severe tax. But I would like to see a most vigorous protest against dropping such fine men as the other two members. If in what I say about myself you are at first tempted to think me somewhat immodest perhaps you will agree with Mrs. Tobey that I never blow my own trumpet.

To revert to the Library matter. A year ago when Mr. Hearn was appointed, I had been a member of the board only a few months, to fill out the unexpired term of Mr. Marshal. But Mr. Sidelinger and I had our eyes opened to the decidedly loose way in which all the affairs of the Library had been conducted. We set to work to get together and put the business on a business basis. It was slow but steady progress.

Among other things, a minority of the board in previous years had not been regular attendants upon the meetings of the Trustees. Previous to Mr. Smith's selection and his election as secretary of the board, no records of meetings had been kept. As to the Treasurer's accounts and matters of bookkeeping, they would not have stood investigation for a moment. This has reference rather to the Treasurer who preceded Mr. McGrath, who was getting things in shape when ill-health prevented his further acting as Treasurer.

The Trustees, early in 1913, had proceeded so far as to be doing splendid team work. Mr. Safford, who had been on the board for a dozen years, was chairman, and Messrs. Sidelinger, McGrath and Hearn were the business committee. Mr. Smith, in addition to his arduous work as secretary, was also a member of the Book committee with myself.

The Treasurer's accounts, we found had not been audited in previous years, and although he handled con-

Annual Reports Show Church to Be Flourishing

At the annual parish meeting and supper of the Wollaston Unitarian Society held Monday evening in the vestry the following officers were elected for the ensuing year.

President—Eugene H. Sprague.
Clerk—William H. Boynton.
Treasurer—Walter J. Wellington.
Collector—Charles E. Barker.
Executive Committee of Sunday School—Fred M. Rollins.
Parish Committee—Walter Baker, William M. Burrell, Herbert J. Polk, Arthur W. Rohn, John E. Simmons.

With this meeting Walter J. Wellington completed 25 years of continuous service as treasurer of the society and a committee was appointed to have suitable resolutions engrossed. Arthur W. Rohn, George M. Bennett and Rev. Carl G. Horst are the committee.

A roast beef supper preceded the meeting which opened with the reading of the warrant by William H. Boynton clerk.

A brief word of welcome by Eugene H. Sprague, president, was followed by reports from the treasurer, collector and Edward J. Cummings, treasurer of the repair fund. William E. Rowe, for the cushion fund, reported the pews entirely furnished with cushions.

Miss Fanny L. Johnson, editor of "The Dial," the weekly calendar, reported. By way of retrenchment it was voted to run the Dial independent of the parish treasury, and a committee was appointed to make this financially possible. The committee consists of Dr. Charles S. Adams, Dr. Charles E. Monroe, J. Harry Hooper, Mrs. William M. Burrell and Miss Fanny L. Johnson.

Mrs. Chandler W. Smith reported for the social service committee. Miss Charlotte Barstow, for the Choir Guild, told of the good work this girl's organization had done in providing music for church services and other occasions.

John E. Simmons reported the Wollaston Unitarian club to be in its fourteenth season with a full membership of one hundred and a waiting list.

Fred M. Rollins reported for the Sunday School, telling of its flourishing condition. Leon D. Browne reported for the Young People's Religious Union.

Miss Harriet E. Turner, for the Ladies Aid Alliance told of the loss by death of three members, Mrs. Walter J. Wellington, Mrs. Sarah B. Taylor, Mrs. Carrie L. Couchier.

Rev. Carl G. Horst in his fifth annual report announced the loss of three members by death and the addition of fifteen new members. He recommended the appointment of a large number of committees to take charge of various departments of church work. These included reception, hospitality, entertainment, decoration, membership and publicity. A large parish house committee was also urged. A conference committee from allied societies and an annual contribution to the Unitarian Pension Fund were urged. These matters were refered to the new parish committee.

Mr. Horst asked that the Wollaston Country Fair be made an annual event. It was so voted, and Arthur were appointed a committee. Mr. W. Rohn and Frederick H. Bishop. Rohn announced that the 1914 Wollaston Country Fair would be held on Friday and Saturday, September 11 and 12. He warned Wollaston farmers to begin preparations early.

A vote of appreciation was given the Quincy Daily Ledger for courtesies extended. The society sent greetings to Walter E. Simmons with hope for his speedy recovery. The constitution was amended by dropping the age limit of membership but limiting the voting privilege to those over 18.

The following were appointed as nominating for 1915: Dr. Charles S. Adams, James B. Geddes, Roy C. Baker, Dr. Charles E. Monroe and Fred M. Rollins.

A plan was taken up for paying all fixed charges from annual subscriptions and applying special funds to special purposes.

TWO ASSESSORS ASKED TO RESIGN

Mayor Miller Says the People of Our City Demanded It Election Day

List of Officials Who Will Be Missed Next Week

The rumors Monday that there was something doing at City Hall proved to be true this morning, when Mayor Miller gave out the information that he had requested the resignation of Eben Stocker and Wellington W. Mitchell of the Board of Assessors. The letters to these two members of the Board were similar and read as follows:

Mr. Eben Stocker:

"The people of our city made it emphatic that they wanted a new Board of Assessors, and in deference to their command I therefore ask for your resignation, to take effect as soon as possible."

(Signed) "John L. Miller, Mayor."

Whether or not the two gentlemen will resign or whether they will compel the Mayor to take the initiative and remove them from office is not known. There is a rumor about the Hall however they will not comply with the request. The term of Mr. Stocker expires the first Monday in February 1915, and that of Mr. Mitchell on February 1, 1916. Mr. Stocker is an appointee of Mayor Stone while the first appointment of Mr. Mitchell came from ex-Mayor Shea.

The trustees of the Fore River bridge met in the Mayor's office recently and organized with Mayor Miller as chairman and Selectman Hersey of Hingham as secretary and treasurer.

The Mayor was asked this morning if there was anything doing in the Chief of Police matter and he replied no, nothing at present.

Under the new orders in the Police department, the police patrol answers all alarms of fire. At the fire in the chimney at the Greenleaf block the wagon responded in charge of Sergt. Bishop.

There will be a lot of new faces in the offices at City Hall next Monday morning for that is the date when the new appointees will take office. The going of the old and the coming of the

NOTICE

Again we ask those sending news or other matter by mail to direct it to the company or newspaper rather than to individual members of the company or employees. If addressed to individuals and they were ill or not at the office, it might be several days in reaching its proper destination and if news matter would be too late for use.

It is a question how much longer our railroad presidents are going to be willing to work for $50,000 a year without joining the I. W. W.

How can Woodrow Wilson expect the support of this newspaper in 1916, when he was three weeks at Pass Christian without sending us a box of oranges or grape-fruit?

The governors are all calling for economy, just as if they thought an economical legislature could get re-elected.

There is general complaint of basket ball players who play a rough game when the umpire is looking.

A large number of investors, who are too clever to put their money into savings banks at four per cent, now have a line of Mexican government bonds on which interest has been defaulted.

The Congressmen are now returning to Washington, and resuming their duties in finding jobs for their constituents.

A marked tendency is reported among prominent lawyers, doctors and ministers to throw up their positions, and obtain office boy's jobs in the Ford automobile factories.

Strange that the old folks will dance the tango, when it's so much more suitable for them to be getting their headstones ready.

A bill before Congress would distribute 334,000 Krag rifles among clubs and schools. It this becomes law, the school teachers will have to behave.

The cross roads store keeper should not be allowed to keep a cow, as he would be an interlocking director.

Although Harry Thaw would be perfectly safe if held in confinement, he has not yet petitioned the court to keep him locked up.

The theatened intervention of European powers in Mexico seems to consist mostly of yanking the door bell of our State department.

It is believed that a good many Chicago people would observe an "Everybody at Church Sunday" if the services weren't over 35 minutes long.

Although it is predicted that next winter eggs will go to $1.00 a dozen, few people will keep hens, as it would necessitate their getting up in the morning at 6.30 A. M.

It is considered all right for a fellow to embrace a girl in dancing, provided the steps are not called by some new fangled name.

MR. WILSON'S STYLE.

President Wilson spent much time at Pass Christian writing his trust message. But that does not mean a voluminous state paper. With most of the Presidents, the more time spent, the longer the message spun out. Mr. Wilson seems to spend his time compacting and concentrating. That gives him a big audience.

Our Presidents have always had facility in the use of language. Some of them have been clever phrase makers, and have coined expressions that stick in political life. But none of them, previous to Mr. Wilson, fully realized the effectiveness of the concentrated, direct style of a newspaper editorial.

The annual message to Congress used to be a compendium and reference book, rather than an address. After long booming statistics and comprehensive detail, the vital discussion of tariff, trusts, or currency would be reached. By that time the Congressman had retired yawning, getting the gist of it in some hastily written reporter's summary. The public reads the headlines. Occasional messages dealing with special subjects often strung out to 5000 words or more.

A newspaper editor expects to handle a large question in 1200 words, (the average newspaper column.) The public is trained to this concise terse, direct, logical style. A public speaker needs 5000 to 10,000 words for the same subject. The hearer wearies at leisurely, wandering diversions to side issues, which platform oratory develops. That is why the newspaper is so much more influential than the lecture platform.

Mr. Wilson has set a new fashion in state papers. Any public man or public speaker should reflect on the advantages of this terse, journalistic style. For every one man who will read a 5000 word message, there are 500 who will read a 1000 word utterance.

TIGHT CLOTHES?

There is an old saying that a tailor is a ninth part of a man. It is needless to say that this opprobrious classification does grave injustice to very worthy men. A tailor is just as manly and dignified a figure as a banker or a lawyer.

Still every type of character has its own failings. It is the fault of tailors as a class that the trade tends to develop too much love for the ornate. That is good so far as the female sex is concerned, as it is their mission to be beautiful. But applied to men, whose mission it is to be strong and resourceful, it is not appropriate.

Perhaps this over emphasis on decorative elements, which of course was once far more extreme, led to the slighting estimate stated by the proverb.

Tailors still try to "put over" new fashions more or less contrary to the desires of men and inappropriate to their needs. This may arise either from the desire for more adornment, or partly from the business fact that the oftener styles change, the more clothes will be sold.

This year the National Associations of Clothing Designers, in session at Baltimore, is planning the styles of 1914. It is given out that man's clothes will be tight, clinging to his form "like tights to the pony ballet."

There have been periods when it was said the fashionable man had to use a shoe horn to put on his trousers. The garments looked like it. No matter how many clothing designers and tailors may decree such styles, they will not be generally worn. A man may want to look like a fashion plate, but he does not want to feel like one when he rolls back his cuffs to do a day's work.

INTERLOCKING DIRECTORS.

A wide range of views is entertained in the business community as to the extent to which the so-called interlocking directorates" should be forbidden. There is one species of business interlocking, however, in the smaller centers, to which few people would object, and which the new law should deal with very carefully if at all.

In the country town and small city, something like this frequently happens. The community needs a new bank, or one already in existence needs co-operation. A local manufacturer or other business man consents to take office in that bank, not from expectation of salary, and often with no hope of making money in bank stock. The time he takes, away from his business is either given free or ill paid. The bank could hardly live without the knowledge of local conditions and business judgement possessed by directors of this type, whose service is given almost entirely out of community spirit.

On the other side of the deal, the home bank has one or more men who devote their whole time to its work. They acquire the peculiar knowledge of human nature and acute forcast of financial conditions that goes with bank training. They are asked to serve as directors in local commercial enterprises. Their banking experience helps on such enterprises, and the returns are usually small for the time and thought given.

The new law soon to be passed by Congress should be framed to meet the ills of "big business," and should deal cautiously with the more unselfish and public spirited exchange of experience so often seen in the smaller places. The two kinds of thing may seem technically alike, but in effects they are radically different.

The so-called interlocking between great corporations is easily capable of abuses, andis condemned by public sentiment. In the life of the country town and small city there is none too much exchange of these services.

MURRAY'S TRIP IS FRUITLESS

Hunted Club to Force Concessions From America

BEATEN IN SOUTH AMERICA

Not a Single Oil Concession Despite Vigorous Work, Which Is, However, of Shady Character—Failure Compels England to Return to Smaller Type of Warships

London, Jan. 27.—Lord Murray of Elibank, who has refused all requests for interviews since he returned to England, in a speech at a dinner given by Lord Cowdray to the heads of the departments of S. Pearson & Son, acknowledged he had come back a beaten man.

What Murray neglected to tell, however, was that his failure was due to his own cupidity in endeavoring to seize without payment the results of two years' work and the expenditure of large sums by another British subject seeking oil rights in Colombia.

This made the other Englishman and the latter's American partner turn on Murray and drive him out of South America without any concessions either for oil or for a canal, which had been desired as a club to force concessions from America.

England is also compelled to return to the smaller type of ship and to the smaller calibre of guns, for the announced British policy of construction of warships depended wholly on obtaining the adequate oil supply which Murray was to find in South and Central America.

The battleships voted last year of the Queen Elizabeth class are or 27,500 tons and twenty-five knots, with fifteen-inch guns, using exclusively oil fuel. The admiralty planned to build five battleships, according to this year's program, of 30,000 tons each, but Murray's campaign having failed the announcement was made that the five battleships of this year's program would be of 25,000 tons and twenty-one knots with 13.5-inch guns, coal being the principal fuel and oil only an auxiliary.

When Murray went to South America, J. C. Thompson, a Canadian, and C. E. Otis of New York, had been in Colombia for two years prospecting for oil, and denounced large tracts of land in various states through Colombian agents. Murray persuaded Dr. Araujo, Colombian minister of public works, to repeal by executive order the laws governing the denouncement of oil and mineral lands, thus killing the rights of all those whose titles were not yet completed by government recognition.

Murray then entered on the lands of Thompson and Otis, and seized under the concession all the valuable ground the Colombian syndicate discovered. Thompson and Otis hurried to Bogota and began a campaign to block Murray, the result of which was that Murray's concession failed of approval in congress. Thompson and Otis continued their campaign through South and Central America, killing his efforts everywhere, and Murray returned unsuccessful.

RUN ON BOSTON BANK

Every Depositor Paid as Fast as Money Can Be Handed Out

Boston, Jan. 27.—Because of an unfounded rumor that the institution was not in good condition there was a run on the South Boston Savings bank, fully 800 depositors calling to withdraw their money.

The bank is in good condition, according to its officials, who kept the doors open until after the regular afternoon closing hour to allow all in line to withdraw their money.

At one time about 400 depositors were standing in line. Every one was paid as fast as the money could be handled. Police guarded the place.

BRIEF IS FILED AT LAST MINUTE

New York Must Say Whether Thaw Is Sane or Insane

ARGUMENT OF HIS LAWYERS

Indications That They Are Prepared to Place Jerome on Trial For "Persecution" of Their Client—Declare Prisoner Had Legal Right to Escape From Matteawan Asylum

Concord, N. H., Jan. 27.—That the nine lawyers now looking out for the interests of Harry K. Thaw are preparing to put William T. Jerome on trial for "persecuting" their client, more than to resist arguments for a writ of habeas corpus, was shown when Martin, Howe and Donigan, acting for their conferes, filed their answer with the clerk of the federal court.

It was the last day of the twenty additional days granted to them by Judge Aldrich, and, acting on the policy of delay they have adopted, the lawyers did not file their brief until just before closing time.

Three questions are raised. Is the accused substantially charged with a crime against the laws of the demanding state? Is he a fugitive from justice? Is the requisition sought for any ulterior or private purpose?

A long argument is devoted to the fact that Thaw is in his present predicament, and his former one in Matteawan, for that matter (for the brief asserts that Thaw was "railroaded" to Matteawan, and that his detention there was illegal and unconstitutional), because of the "malice of private individuals."

In another place it is evident further that the nine lawyers have "taken a fling" at Thaw's "Nemesis" for they say: "Public policy would require this board (the board of commissioners in lunacy) to deport Thaw to Pennsylvania, but he is detainel in Matteawan, and his detention, against the practise with other insane criminals, gives rise to and justifies the presumption that he is detained there at the expense and request of some private person or persons whose influence is sufficient to cause his detention."

That the state of New York will have to admit either that Thaw is sane or insane is the gist of the argument. If sane, as they have argued before, then he was detained in Matteawan illegally and had a perfect right to escape, committing no crime by so doing, no matter by what means. If he is insane, then he cannot commit a crime, nor can the state of New York extradite him.

It was said that the hearing will probably be held some time this week, and word has been received from Jerome that he will be on hand for the state of New York.

It had been expected that Judge Aldrich would hear the argument immediately, but he was heard from during the day to the effect that he would take time to thoroughly go over the briefs filed by both sides before setting a day for the hearing, thus creating another delay in the famous case.

Thaw, himself, would make no comment on the answer filed. As a matter of fact, he is now enjoying less liberty than he has at any time since he has been in Concord.

The lawyers in the case have decided that Thaw has talked enough and have made it one of the duties of his keepers to see that he says absolutely nothing.

THIS NEW MEDICINE SAVES YOU MONEY

We are druggists right here in your town and make a living out of the drug business, but it is because people have to have drugs and not because we like to see people suffer—we don't. Our duty is to render the best service we can, and when someone is ailing, we are interested in seeing them take the best medicine there is for their particular trouble. We don't recommend 'cure-alls,' as we don't believe there are such things. We don't want you to spend more than you have to. Some of you get small wages, and when you're sick, none at all, and you should get the most you can for your money.

We recently came across a new remedy for increasing strength and building up people who are run-down and emaciated. We know that a slight trouble sometimes grows into a serious one, and to stop it in the beginning, will save you money in the end. This new compound is called Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion. It is the best remedy, when you are run-down, tired out, nervous—no matter what the cause. It doesn't merely stimulate you and make you feel good for a few hours, but takes hold of the weakness and builds you up to a healthy, normal condition. It is a real nerve-food tonic and builder of good blood, strong muscle, good digestion. It contains Hypophosphites, which tone the nerves, and pure Olive Oil, which nourishes the nerves, the blood and the entire system. Pleasant to take. Contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs. We promise that if you are not perfectly satisfied with it, we'll give back your money as soon as you tell us. Sold only at the 7,000 Rexall Stores, and in this town only by us. $1.00.

QUINCY MUSIC HALL.

At Quincy Music hall Wednesday night will be shown the greatest event that has ever visited Quincy "The Battle of Gettysburg," the most thrilling moving picture production now in America. No one should miss seeing this wonderful struggle, as it is something that will always live in one's memory. It gives the entire event of the battle in five reels. The following is a description of one of the greatest scenes of the battle.

It is the night of July 2, 1863. General Lee decides in council to aim his chief blow on the morrow at Hancock's position on Cemetery hill. During the night ammunition trains arrive. Trenches are dug and everything is made ready for the crucial conflict of the next day. The morning of the third is spent in preparations. At one o'clock one hundred and fifteen of Lee's guns open a rapid cross fire on Cemetery hill. A hundred Union guns reply and for two hours this artillery duel continues, shaking the very hillsides with their fearful detonations. This was to prepare the way for Pickett's charge. Pickett and his men stand ready for the word. Lee speaks and then Pickett and his Virginians in the van, supported on the rights by Wilcox's Brigade and on the left by Pettigrew's North Carolinians, start swiftly over the undulating plains.

The line is fully three miles in length and there are 18,000 men in the desperate charge. As they move forward shot and shell from Hancock's batteries make fearful lanes in their compact ranks, but on they press. As they approach nearer cannister is used with deadly effect, but on they run through this inferno of shot and smoke and shell. One entire division is overwhelmed and captured but the others press on and on. Over the Union defences many of them go and fall inside the breastworks they have so bravely stormed. The citizens of Gettysburg crowd to the nearby hills to watch the greatest battle of American history and the most heroic charge in the history of the world.

Thayer Academy Protests the Payment of Taxes

A petition asking that the inhabitants of the town of Braintree be ordered to refund $554.88 paid to the town in taxes under protest, has been filed in the Superior Court in Dedham by the trustees of Thayer Academy who have asked the Supreme court to sell their property.

The petitioners says that the institution is a literary, charitable, benevolent and scientific one, incorporated under the laws of Massachusetts, and that on April 1, 1913, they were the owners of certain buildings in Braintree which under the law were exempt from taxation. They further say that the assessment levied was illegal and in violation of the law and they ask the Superior court to order a reimbursment of the $554.88 paid as taxes, with interest.

The property affected by the assessment includes: House, 714 Washington street, valuation $4500, lot of land, 147,000 feet, $5000; house, 725 Washington street, valuation $3500; house, 23 Central avenue, $2700, lot of land, 15,440 feet, $1500; house, Hobart avenue, $5000; lots 12, 13 and 14, Academy street, 18,722 feet, $1000; lots, West Tremont street, $2000. Total valuation, $27,200.

Thayer Academy was founded by Sylvanus Thayer, LL. D., brevet brigadier-general U. S. Army, who was born in Braintree and there passed the latter years of an honored and efficient life. At his decease in 1872 he left his property in trust for the establishment of a school for the benefit of what is now the towns of Braintree Randolph, Holbrook and the City of Quincy. The academy was instituted accordingly and went into operation in 1877. The academy from time to time has been the beneficiary in several wills. At present there is a good percentage of the students residents of this city. The winter term began Jan. 5.

There is no question about the buildings and land used for school purposes, but on other property owned by the trustees.

siderable sums of money he was no: under bonds. All this we changed, and a system was adopted, chiefly through Mr. Sidelinger's efforts, to do business as for instance it is done in Mr. Sidelinger's office.

Mr. Sidelinger had refused to serve as treasurer, and Mr. Hearn's selection seemed to be the proper one. He is living in Quincy and was accessible when needed, as he could go to the banks, to the Safe Deposit vaults, and look after local bills much more conveniently than any other trustee.

Mr. Smith and myself spent considerable time regularly in inspecting carefully all the books offered for our selection and in the choice of other books. From various quarters came the compliment that the service here was higher and better than ever before, and we were planning for better things in addition.

Then again it was felt necessary to get in touch with Mr. Albert Crane. He had requested that we secure permission from the Legislature to hold a half million dollars worth more of property. I was delegated to visit him in order to get and keep in close touch with him.

Two things seemed imperative. First that we should have other branch libraries besides those of West Quincy and Atlantic. One is needed immediately at Quincy Point, though Wollaston naturally would come next.

Then the salaries, with the exception of the librarian, needed to be increased, and we desired if possible to secure members of the staff from Quincy, and yet we faced the fact that as soon as any of our staff were proficient, they were hired away from us and tempted by larger salaries offered by other libraries.

In a word, matters had been after long and persistent efforts well adjusted, when at one swoop three heads fell off, and three new men were given positions as political rewards.

I voice the opinion of every thoughtful man who knows Library work, that the last place in the world to displace experienced and competent men with inexperienced men is the Library. If it is a sin or a crime to inject politics into the School Committee board, it is equally so to use Library trusteeships as political rewards. To use an old sailor phrase, the Board of Trustees is "knocked galley end-wise" again and conditions are as bad as they were three years ago.

We realize now what a mistake it is to make the term of office a year, and to give the Mayor absolute power of appointment, although no one ever dreamed that any Mayor, above all a professed christian, would queer the situation as has John L. Miller.

I am constantly turning down requests for me to serve in other capacities. You will bear me out in my statement that I have tried to serve Quincy, my home city, first of all, and Mrs. Tobey and I are gratified that I am relieved from this arduous position.

In my judgment, when Mr. Crane hears of it, as he certainly will through some of his relatives, he will go slow about doing anything for the Library until he can be assured that its business is being conducted properly. When I visited the Cranes at their home in Stamford, Ct. Mrs. Crane called my attention to the fact that the Trustees were changed often, and I was able to say that death had removed several of them during the past few years, while I had to admit that some of the Trustees were appointed for political reasons.

Before this wrong can be righted, it will be found that the progress of the Library has received a serious setback through Mayor Miller's appointments. His appointees may be good enough but it was clearly a case of let well enough alone. So much for the Library.

Rufus B. Tobey.

RIVADAVIA AT BOSTON

Reached the Commonwealth Docks at 2 P. M.

The great Argentine battleship Rivadavia which left the Fore River shipyard Monday with a convoy of four tugs reached the Commonwealth docks at South Boston at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. She passed out at Hull Gut at 12.20 swung around and passed up the main ship channel at 1 p. m. A large crowd watched the vessel from the different piers as she moved up the harbor.

The first of 1000 tons of picked coal for use during the balance of her trial trips were put aboard today.

Saturday the Rivadavia expects to leave the pier for the North Atlantic where she will be called upon to make full, half and quarter speeds, going 22 1-2 knots for 30 hours, 20 knots for 30 hours and 15 knots for the same period of time.

In the gun tests which follow the big battleship will fire her broadsides with every gun working at once on each side. Forward and aft turrets will be fired at the same time. The guns have been tested and two were fired on the recent trials which were discontinued owing to engine trouble.

The firing of the guns is to test the strength of the structure, and unless she is able to withstand the terrific shocks, equaled only when a ship is in action, she will not be approved by the Argentine Commission which has superintended her construction.

During these severe tests Admiral Bowles who was instrumental in securing the contract for his company will be aboard, and it is expected that the United States navy officials will direct the firing of the guns.

After the business session a social hour with games was enjoyed. Refreshments were served by the fourth vice president.

Landed Estates of British Aristocracy Under the Hammer

ARE the great financiers of the United States and the great landowners of England beginning to feel the influences of the same popular movement? Has the J. P. Morgan retirement from various directorates any bearing upon the retirement of the Duke of Bedford as one of the great landowners of England? Just recently the latter disposed of 250 acres in the heart of London for a fabulous sum, the amount of which was not given, but it is estimated at $100,000,000 or more.

A wonderful assortment of noted buildings is included in the piece of land, among them the Royal Opera, the Drury Lane, Aldwych, Strand and Lyceum theaters, Covent Garden market, Bow street police court, the National Sporting club, many great newspapers and printing plants and miscellaneous buildings galore.

The Duke of Bedford has long been noted as the greatest landlord in London, and this title to grandeur passes with the land to a commoner of parliament, Harry Mallaby-Deeley.

The present trend in the government's policy toward landowners is sufficient to lead a very wealthy man, like the Duke of Bedford, to think it his duty toward himself and his family to sell his estates when he can.

The same argument applies to the recent sale of the Earl of Kintore's estates in Scotland. These estates are large, but are heavily mortgaged. The Earl of Kintore gets something out of the estate, but everything that can possibly be spared is put back into the land or applied to the paying off of the mortgages, so that in course of time the estate would come back into the family without encumbrances.

In a case like this the trustees of the estate feel themselves in the same position as the wealthy Duke of Bedford and decide to sell the estate before legislation will make it less valuable.

Many of those families who depended on their lands for their entire income have grown poorer and poorer as the agriculture of England has declined under many modern developments. Such families have abandoned their estates in shoals, but the greater and richer families, who own city properties and valuable mineral holdings acquired by marriage into great mercantile families, have resolutely until recently held on to their broad acres. In these days such families are selling huge estates. They are eager to sell now, although they are wealthy and not pressed for ready money.

There is a very natural question to meet here. Why, if such people sell, are there any buyers? An answer to this is an answer to the question as to whether or not the present government's policy as regards land is going to benefit the poorer class occupied on land, whether rural or urban.

Mr. Mallaby-Deeley, who has just bought the Covent Garden estate of the Duke of Bedford, declared that he has no fear of any legislation affecting fair dealing landowners. The Duke of Bedford, the administrator of the Kintore estates and scores of others who have sold their estates in recent years evidently think otherwise.

While the Duke of Bedford is not the largest landowner in England, his holdings are the most valuable. The Duke of Sutherland is the greatest landowner with 1,358,000 acres, and the Duke of Westminster has approximately 1,000,000 acres, of which 600 acres are in London. The Duke of Richmond has 286,000 acres, and the late Duke of Fife had 240,000 acres. The Duke of Devonshire has 186,000 acres, the Duke of Portland 183,200 acres, the Duke of Montrose 115,000 acres, the Duke of Northumberland 186,397 acres, the Duke of Hamilton 157,400 acres, the Duke of Manchester 70,000 acres, the Duke of Norfolk 49,400 acres, the Duke of Marlborough 19,685 acres and there are other titled men who own land in thousand acre tracts. It is intimated that many of the other aristocratic landholders will follow in the wake of the Duke of Bedford and the Earl of Kintore.

BOSTON AUTOMOBILE SHOW.

Only a dreamer would have ventured a few years ago to predict that the gasoline motor cars in all save propulsion would be operated by a push button, yet this is the marvelous stage that the 1914 automobile has reached. In a word one presses a button to start the motor, turn on the lights, and now comes the device that will shift the gears by the mere press of a button on or near the steering wheel. All of this has been made possible by the electrification of the 1914 motor car. The electric gear shift is the latest of these vital innovations, several forms of this device will be shown in several makes of cars to be exhibited at the Boston Automobile show to be held in Mechanics Building, March 7, to 14.

Manager Chester I. Campbell, who, perhaps is in closer touch with the very latest models than any other man in New England, states that it is in the field of transmission and control that the most vital innovations of the year are to be found. He states that a number of cars have adopted new ideas along this line, the most prominent of these being the two speed axle.

Despite the fact that Europe has gone back to the "four" yet the coming Boston show will demonstrate that the "six" now predominates in this country and that the number of fours are growing less. The sliding sleeve motor is also growing in popularity. This will be shown in the big Hub show, as there will be several new makes of cars to exhibit this type of motor. To the practical business man the Commercial Motor Vehicle Show which opens in Mechanics Building, March 17, and winds up the show season on March 21, will be of great interest, as there will be on exhibition every type of powered wagon manufactured in this country.

☞A cordial invitation through this paper is extended to all school teachers in Quincy and vicinity, to see free of charge the great educational and historical event "The Battle of Gettsburg," Wednesday after school at 4.15 at Quincy Music hall. SPORTING NOTES.

The pupils of Quincy High school are considering the organization of a relay team to participate in the coming B. A. A. and other athletic games to be held during the winter and early spring. An effort will be made to get the use of the track at the Y. M. C. A. for training purposes. The squad will report to George Paulsen, a teacher at the school, who has charge of the runners.

English High beat Milton in hockey at Milton on Monday 5 to 1. During the first period English scored but one goal but in the second period the visiting stars grouped and could not be stopped.

Included in the 274 entries received by George V. Brown of the B. A. A. for the games to be held at Mechanics building Feb. 7 is one from Franz Marceau who will represent Dartmouth in the 1000 yard run.

MILITARY COMPANY.

The members of Quincy lodge, Junior Order of Moose, will organize a military company to assist in carrying out the degree work by the members. H. W. Darrow of Houghs Neck has been elected drill master. The arrangements were completed at the regular meeting in Protection hall Monday night. After the meeting a whist party was held and the winners were Oscar Frisk, Jr., Fred Stronach and Alfred Benedetti.

BEACH STREET.

The Daily Ledger's comments relative to property values of Beach street were correct on Monday, the street ranking third in Ward Five, but in the list the value of buildings should have been printed $199,225.

ELEVATED DIVIDEND CUT

Decision Increasing Wages of Employes Given as Reason

Boston, Jan. 27.—The Boston Elevated Railway company reduced its semi-annual dividend to 2 percent, a reduction from a 6 percent annual basis to 4 percent. According to a statement issued by the company, the reduction is due to the increased expenses brought about through compliance with the award of the board of arbitration increasing the wages of the employes.

This is the third of a series of disasters which has overtaken the investors in New England railway securities during the last year. First, the Boston and Maine dividend was passed after an unbroken record of a half a century; then the New Haven disbursement was first reduced from 8 to 4 and finally also passed altogether after a continuous record for dividends since before the Civil war. Now comes this cut in the Boston Elevated rate.

HELD ON NINE CHARGES

Burglar Kaufman Goes to Jail In Default of $10,000 Bonds

Boston, Jan. 27.—August Kaufman, respectable citizen by day and burglar and safe blower by night, was arraigned in the municipal court and held in $10,000 bonds for the grand jury. In default of bail he was remanded to jail.

Kaufman was charged with breaking and entering in the night time in nine counts, and with having burglars' tools in his possession. He waived a reading of the complaint and was held without pleading, $5000 on the breaking and entering charges and $5000 for having burglar tools in his possession.

Because of the similarity of the jobs in many of the Boston stores and for other reasons the police are confident they have the man who is responsible for more safe robberies than any burglar in recent years.

BEN LINDSEY'S WIFE IS "SOME CHICKEN"

Popular Judge Has Denver Newsboys' Word For It

Denver, Jan. 27.—Bearing his bride in triumph into the city of Denver while 1000 newsboys made the "welkin ring" with shouts of greeting, Judge Benjamin Lindsey passed through the "Welcome" arch at the Union station and smiled blandly. This was the first time the boys had seen Mrs. Lindsey, formerly Miss Henrietta Brevoort of Detroit.

"Well, what do you thing of her, boys?" the judge shouted.

"Some chicken," yelled more than a hundred of the chorus.

The judge blushed and turned in confusion to Mrs. Lindsey, who was looking very pretty.

"I guess you're right, boys," said the judge.

DEATH WAS ACCIDENTAL

Brittle Bones of Insane Patient Fractured In Necessary Handling

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 27.—That the ribs of Charles E. Seaver of Cambridge, who died in the Worcester state hospital from internal injuries caused by eleven broken ribs, were so brittle that they were fractured in the necessary handling of the patient, is the decision handed down by Judge Utley on an inquest held on Seaver's death.

Seaver died under such conditions that members of his family called for an inquiry and the finding of the court is:

"There was no evidence of improper treatment and I find that no unlawful act of any person contributed to his death."

PROMISE TO WOMEN

Two Church Prelates Plan to Witness Forcible Feeding of Suffragettes

London, Jan. 27.—The bishop of London last night promised a deputation from the Women's Social and Political union that if he can obtain the home secretary's consent he will soon visit Holloway jail, accompanied by the bishop of Kensington, in order to investigate the allegations that three suffragettes imprisoned there suffer great tortures while being subjected to forcible feeding.

If official permission is obtained, the two bishops will witness the operation.

Kansas Woman Will Seek to Win Election as a Progressive

Goodland, Kan., Jan. 27.—Mrs. Eve M. Murphy of Goodland announced her candidacy for congress from the Sixth Kansas district, as a Progressive.

"The fact that I am a woman, a wife and a mother, I believe, will aid me," declared Mrs. Murphy in her announcement. "Since my children are grown and my husband is willing, I have decided to be a candidate for the nomination."

SAID TO HAVE HEADED GANG

Alleged Swindler Chief Is Arrested at Boston

HEAVY BAIL IS DEMANDED

Rosenfield Had Been Chased to Europe and Back Again to Answer to Indictment Warrant Charging Him With Conspiracy to Steal $87,000 In Sensational "De Luxe" Book Frauds

Boston, Jan. 27.—Samuel Rosenfield, alleged by the police to be the "king of the de luxe book swindlers," was arrested at a Back Bay hotel on an indictment warrant charging conspiracy to steal $87,000 from Mrs. Mary L. Rogers, a society woman of Beacon street.

There are further indictments against Rosenfield by the grand jury charging conspiracy to steal, larceny in sixteen counts and three counts of falsely obtaining signatures.

During the past year private detectives, acting on a "tip" that Rosenfield was in Austria, went to that country for him. Last week he was located in New York, but slipped away before an arrest could be made.

The disclosure of the "de luxe" book frauds fourteen months ago caused a sensation throughout the country. Once the first disclosure was made that comparatively worthless editions had been palmed off as rare or de luxe, victims began to appear by the score and they included many persons well known for their wealth or prominence in public life.

Mary L. Rogers brought suit in the supreme court to recover $82,450, which she said she paid for supposed valuable works which proved, she alleged, to be worth not more than $2000. The defendants in the suit included George Barrie & Son, Robert Barrie of the same firm, James and Glen F. Farmer and the Anglo-American Authors' association.

Mrs. Rogers claimed that the men who induced her to buy the books represented that they were commissioned by a Chicago millionaire to spend $250,000 in buying a library for him, and that they had come to her to buy a part of this library because they were short of money at a time when they had a rare opportunity to get some books at a bargain. Handsome profits were promised her, she alleged, when it came time to turn the books over to the millionaire.

In her complaint Mrs. Rogers said Rosenfield induced her to invest $15,000 in a set of Shakespeare, $4100 for a "Life of Lincoln," $12,000 for a life of Napoleon and other volumes, $20,000 to get possession of all the books he had bought for the Chicago man, and other smaller sums.

Rosenfield pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Judge Chase in the superior criminal court and was held in $10,000 bail. He seemed unconcerned when he was taken to headquarters and booked and photographed.

INDICTED BY GRAND JURY

Skipper Held For Assault and Giving Bad Food to His Crew

New York, Jan. 27.—Captain Townsend of the American bark Manga Reva, who was held by Commissioner Shields on complaint of a sailor named Shea, was indicted by the federal grand jury.

The indictment charges Townsend with assaulting Shea and violating the navigation laws by furnishing his men with food unfit for human consumption. Townsend furnished bail for his appearance for trial.

The Manga Reva engages in coastwise traffic between eastern ports and San Francisco.

CROWDS PAY TRIBUTE

British Notables at Simple Funeral Ceremony For Lord Strathcona

London, Jan. 27.—With a ceremony remarkable for its simplicity, the funeral service for Lord Strathcona and Mt. Royal was held in Westminster abbey. There was a notable lack of pomp and display in everything, the private service at the home, the public reading of the ritual in the abbey and the interment at Highgate. The cortege consisted of the open hearse and only twenty carriages.

While the royalties, cabinet ministers, diplomats and other high personages waited in Westminster abbey, a reverent throng of many thousands lined every foot of the streets from Grosvenor square to the abbey, through which the procession passed. All bared their heads as the catafalque went by.

There were no soldiers, no bands, no display, but the silent throng remained in the streets with uncovered heads throughout the entire six miles to Highgate.

A MAN OF PEACE

But Carson Says He Is Not In Favor of Peace at Any Price

London, Jan. 27.—Sir Edward Carson, leader of the Ulsterites, in a speech at Lincoln last night, said he was ready to join John Redmond in an attempt to extend real local government to Ireland or to remove any abuses or injustices, social or religious. Referring to Redmond's speech at Waterford he declared:

"If this is the last word from his side we are in a lamentable and critical state of affairs. I am a man of peace, but not of peace at any price."

In his speech Redmond said that if any change was made in the home rule bill it would only be to buy the good will of the opponents of the bill and he added that he saw no prospects of their good will being purchased at any price whatever.

I. W. W. LEADERS RAPPED BY JOHNSON

Preach Anarchistic Doctrine, Says California's Governor

Sacramento, Cal., Jan. 27.—"The line must be drawn between the man really wanting work and the few leaders who preach the tenets of the Industrial Workers of the World, who neither wish work for themselves nor desire employment for others, and who preach an anarchistic doctrine at variance with organized government," said Governor Johnson on receiving the report of State Labor Commissioner McLaughlin on the condition of the unemployed in California and the need of extending state aid.

McLaughlin's report showed there were 25,000 idle men in San Francisco at the time of his investigation, the first week in January, only 3000 or 4000 of whom were in need of assistance. Thousands were living off their savings of last summer and autumn.

GRONDIN'S "GHOST"

Prosecutors Declare It a Product of Accused Man's Imagination

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 27.—Denial of charges by attorneys for John H. Grondin, accused of having murdered his wife, that the police used the "third degree" with a "ghost" as the central figure in the attempt to extort a confession, was made by the district attorney's office.

According to W. H. Shannon, deputy district attorney, Grondin occasionally becomes delirious from the use of a drug. Shannon declared that the "ghost" which, according to Grondin's attorneys, appeared in a darkened room where the police had taken the man, and demanded in gloomy tones "Why did you murder me?" was a product of the accused man's imagination.

THE PATRIOT SPY

How General Washington Secured Important Information

By F. A. MITCHEL

There is still standing in Morristown, N. J., a house which General Washington while maneuvering against the British army at New York occupied as his headquarters. It is kept in excellent repair by an association organized for the purpose and contains a great many relics connected with the Father of His Country. In the kitchen is the same enormous fireplace, with cooking paraphernalia, as was used in Revolutionary times. To some the most interesting room is one on the ground floor, in the rear of the building, that was used by Washington as a private office.

One spring morning in the year 1777 a young man wearing the uniform of a lieutenant of cavalry in the Continental army passed the sentry before Washington's headquarters at Morristown, returned the man's salute and entered the main hall. There he was met by the general's orderly, whom he told to announce Lieutenant John Woodville. In a few moments the officer was standing in Washington's presence.

"Be seated," said the commander, turning from his desk. "I have sent for you to do a more important work than any with which I have yet intrusted you. I wish you to go to New York and if possible learn the intentions of General Howe. I suspect that he is intending to move against Philadelphia. If so he must either march across New Jersey, where he will have to fight us, or go by sea. If he goes by land I desire to be advised of the time he moves, that I may be prepared to intercept his passage. My main object is to so threaten him that he will not be able to send any more troops to assist Burgoyne. I deem it essential that you should understand the situation in order that you may act intelligently. How soon can you leave?"

"As soon as I can secure a disguise."

"Very well. Go, and remember that our cause may depend upon your success."

Lieutenant Woodville left his commander and within an hour, in the garb of a young countryman, rode out of Morristown down the road leading to Orange, where he stopped at the tavern—the building is still standing—for dinner, thence to Newark, where he turned south toward Elizabethtown. He was now in territory within reach of the British at New York, and it behooved him to keep a sharp lookout not only to conceal his mission, but for indications of the movements of the enemy.

Woodville pretended to be a Tory to Tory sympathizers and found those of that persuasion jubilant at the prospect of ending the war and re-establishing the authority of the king. They told him that the troops from Canada were to be met near the mouth of the Mohawk river by troops from the south and the line of communication by way of the Hudson and Lake Champlain would soon be open to the British, cutting the confederated colonies in two parts. But he also heard from "patriots" that Burgoyne was marching through a wild country, in which it was difficult to feed his army, and unless he were successful in forming a junction with the force moving from the south he would be in a critical position.

This indicated to the young lieutenant that what Howe did in the way of sending troops to support Burgoyne was of great importance to the cause, and it was especially essential that General Washington should know, so far as possible, just what Howe was doing in the matter. But Woodville was not near enough to the British headquarters to learn much about the matter, so he determined to move on to the west bank of the Hudson, where Jersey City now stands. A family of patriots of the name of Curtiss lived there, to whom he was known and on whom he could rely. On his way he passed the King's Arms, a tavern kept by a Tory named Smithson, who had a pretty daughter, Jennie, upon whom the young soldier looked with loving eyes. He desired to pay her a visit in passing, but dare not do so, because if recognized by her father he would be betrayed to the British and hanged as a spy, so he went on to the Curtisses, where he was taken in and given a lodging.

Woodville noticed a number of ships lying at anchor in the river and that the boats going to them usually carried what appeared to be supplies. It looked as if they were preparing for a voyage, but to what point did not appear. The spy was near the ferry and noticed soon after his arrival a British soldier disembark, mount his horse and ride westward. A soldier becomes used to the ways of soldiers, and there was something in the man's movements that indicated to Woodville that he was going somewhere with an object. The most likely object he could have was carrying a message.

The spy ran to the barn, got out his horse and, mounting, started to follow the soldier. Catching sight of him ascending the heights back of the river, he slowed his pace, riding only near enough to him to keep him in sight. The Britisher took the road to Elizabethtown. It was drawing near the close of the day, and, passing the King's Arms tavern, he stopped, dismounted and entered.

Woodville drew rein and considered the situation. He saw a negro take the soldier's horse to the barn and argued that the latter would stay to supper and possibly all night. The American wished that he could catch sight of Jennie Smithson without her father seeing him. He waited till it was dark; then, tying his horse to a tree, stole up to the house to reconnoiter.

Looking through a window, he saw the soldier standing before the bar, while the landlord was behind it in the act of serving a mug of flip. Woodville went around to the kitchen and saw Jennie superintending a negro cook, who was cooking the supper. He managed to attract Jennie's attention and, putting his fingers to his lips, signaled her to come out to him. Jennie joined him, and the two retreated into the darkness.

Jennie did not sympathize with the Tories, for she had been born in America and, being very much in love with Woodville, was ready to do anything he asked of her. He inquired if the trooper was to remain all night, and she replied that she did not know. She thought that, having eaten his supper, he would go on to either Newark or Elizabethtown. Woodville told her he suspected the man was a messenger, and if so he desired to get possession of any document he might have on his person. He begged her to find out if possible what was the man's errand and if he were carrying a message to try to get it away from him.

Jennie promised to do all she could in the matter and, returning to the house, brought out something for Woodville to eat and put him in the smokehouse. Later she returned and said that she had talked with the soldier and learned that he was on his way to Princeton, where a British commissary of subsistence was stationed for the purpose of gathering supplies for General Howe's army at New York. She would detain him if possible.

Woodville was puzzled. Having seen the British ships loading with supplies off Manhattan Island, he had got the idea that the force would be transported by sea. Was this commissary to be directed to have supplies ready for the British on a march through Princeton, or was he to be ordered to send them to New York that they might be loaded on the ships? This uncertainty rendered it important that Jennie should secure further information on the subject. Woodville paced back and forth before the smokehouse impatiently awaiting her return.

An hour passed, and Woodville concluded to reconnoiter. Leaving the smokehouse, he went to the front of the house and saw the soldier talking to Jennie, who seemed to be doing her best to entertain him, every now and again rising, going to the bar and returning with a mug of flip for the guest. Satisfied that all was going well, the spy returned to the smokehouse. About 10 o'clock Jennie came to him and told him that the soldier had gone to bed well filled with liquor. As soon as she was assured that he was sound asleep she would go into his room and capture anything he might have in his possession.

Woodville had been deprived of sleep for several nights and while waiting fell into a slumber. He was awakened by Jennie, who thrust a sealed paper into his hands. She had taken the precaution to bring also a flint and steel and a candle and struck a light. Woodville rubbed his eyes and read the superscription on the paper. It was to Captain George Doncaster, commissary of subsistence, Princeton, N. J. Breaking the seal, he read:

Captain—You are hereby ordered to send all the supplies in your possession to a point on the coast directly east of Princeton and deposit them on the beach at the nearest inlet, where they can be taken off in boats. You will also direct any officer in charge of a supply station south of you to transport his supplies to the coast at a convenient point for shipment. Signal by fire on the dunes. The fleet will be near you on the —th.

By order of Major General Howe.

When Woodville had read this he threw his arms about Jennie and gave her a dozen kisses.

"What does it mean?" she asked.

"It means that General Howe is going to attack Philadelphia, and he dare not try to force his way through New Jersey, liable to be pounced upon by General Washington from Morristown. I must be off with the document at once."

Giving Jennie a farewell kiss, Woodville went to the point where he had left his horse and, mounting, rode away. Passing through Newark and Orange, he ascended the rise west of the latter place, and early in the morning rode up to Washington's headquarters at Morristown. Throwing himself from his horse, he asked to see the general. Washington, who had risen early to begin the work of the day, hearing that Woodville had returned, directed that he be shown to his bedroom. On entering the young man held out to him the paper he had secured through Jennie Smithson.

"Ah!" exclaimed the general. "He goes by sea to Philadelphia. Now we know just where and when to meet him."

Washington was not able to prevent the ultimate capture of Philadelphia, but he caused Howe so much trouble that he was prevented from sending more troops to help Burgoyne out of the difficult position into which he had fallen, and the British disaster at Saratoga soon followed.

Jennie Smithson was suspected of having stolen the paper from the British trooper, but the act could never be proved against her. After independence was secured she met her reward in the husband she desired.

WOMEN FROM 30 TO 34 LOVE BEST

Affections of Men Deepest at 24 to 26.

CUPID'S SECRETS ON CHART

Eminent Teutonic Savant Studied Famous Persons' Romances—His Theories Lack Psychological Proofs, Says Professor Warner Brown, but Observations Apparently Sustain Them.

Psychological tests to determine at what particular age men and women love with deepest feeling, conducted at the University of California and at Hamburg university, have resulted in the graphic showing of the "curve of love" by German scientists, but with no results of scientific value at Berkeley.

Professor John Jackh, an eminent German scholar, declared that by pencil and compass he has actually succeeded in plotting the "curve of love," showing that man loves deepest at from twenty-four to twenty-six years of age, while woman has her greatest affection between the ages of thirty and thirty-four.

Men Love but Little After Thirty.

Professor Warner E. Brown of Berkeley, a psychologist of wide reputation, declares that his tests fail to show that there can be any graphic illustration of the intensity of affection for the opposite sex. He is willing to concede that observation would seem to establish Professor Jackh's theories as correct.

The German psychologist holds that men love to a degree between the ages of twenty and twenty-one, but that their "best" love comes between the ages of twenty-four and twenty-six. After this, he contends, and especially after they have arrived at thirty, they love but little.

On the other hand, women are most susceptible to their deepest affection at thirty to thirty-four years, long after man has ceased to be a love factor.

Famous Persons as Examples.

Professor Jackh has based his theories and plotted his "curve of love" on the love affairs in the lives of 400 famous men and women and asserts in a scientific bulletin that these cases are typical of man and woman kind the world over.

"There are no psychological proofs," says Professor Brown, "to show that man or woman may be capable of experiencing greater feeling, such as love, at any particular age, but observation would seem to establish the fact. The majority of men make better sweethearts between the ages of twenty-four and twenty-six, because at that age they are under the sway of romantic ideals.

"With women the age at which this highest capacity is revealed may be later—may even be after she has reached thirty—not because the romantic impulse comes to women so much later, but because its first expression seeks a different outlet than that of man."

ARTIFICIAL DIGESTION NOW.

Professor Bertholet Says He Has Reproduced the Natural Processes.

Professor Daniel Bertholet of Paris claims to have reproduced artificially the processes of digestion by the action of the ultra violet rays from a mercury vapor lamp on food substances contained in a quartz vessel.

The processes were produced without the aid of the ferments which play so great a part in the natural processes.

Winter Home For 25,000 Elk.

A permanent winter refuge of 2,000 acres of land on the east side of Jackson's Hole, in Wyoming, to care for 25,000 head of elk has been arranged by the department of agriculture. It is expected that enough hay will be raised on this tract to feed the entire herd.

PNEUMONIA DON'TS.

The health bureau of Philadelphia has issued a list of "don'ts" to reduce the high death rate of pneumonia. "Pneumonia," says a special bulletin of the bureau, "causes more deaths at this season of the year than any other single disease." The "don'ts" given are as follows:

Don't poison yourself with dirty air by staying in poorly ventilated, overcrowded, foul smelling places. Fresh air does not cause pneumonia or any other disease, but is necessary for good health in winter as well as in summer.

Don't injure your health and lower your vitality by overeating or excesses of any kind.

Don't indulge to excess in alcoholic liquors. People who are addicted to alcohol reduce their resistance to pneumonia and increase the liability of death from it.

Don't sleep with the bedroom windows closed. Night air is purer than day air. It contains less dust and fewer germs.

Don't sit around with wet feet or with wet clothing on.

Don't let any one who has pneumonia pass it on to you. Treat pneumonia as a catching disease.

Don't forget that good general health, maintained at a high standard by right living, is the best possible safeguard against pneumonia or any other infectious or contagious disease.

A SEVEN-YEAR LIMIT

Federal Judge Makes Important Ruling on Citizenship Papers

New York, Jan. 27.—First citizenship papers issued more than seven years ago, or ante-dating the passage of the new naturalization law, hereafter will not be valid, according to Judge Mayer of the federal district court.

In passing upon the case of an alien who in 1905 declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States, but did not make application for full citizenship until Oct. 3, 1913, Mayer ruled that the provisions of the naturalization act which went into effect on Sept. 26, 1906, would apply to all cases.

Under the ruling aliens who have failed to make application for full citizenship within seven years of the date on which first papers were issued to them will have to declare their intention a second time and then wait the required two years for the final papers.

RED LIGHT BILL PASSES

Much-Discussed Measure Now Ready For President's Signature

Washington, Jan. 27.—The Kenyon so-called red light bill, already passed by the senate and proposed to eliminate the segregation district in the capital by injunction, was passed by the house without amendment or opposition.

"You may not do away with concubines and libertines," declared Representative Prouty of Iowa, in urging the bill, "but you can prevent vice flaunting itself in the face of every man who walks down the streets of a city. We hope to do away with the temptations continually in the way of both men and women."

The bill provides that the use of any property in the District of Columbia for immoral purposes may be enjoined, and would assess a tax on the owners of the buildings.

The bill now goes to the president for his signature.

DOCTORS SUE FOR CARE OF RICHESON

Attended Prisoner After His Self-Mutilation In Jail

Boston, Jan. 27.—Dr. John L. Ames and Dr. David D. Brough entered suits in the municipal civil court against Belle A. Floyd, administratrix of the estate of the late Sheriff Seavey, to recover for services in attending Clarence V. T. Richeson, following his self mutilation in jail while waiting trial for the murder of Avis Linnell.

Dr. Howard A. Lothrop brought suits against Belle A. Floyd and against the county of Suffolk last May to recover a $500 fee for performing an operation on the murderer at that time and for $135 for twenty-seven professional visits to him at the jail. His suit against the county of Suffolk was recently tried in court in the jury waive session. The case is still undecided. His other suit is pending.

HELD WITHOUT BAIL

Murder Charge Against Man Who Killed Another In His Home

Boston, Jan. 27.—John Frusciella of Revere, who, in a row in his home, is alleged to have fatally shot Rocco Bianco, after the latter had wounded Frusciella's wife, was arraigned in the Chelsea court and formally charged with murder.

He was not permitted to plead because his knowledge of English is meagre, and Sergeant Devine, who appeared to prosecute the case, told Judge Bosson his case was not yet fully prepared. The case was accordingly continued till Saturday, and the prisoner was remanded without bail.

LABEL LIQUORS AS POISON

Proposed Bill Provides For Skull and Crossbones on Bottles

Albany, Jan. 27.—All beverages containing more than 2 percent alcohol will be labelled with skull and crossbones and other poison warnings if a bill to be introduced in the legislature at the behest of the Anti-Saloon league becomes a law.

The plan is to have the skull and crossbones printed in red ink and under them a warning to this effect:

"This preparation contains alcohol, which is a habit-forming, irritant narcotic poison."

KILLED BROTHER-IN-LAW

Boston Man Sentenced After Pleading Guilty to Manslaughter

Boston, Jan. 27.—Domenico D'Alessandro, who has been on trial for murder in the first degree in the Suffolk superior court, was allowed to plead guilty to manslaughter and Chief Justice Aiken sentenced him to serve fifteen to seventeen years in state prison.

D'Alessandro has been on trial for murdering his brother-in-law, Antonio Borgio, by shooting him in front of a saloon on Hanover street. Both men lived in this city.

Lloyd-George Not to Visit Us

London, Jan. 27.—An authoritative denial was given of the report published in the United States that David Lloyd-George, chancellor of the exchequer, was shortly going there on a visit.

CHURCH FOR SQUANTUM

Congregational Church Union Has Appointed A Committee

Squantum is to have a church of its own, it is hoped in the not distant future. Already its residents have combined for the purpose, and Rev. T. W. Davison preaches to them regularly every Sunday afternoon. The Congregational churches of Boston and vicinity, whose assistance made the Park and Downs church possible, have apointed a committee to look into the situation and to aid in every possible manner.

A committee of the directors, of which Rev. Rufus B. Tobey is chairman, has the matter in charge. Since the organization of the Union, different localities in Greater Boston, where families have moved in, have had the assistance of the Union in forming churches, church organizations and erecting church buildings. In not a few instances, such churches have come to self support, and through the Union have contributed to younger churches. Its interest in the new Squantum movement augurs well for its success, and it is hoped and expected that the body now ministered to by Mr. Davison will in due time have a house of worship of its own.

THREE MONTHS SENTENCE.

Albert McAdams was arrested Monday by Sergt. Bishop on an old warrant charging him with the larceny of $47 from his brother-in-law. It seems that last December McAdams occupied the same room one night with his brother-in-law, who on awakening in the morning was surprised not only to find his relative missing but $47 in money which he had in his clothing. McAdams skipped at that time and did not show up again in Quincy until Monday, when he was promptly arrested. He was brought into court and sentenced to three months in the house of correction.

STREET RAILWAY UNION.

William H. Gould, president of the Quincy branch of the Street and Electric street Car Employees, presided at the regular meeting Monday night in the Johnson building, the first since his installation. A class of candidates were initiated, several applications received and four reported on the sick list. Fred Lord, delegate of the Central Labor Union, was present and gave a talk on organization. A committee, headed by Frank Sampson, has been appointed to complete arrangements for the annual ball which will be held in Music hall on April 17.

HOSPITAL BABY DIED.

A pathetic story came to light this morning in the death at the City Hospital of Frederick Murray Wadsworth, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Wadsworth of 84 Hamilton street. Mrs. Wadsworth was taken to the hospital several days ago and as a result of her illness the birth of the little fellow was premature. He was wrapped in cotton batting and placed in a special room which was kept at a very warm temperature. For a time the child appeared to be doing nicely, but Monday he began to fail and passed away. The body will be taken to Duxbury for burial.

CHIEF BURRELL COMMENDED

Police Department of Fall River Call It Big Scoop

Letters have been received from Fall River commending Chief Frank E. Burrill and Inspector Goodhue for their activity in securing clues and the furnishing of a description so accurate that Inspector Violette of the police of that city captured Emanuel Pacheco, wanted in connection with the $2500 midsummer burglary of the home of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Stetson on School street.

CHIEF OF POLICE BURRELL.

In complimentary terms the letter refers to the definite investigation carried on by the police of Quincy and the tenaciousness with which the department ran to earth everything that would give an inkling.

Enclosed in the letter were photographs of Pacheco who has many aliases and a prison record. The photos were recognized by people of this city as being that of a man who spent much time here.

Pacheco is charged with larceny in Fall River, but will be turned over to the Quincy officers for a hearing before the Norfolk grand jury. He has been positively identified as the man who disposed of some of the Stetson silverware to a Brockton merchant and according to the police there can be no question as to his conviction. His capture was the biggest thing in criminal circles of the year.

NEW SOLDIERS MONUMENT.

Kavanagh Bros. have the contract for the granite memorial to be erected by the citizens of Southbridge, to the soldiers and sailors who yielded up their lives in the Civil war. On the four sides of the die are four panels, one of which will carry a bronze tablet bearing a suitable dedicatory inscription, while on the remaining panels will be tablets upon which will be cast the names of the soldiers who represented Southbridge in the great conflict. Above the die will be a beautifully designed frieze of rosettes and triglyphs, above which will be carved a canthus leaves and a festoon of laurel in bas relief. The whole will be surmounted by a bronze figure representing a marching soldier. The monument is to cost $10,000.

HEN HOUSE ROBBED.

Hen thieves were in the vicinity of Greenleaf and Valley streets Monday night and the hen house of Christina Rasmussin at 215 Greenleaf street was robbed of twenty-five pullets. When the police visited the premises this morning the tracks of three men were found leading from the hen house to ward Valley street, giving the impression that the thieves came or departed in that direction.

When asked if he was sending out any copies of his own inaugural address he laughed and said no. He was informed that the Daily Ledger had a stenographic report of it if he desired to have it published in pamphlet form, but the offer was not accepted.

MOVING PICTURE MEN'S BALL

Many novel features will characterize the first annual entertainment and ball of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of Massachusetts which is scheduled to take place at Symphony hall, Boston Tuesday evening Feb. 17. The committee which is headed by President Ernest H. Horstmann is actively engaged and propose to spare neither time or expense in order that the occasion may prove one long to be remembered. A concert has been arranged for the early part of the evening in which a long array of talented people will appear. The grand march will be one of the big features. It is planned to have it led by Governor Walsh and Miss Mary Fuller, the accomplished and leading lady of the Edeson company and participated by a large number of the league's members. Refreshments will be served during the intermission at midnight. Dancing will continue until 3 in the morning.

WORK FOR NAVY YARD.

Two steel coal barges, to cost about $20,000 each, are to be built at the Charlestown Navy Yard. Orders to that effect were received Monday. As part of the required stock is available, some of the work can begin within a day or two, it was said, and about 100 of the men of various trades and callings now on furlough will be placed on the active work list within a few days.

QUINCY IS HELPING.

Prominent Catholics of Quincy are canvassing districts in the interest of the whirlwind campaign to raise $2000,000 for the new St. Elizabeth's Hospital at Boston. Although the campaign is not organized as it is in Boston, it is resulting in the contribution of substantial amounts. Encouraging reports are received from all sections of the city, particularly the West Quincy section where the work is being carried on by the most active Catholics. A fine cooperative spirit is being manifested throughout the diocese.

KINCAIDE THEATRE.

One would have to travel many miles to find a more enjoyable entertainment than that being presented right here in Quincy at the Kincaide Theatre the first half of this week. The writer was among the many hundreds who enjoyed it yesterday and are today telling their friends to take it in.

Taddie & Zampa in their musical offering received an ovation. Professor Taddy is a Quincy man who is scoring a great success on the vaudeville stage. Temple & Huff created no end of merriment with their specialties. Frank Palmer proved his ability as a cartoonist. Waldo & Co., illusionists, presented an act that was a scream from start to finish and must be seen to be appreciated.

The feature picture is a thrilling Western drama in two parts, entitled "The Flash of Fate." It was watched with great interest, as were also all the others presented.

Says Fire Commissioner Cole Relative to Loss of Life and Property

Annual Business Men's Banquet of Y. M. C. A.

Nearly 200 gentlemen of the city attended the fourth annual Business Mens' dinner under the auspices of the Quincy Young Men's Christian Association. They represented all wards and all creeds of the city, and were pleased to give what encouragement they might to an institution that is doing such good work among us as the Y. M. C. A. There were present the Mayor and city officials, merchants, doctors, lawyers, clergymen, shipyard officials, granite men, manufacturers and others.

From 6 to 6.30 there was a social hour in the parlor and other rooms on the first floor. Promptly at 6.30 the dinner was announced by Secretary Bromley, and the line of march was taken to the gymnasium to inspiring music by the Wollaston Cadet Band orchestra. During the dinner hour this orchestra rendered an excellent musical program every number being applauded.

At the head table at the right of Secretary Bromley was Charles H. Cole, fire commissioner of Boston, and on his left Hon. John L. Miller, the Mayor of Quincy. Others at this table were Rev. A. L. Hudson, Prof. O. A. Morton of Amherst college, ex-Mayor Eugene R. Stone, Senator Louis F. R. Langelier, Clarence Burgin, Col. Edward Anderson, Robert E. Foy, Commodore James A. Ring, Eben W. Sheppard, James F. Young, President Joseph L. Whiton of the City Council, Alfred O. Booth, Ernest L. Collins, W. F. Cummings, Rev. Stephen C. Lang, Thomas S. Barbour, Amos D. Albee, Councilman Charles W. Bailey, Dr. John A. Gordon and ex-President Richard D. Chase.

The blessing was asked by Rev. Stephen C. Lang, the new pastor of the Washington Street Congregational church.

MENU WELL SERVED.

The men were indebted to a committee of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. headed by Mrs. A. H. Gilson, for the following menu which was served by 25 young ladies gowned in white, under the direction of Mrs. J. A. Sedgwick. The soup, peas and potatoes were hot and everything well cooked:

Grape Fruit
Cream Tomato Soup
Roast Turkey, Sage Dressing
Green Peas Cranberry Sauce
Mashed Potatoes
Fruit Salad
Ice Cream
Cake Crackers
Coffee

The irrepressible D. King was here, there and everywhere and at the close of the menu had a novelty to introduce; what he called the little sky rocket cheer for the ladies who served the supper. The men stood and entered into the spirit of it, and the cheer enlivened the occasion.

Theophilus King was scheduled as toastmaster, but he and also President George A. Sidelinger and Physical Director Louis F. LaRose were detained at home by the grippe. General Secretary Bromley introduced Rev. A. L. Hudson of the Unitarian church as toastmaster, and he filled the bill admirably.

The toastmaster was pleased to note the interest that the business men were taking in institutions like this and the churches. Co-operation and efficiency were essential. The speaker referred to the trip of the battleship Rivadavia from Quincy to Boston, on which he was a guest. He noted that trained and trustworthy men were necessary, and that the human element could not be eliminated. Moral efficiency is required not only on battleships but in all walks of life. He said the ministers of Quincy appreciated all the help the business men were giving.

BOYS' WORK.

Alden H. Blanchard, boy's work director, spoke earnestly of the work the Y. M. C. A. was attempting to do among boys. His department catered to the all-round needs of boys, physically, socially and religiously. It tried to fill the gap between the home, the church and the school. To make boys leaders among their playmates. For clean living and clean speech. He complimented Physical Director La Rose on his accomplishments in the physical department.

Secretary Bromley was introduced as the goat, the man who was responsible for everything. He spoke briefly, giving a few examples of what the Quincy Y. M. C. A. was doing.

FIRE PREVENTION.

The principal speaker of the evening was Charles H. Cole, the fire commissioner of Boston whose subject concerns all business men.——"Fire Prevention." His figures of deaths and injuries from fires, and the loss of property wede appalling. He said the loss on property is not paid by the insurance companies, but by us all, the business man and the property holder. In Massachusetts today we are paying more for insurance because of the conflagration at San Francisco. A large percentage of this loss he said was preventable. We have efficient fire departments, but we want to go back of that. We build fast and we burn fast. There is too much indifference. It requires disasters to make us think, but we must do more than think, we must act.

In greater Boston the loss of life and property by fire could be cut one-half. There is a lack of enforcement of laws, and also inadequacy of laws. We should have a Metropolitan fire district. We must prevent as well as fight fires. Now there is too much division of authority among different departments, such as building commissioners, board of health, street commissioners, police departments, etc. More should be centered in the fire department. Hazards should be eliminated. For awhile the cost may increase, but eventually insurance, taxes rents, etc., will be reduced.

Mr. Cole reviwed the bill now before the Legislature which has the backing of the Boston Chamber of Commerce. He also took up fire protection under the heads of notification of fires,

QUINCYS WIN BY BIG SCORE

Defeat Rockland High in an Interesting Game

Quincy High rolled up its big score of the season by defeating Rockland High in the local gym Tuesday afternoon 40 to 15, and the 1914 class beat 1916 by a score of 16 to 9 in a spectacular game.

A happening seldom witnessed in a basket ball game occurred in the class contests, when Torrey, right back of 1916 became confused and caged the ball in his opponents basket in one of the prettiest shots made on the floor this season.

Quincy demonstrated how they returned from Holliston with victory. At times the flash of style of the team in general was of championship calibre. They frequently missed opportunities to score, but the points made were the result of good team work. Individualism was entirely eliminated for the first time this season, and a better working combination never trod the floor during the first month of the schedule.

The game had been under way but a few minutes when Quincy scored. They piled on points until the whistle ended the periods. Dunn of the visitors got three long shots from difficult angles which gained him the applause of the largest crowd of the season. The crowd that lined the sides of the court were frantic in their cheering, while Captain Jenkins of Quincy led the way with seven baskets and Earl Bates followed with five.

Leon White forced two into the net on toss ups, and Hamlin in addition to preventing Rockland from taking advantage of many opportunities, tossed two counters. Paige continued his defensive work and got one basket.

In the last half of the second period, Martin was sent in for Captain Jenkins and he celebrated his entry by shooting a goal from the centre of the floor. Paige was withdrawn and Whet Brown who resumed studies Monday after a severe case of the mumps went in while the rooters thundered their approval, and he caged a goal.

At no moment in the game was Quincy on the defensive because of the good work of the back field, particularly Hamlin. Both men followed the ball and covered their men.

On Friday the team plays Wellesley in an interscholastic league game at Wellesley and next Tuesday the Franklin High, one of the strongest in the state is booked to appear here.

SPORTING MEN SPEAK

At January Meeting of Wollaston Congregational Club

Tuesday evening might well have been called "sport night" at the Wollaston Congregational club, for with three speakers on the program nearly the entire scale was covered, including automobiles, motor boats, aeroplanes, baloons, horses, dogs and baseball.

The first speaker was William Hilliard who holds the unique place of haviug secured automobile, motor boat aeroplane and baloon licenses.

Mr. Hilliard won the Mount Washington climb on July 12, 1906, and bids fair to remain the title holder as the state has passed a law prohibiting the event. His description was interesting.

In a Napier car said to be 60 horse power but actually 120 he covered the eight miles from the Glen House to the summit, negotiating a climb of 4,000 feet, 365 "thank-you-marms" and countless corners, in 20 minutes and 59 seconds.

This was remarkable time as the other cars took from one hour and thirty minutes to two and one-half hours to make it.

He told of winning the Savannah road race in the Lancia car keeping up the average speed of 58 miles an hour for 400 miles without a break.

His experiments with aeroplanes at Plum Island were described. He declared that the aeroplane would not be used commercially until the law of gravitation was overcome.

In balooning he declared the ideal sport to be. In the basket you are standing still and it is the earth that fades away. There is no breeze for you are going with the wind. All is solitude and you have time for reflection. Several amusing incidents were related.

The second speaker was G. Pray Smith, president of the Metropolitan Driving Club, one-time owner of Joe Patchen, the sire of Dan Patch; and through whose hands nearly 4,000 horses have passed.

Mr. Smith defended horsemen as generous whole-souled, charitable and pretty good fellows. Although horsemen have a bad reputation there are as many square men in this as in any other business. And he told of experiences with Joe Patchen and Lou Dillon.

Mr. Smith concluded his remarks with an enconium of the dog.

Baseball was the concluding topic of the evening with T. H. "Tim" Murnane baseball editor of the Boston Globe and president of the New England baseball league as the speaker.

He spoke straight from the shoulder regarding the purity of the game. Baseball was on the level and when a man questions the integrity of the game he should examine his own conscience. Mr. Murnane closed with a plea for the aamteur player and the story of a professional ball player's career.

The meeting, one of the most successful of the season closed with a song fest. The usual roast beef supper was served.

R. B. Locke announced the club mintrel show to be held on February 26 and 27 with Chester I. Campbell as interlocutor.

SELECTMAN BARNES.

The funeral of Selectman Henry M. Barnes of Milton was held Tuesday from the Village Congregational church at Dorchester Lower Mills. Many prominent in the town affairs were present. The bells on the fire alarm circuits were tolled and flags of town buildings were at half mast Many business places closed and there was no afternoon session of the public schools. The services were conducted by Rev. G. Walcott Brooks. The bearers were Jesse B. Baxter, Philip S. Dalton and Maurice A. Duffy, all former chairmen of the Milton selectmen and Charles F. Marden.

Col. Olof Nelson of New York, will conduct a special meeting at the Salvation Army hall, 150 Granite street tonight at 8 o'clock. The colonel is an interesting speaker and a good singer, so do not miss the opportunity to hear him. All seats free.

DEMAND FOR MORE SCHOOL HOUSES

Norfolk Downs and Quincy Point People Before School Committee

Increase in Salary Favored for All Schoolmasters

An important meeting of the School Committee was held Tuesday evening with all members present.

A delegation of a dozen citizens form Norfolk Downs section, headed by Senator Langelier, appeared before the committee to request that the School Committee take the necessary initiative steps toward having the City Council secure land for a new school building in the district near Rawson and Billings roads.

It was pointed out by the committee that the Massachusetts Fields school at the present time was overcrowded, and that the time was near at hand when a new building must be secured for this district. At the present time there was available land, but it was a question how long such land would be available as property in this vicinity was very active.

Quite a discussion followed the request but no definite action was taken.

The special committee having in charge the subject of licenses for newsboys asked for further time which was granted.

SALARY OF MASTERS.

The special committee appointed to consider the request of the Masters Association for an increase in salary recommended that the maximum be raised from $1,600 to $1,800, and that the raise in the present salaries be in accordance with the usual plan. That is a raise of $100 each year until the maximum is reached. The report was accepted and adopted.

The Superintendent was authorized to secure a woman assistant for the janitor at the High school.

The chairman was authorized to request the City Council to make an appropriation of $200 for necessary alterations at the Gridley Bryant school.

The Superintendent reported that the State Board of Education had approved provisionally the city plans for an all day industrial school.

A letter was received from the Park Land company enclosing a bill amounting to $34, for rental of land adjoining the Massachusetts Field school used by the children of that school as a playground. The bill is understood to be the amount of taxes assessed on the land in question.

The chairman was instructed to consult with the City Solicitor to learn what authority the School Committee had to assume such a bill.

The Superintendent was authorized to have the annual report of the School Committee printed and to obtain the best work for the same.

The Chairman was authorized to request the City Council to make an appropriation of $200 to install lights and cupboard doors at the Massachusetts Fields school, as requested by the Parents' and Teachers association of that school.

A special committee of three was

GAMBLING SYSTEMS.

Dr. E. V. Appleby, formerly a lecturer at the University of Minnesota, testifying in a pending court case, says he has made money consistently by wagering on the gaming tables at Monte Carlo. He claims that his carefully worked out system in one year paid him $50,000.

It would be impossible to compute the human energy and even human life that has been given to devising gambling systems to beat Monte Carlo and other famous gambling houses. Some people claim to have made money by keeping careful records of the stopping places of roulette wheels and balls, thus learning the peculiar tendency and idiosyncrasy of the mechanical device.

If a wheel seemed to be losing because some one had learned its tendency, it is an easy thing to shift wheels every night. In 1896, a system was successfully worked at Monte Carlo by a woman who had studied the eccentric results produced by the warping of a roulette wheel. The management never lost but once from that, as afterward the wheels were tested nightly.

If a gaming place continues in business day after day, and makes money, its system must be securely founded on the law of chances, sure to net the house a steady profit. It is like giving money away for the public thus to take the wrong end of these hazards.

Whenever a big haul is made at a gaming place, the management rejoices. It knows that in nine cases out of ten, the money will be lost back soon, and more too. Then too, the railroads will be crowded for days by the motley crew that is incited to try its luck.

The willingness to take some chances is a good trait. No kind of business could prosper without it. In productive enterprise, backed by intelligence and industry the chances are very strongly in your favor. At the gaming tables they are strongly against you.

DEMOCRACY.

The men who molded American democracy were men to whom principles were dearer than popularity and who put their faith not in the shifting suffrages of the people, but in the substantial certainties which history and experience had verified. To them an imperfect government based upon principles well tested was better than a perfect government based upon theories untried. They were not in love with any one form of government. They chose a democracy because they believed that the principles of liberty and equal opportunity and human brotherhood could best be secured to all men under that form of government, and they chose a representative rather than a pure democracy because they saw that only so could they escape the tyranny which lurked under their new found freedom. —Dr. Charles A. Richmond, President of Union College.

WASHINGTON SCHOOL.

Sketches for an addition of four rooms and an assembly hall at the Washington school were considered informally but no definite action taken.

It was pointed out that the School Committee had no authority to take the initiative in securing plans, and that it had not been requested by the City Council to do so. That it could not approve sketches, which was all that the committee had before them, but that it must have detail drawings and specifications.

It was generally supposed by the Ward Two people that the School Committee had requested the City Council to build a four-room addition with assembly hall, but according to the statements made, all the School Committee did was to recommend to the Council that a four-room addition with assembly hall be built along the lines of the accompanying sketches.

According to the stand taken by the School Committee, the initiative should be taken by the City Council. They can request the School Committee to obtain detail plans and specifications for the proposed addition.

FEAR SERIES OF EXPOSURES

Financial Circles In Montreal Are Much Disturbed

STORY OF PROVINCIAL GRAFT

Bogus Company For Holding Fairs Said to Have Been Organized by Detectives at Behest of Newspaper Man Who Was After Scalp of Rival —How Mail Got the News

Montreal, Jan. 28.—Montreal financial circles are no less agitated than political men by the revelations of The Mail, concerning how members of the Quebec legislature were trapped by Burns detectives, bribed by marked bills, reported by dictaphone in the throes of effusive gratitude for money down.

It is now believed that The Mail proprietors did not originate nor pay for the detective game. This is said to have been invented and engineered by D. L. McGibbon, who bought The Herald, long a Liberal organ, three years ago, and turned it into an anti-Laurier, anti-reciprocity organ on the eve of the general elections of September, 1911.

Sir Hugh Graham, owner of The Star, had tried to buy The Herald in rivalry with McGibbon, but was overbid and thus disappointed in his scheme for monopolizing the evening English press of that city. The two men have long been bitterly at feud.

Hoping to inculpate Graham—so the credible report goes in financial circles—McGibbon employed the Burns detectives at an outlay of $150,000, his real aim having been that they should watch the Montreal tramways bill, in which Graham was presumed to be heavily interested, and catch the Graham "crowd" in bribing support for it, contrary to civic interests, as well as to that of McGibbon and his cronies.

It was by way of adjunct to the main scheme that the Burns detectives, acting under aliases, organized a bogus company for holding fairs, shows and other entertainments, in course of which game they bribed Mousseau and others.

Before this bogus concern's bogus bill was enacted, McGibbon had reasons for selling The Herald, by which he had already lost much money. Moreover, the Montreal tramways bill was withdrawn, possibly because Graham and his crowd "smelled a rat."

Graham now appears to have secured a large interest with those persons to whom McGibbon sold The Herald, which is to be amalgamated with The Telegraph, nominally controlled by Fielding, late minister of finance in the Laurier government at Ottawa.

What with cessation of attempt to pass the tramways bill and sale of The Herald, McGibbon abandoned hope of catching and exposing Graham. That the rich sensation he had prepared by aid of Burns should not be lost to the public, he turned the whole of his information, dictaphone reports, etc., to MacNab and Nicholls, proprietors of The Mail, thus enabling them to boom their paper, of which they intend, it is credibly reported, to issue an evening edition, in rivalry to Graham's sheets, The Star, Herald and Telegraph.

To what extent McGibbon trapped Sir Hugh and others has not yet been revealed by The Mail. But financial circles in Montreal are much disturbed by fear that a far more extensive, ruthless damaging series of exposures will be soon made by The Mail than has yet appeared in its pages.

One development is that Mousseau and the other inculpated French-Canadians are seemingly about to launch a pretence that they knew the Burns men to be trying to trap them, wherefore they took bribes in order to trap the wicked detectives in assailing the honor of Quebec politicians. The story is regarded as gauzy, but sure to be backed by hard swearing.

SANTA CLAUS BANKRUPT

Christmas Strain on Friend of Poor Children Proved Too Heavy

New York, Jan. 28.—Even Santa Claus cannot withstand the high cost of giving, as shown by the bankruptcy petition of Paul Henkel, proprietor of Henkel's chop house.

Last Christmas Henkel played Santa Claus to 17,000 children who mailed letters to Santa. Not a child who dropped such a letter in a New York mail box was overlooked.

Now Henkel fixes his liabilities at $10,000; his assets at $3000.

—A German judge would not administer the oath to certain witnesses because they were not church members. It's going to be a hard job for some people to get witnesses that can qualify in that court.

—For some reason Boston fails to get mayors in the same class with New York mayors. For a dozen years the mayors of New York have been high-grade men—men of natural ability, experience in affairs and unsullied public character. A city can be proud of itself when it elects in succession a Seth Low, a McClellan, a Gaynor and a Mitchel. The office of mayor of New York is a big one, but New York seems to have acquired the habit of placing in it men who measure up very well to the requirements of the position.—Springfield Republican, Independent.

AFTER FIVE YEARS

Winthrop Child Was Restored to Health by Vinol.

"Five years ago our little girl had a severe attack of diphtheria which left her subject to bronchitis and stomach trouble. She has been almost constantly under medical treatment. I have tried also two or three remedies containing cod liver oil but found her stomach rebelled against the oil. Reading your description of Vinol decided to try it and did so with most astonishing results. I cannot begin to tell you how she has improved because you do not know what a little sufferer she was for five years. She has gained ten pounds since she commenced to take Vinol, and the story of what Vinol has done for her is only half told in this letter." Mrs. Adelaide Mulloy, Winthrop, Mass.

Vinol contains all the healing curative properties of cod liver oil, without the oil, and tonic iron added. That is why it helped this little girl after other remedies had failed.

We ask mothers of weak, sickly children to try Vinol on our offer to give back your money if it fails to help them. Edward J. Murphy, Druggist, Quincy, Mass.

The Medford Women's club has entered upon a most commendable enterprise—that of providing itself with a new clubhouse. It is, indeed, a serious undertaking for these busy women to find time and energy to set apart dates for the various social functions to raise money for the building. A systematic division of labor has been arranged, wherein each woman in the club has been given a part to do, and each is doing her part splendidly! When such a capable body of women put their shoulders to the wheel it must perforce go 'round.—Medford Mercury.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

There was a large attendance Tuesday afternoon at the clubhouse for the Civics meeting of the Quincy Women's club, the president Mrs. Chandler W. Smith presiding. Following the secretary's report the president made several announcements, one of the most interesting relating to the next meeting Feb. 10, when the play "Our Boys" would be given at Music hall. Unlimited guest privileges would be allowed members. That is, members may invite as many women guests as they care to pay for and it would not bar out any who had already attended a club meeting this year. No tickets would be sold at the door so that members must obtain tickets of Mrs. Z. S. Arnold, Coddington street or of Mrs. Charles R. Safford of Wollaston and other members of the Custodian committee. The two front rows would be reserved for the elderly members, those whose eyesight was not good or were hard of hearing.

A legislative conference was announced for Tuesday Feb. 3 at 2.30 P. M. at Medford.

Mrs. Edward S. Tenney and Mrs. George L. Badger were appointed delegates to attend the annual meeting of the Massachusetts State Federation at Dorchester Friday, Feb. 6. The meeting will be held at the Second church in Dorchester at the corner of Washington, Centre and Norfolk streets and the Dorchester Woman's club would be the hostess club. Among the speakers would be W. Cameron Forbes of Milton, recently returned from the Philippines and Mr. Hapgood the well known lecturer.

Attention was called to the children's play "The Fiddler" to be given by the Children's Players at Schubert Theatre, Boston, Friday afternoon, Feb. 13 and Saturday morning Feb. 14. It was a play that would delight small children.

An invitation was received from the Brush Hill Bird club of Milton to attend an exhibition now being held at the Milton Public library. The exhibit would continue until Feb. 17, The hours daily 9 A. M. until 6 P. M. Wednesdays and Saturdays 9 A. M. until 9 P. M. Sundays 2 until 6 P. M. Talks are given Sundays at 3 P. M. Wednesday at 4 P. M. and Saturdays at 4 P. M. The exhibition is free and would prove very interesting to bird lovers. Mrs. Pfaffmann had visited the exhibit and recommended it to club members.

Owing to the interest in the dramatics and musicale and the desire to take guests and the necessity of voting each year to allow special guest privileges in conformity to the by-laws, an amendment had been offered at the previous meeting to change the bylaws to obviate voting each year. After consideration it was laid on the table.

Mrs. Mackay of the Forestry department of the Civics Committee asked and received the endorsement of the club for the Forestry Association's action in regard to waste land for the preservation of forests and to ask our senators and representatives to assist the work.

Miss Randall of the Program committee said the play "Our Boys" was a modern comedy intended to amuse and hoped members would attend in that spirit. The meeting would be held at two o'clock and the play be given at half past two.

Mrs. Henry C. Mulligan ex-president of the State Federation was present to speak on the endowment fund for the National Federation which was trying to raise $100,000 for a fund to carry on its work in every part of the country. Mrs. Mulligan aroused interest and many members contributed and others are planning to send in a contribution. Massachusetts is to raise $10,000 and has not reached that mark yet. In proportion to its membership the Quincy club has not contributed any where near its just proportion and it should be a matter of local pride to come to the front and at least get into the honor rank.

Following the business session there was a short musical program, Mrs. Lucien Gaudreau of Braintree singing two solos accompanied by Mrs. John F. Hunt at the piano. Mrs. Gaudreau has a rich contralto voice of sympathetic quality and her singing of "Silent as Night" by Bohm and "Will o' the Wisp" by Spross was much enjoyed.

In the absence of Mrs. Kitson of the Civics committee Mrs. Mackay of her committee introduced the speakers, the first being Prof. O. A. Morton of the Massachusetts Agricultural college.

In speaking of the effects of gardening upon children Prof. Morton told of its healthful exercise and what it did for the child's muscles. He spoke of how business men had come to recognize that it was a good investment to assist in teaching gardening to their employees. Investigation has shown that boys who care for a garden of their own make better scholars and more observant and painstaking workers in after years. He explained how boys and girls who have gardens in the summer go back to their school work refreshed. Many unruly boys have been reformed through this garden movement. Prof. Morton spoke of the canning clubs which had been organized in Massachusetts where children are taught to preserve the fruit and vegetables from their gardens. He also told of how some people in the city of Brockton hired four acres of land and got a club of 32 boys to plant potatoes and only one of the boys failed with his crop. He explained at length a scheme for teaching girls between the ages of 10 and 18 household duties. He believes that every girl, whether rich or poor, should know how to run a house and cook meals properly. He was followed with close attention and much interest.

Thomas Curley of Massachusetts Civic League proved a very entertaining speaker also. He is an enthusiast upon gardening and thinks that there is no better way to reach out to give assistance to our neighbors than by visiting and encouraging children's gardening. He dwelt at length upon the pleasure experienced by the hard working parent when one of the well-to-do neighbors took an interest in his children's garden and visited it and offered suggestions as to its improvemen. Here, he thinks, is the opportunity to show true love for our neighbor and his little ones. This is the true way to reach out the hand of fellowship which uplifts. It is the means of teaching our less fortunate citizens how to make their homes more happy, because nothing brings so large a measure of contentment and true satisfaction as a thrifty, well-kept home, and a good garden is one of the chief aids to that attainment. He believes that gardening is the exercise which young and old need because it is the exercise which developed our ancestors and what all our race needs. He spoke of the possibilities of reduced cost of living when each man supplied his own table from his garden. He could teach geography from a garden better than books; he quoted Prof. Faunce of Brown University, as telling how much knowledge there is beside book knowledge and how ill-equipped for life is a man with only book knowledge. He believes that every city should suport a teacher of gardening; that this would be one of the best investments a city could make, for it would do more to raise the moral standard of a community than any other investment for Civic improvement.

The next speaker was W. L. Hamel of the Massachusetts Forestry Association. He gave a practical talk upon the care of trees and answered questions from club members. How to prune trees and when to undertake the work. What could be done to restore trees to life when decay had progressed over a large portion of them. The effect of the electric wires on our shade trees along the streets and how death must result to the tree which is in friction with the wires.

Mr. Hamel had with him specimens of the various pests common to garden trees and had prepared an interesting talk upon the subject. It is to be regretted that his time had to be shortened, he was however able to advise many of the club members about their trees and answer questions about planting, etc.

Mrs. Albert L. Hayden was the hostess for the social tea which brought the meeting to a close and Mrs. Frank J. Moore and Mrs. Victor E. Miller presided at the tea urns.

QUINCY CATHOLIC CLUB.

One of the most enjoyable evenings of the many held under the auspices of the Quincy Catholic club was that of Tuesday evening, when members of the club presented, under the direction of Mrs. A. Isabelle Davis, David Demarest Lloyd's four-act farcical comedy, "The Woman Hater." The affair was given in Alpha hall, and was exclusively for ladies. The presence of a mere man within hailing distance of the hall was sufficient to put the guards at attention and they were immediately shooed off. Most everybody has seen a woman shoo hens from their front lawns and the manner in which the men were shooed off Tuesday evening was after that manner.

The first man to be shooed was the janitor, who was politely told to make himself scarce and keep so. With a sigh he meandered down stairs and took refuge in the boiler room.

All the characters in the comedy were taken by ladies, those having men's parts, getting their make up from the wardrobe of their brothers or from friends whose apparel seemed to make the best fit. For instance, the nobby suit sometimes seen on one of the well known City Square business men was won by Samuel Bundy, which character was impersonated by Miss Mary R. Lyons who also used the same gentlemans evening suit. Miss Lyons had the leading part, and is said to have simply captivated her female admirers, who almost forgot that

THE WOMAN PAST FIFTY.

Styles that Don't Date—Colors that are Complimentary—Tunics.

To see the crowd of attractive well dressed gray haired women here, it would seem that there is small need for first aid to the woman past fifty in a sartorial direction. However here are enough glaring mistakes about to point the moral of the maxim that a grandmother should not dress in clothes designed for the bud.

DRESS THAT DOES NOT DATE.

There are always plenty of styles suitable for any age, that save the situation for the woman who does not care to adopt "dowager clothes" because of a few added years. No hard and fast rules will go for everyone. Someone says "wear brocades and avoid plaids" but some of the most appropriate costumes worn by women past fifty, are made chic and becoming by combinations of plaids, or Roman striped silks. It's the way the combination is wrought, and the natural points of the wearer that count. The too stout woman, old or young, must avoid anything pronounced in color or pattern in the material she selects. The main point is to choose rather conservative models, and to take advantage of everything likely to be complimentary to one's eyes, complexion, height, figure etc. In short to favor one's good points, so that times ravages are forgotten. No one wants to be a scarecrow at any age and nothing so emphasizes defects as unsuitable colors, and flamboyant styles.

TUNICS.

Lamp shade tunics, with flaring stiffened hems are becoming only to young slender figures, but modifications of these in soft full drapings of the upper half of the skirt, are quite in keeping for older wearers.

QUALITY CLOTHES.

Quality of material counts most for the woman past fifty—both because it is dignified, and because she wears her clothes longer than her granddaughter is supposed to. Nothing is so altogether satisfactory as the type of garment that goes anywhere, and that does not date, as a last years model, or previous to that. Such things are always to be had, even among the very latest productions from Parisian sources, and one is more apt to find them in quality garments. Dealers can not afford to invest too heavily in styles so pronounced that they are sure to be widely run, and thus die the death meted out to overpopular modes.

The above design is by The McCall Company, New York. Designers and Makers of McCall Patterns.

JANUARY OPPORTUNITIES.

January offers great opportunities for securing really handsome garments at the cost of ordinary clothes—for high class stores do like to carry over the season's styles however excellent these may be. One can find now model gowns in satin, brocade, and velvet that will remain elegant for several seasons at most attractive figures, and strange to say, get bargains in advance models produced for the coming season, and offered just now at moderate prices to see if they are liable to "take" with discriminating buyers.

FURS AND WRAPS.

As everyone knows this is the time of year, par excellence, to buy furs of all sorts. It is the end of the season for these, though real winter cold is only just beginning. Handsome lace fur, and velvet or satin, is a desirable investment for almost anyone, but especially for the woman whose years and position demand a certain elegance in dress.

Furs of quality never lose their value, and many of the best pelts are strong and good wearing as they are attractive. Sable and Ermine head the list of furs suitable only for elaborate wear, and seal because of its cost comes in the same class, though its quiet dark coloring makes it go for other occasions. Dyed muskrat, which is so like seal that few people can distinguish between them, makes beautiful conservative coats that are suitable for anyone old or young, and broadtail and astrachan garments come in the same class. At C. C. Shayne and Co. the other day I was told that such garments were marked from one-third to one-fifth lower than before the holidays, though they were exactly the same models, embodying the latest style in hue, quality, trimming and finish. The linings alone were so luxurious that one would be half tempted to wear them inside out, and proud to throw them back at a concert or matinee.

COIFFURES.

The arrangement of the hair is important for everyone who wants to look her most attractive self, especially for the woman whose locks are powdered by nature after the latest mode that Parisians are imitating. Nature knows her business and nothing softens the touch of time so effectually as snowy hair, if only its arrangement is pretty and becoming.

OPENING GAME.

The first of the local games in the Greater Boston N. E. A. A. A. U. league will be played in Alpha hall Thursday evening between the Quincy A. A. and St. Josephs of Lynn. It will be the first game for both the first and second teams which won the New England championship last season and in July represented that body in the national championships at Chicago Fifteen of the best players of the city, most of whom played last season, will fly the colors of the Quincy A. A., and from the amount of practice put in the past three weeks the boys should be in the pink of condition.

YEAR SENTENCE IS SUSPENDED

Wreck on New Haven Road Not Fault of Flagman

BLAME PLACED UPON SYSTEM

Murray Had Pleaded Guilty of Manslaughter as Result of Wreck In Connecticut In Which Twenty-One Lives Were Lost—Judge Finds His Negligence Was Very Remote

New Haven, Jan. 28.—Charles H. Murray, flagman of the Bar Harbor express which was wrecked by the White Mountain express on the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad at North Haven, on the morning of Sept. 2 last, and who had pleaded guilty of manslaughter after a coroner's finding of criminal responsibility, was sentenced to one year in the county jail, the sentence to be suspended and Murray to be in care of the probation officer, by Judge Shumway of the superior court.

In the wreck of the express twenty-one lives were lost. Murray was sent back to flag the White Mountain express, but went back only a short distance and the train passed his signal and came into collision. The state's contention was that Murray did not go back far enough in performance of his duty.

In pronouncing sentence the court said Murray's negligence was very remote. The real cause was the system under which the flagman worked. The court said it had been reading the findings of the interstate commerce commission, in which different contributary causes for the wreck were assigned and Murray's was the least of these. The flagman had four minutes in which to go back 2000 feet, and even if he had covered that distance, the wreck, under the conditions, could not have been avoided, in the opinion of the court.

The trials of Bruce C. Adams, conductor of the Bar Harbor express, and of Engineer Miller of the White Mountain express are yet to be held.

ADMITS BOMB OUTRAGES

Youth Sheds Light on Other Grave Crimes In New York

New York, Jan. 28.—Alfred Lehman, scarcely out of his 'teens, confessed to having participated in sixteen bomb outrages, revealed knowledge of eighty, cleared up the mystery of two murders and furnished information concerning a number of lesser crimes, including arson and burglary.

Lehman was called as a witness in the trial of Angelo Sylvester, accused of one of the bomb outrages. Lehman told the court the bomb outrages usually brought the men doing the work $50. He said he had personally planted sixteen or eighteen bombs, causing much damage.

"The gang I worked for," he said, "were Black Handers. The boss would write letters demanding money under threats of death to well-to-do Italians. When they did not 'come across' I was sent with a bomb. They usually paid up after the explosion of the bomb. If they didn't, we went after 'em again."

FLEES BEFORE REBELS

President Oreste Quits Hayti, Which Is Now Without Government

Port-au-Prince, Hayti, Jan. 28.—The president of Hayti, Michel Oreste, fled from the capital and took refuge aboard the German cruiser Vineta. He was accompanied by his wife.

Wireless news that Oreste of Hayti had fled from his revolution-torn capital, "leaving no government," caused Rear Admiral Badger at Guantanamo, Cuba, to start the battleship South Carolina on a 500-mile forced-draft run for Port-au-Prince.

An hour after fighting begun the president left the palace under escort and was conveyed in a launch to the warship lying in the harbor. Almost immediately detachments of bluejackets were landed from the United States armored cruiser Montana and the Vineta.

Mexican Soldiers Receive Their First "Pay" For Months

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 28.—Although they are to be sheltered and fed indefinitely by the United States government, the Mexican soldiers from Ojinaga, who are interned at Fort Bliss, received from their own government some of the pay due them for fighting before they crossed the Rio Grande.

Each soldier received $5, his first pay for months, and, according to General Mercado, the commander, the last. None of the foreign soldiers were permitted to leave the reservation to spend the money.

An official census just completed by Colonel Perkins shows there are now 5295 soldiers and refugees to be provided for by this government. The women number 1237 and the children 552.

THOMAS GANNON, Superintendent

A Mysterious Disappearance

A Story of the Workings of Lynch Law

By JOHN TURNLEE

One evening when the stagecoach stopped at the tavern at B., a town in New Mexico, a melancholy looking man alighted, with no baggage but a gripsack in his hand, and, being received by the landlord, the two went inside together.

"Landlord," said the stranger, "I have come out here from the east to settle and try to make a living. I have been recommended to this town, among others, as one likely to grow, and I've concluded to put in my stake here, but I haven't a cent. It's better to tell you this in the beginning than to stay with you awhile and then have you turn me out for nonpayment of board. I'm an educated physician and hope to gather a practice. If you'll board me while I'm getting patients I'll pay as I get in fees."

"That's just the kind of man we want out here," replied the landlord. "I like the frank way you put the case. It shall not be said that Jim Henderson refused to help any man coming into New Mexico to try to make a living. Most of our people who have come here from the east have come strapped. If they hadn't been strapped they wouldn't have come. But I don't remember any of them that have been as frank about it as you have. Enter your name on the register; supper is ready, and after you've filled up I'll show you to a room."

The newcomer thanked the landlord for his kindness and entered his name as "Dr. George Atwater, City."

"I see you don't give the point you hail from," said the landlord.

"What's the use? I'm a citizen of this town."

"So you are—so you are. Nobody here cares where anybody comes from or what he's done elsewhere so long as he behaves himself after he gets here."

Dr. Atwater was recommended by Henderson, the landlord, and occasionally got a case in some one of the guests of the tavern. He became popular in the town and would have succeeded had there been more people or a greater proportion of invalids there. But B. did not grow as fast as had been expected and was a very healthful place. Atwater managed to pay his board by turning over a fee when he got one, but after he had been at the tavern about a year there came an interval when not a person in the town was ill, and, there being no fees, there was no money to pay board.

In new countries where there is no law the punishment for crime is usually assumed by a vigilance committee. There may be conditions of society where a vigilance committee is better than no law or even poorly administered law, but after all Judge Lynch is but a return to barbarous methods. There were at this time more or less shooting going on among the citizens of New Mexico and considerable horse stealing. There was no objection to the shooting so long as each man had a fair chance, but the horse stealing was bitterly condemned. A vigilance committee was organized to punish murderers and especially horse thieves. Since shooting them was not considered murder the principal business of the committee was catching and punishing horse thieves.

One day Bill Evans, one of the committee, entered the barroom and office combined of the tavern. Henderson was sitting by the stove with his back to the door, while Dr. Atwater was leaning against the bar. Evans came in just in time to hear Henderson say to the doctor:

"You haven't paid any board in four months."

That was all the conversation Evans heard, for Henderson, hearing a step, turned, and the doctor left the room. The remark made no further impression on Evans than to acquaint him with the fact that Atwater was in debt for his board.

One day Dr. Atwater received a letter that seemed to produce a marked effect upon him. After reading it he put it back in its envelope without remark, but Henderson, who was with him at the time, noticed that he had received some unwelcome news. The landlord, however, was not a man to pry into other people's affairs and made no mention of the matter to the doctor.

It was not long after this that a summons came in the middle of the night for Dr. Atwater to attend an invalid. He went on his errand and did not return. When a week elapsed and nothing was seen or heard of him people began to talk about the case. Curiosity was the chief incentive to debate the matter, and all speculated upon a reason for the mysterious disappearance. No possible clew to the cause of his going away was suggested until Bill Evans told of the remark he had overheard when he had suddenly entered the tavern and found Henderson and Atwater together. He told it simply as it has been told here, but when it was repeated it was given as follows:

"Bill Evans come on 'em all of a suddint an' hearn Henderson abusin' the doctor 'cause he wouldn't pay no board."

The next version was that Evans had reported a quarrel between the two men, in which Henderson was abusing the doctor about an unpaid board bill.

It was at last reported that Henderson had Atwater on the floor, pummeling him and demanding money from him.

The citizens of B. began to keep away from the tavern, except when they went there to see if the murderer showed any signs of a guilty conscience. Strangers who knew nothing of the stigma hanging over the house still came and went. When Henderson met his former friends on the street they looked at him askance and passed by on the other side, regarding him as having blood on his hands. There was hardly a citizen of B. but pictured the popular physician followed by the man to whom he owed money, struck from behind and dragged into an empty field near the house, where the sick man was waiting for him. Curiosity to know how Henderson had contrived to get rid of the body here came in and added fuel to the flame.

One morning just before daybreak Henderson's wife heard the sound of horses' hoofs without. She awakened her husband, who arose and, looking out through the window, saw that the house was surrounded by mounted masked men. Then there was a rap at the door.

Henderson went down to answer the summons and asked what was wanted.

A man—leader of the vigilance committee—entered, forced Henderson to dress and despite the pleadings of his wife and children took him from the house and down the road for a short distance, where they stopped under a tree.

"Confess that you murdered Dr. Atwater," said the leader.

"I did not."

A rope was produced, placed around Henderson's neck and the other end thrown over a limb of the tree. The culprit was again called on to confess, but persisted in his innocence. He was drawn up slowly until he became unconscious, then lowered and when revived called on again to confess.

Believing that he would not live through another such ordeal, Henderson to gain time admitted that he had murdered Atwater, but that two other men were implicated with him. If they would give him a trial by law he would make plain the whole scheme, which was to force the doctor to tell them where he had buried a large sum of money.

The committee—there were ten of them—consulted together and agreed that it would be well to get the whole story and to do this had better stop the proceedings. So, taking off their masks, which, now that Henderson had confessed, were not necessary, they took him to the jail and turned him over to the sheriff.

Henderson secured one delay after another, while he sent out statements of his case to editors all over the country begging them to publish it in the hope that Dr. Atwater would see it and come back to save him. Several months passed, and nothing came of this effort. At last Henderson could find no excuse to put his trial off longer and made up his mind that, having confessed, he would have to swing. The trial came off, and, having invented the story implicating others, he confessed as much, giving as a reason that had he not done so he would have been put to death.

The feeling ran so high against him that, though the judge charged the jury that there was no real evidence against the prisoner and though four of the twelve jurymen at first voted for an acquittal, a verdict of guilty was handed in by the foreman.

Scarcely was the word spoken when a man was seen elbowing his way through the crowd, and when he broke into the open space occupied by the lawyers an exclamation of astonishment burst forth. He was Dr. Atwater, the supposedly murdered man.

Atwater had seen one of the notices of the position in which he had placed the man who had befriended him and hastened to save him. The reason of his coming to B. and of his disappearance from there was that he had had trouble with his wife and had been directed by the court to pay her alimony which had loaded him with debt. To escape from further demands he had gone west and practiced his profession under an assumed name. The letter he had received which had disconcerted him was from his brother notifying him that his wife had learned of his whereabouts. When called out on the night of his disappearance, instead of going to visit the patient he had traveled till morning, turning up, after several weeks' shifting, in another locality and under another name.

Before leaving the courthouse Henderson entered a complaint against the ten members of the vigilance committee for "felonious attack with intent to kill," claiming $10,000 from each and every one of them for barbarous and inhuman treatment. They were all arrested the same afternoon and lodged in the same jail in which Henderson had been confined. Some of them secured bail and were liberated; others remained in confinement until the matter was settled.

Those who were free met together and sent one of their number to Henderson with a proposition to pay him on behalf of all the committee 50 per cent of his demands if he would withdraw his charge. He declined the proposition. A meeting of citizens was called and the full amount of the claim raised by subscription. It was paid over to Henderson within sixty days, and he withdrew his suit.

Henderson paid the doctor's arrears for alimony, after which he, his wife and children and the doctor all disappeared and never were seen in B. again. It is said that Henderson is a grape grower in California and that the doctor is practicing medicine in some foreign country.

IS OPPOSED TO A FREE CANAL

Wilson Makes This Clear In Conference With Sena'ors

AGREES WITH GREAT BRITAIN

Two Ways Open to Meet Executive's Ideas on the Subject—Inclined to Lift Mexican Arms Embargo—Pending Treaties Probably Safe—Foreign Policy Is Strengthened

Washington, Jan. 28.—Despite much secrecy as to the conference between President Wilson and the members of the senate foreign relations committee it has become definitely known that the president is opposed to free tolls through the Panama canal and regards free tolls as in violation of the treaty with Great Britain.

Moreover, it is known that the president is more strongly disposed than ever to lift the embargo on arms for Mexico. The arbitration treaties are to be pressed, the president being in favor of this policy.

These are the principal features of foreign policy which were discussed. With respect to abolition of free tolls, not only was it made known to the members of the foreign relations committee that the president is against the free toll policy, but it has since become clear that the movement to do away with free tolls will be formidable and is likely to win.

It is fully expected that the bill to abolish free tolls will pass the house and, while there will be a strong opposition in the senate, it is said that there has been a change of front on the part of some senators and the bill may pass. It is believed the president will muster sufficient pressure on senators to abolish free tolls to bring this about.

Senators who talked with the president say he fully explained his position on the tolls question; that his views incline toward the contentions of Great Britain.

It was pointed out that two ways might meet the views of the president. One would be to repeal the exemption provision of the act. The other would be the passage of the Adamson resolution to suspend for two years the operation of the exemption clause and thus demonstrate whether the canal could be self-sustaining without tolls from American ships.

With respect to lifting of the arms embargo, it is definitely stated in foreign relations committee circles that this action was to be expected. Two or three months ago, it became plain, the president began to show a decided disposition to lift the arms embargo. He had before that flatly opposed so doing. Senators in the conference were led to believe the embargo would be lifted and thus a stronger policy entered on in aid of the constitutionalists.

While senators are respecting their promise to keep silent regarding the details of their conference with the president it is violating no confidence ot affirm that the net effect of the interchange of opinions augurs well for quick action upon some of the leading foreign questions that are pressing for attention. The president exhibited an eagerness for information and opinion that brought a friendly response from the senators, and it is believed that in relation to some matters he was made familiar with a point of view that had not occurred to him before, but impressed him deeply.

The inclination of the committee is to co-operate with President Wilson in foreign affairs more strongly than ever, in the belief that if it shows the courage of what are taken to be his convictions he need have no fear of partisan or faction opposition. That the president "gave the word" to go ahead with the sixteen unratified arbitration treaties may be inferred also from the fact that the committee on foreign relations will take them up at once.

A stiff fight is expected over the Japanese treaty and that with Great Britain, but the majority disposition in the committee appears to be to push them through. It is regarded as certain that with the president's backing, now assured, the treaties all can be renewed. That with France was renewed last spring.

FATIGUE IS POISON

Brandeis Argues That It Is Generated During Period of Activity

Washington, Jan. 28.—Basing his appeal upon the latest scientific statements of the effect of fatigue, Louis D. Brandeis pleaded before the United States supreme court in behalf of the constitutionality of the nine-hour law for working women in Ohio.

The cited the greatest modern scientists to prove fatigue is a poison generated during the activity and removed during rest; that the poison accumulated during the excessive work, and that as a result health deteriorates and efficiency fails off.

City Boat Sinks Schooner

Boston, Jan. 28.—Fishing schooner Olive F. Hutchins was sunk in the harbor by the municipal steamer George A. Hibbard. Captain Hutchins and sixteen members of the schooner's crew had barely abandoned the vessel when she sank. The steamer made a large hole in the port side.

AMONG THE CLUBS

she was not other than what her character represented her to be.

Others to take gentlemens parts were Miss Clara DeCoste as Professor Horace Mullbridge; Miss Emma Bigoness as Dr. Lane; Miss Lulu Crowley as George Dobbins; Miss Anna J. Walsh as Tom Ripley; and Miss Elsie A. Picard as Orlando Hawkins, as Thompson, as William and as James.

The ladies parts were taken by Miss Helen L. Galvin, who impersonated Mrs. Lucy Joy; Miss Josephine McCarthy as Miss Alice Lane; and Miss A. Gertrude Crowley as Mrs. Walton.

Act 1 was laid in Mrs. Joy's private apartments in the Fifth Avenue hotel, New York city. Act 2 being the same scene with an interval of two weeks.

Act three was the parlor in the Fifth avenue hotel, and the last act in the consultation room in Dr. Lanes house, Washington Heights, New York city.

The necessary scene shifting was done by ladies, who would not even call the janitor from his hiding place to assist.

During the presentation of the comedy, musical selections, that were not too bad, were rendered by the kitchen orchestra of eleven pieces. Their music was evidence that music may come from the proper application of kitchen tin ware.

In addition to this, candy was sold among the audience between acts and quite a sum was realized for the charity fund.

The ushers were Misses Carmel, Helen and Pauline Brogan, Miss Margaret Griffin, Misses Annie and Sadie Heaney, Miss Margaret Sullivan, Miss Edith Hart, Miss Stella Brown and Misses Annie and Frances Frohock.

Q. W. C. EDUCATION COMMITTEE

Mrs. Jethro Mellen, chairmen of Education committee of the Quincy Women's club in reviewing the work of her committee reports that the series of lectures for school children given under its auspices with Miss Edith Randall as the speaker, has been most successful. Three of the lectures have been given as follows: Nov. 19 to the Coddington and Atherton Hough schools with 550 children present; Dec. 17 to the Adams, Cranch John Hancock and Lincoln schools in the hall of the Adams school, 750 children present and a chorus of their number sang Christmas carols; Jan 7 to Wollaston and Massachusetts Fields schools in Wollaston school hall, 500 attending, the children furnished music. Miss Randall's subject, "A German Christmas" was received with enthusiasm and followed with the closest attention, two facts which attest to the benefit received.

Two more lectures in the series are to be given. The Education committee is grateful for the courtesy and cooperation of the school committee, superintendent of schools, masters and teachers and feels repaid for its efforts along this line and encouraged to contine a work which it believes to be worth while.

FEDERATION MUSIC DEPT.

Mrs. Edward B. Newton, chairman of the music department of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's clubs, is sending out circular letters to the clubs containing suggestions regarding a series of topics on the folk music of different countries prepared by the department, and also a study of the growth and development of music. Both outlines are developed very simply for class work.

The department calls attention to the "courtesy of absolute silence," maintained by clubs during a musical performance, and asks that clubs voice their approval of such action. It is the ambition of this department to establish a musical scholarship which shall become a valuable asset to federation work. The plan for establishing such a scholarship is so practical that it will meet the approval, and merit the attention and cooperation of every club. The plan follows:—

A musical bureau has been organized by this department to arrange for the appearance in clubs of musical artists, professional or amateur. Appropriate music will be arranged for programmes upon any subject. Musicians ordinarily obtained through an entertainment bureau will be secured through this bureau. Special effort will be made to aid the younger artists, so many of whom are doing excellent work and only need the proper endorsement to place them before clubs. Artists will be enrolled in this bureau on a percentage basis, the resulting fund to be the nucleus of the musical scholarship. Musical programmes or lectures on music will be furnished upon short notice. The department asks that it be consulted by the clubs for next year's programme.

BOSTON SCOUT COUNCIL

Rufus Tobey Appointed to One of the Members

No movement of recent years is so fraught with importance as the Boy Scout movement. It is educational on the one hand, and prepares every scout for service. Gen. Funston, whose capture of Aguilnaldo in the Philippines made him one of the chief figures in the Philippine War is naturally of a restless, roving disposition. He is a steam engine, whose energies were uselessly scattered before be enlisted in the war with Spain.

It is related that someone asked President Fairchild, of the University where Funston studied, what he could remember of the noted general. Taking a little memorandum book from his pocket, he scanned its pages, and read "Give Funston something to do."

Now Boy Scouts are taught to do certain things, not as stunts, but to aid others. Every step in their training is a means to this end, and yet in order to accomplish the purpose of this increasing army competent and sufficient supervision is needed. Because of this, the leaders of the movement divide certain sections into districts, each one having a council of experienced men.

The work in our country is organized on a strictly business basis, and Quincy with other towns and cities is supervised by what it known as the Greater Boston Council. In certain portions of this ninth district there has been a falling off both in efficiency and numbers: hence a reorganization has become necessary. Hon. Grafton D. Cushing, temporary chairman of the reorganization committee of the Greater Boston Council, has sent out a letter of which the following is a sample:

Boston, Jan. 15, 1914

My dear Mr. Tobey;—

By the authority conferred on me as temporary chairman of the meeting for the reorganization of the Greater Boston council, I hereby request and appoint you to serve, until such time as the ninth district is organized and has elected its representatives to the Greater Boston council, as a member of the Greater Boston council from the ninth district. Kindly notify me whether you will serve in this capacity.

Anticipating with pleasure your acceptance and cooperation, I am,

(Signed) Grafton D. Cushing.

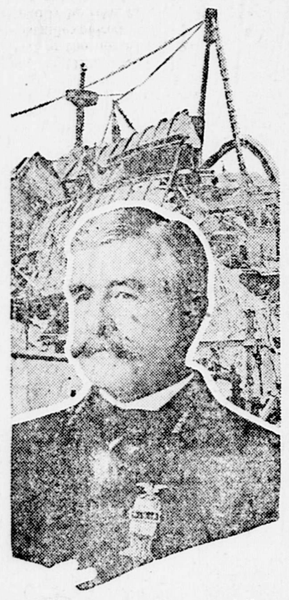
"REMEMBER THE MAINE!"

The President and Cabinet Members Will Take Part In Commemoration.

The sixteenth annual commemoration of the sinking of the battleship Maine in Havana harbor will be held at Arlington National cemetery on Feb. 15. Colonel John McElroy, chairman of the Maine national memorial committee, has charge of the arrangements. President Wilson has been invited to speak, and addresses will be made by the secretaries of war and navy and by Commander Oden Lake,



Photos by American Press Association.

THE MAINE WRECK AFTER THE EXPLOSION. COLONEL JOHN M'ELROY.

Commander In Chief John Lewis Smith of the United Spanish War Veterans and others.

The ceremonies at Arlington will be preceded by a street parade in Washington, which will be composed of regulars from the army, the navy and the marine corps and the garrisons of the army and navy unions in Washington and surrounding cities. As the parade crosses the aqueduct bridge on its way to Arlington a flower boat manned by sailors will drift down the river, from which young women, clad in white, will scatter flowers in memory of the "unforgotten dead of the Maine" upon the waters.

The first Maine memorial exercises were held at Arlington, Feb. 15, 1906, by about a dozen patriotic men and women. From that small beginning the event has grown into one of national interest.

LORD STRATHCONA'S CAREER.

Canadian Statesman Rose From Poverty to Great Wealth and Distinction.

The recent death of Lord Strathcona, high commissioner of Canada, meant the passing of one of the most remarkable men of the age—a man self made, who won for himself many honors and fabulous riches. He was born plain Donald Smith in Archieston, Morayshire, Scotland, in 1820 and educated in the common schools. He went out to Canada as a cadet of the Hudson Bay company in 1838. For thirty years he was in the active service of that great corporation, and for the first thirteen of them he was exiled to the wilds of Labrador. Then he was moved to the northwest, in those days almost unexplored.

DONALD SMITH, LORD STRATHCONA.

Steadily he rose, however, in the service of the company until he became chief factor and then resident governor and chief commissioner of the company in Canada.

He was one of the principals in building the Canadian Pacific railway from Montreal to the Pacific coast. He also gained great interests in the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba railway. Upon the completion of the Canadian Pacific in 1886 he was knighted by Queen Victoria and in the same year went to London as lord high commissioner from Canada. He conferred upon that office a prestige which it had never enjoyed before. In 1897 he was raised to the peerage. During the Boer war he equipped and maintained at his own expense a body of 400 rough riders. He became one of the prominent figures of official London and was in British eyes the very embodiment of the newly awakened imperialism.

MUST USE ALL RESOURCES

Railroads Will Otherwise Be Refused Raise In Freight Rates

Washington, Jan. 28.—The interstate commerce commisssion served notice on railroads that before it will consider granting increased freight rates the carries must show that they are forcing a "reasonable contribution" to their revenues for every service they perform, and that even with this full exaction, that their revenues are shrinking.

The warning was issued in a decision declaring unwarranted the present rules in vogue on eastern railroads in connection with "industrial lines"—short railroads or tracks owned by various industries.

The commission was led to its significant comment on the freight rates question by a discussion of the free service granted over industrial lines—a service which the report declared would add millions annually to the carriers' income, if charged for.

The decision is considered one of the most important in recent years. It laid down the rule that service by carries beyond a reasonably convenient point of interchange over industrial short lines was entirely a shippers' service, to be charged for.

THREE YEARS' DELAY

Thaw Case Will Be Held Up If It Goes to Supreme Court

Concord, N. H., Jan. 28.—Now that the Thaw brief has been filed in the United States court the next step will be the making of an order by Justice Aldrich announcing a date for a hearing.

It is thought probable that the court will take sufficient time to study the briefs submitted in order to make a ruling on the main question at the time of the next hearing.

Several local attorneys think it is possible the decision may be a proforma one, and the case immediately transferred to the supreme court of the United States.

As there are some 700 cases in order for hearing before that body at the present time it is considered improbable that the Thaw case could be reached before three years at the earliest.

THE MOTHER'S STRATAGEM.

[An infant playing near a precipice.]

While on the cliff with calm delight she kneels.
And the blue vales a thousand joys recall,
See, to the last, last verge her infant steals!
Oh, fly—yet stir not, speak not lest it fall.
Far better taught, she lays her bosom bare.
And the fond boy springs back to nestle there.
—From the Greek of Leonidas of Alexandria, by Samuel Rogers.

PERSEVERANCE.

All that I have accomplished or expect to accomplish has been and will be by that plodding, patient, persevering process of accretion which builds the ant heap particle by particle, thought by thought, fact by fact. If I was ever actuated by ambition its highest and warmest aspiration reached no further than the hope to set before the young men of my country an example in employing those invaluable fragments of time called "odd moments."—Elihu Burritt.

Satisfying a Customer Carried to an Extreme

By HOLLAND.

A WOMAN who bought a dress which she found was not just what she wanted went with it to one of the biggest stores in the world and said it did not suit her. She wanted her money back, but explained that she had lost the sales slip. The sum she claimed was given to her.

Two days later she found the sales slip and discovered that she had not bought the dress at the store to which she had taken it, but had bought it at a rival establishment. She went to the store and explained.

"We knew you had not bought the dress here," explained the manager, "but you were palpably dissatisfied with it, and our aim is to satisfy all our customers. If we have impressed on your mind the fact that we are more than fair we are satisfied. We covet nothing more than such a reputation as we are sure you will give us."

Many will think that this was carrying fairness too far. Perhaps it was, but it was done by the greatest retail merchant of this age, one whose name is known wherever the English language is spoken and whose expenditures for advertising run up to a million dollars a year.

Successful advertisers know that satisfied customers are an invaluable asset. You have an advantage in dealing with the liberal advertisers.

HEN THIEF AT DEER ISLAND

Was Arrested for Larceny from Person Unknown

The thief who stole the 25 pullets from the hen house of C. F. Rasmussen on Greenleaf street, it has been learned, is now doing time at Deer Island where he was committed from Boston on Tuesday. Monday night after the larceny of the hens the fellow started toward Boston and was picked up by an officer of station 5 as a suspicious character. He was arraigned in court Tuesday for the larceny of hens from some person unknown and sent to Deer Island.

The twelve hens were identified by means of a small tin tag tied to their legs as belonging to Mr. Rasmussen and this morning he accompanied Capt. Mackay to Boston to claim them. The name of the party who stole the hens has not been learned.

It is thought that he may be the same party who stole the hens from the premises of Mr. Ferguson in the Park lane district a few nights previous.

The Seneca Social Club will hold a social and dance at A. O. H. hall,, Franklin street, Thursday evening.

HAPPENINGS AT CITY HALL

Assessors Have Not Resigned As Requested by Mayor

Things were quiet about the Mayor's office this morning as His Honor was out of town on city business.

Assessors Stocker and Mitchell who have been requested to hand in their resignations have not done so, and there is a rumor about City Hall that they do not intend to resign and if the Mayor wants to get rid of them he will have to remove them.

Overseer Perry Green was at City Hall this morning, and when asked about the new chair, laughed and said that he had not as yet ordered a new chair, but as the chair now in the Overseers office was small and of small frame he thought it probable that a new chair would be necessary.

Mayor Miller attended last evening the Y. M. C. A. banquet.

Vol. 29 No. 25 QUINCY MASS. THURSDAY EVENING JANUARY 29 1914 PRICE TWO CENTS

BROOKLINE'S SCHEME WOULD INCREASE TAXES

Would Cause Big Jump in Norfolk County Assessments Upon Cities and Towns

Quincy's Tax Rate Would Be Fifty Cents Higher

Should Brookline be annexed to Suffolk county as proposed, the Norfolk county taxes would take such a jump that Quincy's tax rate would be fifty cents larger than under present arrangements.

Quincy now pays a county tax of $26,139, and Brookline $98,525. With Brookline out of Norfolk county, Quincy's tax would be $43,565, an increase of $17,426.

Upon the city's present valuation of $35,000,000, a levy of $1 per thousand raises $35,000, so that a levy of fifty cents would be required each year to raise the $17,426 additional for the county.

Brookline now pays two-fifths of the Norfolk county tax, which in 1913 was $250,000, and will probably be the same this year. Quincy pays over one tenth. With Brookline out of of the county, Quincy and all the other towns would find their assessments about two-thirds larger, Quincy would than pay over one-sixth.

The Daily Ledger presents below the Norfolk county tax on each city and town in 1913, and in the same line the assessment with Brookline excluded, which we will call the "If" column:

	1913	If
Quincy	$26,139	$43,565
Braintree	5,998	9,996
Milton	23,156	38,593
Weymouth	7,841	13,168
Avon	871	1,451
Bellingham	770	1,283
Brookline	98,525
Canton	4,524	7,540
Cohasset	7,741	12,901
Dedham	10,422	17,370
Dover	4,624	7,707
Foxboro	2,144	3,573
Franklin	3,652	6,087
Holbrook	1,441	2,401
Medfield	1,541	2,568
Medway	1,373	2,288
Millis	1,038	1,730
Needham	5,831	9,718
Norfolk	804	1,140
Norwood	11,360	18,933
Plainville	770	1,283
Randolph	2,345	3,908
Sharon	2,278	3,797
Stoughton	3,217	5,362
Walpole	4,691	7,818
Wellesley	12,801	21,335
Westwood	3,016	5,026
Wrentham	1,072	1,787
Total	$250,000	$250,000

It makes considerable difference to all the town whether the Brookline petition to the Legislature is successful. The Daily Ledger is not so much opposed to the scheme for the financial reasons quoted above, but because a rich town like Brookline would shirk a just tax, and place the burden upon its poor neighbors.

We are glad to learn that the Norfolk County Commissioners, Norfolk County treasurer, and Norfolk County members of the Legislature are opposed to the scheme and that it will meet with strong opposition. But the city government of Quincy should go on record against it, and adopt a resolve at the next meeting of the City Council.

The Mayor and Legislative committee should be requested to appear in opposition at the State House hearing which may be held in a few days. Perhaps Mayor Miller will make it the subject of a communication to the City Council.

WANTED IN IRELAND.

Chester I. Campbell of Wollaston, manager of Boston Automobile shows and big industrial expositions, who has been chosen by several political factions as a candidate for mayor next fall, received a cable message Tuesday from the Countess of Aberdeen asking him to manage a civic exposition to be staged in Dublin, Ireland, during the summer and autumn. The affair will be under the auspices of the Irish Housing and Town Planning Association of which the countess is president.

Mr. Campbell sent word that he had taken the project under consideration but would make no definite acceptance until further details were learned. If the exhibit will not interfere with management of two Boston Automobile shows, and the National Textile exhibition that occurs in March and April he may accept.

Mr. Campbell is one of the living live wires of the city, and has managed the annual outing for orphan children, given by the Boston Automobile Dealers Association. He said that he found much pleasure in that work and would exceedingly regret giving it up even for one year.

SUBMARINE FLEET.

The delivery of the submarine boat K2, built at the Fore River shipyard for the United States government, which was to have taken place Wednesday, has been postponed. It is expected that final adjustments will be completed before the end of the week. The delivery of K2 will be the first of a fleet of submarine being constructed at the yard and will be closely followed by the delivery of K1. Work is being rushed on the boats and it is expected that all will be finished and take an active part in the summer maneouvers.

Neponset Shingles

Six reasons why you should specify and use them in your new home.

1. They will outlast two wooden shingles.
2. You have a fireproof roof which means a saving on insurance.
3. When finished you have an artistic deep gray color lasting roof not excelled by anything else.
4. Taxes only two-thirds the labor to put them on.
5. Costs no more than wooden shingles.
6. The last but not least, it is guaranteed by BIRD & SON of East Walpole who have made building paper for over a century, and also endorsed by us.

What other shingle can you get that will do what the NEPONSET Shingle will do? The answer—NONE

As we want the general public to know more about these NEPONSET SHINGLES, we will make a special discount of 25 per cent on all sales this month which means a loss to us. We have decided to charge this loss to our advertising account, in order to make the NEPONSET SHINGLES better known in our vicinity.

CARPENTERS, CONTRACTORS, and HOME BUILDERS.

This month only, NEPONSET Shingles, fireproof and artistic at $4.50 per square. Regular price $5.00 per square.

Remember this month only. Samples and reading matter will be mailed upon request. Bring us your roofing problem as we have roofings for any purpose and we will be only too pleased to talk it over with you.

FOUR NEW BATTLESHIPS RECOMMENDED

Although Secretary Daniels has recommended to the House Committee no Naval affairs at Washington two battleships and sixteen destroyers be built, it is reported in dispatches from Washington that the Naval committee favors four battleships, eight destroyers and three submarines.

Should the recommendation of the committee become a law it doubtless means more work for the Fore River shipyard at Quincy as this command would surely be one of the bidders for the battleships as well as for the destroyers and three submarines.

The Fore River Co., is perhaps better equipped at the present time to make a favorable and low bid than any other shipyard in the country.

CLAMORING FOR CHANGE

Many Miller Supporters Are Now Out Against Mayor

Although the smoke of the battle of ballots last December has hardly cleared away, and it will be ten months before the citizens will again be called upon to give their choice for Mayor, the plotters are at work. Disappointed at being unable to dictate to Mayor Miller, whom he should appoint to fill certain positions in the department heads, these few men, who were his closest advisers and managers during the recent campaign, are now seeking to overthrow the conditions which they worked so hard to create.

It is a well known fact that these men are now hard at work trying to find a candidate to run against Mayor Miller next December to defeat him. It is also well understood that the man whom they succeed in getting to be their standard bearer must practically agree that a certain man shall be appointed as Commissioner of Public Works.

One of these leaders, when asked if the rumor of their seeking a new candidate was true, replied that it was. When asked why it was that they had turned against their candidate of last year so soon after election, he replied that there were two things they wished to accomplish when they went into the campaign. One of these was to clean out City Hall of the officials then serving. It did not matter how efficient an official was, he must be fired. This they had accomplished.

The second thing they wished to accomplish was to land certain men in office. This they had been unable to accomplish, and it was therefore decreed that the man who would not do their bidding must get out.

It is very kind in these gentlemen to say the least, but it is doubtful if the eyes of the citizens will be closed to the scheme on foot.

It is generally admitted that the present Mayor had a lot of poor advice in regard to the officials in office when he took the oath of office. It is also believed that if he had not heeded the advice of these same gentlemen who have now forsaken him, the list of city officials who will take office next Monday would read different from what it does now.

L. O. L. BALL.

Wilsons orchestra will furnish the music and dancing will be in order from 8 to 12 o'clock. David Johnson will be the floor director, George Littlewood the assistant, and David Wright, John Arbuckle, Murdock A. Gillis, Thomas Davidson and John B. Whiteway the aids. The reception committee is composed of Andrew Stewart, Willard B. Jones ,and Joseph Harron.

Miss Margaret Edgren of Whitwell street was greatly surprised by several friends Tuesday evening who presented her a camera and other tokens. Among those present were: Hilda Ecklblom, Beatrice Ackerson, Gertrude Hibbit, Alice Dahlberg, Eleanor Frisk, Koran Tapper, Esther Broberg, Eleanor Lindquist, Olga Lindquist, Isabella Olsen and Vera Bergfors.

CITY HALL HAPPENINGS

Large Growth of City Under Assessor Adams

Warren W. Adams, chairman of the Board of Assessors, who retires Saturday after six years service as chairman of the Board, has the satisfaction that during his six years term of office the valuation of the city has increased rapidly. In round figures the increase in valuation has been $9,532,975 of which amount $8,273,650 was on real estate and $1,259,325 on personal estate. These figures in a way show how fast Quincy is growing.

A birth census is now being taken in the several wards of the city under the direction of City Clerk Crane, the census takers being as follows: Ward One, Joseph L. Ford; Ward Two, R. L. Ford; Ward Three, R. W. H. McDonald; Ward Four, A. Loys Burkhardt; Ward Five, John W. Nash; Ward Six, John B. F. Ramsdell. Possibly the total of 963 in 1912 may go over 1000 in 1913.

August V. Johnson of 205 Kendrick avenue has filed nomination papers for councilman from Ward Three.

Commissioner Tupper has extended the courtesies of his office to Moses L. Brown the new Commissioner who will take office next Monday. There have been many inquiries about City Square as to what kind of a looking man the new Commissioner is.

While he has been a frequent visitor to City Square during the past weeks few know him. The Ledger has been able to obtain a fine picture of the new Commissioner and takes occasion at this time to publish it so that he may hereafter be recognized.

MOSES L. BROWN

The Commissioner-Elect.

There was nothing to give out in the way of news at the Mayor's office this morning. The Mayor was asked if there were any new developments relative to Chief of Police Burrell or Michael E. Shea who had been requested to resign and he said no. That they had not handed in their resignations as yet. He further said that he had asked for their resignations before the first Monday in February, and that it would have been better perhaps if he had requested them to resign within ten days. No word had been received either from the Assessors.

The matter of the leak of the Mayor's appointments has been sifted down and the blame placed directly upon the man who gave the appointments away, within a few minutes after he had received them. This man, was not a member of the Daily Ledger staff. The editor of the paper to which this man is attached has apologized to the Mayor for the error of his subordinate. As this party is wholly to blame he should be willing to shoulder it and not try to shield himself by untruths that would implicate another man. At present the guilty man's name is withheld and will not be used unless necessary to

REPUBLICANS FOR UNITY

Organize for 1914 and Will Get Together

The annual meeting of the Republican City Committee was held Wednesday evening at their rooms in the Greenleaf block, organization being perfected by the election of the following officers:

President—John R. Richards.
Vice President—A. L. Whitman.
Secretary—A. H. Gilson.
Treasurer—I. M. Whittemore.

The organization of the several ward committees as far as made is as follows:

Ward One—Fred F. Green, Chairman A. H. Gilson, secretary and Henry P. Kittredge, treasurer.

Ward Two—A. L. Whitman, chairman, Daniel Scouler, Jr., secretary and treasurer.

Ward Three—W. A. Smith, chairman Arthur Sylvester, secretary and Robert B. Craig, treasurer.

Ward Five—Geoge A. Vibet.

Ward Six—Frank E. Badger, chairman, James Thomas, secretary and treasurer.

The Ward Four committee has not organized.

There was a very large attendance at the meeting and considerable enthusiasm. Several red hot speeches were made by Charles H. Johnson, Fred F. Green, Carl E. Carlson, Charles E. Cherrington, Herbert G. Beeman man and John L. Hamilton.

The discussion was general and along the lines of the party getting together early. The general ideas advanced were that the party should get together. That the ground should be gone over early for available candidates and that the spirit of unity should prevail.

Considerable was also said about supporting the party candidate after the nomination had been made and standing by the result of the primaries.

While no one present was directly accused of deserting the party after the nominations had been made, and supporting other candidates it was evident that certain members of last year's committee had done so.

Several argued, and their argument met with a general approval, that after a nomination had been made that it was the duty of the members of the Ward and City Committee to support that candidate and if they did not do so they should resign from the committee. State or national politics were not touched upon ,the remarks being wholly on city affairs.

Charles H. Johnson, who was the party candidate for Mayor last year made a rousing address, but did not cry over spilt milk, his remarks being for unity.

Mrs. J. A.Sutherland returned Wednesday evening from Texas with the body of her husband, and found her children had been well cared for by their grandmother. Funeral services will be held Sunday at the Swedish Congregational church at 2.30.

SEASHORE VALUES AT HOUGHS NECK

Great Hill, Manet Avenue Section and Germantown About Equal In Valuation

But Sea Street Put It Over All of Them

In the Assessors' office at City Hall the Houghs Neck district, so-called, includes all that part of Quincy, east of the Mount Wollaston cemetery and the city stables, between Quincy bay and Town river. It comprises Merrymount, Adams Shore, Post Island, Bethel Beach, Germantown, Rock Island, Manet Beach, Great Hill and Houghs Neck village.

Today the Daily Ledger presents the street values in this district, which is really a part of Ward One. There are only four streets with a valuation of over $100,000. Sea street easily leads but this thoroughfare is over three miles long. The Assessors have included with Sea street for convenience, Seagull street and Shellton road.

Sea avenue which is wholly on Great hill is second with a valuation of $108,975. When Mears avenue and Island avenue are added, the valuation of Great hill is over $200,000.

Palmer street which is wholly in Germantown is third with a valuation of $106,025, and when Bicknell, St. Germain and other streets are added the valuation of Germantown is also about $200,000.

Manet avenue is fourth in valuation, a total of $101,175. With Babcock and Stoughton streets added this section is also valued about $200,000.

Rock Island road has a valuation of nearly $100,000, about half of which may be at Rock Island. When Spring and Centre streets are added the assessed valuation of this section is nearly $200,000.

JUNIOR ENDEAVORERS.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the United Presbyterian church held a business meeting and social in the church Saturday evening. A large number of Juniors were present, the larger number being boys. Immediately after the business session the pastor Mr. McLeod was asked to make a few remarks, during the course of which the Juinor superintendent, Miss Marion Russel was presented a five dollar gold piece from the Juniors. Miss Russell was very much surprised and joy beamed in every face present.

Misses Mabel and Ethel Thompson and Annie Bonham presented a sketch entitled "Lucy's Doctor Dee." Little miss Lucy was very much troubled with screams in her throat and through the assistance of Dr. Dee, (Mabel Thompson), the screams were finally cured and her mother, (Annie Bonham) was finally able to wash Lucy's face and hands without a scream or a puckered face. Games were enjoyed and refreshments served by Misses Annie Bonham, Mabel and Ethel Thompson and Lillian O'Brien who were assisted by Masters Malcolm Kerr and John Russell.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR WEEK.

Plans are being made by Miss Ida L. Thomas, Junior superintendent of the East Norfolk Christian Endeavor Union to hold a Junior rally at Bethany church Saturday, February 7. The first week of February will be Christian Endeavor week, each day to be devoted to some phase of the Christian Endeavor work and Saturday will be Junior day. All the societies in Quincy are co-operating and a real rally is expected.

SERIOUS FIRE ON BIRMINGHAM

Quincy Built Scout Cruiser Damaged Many Thousand

The scout cruiser Birmingham, which was built at the Fore River yards in Quincy and launched May 29, 1907, was badly damaged by fire at Philadelphia Wednesday night. Fifteen hundred marines and sailors fought the fire which was only gotten under control when within a few feet of the magazine where thousands of rounds of amunition were stored, including a number of torpedoes. There were several reserve vessels near the Birmingham and had an explosion taken place it would have scattered the fire and damaged them all. As ti was, many thousands of dollars worth of damage was done but fortunately no one was injured. The cause of the fire is unknown.

GRANITE CITY WHIST.

Twelve tables were in play Wednesday evening at the weekly whist tournament of the Granite City club. The scores as usual ran high and low, the two best percentages being scored by E. J. Thompson and by Harold Snow, the latter being a visitor. After twenty-five hands the entertainment committee served fried scollops with tartar sauce, hot coffee and rolls.

NOTICE

Again we ask those sending news or other matter by mail to direct it to the company or newspaper rather than to individual members of the company or employees. If addressed to individuals and they were ill or not at the office, it might be several days in reaching its proper destination and if news matter would be too late for use.

There seems to be a hitch in the attack on Ojinaga, owing no doubt to defects in Gen. Villa's moving picture machines.

Although the currency question may be settled, the country will not rest quiet until some way is found to prevent the pitcher from passing formidable batsmen.

It is claimed that some wholesalers destroy provisions in order to keep the price up, but it seems as if they might let the public come in and smell before this is done.

There are twice as many automobiles used as in 1911, but as many people pay for them in mortgages instead of cash, it is not considered extravagant.

"GO TO CHURCH SUNDAY."

The holding of an "Everybody at church Sunday" is being tried in various cities, and almost invariably with big congregations and much enthusiasm.

A tribe of people is growing up in the larger cities whose only church is the moving picture show. They could not be expected to cultivate the habit of church attendance, as that would require them to do some thinking. All the energy they have for thinking is required for their business.

On the side of pure advantage to daily work, outside of spiritual benefits, however, a strong case can be made out for church going. It rests the mind by encouraging new trains of thought. It substitutes quiet for hustle, optimism for depression.

The modern church must advertise. Not merely must it use publicity methods, but it needs to persuade people to try a sample of its goods occasionally. Some of the transients of a church going Sunday become regulars.

LIFE INSURANCE.

Half a million dollars of life insurance protection has been taken away from the wives and children of the country by the habit of borrowing on life insurance policies. These figures are the result of a recent investigation by the Life Insurance Presidents Association.

Of course the eloquence of the life insurance agent accounts for much. It is easy to save money while his facile conversation runs on. Only a cigar or two less a day, and you have paid for a thousand or two insurance, according to age. Of course if you find you want the money, he plausibly adds, all you have to do is to borrow on your policy, which establishes your credit.

Under persistent solicitation, appealing to the feeling of moral obligation, many policies are taken out by men with no self-control in money matters. They never judge of an expenditure by its relation to their total income. If the money is in their pocket, it is right to spend it. The fact that a premium payment is due next month is ignored.

When a man borrows on his policy, he expects to pay it back soon. This investigation by the insurance presidents showed that few of these loans are ever repaid.

The modern married woman is ill fitted to cope with the world. The time that might have provided her with a bread winning equipment, has gone to service to husband and children. It is a pretty mean hearted man who does not do everything possible to leave some degree of comfort behind him, and to leave it intact, unmortgaged either by personal extravagance or business ambition.

Wintry Weather

You like the crisp and chilly air
That makes you learn to do and dare.
It never is too cold for you?
Oh, well, I used to like it too!

With youth and health and clothes and coal,
A cheery heart, a lofty soul,
It never is too cold for you?
Oh, well, I used to like it too!

I felt the same long years ago,
But thinner blood runs now more slow.
It never is too cold for you?
Oh, well, I used to like it too!

Bald heads exposure learn to shun.
Rags only love the summer sun.
It never is too cold for you?
Oh, well, I used to like it too!

A fireless room, a table bare,
Friends gone, hope gone, new ills I bear.
It never is too cold for you?
Oh, well, I used to like it too!

HOW A MILLION A YEAR COULD BE SAVED ON OIL.

The Government Ownership Project Which Is Under Consideration.

In consequence of an investigation disclosing the advantages of oil equipped battleships Secretaries Daniels and Lane, Chairman Padgett of the house naval affairs committee and others have been conferring over a project for government ownership of oil lands and pipe lines for furnishing the navy with its own fuel. Rear Admiral Griffin, chief of the bureau of steam engineering, has filed with the house naval committee a statement outlining the project with recommendations.

Because of the increased cost of oil, which naval officials say has gone up 50 per cent during the past year, "with the navy multiplying the consumption and the oil companies multiplying the price," plans are under way for making the navy independent of oil companies by reserving lands or acquiring them and by developing its own oil resources.

Besides oil lands in Oklahoma, officials in Washington have considered government lands in California, though it is suggested that these might involve title litigation. Admiral Griffin suggested the Osage lands in Oklahoma, adding that there are also undeveloped oil lands in Alaska.

The admiral's statement says that if the government should produce its own oil it could have the large pipe line transportation profit by building its own pipe lines. The saving, compared with present conditions, would be from $1,000,000 upwards annually.

A $500,000 appropriation to lease "a quarter section of highly probable land" is recommended as a beginning.

The navy during the last fiscal year used 400,000 barrels of oil. "Under war conditions," the statement says, "there might be periods when we would be using at the rate of five or six times that quantity.

"Probably the most logical method of beginning operations in California is to await the outcome of the present suits for recovery of oil lands, and in case of decision favorable to the government to take over the developed lands which may revert to the government as additional portions of the navy petroleum reserves."

"PUFFY OLD PASSENGERS."

Railroad Instructs Its Employees How Best to Handle Them.

How nervous women and "puffy old persons" can be handled is explained in the following circular issued by a railroad to its employees:

"Courtesy is to be distinguished from mere civility. The latter won't do: it is short of the mark. Take the case of the nervous woman who wishes to know why the train has stopped. Don't tell her 'board's against us.' She won't understand that, and the chances are that your answer will leave her worried, imagining something is really amiss.

"Here is the puffy old passenger who rushes up to ascertain what time the nine o'clock train leaves. Fine chance to show off your wit, but—don't do it. The man is excited. He doesn't realize how he has put his question. Give him the information he obviously wants—tell him his train is due to leave in three minutes, or five, or ten, as the case may be.

"We urge every employee to improve his bearing toward our patrons and neighbors. It means dollars to us, preferment to you. In their application the advantages of courtesy work both ways. And remember no man is too big to be courteous—rather many men are too little."

2,000,000 AUTOS IN USE.

More In United States Than In Any Other Country, Statistics Show.

There are at present registered in the various countries of the world nearly 2,000,000 motor vehicles, according to statistics just compiled by the office of the secretary of state of New York. In this total the United States heads the list, having more than twice as many automobiles as Great Britain, the country which comes next. The figures issued by Secretary Mitchell May, after a careful compilation, are as follows:

United States, 1,127,940; Great Britain, 425,838; ascertained total from various European countries, 273,511; estimated total from other countries 92,500; total, 1,919,789 registered cars

EUROPE BACKS UNITED STATES

But We Have Incurred Hostility In Great Measure

THE REAL MEXICAN QUESTION

Turns Upon Disposition of Panama Canal Tolls Question—Alarm Felt Over Activity of Japan, Who Is Not Keeping Hands Off as Are Other Powers—Intervention Seems Likely

Washington, Jan. 29.—The real Mexican question lies in the United States rather than in Mexico, and turns to an important degree upon the action of the senate and the administration with respect to Panama canal toll and the arbitration treaties.

It is significant in this connection, therefore, that the committee on foreign relations has made consideration of the arbitration treaty with Great Britain its first business. The administration has learned much more within the last few days regarding the activity of Japan in Mexico than had been known before. The fact has been made plain that Japanese merchants have been supplying Huerta with arms, and while no suspicion exists that the Japanese government as such has aided Huerta with arms, it is known that these munitions had been the property of the government and became obsolete when the army was equipped with modern weapons.

Many occurrences have accumulated to prove that while Europe so far is backing the United States in sincere good faith in its Mexican policy, Japan is openly in sympathy with Mexico and is exercising no restraint in her efforts to win a premier position in Mexican estimation.

But the grave danger which now confronts the administration is that Europe, acting for the protection of her own subjects and not in a threatening spirit, is on the point of suggesting to the United States that if we do not intervene in Mexico she must.

Intervention by the United States or joint intervention by Europe is apparently inevitable, and one of the most important questions in connection with this possibility is the position of England and her ally, Japan. It is in the power of England to check intervention and to restrain Japan, but it is being pointed out here by men of ripe experience that she can hardly be expected to exert herself too actively in this direction unless she may expect friendly treatment in return.

The United States has incurred the hostility of the world in a measure that may not be appreciated at its full importance. This feeling is the outgrowth of acts of the Taft rather than the Wilson administration, notably the abrogation of the Russian treaty and the exemption of American ships from payment of Panama canal tolls, but so far the Wilson administration has given these vital questions no attention and Europe has been content to mark time.

But upon the action or non-action of the senate and the White House upon matters like these depends in measurable degree whether President Wilson shall have the backing of the civilized world in his handling of his Mexican and other Latin-American problems or will be embarrassed by the silent but none the less effective hostility of European nations which are our natural friends.

The ratification of the British treaty would be a step toward a foreign policy that would commend itself to the country as one so broad that it must necessarily ignore local race prejudices and their demands for the general welfare of the country. It would remove the tolls question from the field of doubt, a step which, primarily affecting Great Britain, is of equal importance to all other maritime nations.

Should the administration be able to make and ratify a new commercial treaty with Russia, even if it were unsatisfactory to the Jews, the chain of friendly understanding among the great European nations and the United States would be well nigh complete.

WILL SUPPORT CARRANZA

Villa Says He Does Not Want to Become President of Mexico

Juarez, Mex., Jan. 29.—General Villa, military commander of the rebel forces, disclaims any ambition to become president of Mexico if the revolution is successful.

He says that, although his victories against the Huerta forces at Ojinaga and Chihuahua had attracted attention to himself, he does not wish to overshadow General Carranza, whom he recognizes as the leader of the revolution.

"Should Carranza become president he would receive my support and I would obey his commands," said Villa.

Leaves $300,000 to Academy

Andover, Mass., Jan. 29.—Phillips academy is to receive $300,000, to be used in general school purposes, by the will of Melville C. Day, who died in Florence, Italy, a month ago, according to an announcement made at the preparatory school. This gift is the culmination of many donations by Day to Phillips academy during his life.

WOMEN FIGHT POLICE

Make Unsuccessful Attempt to Storm British Cabinet Meeting

London, Jan. 29.—While the members of the British cabinet were meeting in the official residence of Premier Asquith, a party of militant suffragettes attacked the building and tried to force their way into the conference. Policemen attacked the women and a fierce street fight ensued.

News of the impending attack was telephoned to the police and a force of policemen were rushed into Downing street. When the taxicabs stopped in front of the building they were met by policemen. The women gathered themselves into a compact body and tried to fight their way past the bluecoats at the doorway.

After a severe struggle the women were driven away. Some of them were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct and resisting police in the discharge of their duty.

The four ringleaders in the attack

The four ringleaders in the attack were arraigned later and sentenced to give bonds to keep the peace or pay $25 fines.

SAVED BY FRUIT STEAMER

Passengers on Vanderbilt Yacht Were In Perilous Position

New Orleans, Jan. 29.—Death faced the party aboard Frederick W. Vanderbilt's yacht Warrior for hours after the craft, with its passengers, was wrecked on a reef off the coast of Colombia, according to fragments of wireless messages picked up here.

The messages told of heroic but futile efforts made by the United Fruit company's Fruteria to save those on board. Captain Henschaen finally was forced to summon the steamer Almirante, which effected a perilous rescue. All the Fruteria's lifeboats were either smashed or capsized.

Those on board the Almirante are Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt, the Duke and Duchess of Manchester, and Lord Keith-Falconer, son and heir of the Earl of Kintore.

LIVED FOR YEARS ON FOUR CENTS A DAY

Philosopher-Farmer Solved High Cost of Living

Webster, Mass., July 29.—Mark M. Woods, Webster's farmer philosopher, who has existed for the past twenty-two years on 4 cents a day, died at the age of 74. His death followed an illness of two weeks and is attributed to a chronic case of bronchitis.

The death of Woods removes from New England one of its famous characters, who in the face of increased living cost continued to show the public that it was possible to survive on an amount of money that seemed incredible.

He was a farmer and student and one of the best-known residents of the town, where he spent his entire life. His agricultural work was watched and studied with interest by those connected with farming, and it was through this pursuit that he is said to have given to the world his secret of living on the nominal sum of 4 cents each day.

TWO PERCENT DEPORTED

More Immigrants Applying For Admission Are Turned Back

Washington, Jan. 29.—More immigrants are being debarred from this country than last year, according to figures of the bureau of immigration.

During the month of December, as also during the first six months of the present fiscal year, more than 2 percent of those applying for admission were turned back to their native shores. Of the 95,387 who came to the United States in December, 2680 were refused.

During the first six months of the year, from July to December, inclusive, 14,765 were denied admission. In the previous fiscal year only 1.6 percent were debarred, or 19,938.

"JIM CROW" LAW UPHELD

Negroes Endeavored to Have Oklahoma Railroads Enjoined

St. Louis, Jan. 29.—The "Jim Crow" law of Oklahoma was upheld by the United States circuit court of appeals in a decision handed down here. The Oklahoma "Jim Crow" law requires railroads there to provide separate coaches for the whites and negroes equal in every way in comfort and service.

Five negroes brought action to enjoin the railroads from enforcing the law. They lost in the federal district court, which went so far as to hold that railroads need not furnish sleeping cars for the negroes if there was not sufficient demand of negroes for such accommodations.

TELEGRAPHIC BREVITIES

Boiled lobsters were sold at Portland, Me., to the retail trade for 43 cents a pound, the highest price of the season.

The United States cruiser Tacoma, which dropped one of her propellers off Nantucket lightship during a heavy gale, reached Portsmouth, N. H.

Co-operative marketing of potatoes for Aroostook farmers is urged by C. E. Embree, manager of the Maine Farmers' union, which has been organized for that purpose.

—From a purely sentimental standpoint it seems pretty heartless to say that the great bulk of small failures of the past year constitute a blessing, and yet this is the hard, cold business fact, for a large part of these failures were due to the foolish and extravagant extension of credit and the lack of system. The elimination of these concerns tends to strengthen the whole business fabric for the long steady pull back to business prosperity.—Banker and Tradesman.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

One of the ways of co-operation between the library and the schools is indicated by the material of mounted pictures and text concerning the granite industry of Quincy furnished Miss Atwood of the High school for the pupils studying commercial geography, who are taking up, among other things, the various industries of Quincy. The Librarian is indebted to His Honor Mayor Miller, Mr. J. F. Swingle and Mr. L. S. Anderson for much of this material.

The bulletin board is also used as an illustration of the library's resources upon the granite industry. The list accompanying the pictures there is divided into articles upon the following topics—Composition of granite, Quarrying industry, Granite railway.

The new magazines added to the reading room are an extra copy each of the Independent and the Delineator in order that the current number may be found there. For circulation there are added this year, the Trained Nurse, Teachers' College Record, American Carpenter and Builder, and in place of the Art Interchange, which was formerly on the library's subscription list, now no longer published, we are to have Arts and Decoration.

To the Children's room list are added two magazines, the Boy Scouts' Magazine, called Boys' life and Everyland.

ANNUAL SCHOOL REPORT.

The report of the School Committee will go forward to the printer in a short time. Among the interesting statistical figures, is the fact that the per capita cost of administering the schools, owing mainly to the increase in teachers' salaries increased from $29.84 in 1912 to $31.07 in 1913, a gain of $1.23.

As the per capita cost in the state at large rose from $36.19 in 1912 to $40.41 in 1913, a gain of $4.22, and a total almost one third greater than in Quincy, it would indicate that the costs in Quincy have not risen as rapidly as in other communities.

The percentage of the tax levy appropriated and used on the public schools in 1913 was 21.4 per cent, the same as in 1912, the lowest in the history of the city.

NORFOLK DOWNS LOT.

The important point raised by the members of the Norfolk Downs association that the city ought to be forehanded and secure a building site for the school building which is sure to be needed in that section before many years, is one which ought not to be overlooked. At the present time there is ample land available. Because of the rapid growth of that section, it may be difficult to secure such land a few years from now, except at a heavy increase in cost and possibly the removal of buildings which might be constructed in the meantime.

WASHINGTON ADDITION

The Public Building committee of the City Council gives a hearing this evening on the order to construct a four-room and hall addition to the Washington school. No plans have been approved for that purpose yet, as the City Council has not authorized anyone to procure plans. The drawings which the School Committee submitted in the first place were simply for purposes of illustration, and are not in shape for approval. For that reason no action was taken on the matter by the School Committee at its meeting on Tuesday evening.

ADVISORY COMMITTEE.

Charles Pratt, the newly appointed member of the Advisory committee on Industrial Education, is the superintendent of the Boston Gear Works, and is therefore closely in touch with the industrial situation and its educational needs.

MASTER ILL.

Mr. Woods, Master of the Willard School, has been confined to his home all the week by a severe attack of grippe.

FIRST GRADES.

The new first grades formed this week have been about the same size as those entering a year ago, except where the prevailing epidemic of mumps has cut the classes below expectations. The Lincoln school with an entering class of 33 is about the largest class, and gives evidence of the rapid growth taking place in that district. It will be recalled that the school census showed Ward Three as having the largest growth of any ward in the city.

INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL EXPENSES

The Superintendent of Schools has recently rendered to the state the first financial account of the industrial schools of Quincy from the date of their organization in September, 1912 to Dec. 1. 1913.

There was expended on the half time Industrial School during the period the sum of $4,091.53. The sum of $832.50 was received by the city in tuition from other towns and as one half the balance is paid by the state it reduces the net cost to the city $1,584.50.

For the evening industrial school during the same period, there was expended the sum of $2,198.56. Tuition and rebates from the State make the net cost to the city only $981.16.

It will be readily seen from this concrete illustration that the full time Industrial School when organized will be able to educate its boys at a considerably less cost to the city than the High school, and will therefore be a measure of economy as well as of educational profit.

CREDIT FOR HOME WORK.

So popular has become the system of giving school credits for chores and household work performed by the pupils of Spokane county, Washington at their homes that County Superintendent E. G. McFarland is making a second distribution of the credit blanks, and has ordered 100,000 of them printed to supplement a 5,000 order which was exhausted in one month from the time the plan was started. Mr. McFarland states that 80 out of the 176 schools of the county are now giving this credit and that new ones are adopting the plan each week.

"The teachers say the system has greatly aided their work," said the superintendent, "and the parents are delighted with it. Instances have come to our attention where children who could hardly be compelled to do any work before now eagerly perform the tasks around their homes and take the credits to school to get the monthly half holiday that is given for perfect records. Several schools have reported that not a pupil was tardy or absent during the month."

The system allows one or two credits for certain listed home tasks performed on school days. The perfect month's record consists of five such tasks performed every day, making 25 for each school week and 100 for each month. In conjunction with the work, which must be done cheerfully, not under compulsion, the pupil must be at school every day and never be tardy. Parents fill out the blanks according to the excellence of the child's performance.

At the end of the term 10 credits are given on examination so that a pupil who has done the outside work and has never been tardy or absent will have a few credits to make up any deficiency in examinations.

Another feature that Mr. McFarland is now extending is the giving of diplomas to each perfect pupil making a perfect year's record. He says that 1,000 such diplomas will have to be issued if the interest continues.

The above is not the meaningless jumble of letters it appears to be nor yet a proclamation in a foreign tongue. It is a test chart prepared for children by an expert in "race betterment" to grade mentality, which a few days ago was introduced to various Chicago efficiency experts with more or less amusing results. Scattered at intervals throughout the queer arrangement or disarrangement of the alphabet the vowel "a" is used 100 times, and the test required that each victim strike out each "a" in a given time to rank up to normal. It is a painful duty to record that certain eminent individuals fell below grade.

Among those asked to try their hands were Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, superintendent of schools; John D. Shoop, assistant superintendent of schools; Major James Miles, head of the city civil service efficiency department; Robert A. Widdowson, secretary of the city civil service commission; Harris Keeler, superintendent of the bureau of public efficiency; Francis D. Hanna, secretary of the city expenditures commission, and A. A. McCormick, president of the county board.

"All ready," said Major Miles, with pencil poised; "say when."

"Go!" commanded the tester.

The mayor's rating was "fair."

Joyously the scientific investigator departed for A. A. McCormick's office.

"Is that all I have to do?" asked the president of the county board. "Just strike out every 'a'? Here goes!"

His pencil traversed the paper rapidly.

Only Fair.

"Ninety-five," announced the tester. "We can only rate you as 'fair.'"

"Well," said Mr. McCormick, "you might let the public know that I went to the irresponsible ward immediately after finishing."

Mr. Widdowson was impressed at once with the fact that much time might be saved by making upstrokes instead of downstrokes.

"Just look here," he explained and began.

"There," he announced at the end of three lines. "There's three lines in seventeen seconds. I refuse to go any further. That means that I would have finished in forty-five seconds. I will rest on my laurels."

"What's the game?" demanded Mr. Hanna. "Crossing out the 'a' in such words as 'asininity?' Well, I can do it."

Scurry, scurry, scurry, went the Hanna pencil.

An Uncomplimentary Opinion

"Seventy," said the tester. "Pretty good. Subtracting thirty-four for marking time, that gives you thirty-six for thinking time. Your rating is 'good.'"

"Well, perhaps it is," said Mr. Hanna, "but it seems to me that moral training at home by precept and example is better than this sort of scientific tommyrot for developing minds."

Mrs. Young, through her secretary, announced that she was "too busy" to go into the matter of the test just then, and the investigator departed in search of Mr. Shoop.

"Great idea," said that individual, dodging skillfully. "Go and see Dr. MacMillan. He's studying right along those lines."

Dr. D. P. MacMillan, director of the board's child study department, was corralled in his room. There was a surprise in store for him.

"Say," he cried when it had all been explained to him, "that's my system. I invented that. Who's using it now?"

A Tango Geography.

A publisher of Paris has issued a map of the world which plainly indicates where the tango is danced and where it is prohibited by the clergy, where it is debarred by royalty and where it is frowned upon by officialdom. Austria is apparently the heaven of the tango, as are also the states of Texas and Wyoming.

WOMAN'S ORGANS ARE ANALYZED

Body Secretly Exhumed and an Autopsy Performed

MYSTERY IN THE CROSS CASE

Half a Million Dollars of Millionaire Widow Not Accounted For—Newly Made Executor of Will, Who Negotiated Large Sales of Property, Is Sought by Bridgeport Police

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 29.—Investigation into the mysterious death of Mrs. Hanna A. Cross, millionaire widow, and the strange disappearance of at least $500,000 of her fortune, was begun by the authorities here.

Greater mystery was added to the affair when it became known that the current investigation to determine if poison was administered to Mrs. Cross was begun only after the body had been secretly exhumed and the organs analyzed.

At the first hint that there would be any investigation, it was given out by the authorities and by the sons of Mrs. Cross, William T. and Ferdinand L., jewelers of New York, that the body would be exhumed if further developments warranted this course.

With the knowledge that an autopsy had already been secretly performed came also the information that the police of New York have been asked by the police of this city to assist them in locating Frank M. Garland, who was an executor of the will of the dead woman through a recently made codicil.

Garland has been missing since Dec. 9, about three weeks after the death of Mrs. Cross.

Although there has been no charge lodged against him, both the authorities and Thomas L. Cullinan, also an executor, as well as the sons of Mrs. Cross, are anxious to find Garland to have him explain the mysterious disappearance of the $500,000 which was realized from the sale of property in Brooklyn and elsewhere, these deals having been negotiated by Garland, who held a sweeping power of attorney.

The most rigid investigation into the death of Mrs. Cross is under way here, both Coroner Phelan and Prosecuting Attorney Delaney having announced their intention to personally take charge of the matter.

Captain of Police Arnold has also announced his determination to personally aid the prosecutor's office in any way he can. These three informed newspaper men that nothing would be divulged until the close of the investigation.

It is believed it had not been intended that it should become known at this time that there was any suspicion concerning the death of Mrs. Cross. Efforts were being made to locate Garland, who was made the executor in the will which was changed within a few hours before Mrs. Cross' death, and her niece, Mrs. May T. Luquer, who became richer by $25,000 in money and $50,000 in jewelry by that same change.

Others of the crew are suspected of having hidden the ammunition on board the vessel.

JOHN ADAMS AERIE.

President Frank J. Duffy of John Adams aerie, Fraternal Order of Eagles, presided at his first meeting in Protection hall Wednesday evening which was attended by members of lodges at Elizabeth, N. J., Brockton, Rockland and Hyde Park. Six applications for membership were received and plans made for a class initiation early in February. The committee in charge of the annual ball reported a large advance sale of tickets.

It was voted to appoint a committee to form a bowling team to roll picked teams from the Knights of Columbus, Fore River, Heptasophs, St. Mary's and Wollaston Tennis Club leagues. The team will probably consist of Bernard and Henry Burke, Peter Daokers, Christopher McDermott and others, although several candidates have reported to Chris McDermott captain, for a tryout.

POINTS THE WA Y

The Statement of This Wollaston Resident Will Interest Our Readers.

Our neighboring town, Wollaston points the way in the words of one of its most respected residents:

A. T. Preston, 33 Park street, Wollaston, Mass., says: "Jumping on and off a wagon a good deal weakened my back and caused kidney trouble. Some years ago I had to give up that business and was in pretty bad shape. The kidney secretions were discolored and caused much pain in passage. I tried remedy after remedy, but got no relief. I was discouraged; suffered awfully at times and did not know what to do. Finally, I read in the Quincy paper an advertisement for Doan's Kidney Pills, telling of what they had done for a man I knew. I got a box and began taking them. I noticed a change at once. The passages of the kidney secretions became less frequent at night and caused less pain. I passed two gravel stones; one of them as large as a pea. I kept on taking Doan's Kidney Pills and I can now sleep better at night and am improved in every way."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York sole agents for the United States.

Cullom Passes Away With Last Wish Ungratified

CONGRESSMAN IN WAR TIME

Nearly Sixty Years of Public Service, During Which Period Illinois Legislator Accomplished Great Things—Father of Interstate Commerce and Personal Friend of Lincoln

Washington, Jan. 29.—Former Senator Shelby M. Cullom of Illinois died here after an illness of more than a week, during which he hovered between life and death. His last words were a wish that he might have lived to see the completion of the national memorial to Abraham Lincoln, who was his personal friend.

Since his retirement from the senate last March Cullom had been resident commissioner of the commission created by congress to build the $2,000,000 Lincoln memorial. A little more than a week ago he was taken ill with grip. His advanced age put his recovery beyond hope, but his wonderful vitality postponed the end. His mind was clear to the last. He was 85 years old.

With the death of Cullom there passes out of the public life of the nation not only one of its most picturesque political figures, but the man, who above all others, was responsible for the initiation of the policy of the control by the federal government of the railways. That today the great interstate carriers accept regulation, and that the abuses and discriminations existent in early days have been stamped out must be attributed to Cullom.

And Cullom, too, played a not unimportant part in the formation of the Republican party which was destined to lead this nation out of the mazes of slavery and the throes of a great civil war. Even in the days before the conflict he was a close friend and associate of Abraham Lincoln, and the two were engaged at the same time in the practice of law in Springfield, Ills. Cullom always prided himself on his resemblance to Lincoln.

The former senator had been in public life in Illinois and in the nation for nearly fifty-eight years. He was born Nov. 22, 1829, in Elk Spring Valley, Ky., and was elected to the Illinois legislature in 1856, serving until 1864, when he was sent to congress for three terms.

Following re-election to the Illinois legislature, Cullom became a candidate for governor of Illinois, was elected in 1876, and served two terms. In 1883 he was elected to the United States senate, serving continuously until 1911. He served on several national commissions.

COURT SPRINGS A SURPRISE

Justice Jaycox Refuses Bail For Cassidy and Walter

New York, Jan. 29.—Joseph Cassidy, until recently the Democratic leader of Queens county, was remanded to jail in Brooklyn at the close of his trial in the supreme court on the charge of receiving a bribe from William Willett, Jr., former member of congress, who was convicted last week of purchasing a judiciary nomination.

With Cassidy to jail went Louis T. Walter, Jr., on trial as the alleged go-between for Cassidy and Willett.

The action of Justice Jaycox in remanding the defendants, who have been out under $5000 bail, came as a surprise to defense and prosecution alike. The court gave no explanation for the move.

BLAME PLACED ON WOMEN

Declared to Be Responsible For High Price of Butter

Chicago, Jan. 29.—The general custom among women of demanding the most select grades of butter for their tables has caused the retailer to put his prices up to a point not justified by wholesale prices, according to a statement by President Mitchell of the Chicago Butter and Egg board.

"The actual difference between the most fancy grades and the next grades of good butter is so slight that the purchaser frequently pays a 25 percent increase in price for not more than 2 or 3 percent improvement in quality," said Mitchell.

ABANDONS HIS CLAIM

"Dakota Dan" Gives Up and Counsel Will Sue Russell Estate For Fees

Boston, Jan. 29.—"Dakota Dan" has abandoned his claim on the Russell estate and will abide by the finding of the supreme court that he is not Daniel Blake Russell. This is apparent in the announcement made by the claimant's counsel, William R. Scharton.

Incidentally Scharton expects to bring suit against the Russell estate in an attempt to recover $15,000 for "just and proper counsel fees." "It is within the discretion of the court to allow such fees," says Scharton, "provided the suit against an estate has been made in good faith."

REBELS AT GATES OF PORT-AU-PRINCE

Americans and Germans Guard Foreigners In Hayti

Port-au-Prince, Hayti, Jan. 29.—Haytien rebels captured the outskirts of this city and demanded the surrender of the government officials left in control by the abdication and flight of President Oreste. Negotiations were begun at once.

Armed detachments of American sailors from the armored cruiser Montana guard the American legation, the cable station and the French hospital, while German bluejackets and marines have been placed on protection duty at the other foreign legations and at the German stores in the city.

Fusillades continued in all quarters of the city throughout the night and there were numerous attempts at pillage of houses and stores, but these were quickly suppressed and the city is now quiet.

FORGED CHECK FOR $1000

Charge Against Athletic Instructor In Chelsea Public Schools

Boston, Jan. 29.—Timothy F. O'Connor, 41, athletic instructor in the Chelsea schools and former assistant superintendent of schools in that city, was arrested last night, charged with forging and uttering a check for $1000 drawn on the Broadway National bank of Chelsea.

It is alleged that O'Connor also forged the certification of Percy L. Moses, cashier of the Broadway National bank. O'Connor told Chief Inspector McGarr, it is alleged, that he was involved in financial troubles which led him to try to pass the check. He was taken to the city prison, being unable to secure bail.

Golden Heart

A Story For St. Valentine's Day

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Among all the gay valentines in the window of the bookshop one stood out distinctly.

Jack Edmonds saw nothing save that golden satin heart, dainty with lace and ribbons and bearing a message for whoever might read:

Here's a message for you, heart of gold.
I am waiting with a secret yet untold.
Oh, heart of gold, accept this valentine!
It bears the message—love, be mine!

"Heart of gold," murmured Jack grimly; "that's what I used to call little Rose before she grew independent and ran out into the world. I wonder if I will ever find my heart of gold?"

"Good morning, Mr. Edmonds," a gay, sweet voice broke in on his musings. "Are not the valentines perfectly dear?"

"Very pretty indeed," laughed Jack, shaking hands with Margaret Mordaunt. "It would be hard to make a choice."

Margaret made some laughing rejoinder and they chatted a few moments, the girl all a-sparkle with a most betraying lovelight in her eyes.

More than once his eyes wandered to the golden heart in the middle of the window, and she, guessing that perhaps he desired to enter the shop and purchase it for her, bade him a laughing farewell while he handed her into the waiting motorcar.

"I hope you have not forgotten the St. Valentine's ball," she cried eagerly as the machine rolled away.

He smiled and nodded and replaced his hat and returned to the window. A few moments later when he left the shop the golden heart was gone from the window.

* * * * * * *

On the morning of St. Valentine's day Margaret Mordaunt entered the library, where her mother's secretary was sorting the morning mail.

"Good morning, Miss Blakely," said Margaret, with pleasant carelessness; "I hope you have a lot of letters for me this morning."

Rose Blakely smiled over her task. Miss Mordaunt was a beautiful society favorite, and her share of mail was usually a generous one, but on this morning there were heaps of embossed envelopes, heart shaped boxes of sweets, and on a table were several boxes of flowers.

Margaret hastily scanned the boxes and tossed them aside. Then she grasped the letters and tore them open, looking within each one and then picking up another with an eagerness that surprised the little secretary, so different was it from Miss Mordaunt's customary pose of cool indifference.

At last Margaret grasped the missives which Rose still held in her hand. One by one she tore open the large square envelopes, only to cast them aside. Then she pounced on a flat, square box, ripped off the wrappings and gazed entranced at the golden heart.

So he had sent it to her after all!

Rose Blakely, stepping to and fro, preparing for her day's work, happened to glance over Margaret's shoulder as she passed. She saw the large golden heart and Margaret's rapt face. Rose smiled sympathetically. She wondered which one of Margaret's many suitors had sent this one; it was evidently the favored lover. Who was he?

"Look, Miss Blakely," said Margaret, with unaccustomed condescension. "Isn't this perfectly lovely?"

Rose took the valentine, and as she read the message addressed to "Golden Heart" her sweet little face went very white, and she laid the valentine down without a word.

"What is the matter? Don't you think it is pretty?" asked Margaret jealously.

"It is very pretty," gasped Rose, "but the room is very warm—don't you think so?" She swayed a little, and Margaret hastened to support her to a couch. "I will ring for Sarah to bring you a glass of water."

While Rose sipped the water and lay back with closed eyes and pale face Margaret picked up her letters and packages.

As she picked up the white paper which had inclosed the golden heart Margaret glanced at the superscription. Her startled gaze concentrated on the fine black characters, and the letters swam before her vision. Again and again she read the address, and each time she looked furtively at the pale face of the little secretary.

"It is mine, in spite of all!" muttered Margaret, as she swept from the room. "I don't understand it, but he must have sent it to me! He doesn't even know her—they have not met."

* * * * * * * *

Mrs. Mordaunt faced her daughter with anger in her blue eyes.

"Not invite Miss Blakely downstairs?" she repeated. "Why, my dear Margaret, you invited her yourself."

"Please, mother, I'd rather not have her. Well, let her come down until the unmasking, then."

"Another Cinderella?" asked Mrs. Mordaunt quietly as she swept from the room.

Margaret made no answer. She was thinking of Jack Edmonds and his evident indifference to her own charms. She had surprised a strangely tender look on his face that morning as she came upon him at the bookshop, and, fool that she was, she told herself fiercely, she had believed that he was thinking of her!

And that telltale wrapper that had come around the golden heart!

Margaret went into her room and, unlocking a drawer of her desk, took out the paper.

"For Miss Rose Blakely, 107 Galbraith Terrace, City. Please Forward."

Galbraith terrace was Rose Blakely's old address, and the missive had been forwarded from one place to another until it had reached the Mordaunt home, where Rose, now in reduced circumstances, was living.

"But she cannot want it as I do!" cried Margaret passionately, as she tossed the telltale paper in the fire and watched it turn to black ashes. "Why, out of all the men in the world, should he be the only one I care for—and why should he be indifferent to me?"

Thus poor Margaret Mordaunt voiced the wail of unhappy women since the world began. For a long time she sat there gazing into the fire's heart, thinking of many things. At last her maid came to dress her for the ball.

Margaret listlessly gave herself into Pauline's skillful hands, and presently, when she emerged dressed as the Queen of Hearts, no one would have suspected that her own heart was sore and aching.

As she tied the little black mask over her eyes she said to Celeste:

"Perhaps Miss Blakely would like some assistance, Celeste."

"I have asked her, Miss Margaret, but she sent word that if you would excuse her she would not come down. She has a bad headache."

"I am sorry," said Margaret, but she could not help the relief in her heart.

She stopped at Rose's door and urged her to come down later, but the girl looked so pale and unhappy that Margaret closed the door gently and came away.

Three hours later the rooms were a-glitter with lights and gay with the varicolored costumes of the dancers. Mrs. Mordaunt, stately and handsome as Queen Elizabeth, was unmasked. Once she beckoned the Queen of Hearts to her side.

"Margaret," she said, "Miss Blakely is feeling better, and she is upstairs in the little brown study. I have urged her to come down later, and she has half promised. She will wear a little red domino. Don't forget."

"No, mother, dear," said Margaret, with unaccustomed gentleness.

"Who is the tall man garbed as the melancholy Dane? The one you have danced with so often?" smiled Mrs. Mordaunt.

"Oh, Hamlet?" laughed Margaret. "I suspect it's Mr. Edmonds. It's so puzzling, and such fun!" She danced away, and Mrs. Mordaunt smiled because Margaret was so beautiful and sighed because she knew the girl was unhappy, which is a way that mothers have.

"Oh, prince," said Margaret suddenly, "I would have you do me a favor."

Hamlet bowed gracefully. "As your majesty pleases."

"Please go upstairs," ordered Margaret with trembling haste, "to the cozy room we call the 'brown study.' It is at the head of the stairs. There you will find a very beautiful rose. If you can gain possession of it you may bring it down here and wear it. I wish you success!"

For an instant Jack Edmonds surveyed the girl through the narrow eye holes of his mask. He recognized Margaret Mordaunt, as many of her guests had done, but he wondered at her gay mood with him.

Again he bowed and made his way toward the door, many a charming eye following the progress of his tall, graceful form. It was not often that Jack Edmonds ventured into society. He was a busy man, and the urgency of affairs called him away from home very often. But in the last few months he had become well acquainted with the Mordaunts, and now he felt quite at home in the hospitable mansion.

He paused at the door of the brown study. "I wonder if I shall find the rose," he smiled as he turned the knob.

The rose was there, but it was not the hothouse flower he had expected to find.

It was Rose Blakely, his rose, Rose of the golden heart.

She glanced up as he entered and a startled look came into her eyes. She was in the act of fastening a crimson domino over her little black frock, and the entrance of the masked man had surprised her.

"I was sent here to find a rose," said Hamlet softly.

At the sound of his well remembered voice Rose Blakely trembled and hid her face in her hands.

"Margaret Mordaunt sent me here to find a rose," he went on, "and if I could win it I was to wear it against my heart. Rose, Rose, my girl of the golden heart, haven't I waited long enough for you?"

And then Rose came to him.

Later they went downstairs together, the demure little form in the crimson domino and the black garbed prince of Denmark. Their masks half concealed their happy faces.

Margaret Mordaunt saw them coming, and her lips whitened. One jeweled hand clutched her heart, against which lay the golden satin valentine which was all she had left of the day's joy, all that remained to her save the knowledge that she had been tempted and had resisted.

And, although Margaret Mordaunt did not know it then, at that moment when she met these two and smiled bravely upon them, at that moment her own heart became a golden one, and the beauty of it lighted her whole life and that of the man who afterward won her love.

GEN. BIDDLE SINGS MARINES' GLORIES

Commander Lauds Our Oldest Fighting Force.

HANDIEST SOLDIERS OF SEA

Says the Public Knows Too Little About This Versatile Branch of the Service—Extracts From an Exceptionally Interesting Pamphlet Which He Has Issued.

Uncle Sam's soldier sailors, otherwise the United States marine corps, appear in text and picture in "Soldiers of the Sea," the latest official story of the government's fighting men.

Life in the army and navy has been described until everybody is supposed to know the details of the work and play of doughboys, cavalry and bluejackets, but Major General Biddle, commanding the marine corps, thinks that the public knows little of the life of the marine.

Hence the pamphlet which begins by singing the glory of Uncle Sam's "soldiers and sailors too:"

Our flag's unfurled to every breeze
From dawn to setting sun;
We have fought in every clime and place
Where we could take a gun;
In the snows of faroff northern lands
And in sunny tropic scenes
You will find us always on the job—
The United States marines.

After recalling that the employment of infantry as part of the force on board ships of war was common to the Phoenicians centuries before the Christian era and that the marines were specially mentioned by the Persian reporters who covered the battle of Lade, the marine corps chronicler gets down to the early history of the United States marines.

Early History.

"The corps of marines of Great Britain," he says, "was originally instituted in 1664. The English marines have on many occasions acquitted themselves with great credit and reflected honor upon their corps. As a mark of appreciation of their valuable services an order was issued by the king on April 20, 1802, officially changing the title of the corps to Royal Marines, which title they still hold. At the time of the separation of the thirteen colonies from Great Britain the American marine corps was formed, inheriting the British marines organization and was conducted along similar lines."

All this to let you know that when you see the smart looking young chap with the anchor and globe on his cap and the "Semper Fidelis" motto you are looking upon a member of the oldest of our fighting organizations.

It was not until 1798, however, that the present organization was permanently established. Uncle Sam's press agent says some mighty fine things of what the corps has done since then, among them:

"It is the gallant little corps that has so ably assisted in fighting America's battles in every corner of the globe for more than a century; its members are the first men on the ground in case of trouble with a foreign power and the first men into battle in case of hostilities.

"The marine has to know many things and when he has served his four years' enlistment is the handiest of Uncle Sam's fighters."

Marine Corps Is 10,000 Strong.

At present the authorized strength of the marine corps is approximately 340 officers and 10,000 men.

The pay of a marine runs from $15 to $65 a month, according to rank and length of service. The marine starts as a private at $15, is raised to $18 at the end of four years and to $21 at the end of eight years. He gets a "good conduct medal" for each enlistment well served, and each medal means 83 cents a month additional pay. If he qualifies as a "marksman with the service rifle" his pay is increased $2 a month, if as a "sharpshooter" $3, and the "expert rifleman" finds an extra $5 in his pay check each month. Then if he should qualify with the great guns aboard ship his pay may be increased from $2 to $10 a month.

The marine gets everything in the way of living expenses except laundry soap, tooth powder and tobacco, and "Soldiers of the Sea" presents an interesting table showing the amount of money a marine who spends only for necessities can save. This shows that if the enlisted man deposits his pay with the paymaster where it will draw interest he will have at the end of four years $540, and that if he should thus save his pay and serve the thirty years, after which he may retire on three-fourths pay, he will have banked $10,437.

This if he remains a private during his service. Should he rise to the highest noncommission rank—that of sergeant major—he will do very much better, and upon retirement on three-quarters pay with clothing and ration allowance he will receive as pension alone $67.50 per month, which equals interest at 4 per cent on $20,250.

Anti-Suicide Bureau a Success.

More than 100 persons have been dissuaded from ending their lives by the anti-suicide bureau of the Salvation Army, according to Colonel Addie, in charge of the work. The bureau, the first of its kind in this country, was organized three months ago.

SUICIDE EPIDEMIC FEARED

Many Girls Ousted by Closing of Capital's Disorderly Houses

Washington, Jan. 29.—Its tawdry tinsel bared by the searchlight of the law and its inmates in a panic of fear, the national capital's red light district is on the move.

Three hundred unfortunates of the underworld knew the moment President Wilson signed the Kenyon "red light" bill police patrolling the streets of the vice section would begin ejecting its residents.

Despite the fact that philanthropic organizations have made a house to house canvass of the restricted district proffering aid to inmates who desire to live "straight," police anticipate an acute situation when the law actually becomes operative.

The "red light" section had not expected its passage so promptly. Nobody was prepared. The authorities fear an epidemic of suicides among inmates.

STAMPING OUT BOMB MEN

Further Revelations at Trial of New York Black-Handers

New York, Jan. 29.—Eight Additional arrests are expected to be made soon in the roundup of a gang of black-handers here who gave no thought to the taking of human life as they plied their trade of exploding bombs and abducting girls into white slavery.

When the taking of testimony in the trial of Angelo Sylvestro for the planting of a bomb on the lower East Side was resumed, Antonio Sedaitis, the third member of the gang to turn state's evidence, told how he had participated in the exploding of twenty-three bombs and corroborated in many respects the testimony of Alfred Lehman and Rocco Pucciarello.

The information these men have furnished will lead to additional arrests, the police declare, and the East Side is being combed for other members of the gang.

SKIPPER HELD ON POLYGAMY CHARGE

Roosevelt's Captain Said to Have Wrongfully Married

New Bedford, Mass., Jan. 29.—Captain Frederick L. Moulton, commander of the steamer Roosevelt, on which Peary made his successful voyage to discover the North Pole, was arrested on a charge of polygamy. Moulton was in charge of the Roosevelt before and after the North Pole expedition, but did not go on that trip because he could not come to terms with the explorer.

The charge of polygamy was brought by Mrs. Josie E. Moulton of Providence, who says that she is Moulton's legal wife, and was deserted by him in Bangor ten years ago.

Two years ago Moulton, it is alleged, went through a form of marriage with Miss Gammons, who left him, taking her baby with her, on hearing that Moulton had another wife.

Moulton was held in $2000 for trial Feb. 4.

BANK RUN SUBSIDES

Business In Boston Institution Is Returning to Normal

Boston, Jan. 29.—Business activity at the South Boston Savings bank is reversed. Whereas since Saturday, when a run began, depositors have been lined up to the paying teller's window, now they are at the receiving teller's window.

The bank lost in all over $263,000 in deposits, but the great bulk of that sum will be returned, it is expected, within a day or so, and the bank's loss will not be of much moment. The depositors, it is estimated, have lost an aggregate of $4000 or more in interest. The run dwindled as a result of the combined efforts of officials, business men and clergymen to reassure the depositors.

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum. "He also changes his wardrobe. But in doing so he avoids popular attention as much as possible."—Washington Star.

MARVELOUS TESTS SOLVE THE AIR BRAKE PROBLEM

Stop Twelve Steel Cars Running Mile a Minute Within Length of Train.

Important improvements in the braking of heavy passenger cars will be described in a paper to be read before the American Society of Mechanical Engineers in New York city on Feb. 10 by S. W. Dudley of Pittsburgh. The tests are of unusual interest at this time because of the proposed legislation to enforce the use of steel cars, and the results are considered the most important recent contribution to the subject of air brakes.

A train of twelve steel cars at sixty miles an hour stores up 224,000,000 foot pounds of energy. This is sufficient to raise the entire train 120 feet. With prevailing brake equipment such a train would be stopped by an emergency application in a distance of 1,600 to 2,200 feet, according to the truck rigging and brake shoe design. The tests showed that this distance has actually been reduced to 1,000 feet or to within the length of the train. This was the result of improvements in the truck brake design involving the clasp brake, having two shoes per wheel and the location of the brake shoes with reference to the horizontal center line of the wheels in addition to improved methods of applying the air brakes quickly and simultaneously and at a high pressure.

The tests emphasized, as has never been done before, the possibilities of improvement in efficiency and economy in regular service operation by proper attention to design and installation in order to permit the realization of the flexibility of improved air brake apparatus. The improvements center in the electric control of the brakes, giving quick, simultaneous and responsive action.

Trains of fifteen years ago were stopped in about half the distances prevailing in the practice of today. Increased size and weight of equipment brought an entirely new brake problem. These tests have solved it to all persons interested.

NEW INDUSTRIAL EDUCATION.

Impetus Given National Movement to Obtain Employers' Aid.

Extensive plans for uniting capital and labor in a campaign for industrial education are before the board of managers of the National Society For the Promotion of Industrial Education, of which Secretary of Commerce Redfield is president.

Efforts will be made to have the American Federation of Labor co-operate in the attempts to spread broadcast the doctrines of industrial education.

It is pointed out that the country cannot continually depend upon a supply of immigrant labor, but must increasingly rely upon the better preparation of the native labor supply and that much of the training of the workers must be done by the employers themselves.

The board has put itself on record as supporting "the broad principle that legislation restricting the hours of employment of children between fourteen and sixteen should hereafter go hand in hand with legislation for the proper use of the leisure time thus gained."

In the future the Minnesota boy may sew on his own buttons, keep his own pockets whole, darn his socks and do his own patching. A movement to teach sewing to boys has been started at the Minnesota School of Agriculture. Mrs. Margaret J. SCARLET FEVER AND MUMPS

Thirty-Three Cases Have Been Reported This Month

Quincy is having an epidemic of scarlet fever which at present totals 33 cases, an increase of six within a few days. The cases are well distributed throughout the different parts of the city, although the epidemic seems to centre in South and West Quincy.

Many of the patients are children of school age, very few adult cases having developed. Several are patients at the Massachusetts Homeopathic Hospital while others are being treated at home. As far as is known quarantine regulations are being observed by the affected families.

The first of the cases were reported in December and there has been a gradual increase since then. The Board of Health are exerting their efforts to combat further spread of the disease and rooms in the Coddington Willard and St. John's parish school have been fumigated where stricken children were pupils.

In addition to scarlet fever the city is facing an epidemic of measles and mumps. Many pupils at the Quincy High school and one of the faculty are absent on account of the latter.

RESCUED TWO.

Henry Hathaway and Harry Jordan, Fore River employes, rescued Otto Johnson and Joseph Johnson from drowning in Boston harbor on Wednesday night. Both stepped into a boat at the Northern avenue public landing which overturned, throwing them into the water. The rescuers heard their cries for assistance and rushed to the landing. They took the drowning men from the water after much difficulty. The men are at the Relief hospital suffering from immersion and shock.

GOOD YEAR FOR CHRIST CHURCH

Annual Reports Give Splendid Showing of Work Done

The annual meeting of Christ Church parish was held Wednesday evening. After opening prayers were read by the rector, the meeting proceeded in the usual business routine. A. L. Barbour, was re-elected junior warden; C. E. Haskins, W. H. Deacon and A. McLeod were re-elected vestrymen and Charles L. Hammond and W. G. Spargo were also elected to serve on the vestry.

Delegates to the Diocesan convention, W. L. Thomas, A. L. Barbour and G. H. Brown, to the Arch-Deaconry, W. H. Deacon, W. H. Haslett and A. Newton. There being no nominations from the floor, the clerk was instructed to cast one ballot for the election of all the above. The rector's annual report showed a gain in the number of persons attending the holy communion and the keynote sounded was a general call to each member of the church to individual service. The records from the parish register were 46 baptisms, 27 confirmations, 9 marriages, 33 burials. As details of pastoral work during the year, the rector had officiated at 238 services; sermons, addresses and instructions 121; conferences and Guilds attended 131; calls made 891; calls received for pastoral advice 87.

Reports read by the secretaries of the different organizations gave a splendid showing of work done in 1913, and gave promise of a sucessful year ahead. During a recess taken by the meeting, the ladies served sandwiches, coffee and cake. The budget for the ensuing year was then taken up and discussed, the items being voted upon severally. The meeting adjourned at 10 o'clock.

GORGAS, SURGEON GENERAL.

His Brilliant Achievements In Sanitation Merit His Reward.

The appointment by the president of Colonel William C. Gorgas, medical corps, U. S. A., as surgeon general of the army to succeed the late Brigadier General George H. Torney has met with widespread approval. In addition to being made the head of the army medical corps, Colonel Gorgas will have the title of brigadier general.

He entered the medical corps of the army in June, 1885, and reached the grade of colonel in March, 1913. During the Spanish war he served as a brigade surgeon in the volunteer establishment.

For several years he has been in charge of the sanitary department in the Panama canal zone and is credited with having made the building of the Panama canal possible. He is now in South Africa on a special mission from the British government to improve sanitary conditions in the diamond mine region.

His brilliant achievements in sanitation have made him eminent at home and abroad and written his name into the permanent records of medicine. He is the world's foremost authority on applied sanitation on a large scale, with the achievement to his credit of having created a perfect malarial and yellow fever prophylaxis in Havana, Ecuador and in the canal zone. The latter, which was a death trap to the French, is now immune from tropical diseases.

On the strength of the results at Panama Colonel Gorgas has predicted that in the course of two centuries the settlement and development of the semitropical American countries will have progressed to such an extent that the centers of wealth and civilization will be in the tropics again, as they were at the dawn of history. He has expressed his conviction that, with yellow fever, malaria and other maladies peculiar to the tropics banished, life in these climes will be found more healthful than in the temperate zones.

LAST OF THE SHOGUNS.

Holder of a Once Powerful Office In Japan Buried With Funereal Pomp.

Prince Tokugawa, last of the Japanese shoguns, has been carried to his final resting place with all the pomp and ceremony of old Japan. This marks the passing of what was once the real power behind the throne in Japan. In fact, the shogunate was for some time the de facto ruling power in the country. Originally the title signified the general commanding each of the four divisions of the empire in early times. In 1192 Yordomo was made the chief shogun and became the virtual ruler of the land and laid the foundation of the feudal system in Japan.

In the hands of the Tokugawa family the shogunate acquired still greater power and the mikado became a mere shadow. The shogun was sometimes known to foreigners as the tycoon. After existing for nearly 700 years the office of shogun was finally abolished in 1868. Prince Tokugawa was the last holder of a title now extinct.

TO CLIMB HIGHER THAN ABRUZZI

Conquest of High Peak the Ambition of Miss Peck.

DUKE WITHIN 400 FEET OF IT

But His American Woman Rival Believes She Can Make the Entire Ascent of Twenty-five Thousand Feet In the Himalayan Mountains and Win Honor For Her Country.

Miss Annie S. Peck, the mountain climber, wants to capture the world's record for mountain climbing, which is held by the Duke of the Abruzzi, who got within 400 feet of Bride's peak, a mountain in the Himalayas, 25,000 feet high.

To further her plans Miss Peck has been conferring recently with James E. Sullivan, secretary and treasurer of the Amateur Athletic union.

Miss Peck has ascended 22,000 feet. Of this achievement she says:

"I did this while acting as cook, scientific man, photographer and general boss. I suffered only from fatigue, although one of the Swiss guides became ill, and it is obvious that with suitable equipment and assistants I could easily have done the necessary 3,000 feet more. As I have never yet failed to carry through anything of importance that I have undertaken, confidence in my accomplishing this great object would seem not to be misplaced.

Says Abruzzi Will Lend Aid.

"For this project I would have the benefit of the friendly advice of the Duke of the Abruzzi, who informed me that the cost of his expedition was $27,500. I should employ the same Swiss guides, the Brocherel brothers, and in all respects take advantage of his experience. I should have two scientists, including a good photographer, and I should have other suitable assistants and equipment. I'd need not over $25,000.

"The expedition could be called after any one who was willing to finance it, as was done in the case of the Ziegler expeditions. The promoter would be welcome to make the trip to the topmost height, if he were able to stand the hardship, and he might further become immortalized by having some of the yet nameless mountains given his name.

Wants to Start Early In the Spring.

"To carry out the expedition this season plans should be made at once. Elaborate preparations are necessary, and the party should leave Italy in April. Arrangements for equipment are best made in England, where it would be desirable to go as early in February as possible. With scientific men from here, it would be an all American expedition, save for the necessary Swiss guides and the local porters, of whom 200 or more are required.

"While heretofore I have not accomplished half of what I might have with proper financial support, I still believe there are in this country men who would like to bring this record to this country—men who are good enough sports to give a woman a fair chance in a field of athletics where she has already shown her prowess."

HEART BEATS AFTER DEATH.

Remarkable Demonstration In Philadelphia of Berlin Doctor's Device.

In the laboratory of the Medico-Chirurgical college of Philadelphia Dr. M. A. Ullman, professor of physiology, caused a human heart taken from a dead body to pulsate as in life by means of an apparatus recently invented in Germany which has not before been in use in this country.

An electric light attached to the device is placed inside the heart and enables the operator to observe every part of the organ's function. The instrument is expected to be of great benefit in the study and treatment of heart diseases. The apparatus is the invention of Professor E. A. Gabb of Berlin.

SURPRISE FOR W. E. ROBINSON

Young Woman Impersonated by One of His Friends

A very prettily arranged surprise party was given of Willian E. Robinson, first vice president of the Wollaston Citizens Association, at his home in East Weymouth on Wednesday evening by the executive committee of the association, in honor of his 49th birthday. A handsome electric table lamp was presented in behalf of the friends by Herbert E. Lowe.

During the evening another surprise took place when the charming young woman companion of William B. Sanford, removed her wig and turned out to be Chester E. Grady, one of the cleverest female impersonators of the day. As a grass widow he rendered several soprano solos and then joined in the merriment as a man. Walter C. Guild contributed several readings which evoked a generous applause.

The committee was Theodore Du Plessis and William B. Sanford. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Merrill, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Severance, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Du Plessis, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Lowe Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Sutermeister, Mr. and Mrs George B Curran, Milton Burgon, Mr and Mrs. William E. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Henderson.

place the matter right before the public.

Mayor Miller attended a meeting Wednesday of the Commissioners appointed under Chapter 771 of the Acts of 1913 to build a new bridge over the Neponset river at Granite avenue. Under the act the commissioners appointed are the Mayor of the City of Boston, the Chairman of the County Commissioners of Norfolk county, the Chairman of the Selectmen of Milton and the Mayor of Quincy. The appropriation for the new bridge was $70,000 of which the Counties of Suffolk and Norfolk each pay 40 percent, and the town of Milton and the City of Quincy each 10 percent.

The commission last year completed plans for building the bridge, but by a queer coincidence the commission this year has three new members, namely the Mayor of Quincy, the Mayor of Boston and the Chairman of the Selectman of Milton, Chairman Merrill of the County Commissioners being the only member of the old board serving this year as Chairman Henry Barnes of the Milton selectman died within a few days.

The Commission this year therefore will consist of Mayor Miller of Quincy, Mayor Curley of Boston, Chairman Merrill of the County Commissioners and the Chairman of the Selectman of Milton to be elected.

Miss Laing was presented a gold bracelet by Miss Edith Avery. The entertainment of the evening consisted of solos by Charles and Alton Avery, chorus singing and games. Refreshments were served.

REFUSE TO RESIGN

Assessors Mitchell and Stocker Send Letter to Mayor

That Wellington W. Mitchell of Ward Three and Eben Stocker of Ward Six, members of the Board of Assessors, do not intend to resign, was made certain Thursday when they sent a letter to Mayor Miller declining to resign as requested. The letter was received by the Mayor when he arrived at his office after dinner.

When asked what he intended to do about it, the Mayor said that he had done nothing as yet and would not until after he had consulted with the City Solicitor. The letter was a rather sharp one and stated that while they had no desire to continue in office under the present conditions they declined to resign. They also called attention to the city charter, stating they eblieved the step taken by the Mayor was in violation of the intent of the charter and of the laws of the commonwealth.

The letter in full follows:

Quincy, Jan. 29, 1914.

Mr. John L. Miller, Mayor,

Dear Sir:— We the undersigned, in declining to comply with your request for our resignations as members of the Board of Assessors, wish to make it plain that we have no desire to continue in the office under the present conditions.

We disagree entirely with your interpretation of what the people of Quincy demand of you, and emphatically deny your allegation that we have been unfaithful or incompetent in the discharge of our duty. Having no desire to do you an injustice, we cannot escape the conviction shown by many reputable citizens, that your action is in violation of the intent of the City Charter and the laws of the Commonwealth, and not inspired by a sincere desire to give the city the best at your command.

Yours truly,

(Signed)

W. W. MITCHELL,
EBEN STOCKER.

CITY HALL HAPPENINGS

Hearing on Petition for Addition to Washington School

The Committee on Public Buildings of the City Council gave a hearing Thursday night to a number of residents of the Washington school district, relative to an addition with assembly hall as per petition. All of the speakers urged the necessity of additional room and gave figures showing the crowded condition of the school building at the present time. The speakers included Head Master Pollard and several members of the Parents and Teachers association of the school. After hearing those present the committee considered the question in executive session.

The supplementary tax assessment of 1913 made in December increased the valuation of the city $361,775.00. The new personal estate will yield an income of $8,552.20, and the new real estate $21.92. The Board of Assessors of 1913 did good work in bringing to light personal property, which included steel, sugar and telephone stock.

The Mayor intended to attend the annual entertainment of Clan McGregor and the Loyal Ladies, Thursday evening in honor of the 155th anniversary of the birth of Robert Burns but thought it inadvisable on account of the extreme damp weather He was also obliged to give up the idea of attending a meeting of the City Council Committee on Public Buildings for the same reason.

The Mayor has expressed himself as being favorably inclined toward the proposition contained in the order offered by Councilman Ross at the last meeting of the City Council, for the city to purchase land at South Quincy for an overhead bridge or subway beneath the railroad tracks.

The grade crossing question is bobbing up again, after many weeks of quietness in this line, for it will come up at a conference to be given by the Public Service Commission next Thursday, Feb. 5. Mayor Miller received a notice from the Public Service Commission this morning notifying him of the conference to be held in the above date at the rooms of the commission, 1 Beacon street at 2.30.

Notice has been received by the Mayor that the United States Engineers office will give a hearing in the Council Chamber, City Hall, next week Thursday, at 11.30, on the complaint about delays in the opening of the drawbridge at Quincy Point.

Saturday will be the last day of duty for most of the present city officials. As City Hall closes at noon the present officials will turn over their books and papers etc., to the new officials at that time. There are some positions which the Mayor has not as yet filled but which he promises to send to the City Council Monday evening. Notable among these are the Board of Health, whose successors have not as yet been made public. This means that the present officials will probably serve until the close of business Monday.

The Mayor, if he saw fit, could file these appointments with the City Clerk this week, and the gentlemen named could qualify so as to take office Monday morning, as it is not absolutely necessary that they should first be sent to the City Council. The sending of the appointments to the City Council is simply a matter of courtesy.

If the Mayor follows out the strict terms of the city charter he will name these men Saturday, for under the Charter it is provided that he shall during the month of January appoint certain officials, although it is also provided that the officials already holding office shall serve until their successors are appointed and qualified.

The Mayor desires to appoint some business man as chairman of the Board of Health, and he has intimated

Sullivan, although stating that he was not a candidate for re-election, was chosen secretary. Thomas Griffin was elected vice president and Daniel Corcoran, treasurer.

Corcoran, John W. Sullivan, George D. Cahill, Edward Faircloth, Joseph Ford, Michael Maher, John H. Hart, James P. Dougherty, Joseph G. Kennedy, Jr.

SEA STREET REVISED

Valuation As Assessed In 1913 Was $593,725

Inquiry at the Assessors office relative to the valuation of Sea street, as published in the Houghs Neck street values, discloses the fact that the value of the building on Sea Gull street had been substituted for the total value of the three streets—Sea, Shellton and Sea Gull. In other words the figures for all these streets were away off.

Chairman Adams has kindly separated the three streets for the information of Daily Ledger readers. The correct figures are:

	Land	Buildings
Sea street	$350,700	$243,025
Sea Gull street	2,775	4,100
Shellton street	33,325	54,850

The total valuation of real estate of the Houghs Neck district east of Mt. Wollaston cemetery is $2,460,775, which is about one fourth of the Ward One real estate valuation.

Houghs Neck people may obtain the Daily Ledger at the Quincy store of H. P. Kittredge, near the depot.

OLD SCOTCH SONGS AT BURNS NIGHT

Address by John D. Mackay, Chairman of the School Committee

Many of the Clansmen Wore the Plaids

One of the greatest gatherings ever held in this city, met in Music hall Thursday evening to celebrate the 155th anniversary of the birth of Robert Burns. The affair was under the auspices of Clan MacGregor, No. 5 and Loyal Ladies of Clan MacGregor, No. 1.

Chief Angus D. Martin welcomed those present in a few well chosen remarks. He introduced the following singers: William Ross, who sang "Scots Wha Hae" and "Annie Laurie" Miss Helen Cumming who sang "Ye Banks and Braes" and "My love is like the red, red rose"; David McMillan, who sang "The Lea Rig" and a humorous Scottish song; Mrs. Margaret Gammon, who sang "The Auld Scotch Songs" and "Comin' through the rye"; and Everett Clark, who sang "Mary of Argyle" and "To have, to hold and to love." The singers were all in excellent voice and sang well, their efforts being heartily applauded by the large audience.

John D. Mackay, chairman of the School Committee, was the speaker. He opened his remarks in a very humorous vein. He eulogized Burns for the intense humanitarianism of his philosophy, advising his hearers to forget the faults and follies of the poet, who was great in all things. He

From the way the tango is being prohibited, it is easy to forsee good business for the dancing teachers.

As the hearings for the anti-trust bills are to be open, it is feared the reporters won't print anything that is said.

Gov. Glynn of New York wants the farmers trained, in spite of the fact that all there is to know was handed down to them by their great grandfathers.

With the new league creating a big demand for players, how long before the colleges and high schools will establish regular baseball preparatory departments?

Although men's overcoats flare around the bottom in a very pronounced way, it is not yet customary to keep them extended with hoops.

The dance censors seem to behave very well while the young people show them how to tango.

The Mexican patriots of all factions are fighting nobly to prevent stable government from being established.

Washington is full of office seekers, but none of them has applied for John Lind's job.

Owing to the fact that 33,000,000 copies of farmers' bulletins were issued by the department of agriculture last year, the junk business continues good.

Every morning the doctors try out some of the new cures for diseases, but by night the patients are hollering for ipecac and calomel.

President Wilson is back after a restful vacation spent in drafting anti-trust laws.

A large force of Mexican Federal generals, accompanied by a few soldiers, has fled across the Rio Grande for United States protection.

The movement for rural credits will not be thoroughly successful while the cross roads store persists in demanding cash.

The question is raised why Prof. William H. Taft needs 35 suits of clothes, but of course he has to make some effort to keep up with the college students.

MILITIA IN BAD CONDITION.

Gen. A. L. Mills, chief of the militia division of the War department, gives the militia organization of the country a severe going-over in his annual report just issued. He says it is top-heavy, ill trained, and inefficient.

Patriotism may be an element in persuading young men to ally themselves with the National Guard. But probably the real impelling force is in social reasons and the chances for pleasant outings while on tours of duty. When the encampments are made working affairs, with some approach to the conditions of real warfare, the incentive to become a militiaman is greatly reduced.

To get good work in any line you have to pay the price. Mechanics and business men are not going to drop their regular occupations and run off ten to twenty pounds of flesh in exhausting hikes, merely for a few brass buttons and the fun of the annual dances. As long as no more tangible compensation is offered than the affection of Uncle Sam and the dubious frolic of twenty mile marches, the militiaman must necessarily be something of a tin soldier.

HOW GANGSTERS GOT VENGEANCE

Lehman Tells How Moving Picture Theatre Was Fired

JANITOR HAD "BUTTED IN"

Interfered With Plans to Kidnap Girl For Farrara and Hippodrome Was Set Ablaze—Nobody Hurt, but Bomb is Used In Effort to Carry Out Designs of Leader

New York, Jan. 30.—How hundreds of lives were endangered when the floors of a moving picture theatre were soaked with kerosene and fired and a bomb later placed in the hallway of a crowded tenement that the gang leader might obtain vengeance for interference in a love affair was told to detectives and representatives from the district attorney's office here.

Alfred Lehman, Anthony Sadaitis and Rocco Pucciarello, who have confessed to having planted scores of bombs and committed numerous other crimes, told the story. Having revealed the operations of the gang of black-handers, they explained why the Hippodrome moving picture theatre on Houston street was fired.

"The place was burned because the janitor, 'Joe the Wop,' butted in on Giuseppe Farrara's love affairs," said Lehman. "Farrara has skipped to Italy now, so you can't get him, and I'll tell the yarn."

Lehman then told how a young girl named Nellie Peccarro was admired by Farrara, but "her old man objected." Farrara then proposed that members of the gang kidnap the girl and deliver her to him at a saloon.

"He said he would give us $100 each," continued Lehman. "Three of us undertook the job. We had to go through the Hippodrome to get in back of the tenement at 170 Houston, where the Peccarros lived. Joe the Wop saw us hanging around and got a gang to chase us away.

"When we told Farrara what had happened, he was wild. He swore he would 'croak' 'the Wop.' The next day he gave us kerosene and benzine and told us to 'fix' the theatre. We spread the stuff all over the seats and floor. Farrara threw a lighted paper on the floor after the place was full and we beat it. The people poured out of the place and only a couple were burned a little, and as someone turned in the alarm quick the fire was put out before the theatre was entirely burned.

"That made Farrara mad. He said if he couldn't have the girl nobody else would and gave us the bomb to put in the hallway. He said it was strong enough to blow the whole place to hell, and didn't care if it did. He said he should worry if the whole family was killed."

It is for the placing of this bomb that Sylvestro is on trial. The bomb failed to go off.

Lehman told the story of the burning of the movie theatre and the attempt to blow up the Peccarro tenement without any more show of emotion than he might have shown in asking for his breakfast. His companions prompted him occasionally and smiled as he told of Farrara's anger over the objections of Peccarro to the attentions he was showing his daughter.

BAIL REFUSED TO OUTLAW

Condition of Beardsley's Victim Is Declared to Be Critical

Mayville, N. Y., Jan. 30.—Judge Wheeler denied a motion made in behalf of Edward Beardsley, the Summerdale outlaw, that the prisoner be admitted to bail pending the action of the grand jury which meets next week.

The motion was opposed by the district attorney, who claimed that the condition of J. W. Putnam, overseer of the poor, whom Beardsley shot, was still critical and that a more serious charge might ultimately be lodged against Beardsley.

MANCHESTER FIRE STOPS BUSINESS

Loss of $600,000 When City's Most Important Block Burns

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 30.—Four firemen were injured by a falling wall, car service and the electric lighting system of the down-town section were cut off for hours, and a loss of $600,000 caused by a fifteen-hour fire which gutted the largest mercantile building in the city.

The burned structure, known as the Merchants' Exchange building, contained the large dry goods establishments of the Barton company and Leslie M. Folsom, the former the largest department store in New Hampshire, and the Merchants' National and Hillsboro Savings banks.

The building destroyed was among the landmarks of the city, and because of the mysterious origin of the fire Mayor Hayes ordered an immediate investigation.

PRIMATE CAPITULATES

Listens to Suffragettes After His Palace Is Besieged

London, Jan. 30.—Militant suffragettes besieged the Archbishop of Canterbury in Lambeth palace and eventually forced him to capitulate and receive one of their number to discuss the question of the forcible feeding of their comrades undergoing sentences of imprisonment.

The archbishop listened sympathetically to the suffragettes' appeal, but refused definitely to commit himself. He admitted he received daily protests against forcible feeding, but declared he could not give a definite answer to the suffragettes' appeal until he had heard the other side fully. "All I can do," he said, "is to promise you my very earnest consideration of the matter."

Letters From The People

OUR PUBLIC LIBRARY BOARDS

Henry B. Sheahan Replies to Letter of Rufus Tobey

Editor Daily Ledger:

"It is with the greatest reluctance that I ask you to print this letter. I wish for no controversy with Mr. Tobey. Had he not attacked friends of mine, made voiceless by death, I would have been silent, but since he has implied that their management of the Thomas Crane public library was lax, and their stewardship poor, I could but count myself faithless to every law of friendship if I did not defend them from this great injustice.

Mr. Tobey says:

"That previous to Mr. Smith's election as secretary of the board no records of meetings had been kept.

"That the Treasurer's accounts and bookkeeping would have not stood investigation for a moment. (Mr. Tobey explains that he here has reference to the treasurer who preceded Mr. McGrath.)

"That the treasurer's accounts had not been audited in former years.

"That all the affairs of the library had been conducted in a decidedly loose way.

"That the credit for those changes of system and administration that have been made is due to Mr. Tobey and certain of his colleagues.

An analysis of his letter thus leaves these issues to be considered: first, the specific charges; second, the past administration of the library; and, third, the exact limitation of the services rendered to the library by last year's board.

In regard to the first charge, I answer that careful minutes of the trustees' meetings have been unfailingly kept since the opening of the library in 1871. The secretaries have been, C. A. Foster, H. A. Keith, H. B. Sheahan, and Charles Baxter. One large ledger is almost filled with the careful records of Mr. Keith, who held the office of secretary for thirty-five years.

The second and third charges, having to do with the slipshodness of an ex-treasurer's accounts and the matter of auditing, I take up together.

For the seventeen years between 1894 and 1911, the office of treasurer was held by a citizen of Quincy for whom we all had consideration, deference and respect. A hearty, old New Englander by race, he had, if any one ever had, the typical virtues of his people—sober, old fashioned common sense, and business honor and integrity.

The giving of a bond was not required when he took office and no trustee wished to suggest such a safeguard during this treasurer's term. The charter had not required a bond. It had not been suggested for any other treasurer. Why, then should the Board of Trustees, without any occasion of alarm, break the continuance of an honorable custom?

And his bookkeeping that would not "have stood investigation for a moment." What means this extravagant phrase? Simply that he did not use the most modern double-entry file, but an old-fashioned personal ledger!

What of it? And more particularly what of it now? The bills were paid promptly and every cent accounted for. Does it not suffice to say that the records were found by his successor to be scrupulously exact? Why refer to the matter at all? Thanks to Henry McGrath, the administration of the treasurership was adapted to our more "business" standards some three years ago.

After the hand of death had fallen so heavily on the library board in 1911 removing Mr. Morton, Mr. Keith and Mr. Butler, it was felt by the reconstituted board that the old order had changed and should give place to new. At Mr. McGrath's wise suggestion, a by-law was passed requiring the treasurer to be put under bond. The law appears on the by-laws of April 3, 1912.

The credit for the initiative of this law belongs to Mr. McGrath, C. R. Safford, the late James Burke and their colleagues. To a later board is due the credit of having put it into effect. Charles C. Hearn thus became the first treasurer to be put under bond.

Mr. Tobey is right in saying that the accounts had not been audited in former years, but wrong when he claims that the necessity of supervision was first seen by him and by his colleagues. The credit belongs once more to that board of which James F. Burke was chairman.

A by-law, dated December 27, 1911, provides that an auditing committee shall at the end of each year audit the treasurer's accounts and make a report to the board. The first committee to fulfil this important duty consisted of C. R. Safford and myself.

What then did Mr. Tobey find when he became a member of the library board in the fall of 1912? Was the institution which had enjoyed the benefit of the administrative ability and scholarship of Charles Francis Adams and the Rev. E. C. Butler, the interest and aid of George Morton and H. A. Keith and the able business direction of James F. Burke quite in so fearful a condition?

Not at all! Mr. Tobey found a flourishing institution which had always been conducted with dignity and honor, and well fitted to new times and new conditions. It was left to him and to his colleagues only to work those legislative machines which their predecessors had contrived.

If the citizens of Quincy owe a debt to anyone, it is to those gentlemen whose names I have mentioned. They managed the library in a most efficient maner and placed it among the best in the country. Nor should I forget a most capable and industrious staff.

The only danger I foresee for the library is too much "business." After all a library is a place from which to get books, and I think it unwise that the library should go too long without having upon its board some representative of the life intellectual, such as Mr. Butler. The librarian should always have some trustee with whom she may consult on this very important matter.

Thanking you for the courtesy of your journal, I am, sir,

HENRY BESTON SHEAHAN,
Sometime trustee of the Quincy library, Quincy, Jan. 29, 1914.

WHAT IS OLD AGE?

Some Younger at 65 Than Others Are at 40 Years.

Old age is not marked by years, but by the stiffened frame, the hardened tissues and arteries.

So many people whom you meet about the time they reach 40 begin by saying "I can't do this, and I can't do that, because I'm getting old now," they begin to act old, feel old and they are older in appearance than many who are much more advanced in years.

When you begin to feel old, when your energy begins to fail build yourself up with our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, Vinol. It is a wonderful blood-maker and strengthener.

H. C. Klyce of Corinth, Miss., says "I am 75 years old and my blood was very poor. I was in a run-down condition and felt that I must have a tonic. Vinol was recommended and it built up my strength until I felt as strong and well as ever."

Thousands of old people have found in Vinol just the medicine they need to build up the feeble weakened system and create strength. If it fails, we return your money. Edward J. Murphy, Druggist, Quincy, Mass.

A special meeting of the Granite Cutters Union will be held this evening at headquarters at Brewers corner. KINCAIDE THEATRE.

"That's a good show"—"those acrobats were great"— "That sketch was certainly fine"— "I liked those pictures"— and many more expressions of a similar nature were heard by the writer as the big crowd passed out of Quincy's real theatre last night. Not a single kick was heard about the bill offered and certainly none were deserved, for the program is excellent throughout.

Vedder & Morgan have a comedy sketch that's mighty good. The Naples Duo in their singing and music-making made a big hit. Dave Manley brought down the house with his witty sayings, especially when he introduced the local names. Ed Zoller Trio turned the audience into uproars of laughter with their funny acrobatic stunts.

Coming Monday is another all-good feature program including that great comedian, Joe Flynn, "the man with the book;" Srgardo & Earl, singing and musical entertainers; Anker Sisters, two pretty girls who sing, talk and dance delightfully; Jack Dakota & Co., in an exhibition of fancy rifle shooting; and a number of all new photo plays with plenty of good music.

QUINCY MUSIC HALL.

Saturday matinee and night a wonderful military drama "The Heritage of Eve," by the same company that produced the" Battle of Gettysburg" will be given. A brief outline of the story is as follows:

The southern captain discovers the breach of hospitality of his northern friends, feigning illness, and lays a trap for the spy. Fake despatches are intercepted by the spy, sending the union army into a trap and resulting in its defeat. The spy meets a tragic death, and his duplicity is concealed by the southern captain for the sake of the spy's mother, who is engaged to marry the father of the captain. The story is of gripping interest, and is superbly acted.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE.

The eleventh week of the season of the Boston Opera Company opens Feb. 2, with the usual double bill of "Cavallerit Rusticana," and "I Pagliacci," with casts of remarkable strength. The role of Santuzza, which is usually assigned to a soprano, will be taken for the first time here by Margarita D'Alvarez. Edoardo Ferrari-Fontana will assume the part of Turiddu for the first time. In the Leoncavallo opera, Alice Nielson will make her second operatic appearance here this year in the role of Nedda. On Wednesday night, Rossini's "Barber of Seville" will be repeated with Alice Nielson in the role of Rosina, Mr. Constantino will be the Count Almaviva. Friday night, "La Gioconda," will be restored to the repertoire after three years. This performance will also signalize the last appearance this year of Mme. D'Alvarez the wonderful contralto, the sensation of the season and Saturday matinee, "Die Meistersinger" will be given its third hearing.

Saturday evening, "Luccia di Lammermoor" will be offered at popular prices. The Donizzetti opera remains one of the most popular, as it is perhaps the most melodious, in the entire Italian repertoire. Evelyn Scotney will be the Lucia, Vincenzo Tanlongo, the Edgarde, and Rodolfo Fornari the Ashton.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

"All the Comforts of Home" is a play made for laughing purposes only. It was written by William Gillette, was originally produced at the old Boston Museum, and now comes back to the Castle Square stage after an absence of several seasons. The play is rich in comic incident and character drawing, and it keeps everybody smiling until the final curtain. Its plot also is sensible and well constructed, being based upon the activities of a young man who lets out as lodgings the rooms in his uncle's house entrusted to his care. At the Castle Square next week, the leading parts in "All the Comforts of Home" will be acted by Mr. Carlton, Mr. Meek, Mr. Walker, and Miss Olson and the entire membership of Mr. Craig's company.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE.

No play produced in recent years has scored the tremendous hit and rapidly increasing popularity of "Under Cover," now in its second big month at the Plymouth Theatre, Boston. The play presents a graphic picture of New York's fashionable society and the operations of the U. S. Customs officials in their efforts to capture a supposed smuggler. There are so many clever situations in the rapid-fire action that the audience is kept on the move to keep up with the pace that leads through thrills and comedy to a conclusion that forms the most unexpected surprise imaginable. In short it is the sort of play that pleases all classes of theatregoers and stirs you to the highest pitch of anxiety as to its final outcome. In abounds with bright, breezy and snappy dialogue in addition to a delightful love story. The story catches the interest of its auditor at the beginning and does not cease until after four acts of ripping melodrama, snappy comedy and emotional heart interest that grips, thrills and sends one away thoroughly happy and satisfied with an evening of real entertainment. The opening scene shows the working of the customs officials in their office. It is here that Ethel Cartwright, a young woman of high social breeding is forced through circumstances to agree to trail a man suspected of smuggling. The next scene shows the magnificent home of the Harrington's and the young society matron at work against her will.

As usual, the matinees at the Plymouth are given on Thursday and Saturday.

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

Winthrop Ames, under whose direction "Prunella" will be presented at the Majestic Theatre, Boston for two weeks commencing Feb. 2 promises a refreshing surprise. "Prunella" is a musical fantasy in three acts by Laurence Housman and Granville Barker to which Joseph Moorat has added some delightful music. It is free from the worldly atmosphere which has enveloped most of our latter-day successes, having a dainty appeal which should command it to the purist and the seeker after sweet air in the theatre.

Prune"lla" deals with adventures of a little girl, who longs for a career in the great world which stretches far away from the narrow limits of her garden. Through the efforts of some travelling mummers headed by Pierrot, she achieves her desire, but a few years later she returns saddened and sophisticated. She had fled with Pierrot and he tells the story in these words: "I left her saying nothing. It is so much easier saying nothing when you've nothing to say. But before I went away, I had given her a lot of money and a lot of pretty things, dresses, trinkets, bonbons, everything I could think of to make her happy—except—my love. I took that with me. And presently I found I couldn't get rid of it, and it grew heavier and heavier. I couldn't amuse myself. I couldn't' dance, laugh or sing. It always came and caught me by the throat and said or seemed to say, 'You thief! You fool! I tried cures but they were no good. And so, and so—at last I came back to see if the cure was there. But Prunella had flown." Love, of course, finds a way to unite the pair. The costuming and staging of "Prunella" which has the sub-title of "Love in a Garden," are fully up to the Ames' idea of beauty and artistry and the stage effects are thoroughly worth while.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

Beginning Monday, Feb. 2, Annie Russell, supported by her own company of English players begins a two weeks' engagement at the Hollis Street Theatre, Boston, with Wednesday and Saturday matinees, in old English comedy. She will offer two of the most popular plays of that brilliant group represented by Richard Brinsley Sheridan and Oliver Goldsmith. Sheridan's artistic comedy "The School for Scandal," will be presented the first week at every performance throughout the week. Oliver Goldsmith's glowing comedy of youth and manners, "She Stoops to Conquer" will be presented the last week.

That the taste of the American playgoing public is not altogether satisfied with the unsavory atmosphere of prison, hospital and clinic, which of late have permeated the stage; that the charm, vivacious wit and fine humane qualities of the master works of English comedy still have potent appeal to cultured audiences, the success of Miss Annie Russell's enterprise bears substantial evidence; for this is the second season that this gifted artiste and manager has been engaged in presenting the classical comedies.

"The School for Scandal," the first week's bill, is a new production and is said to be the most ambitious and elaborate Miss Russell has made. The actress-manager began preparations for the production almost a year ago, planning scenery, designing costumes and collecting properties and materials. As in other productions, Miss Russell has shown an artistic and sympathetic insight into the period, but she has spent a great deal more money to produce a sumptuous stage picture, reflecting the characters of the times as well as the moods of the Comedy. A charming minuet danced to the accompaniment of an equally charming spinet, is a lovely incident of the first act.

COLONIAL THEATRE.

The last week of Klaw & Erlanger's eminently successful musical comedy, "Oh! Oh! Delphine," at the Colonial Theatre is announced. The charm and attractiveness of this "last word" in musical comedy has emphsized the fact that the vast majority of amusement patrons still delight in this style of entertainment provided the ingredients which go to make it up are intelligently put forth, as they have been by Messrs. McLellan and Carvll, the librettist and composer of "Oh! Oh! Delphine." The whole piece is a revel of fun and melody from start to finish, and seldom, if ever, has the combination of real comedy and sterling popular music been so successfully achieved as in this sister production to last season's great success, "The Pink Lady." Among the popular song hits are "Oh! Oh! Delphine," "Alleballa-GooGoo," "Why Shouldn't You Tell Me That?", Everything's At Home Except Your Wife," "The Maxim Girl," "The Quarrel." And there's a waltz, a dreamy waltz, one that will charm and fascinate, and rock and sway you to its rythmic tempo.

The cast includes many old favorites and some new, that have already become favorites. The chorus of the organization is remarkable for the fact that it sings, dances, and acts and at the same time is one of the prettiest seen in Boston for many seasons. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

AFTER HOUR OF FRANTIC WORK

Employe Locked In Huge Mint Vault Is Released

JUST ON VERGE OF COLLAPSE

Mechanics Drill Hole In Steel and Concrete Safe of Time Clock Variety and Shove Combination Written on Paper Through Aperture to Prisoner Barely In Time

Philadelphia, Jan. 30.—William Taylor, an employe of the United States mint here, came within an ace of a slow death by suffocation when accidentally locked in one of the immense gold vaults yesterday afternoon.

He was rescued after a dozen mechanics had succeeded in drilling a hole through the steel door after an hour's frantic work, and had passed a slip of paper containing the combination through to the prisoner.

The vault, built of steel and concrete, is of the automatic time clock variety, but it is possible for one on the inside to operate the combination and open the door from the inside.

The vault is one of the largest of the kind in the United States mint and it is understood to be not only proof against burglars but, it is believed, it is able to withstand an explosion of dynamite.

Taylor was caught in the vault about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The employes of the mint were getting ready to quit work and were busy placing gold coin within the steel and concrete lined walls when suddenly the doors closed on Taylor.

Instantly an alarm was sounded. More than a score of employes responded to the alarm. The doors of the vault were shaken, but they refused to budge.

The vault was known to be absolutely air tight and the time clock would not operate to open the doors until 8 o'clock at night. It was realized that four hours within the vault would mean death for Taylor.

Plans were suggested for drilling holes through the sides of the vault in the hope of opening up a passage for sufficient air to keep Taylor alive. This was attempted, but the drills in most instances broke.

Meanwhile one of the workmen who had been engaged on the front of the safe shouted that his drill had taken hold. In a short time the drill reached the interior of the vault.

Taylor's voice could be heard faintly. The Chief Clerk Norris came along with the combination, which was passed through and Taylor freed himself just at the point of collapse.

VANNAH IS CONVICTED

Jury Finds Aged Civil War Veteran Was Murderer of Hardy

Augusta, Me., Jan. 30.—Francis A. Vannah was convicted of the murder of Edward E. Hardy in the superior court here. The deliberations of the jury occupied a little less than two hours.

Vannah, who is a Civil war veteran past 70 years of age, was convicted of having fatally shot Edward E. Hardy, a soldier in the Spanish-American war, in Hardy's camp near the national soldiers' home.

The larceny of nearly $50 worth of whiskey, which Vannah was said to have intended for sale to the old soldiers and was kept in Vannah's camp, was the cause of the shooting, Vannah believing it had been stolen by Hardy, the state claimed.

APPOINTED TO PASTORATE

Rev. Francis S. Hart Formerly of West Quincy

Rev. Fr. Francis S. Hart, senior curate of St. John's church, Canton, has been advanced to the pastorate of St. John's church at East Bridgewater. The official announcement was made Thursday by Cardinal O'Connell.

Father Hart is a native of West Quincy. He is the son of Anne E. and the late Bernard Hart and was born on Christmas day, 1868. He received his early education in the public schools of the city and later entered St. Lawrence college at Montreal from which he was graduated in 1889. After a course at St. John's seminary at Brighton he was ordained to the priesthood in 1894.

His first assignment as a curate was to St. Margaret's parish, Dorchester, where he remained 11 years. After an extended stay in the South because of poor health, Father Hart came North and was curate at the Sacred Heart church at Middleboro for four months. Eight years ago he was appointed senior curate to Rev. Fr. John J. Farrell at Canton.

Father Hart is well known throughout the diocese having been atached here for 19 years. He has many friends at Canton who deeply regret his departure from that parish. It is expected that he will assume his new duties on Monday or Tuesday of next week.

Today many of the West Quincy friends of Father Hart have called him by phone to extend their congratulations.

ACCIDENT AT RAILWAY QUARRY

William Byron, 53 years old and married, one of the best known residents of West Quincy, was seriously injured at the Railway quarry this morning, when a block of granite fell on his right leg, causing a compound fracture of both bones,

The accident occurred about nine o'clock and was due to the breaking of a rope. Byron was employed as a quarryman for some time, was handling the fall rope. When it parted the rock swung toward him, and before he could get out of the path it struck him on the leg. Fellow employees ran to his assistance and medical aid was summoned after which he was removed to the Quincy City Hospital. He is doing as well as can be expected.

QUINCYS WIN OPENING GAME

Defeat the St. Josephs 37 to 19 and 31 to 5

The opening of the Greater Boston basket ball league in this city on Thursday evening resulted in a double victory for the Quincy A. A. teams, twice winners of the New England championships, over the St. Josephs aggregations of Boston. The first team won 37 to 19 and the second 31 to 5.

The game, advertised for Alpha hall, was switched to the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium at the last minute when the manager of the hall stated that the protection of windows and walls was insufficient.

The crowd was commencing to gather when Manager William H. Flynn was informed of the objection and he immediately communicated with Secretary Bromley of the Y. M. C. A. who upon learning that the use of Alpha hall was denied them and that the disappointment would be embarrassing to the visiting team and the fans granted permission for the use of the gym.

Shortly after 8 o'clock the rooters left the hall and soon after were lined along the sides of the court in the Y. M. C. A. The hospitality extended by Secretary Bromley was appreciated by the players and fans, many of whom did not know that Mr. Bromley promoted a feeling of good fellowship and sportsmanship among all athletic associations of the city. Owing to the sudden shift in the scene of battle it was nearly 8.50 before the games were under way.

Quincy led in the first team game, 25 to 11 at the end of the first half and the second team was ahead 22 to 0. The second periods of both games were not as fast as the first, the visitors failing to press the champs hard enough to make them play their best.

At no time did the St. Josephs have the upper hand. From the time the periods started in both games until the finish the visitors were on the defensive and although they exhibited a fine passing game the good work of the Quincy back field was instrumental in spoiling golden opportunities.

Joe O'Rourke scored 19 points for Quincy and Dan Duggan 10. Sid Duggan and Putt Kelly got two baskets apiece and Herbert tossed one foul. Dolan of the visiting team shot three for St. Josephs, two of which were spectacular and brought the spectators to their feet. Sheerin played a pretty game at centre but was unable to outplay Dan Duggan. Boyle played in the first period and Frank O'Rourke in the second.

Billie Manning, holder of the all basket records in the league, opened the scoring for the second team by getting a point on a free try and following it up with a basket. During the period he shot seven from the foul line, missing but two. He also got four baskets. Clint Scollard at centre got four baskets while his man shot none and Bull Moose Brown celebrated his debut into amateur league ball by playing a wonderful backfield game and netting two pretty baskets. Joe Pinel at right forward contributed two baskets and Saville at left back played a good defensive game.

Referee Ruby penalized the visiting second team nine times. But three fouls were called on the first teams.

WORRY OVER OUR POLICIES

British Correspondents Find Much to Write About

LITTLE EDITORIAL COMMENT

One Paper Says Position Is Worse For Prestige of Our Government Each Day Nothing Happens Regarding Mexico—President Denies We Are On Verge of Friction With Japan

Washington, Jan. 30.—The relations of the United States and Great Britain in regard to the Panama canal tolls, the controversy between Washington and Tokio over the California alien land ownership legislation and President Wilson's policy toward Mexico are the subjects of lengthy dispatches from British correspondents in Washington, but there is a singular lack of editorial comment on these questions. The Pall Mall Gazette says President Wilson has laid himself open to a charge of having chalked up "no Huerta" and then ran away, and then it concludes: "It is a position that becomes worse for the prestige of the Washington government every day on which nothing happens."

Financiers here interested in Mexico are becoming impatient at the lack of action shown by President Wilson. A meeting of the Mexican section of the London chamber of commerce is to be called shortly to discuss the replies to a circular recently sent out to its members asking them for their views as to whether it would be advisable for Great Britain to join with France and Germany in asking President Wilson to take some steps to adjust the financial position of Mexico.

The summons sent to Sir Lionel Carden, British minister to Mexico, to come to London for a conference has created no surprise here, as it was announced that this would be the first step toward his transfer to Brazil. The six months for which he was appointed to Mexico will expire the middle of February.

Thomas B. Pepler, as first secretary of legation in Mexico, it is pointed out, naturally acts as charge d'affaires until the successor of Carden is definitely appointed, which will be after his transfer to Rio de Janeiro.

Arms Story Is Denied

Washington, Jan. 30.—Stories that this government was on the verge of serious friction with Japan as a result of developments in the Mexican situation were declared to be unfounded by President Wilson. The president said it was false that the Japanese governmen. was supplying arms to Huerta.

Japanese firms, as well as commercial houses of other nations, are selling arms and ammunition to Huerta, but the president said they have a perfect right to do so under the provisions of international law, and that even if this government wanted to object, it could not do so.

DEMAND $75.000 RANSOM

"Blackmailers" Claim They Have Millionaire Clark In Their Hands

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 30.—While Mrs. Francis L. Clark is opening negotiations with the man and woman signing themselves "The Blackmailers," in the hope that she may bring about the release of her husband, the Spokane millionaire, held by them for a $75,000 ransom, her son, Theodore Clark, is speeding from Boston with the firm determination to rescue his father and to run down the kidnappers.

The elder Clark disappeared mysteriously about two weeks ago. A letter demanding a ransom for his return was received by a local paper yesterday. It was addressed to the "chief of police" and was postmarked here.

WITHOUT A GOVERNMENT

Order Being Maintained In Hayti by International Force of Police

Port-au-Prince, Hayti, Jan. 30.—Although order has been restored here by the international police force of marines and the patrols of the committee of public safety, the republic is still without a recognized new government.

General Theodore, who led the revolution which overthrew President Oreste's power, sent word from Cape Haytien that he would come here at once to occupy the presidential palace and administer constitutional executive authority.

BANK DIRECTORS HELD

Clerk of Failed New Jersey Institution Also Under Arrest

Newark, N. J., Jan. 30.—John B. Scarlette and Harry M. Foster, directors of the failed Roseville Trust company, were arrested, with Harry Mindvich, formerly a clerk.

They are three of those named in the seventy indictments handed down by the grand jury as a result of the collapse of the company.

Parson Carried a Gun

Macon, Ga., Jan. 30.—Rev. G. E. Tidwell, pastor of a Baptist church, was killed at his home in East Macon when a pistol dropped from his pocket and exploded as he was leaning down to kiss his 2-year-old baby good-by.

BOTHA TOO VIGOROUS?

Efforts Made In South Africa to Keep Deportation Proceedings Secret

London, Jan. 30.—The question of the legality of the deportation of the South African labor leaders arouses misgivings in London even among the papers which are most ready to applaud Premier Botha's "vigorous and courageous action."

The most minute precautions were taken by the South African government to keep secret the deportation of ten of the principal labor leaders and a strict press censorship was instituted. It was only by accident that the action of the government became known. The men were heard singing labor songs aboard the train, and an investigation disclosed that they were under a strong guard.

The labor men themselves were ignorant of their destination and were greatly surprised when they reached Durban. The government had chartered the entire passenger accommodation of the steamer Umgeni. The vessel is without a wireless system and will take months to reach London.

NEW SHOE FIGHT IS ON

Contest Between Boot and Shoe Workers and United Shoe Workers

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 30.—Conditions that have existed in the shoe industry in St. Louis for some time owing to the bitter feeling between the Boot and Shoe Workers' union and the United Shoe Workers of America, have started in Stoneham and Lynn.

A strike was declared by the United Shoe Workers of America at the Lynn and Stoneham factories of J. J. Glover's Sons. The firm has been in conference with President Tobin of the Boot and Shoe Workers' union and because of its refusal to stop these conferences the opposing union declared a strike. It called out about 100 operatives in Stoneham and about 150 in Lynn.

WILL NOT CONSIDER CHANGES IN TARIFF

Congress to Stand by New Law During This Session

Washington, Jan. 30.—Representative Underwood, Democratic leader of the house, served notice that there will be no tinkering with the new tariff law at this session of congress.

His declaration was called forth as the result of the introduction of bills in the house within the past few days which would repeal the "collection at the source" feature of the income tax. He is chairman of the committee on ways and means, which has consideration of all such measures.

"It is safe to say," Underwood asserts, "that no bill affecting the new tariff will have consideration at this session. The income tax law is a part of the new tariff law."

REVERSES LABOR DECISION

Boynton Says Hours In Massachusetts Are Limited For Minors Only

Boston, Jan. 30.—Attorney General Foynton submitted his first opinion since assuming office when he sent to the state board of labor and industries an important ruling relative to the application of the labor laws of the state for bookkeepers, stenographers, clerks and other clerical employes.

The effect of the ruling is that all minors come hereafter within the laws limiting the hours of employment for women and children, while all women over 21 engaged in this clerical work are not limited as to the hours of their employment. This is a reversal of the decision rendered by his predecessor.

BIG DEPOSITS IN BANKS

Made by Cassidy Shortly After Willett Was Nominated For Judge

New York, Jan. 30.—Shortly after William Willett, Jr., former member of congress, was nominated for the supreme court bench in Kings and Queens counties, Joseph Cassidy, then Democratic leader of Queens, made bank deposits amounting to $14,000, according to testimony introduced by the prosecution in the trial of Cassidy, who is charged with accepting bribe money from Willett.

Louis T. Walter, Jr., is on trial with Cassidy as the alleged go-between. Willett was convicted last week of bribery.

Shoots Overseer and Self

Providence, Jan. 30.—Michael Cucarelli shot and dangerously wounded himself after wounding Albert Booth, overseer at the Steere Worsted mill. The shooting occurred after Cucarelli had been discharged.

TELEGRAPHIC BREVITIES

Constable Joseph Reid, convicted of having assisted Krafchenke, a bandit, in escaping from jail recently, was sentenced at Winnipeg, Man., to seven years' imprisonment.

Five convicts who have been making counterfeit 5-cent pieces in the machine shop of the Illinois state prison were detected passing the nickels in the prison store.

Grief over the death of Catherine Sorahan, a girl cham, caused 18-year-old Henry Becker of Corona, L. I., to end his life.

Bernard Shaw wrote a satirical skit on the Marconi scandal which he characterized as "utter nonsense." The critics agreed with him.

The Inscrutable Face

How He Made His Dream Come True

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Dale Malcolm, spinning down the Boston post road in his little runabout, saw the gayly painted wagons of the gypsy camp and slowed to a standstill.

Immediately a horde of ragged children surrounded the car and begged with whining insistency.

Malcolm tossed a handful of coppers into the road, and while the children scrambled for them he started the car.

He halted the car again and bought a bracelet jangling with silver coins from a frowsy woman. It set him dreaming wistfully of the far countries from which this woman's ancestors had come.

He awoke from his day dream suddenly. A brown, wrinkled hand was thrust under his nose, and an aged crone whined to tell his fortune.

Laughingly he crossed her palm with a silver half dollar. "I expect a good fortune for that," he said.

The crone nodded.

"What is sent you will get," she cackled—"no more, no less."

She grasped Malcolm's left hand and studied the lines closely.

"A life pent up in the towns," she muttered—"money, money, money getting while the world calls! Fool! Gray towers where devils run to and fro and the roar of sound is like the roar of the ocean, while the green world calls!"

Malcolm smiled as he recognized a quite accurate description of the great skyscraper where he worked every day.

Suddenly her voice changed to one of eagerness.

"Ah, the handsome gentleman will love! I see the moonlight falling on the wise countenance of the silent one. In the shadow of the mysterious face she will come. You will go to strange lands together and be happy. Remember the mysterious face. Thank you, sir!" She stepped back as Malcolm started the car, and in a moment the camp and its picturesque followers had vanished.

"I AM AFRAID I CANNOT STAND," SHE FALTERED.

Dale Malcolm smiled to himself as he remembered the gypsy's prophecy concerning the mysterious face in whose shadow he was to meet his love.

"No chance of meeting my fate this year," sighed Malcolm as he ate his solitary dinner at the club where he made his home. "It's stay in little New York one more year, Dale, my lad, and then, when the Trainor deal is successfully concluded and the Binner estate is settled, I'll sell out my share to Wakely and set out on my travels. Meantime the moon will wax and wane on the inscrutable face of the silent one many times before I arrive."

So spoke Dale Malcolm, but the fates had willed it otherwise. He had yet to learn that the daughter of the Egyptians had mystic knowledge of events to come.

A week later he pulled down the top of his desk and went to the street, where his little car waited at the curbstone. He had promised himself a run into the country, but when he came to Central park he recollected that there was a new picture in the gallery of the Metropolitan museum that he desired to see, and so presently he found himself standing before the priceless picture which had been lent by a millionaire. From one painting to another Malcolm wandered, and from the picture gallery he went from one collection to another until he reached the Egyptian room. It was growing late and near closing time when Dale Malcolm suddenly discovered that he was standing before a large framed photograph of the sphinx.

"This is about as near to the silent one as I shall get this year," he chuckled to himself just as he turned away.

There was a slight scream and a fall on the floor beside him.

Dale turned hastily to find almost at his feet a girl who had slipped on the polished floor. When he bent to assist her to rise he noted that in spite of her pallor she was very lovely and that the color of her black lashed eyes just matched the brown velvet of her costume.

"I am afraid I cannot stand," she faltered, leaning against him. "I believe I've sprained my ankle. If you will assist me to a seat"—

Dale almost carried his lovely burden to one of the settees.

She leaned her head against the back of the seat, and, taking a small gold vinaigrette from her hand bag, she held it to her dainty nose. When her hand languidly dropped Dale quietly took the golden toy from her hand and applied it.

Presently she opened her eyes and smiled deprecatingly at him.

"Thank you very much," she said. "If you will summon a taxicab and assist me to the entrance I shall be very grateful. I am sorry to trouble you, but"—

"My own car is at the door," suggested Malcolm. "If you will let me drive you home it will save delay."

"Thank you. You are very kind. I live just around the corner in Eighty-fourth street. Ah!" She winced with pain as she endeavored to walk.

After that she took Malcolm's proffered arm, and just as they turned away the young man looked backward. Through the window he saw the new moon, and his glance also took in the picture of the sphinx and the girl beside him.

His heart leaped suddenly so that he started violently.

"What has happened?" asked the girl quickly.

"Nothing that matters now," he said as he assisted her in her slow progress through the rooms.

In spite of his calm demeanor Dale Malcolm's everyday self assurance was staggered by the recollection of the gypsy's prophecy and the coincidence of meeting this beautiful stranger actually in the shadow of the pictured face of the silent one, the sphinx.

In ten minutes Dale was assisting Vera Lane up the front steps of the handsome house where she lived and giving her into the care of a very solicitous butler.

After that things fell very flat for Dale. He dined at his club after a run out to the gypsy camp, only to find that it had vanished from the grove of chestnut trees. He went to a theater in the evening, but the play had no meaning for him. Always he saw the lovely face of Vera Lane, and constantly he heard the prophetic voice of the gypsy fortune teller:

"I see the moonlight falling on the wise countenance of the silent one. In the shadow of the mysterious face she will come. You will go to strange lands together and be happy. Remember the mysterious face."

Over and over again the words sang themselves through his brain until when he went to bed he fell asleep to dream of standing in the shadow of the sphinx on the Gizeh plain and beside him was Vera Lane. Now she was his bride, and they were on their honeymoon, visiting strange lands even as the gypsy had foretold.

Dale awoke suddenly and sat up in bed.

"I'll make that dream come true!" he said grimly, and so, turning over, he sank into a dreamless sleep.

The next day he called to inquire concerning Miss Lane's injury, and, receiving word that she was much better, he was obliged to content himself with that. There was nothing more he could do now save to find some mutual acquaintance who would effect the introduction that would, he now believed, open the gates of paradise to him.

He dreamed of Vera Lane by day and night, and his business friends clapped him on the shoulder and told him to take a rest. He certainly needed it. Well, if he wouldn't take sound advice it meant a sanitarium and the rest cure for him!

To all of which Dale listened respectfully and then went on dreaming.

His women friends confessed themselves bored to extinction when Dale made what he considered cleverly noncommittal inquiries concerning Vera Lane. At last he dropped in at a tea, for which functions he had a deadly hatred, and the first person he saw was Vera Lane talking to her hostess. The girl moved away as he approached.

Mrs. Fletcher smiled wickedly at him.

"I simply asked you so that you could meet Miss Lane," she whispered. "I've heard all about it from Agatha. She says you've bothered her to death for an introduction to a girl she hardly knows. But now, young man, I hope you're satisfied."

"Because of your goodness I'll tell you the reason why," said Dale gratefully, and he related his incident with the gypsy fortune teller.

Mrs. Fletcher was delighted with the tinge of romance in Dale's story, so presently she led him to the corner where Vera Lane was drinking tea and chatting with a group of women, and a little later Dale was listening to her sweet voice as she thanked him for his assistance on that October evening when she had sprained her ankle.

It is a fact that when spring came Dale Malcolm turned over the executive department of the business to his partner and set forth on a journey around the world. He did not go alone. He had made his dream come true, and finally he stood on the plain of Gizeh, looking up at the silent one, and beside him was his bride, Vera, whom he had met in the shadow of the inscrutable face, even as the gypsy had predicted.

WOMEN SORRY TO QUIT PANAMA

Those Employed by Uncle Sam Returning to Homes.

LIKED STAY IN CANAL ZONE

Nurses, Teachers and Clerks All Found Plenty of Amusement — One of Them Says Panama Has Best Matrimonial Inducements—Plenty of Men and High Class Wives.

With the men workers returning from Panama are many women who have been helping in one way or another the tremendous undertaking—schoolteachers, hospital nurses, stenographers and the like.

On the Ancon, arriving at New York the other day, was Virginia Carlisle, who had been a worker for the government in several positions almost since the first of the American invasion. "I was sorry to leave Panama," said she. "It is a great country and has been a great place for the American women who have lived there. The greatest number of white American women employed there by the United States at any one time was 200.

"This number includes 120 professional nurses, forty-five teachers, a dozen stenographers and clerks, forty clerks in commissary stores and a telegrapher. In the city of Panama there were also a woman photographer, a dressmaker, a chiropodist and a woman who made a business of selling corsets.

The nurses are paid $60, $75 and $80 a month and are furnished food, quarters and laundry service. Only professional nurses are employed.

"The schoolteachers are paid $90 and $110 a month and furnished quarters, but not subsistence. They live at various points along the line of the canal, wherever their work happens to be.

Matrimonial Advantages.

"There is one great objection to the life of a bachelor woman on the canal zone, and that is that she has no room of her own. Always there is a roommate, and the consequent lack of privacy is very trying. Except for this, I regard the life of a schoolteacher as rather agreeable. The proportion of men to unmarried women has always been very great, probably ten to one, and the girls always had invitations for dances and other amusements such as the village life offers. Many of them got married, and I regarded the opportunities of this kind as distinctly superior to those enjoyed by women in the United States, because the general average of the men there was high. Only women qualified by education and experience are now employed by the canal zone government. The standard is very high.

"In general, I would advise an American girl who would like to go to Panama not to do so unless she has definite work awaiting her or has some friend there with whom she can live until an opportunity for work occurs.

"There are plenty of amusements in Panama for us, and among the most pleasant of all of them are the beach parties that those who live in or near Panama city enjoy.

"Picnics, as we know them in the United States, are impossible in Panama, because the woods are all jungle and fields are alive with little ticks, called 'red bugs,' and the larger cattle ticks.

Delights of a Panama Beach Party.

"In place of picnics we have the beach and lunch parties. Panama city is situated on a bay that stretches in a half circle on both sides of the town. Along this bay is a broad sandy beach, and about two miles east of the city is a stretch between two estuaries called 'the bathing beach.' Back of this are a tidal swamp and the sabanas and on the sand spit between the swamp and the sea, just above high tide line, is a dense thicket of mangle wood and manzanilla.

"During the week the place is deserted, and it is then that the beach parties are held. The men get a brake large enough to hold twenty people, the girls pack a lunch, and about 5:30 o'clock we start. Moonlight nights are chosen. At sunset we are all in the water, and often we play about in our bathing clothes until as late as 9 o'clock. Meanwhile a big fire of driftwood has been made and a pot of coffee is brewing in the coals. Then we eat our supper, seated about on the warm sand.

"When thinking over these parties along the sea I wonder how we shall ever stand it to be long away from the land, where we have the mountains and the sea always imminent, and the delights of good companionship in enjoying them."

GO-THALS.

"Go-thals."

That's how to pronounce it—with the "o" as in no and the "a" as in fall. The colonel says so himself, and surely he ought to know.

Some say "Gerthals;" other "Gothals," with the short "o." "Gertels" is another, and the Germans favor "Gaytals."

WONDERFUL WOOD.

There Is Practically No Limit to the Life of Greenheart.

A most wonderful wood is that of the tropical tree called greenheart. The tree belongs to the laurel family and is exported mainly from the island of Trinidad and British Guiana. The wood is so nearly indestructible that no limit to its life is known. It is used chiefly in ship and dock building. The wood is proof against the white ant on land and the teredo in salt water. A United States government report says:

Greenheart has been known to stand in wharves for over thirty years, and logs that have remained under water for a hundred years are in perfectly sound condition.

Greenheart's extraordinary resistance to decay is probably owing to the presence of an alkaloid known as bibirine and also to certain resinous substances known as tyloses. The latter are reddish brown masses of living cells that grow in solid masses within little cavities that they often fill completely. As they grow with the tree they turn black and make the wood of the older trees black.

As in all tropical trees, whose growth is continuous through the year, there are no annual growth rings. The trees probably do not reach maturity under 250 years. A greenheart tree is from sixty to a hundred feet in height. It is an evergreen without knots and has a broad, open crown. The wood weighs about seventy-five pounds to the cubic foot and resists a crushing force of 12,000 pounds to the square inch.—Youth's Companion.

CANOPIES ON THEIR HEADS.

People of Korea Wear the Largest Hats In the World.

What would you think of a hat that was so large it would safely shelter your father, mother, sisters and yourself under it should a sudden rainstorm come up? The men of Korea like these enormous hats and would not feel properly dressed without them. These hats look like great flower pots set on a round table six feet across. The crowns are nine feet in height and three inches wide, much like a chimney on a one story house. How do you suppose these large, round head coverings are kept on? Under the brim is a small, closely fitting cap, held on by a padded string which ties under the ears. The material of these hats is bamboo, so finely split that it is like thread, and lastly they are varnished to keep out the sun and rain and the wind.

You know that the Korean people always wear cotton clothing, so these big hats protect them far more than our hats possibly could. In the rainy season cones of oiled paper are attached to the big bamboo head coverings in the shape of funnels, so, I suppose, that the rain pours off of them just as water does off a duck's back. A Korean keeps his hat on when we should take it off. Soldiers wear black or brown felt hats decorated with red horse hair or peacock feathers, and hanging from the sides, over the ears and around their necks are oval balls of porcelain, amber and a queer kind of gum.—Sunbeam.

The Ungrateful Cuckoo.

To hear the cuckoo's cheery note you might think he had the clearest conscience in the world. He can have neither memory nor moral sense or he would not carry it off so gayly. The most disreputable of birds, as a rule, are guilty of nothing worse than peccadillos. The jackdaw will steal for the mere fun of the thing, for he can make no possible use of plate or jewelry. Sparrows are, of course, notorious thieves, but they rank no higher in crime than the sneaking pickpockets. But the cuckoo, so to speak, is a murderer from his cradle. He violates the sanctity of a hospitable hearth. His first victims are his own foster brothers, and before he tries his wings on the first flight he is imbrued in fraternal blood, like any Amurath or Bajazet.—London Saturday Review.

She Couldn't Hear Them.

"I was surprised to learn that that man is married."

"How did you learn it? You may be mistaken."

"No chance for a mistake. He says he is in favor of going back to the old shin plasters and having small bills for 5, 10, 25 and 50 cents."

"But I don't see"—

"Bills don't rattle together."—Houston Post.

Returning a Favor.

"It's going to be war to the knife," declared the suburban man, who was feeding his chickens.

"What now?" asked the friend.

"Why, Blinks sent me a box of axle grease and advised me to use it on my lawn mower."

"Well?"

"Well, I sent it back and told him to use it on his daughter's voice."—Lippincott's.

Wrong Both Ways.

"What is that tune you were playing on the bugle last night?"

"That was not a bugle," replied the cornet virtuoso rather stiffly.

"Oh, well, if you're so particular as all that it didn't sound like a tune either."—Exchange.

Perseverance.

Few things are impossible in themselves. It is not so much means as perseverance that is wanting to bring them to a successful issue.—Rochefoucauld.

Life without liberty is joyless, but life without joy may be great. The greatness of life is sacrifice.—Ouida.

WILLARD STREET STATE HIGHWAY

An important meeting of the West Quincy Improvement association was held Thursday evening. Owing to many other events scheduled for the same evening the meeting was not as largely attended as usual. The main topic for discussion was the acceptance of Willard street as a State highway, and the hearing on the question which is to be given by the Highway Commission Wednesday, Feb. 4, at 2.30 at Ford hall, Boston.

Before the meeting adjourned it was voted to extend a general invitation to all citizens interested, whether members of the West Quincy Improvement asociation or not to attend this hearing.

Other towns south of Quincy directly interested in the proposed acceptance of the street will be largely represented for the desire is to have a State Highway from Brockton to Boston.

NEWSY BRIEFS

The meeting of Tax League that was to have been held Friday has been postponed until further notice.

The fund being raised for Charley Ganzel has now reached $1,218.71 and is still growing.

While hustling across City Square Thursday to supply a customer with a daily paper, Joseph Reilley, the popular newsboy slipped on a small square office and struck on his chin, receiving a deep gash and losing two teeth. After medical attention he went to his home but was at his post this morning.

SLANDER SUIT SETTLED.

The suit of Rev. Paul H. Drake of Wollaston, against William Channing Brown of Littleton, for $10,000 for slander has been settled by a judgment for neither party being entered in the superior court on Thursday. Drake alleged that he lost an appointment as minister to the Unitarian church at Berlin because of statements made by the defendent.

HOT JANUARY DAY.

The temperature at noon today registered 62 degrees, which is the warmest January day at noon since January 1906, showing that it is very unusual to have such high temperature at this season. The warmest day at noon in January a year ago was Jan. 12 when it reached the 60 degree mark at noon. As the maximum January temperature at noon for the past eighteen years has been but 68 it will be seen that today is nearly a record breaker.

FAREWELL RECEPTION

Good Work of Rev. J. E. Lillback Is Reviewed

Rev. J. E. Lillback was given a farewell reception by the members of the Finnish Congregational church Thursday evening which was largely attended. He was assisted in receiving by Rev. Alex Raita and Simon Ovaska of this city. The ushers were Frank Pyyny and Samuel Walkamar. During the evening there was chorus singing of hymns and solos by William Huokinen. Rev. Mr. Lillback briefly reviewed his work as pastor here and there were speeches by Rev. Alex Raita, Simon Ovaska and Alex Kukka.

Rev. J. E. Lillback leaves tonight for Brooklyn, Y., to be pastor of the Finnish Congregational church. His farewell sermon at the Finnish Congregational church in West Quincy, Sunday evening, delivered to a congregation that taxed the capacity of the edifice, closed a pastorate extending over a period of five years.

Rev. Mr. Lillback leaves an enviable record behind him. While pastor the membership of the church doubled and there has been a decided increase in the membership of the Christian Endeavor, Young People's Society and Sunday School, and it was mainly through his efforts that the last payment was made on the church mortgage last November. Today the church is free from all encumbrances and stands a monument to the perseverance of the Finnish inhabitants of the city.

When asked on what his success has been based he answered "I planned every day as though it was the last among my 2500 Finns. I was their interpreter, assisted nearly 600 men to obtain employment and was instrumental in aiding approximately 100 families in buying homes. Others I urged to go into business and I supervised the organization of the Finnish Co-operative grocery store, now one of the biggest business houses in West Quincy.

Continuing he touched on the condition of his people and said that with the assistance of the State, city and other charitable associations he looked after the poor and more unfortunate ones. For two winters Y. M. C. A. classes in English have been conducted in my church and with the help of Superintendent Barbour teachers have been secured for the Finlanders of the city.

His eyes glistened with enthusiasm as he told how many attended his lectures on American customs and Constitutional government which has resulted is the issuance of first papers to 300 Finns and the naturalization of 63, and he added I consider that pastors of flocks of foreign peoples should assist and direct their members to attain American ideals which are, after all, not difficult and mean so much to a man that adopts this country as his home.

Rev. Mr. Lillback has also edited a Finnish newspaper, contributed to magazines, translated two Finnish books into English and directed the revision of a hymnal in general use by Finnish congregations of the United States. Besides his other duties he has frequently been the interpreter for his people, and has translated many papers for the Russian Imperial Consulate at Boston. And, for this, he says I have sometimes received extra money, but have never asked for it.

Now about church work? Well, in 1912 for instance I preached 275 sermons, conducted Bible classes, visited people in State Asylums, prisons and hospitals, made 1496 pastoral visits, 270 visits to the sick, and made and carried out plans for church finances. During the past three years fairs or entertainments have not been held in the church for the purpose of raising money, because the enthusiasm of the people made it unnecessary.

Rev. Mr. Lillback is married and is the father of a family. The past week has been one of farewell and practically all the Finlanders of the city have called to extend their regret at his going and their best wishes for future success.

Miss Edna MacDonald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander MacDonald, known throughout New England as one of the best Highland fling and sword dancers, died Thursday at her home, 15 Warwick street, after a long illness.

She was born in Meriden,, Conn., Sept. 1, 1892. In her youth her parents moved to Milton where she attended the public schools of that town, graduating from the Belcher grammar school in 1906. She afterward graduated from Burdett College at Boston.

Her specialty sword dance, with her sister as a partner enthused many Scottish audiences and she frequently appeared in amateur theatricals in this city. Miss MacDonald was a general favorite in Norfolk Downs and Atlantic among old and young alike.

A high mass of requiem will be celebrated at the Church of the Sacred Heart, Atlantic, Saturday morning and interment will be in Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

SPRAINED ANKLE

A friendly wrestling bout between two pin boys after the close of the Coliseum alleys Friday night resulted in a sprained ankle for Patrick Russo of Baxter place. Both locked arms as they were about to leave the alleys and after tugging back and forth for several minutes Russo slipped and turned his right ankle. He was carried to the office of Dr. F. Ramon Burke on the shoulders of other boys at the alleys and later removed to his home.

QUEBEC SOLONS RESIGN

Quit Office While Under Charge of Accepting Bribes

Quebec, Jan. 30.—J. O. Mousseau, chairman of the private bills committee of the Quebec legislature, and Achille Bergevin and L. P Berard, members of the provincial legislative council, have sent their resignations to Premier Gouin.

Charges were made against the three men in the Montreal Daily Mail that they acepted bribes to help pass the bill incorporating the Montreal Fair association.

This bill is said to have been a decoy measure drawn up at the instance of Guy E. Biddinger, who as the employe of the Burns detective agency was retained by Edward Beck, a Montreal journalist inquiring into legislative activities.

The allegations against the men who have resigned were sworn to at the bar of the provincial house by M. E. Nicholls and B. A. MacNab, publishers of The Mail.

FLAGS FLOWN AT SEA.

Significance of Certain Colors In the International Code.

From time immemorial flags have been flown by ships at sea all over the world, but it is only in more recent years that an international code has been adopted. All the countries of the world now conform to fixed rules about the flying of certain flags, though, of course, each navy has its own secret code for use in war time.

The national flag of any ship when hoisted upside down denotes that the ship in question is in difficulties and requires immediate assistance, which any passing ship is required to give if possible.

The quarantine flag is a plain yellow square, hoisted on the foremast, which indicates that the ship has got an infectious disease on board or that it has come from an infected port. No person is allowed either to go on board or to leave such a ship until permission is granted by the sanitary authorities of the port.

In all parts of the world a white flag is accepted as a token of peace, a red flag as that of defiance and a black flag as that of a pirate. A green flag flying from the masthead of a ship or barge at anchor indicates that there is a wreck in the vicinity. The same is denoted by a green buoy placed over the spot.

When a red flag is flying on the foremast it is a sign that the ship has powder, shell or ammunition on board and serves as a warning to other ships not to come too near in case of accidents. It is called the danger or more commonly the powder flag.—London Globe.

HEAT AND COLD.

What We Don't Know About Temperature Would Fill a Big Book.

The highest honors of the scientific world await exploration in the unknown fields of temperature. Strange as it may seem, we really know very little about temperature. Between the temperature of the surface of the sun, estimated at 6,000 degrees C., and absolute zero, estimated at minus 273 degrees C., very little has ever been discovered. The field of research has been practically restricted to 725 degrees or between the temperature of liquid air (minus 200 degrees) and the first visible red of heated iron (plus 525 degrees). We know that at a temperature of 1,000 degrees C. twenty nine metals become liquid, at 1,065 degrees gold fuses, tungsten melts at 3,000 degrees, the temperature of the electric arc is 3,720 degrees, and here begins the great unknown in the world of heat.

The hottest thing on earth is the electric furnace, with a temperature of nearly 3,730 degrees. In this intense heat even the diamond can be melted and boiled like water. But this is barely halfway to the temperature of the surface of the sun, and it is thought that research in these higher temperatures will ultimately result in the greatest discoveries of the age.

What these discoveries may be no one can foresee, any more than anyone could have foretold the results of the discovery of radium.—New York World.

Which Foot Walks Faster?

If you will take a pavement that is clear, so that there will be no interference, and walk briskly in the center, you will find that before you have gone fifty yards you have veered very much to one side. You must not make any effort, of course, to keep in the center, but if you will think of something and endeavor to walk naturally you cannot keep a direct line. The explanation of this lies in the propensity of one foot to walk faster than the other, or one leg takes a longer stride than the other, causing one to walk to one side. You can try an experiment in this way by placing two sticks about eight feet apart, then stand off about sixty feet, blindfold yourself and endeavor to walk between them. You will find it almost impossible.

Exclusive to the Last.

An instance of exclusiveness maintained under difficulties is reported from the ladies' cabin of an Atlantic liner. All were sick except one lady and a cat, which wandered uneasily about. The lady ventured to stroke the cat, remarking, "Poor pussy." The cat was inclined to respond and elevated its tail in token of good will, when from a neighboring berth came in choking tones the words, "Excuse me, that is a private cat!"

Wilde and Ouida.

Oscar Wilde once asked Ouida what she herself considered the chief feature in her work which won success. "I am the only living English writer," she replied, "who knows how two dukes talk when they are by themselves!" It might with truth be said of Wilde that he was the only living English writer who knew how two duchesses talk when they are by themselves.—From Archibald Henderson's "European Dramatists."

Making It Easy.

"Your daughter plays nothing but classical music."

"Yes," replied Mrs. Cumrox. "It is better so. If she plays only classics we can't be sure whether what annoys us is her performance or the composition itself."—Washington Star.

The Braintree White Sox are one of the fast semi-professional teams of this section of the State, and it will be remembered that they won the silver cup offered by the town of Braintree to be played for at the dedication exercises of the new Town Hall last June. The game was played on French's common between the Sox and the Braintree A. A., the former winning the 14 inning contest by the score of 2 to 1.

that he has secured the man desired. He also intimated that he had selected the men for the remainder of the city officials not yet appointed, and he stated positively this morning that they would go to the City Council Monday night.

The main interest as far as appointments is concerned was relieved two weeks ago, when the Council Chamber was packed to the doors with citizens. While there will probably be many spectators present Monday night such a large crowd as two weeks ago is not looked for.

As Chief of Police Burrell and Foreman Michael E. Shea of the Street department, who were requested to resign on or before the first Monday in February have not done so, and as far as can be learned do not intend to do so, something is due to drop in relation to these two officials, any day.

Some people are asking what will be done this year about a city planning board which under a recent law must be created in every city. Last year the City Council took the first steps toward this end by reporting a planning board ordinance, which however was laid on the table until the end of the year when it was sent over to this years City Council. Early action on this matter is looked for.

PRESENTATION TO JOHN D. MACKAY

Friends Congratulate Him Upon Election as Chairman of School Committee

Tell Him He Is Now In Line for Mayor

The officers of the district court, members of the Quincy Bar association and other friends of John D. Mackay, chairman of the School Committee, and a prominent member of the Quincy bar, tendered him a genuine surprise party at his new home on Putnam street Friday evening, or perhaps it might be said that they gave him a house warming.

The party were admitted by Mrs. Mackay, and the genial John was found with his nose buried in a copy of Blackstone. He readily laid aside this dry reading and made his guests welcome. They did not come empty handed, for as a slight token of their appreciation they presented him with a handsome electric drop reading lamp, the presentation speech being made by Charles H. Johnson, who among other things said that one of the first steps toward becoming a mayoralty candidate was to be chairman of the School Committee, which honor had recently been conferred on their host.

Mr. Mackay was taken completely by surprise by this token of good will and friendship, and he was visibly affected, so much so that tears sprang into his eyes as he accepted the gift. Joy however quickly dried the tears and the remainder of the evening was passed in a pleasant manner. Music was enjoyed and refreshments were served by Mrs. Mackay.

Use cut John Mackay,

CONTEST FOR NOMINATIONS

Two in Field For Ward Three Republican Candidate

The primaries for the purpose of nominating candidates for Ward Councilman to fill the vacancy in Ward Three will be held Feb. 17, and today is the last day for filing nomination papers. Up to this morning three sets of papers had been filed. They were as follows:

Democratic,—Robert T. Foy.

Republican,—August V. Johnson and Andrew H. Morrison.

There is another set of papers that were taken out by Mr. Barnicoat but whether they will be filed or not is a question. James Joss has been mentioned as a candidate.

The date for the special election will be Tuesday, March 10, and the call for the election will probably be adopted by the City Council, Monday evening.

ROYAL AND SELECT MASTERS

Ex Representative Walter E. Piper, an officer of Boston council, R. and S. M., was a member of the reception committee who helped entertain a deputation from Victoria council, R. & S. M. of Montreal, Friday, on the occasion of their fraternal visit to Boston council. The guests arrived at the North station on Thursday being met on their arrival by the reception committee. They were escorted to Masonic Temple where due honors were accorded them, after which they were entertained at dinner at the Boston City Club.

Thursday evening international courtesies were exchanged in the Cryptic Rite at the temple and the three degrees were exemplified upon a large class in the presence of a gathering of fully 900, requiring a staff of fully 150 in the work.

Quincy was especially interested in this exemplification from the fact that Mr. Piper is an officer of Boston council, and among the class to receive the degrees were half a dozen from Quincy. Boston council numbers many from Quincy among its members, the larger part of whom were present on this occasion.

Another old ladnmark disappeared this week, the Tarbox blacksmith shop on Quincy avenue being raised.

CITY HALL BANQUET

Retiring Officials Entertain Clerks in Their Offices

A dinner, at which the principal course was not crow, was held this noon at Carlsons' restaurant. It was but a few minutes past the hour of noon when the party numbering almost an even dozen sat down to a special dinner. The menu card did not show anything that savored of crow. In the party were City Treasurer Tilden, Commissioner of Public Works Tupper, Tax Collector Sandberg and the lady clerks in the Treasurer's, Commissioner's, Tax Collector's and Assessor's offices at City Hall.

Looking in at the party from the outside one would never suspect for a minute that the hour of parting of officials and clerks who had been associated together so closely during the past two years was at hand for the best of good cheer prevailed, and the laughter that filled the dining rooms was echoed throughout the building.

There was no toastmaster and no set speeches, but everyone had their little say while the dinner was in progress. There was no occasion to hurry through the various courses and get back to work, for the work of the gentlemen present, as far as City Hall is concerned was over, for a year at least, so that while they were a long time at the dinner, time did not drag heavily on their hands.

The dinner over, and good byes said, the party separated, each going his individual way.

NEW INDUSTRY.

The Braintree Observer says: The large brick building on Allen street that used to be the power house for the Braintree and Weymouth Street Railway is now being used again. This building is now the scene of a new industry. The Pneumatic Scales Corp. of Norfolk Downs is going to manufacture Collapsible steel packing cases to be used for the shipping of shoes, grocery and general merchandise. These cases are made by a process of spot welding three pieces of sheet steel together. the centre piece being corrugated. Each side of the case is made in this way and then the hinges are welded on leaving the case ready to put together. Handles are inserted flush to the sides of the case making it very easy to handle when full. Mr. S. B. Field of Holbrook, an employee of the Pneumatic Scale Co., for the last four years, designed the all important machine for this work. This machine is run by electricity and is capable of making twelve hundred spot welds a minute. Mr. Field is in charge of the East Braintree plant and is very confident of the success of the new enterprise. At present, Mr. Field has six men employed, John Frazer of Factory hill being foreman.

The many Squantum friends of Mr. on his eye for cataract. It will be sorry to hear that Mr. Wunderlich has had to have an operation performed on his eye for cataracts. WOLLASTON CONCERT

Chorus of the Women s Club Makes First Appearance

Unqualified success greeted the first public appearance of the Wollaston Woman's club chorus at a concert in the Wollaston school hall, on Friday evening. The chorus was assisted by Miss Lucille Adams, reader; Harold Tripp, tenor; Miss Florence G. Olney, accompanist; and the Wollaston Glee club. The combination was a very pleasing one.

The hall was filled to the limit of its seating capacity and loud was the applause that greeted the varied numbers. John A. Crowley was director and much might be said of his skill in conducting.

The opening number was a bright and lively chorus "Waken lords and ladies gay," by Matthews, and was effectively followed with "The night has a thousand eyes," by James H. Rogrs. A rading "Th goat and her seven kids" very entertainingly givn by Miss Adams, called for the encore "The kiss."

"Song at sunrise" by Manney was finely rendered with solo by Miss Ruth L. Hardy. Miss Hardy was in good voice and her singing added much to the evening's program.

One of the pleasures of the evening was Mr. Tripp's tenor solo aria from Puccini's "La Boheme." This was sung with fine effect and was loudly encored. Mrs. Herbert Y. Follett accompanied

The chorus "The Water Nymphs" by Smart was followed by "Annie Laurie" in which the Glee Club and chorus participated. The combination of voices was pleasing in the extreme and the hearty applause which followed made manifest the appreciation of the audience.

Following this encore a recess was taken during which candy was sold by Misses Muriel Badger, Carolyn Lewis, Elizabeth Sayward, Lucille Smalley, Helen Jones and Rubena Bates .

Part two opened with the chorus "La Spagnola" by Di Chiara and two readings by Miss Adams "The third ingredient" and "The bachelor and the maid."

"Soft, soft wind" by Gaul and "With revels and wassails" by Woodman, both chorus numbers found favor.

Mr. Tripp sang a group of three solos "Gefunden" by Van Der Stuctsen, "The sweetest flower" by Batten and "The Jasmine door" by Scott. Like the aria they were sung in a manner to win heartiest approval.

"A serenade" by Matthews was sung by the chorus. For the closing number the Glee club and chorus joined in the "Cherubim Song" by Bortnyansky. The two groups of voices mingled with such harmony as to leave a lasting impression of the evening's pleasure.

Great credit is due Miss Florence G. Olney under whose charge the chorus was formed. It has been in existence less than a year but indications point to an artistic future.

The ushers were: Miss Ada B. Hinckley, Mrs. William Sayward, Miss Muriel Badger, Miss Caroline Lewis, Miss Elizabeth Sayward, Mrs. Amos T. Leavitt, Miss Lucille Smalley Miss Helen Jones, Miss Elsie Patterson, and Miss Rubena Bates.

The members of the chorus were: Mrs. Charles Alden, Mrs. Edith Barry, Mrs. Oscar A. Blaisdell, Mrs. Moses L. Brown, Mrs. John R. Burke, Mrs. 9rthur Capen, Miss Edith Chapman,, Miss Annie Flieger Mrs. Jennie Follett, Mrs. Persis Thayer Harding, Miss Ruth Louise Hardy, Mrs. Charles R. Hendry, Mrs. Jennie Hill, Miss Blanche L. Moses L. Brown, who assumes the office of Commissioner of Public Works Monday morning, spent the greater part of Friday in company with Commissioner Tupper in visiting the several departments of public works in the city. Commissioner Tupper took Mr. Brown in his automobile and extended all the courtesies possible. All sections of the city were visited during the day.

John J. O'Hara, the new tax collector, has called at the Tax Collector's office, but as he has recently served in the same office he is familiar with the ropes. The same is also true of John Curtis, the new City Treasurer, for he served four years under Mayor Shea. Mr. Curtis visited City Hall this noon and took charge of the office when City Treasurer Tilden closed the books for the day.

DISCOURAGING EXTRAVAGANCE.

The national association of retail grocers has voted to urge its members to discourage customers from buying extravagantly.

This is a different spirit from the report just noted in a newspaper exchange from a near by city, that a certain contractor had advised the municipal government to enter on a needlessly costly system of street lighting. He argued that it would encourage people to buy what they would otherwise not purchase!

Although the action taken by the national body as quoted above is most commendable, the problem how extravagant popular habits are to be checked is not an easy one. Few retail merchants encourage the public to buy beyond their needs. Almost all purchasing is done hand to mouth.

The real cause of extravagance is the effort of people to live beyond their means. The woman who could afford an ingrain carpet wants brussels and when she gets to the brussels, she wants oriental rugs. The merchant must show what the public wants to see. The best he can do is to extol the virtues of simple and substantial articles.

OPPOSED TO GRAFT PROBE

Barnes Openly Against It Being Made State-Wide

REPUBLICANS MIGHT SUFFER

Contractor Testifies That Hughes Commission Used "Bagmen" When Its Fate Hung In Balance After Democratic Victory—Gaffney Is Not Identified by Stewart

New York, Jan. 31.—William Barnes, Jr., has come out openly against a state-wide graft investigation such as proposed by the progressive Republican members of the assembly. Barnes issued the word to defeat any assembly investigation looking toward the detection of the grafters in his newspaper, the Albany Evening Journal.

Barnes, it is said, will have the support of the Tammany wing of the assembly, and with Barnes' aid the Tammany members hope to prevent any real investigation. Barnes' idea of an investigation is solely for the purpose of proposing remedial legislation.

The announcement came contemporaneously with the bringing out before Commissioner Osborne, Governor Glynn's special graft investigator, of information showing alleged irregularities by the first state highway commission, appointed by Governor Hughes, and indicating that the Republicans might suffer with the Democrats as the result of any thorough and unbiased investigation of the highway department since it was established.

Testimony that the Hughes commission used "bagmen" was supplied by M. D. Windsor, a contractor of Guilford, who admitted he had contributed "to save the Republican highway commission" at the time its fate hung in the balance after the Democratic victory in the fall of 1910.

Windsor testified that while he was working on a contract for the construction of a state road near Northville, in the lower Adirondack region, "a man named Donnelly" came to him and made an appeal on behalf of the highway commission. The witness said he gave $500. Later in the fall he was approached by another man, to whom he gave $800 for the same purpose—to block the effort to legislate the commission out of office.

The witness testified that later, when Governor Dix was urging upon a willing legislature the abolition of the three-headed highway commission, he attended a conference in this city, at which S. P. Hooker, head of the Hughes commission, was present, and where he was persuaded to part with another $100 to keep that commission in office. At the conference were three other men, whom the witness did not know.

James E. Gaffney, Charles F. Murphy's "bagman" was "identified" by James C. Stewart, the contractor, during a two hours' secret conference with District Attorney Whitman, as the man who demanded $150,000 from Stewart's $3,000,000 barge canal contracts soon after the 1912 election and at the time the canal board was holding up the bids.

Stewart also told how he went to Murphy the day Gaffney demanded the money to protest against that kind of politics. He also said that Murphy pretended that he didn't know about the "bad man" Gaffney, and when Stewart went the next day to see him again, Murphy wouldn't see him.

But when Stewart was later confronted in the office of Whitman by Gaffney he failed to identify him as the "Mr. Gaffney" who attempted to extort a political contribution of $150,000 from him.

The identification was wanted by the district attorney to complete the case which he has presented against Gaffney to the grand jury.

FUMES PROVE TOO STRONG

Chinese Stowaways Smoked Out When Steamer Is Fumigated

Philadelphia, Jan. 31.—Fifteen Chinese stowaways were discovered hidden in the hold of the steamship Chiswick, for this city from Santiago, Cuba, when government officials began to fumigate the vessel to kill rats and possible germs.

The Chinese, who were almost unconscious from the fumes of the disinfectant, were taken to the immigration station at Gloucester, where they will be held held pending deportation.

DENIES FORCIBLE FEEDING

Bishop Finds No Truth In Torture Story of Militant Suffragettes

London, Jan. 31.—There is no truth in the allegations made by militant suffragettes that three of their comrades imprisoned in Holloway jail are subjected to excruciating tortures while being forcibly fed, according to the bishop of London, Rt. Rev. A. F. W. Ingram.

The bishop, accompanied by another clergyman, visited Holloway jail at the request of a deputation of militant suffragettes and with the consent of the home secretary. While there he made a thorough investigation and found, he says, that complaints of militants are "not borne out by the facts."

JUSTIFIES MARTIAL LAW IN BIG STRIKE

Gladstone's Answer to British Labor Party Conference

Cape Town, Jan. 31.—The absolute necessity for martial law in the recent railway strike was emphasized by Lord Gladstone, governor-general, in his speech at the opening of the parliament of British South Africa.

Lord Gladstone's speech was construed as an answer to the British Labor party conference at Glasgow, which adopted a resolution demanding Gladstone's recall because he authorized martial law and ordered the deportation of the strike leaders.

Time after time the labor members in vehement language and amid a great uproar tried to debate "the crime of kidnapping citizens," but the speaker refused to allow them to continue and finally, while the din was still in progress, the house adjourned.

NEVER BITTEN BY DOG

Girl Thought to Have Developed Rabies by Suggestion

Philadelphia, Jan. 31.—Suffering from what is thought to be hydrophobia caused by psychological suggestion, Miss Ellen Brown, 20, is but slightly improved. Though never bitten by a dog, she has always had an "innate fear of them."

This theory of psychological suggestion is especially likely because her brother died years ago of the disease. Her convulsions have been so violent it has at times taken three men to hold her. Fifteen hypodermic injections of morphine were administered in twenty-four hours, and latest reports indicate her spasms are slightly less violent.

Nearly $1,000,000 has been paid out by the bank since the run started on Tuesday. The directors have been offered assistance from other banks but have declined it with thanks.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

GIVE NEW MEN FAIR TRIAL

Trustees of Library Removed Not the Only Able Men

Editor of Ledger:

When the citizens of Quincy elect a mayor, they choose a man in whom they have confidence and in whose hands they feel it safe to leave the administration of civil affairs. When Mr. John L. Miller was elected he was no exception to the rule. Therefore it seems quite wrong for certain people to take it upon themselves to criticise Mr. Miller's appointments.

A good citizen should be loyal enough to withhold criticism until a trial of the new man has been made. This is especially true when some of those who criticise are men who failed of reappointment. It is an art to be a good loser.

In the case of the Thomas Crane Public Library trustees we grant that the library management has been very efficient but the three men who have not been reappointed are not the only able men Quincy possesses and the men appointed in their places are men of no mean ability and there is no reason why the library management should not be equally as efficient as in the preceding year.

The office is not a life position and it is always good to have new men who will bring new ideas. It seems altogether indelicate for a man to object because he did not receive the appointment since a man is not always the best judge of his own ability. We believe Mr. Miller was honest in his appointments and did not make them as political plums.

AUTO SHOW AT WOLLASTON

The 1914 Automobile Show at the Wollaston Centre Garage is developing into a real live show, and promises to be of greater magnitude than at first expected. T. A. Winsloe is pushing the good work along with great enthusiasm as those who exhibited last year were after the spaces as soon as the announcement was made that the show was an assured thing.

Up to the present writing the Jeffrey and Cross Country will be exhibited also the Oldsmobile, Overland, Krit, Oakland, Chandler, Paige, Metz, Pierce Arrow and others.

The Cyclecar which was such a sensation in the New York show will be on exhibition and promises to be a great attraction for the young people.

The electric cars are to be well represented also, as the Woods, Bailey, Ohio and many of the best known makes signified their intention to exhibit at the banquet of the Electric Club held at the Hotel Thorndike at which Mr. Winsloe was one of the speakers.

Already the automobile business is beginning to look alive and the "Jeffrey Six" promises to be as great a winner as the Rambler of last season.

A "Jeffrey Six" has been sold this week to Morris L. Whitton of Hingham and many other sales will follow as soon as the first warm days appear.

20th CENTURY CHRISTIANITY.

A very significant sign of the reawakening interest in religious subjects today may be found in the wide spread attention given by press and pulpit to President Eliot's address on "Twentieth Century Christianity." given out in pamphlet form on the first of this month.

Some of the Daily papers, at the time, published the address in full, and many articles have appeared since then in papers and periodicals criticising the address both favorably and unfavorably, among which the most notable is the attack made by Cardinal O'Connell in his address before "The Holy Name Society."

In order to clear up some of the misconceptions regarding Dr. Eliot's attitude, and also to present the real issue involved in the controversy, Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson announces that on next Sunday morning in the pulpit of the First Parish church he will preach upon "President Eliot's Twentieth Century Christianity and its Critics."

MINE WORKER MAKES ATTACK ON GOMPERS

He Charges Labor Leader With Being Frequently Drunk

Indianapolis, Jan. 31.—Scenes of the wildest disorder marked the convention of the United Mine Workers of America, which heard Duncan McDonald, secretary-treasurer of the Illinois Miners, declare President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor was "gloriously drunk" during the Seattle convention and on other occasions and also heard Gompers denied.

In addition to the Seattle occasion McDonald said, Gompers "had a snootful" of liquor at the Atlanta convention.

"Then again in the bar of a Chicago hotel," said McDonald, "Gompers got lit up, called me all kinds of names and told his followers how he fixed me at Atlanta."

The delegates showed little sympathy for Gompers, who declared he was being tried "before a jury whose minds were already poisoned." Every point made by McDonald was wildly applauded.

HELD AS A "SLAVER"

Son of Rhode Island Contractor to Be Given Hearing at Boston

Providence, Jan. 31.—Joseph Pezzullo, son of a wealthy Rhode Island contractor, was arrested on a charge of having violated the Mann white slave act, was arraigned before Commissioner Cross and was held for a hearing in Boston.

The authorities charge that Pezzullo took Florence Wahl to Boston for immoral purposes, that a child was born to her two months ago, and that Pezzullo secured a written release from all responsibility by paying the girl $300. The girl's mother began the present action.

COAL PRODUCT IS CUT

Warmth Greatly Reduces Output of the Anthracite Companies

Philadelphia, Jan. 31.—Because of the unusually mild weather some of the anthracite coal producing companies are greatly reducing their output.

The Reading company's collieries, employing 30,000 men, and the collieries of the Susquehanna Coal company, a Pennsylvania railroad corporation, have suspended operations for a few days.

Miners say they cannot recall such long continued mild weather at this season of the year.

UNABLE TO PAY FINE.

A familiar face about the Quincy depot will be missed for the next fifty days, as it has been decreed that Michael McAuliff shall pay the court $25 or work for the county for fifty days. Michael was arrested Friday for drunkenness and this morning was fined $15. It was also made known at that time that he was indebted to the court for $10 for a fine imposed some time ago, which had not been liquidated, making a total of $25. This meant come down with the cash or work for the county at Dedham, cutting sole leather for the next fifty days so that will be his address until early spring.

Monroe Sinks Ten Minutes After Being Rammed In Fog

FORTY-THREE LIVES ARE LOST

Doomed Vessel's Side Ripped Open by Prow of the Nantucket While Both Vessels Are Making Way Slowly and With Difficulty in Early Morning—Many Cling to Upper Side of Half Capsized Vessel Until She Disappears Beneath Waves—Wireless Operator Sacrifices Life For Girl

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 31.—The story of how forty-three victims went down to death in the chilly waters of the Atlantic, when the liner Nantucket rammed and sank the steamer Monroe, was brought to port by the ninety-one survivors who were rescued by the Nantucket.

It was a story of sudden death, sweeping out of the dark and fog, and taking unawares the doomed with the heaviness of sleep still upon them.

It told how the stricken Monroe, with her side gored deep by the steel prow of the Nantucket, filled rapidly, rolled over on her side, and in a few minutes turned completely over and plunged to the bottom, carrying with her the passengers and members of the crew who had failed to get clear of the wreck.

The revised lists prepared by Captain Johnson, who survived the sunken vessel, showed:

Lost: Passengers, 19; crew, 24; total, 43.

Saved: Passengers, 36; crew, 55; total, 91.

Collided In Fog

Under the thick bank of fog both big ships were making their way slowly and with difficulty in the early morning. The Monroe, with Johnson on the bridge and a double looker peering into the mists ahead, was edging under half speed to the northward, having left Norfolk for New York. The Nantucket, heavily laden with freight and with only two passengers aboard, was nosing her way southward, bound from Boston to Norfolk.

The crash came about 1:40 a. m. without warning. Out of the fog that shut out even the waves from view, the gleam of the Nantucket's searchlight scarcely touched the dripping side of the Monroe before the prow of the Nantucket ripped into the Monroe's side and threw the stricken ship back.

The Nantucket, with her bow crushed in, backed out of sight, as Johnson, seeing his vessel was fatally stricken, shouted an order for the lifeboats.

Passengers Were Asleep

When the crash came those aboard the Monroe were in bed and asleep. Only Johnson and the watch on deck were up and about. But the shivering of the stricken vessel and her listing motion, as the water poured through the gash in her side, awakened the sleeping passengers and sent them clambering toward the deck.

Warned by the officers, they hurriedly adjusted life preservers and made for the deck. But the time was all too brief. Those rescued agreed that from the time the Monroe was struck until she settled beneath the waves not more than a short ten minutes elapsed.

Baggage, clothing, valuables, were all forgotten in the flight from the staterooms. Pajamas, night gowns, bath robes and blankets were the common apparel of those who reached the deck before the water trapped them below, and most of them wore that garb when they left Nantucket at her dock at Norfolk.

When the excited passengers reached the deck they were directed toward the lifeboats by the officers and the crew. Three of the lifeboats from one side of the crippled vessel were unshipped and got away, freighted with frightened humanity, mostly women, shivering in the wet and cold. By the time these were away the Monroe was rolling over on her side, and it was impossible to launch the other boats.

Short Lease of Life

As the Monroe lurched over the unfortunates left on her shrieked, turned and ran across the superstructure, through portholes, windows and companionways, until they rested just out of reach of the waves, on the upper side of the half capsized vessel. But even this slippery security was not long available. With a rumbling sound the vessel shivered and plunged beneath the waves.

Meantime the Nantucket, herself badly damaged, had stood by. As the ineffectual rays of the searchlight failed to pierce the fog Captain Berry ordered out his lifeboats. They found only the struggling survivors crying frantically for help.

Many of those picked up were utterly exhausted and unable to help themselves. Several, unable to climb the ladder, had to be hauled over the side of the Nantucket with ropes.

Thomas R. Harrington of Bridgeport, Conn., kept his wife afloat by superhuman efforts, swimming with her hair in his teeth, only to have her die a few minutes after she was hauled aboard the Nantucket.

Captain Johnson, of the Monroe, and all his officers got away from the sinking vessel and were rescued.

All the officers and the crew of both the Monroe and the Nantucket were held here to await an investigation of the catastrophe, which will be begun immediately by the federal steamboat inspection service.

Deeds of Heroism

There were notable deeds of heroism by Assistant Engineer Perkins and First Wireless Operator Kuehn.

Perkins, when the inrush of water put out the main dynamo and left the Monroe in complete darkness, rushed below and put to work an emergency dynamo. He is among the rescued.

Kuehn gave the first S O S call, and after adjusting a life-preserver, which would doubtless have saved his own life, removed this from his body and put it on a girl. Kuehn was lost. His assistant, R. L. Etheredge, was saved and walked into the arms of his wife, who waited to greet him as the Nantucket docked with the rescued.

Nantucket In Many Accidents

The steamer Nantucket has recently figured in so many accidents that many persons have called her a "hoodoo ship." The collision with the Monroe is her second within nine months.

On July 4, 1905, she collided with the steel whaleback barge 101 in Vineyard sound. The barge struck the steamship and tore a hole in the hull just above the water line. At that time the steamship was bound to Boston.

On Sept. 12, 1912, fire broke out on the Nantucket as she lay at her berth in Baltimore. The flames spread so rapidly that it was only by jumping that the forty men on board at the time could save their lives. The vessel sank so quickly that James Rottan went down with her, while John Kranz was killed by a falling hatch cover. Before sinking, the steamer turned turtle. Later, the vessel was raised and repaired.

On April 10 of last year the Nantucket was bound from Norfolk to Boston and had twenty-eight passengers on board, when, during a gale, she was struck by the barge Gibson in Vineyard sound and a big hole was torn in her port side.

He had gone to India in connection with the celebration there of the centenary of the establishment of Christian missions, and to lead peace discussions in the Orient.

With him were his wife and daughter. Capen was 72 years old and was born in Boston. He had always been a leader in Congregational church work and had been a leading carpet merchant in this city.

Fifteen thousand lottery tickets, two printing presses and books with the names of supposed purchasers of the tickets were confiscated. De Bill furnished $500 bail and was released.

QUINCY HIGH DROPS ONE

Had Wellesley Game Well in Hand Until Last Period

In what was conceded to have been the fastest and most stubbornly contested basket ball game ever played in the Wellesley High school gym, Quincy High school lost to Wellesley yesterday by the close score of 20 to 16.

Quincy led during the first thirty minutes of play. At the end of the first half, the score was 9 to 3, and at the end of the next ten minute period it was 13 to 9. Wellesley came back strong in the last period, and at the end of six minutes, the score stood at 16 points each, where it remained for about one minute. Wellesley then uncovered a spurt that won the game, Putnam and Kuhleurin, each scoring field goals.

Bates was the star of the game, scoring four field goals and four from free tries. Capt. Jenkins as usual came across with the most spectacular shot of the evening, an overhead shot from the left corner of the gym. Every Quincy player did his level best with the possible exception of Jenkins who slowed up during the last of the game. Finnerty played best for Wellesley.

Capt. Pond and E. Brown of Hollis-ton High were interested spectators, probably looking for Wellesley's weak points.

Quincy thanks Wellesley for the fine treatment accorded.

Referee Coady says it was the fastest and best played High school game he had ever seen.

Summary:—Wellesley 28; Quincy, 16. Goals from floor—Bates 4, Jenkins 2, Keefe 2, Finnerty 3, Putnam 2, Curry 1, Kuhleurin 1. Goals from fouls—Bates 4, Curry 2. Referee, Coady. Timer, Tilton. Time—one 15 minutes and two 10 minute periods.

SPORT NEWS

Quincy Y. M. C. A. plays its big games of the year tonight when the champion Newton Y. M. C. A. first team and the undefeated second team will line up against them. Newton has lost but one game here in the East so far this year, Quincy winning that game about two weeks ago at Newton. The Newton boys are more than anxious to win tonight's game.

The Quincy High base ball team has an at-home game with Rindge Technical school for April 14 and a game at Dorchester for April 16.

The Knights of Columbus league has omitted Friday night of next week's matches, but will ocntinue Tuesday and Thursday nights until the following week. The league matches close on Feb. 17, when the Averys and the Coyles are matched and the Sullivans and the Fallons. The banquet, award of prizes and an entertainment will be held on the evening of Feb. 24. The Avery's cling to the top position and the Coyles are in the last place. The tie between the Sullivans and Fallons is receiving attention. Bowlers say that Sullivans have supplanted the Fallons as runners up for the title because of their climb to a tie. The Fallons have issued a warning to watch out.

President Joseph Larkin is making preliminary plans for the banquet which follows the close of the Fore River league. The organization of a year ago, which has been successfully continued this season through his efforts, was entirely due to the enthusiasm of President Larkin. Walter Williamson, the secretary, has had more work this season than ever before, because of the constant jockeying of teams and the record smashing indulged in. The last match is scheduled for March 6.

Never was the need of a municipal gym more strongly demonstrated than on Thursday night when the Greater Boston League teams were denied the use of Alpha hall for the Quincy—St. Joseph's games. The creditable stand and generous spirit of A. F. Bromley of the Y. M. C. A., who threw open his gymnasium and his gallery to the teams and their followers has never before been equalled in the city. The decision was not one of impulse for Mr. Bromley, has, since coming to this city, lent much encouragement to boys and has exerted all his influence to promote fair play and manly contests in all walks of life. The fans of the city know it and salute you, Mr. Bromley.

POST OFFICE MATCH.

The clerks and carriers of the Quincy post office opened their bowling series at the Coliseum alleys Friday evening, the victory going to the clerks. Superintendent Charles L. Hammond, rolling with the carriers, finished with a single of 114, which was the best of the evening. The clerks rolled 1230 against 1193 for the carriers.

LABELED BY CARLYLE.

The Tag He Plastered Upon a Famous English Historian.

In the "Letters of Charles Eliot Norton" is this amusing epistle, which was written by Norton in 1873:

The other day Froude said to me: "It's a great shame that some one shouldn't keep a record of Carlyle's talk. He never fails to say something memorable or admirably humorous. Why, he called somebody the other day 'an inspired red herring.'"

"Pray," said I, "who is it that deserves such a label?" But Froude had forgotten. * * * Some days afterward I asked Carlyle to whom he had applied the phrase, but he had forgotten and said he trusted he was not to be made accountable for all the extravagant phrases he had uttered in talk—there would be "verra many to rise in judgment" against him—but he wouldn't disown "the inspired red herring."

I told all this to Forster, abusing Froude at the same time, much to Carlyle's amusement, which was increased when Forster broke out: "By heavens, my dear Norton, I heard that previous utterance, but I, too, have forgotten to whom it was fitted. Mrs. Forster will remember." But when we went to the drawing room Mrs. Forster could not remember, and Forster called down wrath on her and himself. The next morning the post brought me a note from him at breakfast time, which contained only the name Henry Thomas Buckle.

ENGLAND'S BLACK MEN.

They Are Remnants of the Ancient Blue Painted Britons.

Practically every Englishman is Anglo-Saxon by blood, but there still are, according to scientists, one or two corners in England where there are colonies directly descended from the ancient Britons, the blue painted men who, according to the history books, inhabited England before the Anglo-Saxons killed them off.

If you came across them you would at once notice something curious about them. They do not look like Englishmen at all. They are short, as swarthy as Spaniards, with very narrow heads and with curiously cut profiles.

There are whole villagefuls of these modern ancient Britons, though the villages are very few and very out of the way. It is this out of the wayness that has kept them so distinct from the country people around them.

Some of these villages have not even had road communication with the rest of the world till comparatively recent times.

One of these curious colonies is at Dunsfold, in Surrey, Bedfordshire, too, has some villages of "black men."—London Tit-Bits.

Confusion.

Three ladies as they shot in an observation car Californiaward through the superbest scenery in the world fell to talking about dogs.

"I don't know a thing about dogs," said the first lady. "They're all just dogs to me. If I have a preference, though, it's for the cob."

"Cobs are nice—so affectionate," agreed the second lady. "But I'm no dog sharp either. Still, I must say my choice of a dog would be a mustang. They're such good watch dogs, aren't they?"

"I don't know one dog from another," said the third lady. "I just divide them into big dogs and little dogs. I'm very fond of a hackney, though—I mean, of course, for a lap dog."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Her Superior English.

James Ross and his daughter Janet from Canada visited relatives in Chicago recently. Day after day Janet and her father went sightseeing, always together.

Janet's aunt, noticing this, one day suggested that she let her father go downtown alone some time, jokingly adding, "Men do not like to have women always tagging along."

"Aye, ahnty, but he wahnts me," explained Janet earnestly. "He canna thole to stir oot o' the hoose his lane. Ye wadna beleeve hoo fasht he is onywhere wi'oot me. Ye see, faither taa'ks sic braid Scoatch that stranger folk dinna ken what it's a' aboot, an' I hae tae gang wi' him tae dae the converrsin."—Everybody's.

Not So Dutiful.

"Where will Mrs. Dobs go now that both her daughters are married—to her son-in-law's house in Birmingham or to that of her son-in-law in Leeds?"

"One wants her in Birmingham, and the other wishes she would go to Leeds."

"What dutiful sons-in-law!"

"I beg your pardon. The one in Birmingham wants her in Leeds; the one in Leeds wants her in Birmingham."—London Tit-Bits.

The Basis of Society.

The wealth and strength of a country are its population, and the very best part of that population are the cultivators of the soil. Independent farmers are everywhere the basis of society as well as the true friends of liberty.—Andrew Jackson.

Fine.

Judge—Thirty days. Prisoner—Oh, please don't send me to jail, your honor. Judge—Well, then, I'll make it $30. How's that? Prisoner—Fine.—Buffalo Express.

Wrong Again.

"There is nothing new under the sun," quoted the Sage.

"How about the antique furniture?" asked the Fool.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

HOSPITAL AID ASSO.

Twenty-six ladies were present at the annual meeting of the Hospital Aid Association held at the home of Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann, Goffe street. The chairman of the nominating committee, Mrs. John F. Welch brought in the following list of officers for the ensuing year, who were elected:

President—Mrs. Paul R. Blackmur.

1st Vice President—Mrs. George Macfarlane.

2nd Vice President—Mrs. Frank Page.

3d Vice President—Miss Gertrude Sampson.

Secretary—Mrs. Albert G. Olney.

Treasurer—Miss Etta M. Prescott

THE PRESIDENT'S REPORT:

The work which has been accomplished by the ladies of the Hospital Aid Association of Quincy for the year 1913 has been most encouraging to all interested in the hospital. At the beginning of the year it was thought advisable to confine the work to hand-sewing, particularly as members and kind helpers outside the association volunteered to have any machine stitching done when needed.

Following is a list of articles made and finished during the year: 10 dozen napkins hemmed; tablecloth Superintendent's dining room; 121 surgeons and dressing towels, 4 dozen hot water bag covers of outing flannel; 27 bed-pan covers; 283 bandages of various sizes; 18 maternity bandages—marked; 9 T bandages; piece glass towelling; 97 Perineal straps and 2 dozen half-sheets for maternity ward.

Purchases ready made were as follows: 17 dozen sheets; 1 dozen bed spreads; dozen pillow slips; 9 pairs bed blankets; 6 pairs bath blankets; 1 dozen bath towels; 2 dozen huck towels; 1 dozen night shirts and 1 dozen night gowns.

The linen and blanket closets for Ward B have been almost fully equipped by the Aid Association.

Besides the work contributed by association members, assistance has been received from the ladies of the Alliance connected with the Wollaston Unitarian church, who have sewed during one of their all day meetings.

At four meetings of Charitable ten King's Daughters the ladies have finished work begun by the Aid Association at one of its regular monthly meetings. Miss M. L. Furnald also helped with hand sewing.

The Association is in a flourishing condition, 25 new members having been added the past year. But the field of effort is large and it is most desirable that the membership increase still further.

The Story of Mrs. Fitzherbert

She Was the Wife of a Monarch, but Not a Queen

By F. A. MITCHEL

[In the following story no deviation whatever has been made from history:]

Mrs. Fitzherbert was the daughter of a country gentleman. Wedded when very young, she had had two husbands in succession, both dying after having been married to her but a short time, the last, Fitzherbert, leaving her a widow when about twenty-five years old. Being a very attractive as well as a beautiful woman, she was received into the court society in London and attracted the attention of the Prince of Wales, son of George III., with whom America struggled for her independence. He was much younger than she, and a portrait of him taken when he was about eighteen years old represents him as a tall young man with delicate, handsome features. Mrs. Fitzherbert is said to have had beautiful eyes and a mass of golden hair.

The prince fell deeply in love with the young widow. She, realizing the danger to her reputation by the attentions of a prince of the blood, fled to the continent. There she remained some time. But the prince was bound to possess her and wrote letters begging her to return to England. The affair was known to the public, and the lovers were watched with curious interest. There was a law of the realm called the royal marriage act that pronounced any union between a prince of the blood and a commoner, without the sovereign's consent, illegal. It was known that the lady had fled from the prince because she would not live with him except as his wife, and, since the king would not consent, the fact was patent that she could not be his wife in accordance with British law, though she might be under a religious ceremony.

There was another barrier between the prince and Mrs. Fitzherbert. Another law forfeited the succession to any one marrying a Catholic. She was a member of the Roman church. Either of these two barriers was enough to deter any man not desperately in love from such a marriage. But Prince George's passion was so strong that when his marriage with its object seemed hopeless he tried to commit suicide, though whether this was a bona fide attempt or a ruse to secure the lady's consent to an illegal union there is considerable doubt. At any rate, he bore the scar of his wound through life.

Suddenly Mrs. Fitzherbert reappeared in London. Since it was known that she would not live with her royal lover except as his wife, rumors began to be circulated that a marriage ceremony had been performed between them. The prince denied that any such ceremony had taken place. At least he denied that he had married Mrs. Fitzherbert. Nevertheless he had married her before witnesses and she had been furnished by the clergyman with a marriage certificate.

From that time the two lived together as man and wife.

But it was impossible that rumors that the prince had married in defiance of the royal marriage act, and a Roman Catholic at that, should be freely circulated and no notice be taken of them by the parliament. The matter was finally brought up there, and the nation was on the tiptoe of excitement as to the denouement. It was here that Mrs. Fitzherbert received her first blow. The eminent Charles Fox, who had been on intimate terms with Prince George, denied positively in parliament that any marriage ceremony between the prince and Mrs. Fitzherbert had ever taken place. The wife was inexpressibly shocked and never forgave Fox for making the statement. But she showed that marvelous self command that stood by her to the end. Possessing a marriage certificate, it was in her power to prove that she was a wife, but her act would cost her husband a crown.

There was a breach between the prince and his wife at one time, but since society treated her with even more attention than before she was appeased and refrained from producing her marriage certificate. The conditions were paradoxical. The heir apparent was known or at least supposed to have defied the laws of England by marrying without the king's consent and to have forfeited the throne by marrying a Roman Catholic. A denial had been given in parliament, which was not believed. The lady he was supposed to have married was accorded by the court circle (except the king and queen) the honors due to a wife, whereas if she were not a wife she would not be received at all.

Nevertheless Mrs. Fitzherbert, recognized by the nobility as a wife in accordance with any law except that of England's royalty, lived a happy life. Her husband was very attentive to her and showed himself appreciative of all attentions shown her. Their winters were spent in London, their summers in a handsome residence the prince built for his wife on the seacoast.

But there was a skeleton between them of more importance than the laws of England. The prince was a spendthrift and hopelessly in debt. Parliament would not help him without the king's consent, and he and the king had long waged a bitter warfare. Finally the prince's financial condition became intolerable. Application was made to his father. The king consented to help him provided he would give up Mrs. Fitzherbert. Forced by his necessities, the prince yielded.

Mrs. Fitzherbert, who was not with her husband when this decision was made, would not believe the report concerning it till the evidence was convincing. She immediately broke off all communication with him. It was arranged that he should marry a Hanoverian princess. Though at this second crisis it was in the power of his wife to establish her position, she refrained. For a time she withdrew from the world and lived in seclusion, but no word of censure of her husband escaped her.

The marriage between Prince George and the Princess Charlotte of Hanover was a very unhappy one. He excused himself for it on the ground that it was his duty to beget an heir to the throne, and, hating the princess, as soon as a daughter was born to them he refused to live with her any longer.

He now begged Mrs. Fitzherbert to live with him again. She referred the matter to Rome, and it was held that she, being the real wife, was privileged to live with him, any other marriage he might have made not being recognized by the church. This decided the lady, and she returned to her husband.

It does not appear that this last term which husband and wife spent together was fraught with the same happiness as before. George had become a hard drinker and was under the influence of profligate men. His wife was obliged to divide her husband's love with other women. At different times he had different favorites, each one of whom influenced him against his wife. Mrs. Fitzherbert—she has always been called by her widowed name—bore it all with her accustomed equanimity. It seems remarkable that she could have continued to love so contemptible a character and, more especially, should have consented to suffer the slights she received on account of her false position when she might have at any time righted herself before the world.

Then came the insanity of King George III. and the regency of the prince. The authority now vested in him puffed him with pride, and he desired to be treated with the reverence due a sovereign. Mrs. Fitzherbert, having grown older and in a way less attractive, was put aside, and the king gave her to understand the great gulf there was between a sovereign and a commoner and especially a sovereign and a commoner who had lived with him without being his wife according to the law of the realm.

Finally King George III. died and was succeeded by his son, who now became George IV. He was old and vain and corpulent. He had no direct heir to whom to leave his scepter at his death. He was really attached to but one person, Mrs. Fitzherbert, but he was so proud of his position as king of England that he would have nothing to do with her.

Meanwhile the castoff wife lived a more retired life than formerly. She was universally respected both for her virtues and attractions, but especially for having silently borne the injustice that had been imposed upon her. A reverence for royalty has been handed down among the English people for many generations, and Mrs. Fitzherbert for protecting her royal husband in his guilt stood high among Englishmen and especially Englishwomen. By the church of Rome, which boasts that no sovereign has been sufficiently powerful to obtain from it a divorce to marry again; by the universal law of mankind, she was a wife. But she consented for the good of the king, considered in England the good of the nation, to be regarded by the masses as a mistress.

During the young lover days of this couple the prince and Mrs. Fitzherbert had exchanged miniatures, and so long as they lived together the prince wore his wife's miniature about his neck. When he died as king she was anxious to know if he still wore it. One of his attendants, who examined the body, found it in its accustomed place.

This was a great satisfaction to the discarded wife. After all the king had loved her and her alone till death.

RATIFICATION OF PEACE PACTS

Strongly Favored by Senate Foreign Relations Committee

VOTE IS ELEVEN TO TWO

Panama Canal Tolls Likely to Be Repealed Before Reaching Arbitration Stage, Thus Clearing British Treaty —General Treaty With Japan Also Favored, With Many Others

Washington, Jan. 31.—By the substantial vote of 11 to 2, with four absentees, the senate committee on foreign relations voted to report favorably upon the twenty-four arbitration treaties, including those with Great Britain and Japan. These treaties were negotiated by the Roosevelt administration under Secretary of State Root and have been in force for five years, making the present question merely one of renewal.

Senator O'Gorman's opposition relates particularly to the question of Panama canal tolls, which the senator fears will be arbitrated under the British treaty. It is pointed out, however, that the tolls clause is likely to be repealed before this issue is permitted to reach the stage of arbitration.

It is evident that White House influence has reached some of the Democratic senators, for only one senator on the majority side now opposes the British treaty in the committee, although Senator Chamberlain is opposed to the treaty for the same reasons that actuate Borah, that it may indirectly jeopardize cheap transcontinental railroad rates.

Friends of the treaties entertain no doubt that the two-thirds necessary to put them through will be forthcoming now that President Wilson has declared unqualifiedly for ratification. It is remarked here that the Progressives may find it embarrassing to oppose the treaties for the reason that they are a product really of the Roosevelt and not of the Wilson administration.

Affirmative votes were cast by Senators Bacon, Stone, Shively, Hitchcock, Williams, Swanson, Pomerene and Smith of Arizona, Democrats; Lodge, Root and McCumber, Republicans. Clark of Arkansas, Borah, Sutherland and Burton sent word that they favored reratification of the treaties.

The treaties are twenty-four in number, with the following nations, that with France having been renewed last year: China, Denmark, Great Britain, Italy, Japan, Mexico, Netherlands, Norway, Peru, Portugal, Salvador, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Austria-Hungary, Costa Rica, Hayti, Paraguay, Argentine Republic, Bolivia, Ecuador, Uruguay, Chile, Brazil.

The treaty with Great Britain has been held up because some feared its ratification might force arbitration at The Hague of the Panama canal tolls controversy. President Wilson's attitude on that question is generally understood to be that this provision is a violation of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. Congress may settle the dispute either way by repealing the free passage clause or suspending its operation pending diplomatic negotiations.

The California alien land question was indirectly involved in the Japanese arbitration treaty, but the administration's view that the controversy practically is at an end settled the minds of the majority of the foreign relations committee in so far as the general arbitration treaty with Japan was concerned.

STODDARD—JOHNSON.

One of the prettiest weddings of the season took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lester A. Johnson of 28 Crescent avenue, South Braintree, Wednesday evening at 7.30 o'clock when their daughter Miss Marion Nye Johnson and Irving E. Stoddard only son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Stoddard of Braintree were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. Lowell Ryan, pastor of the South M. E. church.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was charmingly gowned in white charmeuse en train with trimmings of chantilly and real lace. Her tulle veil was caught with orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. She was attended by her sister Miss Alice Johnson who wore pink crepe meteor with trimmings of chiffon and Venice lace and carried pink roses. Frank C. Allen of Summer street was best man. Little Marion S. Burrell, a niece of the groom was the dainty little flower girl. The ushers were Herbert H. Johnson of Rockland, brother of the bride and Charles F. Burrell of South Braintree, brother-in-law of the groom.

During the evening, appropriate music was rendered by Mr. Bernard Nye a cousin of the bride, who presided at the piano and Miss Glennys Pollard, violinist.

From 8 until 9.30 o'clock, the young couple received their friends and were assisted in so doing by Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Stoddard, Miss Alice Johnson and Frank C. Allen.

The rooms were attractively decorated with emlock boughs and white carnations, presenting a most festive appearance. Refreshments of ice cream, punch and cakes were served by seven girl cousins of the bride. The bride's cake which was cut by Mrs. Stoddard furnished much amusement and entertainment for the young people and the favors were found by the following guests. Thimble, Miss Lena West of Holbrook; ring, Miss Mary B. Heath of Hobart avenue; button, Frank C. Allen of Summer street; money, Joseph West of Holbrook.

The happy couple were the recipients of many beautiful and costly gifts of silver, cut glass, china, linen, furniture and money.

The bride is a member of the South Methodist Episcopal church of this town and for the past few years has been associated in business with the Belle Bryce Gemmell company, of Boylston street, Boston. Mr. Stoddard is a member of the Braintree Fife and Drum Corps and is in the employment of the Macey Desk company of Franklin street, Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Stoddard are well-known and popular young people of this town and have the best wishes of their host of friends for a long and happy married life. The bride treasures as a souvenir of the occasion, a gold pendant set with amethysts and pearls, the gift of the groom. The groom's present to his best man was a star opal stick pin and the ushers received monogram pins. The bridesmaid was made happy with a brooch of pearls, the gift of the bride.

While the guests were making plans to carry out the usual practice of confetti throwing, etc., the young couple were carried by automobile to the home of the groom's parents on Washington street where a wedding supper had been prepared in their honor. When they were ready to leave for the station, their friends had discovered their whereabouts and they were showered with confetti and given a rousing send-off. Their wedding tour will include New York, Philadelphia and Washington and on their return they will make their home at 48 Hudson street, Quincy, where they will be glad to welcome their friends after March first.

Among the guests noticed at the wedding were: Rev. and Mrs. George H. Parkinson of Newton, formerly of this town. Other guests were present from Newton Centre, Brockton, Stoughton, Randolph, Holbrook, Brookville, Quincy, Wollaston, Somerville, Boston and the Braintrees.

FRENCH PATRIOT DEAD

Deroulede Supported Boulanger and Was Banished For Five Years

Nice, Jan. 31.—Paul Deroulede, the French patriotic writer, soldier and politician, died here after a short illness, aged 68.

Deroulede was the founder of the League of Patriots and an ardent supporter of the late General Boulanger, whose attempted revolution in favor of the revision of the constitution in 1889 was a fiasco.

He was noted throughout his life for his patriotic outbursts in the columns of the newspapers and his writings led him into many duels. He was banished from France in 1900 and remained abroad for five years until he was pardoned.

The literary work of Deroulede was very extensive, covering the fields of poetry and romance. All his books had a patriotic vein running through them.

Deroulede was a lover of all kinds of sports and was much feared as an opponent in personal combats, owing to his skill with the rapier and the dueling pistol.

MILLER IS ACQUITTED

Jury Declares Officer Justified In Killing His Assailant

Boston, Jan. 31.—"Not guilty" of manslaughter in killing Ralph P. Shea, was the verdict rendered by the jury in the case of Policeman Charles W. Miller following a week's trial.

It took the jurors 4½ hours to reach their conclusion. That it was a popular one was indicated by the great reception given the patrolman after the proceedings ended and he was a free man.

Shea was shot about 1:30 a. m., June 17 last, in a doorway at 105 Warrenton street by Miller following a fight on a street corner in which it was declared the officer was knocked down by Shea and a companion named Dave Collins. Shea was removed to the hospital in an ambulance and died soon after receiving the wound.

NEW CITY OFFICIALS

meeting promises to be a busy one. It is expected that communications will be received from the Mayor announcing the remainder of his appointments. The only action which the council can take on these matters is to receive them and place them on file. Several committees have met since the last meeting and their reports are likely to cause some debate.

The Mayor said that he intended to file his list of additional al apointments with the City Clerk this morning in order that the parties might be notified so as to qualify and be able to take office on Monday morning. He would not give the names out for publication however until they were forwarded to the City Council Monday evening.

About all the offices there are for him to fill at the present time are those City Engineer and Board of Health. When asked if there was anything new about the Chief of Police or Assessors, the Mayor said no, that he intended to take the matter up with the City Solicitor Monday.

The Mayor said that he felt very much elated over the result of the trial of the suit against the city at Dedham, this week, a verdict on which was given in favor of the city on Friday. One of the reasons for his elation was that City Solicitor McAnarney had advised him that he did not think the city had any case and was in favor of settling. The case was tried out however by City Solicitor Pinkham who won his first victory.

The case was that of Mrs. Coleman who sued the city and street railway jointly. She was alighting from a car on Hancock street and she claimed that owing to a defect in the street she fell and was injured. The judge took the case against the street railway from the jury early in the trial and gave a verdict for the street railway company, but allowed the case against the city to go on to a finish. Mrs. Coleman sued for damages for injuries received and her husband sued for loss of his wife's services.

John Curtis the new City Treasurer was at City Hall all the morning, and the books, papers, etc., in the Treasurer's office were transferred to him.

Faxon Billings, who assumes the office of Chief Engineer of the Fire Department at midnight Sunday night has appointed the folowing assistant engineers, all being appointments, Frank C. Packard, Daniel JJ. Nyan and Louis K. Badger.
